

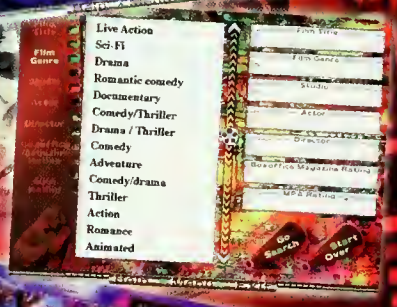
CIAL REPORT
NEMA SOUND '97

BOXOFFICE®

E BUSINESS MAGAZINE OF THE GLOBAL MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

JANUARY 1997, $3.95

CLINT: THE LAST ICON



BOXOFFICE® Online presents

only $29.95
call 800·921·9581
to order your copy today!

MovieYear 1996

An Interactive CD-ROM of the Year in Film

Whether you're an industry insider, sophisticated cineast or an avid popcorn movie fan seeking out the latest releases on home video, you will find what you're looking for on the BOXOFFICE CD-ROM! Hundreds of reviews of the big and small films from 1996.

One-on-one interviews with celebrities and filmmakers - Both superstars and up-and-comers. If you never made it to the local theatre to see all of the films of 1996, this CD-ROM is for you!

- Intelligent, incisive reviews on the entire year in film from the film critics of Hollywood's BOXOFFICE MAGAZINE.
- Weekly and monthly updates via the BOXOFFICE website (www.boxoff.com).
- 650 megabytes of photos, reviews, interviews and video trailers from both major studios and independent filmmakers.
- Learn who won and lost at the boxoffice!
- All film reviews cross-referenced by director, stars, studio and much more!
- Credits for each film and bios on the stars of the movie.
- "Special FX" and "Behind the Camera" interviews and articles.
- Coverage of international film festivals.

PC and MAC compatible

© 1996 Boxoffice. All rights reserved. All logos and trademarks are property of their respective holders.

Marlin
www.marlinsoft.com

Mac OS
Windows 95
QuickTime

Response No. 146

OPENING CREDITS

A new year is upon us, and it seems fitting to use the opportunity of the first 1997 Opening Credits editorial to take a brief look backward at 1996. Our annual summation of what we've attempted and achieved in these pages during the year just past is a task we at BOXOFFICE look forward to; we view this yearly address to our readers as a kind of report to our stockholders, and we are proud to say that, just as 1996 was a great year for exhibition and the film industry in general, it's been an amazing period for this publication as well.

In point of fact, by several standards of measurement, 1996 was the best year in BOXOFFICE MAGAZINE'S modern history. A record-setting 1,198 pages of editorial material passed through our presses in the year which is about to end—every single one of which was dedicated to the business of film. Our regular domestic and foreign business pages were expanded by a total of some 200 percent while our Trailers section grew by a third. We added new features to and completely redesigned our September Buyers Directory to make it an easier and more informative read. And we improved on almost every one of our existing editorial departments by adding new features like Late Movie Moves (which tells Trailers readers when film release dates change suddenly); Day and Date (a regular part of our Reviews pages which offers a long-lead critical appraisal of a film keyed to our cover date); and two Q & A features (wherein our Exhibition Briefings and International News reporters bring you up close and personal with leading figures of domestic and foreign exhibition).

As we promised in the beginning of 1996, one of our major goals for the coming year was to do our best to find creative solutions to the problem of getting timely reviews into a magazine that comes out once a month. As some of you may remember, we pointed out in last January's editorial that there was very little we could do to increase the currency of certain studio titles as they are reviewed here. Knowing the power that exhibition has in the "making or breaking" of a pricey feature, the majors are often reluctant to give BOXOFFICE an advance peek at blockbusters, because they know that, wherever it is necessary to do so, BOXOFFICE is sure to tell exhibition when a studio colossus has feet of clay.

But BOXOFFICE has never made it a policy to accept situations which in any way undermine our ability to serve the professional interests of our audience. And so, in 1996, we overcame the "review crisis" in two ways, using one old-fashioned technique, and one that was state-of-the-art.

The state-of-the-art approach came via our website, BOXOFFICE ONLINE (available on the Internet at http://www.boxoff.com). By making weekly updates to our site each Friday, BOXOFFICE made sure that virtually every review we published this year (including our assessments of those same blockbusters the studios don't want us to tell you about) was available in a timely fashion.

Ideally, we'd like to have long-lead reviews show up in print in a timely fashion as well. Which is where solution number two came in, in which we got long-lead reviews to you the old-fashioned way: by doing the legwork—legwork which took us from Canada to Italy to France to Prague.

The results, once we did the math, were startling, even to us. In 1996, BOXOFFICE covered a wide range of film festivals all over the world to bring its readers the earliest possible word on over 200 long-lead titles, in the process publishing almost two-thirds as many long-lead reviews in 1996 as we did reviews of any kind in 1995. Our review tally for the year came in at a grand total of 464 film titles—some 40 percent more reviews than appeared in any other U.S.-based or international publication for theatrical exhibitors. As a result, BOXOFFICE readers were able to make some 150 informed booking or acquisitions choices that were unavailable to exhibitors or distributors who received their information from another source.

While art-house and specialty market subscribers benefitted the most from this windfall of titles (owing to the particular niche most festivals fill), the mainstreaming of the specialty market that has occurred in the 1990s ensured that exhibitors everywhere found full and useful long-lead information on virtually every major art-house title released in the U.S. this year—many months before making their booking decisions.

If there is any one thing we are most proud of about 1996, it's that, finally, we are able to say with pride that the long-standing canard about the timeliness of our reviews can be retired. And believe us when we tell you, it's been retired for keeps.

Additional achievements we're proud of include the vast expansion of our international news pages; the doubling of our "Exhibition Briefings" coverage; the recent addition of the new and thoroughly unique "Moviegoer Activity Chart" prepared for BOXOFFICE by our friends at MovieFone; and a myriad of minor format changes and modifications which may have gone unnoticed, but whose cumulative impact we're sure has made BOXOFFICE even more entertaining and instructive as a reading experience.

But that was then, this is now. So, happy 1997, and, from all of us at BOXOFFICE please accept this New Year's vow: You ain't seen nothin' yet.

Until next time,

Ray Greene
Editor-in-chief
BOXOFFICE

Our review tally for the year came in at 464 film titles—some 40 percent more reviews than appeared in any other publication for exhibitors. As a result,* BOXOFFICE *readers were able to make some 150 informed booking or acquisitions choices that were unavailable to exhibitors who received their information from another source.

BOXOFFICE
JANUARY, 1997 VOL. 133 NO. 1

UNQUOTE: You should forget anybody's ever gonna see a film when you're making it. Some of my best films were the least attended, in my mind. —CLINT EASTWOOD

SPECIAL REPORT: CINEMA SOUND '97

BOXOFFICE's annual look at cinema sound investigates new technologies and brings you up close & personal with the top execs in the industry!

PART I: CINEMA SOUND '97

30 MAJOR SOUND SUPPLIERS: A BOXOFFICE DIRECTORY
A listing of manufacturers and distributors of specialized sound equipment and supplies, complete with addresses, phone/fax numbers, contact information and product descriptions.

34 SOUND ADVICE: BOXOFFICE TALKS TO SOUND INDUSTRY LEADERS
Personal and professional profiles of highly-qualified industry experts you might already be doing business with. By Pat Kramer

38 THE EIGHT-CHANNEL ADVANTAGE
Insights into eight-channel stereo and the history behind it. By John F. Allen

42 NOISES OFF: KEYS TO SUCCESSFUL DIGITAL ACOUSTICS
How absorption, isolation and backgound noise affect the digital sound environment. By Marco d'Ambrosio

46 SOUNDS OF SILENCE: HOW TO SOUNDPROOF YOUR THEATRES
Learn how you can keep the sound from "Star Trek" from seeping into "The Mirror Has Two Faces." By Bill Bergiadis and Janis Hunt Johnson

48 DIGITAL SOUND: OVER THERE
DTS, Dolby & SDDS do the (inter)continental. By Jon Matsumoto

PART II: JANUARY FEATURES

10 COVER STORY: POWER & THE GLORY
EXCLUSIVE! Director's director and boxoffice superstar Clint Eastwood talks about his filmic legacy, the challenges of balancing life and career, and his latest bigscreen project, the political thriller "Absolute Power." By Ray Greene

16 COVER SIDEBAR: WILL*POWER*
How producer Karen Spiegel helped get "Absolute Power" to the screen. By Bridget Byrne

18 1997 BAROMETER STAR POLL
Cast your vote for the Star of the Year—send your ballot today!

20 SNEAK PREVIEW: MAKING HIS "POINTE"
Actor John Cusack writes, produces and stars in the comedy "Grosse Pointe Blank." By Bridget Byrne

50 TRIBUTE: ON A ROLL
Tootsie Roll celebrates 100 years. By Pat Kramer

53 SHOWMANDISER: SHIFTING "TIDE"
UATC/Microsoft venture takes showmanship high-tech. By Ann Kwinn

74 THE BIG PICTURE: ACTORS YELL "ACTION!"
Clint Eastwood isn't the only prominent actor to direct feature films, although he is one of the most successful. BOXOFFICE takes a walk down moviemaking's memory lane to survey the acting/directing impulse. By Ray Greene

BOXOFFICE (ISSN 0006-8527). Published monthly by RLD Communications, Inc., 203 N. Wabash Ave., Suite 800, Chicago, IL 60601. Subscriptions: $30 per year. Canada and Mexico: $40; airmail: $80. Overseas subscriptions (all airmail): $80. Periodical postage paid at Chicago, IL, and additional mailing offices. Postmaster: Send address changes to Boxoffice, 725 South Wells St., 4th Floor, Chicago, IL 60607.

© Copyright 1997 RLD Communications, Inc. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or part without permission is prohibited.

DEPARTMENTS

Opening Credits 3
Hollywood Updates 6
Hollywood Report 8
Trailers 22
Review Digest 58
National News 59
Exhibition Briefings 60
International News: Europe 62
International News: Canada 64
Moviefone Moviegoer Activity Chart 65
Studio Feature Chart 66
Independent Feature Chart 68
Home Release Chart 70
Classifieds 72
Reverse Angle 72
Ad Index 72

REVIEWS

(beginning on pg. 52)

Bad Moon 57
The Crucible 52
Dear God 57
The English Patient 55
Forever Mozart 52
Hype 56
Kama Sutra 52
Mad Dog Time 56
The Mirror Has Two Faces 55
Normal Life 58
Ransom 55
Ripe 52
Set It Off 56
Space Jam 55
Stephen King's Thinner 58
Suburbia 52
Wm. Shakespeare's Romeo + Juliet 57

DAY AND DATE: 1/31

Everyone Says I Love You 54

FLASHBACK REVIEW

Star Wars (1977) 56

NEW FEATURE: RETROVIEWS

An index to upcoming movies already reviewed in BOXOFFICE 57

For reviews of the newest films opening each and every weekend, visit our website every Friday. Just enter: http:// www.boxoff.com.

WHAT HAPPENED TO THE 45?

It simply is not up to today's quality sound standards!

With big companies trying to get into the popular priced optical stereo processor field, there is a lot they have missed. Trying to compete against the MOD IIC 6-channel processor is tough! Our new X-ACT™ DSP (Digital Signal Processing) matrix, 1/3 octave stage EQ's and full octave surround EQ's are standard! The MOD IIC features the patented SRS® Sound Retrieval System and lots of other exclusive features the other brands do not have. Heavy duty industrial strength for less money than some of the big names. We've got the features, performance, and reliability they would like to charge more for. Let us tell you more.

Call for our color sheet and compare the value to theirs!

Now with DSP matrix.

No special laptop computer required to equalize and setup the MOD IIC.

SMART THEATRE SYSTEMS
5945 Peachtree Corners East
Norcross, GA 30071 - 1336 - U.S.A.
(800) 45-SMART or (770) 449-6698
FAX: (770) 449-6728
e-mail: smart@america.net

Response No. 267
Please visit our web site at www.smartdev.com

HOLLYWOOD UPDATES

The Fighting Irish: Instead of punching out the paparazzi, George Clooney is really hitting them where it hurts. The rising superstar is using his Hollywood power to strike a blow for all stalked celebrities. When Paramount's TV tabloid show "Hard Copy" did an unauthorized segment on Clooney's personal life, the star announced that he would boycott Paramount Domestic Television, including celebrity interview show "Entertainment Tonight." The program will be shut out from interviews with him concerning TV's "ER" and the upcoming high-profile films "One Fine Day," "Batman and Robin" and "The Peacemaker." Joining Clooney in his stand are Madonna, Steven Spielberg, Whoopi Goldberg, Rosie O'Donnell, Dean Cain and the entire cast of "ER." In response, Paramount claims they have enacted a new policy restricting "videorazzi" footage, but Clooney has not yet ended his boycott, saying he plans to tape "Hard Copy" every night to make sure they keep their promise.

Hot off his hip hit adaptation of "Romeo & Juliet," director Baz Luhrmann has signed a two-year exclusive writing, directing and producing deal with 20th Century Fox. He will have an office on the studio's lot, and another in his homeland of Australia. Luhrmann also helmed 1992's acclaimed "Strictly Ballroom."

Caravan Pictures has entered into a non-exclusive agreement with Eddie Murphy Prods. to develop films which Murphy will produce and possibly star in or direct. The first film under the deal is "Holy Man," which will go into production this summer and is scripted by Academy Award-winner Tom Schulman ("Dead Poets Society"). Murphy worked with Caravan on his latest film, "Metro," to be distributed through Buena Vista.

Writer-producer Judd Apatow ("The Cable Guy") has signed a two-year, first-look development deal with New Line Cinema. Under the agreement, Apatow will co-write and direct "Making Amends," a comedy about an alcoholic who, as part of his recovery, must apologize to everyone he's ever wronged.

Mel Gibson's Icon Entertainment will take over London-based sales company Majestic Films. Majestic will be merged into Icon as its London sales division. The deal will allow Icon to reclaim some of its early movies, including "The Man Without a Face" and "Immortal Beloved," which Majestic co-financed before Icon created its own sales company. Majestic's current films include the Jack Nicholson starrer "Blood and Wine" and "The Brave," which is helmed by Johnny Depp; the company also has international rights to the Bill Murray comedy "Larger Than Life."

"Shine" helmer Scott Hicks has signed a one-year, first-look production and directing deal with DreamWorks SKG. A project under the pact is already in development, though details were not available at press time. The critically acclaimed "Shine," an Australian film starring Geoffrey Rush as a brilliant but schizophrenic classical pianist, is an odds-on favorite for multiple Oscar nominations. Also "ink"ing with DreamWorks is Ted Danson and his Anasazi Prods., for a first-look deal to produce feature films, TV movies, miniseries and family programming. Danson, of TV's "Cheers" fame, is currently the star of DreamWorks' sitcom "Ink," in which he and his real-life wife, Mary Steenburgen, play newspaper reporters. Anasazi most recently produced the Paramount telefilm "The Canterville Ghost," starring Patrick Stewart, for ABC. No projects have yet been announced under the Danson/DreamWorks deal.

Universal Pictures has entered into a five-year producing, distribution and co-financing deal with Beacon Communications. Beacon will deliver up to four films a year for Universal, and production and promotion costs will be split equally between the two companies, with Beacon retaining international distribution rights. Beacon's current production slate includes "A.F.O." starring Harrison Ford; "A Thousand Acres" with Michelle Pfeiffer and Jessica Lange; and "Playing God," which stars David Duchovny of TV's "The X-Files."

Miramax Films, which paid $10 million for Billy Bob Thornton's directorial debut "Sling Blade," has signed Thornton to a deal in which he will write, direct and possibly act in at least three films, to be produced by "Sling Blade" production company The Shooting Gallery. "Sling Blade," which Thornton also scripted and starred in, is about a mildly retarded man who is released from an asylum, returns to his hometown and befriends a lonely boy. The drama won the Special Jury Prize at the Chicago Film Festival. The first project under the deal with Miramax will be "A Thousand Miles," a comedy Thornton will write, helm and star in.

Director Betty Thomas ("Private Parts") and HBO Pictures vice president Jenna Topping have teamed up to form an as-yet-unnamed production company, and are considering first-look deals with several studios. Topping is executive producing Thomas' next directing project, the Eddie Murphy starrer "Dr. Dolittle." The two first worked together on 1995's "The Brady Bunch Movie."

The American Film Institute (AFI) and The Walt Disney Company have launched a showcase honoring American movie heritage at the Disney-MGM Studios in Orlando, Fla. The showcase includes rare movie artifacts and memorabilia; interactive kiosks about AFI; a video wall; and exhibits on the careers of AFI's 25 Life Achievement Award recipients. Also included will be displays on film preservation and on the disciplines of directing, producing, editing, cinematography, screenwriting and production design.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF
Ray Greene

MANAGING EDITOR
Kim Williamson

SENIOR EDITOR
Christine James

ASSOCIATE EDITOR
Susan Lambert

EDITORIAL ASSISTANT
Linda Andrade

CONTRIBUTING WRITERS
Alex Albanese
John Allen
George T. Chronis
Carole Glines
Pat Kramer
Ann Kwinn
Lael Loewenstein
Wade Major
Jean Oppenheimer
Lea Russo
Shlomo Schwartzberg

EUROPEAN CORRESPONDENT
Melissa Morrison
e-mail: tomelis@bohem-net.cz

BOXOFFICE ONLINE WEBSITE ADDRESS:
http://www.boxoff.com
email: boxoff@earthlink.net
Online service provided by Marlin Software

FOUNDER
Ben Shlyen

PUBLISHER
Bob Dietmeier (312) 338-7007

NATIONAL ADVERTISING DIRECTOR
Robert M. Vale (213) 465-1186

ADVERTISING CONSULTANT
Morris Schlozman (816) 942-5877

EAST COAST ADVERTISING REP.
Mitchell J. Hall (212) 877-6667

WEST COAST ADVERTISING REP.
Gwen Campbell (310) 820-8846

BUSINESS MANAGER
Dan Johnson (312) 338-7007

CIRCULATION DIRECTOR
Chuck Taylor (312) 922-9326

OFFICES
Editorial and Publishing Headquarters:
6640 Sunset Blvd., Suite 100, Hollywood, CA 90028-7159 (213) 465-1186, FAX: (213) 465-5049
Corporate: Mailing Address: P.O. Box 25485, Chicago, IL 60625 (312) 338-7007

The Audit Bureau

Circulation Inquiries:
BOXOFFICE Data Center
725 S. Wells St., 4th Floor
Chicago, IL 60607
(312) 922-9326
FAX: (312) 922-7209

SDDS Sony Dynamic Digital Sound™

YOU CAN ALWAYS LISTEN TO A MOVIE AT HOME...

BUT FOR THE TOTAL EXPERIENCE - GO TO AN SDDS™ CINEMA!

Competing cinema digital sound systems, also available for the home, are only 5.1 channels.

SDDS is designed exclusively for the cinema, with a distinctive difference: 8 channels!

DEFINING THE DIGITAL FUTURE.™

SONY®

SONY CINEMA PRODUCTS CORPORATION:
[illegible] West Washington Blvd., Culver City, CA 90232, U.S.A. Tel: 310 280 5777 Fax: 310 280 2034
Sonar Strasse 1/3-1/5, 60437 Frankfurt, Germany. Tel: (49) 69 50004 300 Fax: (49) 69 50004 [illegible]
[illegible] Sony Cinema Products Corporation. All rights reserved. Sony, Sony Dynamic Digital Sound and SDDS are trademarks of Sony.

Response No. 415

HOLLYWOOD REPORT

LAURENCE FISHBURNE

On "Horizon"

ELLEN DEGENERES

"Goodbye" Girl

CHOW YUN-FAT

"Killer" Diller

"EVENT HORIZON" Laurence Fishburne ("Hoods") has left Francis Ford Coppola's "The Rainmaker" (replaced by Danny Glover) to star in this sci-fi thriller as the head of an exploration team whose members encounter a mysterious force on their mission to salvage a spaceship that surfaces near Neptune after having been missing for seven years. Joely Richardson ("101 Dala-matians") co-stars as the team's navigator; Kathleen Quinlan ("Apollo 13") plays the medical technician. "Mortal Kombat's" Paul Anderson directs from Phillip Eisner's script. (Paramount)

"GOODBYE LOVER" This black comedy thriller will star Ellen DeGeneres ("Mr. Wrong") as a detective on the case of a murder mystery. Patricia Arquette ("Flirting With Disaster"), Dermot Mulroney ("The Trigger Effect") and Don Johnson ("Tin Cup") also star. Roland Joffe ("The Scarlet Letter") will helm. (Distribution is to be set)

"STILL BREATHING" In this comedy, Brendan Fraser ("Mrs. Winterbourne") plays an eccentric street performer who has a psychic vision of his soul mate. When he encounters the woman ("Inventing the Abbotts'" Joanna Going), she turns out to be a con artist who sees him as an easy mark. Ann Magnuson, Lou Rawls and Michael McKean also star. (Distribution is to be set)

"THE REPLACEMENT KILLERS" Chow Yun-Fat ("The Killer") will make his American film debut opposite Oscar winner Mira Sorvino ("Mighty Aphrodite") in this actioner about a Chinese dissident-turned-assassin (Chow) who teams with a forger (Sorvino) to prevent a murder he had originally agreed to commit. Antoine Fuqua directs; John Woo executive produces. (Columbia)

"AMY FOSTER" In this romance about two people whose love is thwarted by numerous obstacles, a Ukrainian emigrant (Vincent Perez, "The Crow: City of Angels") is trapped in England and falls in love with a young woman ("Chain Reaction's" Rachel Weisz) who helps him. Ian McKellen ("Richard III") will play a doctor who befriends Perez's character. Beeban Kidron ("To Wong Foo, Thanks for Everything, Julie Newmar") will direct. The screenplay was adapted by Tim Willocks from a Joseph Conrad novella. (Distribution is to be set)

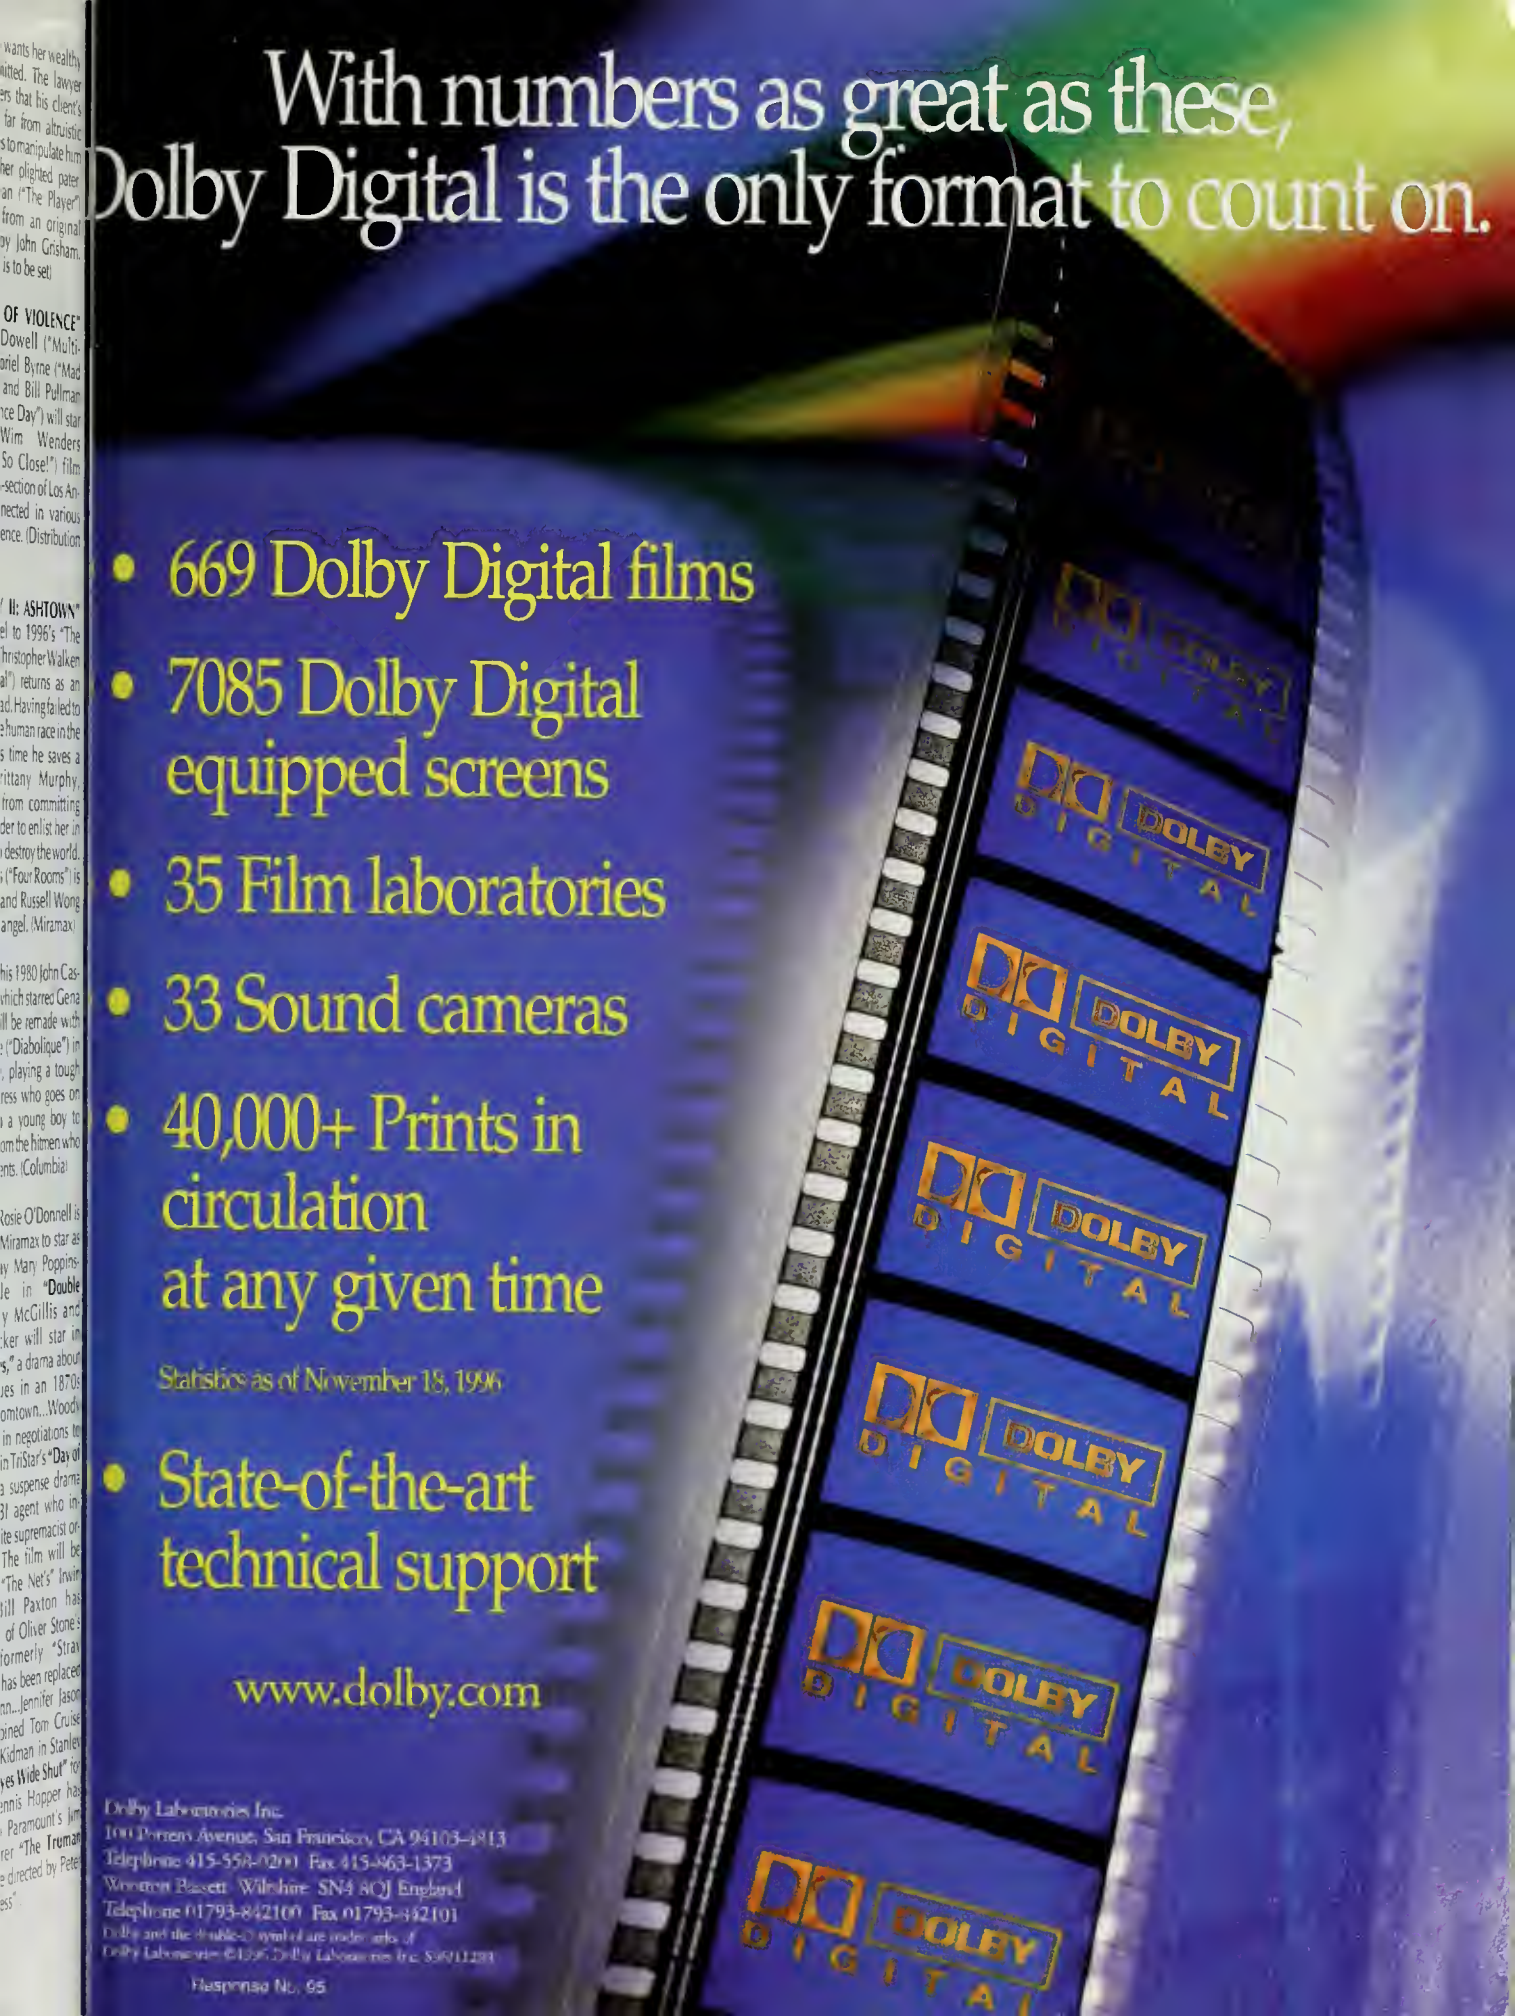
"MOST WANTED" This action-comedy written by and starring Keenen Ivory Wayans ("The Glimmer Man") and Jon Voight ("Mission: Impossible") is about a man who is framed for attempting to assassinate the First Lady. "Barb Wire's" David Hogan will direct. Eric Roberts ("It's My Party") and Paul Sorvino ("Romeo and Juliet") will also star. (New Line)

"THE BLACKOUT" Matthew Modine ("Cutthroat Island"), Dennis Hopper ("Waterworld"), Beatrice Dalle ("Night on Earth") and supermodel Claudia Schiffer will star for director Abel Ferrara ("The Funeral") in this film about a man who gets drunk one evening and blacks out, only to wake the next morning to find his best friend has been murdered and he's the prime suspect. (Distribution is to be set)

"DIGGING TO CHINA" Kevin Bacon ("Sleepers") plays a mentally handicapped man who forms a friendship with a 10-year-old girl (Evan Wood), in spite of objections from the girl's mother (Cathy Moriarty, "Casper") and older sister (Mary Stuart Masterson, "Bed of Roses"). Actor Timothy Hutton makes his directorial debut. (Distribution is to be set)

"THE JEAN SEBERG STORY" Troubled actress Jean Seberg will be portrayed by Diane Lane ("Murder at 1600") in this biopic. Seberg, a small-town girl who rose to superstardom after being cast in Otto Preminger's 1957 drama "Saint Joan," lived a tumultuous life, had ties to the Black Panther movement, and was found dead under mysterious circumstances in 1979. Mark Rydell ("On Golden Pond") will helm from a screenplay by James Hicks, based on the book "Played Out" by David Richards. (Distribution is to be set)

"MOUSEHUNT" "The Birdcage's" Nathan Lane will star in this live-action comedy about two brothers who inherit an historic mansion and try to sell it, but find themselves repeatedly outsmarted by a mouse who already lives there. Director Gore Verbinski makes his feature debut; Adam Rifkin wrote the script. (DreamWorks)



"THE GINGERBREAD MAN" This legal drama set in the South will star Kenneth Branagh ("Hamlet") as a lawyer who takes the case of a beautiful woman who wants her wealthy father committed. The lawyer soon discovers that his client's motives are far from altruistic when she tries to manipulate him into killing her plighted pater. Robert Altman ("The Player") will direct from an original screenplay by John Grisham. (Distribution is to be set)

"THE END OF VIOLENCE" Andie MacDowell ("Multiplicity"), Gabriel Byrne ("Mad Dog Time") and Bill Pullman ("Independence Day") will star in this Wim Wenders ("Faraway, So Close!") film about a cross-section of Los Angeleans connected in various ways by violence. (Distribution is to be set)

"PROPHECY II: ASHTOWN" In this sequel to 1996's "The Prophecy," Christopher Walken ("The Funeral") returns as an angel gone bad. Having failed to annihilate the human race in the last film, this time he saves a woman (Brittany Murphy, "Clueless") from committing suicide in order to enlist her in his mission to destroy the world. Jennifer Beals ("Four Rooms") is the heroine, and Russell Wong plays a good angel. (Miramax)

"GLORIA" This 1980 John Cassavetes film which starred Gena Rowlands will be remade with Sharon Stone ("Diabolique") in the title role, playing a tough ex-mob mistress who goes on the run with a young boy to protect him from the hitmen who killed his parents. (Columbia)

ET CETERA: Rosie O'Donnell is in talks with Miramax to star as a modern-day Mary Poppins-with-attitude in "Double Wish"...Kelly McGillis and Brenda Fricker will star in "Prarie Doves," a drama about five prostitues in an 1870s Western boomtown...Woody Harrelson is in negotiations to take the lead in TriStar's "Day of the Rope," a suspense drama about an FBI agent who infiltrates a white supremacist organization. The film will be directed by "The Net's" Irwin Winkler...Bill Paxton has dropped out of Oliver Stone's "U-Turn" (formerly "Stray Dogs"), and has been replaced by Sean Penn...Jennifer Jason Leigh has joined Tom Cruise and Nicole Kidman in Stanley Kubrick's "Eyes Wide Shut" for Warner...Dennis Hopper has signed onto Paramount's Jim Carrey starrer "The Truman Show," to be directed by Peter Weir ("Fearless").

With numbers as great as these,
Dolby Digital is the only format to count on.
• 669 Dolby Digital films
• 7085 Dolby Digital equipped screens
• 35 Film laboratories
• 33 Sound cameras
• 40,000+ Prints in circulation at any given time
Statistics as of November 18, 1996
• State-of-the-art technical support www.dolby.com
Dolby Laboratories Inc.
100 Potrero Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94103-4813
Telephone 415-558-0200 Fax 415-863-1373
Wootton Bassett Wiltshire SN4 8QJ England
Telephone 01793-842100 Fax 01793-842101
Dolby and the double-D symbol are trademarks of Dolby Laboratories ©1996 Dolby Laboratories Inc. S96/11293
Response No. 95

THE BOXOFFICE INTERVIEW

POWER

At the Height of His Career as Both Director and Star CLINT EASTWOOD Makes His Bid For "Absolute Power"

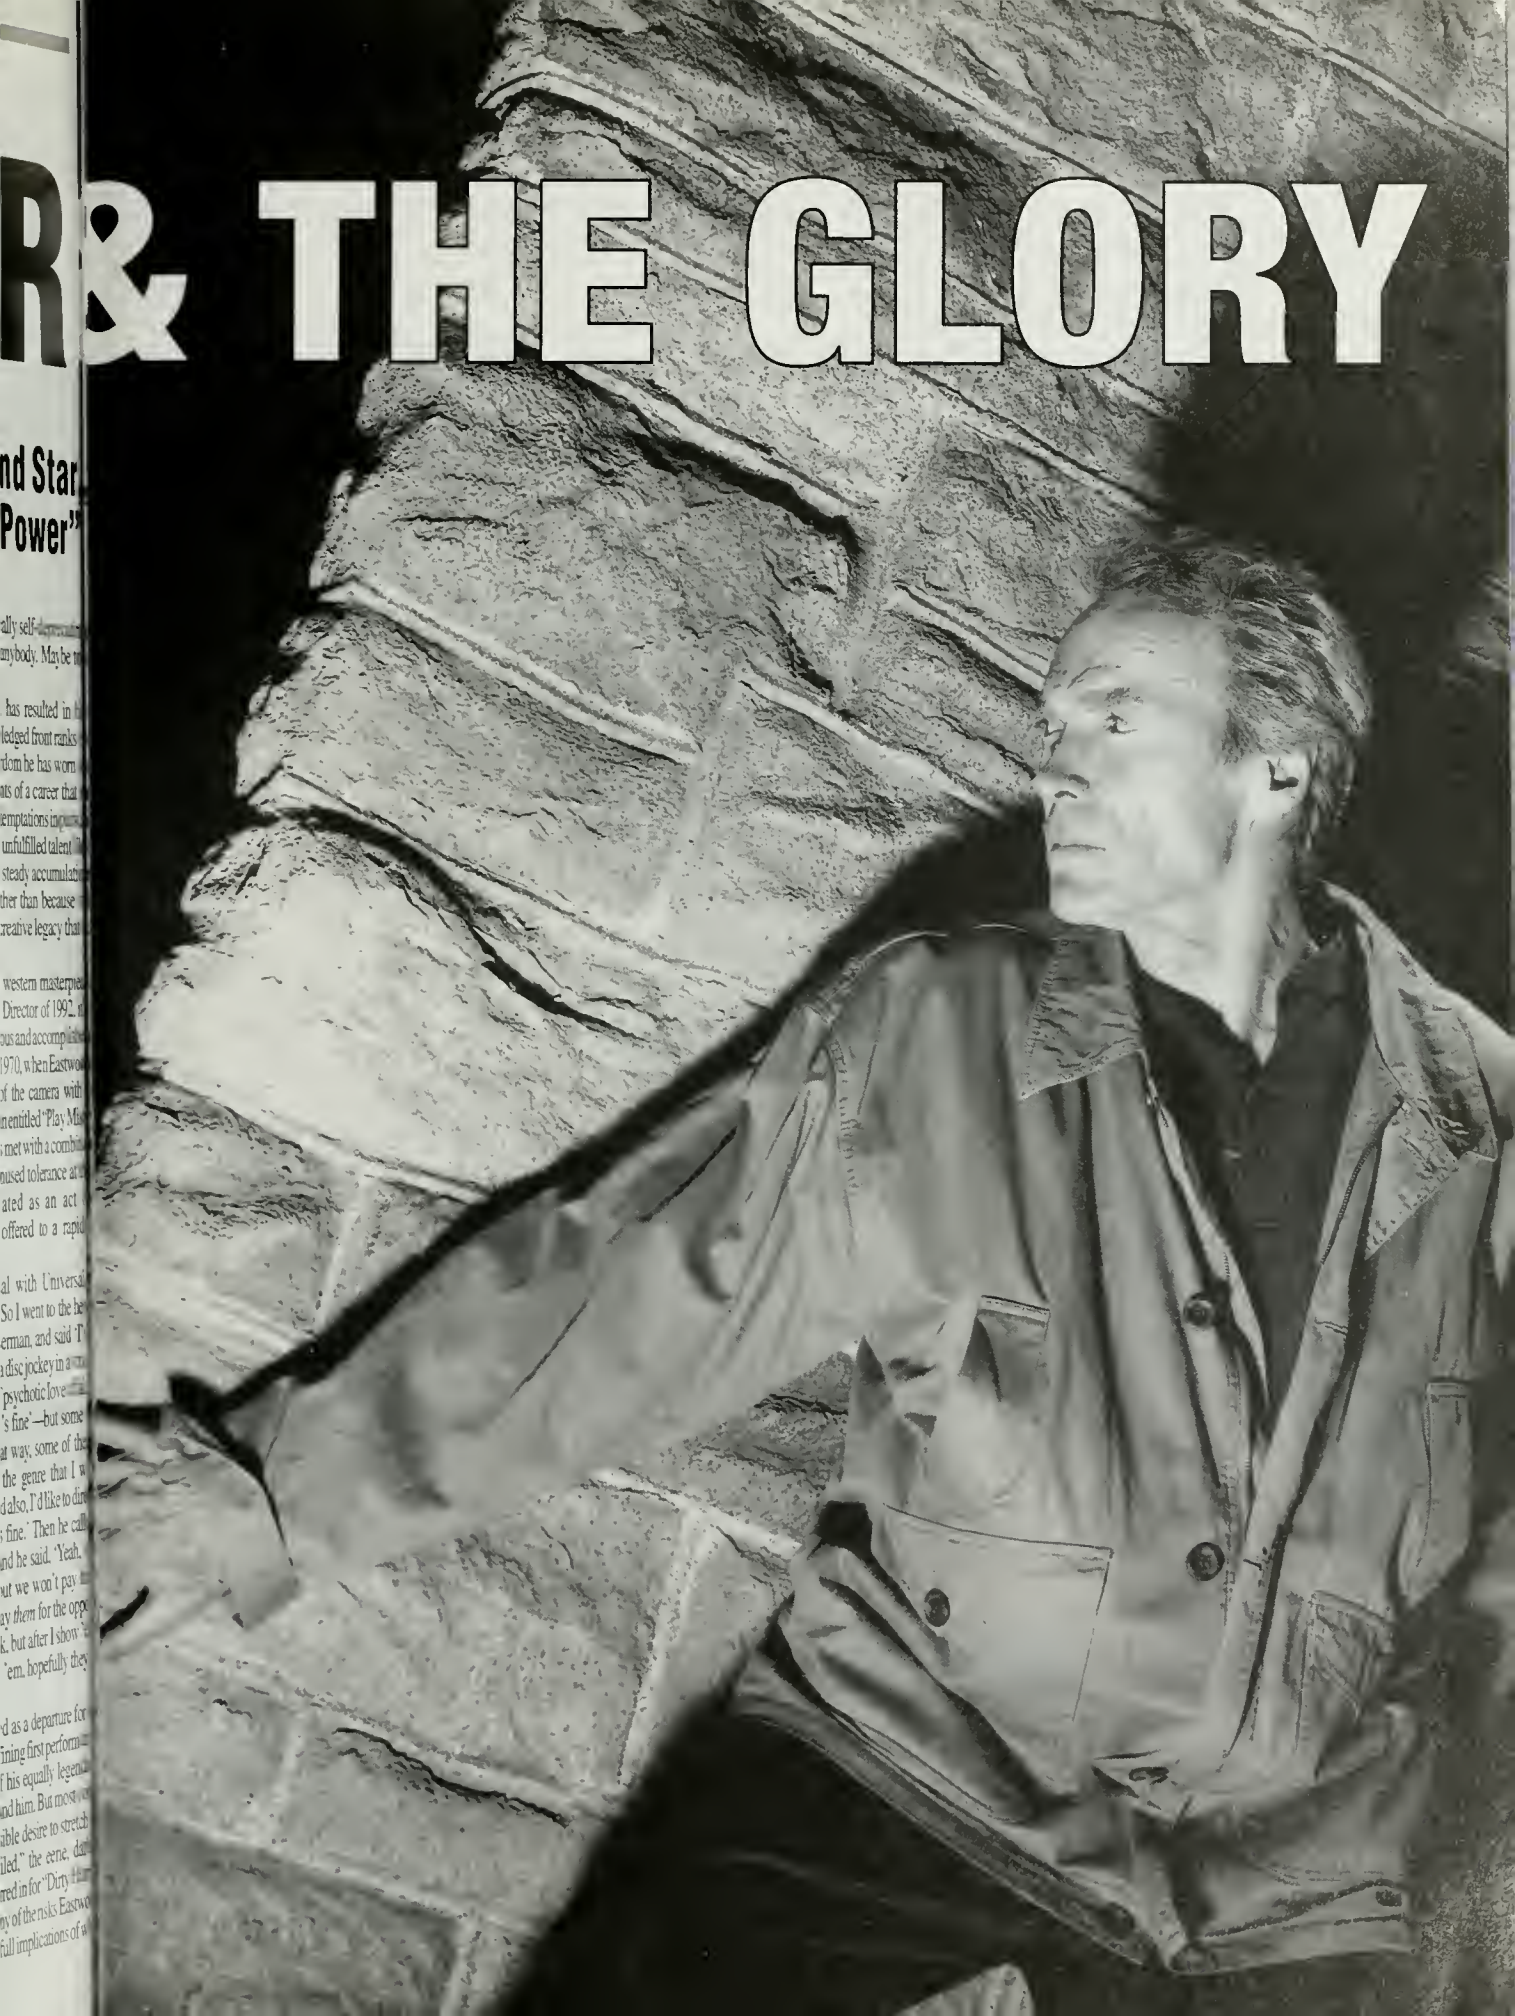
By Ray Greene

The fastest surface route between Los Angeles in Southern California and Carmel in the north takes approximately six hours of drive time, although "it's been done in four" according to Clint Eastwood, Carmel's most famous citizen. While not the most scenic trip available to the northward traveller (the coastal roads, which can add four hours to the trip, offer spectacular vistas at the edge of nearly every harrowing, hairpin turn), the direct route is not without its points of interest. Among these is a site smack in the middle of the most lonesome and nondescript part of the trek: the place on Highway 46 where James Dean cut short his too-brief career and sealed his legend by slamming his Porsche into an oncoming Ford on September 30, 1955 and dying instantly at the age of 24.

There's a small marker on the roadside to indicate the exact spot of Dean's crash if you know where to look for it, although most people pass right by it without noticing. This is fitting in a way, since Dean's legacy isn't really rooted in the exact circumstances of his death, nor is it based entirely on his screen career (which, after all, spanned just three roles). It could be argued that Dean's legend is predominantly the byproduct of his embodiment of a certain negative perception of celebrity—the too-much-too-soon, live-fast-die-young credo which the public finds so compelling as a definition of the fruits of fame.

The counterbalance to that particular brand of screen immortality lives further north in Carmel—a picturesque village where tourists and townies vie for parking spaces on narrow roads, and ecological conservation is taken so seriously that every tree is reportedly registered individually with the local authorities. Clint Eastwood has called Carmel his home for close to four decades, and it is surely no coincidence that this particular screen icon—whose disaffection with the film industry's standard operating procedures is demonstrated by the almost total autonomy he has maintained since ascending to superstar status in the late 1960s—has made his primary residence so far from the company town where his professional interests continue to thrive. Eastwood's star burns as brightly as any in Hollywood history—so brightly, in fact, that its sheen for many years obscured what may be his most enduring accomplishments as a filmmaker, especially in America, a country his best films, as both actor and director, have had so much to say about.

He has been world-famous for over 30 years—a superstar, remarkably resistant to the trends that elevate and bury screen careers with tidal regularity. "At this point, audiences have seen me a lot," he says, in his typically self-deprecatin way, "and they've seen me for as long as maybe anybody. Maybe to long," he adds, laughing. "Who knows?"



But what makes Eastwood unique, and what has resulted in h relatively recent second ascension into the acknowledged front ranks contemporary American filmmakers, isn't the stardom he has worn s lightly for so long but the accrued accomplishments of a career that retrospect managed to resist most of the customary temptations in pursu of a more complicated agenda. The flame-out of an unfulfilled talent lik Dean's offers high tabloid drama, but Eastwood's steady accumulatio of achievements—many pulled off in spite of, rather than because o his long reign as a bankable star—has made for a creative legacy that that much more likely to endure.

Thanks to "Unforgiven," the darkly revisionist western masterpie that brought him Oscars for Best Picture and Best Director of 1992, it today a foregone conclusion that Eastwood is a serious and accomplishe filmmaker. But it wasn't always that way. Back in 1970, when Eastwoo first decided to try his hand on the other side of the camera with psychological thriller about a DJ and an obsessed fan entitled "Play Mist For Me," his request was met with a combina tion of wariness and bemused tolerance at th executive level—treated as an act benevolent indulgence offered to a rapidl rising star.

> "I never appeared to have any anxieties, but you do [when you're first starting out]. The challenge is not accompanied with any great anxieties now."

"I had signed a deal with Universal Eastwood remembers. "So I went to the hea of the studio, Lew Wasserman, and said 'I got this little story about a disc jockey in a sma town who gets in a sort of psychotic love affai And he said, 'Well, that's fine'—but some the execs didn't feel that way, some of the felt that it was out of the genre that I w playing. And I said, 'And also, I'd like to dire it.' And he said, 'That's fine.' Then he calle my agent to one side, and he said, 'Yeah, w want him to direct it, but we won't pay hi anything.' I said, 'I'll pay them for the oppo tunity. I realize it's a risk, but after I show 'e what I think I can show 'em, hopefully they be encouraged to look kindly on this.'"

"Play Misty For Me" was correctly recognized as a departure for i star, who in 1971 was just coming off a career-defining first performanc as Dirty Harry and who already had all three of his equally legendar Sergio Leone-directed "spaghetti westerns" behind him. But most con mentators of the day focused on Eastwood's visible desire to stretch an actor (as did most opinion on "The Beguiled," the eerie, dark brilliant Civil War-era melodrama Eastwood starred in for "Dirty Harry director Don Siegel that same year). As with many of the risks Eastwoo took in the early phases of his superstardom, the full implications of wh he was up to were largely missed, for with "Play Misty For Me," an incremental process had begun. "One thing led to another, I started continuing on, occasionally doing one, and not directing others. But every other one or every third one I'd do, and eventually here you are in '96, [having directed] 20 films."

R& THE GLORY

It is the promotion of the latest of these directorial efforts, the political thriller "Absolute Power," that has brought Eastwood down from his home in the hills above Carmel to the conference room of the Mission Ranch—the unassuming hotel-restaurant complex Eastwood purchased in 1986 because it was in danger of being razed and he remembered it fondly from his days as a military trainee at nearby Fort Ord back in 1951. It must have been with reluctance that Eastwood left hearth and home. His wife of one year, Dina Ruiz, is eight and a half months pregnant on this rainy November day, and Eastwood mentions in passing that his 88-year-old mother Ruth is feeling under the weather as well.

But Eastwood, who comes off in person as plain-spoken and even courtly despite his many achievements, is also a very driven filmmaker, and perhaps Hollywood's quietest empire builder. A recent British biography went so far as to claim that films produced by Malpaso, the production company Eastwood formed to make "Hang 'Em High" back in 1968 and which he has run out of the Warner lot since 1976, account for "an astonishing 20 percent of Warner Bros. lifetime corporate turnover." Product is coming to market, and it is a notable facet of his personality that Clint Eastwood has always had a healthy respect for the promotional imperatives of product—especially product that he not only stars in, but has chosen to direct.

Based on the bestseller by David Baldacci, "Absolute Power" is a Cadillac project, with a screenplay adaptation by William Goldman and a cast including Eastwood, his "Unforgiven" co-star Gene Hackman, and "Husbands and Wives" Oscar nominee Judy Davis. A Castle Rock release (as was 1993's "In the Line of Fire," one of Eastwood's most popular films ever), "Power" is almost sure to stir up some political controversy, dealing as it does with the uncomfortably contemporary dilemma of a philandering U.S. president (Hackman) whose character deficiencies result in high crimes and misdemeanors which threaten to bring the whole government down.

As this conversation takes place, less than two weeks have passed since Bill Clinton's re-election after a campaign in which the issue of presidential character played a predictably prominent role. The timeliness of "Absolute Power" offers a fairly radical departure for Eastwood from such recent efforts as the romantic "Bridges of Madison County" or the rural policier "A Perfect World." Even director Wolfgang Petersen's "In the Line of Fire," which put Eastwood on the trail of a would-be presidential assassin, offered few points of purchase for op-ed analysis; its themes of guilt and expiation were closer in spirit to "Unforgiven" than to anything currently under discussion in the pages of the Washington Post.

When the subject of "Absolute Power's" topicality is broached, a wide smile plays across Eastwood's lips. But he hastens to say that no specific political references are intended or implied.

"It's not meant to emulate any particular politician," he says. "True that this president is philandering a little bit, but that's probably happened a lot of times in history. He doesn't resemble anybody that we know currently on the scene, he's just a guy who is where he shouldn't be."

Given Hackman's potent ability to convey both charm and malevolence simultaneously, it still seems likely that audiences will, at least subliminally, project some of their darker fears about government onto "Absolute Power." "Well they might," Eastwood says, intrigued by the idea. "People are always suspicious, I think mainly because we've seen some flawed politicians in recent years, and also the press is very vehement about exploiting that now. We're living in sort of a tabloidesque age, because politicians are the product of television now, more than they used to be. They've become like television actors who are all of a sudden vulnerable to the same kind of speculation.

"Personally, if a person does the job well, I think that's probably what they should be judged upon. What does a president or any politician in this country owe us? They owe us to do the best job, and to live up to the faith we put in them by voting them in. In the old days, you didn't have to be a television star, but now you have to have a certain television charisma to get by. The era of the best person winning... I don't know if it was ever here. Who knows? But there's more to it now than just qualifications."

TEAM PLAYER: Clint with Jack Green, one of many multi-picture Eastwood collaborators.

If a few incidental parallels to current events mark "Absolute Power" as an exceptional effort in Eastwood's recent ouevre, its production reflected the continuation of several significant hallmarks of his work as a director. In addition to Hackman's fresh pairing with the director who helped him garner a Best Supporting Actor Oscar for his work in "Unforgiven," "Absolute Power" reunited Eastwood with many of the technicians whose talents he's been utilizing for years. His relationship with "Absolute Power" cinematographer Jack N. Green is emblematic of the way Eastwood tends to stick with people he works well with. Green, who began his career working as a camera operator for Eastwood's other favorite cinematographer Bruce Surtees, graduated to interim director of photography when Surtees fell ill during one Eastwood production. With Surtees' encouragement, Eastwood "promoted" Green to director of photography beginning with "Heartbreak Ridge" in 1986. With the exception of the Eastwood-produced "The Stars Fell on Henrietta" (shot by Surtees), Green has lensed every Eastwood/Malpaso project made since.

"I can talk shorthand to him," Eastwood says of their relationship. "He brings a lot of ideas to the table, and I encourage that with every single member of the crew. I say, 'Don't be afraid to express yourself. Because you're not doing any good if you're just putting a bolt in and tightening it up on the other end. If there's a better way to put the bolt in, a faster way to tighten it, or a more efficient way to operate, by all means, tell me.'"

On some sets, such openness might be seen as an invitation to production slowdowns and a breakdown of the chain of command. But not so with Eastwood, who is something of a legend within the industry for the frugality and decisiveness of his shooting methods. It's a skill he learned from his television work as an actor on the old "Rawhide" series, and from his five collaborations with the late Don Siegel—perhaps the most significant professional association of Eastwood's long career. "Don was very prolific," Eastwood says of a man he characterizes as his "mentor." "Don could pull together a movie really fast. If he

CONTINUED ON PAGE 14

THE MOVIES JUST KEEP SOUNDING BETTER.

(AND WE'VE GOT OVER 8,000 REASONS WHY.)

That's because audiences are enjoying the crisp, clear digital sound of DTS on over 8,000 screens worldwide. And when you combine those installations with an ever growing list of theme park and special venue applications - entertainment has never sounded so good. So call us at (800)959-4109 and let us offer you some sound advice.

DIGITAL dts® SOUND

LISTEN. AND BE AMAZED.

31336 Via Colinas #101 Westlake Village CA 91362 (818)706-3525 (800)959-4109
European Office: 51-55, rue Gustave Huberti 1030 Brussels, Belgium Phone: 32 2 245-9622
Visit our Website http://www.dtstech.com

Response No. 467

"POWER" (continued from page 12)

had the script and he liked the script, he was right off and running."

Like Siegel, Eastwood shoots lean and brings his films in on time and under budget as a matter of principle. With "Absolute Power," Eastwood outdid himself; the film came in a full 17 days earlier than its schedule said it would—in part because of Eastwood's sense of his cast and crew as creative equals, whose time is as valuable as his own.

"Crews get a sense if you're screwing around," he says. "They get a sense if you're lost, and they get a sense if you're just dilly-dallying. They'll bear with you, through take after take, if they feel that you're trying desperately to get something that isn't quite happening. But they fade on you if they see you're just wasting time—and justifiably so."

PIECE OF CAKE: Celebrating another efficient Eastwood shoot at the wrap for "Absolute Power."

Fastidious as his directing may be, Eastwood's career has been characterized by anything but the taking of safe bets. While he has consistently attended to his superstar status (all five "Dirty Harry" projects could be viewed in this light), he has just as consistently subverted it, tackling highbrow themes and an enormous range of characters that the critics who decried as pointlessly sadistic his career-making "spaghetti westerns" with Leone would never have predicted for him. Meanwhile, the Leone films—"A Fistful of Dollars," "For a Few Dollars More" and "The Good, the Bad and the Ugly"—have come in for their own share of revisionism, so that it's now a critical given that Eastwood's career as a leading man started with three masterpieces in a row.

When Eastwood talks about the projects he's proudest of, they are almost always the ones that stretched him as actor or director, and almost never the ones that grabbed the biggest grosses—except in those instances (as with "Unforgiven," which made over $100 million domestically) where those two priorities dovetailed into one another. "You make a film, hoping that somebody wants to see it," he says. "You certainly don't make it for a lot of empty seats in a theatre. But I had a line in 'White Hunter, Black Heart' where the [movie director] I was playing is criticizing the writer, and he says, 'You should forget anybody's ever gonna see a film when you're making it.' And you know, there's something to that. Yeah, you hope that a reviewer'd like it, just the same as you hope everyone else does. Nobody wants to have somebody going out of the theatre going, 'Oh boy, that was a yawner,' but that happens, that's just the way it goes. Some of my best films were the least attended, in my mind."

Eastwood has an almost paternal fondness for some of his shaggier, more image-busting efforts, such as the depression-era drama "Honkytonk Man" and the rodeo comedy "Bronco Billy." "Every Which Way But Loose," the screwball comedy in which Clint lost the girl but rode off into the sunset with an orangutan, was a film that particularly delighted him, not least because it became an unexpected boxoffice smash despite the studio's distinct lack of faith in it. "The studio would have sold it for 10 cents on the dollar before it was released. All their..." He pauses, using inflection to signify his disdain. "'Research'...said the picture wasn't going to work."

At least two of the many movies he has directed and starred in seem to hold particularly special places in Eastwood's heart: "Unforgiven," a film he clearly would have loved even if it never made a dime, and the picaresque 1976 western "The Outlaw Josey Wales"—a ruminative, character-driven epic that stands as perhaps his first fully realized directorial effort, and the film which he credits with beginning the decades-long process of his filmmaking finally emerging from the long shadow cast by his status as a boxoffice star.

"I think maybe it started turning in the '70s, with 'The Outlaw Josey Wales,'" he says, "which I think is a movie that stands up today. If that came out on the market today, I think it would be appreciated, maybe even more than it was then, because maybe there was too much prejudice [back then] against the genre, or the person making it."

In fact, in looking over Eastwood's many credits, what emerges is something almost no one would have imagined him capable of when "Play Misty For Me" first entered the marketplace back in 1971. Given his willingness to embellish and violate his screen persona, what Eastwood has created, in his art and in his life, is nothing less than a multi-leveled rumination on the American concept of heroism, and on what it means to be an American star.

That's a high-toned argument which Eastwood might resist endorsing, though it is interesting to note he is quite emphatic about his hope that, when the time comes to tally up his achievements, he'll be remembered more as a filmmaker than as a star. Hardly one to wallow in nostalgia, it will be enough for him if the history books recognize "just the fact that he made some films that were important, or that they somehow fit into the scheme of film history. And I hope to do some more."

In the meantime, there's "Absolute Power" and whatever else the future may bring to a man who, creatively and personally, views the present as the prime of his life. He lives for the moment, and this particular moment is especially right for him.

"After 'Bridges of Madison County,' I took a year off from work," he says. "I felt fine. I had a good time, I contemplated a lot of things, worked on my personal life a little. Took time out to do some things that I maybe felt I should have, that you neglect when you're younger and you're striving to get things going. There's that thing actors go through in their early stages, where they say, 'This is my last job.' So another job comes up, pretty soon you're accepting [all of] them. I used to accept them back to back, and I see young actors now doing that—accepting work, back to back to back. It's that thing where you've got the brass ring, you feel like you've got to keep riding it, stay on the merry-go-round. But at some point, you realize it's not necessary. You've got sort of a history.

"There's always something new, a new challenge, which makes it fun. But the challenge is not accompanied with any great anxieties now. I never appeared to have any anxieties, that's not my appearance, but you do [when you're first starting out]. You get the brass ring, and you go start grinding, and if they want you, you keep grinding. Maybe that's a point in life when you feel you should do that, because you're afraid that maybe two or three films, and maybe you'll be selling used cars somewhere. But then after awhile, you build up your chops."

"Absolute Power." Starring Clint Eastwood, Gene Hackman and Judy Davis. Directed by Clint Eastwood. Produced by Clint Eastwood and Karen Spiegel. Screenplay by William Goldman, based on the novel by David Baldacci. A Malpaso Production. A Columbia Release. Feb. 7.

AN AMP IS AN AMP IS AN AMP...

unless, it's Hafler® PROFESSIONAL amplification for cinema

A few years ago I attended the ITEA seminar Series in Los Angeles where we were taken on a tour of a production facility. So I looked behind the screen to see how they do it and what do I find. Hafler! That clinched it for me."

I work with companies that insist upon the highest standard of presentation. To achieve that I've found that there are three pieces of equipment that must be top quality; lenses, speakers and amplifiers. You can't cut corners with any three. Particularly now with the large digital theatres that are being built."

I'm not an audio engineer, what I know comes from thirty years of experience. There are a few theatres out there that I could just as soon forget. In the last eighteen months I've used over a thousand Hafler amplifiers in new theatres and retrofits, analog and digital. When the sound is correct you know it. When you have a good thing, you keep it."

Jon Karell

Hafler When You Want to Impress!

MADE IN THE USA

HAFLER PROFESSIONAL, A DIVISION OF ROCKFORD CORPORATION • TEMPE, ARIZONA 85281 USA
1-800-366-1619 • INTERNATIONAL FAX 602-967-8132 • IN CANADA, CONTACT CABLE TEK 604-942-1001 • http://www.rockfordcorp.com

©1995 Rockford Corporation

WILLPOWER

How producer Karen Spiegel helped get "Absolute Power" to the screen

By Bridget Byrne

Karen Spiegel describes herself as "a pretty relaxed person," but she's also, by her own admission, a phone fanatic who can use up multiple cordless phone batteries in a day.

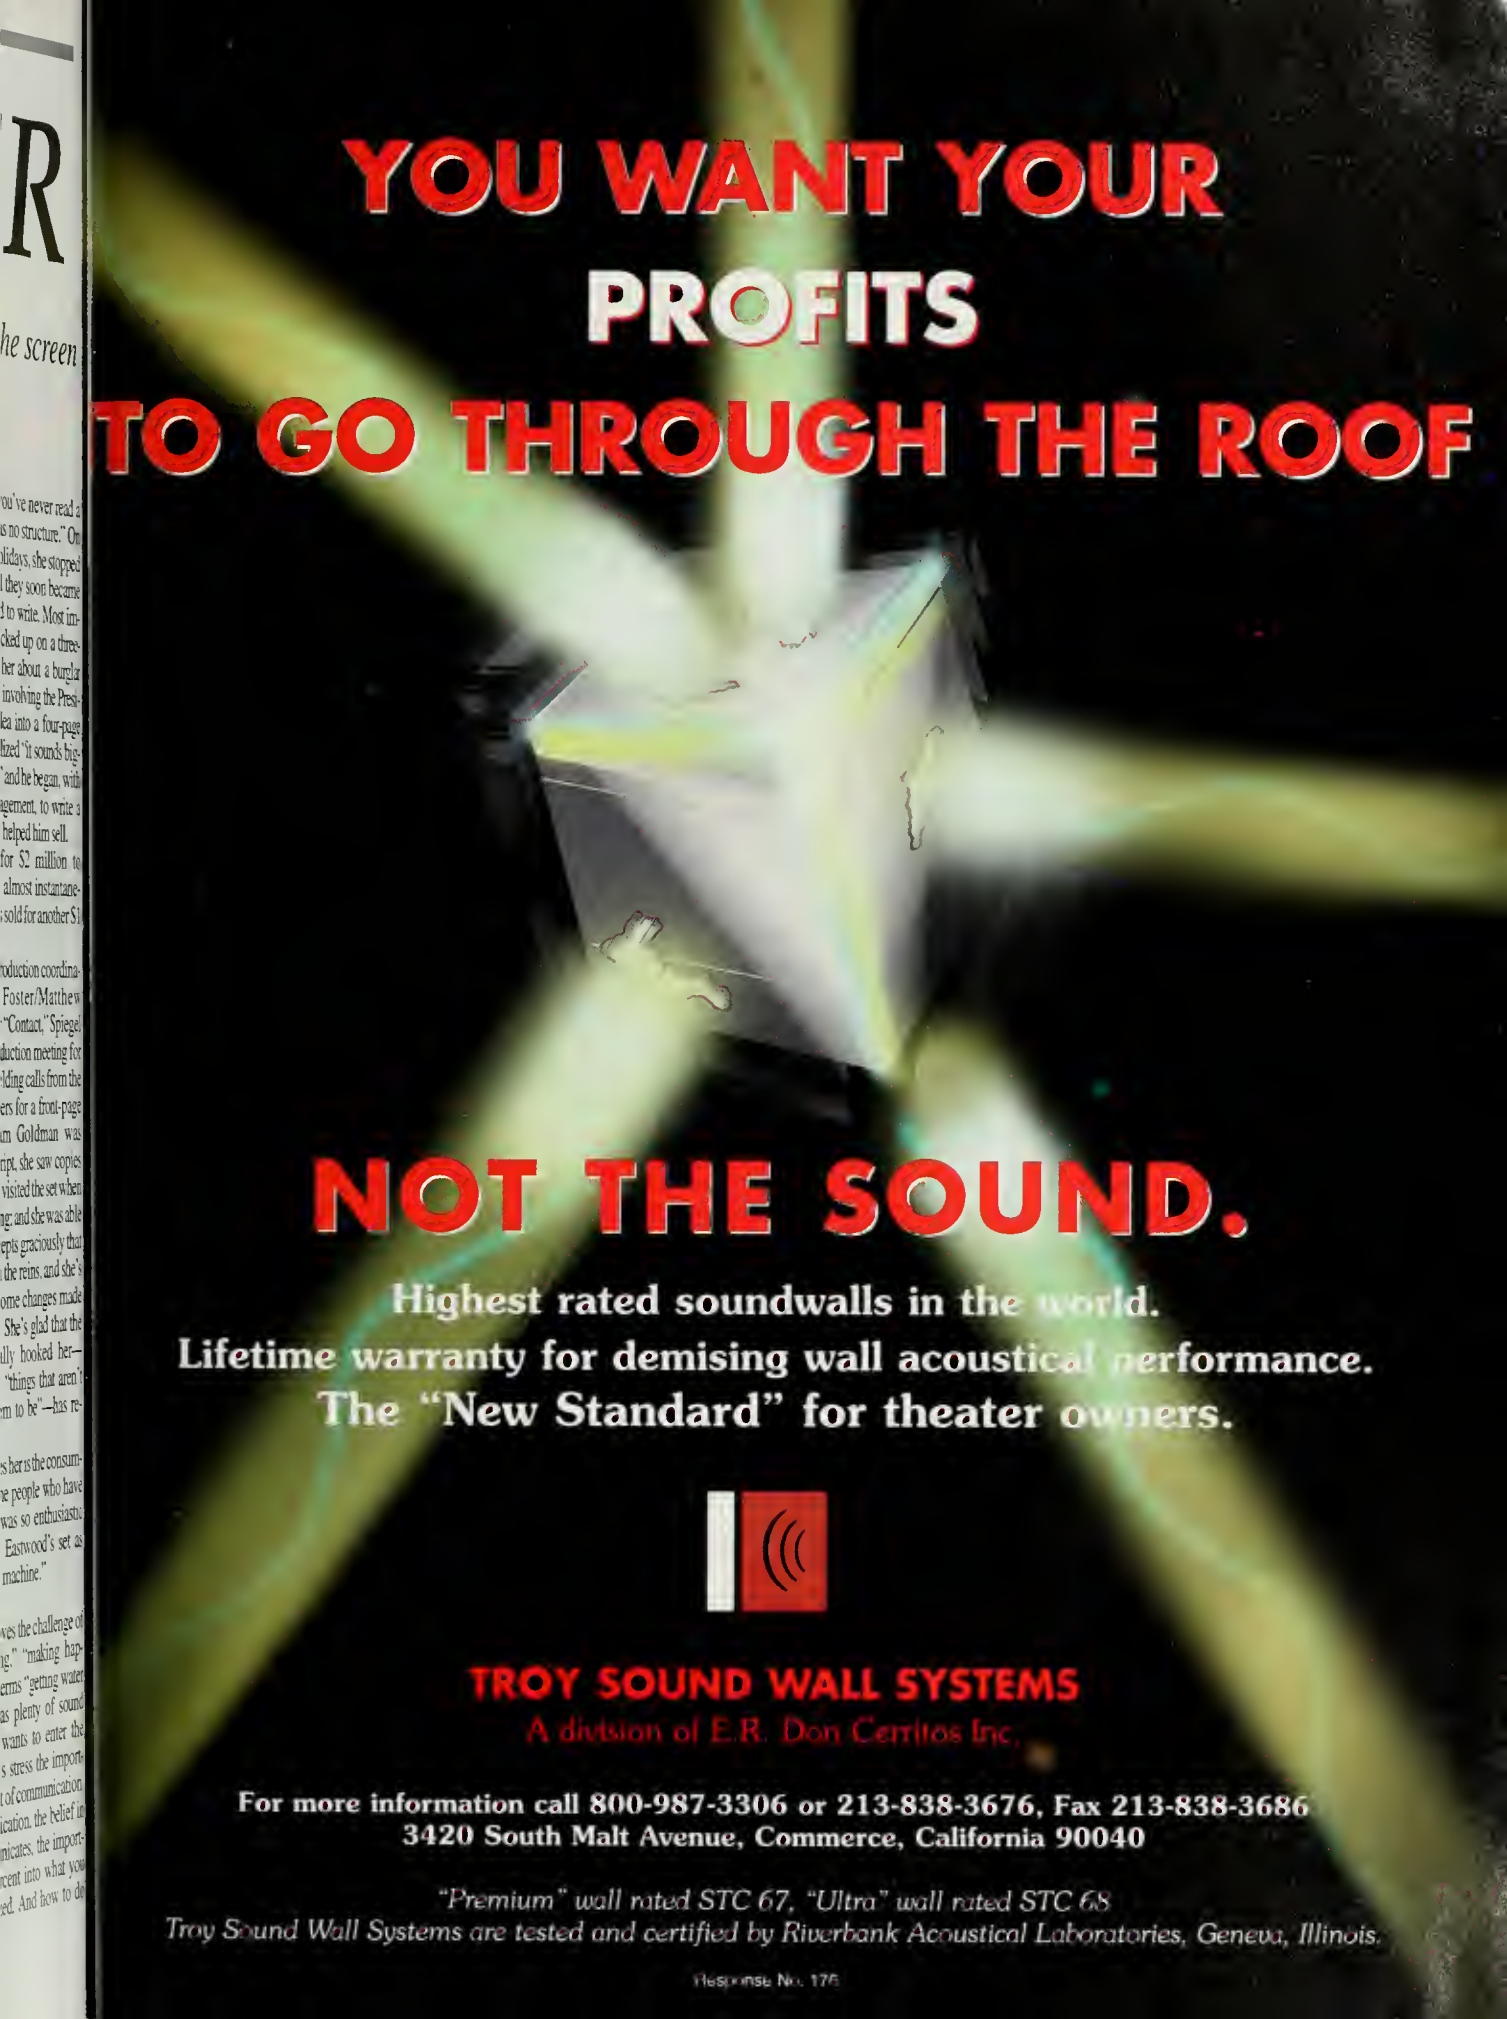
"I've always been able to keep anyone on the telephone, so I guess I was destined to be a producer," she laughs, acknowledging the qualities of perseverance that helped her keep her footing and now triumph in a difficult business rife with rejection. But it was more than phone skills that led her to become co-producer of "Absolute Power," sharing the credit with Clint Eastwood, the film's star and director. This thriller, a Malpaso production for Castle Rock Entertainment, is based on the best-selling novel by David Baldacci. It was Spiegel, who met Baldacci in 1992, who helped the author bring his three-line synopsis to fruition.

As an avid believer in the art of story, it's not surprising that Spiegel can tell a good one of her own. Seated in a conference room at Castle Rock, she is an appealing mixture of old-fashioned common sense and cutting-edge enthusiasm. She's wearing a stylish dark checked suit redolent of "power lunches," but her still-girlish face is more reflective of a cozy sorority gab fest. She's "thirtysomething" and a player of both volleyball and bridge (worthwhile, enjoyable endeavors, but also good networking sports). She has a Master of Fine Arts degree from the University of Southern California's Cinema/Television Production program, several years of experience in assistant producer and production coordinator roles at various studios including Paramount, Warner and Sony, and her own company, Copper Beech Productions.

"That's beech, not beach," she points out, aware that this is the West Coast. (She's from the East and attended Boston University before USC.) She chose the Copper Beech name for a number of reasons. "It's a very thick-trunked, deep-rooted tree, hard to knock over. And I'm a big girl, hard to knock over," she explains. "And it's a tree that provides the greatest shade, a place to sit and think under or to take a nap! Also, I've always loved mysteries, and there's a Sherlock Holmes story called 'The Case of the Copper Beeches,'" says the upward-bound producer, whose projects in development include the 54 stories and two novels which made up the old radio series "I Love A Mystery."

Photo Credit: Hugh Milstein

"I've always been able to keep anyone on the telephone, so I guess I was destined to be a producer."



The case of "Absolute Power" started when a friend from Connecticut linked her up with Baldacci, a Washington, D.C. lawyer who wanted someone in Hollywood to read a screenplay he was working on—someone who would be "honest and forthright, and tell him what he ought to hear," Spiegel says. Spiegel liked his script, an action thriller, loved how he told a story and developed character, but told him "Obviously you've never read a screenplay, because this has no structure." On her way back east for the holidays, she stopped over to meet him, and they soon became friends as he continued to write. Most importantly of all, she picked up on a three-sentence idea he told her about a burglar who witnesses a crime involving the President. He turned the idea into a four-page treatment, but they realized "it sounds bigger than a screenplay," and he began, with her input and encouragement, to write a novel, which she then helped him sell.

The novel went for $2 million to Warner Books. Then, almost instantaneously, the movie rights sold for another $1 million.

Still working as a production coordinator on the Jodie Foster/Matthew McConaughey starrer "Contact," Spiegel found herself in a production meeting for "Absolute Power," fielding calls from the Hollywood trade papers for a front-page story. When William Goldman was signed to write the script, she saw copies of each new draft; she visited the set when Eastwood was directing; and she was able to see dailies. She accepts graciously that higher clout has taken the reins, and she's philosophical about some changes made from novel to screen. She's glad that the concept that originally hooked her—Baldacci's interest in "things that aren't necessarily what they seem to be"—has remained intact.

What particularly pleases her is the consummate professionalism of the people who have taken on the project she was so enthusiastic about, and she describes Eastwood's set as running like "a well-oiled machine."

As someone who loves the challenge of "calling," "finding," "making happen"—what she terms "getting water from the moon"—she has plenty of sound advice for anyone who wants to enter the movie business. "I always stress the importance of enthusiasm, the art of communication, the art of visual communication, the belief in a great story that communicates, the importance of throwing 110 percent into what you believe in until it's realized. And how to do 'good phone.'"

YOU WANT YOUR PROFITS
TO GO THROUGH THE ROOF
NOT THE SOUND.
Highest rated soundwalls in the world.
Lifetime warranty for demising wall acoustical performance.
The "New Standard" for theater owners.
TROY SOUND WALL SYSTEMS
A division of E.R. Don Cerritos Inc.
For more information call 800-987-3306 or 213-838-3676, Fax 213-838-3686
3420 South Malt Avenue, Commerce, California 90040
"Premium" wall rated STC 67, "Ultra" wall rated STC 68
Troy Sound Wall Systems are tested and certified by Riverbank Acoustical Laboratories, Geneva, Illinois.
Response No. 176

★ 1997 Barometer Star Poll ★

The accompanying ballot is for your vote in the 1997 Barometer Star Poll. The following list includes lead actors and actresses from films that made their stateside debut in 1996. Feel free to write in your own selection if we have omitted someone whom you feel merits recognition.

BE SURE TO RETURN YOUR BALLOT NO LATER THAN JAN. 5, 1997.

The results of your voting will be published in the March 1997 issue of BOXOFFICE.

Male Star of the Year

1. Alan Alda ("Everyone Says I Love You")
2. Jason Alexander ("Dunston Checks In")
3. Woody Allen ("Everyone Says I Love You")
4. Alan Arkin ("Mother Night")
5. Tom Arnold ("The Stupids," "Carpool," "Big Bully")
6. Dan Aykroyd ("Celtic Pride")
7. Kevin Bacon ("Sleepers")
8. Alec Baldwin ("Ghosts of Mississippi," "The Juror")
9. Stephen Baldwin ("Fled," "Bio-Dome")
10. Antonio Banderas ("Evita")
11. Tom Berenger ("The Substitute")
12. David Bowie ("Basquiat")
13. Kenneth Branagh ("Hamlet")
14. Marlon Brando ("Dr. Moreau")
15. Jeff Bridges ("The Mirror Has Two Faces," "White Squall")
16. Matthew Broderick ("The Cable Guy," "Infinity")
17. Albert Brooks ("Mother")
18. Pierce Brosnan ("The Mirror Has Two Faces," "Mars Attacks")
19. Edward Burns ("She's the One")
20. Steve Buscemi ("Fargo," "Trees Lounge")
21. James Caan ("Eraser," "North Star")
22. Nicolas Cage ("The Rock")
23. Jim Carrey ("The Cable Guy")
24. Sean Connery ("The Rock")
25. Kevin Costner ("Tin Cup")
26. Tom Cruise ("Jerry Maguire," "Mission: Impossible")
27. Tim Curry ("Muppet Treasure Island")
28. Jeff Daniels ("101 Dalmatians," "Fly Away Home")
29. Daniel Day-Lewis ("The Crucible")
30. Robert De Niro ("Marvin's Room," "Sleepers," "The Fan")
31. Gerard Depardieu ("Bogus")
32. Johnny Depp ("Dead Man")
33. Danny DeVito ("Matilda," "Mars Attacks")
34. Leonardo DiCaprio ("Marvin's Room," "Romeo & Juliet")
35. Matt Dillon ("Albino Alligator," "Beautiful Girls")
36. Vincent D'Onofrio ("The Whole Wide World," "Feeling Minnesota")
37. Michael Douglas ("The Ghost and the Darkness")
38. Richard Dreyfuss ("Night Falls On Manhattan," "Mad Dog Time")
39. Charles Dutton ("Get On the Bus")
40. Robert Duvall ("A Family Thing")
41. Chris Farley ("Black Sheep")
42. Ralph Fiennes ("English Patient")
43. Michael J. Fox ("The Frighteners")
44. Brendan Fraser ("Mrs. Winterbourne")
45. Morgan Freeman ("Chain Reaction," "Moll Flanders")
46. Edward Furlong ("The Grass Harp," "Before and After")
47. Andy Garcia ("Night Falls On...")
48. James Garner ("My Fellow Americans")
49. Richard Gere ("Primal Fear")
50. Mel Gibson ("Ransom")
51. Sir John Gielgud ("Shine")
52. Jeff Goldblum ("ID4")
53. Kelsey Grammer ("Down Periscope")
54. Hugh Grant ("Extreme Measures")
55. Richard E. Grant ("Jack & Sarah")
56. Lukas Haas ("Everyone Says I Love You," "Boys," "johns")
57. Gene Hackman ("The Chamber," "Extreme Measures," "The Birdcage")
58. Tom Hanks ("That Thing You Do!")
59. Woody Harrelson ("The People Vs. Larry Flynt," "Kingpin")
60. Ed Harris ("The Rock," "Eye for an Eye")
61. Phil Hartman ("Jingle All The Way")
62. Nigel Hawthorne ("Twelfth Night")
63. Dustin Hoffman ("Sleepers," "American Buffalo")
64. Paul Hogan ("Flipper")
65. Anthony Hopkins ("Surviving Picasso")
66. William Hurt ("Michael," "Jane Eyre")
67. Timothy Hutton ("Substance of Fire," "Beautiful Girls")
68. Samuel L. Jackson ("The Long Kiss Goodnight," "A Time To Kill")
69. Derek Jacobi ("Hamlet")
70. Don Johnson ("Tin Cup")
71. James Earl Jones ("A Family Thing")
72. Michael Keaton ("Multiplicity")
73. Val Kilmer ("The Ghost and the Darkness," "The Island of Dr. Moreau")
74. Greg Kinnear ("Dear God")
75. Martin Landau ("Pinocchio")
76. Martin Lawrence ("A Thin Line...")
77. Denis Leary ("Two If By Sea")
78. John Leguizamo ("Romeo & Juliet," "The Fan," "Executive Decision")
79. Jack Lemmon ("My Fellow Americans")
80. Jon Lovitz ("High School High")
81. Kyle MacLachlan ("Trigger Effect")
82. John Malkovich ("Portrait of a Lady," "Mary Reilly," "The Ogre")
83. Cheech Marin ("Tin Cup")
84. Steve Martin ("Sgt. Bilko")
85. Walter Matthau ("The Grass Harp," "I'm Not Rappaport")
86. Dennis Miller ("Bordello of Blood")
87. Armin Mueller-Stahl ("Shine")
88. Dermot Mulroney ("Trigger Effect")
89. Eddie Murphy ("Nutty Professor")
90. Bill Murray ("Larger Than Life," "Space Jam," "Kingpin")
91. Liam Neeson ("Michael Collins," "Before and After")
92. Jack Nicholson ("The Evening Star," "Mars Attacks")
93. Leslie Nielsen ("Spy Hard")
94. Nick Nolte ("Mother Night," "Mulholland Falls")
95. Chris O'Donnell ("In Love and War," "The Chamber")
96. Al Pacino ("Looking For Ricard," "City Hall")
97. Chazz Palminteri ("Diabolique," "Faithful," "Mulholland Falls")
98. Jason Patric ("Sleepers")
99. Bill Paxton ("The Evening Star," "Twister")
100. Brad Pitt ("Sleepers")
101. Bill Pullman ("ID4," "Mr. Wrong")
102. Dennis Quaid ("Dragonheart")
103. Randy Quaid ("ID4," "Kingpin")
104. Michael Rapaport ("The Pallbearer," "Beautiful Girls")
105. Robert Redford ("Up Close & Personal")
106. Keanu Reeves ("Feeling Minnesota," "Chain Reaction")
107. Burt Reynolds ("Striptease")
108. Ving Rhames ("Rosewood," "Ransom," "Mission: Impossible," "Striptease")
109. Eric Roberts ("It's My Party")
110. Kurt Russell ("Escape From L.A.," "Executive Decision")
111. Adam Sandler ("Bulletproof," "Happy Gilmore")
112. Arnold Schwarzenegger ("Jingle All the Way," "Eraser")
113. Steven Seagal ("The Glimmer Man," "Executive Decision")
114. Pauly Shore ("Bio-Dome")
115. Martin Short ("Mars Attacks")
116. Sinbad ("Jingle..." "First Kid")
117. Gary Sinise ("Ransom")
118. Christian Slater ("Broken Arrow," "Bed of Roses")
119. Will Smith ("Independence Day")
120. Wesley Snipes ("The Fan")
121. David Spade ("Black Sheep")
122. James Spader ("2 Days in the Valley")

123. Brent Spiner ("Star Trek: First Contact," "ID4," "Phenomenon")
124. Sylvester Stallone ("Daylight")
125. Daniel Stern ("Celtic Pride")
126. Patrick Stewart ("Star Trek...")
127. Ben Stiller ("Flirting With Disaster")
128. Kiefer Sutherland ("Eye For An Eye")
129. Noah Taylor ("Shine")
130. Jonathan Taylor Thomas ("Pinocchio")
131. John Travolta ("Michael," "Phenomenon," "Broken Arrow")
132. Jean-Claude Van Damme ("Maximum Risk," "The Quest")
133. Jon Voight ("Rosewood," "Mission: Impossible")
134. Christopher Walken ("The Funeral," "Last Man Standing")
135. Denzel Washington ("The Preacher's Wife," "Courage Under Fire")
136. Damon Wayans ("Bulletproof," "Celtic Pride," "The Great White Hype")
137. Robin Williams ("Birdcage," "Jack")
138. Bruce Willis ("Last Man Standing")
139. Elijah Wood ("Flipper")
140. James Woods ("Ghosts of Mississippi")

Female Star of the Year

1. Isabelle Adjani ("Diabolique")
2. Patricia Arquette ("Infinity," "Flirting With Disaster")
3. Lauren Bacall ("The Mirror Has Two Faces," "My Fellow Americans")
4. Drew Barrymore ("Everyone Says I Love You," "Scream")
5. Halle Berry ("The Rich Man's Wife," "Executive Decision," "Race the Sun")
6. Juliette Binoche ("English Patient")
7. Sandra Bullock ("In Love and War," "A Time To Kill," "Two If By Sea")
8. Ellen Burstyn ("The Spitfire Grill")
9. Helena Bonham Carter ("Twelfth Night," "Margaret's Museum")
10. Cher ("Faithful")
11. Glenn Close ("101 Dalmatians," "Mars Attacks," "Mary Reilly")
12. Jamie Lee Curtis ("House Arrest")
13. Claire Danes ("Romeo & Juliet," "To Gillian On Her 37th Birthday")
14. Geena Davis ("Long Kiss Goodnight")
15. Laura Dern ("Citizen Ruth")
16. Cameron Diaz ("Feeling Minnesota," "She's the One," "The Last Supper")
17. Illeana Douglas ("Grace of My Heart")
18. Sally Field ("Eye for an Eye")
19. Linda Fiorentino ("Unforgettable")
20. Gina Gershon ("Bound")
21. Whoopi Goldberg ("The Associate," "Bogus," "Eddie")
22. Goldie Hawn ("The First Wives Club," "Everyone Says I Love You")
23. Salma Hayek ("Fled," "From Dusk Till Dawn")
24. Mariel Hemingway ("Bad Moon")
25. Lauren Holly ("Down Periscope," "Beautiful Girls")
26. Whitney Houston ("Preacher's Wife")
27. Helen Hunt ("Twister")
28. Diane Keaton ("Marvin's Room," "The First Wives Club")
29. Nicole Kidman ("Portrait of A Lady")
30. Mia Kirshner ("The Crow 2")
31. Alice Krige ("Star Trek: First Contact")
32. Ricki Lake ("Mrs. Winterbourne")
33. Diane Lane ("Jack")
34. Sheryl Lee ("Mother Night")
35. Jennifer Jason Leigh ("Kansas City")
36. Juliette Lewis ("The Evening Star," "From Dusk Till Dawn")
37. Andie MacDowell ("Michael," "Multiplicity")
38. Shirley MacLaine ("The Evening Star," "Mrs. Winterbourne")
39. Madonna ("Evita")
40. Mary Stuart Masterson ("Bed of Roses")
41. Samantha Mathis ("Jack & Sarah," "Broken Arrow")
42. Catherine McCormack ("The Honest Courtesan," "North Star")
43. Frances McDormand ("Fargo")
44. Bette Midler ("The First Wives Club")
45. Helen Mirren ("Some Mother's Son," "Losing Chase")
46. Demi Moore ("Striptease," "The Juror")
47. Mary Tyler Moore ("Flirting With Disaster")
48. Rosie O'Donnell ("Harriet the Spy")
49. Anna Paquin ("Fly Away Home," "Jane Eyre")
50. Sarah Jessica Parker ("Substance of Fire," "Extreme Measures," "The First Wives Club," "If Lucy Fell")
51. Rhea Perlman ("Matilda," "Sunset Park")
52. Michelle Pfeiffer ("One Fine Day," "To Gillian on Her 37th Birthday," "Up Close & Personal")
53. Natalie Portman ("Mars Attacks," "Everyone Says...," "Beautiful Girls")
54. Debbie Reynolds ("Mother")
55. Joely Richardson ("101 Dalmatians")
56. Miranda Richardson ("Kansas City")
57. Julia Roberts ("Everyone Says I Love You," "Michael Collins," "Mary Reilly")
58. Gena Rowlands ("Unhook the Stars")
59. Rene Russo ("Ransom," "Tin Cup")
60. Meg Ryan ("Courage Under Fire")
61. Winona Ryder ("The Crucible," "Boys")
62. Kyra Sedgwick ("Phenomenon," "Losing Chase")
63. Elisabeth Shue ("The Trigger Effect")
64. Sharon Stone ("Last Dance," "Diabolique")
65. Meryl Streep ("Marvin's Room," "Before and After")
66. Barbra Streisand ("The Mirror Has Two Faces")
67. Kristy Swanson ("The Phantom")
68. Kristin Scott Thomas ("English Patient")
69. Uma Thurman ("The Truth About Cats and Dogs," "Beautiful Girls")
70. Jennifer Tilly ("Bound," "House Arrest")
71. Marisa Tomei ("Unhook the Stars")
72. Dianne Wiest ("The Associate," "The Birdcage," "Drunks")
73. Vanessa Williams ("Eraser")
74. Mara Wilson ("Matilda")
75. Kate Winslet ("Hamlet," "Jude")
76. Reese Witherspoon ("Fear")
77. Robin Wright ("Moll Flanders")

Breakout Star of the Year—Male

1. Jean-Marc Barr ("Breaking the Waves")
2. Charles Berling ("Ridicule")
3. Jackie Chan ("Supercop," "Rumble In The Bronx," "First Strike")
4. Ben Chaplin ("Truth...Cats & Dogs")
5. George Clooney ("One Fine Day," "From Dusk Till Dawn")
6. Chris Cooper ("Lone Star")
7. Christopher Eccleston ("Jude")
8. Andre Eisermann ("Brother of Sleep")
9. Jared Harris ("I Shot Andy Warhol")
10. Michael Jordan ("Space Jam")
11. Nathan Lane ("The Birdcage")
12. William H. Macy ("Fargo")
13. Matthew McConaughey ("A Time To Kill," "Larger Than Life," "Lone Star")
14. Ewan McGregor ("Trainspotting")
15. Vincent Perez ("The Crow 2")
16. Geoffrey Rush ("Shine")
17. David Schwimmer ("Pallbearer")
18. Tom Everett Scott ("That Thing You Do!")
19. David Thewlis ("The Island of Dr. Moreau," "Dragonheart")
20. Billy Bob Thornton ("Sling Blade")
21. Stanley Tucci ("Big Night")
22. Mark Wahlberg ("Fear")
23. Jeffrey Wright ("Basquiat")
24. Billy Zane ("The Phantom")

Breakout Star of the Year—Female

1. Pamela Anderson ("Barb Wire")
2. Vanessa Angel ("Kingpin")
3. Jennifer Aniston ("She's the One")
4. Fairuza Balk ("Dr. Moreau," "The Craft")
5. Emmanuelle Beart ("Mission Impossible")
6. Brenda Blethyn ("Secrets and Lies")
7. Ellen DeGeneres ("Mr. Wrong")
8. Alison Elliott ("The Spitfire Grill")
9. Vivica Fox ("Set It Off," "ID4")
10. Charlotte Gainsbourg ("Jane Eyre")
11. Janeane Garofalo ("The Truth About Cats and Dogs," "Larger Than Life")
12. Marianne Jean-Baptiste ("Secrets & Lies")
13. Angela Jones ("Curdled")
14. Tea Leoni ("Flirting With Disaster")
15. Courtney Love ("The People Vs. Larry Flynt," "Feeling Minnesota")
16. Leslie Mann ("The Cable Guy")
17. Heather Matarazzo ("Welcome To the Dollhouse")
18. Gwyneth Paltrow ("Emma," "The Pallbearer")
19. Jada Pinkett ("Set It Off," "The Nutty Professor")
20. Theresa Randle ("Space Jam," "Girl 6")
21. Imogen Stubbs ("Twelfth Night")
22. Lili Taylor ("Ransom," "I Shot Andy Warhol," "Girls Town")
23. Michelle Trachtenberg ("Harriet the Spy")
24. Robin Tunney ("The Craft")
25. Liv Tyler ("That Thing You Do!," "Stealing Beauty," "Heavy")
26. Emily Watson ("Breaking the Waves")
27. Rachel Wiesz ("Chain Reaction")

MAKING HIS "POINTE"

Actor John Cusack Turns Writer/ Producer With "Grosse Pointe Blank"

By Bridget Byrne

Director George Armitage (left), Joan Cusack and John Cusack discuss a scene for Buena Vista's "Grosse Pointe Blank."

John Cusack had an agreement with two of his pals that, if the script they were developing got financed, they had to go back to their high school reunion. But this wasn't just some kind of casual joke. Their script, called "Grosse Pointe Blank," was structured around just such a gathering.

The deal indeed was made, so the bet had to be met. Cusack recalls the emotion he experienced in the parking lot before entering the Evanston, Ill. hotel where his classmates of years earlier had assembled. "Although I'd been in many major motion pictures and felt the responsibility of carrying millions of dollars on the strength of my performance, somehow I'd never felt so anxious in my life," says the 30-year-old actor, who has been working in film since he was a high-schoolish 16 and scored a supporting role in the romance-at-prep-school movie "Class." His breakthrough came two years later, with "The Sure Thing"; since then, his roles of greatest prominence include a con artist in "The Grifters," a baseball player in "Eight Men Out," a playwright in "Bullets Over Broadway" and a mayor's right-hand man in "City Hall."

Once Cusack was inside the hotel and back with his former school fellows, his anxiety eased, and he was able to observe much of what he expected to see: "Things that were tragic, things that were sick, and things that were really beautiful."

"Grosse Pointe Blank," now a completed film and slated for February release via Buena Vista's Hollywood Pictures label, covers similar ground in its reunion scenes, but it also includes much that might be unexpected. The film hangs many complexities of both tone and content over the framework of a nontraditional trip back to a hometown. Cusack plays Martin Blank, a professional killer trying to fulfill a contract while catching up with his past and rekindling a lost romance.

But, Cusack says, "I think it's a comedy," aware that the film doesn't fit snugly into type. "It's a comedy with teeth to it. I don't think it could be seen as a normal studio release. Hopefully, it's very funny—a black comedy with action and romance. It has those two [latter elements] in good measure, but at the end of the day it's a comedy."

The project first came to the attention of Cusack and longtime friends Steve Pink and D.V. DeVincentis, who co-wrote the script with him, as a spec work of about 40 pages. "We liked the idea and thought [the Blank role was] a good character for a comedy about American self-interest, about the disconnection of behavior from self-image," Cusack says.

Cusack stuck to his belief in "Grosse Pointe Blank" through a period when he had a production deal at Paramount and later when the script was at MGM. Eventually, the project was acquired by Donna Roth and Susan Arnold (the producer duo of Diane Keaton's critically lauded "Unstrung Heroes") and joined the slate at Disney-affiliated Caravan Pictures. Filmed on a $15 million budget, "Grosse Pointe Blank" was shot mainly in Los Angeles, with some second-unit work in Detroit, where the reunion is set. (The "Grosse Pointe" part of the title refers to that Motor City suburb.)

Throughout his career, Cusack has wanted to be more than "a hired gun." Not entirely facetiously, he says, "'Actor' is kind of a bad word, isn't it?" So he appreciated his triple-tier involvement as co-writer and co-producer as well as the movie's lead. "Most films are organized chaos, without much thought given to the actors and to protecting what would be best for their performance," says Cusack, pleased that his producer status often enabled him to make choices more sensitive to actors' needs. "You can dictate the way you want to work when you have the power and hire people who understand actors," he says.

"I like a director who...is interested in behavior and not just plot.... Someone who can catch 'moments.'"

Asked about not taking on the director's chair (Cusack has helmed several plays for his Chicago-based New Criminals stage company), Cusack replies, "It' arrogant enough to write, produc and act. That's enough." Instead George Armitage took the reins." had seen his 'Miami Blues' an loved it. I felt George would un derstand what I wanted, whic was to do something that is no normally tried: t keep it tense, t keep it real, bu to go for the ab surdity withou being camp.

"He did a grea job. I like a direc tor who...is inter ested in behavio and not just plo Someone wh understands wha actors do. Some one who can catch 'moments.'"

The film's oddball cast in cludes Cusack's actress siste Joan and his longtime friend Jer emy Piven, as well as Alan Arkin Dan Aykroyd and Minnie Drive For his part, Cusack's part-choi boy, part-gigolo look seems righ for a role that demands he be bot sensitive and slick—a cute dat and a bad appointment.

After "Grosse Pointe Blank," Cusack will turn his attention t other projects he has in develop ment. One is a western about "re demption and sacrifice," anoth an off-kilter look at the NFL i which he would play "the quarte back." But audiences will next se Cusack in a mammoth action/a venture, "Con Air" (arrivin this spring via Disney Touchstone wing), in whic he stars opposite Nicol Cage and John Malkovich. it, Cusack plays a U.S. ma shal. That sounds like an a gressive role for Cusack, b he describes his "Con Ai character as "an eccentr goodie." Somehow, th sounds like an apt descriptio for one of his roles—and f Cusack himself.

"Grosse Pointe Blank." Sta ring John Cusack, Minnie Driv Dan Aykroyd, Joan Cusack an Alan Arkin. Directed by Geor Armitage. Written by To Jankiewicz, D.V. DeVincenti Steve Pink and John Cusack. Pr duced by Susan Arnold, Don Roth and Roger Birnbaum. Co edy. A Buena Vista release. N yet rated. Feb. 14.

EQ YOUR BLUES AWAY!

The USL, Inc. MMP-10 Microphone Multiplexer is a must for anyone doing acoustical analyzation of any kind. The MMP-10 utilizes four laboratory grade microphones to aid the technician's work. Compatible with virtually any analyzer. Each set of microphones are matched to their unit for accuracy. The MMP-10 is rugged, portable and compact. With microphone mounts included, the MMP-10 is the perfect compliment to any analyzer package.

USL, Inc.
Quality Cinema Products

FEBRUARY TRAILERS

Conflagration comes to Hollywood

Things are going to get hot this month. Not only because February is the month of romance, or because its middle weekend finds distributors swakking audiences with a dozen-plus titles, thanks to Valentine's and Presidents' Days sharing a three-day.

It's also because the bubbling war between volcano epics—Universal's "Dante's Peak" and Fox's "Volcano" (see "Volcano" illustration below)—has gone molten. As this issue headed to press, Universal announced it was trying to finish "Dante's Peak" a month early for a Feb. 7 debut—three weeks before "Volcano" erupts. Fox's (at least initial) response was to leave its date unchanged. As befits such a magma quagmire, it's a fluid situation.

In "Dante's Peak," Pierce Brosnan ("GoldenEye") is a vulcanologist studying seismic activity in a small Pacific Northwest town. Despite others' disbelief in his theories, he persuades the local mayor (Linda Hamilton) that their long-dormant mountain is about to explode. Roger Donaldson directs; Leslie Bohem scripts; Gale Anne Hurd and Joseph M. Singer produce.

Exploitips: Donaldson ("White Sands," "The Getaway") rebounded with "Species," and Hurd (the "Terminator" series) has delivered before. Brosnan and "T"/"T2" heroine Hamilton are also known quantities, and so is Digital Domain ("True Lies," "Apollo 13"), which contributes $8 million of special effects. Yet Fox's epic—which conflagrates Los Angeles, not rural tinytown—is grander scale, disaster-wise. The next move is Fox's; might it be to who-blinks-first head to head?

FEBRUARY 7

Absolute Power

A master thief, Luther Whitney (Clint Eastwood), witnesses a bizarre murder while burglarizing the Washington, D.C. mansion of a Capitol Hill powerbroker. The murderers, linked to the White House, learn that they've been seen, and they set about stalking the solitary witness—even as Whitney works behind the scenes to bring them down. Gene Hackman (who also starred in the Eastwood masterpiece "Unforgiven") portrays President Alan Richmond; Laura Linney ("Primal Fear") plays Kate Whitney. Scott Glenn, Dennis Haysbert, Judy Davis and Ed Harris co-star. Clint Eastwood directs, and he produces for Castle Rock with Karen Spiegel; William Goldman scripts, adapting the novel by David Baldacci. See this issue's cover stories. (Columbia, 2/7)

Exploitips: Before Castle Rock entered its cool streak, Eastwood's "In the Line of Fire" was a big hit for the company, and it's likely hoping for second lightning with Eastwood back for another political thriller. Expect great numbers; all other studios do, given they're waiting for 2/14.

The Pest

In this urban comedy, John Leguizamo ("William Shakespeare's Romeo + Juliet") portrays charming scam artist Pestario "The Pest" Vargas, who has an uncanny ability to transform himself into almost any sort of person: fast-talking Chinese delivery boy, unorthodox Orthodox rabbi, karaoke-singing Japanese businessman, over-the-top African in kente cloth. And his chameleonry comes in handy, because a crazy German named Gustav ("Ed Wood's" Jeffrey Jones) and the Mob (the Scottish mob, that is) are after him. Edoardo Ballerini and Freddy Rodriguez co-star for director Paul Miller. David Bar Katz and John Leguizamo script; Sid Sheinberg, Bill Sheinberg and Jon Sheinberg produce for their Bubble Factory. See our Sept. '96 issue Sneak Preview. (TriStar, 2/7)

Exploitips: "The Pest" was moved off its late-October date to winter release to avoid another TriStar comedy, "High School High." If "The Pest" buzzes at the boxoffice, it could vault Leguizamo into film-lead status, a la Jim Carrey. On the other hand, Leguizamo's early lead outing, "A Pyromaniac's Love Story," didn't pull. At the moment, emphasize the hijinks genre to maximize mainstream response.

Rhyme & Reason

This hip-hop documentary takes moviegoers behind the scenes in the rap music world and follows the development of the music from its early days in the South Bronx to its status as one of today's dominant forms. Ice-T, Heavy D, KRS-One, Nas, MC Eiht, Salt N Pepa and The Fugees (recent top MTV Europe award winner) appear; tunes from Tha Dogg Pound, Mack 10, Busta Rhymes and A Tribe Called Quest highlight the soundtrack. Peter Spirer directs; Chuck Block produces. (Miramax, 2/7 ltd.)

Exploitips: A similar rap effort from Savoy came and went (like most Savoy releases); Miramax is likely to prove more savvy with its marketing. A radio station/record store tie-in is a given here, with Priority/Buzztone Records having been promoting the album and releasing singles since November. Expect a predominantly male youth demo in both urban and suburban locations. Catchline: "The ultimate backstage pass."

Gridlock'd

In this comedy, two performance artist/addicts named Stretch and Spoon try to go straight but find the bureaucratic system they're about to enter even more confusing than the lives they're trying to leave behind. Tim Roth, the late Tupac Shakur and Thandie Newton star. Actor Vondie Curtis-Hall makes his writing/directing debut in the Interscope/Polygram/DEF production. (Gramercy, 2/5)

Exploitips: "Gridlock'd" will generate extra media attention and moviegoer consideration because of the presence of Shakur, the rapper/actor ("Poetic Justice") murdered last year in Las Vegas. But urban and suburban youth demos will also be drawn by solid performers Roth and Newton.

subUrbia

Twentysomething slackers reexamine their lives when a former friend, now a rock star, returns home. Nicky Katt, Parker Posey ("Party Girl") and Steve Zahn ("That Thing You Do!") are the best known among the young ensemble cast. Richard Linklater ("Before Sunrise") directs; Eric Bogosian adapts his play; Ann Walker-McBay produces for Castle Rock. (Sony Classics, 2/7)

Exploitips: Fans of Linklater's "Dazed and Confused" are the key target here (see review, this issue). Also citing the older Bogosian's "Talk Radio" could expand patron interest beyond the usual Gen-X suspects.

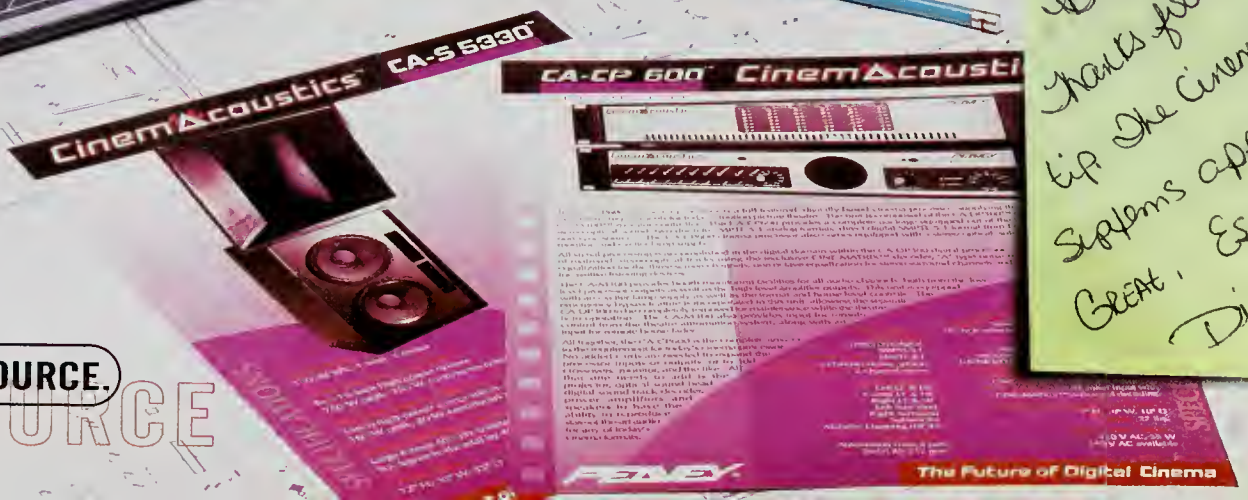
cinemAcoustics
Our CA-CP600™ Cinema Processor is a full-feature



CinemAcoustics

CA-CP600™

FINALLY, A COMPLETE CINEMA PROCESSOR.

Our CA-CP600™ Cinema Processor is a full-featured, digitally-based processor, supplying the signal processing and monitoring requirements for today's motion-picture theatre. Comprised of the CA-DP300™ Digital Processor and the CA-M300™ Monitor/Controller, the CA-CP600 is full-featured out of the box, supporting direct digital 5.1 audio from formats such as DTS™, two 5.1 analog inputs, matrixed stereo optical sound, as well as two stereo non-sync channels. The CA-CP600™ also includes booth monitor, exciter lamp supply, and solar cell preamp. And just to make your installation easy, the cables are on us.

Bob,
Thanks for the tip. The Cinemacoustics systems approach looks Great, Especially with Direct Digital Input!

THE ONE SINGLE SOURCE.

YOUR SOURCE

PEAVEY

GROSSE POINTE BLANK

In this black comedy, a charming but efficient hitman named Martin (John Cusack) undertakes an odd search to find "fulfillment and truth" by going home to Grosse Point, Mich., for his 10-year high school reunion. There, he hopes to reunite with his long-lost love ("Sleepers'" Minnie Driver) and perform one final hit. But Martin's archrival, Grocer (Dan Aykroyd), arrives with alternate plans for him. George Armitage ("Miami Blues") directs; Tom Jankiewicz and D.V. DeVincentis & Steve Pink & John Cusack script; Susan Arnold and Donna Arkoff Roth (the "Unstrung Heroes" duo) and Caravan head Roger Birnbaum produce for Hollywood Pictures. See our Sneak Preview this issue. (Buena Vista, 2/14)

Exploitips: The crime/black comedy subgenre remains a popular one (if too trammeled post-Tarantino), and star Cusack—who adds screenwriter and co-producer credits here—will be out promoting the film. Driver is building a following, and Aykroyd remains a known quantity with mainstream audiences. A suggested catchline, "He's home for his reunion. He's in love. And he's a hitman," conveys both the plot and the film's off-kilter take. Expect the date's other big comedy, the older-skewing "The Beautician and the Beast," to split the genre's audience: Males and those under 35 will opt for Cusack, females and the older generation will go for Drescher. Note: Disney's in a valentine mood in any case, having logged its third consecutive $1+ billion boxoffice year in 1996 and seen its stock rise 25 percent in last year's first 11 months to a historic Dow high.

FEBRUARY 14

Vegas Vacation

Though no longer sporting the National Lampoon label, this "Vacation" puts the Griswold family on the road again for a typically ill-fated trip, this time to Las Vegas. Chevy Chase, Beverly D'Angelo and Randy Quaid reprise their roles; Wayne Newton and Siegfried & Roy join the festivities. Stephen Kessler directs; Elisa Bell scripts; Jerry Weintraub produces for Weintraub Prods. (Warner, 2/14)

Exploitips: Of the many 2/14 openers, this is the only one for adults that's presold (for kids, it's "That Darn Cat'"), in the sense that moviegoers know what to expect when you combine Chase with "Vacation."

The Beautician and the Beast

A street-smart New York hairstylist, Joy Miller (Fran Drescher), crosses paths with Boris Pochenko (former James Bond man Timothy Dalton), a foul-tempered despot who rules an Eastern European country called Slovetzia. It's comic confusion: When Joy is offered a job as tutor for the "President for Life's" children, the prez thinks she's an academic ready to help westernize his kids for a post-Communist world; Joy thinks they want a beautician. Cultures clash and romantic sparks fly. Ian McNeice, Lisa Jakub, Phyllis Newman and Michael Lerner co-star for director Ken Kwapis ("Dunston Checks In"). Todd Graff ("Used People") scripts, and he produces with Howard W. Koch, Jr. ("Primal Fear"). (Paramount, 2/14)

Exploitips: Drescher's character and the film's plot seem designed to go down easy with fans of her current TV sitcom, "The Nanny," in which Drescher plays a former Jewish beautician who now works as a nanny to children of a wealthy man. Although serious moviegoers are likely to say "oy, vey" and give this a wide berth, light-fare aficionados and even those of the older set who prefer the home fire's small screen are likely to give this a look.

Fools Rush In

In this romantic comedy, two lovers who could hardly be more different appear to be fated to be together. He comes from the cold corporate climes of Manhattan; she was raised in the fiery desert heat of Las Vegas. Their first night together makes them parents; their second, husband and wife. But what comes next? Matthew Perry and Salma Hayek ("From Dusk Till Dawn") star with Jon Tenney and Jill Clayburgh. Andy Tennant directs; Joan Taylor and Katherine Reback script; Doug Draizin produces. See our Sneak Preview in our Dec. '96 issue. (Columbia, 2/14)

Exploitips: A romantic comedy nicely timed for a romantic holiday, "Fools Rush In" will benefit more from its crowd-pleasing genre and odd-couple characterizations than from its leads, who though certainly talented and attractive aren't yet boxoffice A-list draws on their own. (This could change that.) To highlight the romantic proceedings, exhibitors can decorate their halls with bows of hearts, and do a contest tie-in with a local romantic restaurant offering a prize of dinner for two.

That Darn Cat

In this update of the 1965 Disney classic, "Casper's" Christina Ricci stars as Patti, a 16-year-old bored with her sleepy hometown until her tomcat D.C. (for Darn Cat) becomes involved in a mysterious kidnapping. Suddenly, Patti finds herself working with a novice FBI agent ("Cool Runnings'" Doug E. Doug). George Dzundza ("Dangerous Minds"), Peter Boyle, Michael McKean and Bess Armstrong co-star for director Bob Spiers (best known for helming British TV import "Absolutely Fabulous"); even more improbably, Scott Alexander and Larry Karaszewski ("The People Vs. Larry Flynt") script, adapting the Undercover Cat" novel by The Gordons and a script by The Gordons and Bill Walsh; Robert Simonds produces. (Buena Vista, 2/14)

Exploitips: This title was tentatively slated for this past summer and then fall, but the current slating makes good counterprogramming sense: Of its date's dozen-plus releases, "That Darn Cat" is the only one aimed at kids. PG fare for the family crowd, this has a certain presold element: its known title, which will make boomer parents feel content about bringing/sending the kids. However, with Spiers and the Alexander/Karaszewski duo aboard, expect a certain warping of the original that could play well with adults—though this is most likely to remain primarily matinee fare.

Trial and Error

Out-of-work actor Ricky Rome ("So I Married an Axe Murderer's" Michael Richards) wants to give his best friend, a lawyer named Charlie Tuttle ("101 Dalmatians'" Jeff Daniels), the mother of all bachelor's parties. But Charlie's father-in-law-to-be first sends him to a desolate desert town to handle a secret family legal matter. Ricky and three pals arrive and take Charlie out on the town; the next morning, with his friend far too hung over to handle legal proceedings, Ricky heads to court to impersonate Charlie, thus beginning a wacky trial. Meanwhile, recovered Charlie finds happy solace in his sad fate in waitress Pinky ("2 Days in the Valley's" Charlize Theron)—until bride-to-be Tiffany arrives. Jonathan Lynn ("My Cousin Vinny") directs; Sara Bernstein and Gregory Bernstein script; Gary Ross ("Dave," "Big") produces. (New Line, 2/14)

Exploitips: Teaming Daniels and Richards (best known for his work on TV's "Seinfeld") holds humorous promise. But there's much comedy competition this holiday weekend.

Roseanna's Grave

In this comedy, a dying wife ("The Fisher King's" Mercedes Ruehl) has one last wish: that she be buried in her Italian village's graveyard

Space Age Booth Automation

The industry's first low cost microcontroller automation (about $700).

If you have been paying a lot of money for 80 year old technology, you will be delighted to see the features in the the SHOWMATION from SMART. It is controlled by a small internal computer that is pretty smart (no pun intended).

This basic automation is for single projector booths. Add our SHOWGRAMMER option (about $650) and you have the most advanced automation on the market. It can make 5 sound changes, 5 house lighting changes, and 5 lens changes within a show from one cue on the film. Easy print makeup.

Powerful features, low cost, and new technology. We will be pleased to give you more information.

SMART Theatre Systems
(800) 45-SMART • (770) 449-6628
FAX: (770) 449-6728 email:smart@ america.net

Response No. 35

LATE MOVIE MOVES INTO JANUARY...

Zeus and Roxanne

A roguish dog named Zeus and a delightful dolphin named Roxanne form a unique relationship. And the unusuol bonding leads to family togetherness, romance and freedom. Steve Guttenberg ("The Big Green") and Kathleen Quinlan ("Apollo 13") star. George T. Miller ("Andre") directs; Tom Benedek ("Carlo Collodi's Pinocchio") scripts; Frank Price produces for Rysher Entertainment. (MGM, 1/10)

Exploitips: This family film arrives after the holidays, but if that demo is looking for something new this one has them all to itself.

Walkabout

Jenny Agutter, Lucien John and David Gumpilil star in this 1971 Australian film by then debuting director Nicholas Roeg, in which two white, sophisticated British children find themselves lost in the wilds

Down Under and must trust themselves to a young aborigine to survive. Edward Bond scripts, adapting the novel by James Vance Marshall; Si Litvinoff produces; Roeg also handled the cinematography. (Films Inc., going wider Jan.)

Exploitips: Chicago-based Films Incorporated on 12/27/96 began re-releasing "Walkabout" in a "director's cut"—the 100-minute version that was available outside the United States. (In 1971, Fox first released a 95-minute, R-rated version, then followed with a further shortened GP-rated version.) This "Walkabout" is unrated; Films Inc. notes it includes full frontal nudity. The distributor also emphasizes that "Walkabout" has never been available on video in the U.S. (Films Inc. will handle that window in second-quarter '97.)

A Mongolian Tale

In "Hei Ma," a Chinese orphan, Bayinbulag, is raised by a foster grandmother on the Mongolian steppes, with her young granddaughter, Somiya, and a lost foal. Grown, Bayinbulag promises to marry Somiya when he returns from veterinary studies but, when he comes back with his stallion, he discovers her pregnant and leaves for a dozen years. Journeying to the steppes, and now become a folk singer, Bayinbulag finds Somiya married to an alcoholic and she the mother of four sons and one daughter—who is desperate for a good father. Berlin fest favorite Xie Fei, one of China's Fifth Generation directors, helms; Zhang Chengzhi adapts his story, "Gangang Hara" ("A Song of the Grassland"). (New Yorker, 1/17)

Exploitips: One production catchline—"Mongolia, 30 years ago. A black stallion, an orphan and the girl he loved"—makes this Mongolian- and Mandarin-language effort sound like a children's or teenager's movie, which it's not. What it is, and salably so, is the latest foreign-language art-houser from the man who made the critically acclaimed "Women of the Lake of Scented Souls."

Prisoner of the Mountains

A sometimes comic fable of love and war, the latest by Russian filmmaker Sergei Bodrov ("I Wanted to See Angels") relates the adventures of two Russian soldiers, the dashing and experienced Sacha ("Burnt by the Sun's" Oleg Menshikov) and raw recruit Vania (newcomer Sergei Bodrov Jr.). Captured by a Chechen father, they are held hostage in the man's village home in his hope of bartering them for his captured son. As time elapses, Sacha develops a bond with Vania, and Vania begins romancing their captor's daughter. Producers Sergei Bodrov and Boris Giller script with Arif Aliev. (Orion Classics, 1/31 NY)

Exploitips: Marketably, "Prisoner of the Mountains" was awarded the Fipresci International Critics Prize at last year's Cannes fest, and it's been selected as Russia's foreign-language Oscar entry. The film is a contemporary adaptation of Leo Tolstoy's "A Prisoner of the Caucasus," so bookstore tie-ins would help draw the literary-minded art-house demo.

where her dead child was laid to rest several years before. The one problem: The cemetery is almost full, with only four sites remaining—and people seem to be dropping dead right and left. Her loving husband ("Mission: Impossible's" Jean Reno) goes to laughable lengths to save her a spot. Polly Walker ("Restoration") co-stars for director Paul Weiland. Saul Turteltaub, Dick Clement and Ian Le Frenais script; Paul Trijbits, Alison Owen and Dario Poloni produce. (Fine Line, 2/14)

Exploitips: "Roseanna's Grave" is an in-house production by Fine Line, and the distributor was certain enough of this English-language entry that it took the film to Showeast. Fine Line is also releasing this art-house effort in SDDS and Dolby SR-D, another sign it thinks this film has the potential to cross over to mainstream audiences.

Smilla's Sense of Snow

Bille August ("The House of the Spirits") helms this adaptation of the Peter Hoag novel about a woman ("Sabrina's" Julia Ormond) who's an expert on glaciers; after a neighbor child's death, she ventures into the ice fields in search of vengeance. Gabriel Byrne and Richard Harris co-star. Anne Biderman and Andrew Birkin ("The Cement Garden") script; Constantin Film head Bernd Eichinger produces. (Fox Searchlight, 2/14 NY/LA, wider 2/21)

Exploitips: "The House of the Spirits" did poorly stateside (yet well overseas), but Danish director August's "The Best Intentions" won the 1992 Cannes fest Palme d'Or. Some of Fox Searchlight's slate seems almost mainstream (e.g., "Ice Storm"), but this seems more likely for the art-house crowd, who will respond to the August, Byrne and Birkin names.

When We Were Kings

This documentary about the historic "Rumble in the Jungle" heavyweight bout between Muhammad Ali and George Foreman, which was held in Zaire in 1974, features footage that's been in the can since the last punch was thrown 22 years ago. In 1995, with rights issues at last resolved, filmmaker Taylor Hackford began assisting director Leon Gast in cutting the hundreds of hours of film into a cohesive whole. The final result includes fight footage; musical performances by B.B. King, James Brown and others from a fest organized around the bout; and new interviews with the likes of Norman Mailer, George Plimpton and Spike Lee. (Gramercy, 2/14 ltd)

Exploitips: Gramercy opened "When We Were Kings" for one week in October in L.A. to Oscar-qualify; the film already has a Special Jury Prize from the Sundance fest.

Hotel de Love

Aden Young, Saffron Burrows ("Circle of Friends") and Simon Bossell star in this romantic comedy about two brothers who fall in love with the same woman. One wins but then loses her heart; the other is left pining. Ten years later, she returns to the honeymoon hotel at which the brothers' parents are retaking their marital vows. Of course, adventures ensue. Craig Rosenberg directs and scripts; David Parker produces. (Live, 2/14)

Exploitips: Based on Toronto fest critics' response, Live has a hit on its hands. Our reviewer (see Nov. '96) calls the film a "remarkably well-written and directed first feature.... [A] thoroughly winsome, heartwarming, spirited and clever romantic comedy."

Kama Sutra

Filmmaker Mira Nair ("The Perez Family") transforms the great Indian book on the art of lovemaking into a movie about a princess (Sarita Choudhury) and a servant girl (Indira Varma) who grow up as inseparable companions but then part over the attentions of a raj ("The English Patient's" Naveen Andrews). Helena Kriel co-scripts with Nair; Lydia Dean Pilcher produces. (Trimark, 2/14)

Exploitips: Our Toronto-fest critic (see review this issue) gives "Kama Sutra" only a fair grade (two stars), but one comment ("the movie...is full of nudity and sex") suggests the most marketable element of the film.

Forever Mozart

This latest French-language effort from filmmaker Jean-Luc Godard tells four distinct stories, each of which shares one narrative similarity: An elderly director is trying to cast and shoot a movie about recent events in Bosnia. Ingrid Rubio, Carlos Fuentes and Agata Lys star; Alain Sarde and Ruth Waldenburger produce. (New Yorker, 2/14)

Exploitips: Our Toronto-fest critic (see this issue's review section) gives "Forever Mozart" four stars, saying Godard "tackles ideas with intellectual rigor while retaining a suggestive and poetic air." Another comment—"although Godard is not to everyone's taste, "Forever Mozart" should delight the filmmaker's loyal following"—suggests this is for the most dedicated art-house fans.

Nightwatch

See our Nov. '96 Holiday Highlights. (Miramax, 2/14)

Bliss

See our Aug. '96 Trailers. (Triumph, 2/14 ltd)

The Graduate

See our Dec. '96 Trailers. (Strand, 2/14)

Unhook the Stars

See our Nov. '96 Holiday Highlights. (Miramax, exp 2/14 after Nov. excl opening)

FEBRUARY 21

The Empire Strikes Back

The second in the "Star Wars" series returns in digitally updated form. In this 1980 episode, Luke Skywalker, Han Solo and Princess Leia find the tide turning against them and in favor of Darth Vader and the Imperial Fleet. Key developments: Yoda trains Luke; Vader reveals a secret; Han is frozen. Mark Hamill, Harrison Ford, Carrie Fisher and Billy Dee Williams star for director Irvin Kershner in what many critics consider the best of the trilogy, thanks in part to great script work by a then unknown Lawrence Kasdan. (Fox, 2/21)

Exploitips: What began on 26 screens in 1977 is reemerging on some 2,000 in 1997. Although Fox is spending under $50 million to market the trilogy relaunch, promo tie-ins with Pepsi and its restaurant subsidiaries Taco Bell, Pizza Hut and KFC will help spread the word. The studio is giving preference to digital houses (the films are going out in Dolby SR-D, DTS and SDDS) and is trying to meet exhibitor demand by booking each of the three to competing chains in given markets. "Star Wars" arrived 1/31; "Return of the Jedi" lands 3/7.

Cosi

Based on a true story, this oddly named Down Under comedy tells the story of an aspiring theatre director so desperate for work he agrees to stage Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte" opera in a mental hospital—with unexpectedly miraculous results. Ben Mendelsohn ("The Year My Voice Broke"), Barry Otto ("Strictly Ballroom"), Pamela Rabe ("Sirens") and the "Muriel's Wedding" duo, Toni Collette and Rachel Griffiths, star for director Mark Joffe ("The Efficiency Expert"). Louis Nowra ("Map of the Human Heart") scripts; Richard Brennan ("Prisoners of the Sun") and Timothy White ("Death in Brunswick") produce. (Miramax, 2/21)

ROSEWOOD

In this drama, when a white woman falsely accuses a black man of rape, vigilantes burn down the all-black town of Rosewood, Fla. A handful of residents, including the sole white shopkeeper (Jon Voight) and a black WWI vet ("Striptease's" Ving Rhames), work to save women and children. Don Cheadle ("Devil in a Blue Dress"; also in this month's "Volcano"), Esther Rolle and Michael Rooker co-star for director John Singleton ("Higher Learning"); Gregory Poirier scripts, basing his work on a true 1923 incident; Jon Peters ("My Fellow Americans") produces for his Peters label. (Warner, 2/21 wide)

Exploitips: The direct and then indirect collisions between the $25 million "Rosewood" and the similarly themed "Ghosts of Mississippi" in the end was avoided altogether with this move to 2/21. Exhibitors should still trailer "Rosewood" with showings of the Reiner film, though, and the six-week elbow room between the two titles should work to each's advantage.

Exploitips: At 101 minutes, this comedy promises to crackle along quicker than did Nowra's dramatic "Map of the Human Heart." To varying degrees of boxoffice success, predecessors like "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," "The Dream Team" and "Crazy People" have taken serious and comic looks at asylum teamwork; based on its homeland success, "Cosi" might do for—or is that to—opera what "The Adventures of Priscilla, Queen of the Desert" and "Muriel's Wedding" did for Abba. Bill this one as "Amadeus" meets "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest."

The Eighth Day

See our Nov. '96 Holiday Highlights. (Gramercy, 2/21 NY/LA)

FEBRUARY 28

Volcano

The '90s home of crisis, Los Angeles—having suffered through the Rodney King riots, the O.J. trial, the Northridge earthquake and the usual Malibu fires—now faces trouble from below, as L.A. goes Vesuvial. Tommy Lee Jones, Anne Heche ("Walking and Talking"), Gaby Hoffmann ("Now and Then"), Don Cheadle ("Devil in a Blue Dress") and John Corbett star. Mick Jackson ("L.A. Story") directs; Billy Ray, Barbara Benedek and Jerome Armstrong script; Neal Moritz and Andrew Z. Davis produce. See photo, p. 22. (Fox, 2/28)

Exploitips: Pompeii and circumstance: Universal's "Dante's Peak" inferno epic and this Fox 2000 effort have been competing since they were on the drawing boards, even to the point of the studios highly touting when they finished principal photography ("Volcano" on Oct. 17, "Dante's Peak" on Nov. 6). At press time, it looked like the projects would hit theatres with about that time spread, but one might expect "Dante's Peak" to move its 3/7 release to later in the year, to allow a little breathing room for audiences between the films. (Much like "Mars Attacks" went Christmas after "ID4" went summer.)

Donnie Brasco

Adapted from the book by FBI agent and mob infiltrator Joe Pistone and Richard Woodley, this G-man vs. Mafia tale stars Al Pacino as the wiseguy who mentored Pistone (Johnny Depp), who used the alias Donnie Brasco during his three years underground. Michael Madsen ("Species"), Anne Heche ("Walking and Talking"; also in this month's "Volcano"), Bruno Kirby and James Russo co-star. Mike Newell ("An Awfully Big Adventure") directs; Paul Attanasio ("Quiz Show") scripts; Mark Johnson ("A Little Princess"), Barry Levinson, Louis DiGiaimo and Gail Mutrux produce for Mandalay. (TriStar, 2/28)

Exploitips: Last holidays, Pacino's "Heat" did hot business despite its three hours, while Depp's "Nick of Time" misfired despite its short-fuse clock. This is territory distant from that associated with Newell ("Enchanted April," "Into the West," "Four Weddings and a Funeral"), but he's no stranger to the manhunt genre (1981's superb "Bad Blood"). Other names, notably Attanasio, Johnson and Levinson, promise at least a prestige production. The film had been slated for 12/27.

KISS THE GIRLS

In this suspense thriller, Dr. Alex Cross, a Washington, D.C. police psychologist ("Seven's" Morgan Freeman), learns that his niece has disappeared from her North Carolina law school. Believing she's been abducted, and although he's operating out of his jurisdiction, Cross heads to Durham to join the investigation. Kate McTiernan ("Heat's" Ashley Judd), a young but strong-willed doctor, joins him in following a trail of clues that take them from the Deep South to the West Coast and back. Gary Fleder ("Things to Do in Denver When You're Dead") directs; David Klass scripts, adapting James Patterson's best seller; David Brown and Joe Wizan produce. (Paramount, 2/28)

Exploitips: Although not a boxoffice hit, Fleder's "Things to Do in Denver When You're Dead" earned hefty huzzahs from critics. Although her c.v. isn't as deep as Freeman's, Judd is a match for him in pure talent, which—given Freeman's gifts—is saying something. And producers Brown and Wizan are among the industry's best-known and most respected producers. Those signs of success might calm concern about the narrative's one missing element—a young male hero—with which other similar genre efforts (like "Seven," with Brad Pitt) have profited.

Booty Call

In this urban comedy, the romantic plans of Rushon (Tommy Davidson) go awry when his girlfriend (Tamala Jones) invites a Wall Street friend named Lysterine ("Set It Off's" Vivica A. Fox) along on their date; in reaction, Rushon asks a coarse, unpolished pal named Bunz (Jamie Foxx) to come along to "run interference." Lysterine and Bunz fall for each other, but complications ensue for both couples, leading Rushon and Bunz through the streets of Chinatown on a series of misadventures. Jeff Pollack directs; Takashi Bufford ("Set It Off") and J. Sanford Parker script; John Morrissey produces. (Columbia, 2/28)

Exploitips: That Columbia's romance-minded "Booty Call" goes 2/28 and the studio's romance-minded "Fools Rush In" goes the broader-audience Valentine's weekend suggests this will play more strictly to the urban demo. Fox and Foxx are known names, and highlighting their presence and the hyjinkery genre could pay dividends.

Love Jones

In this romantic comedy set among the "overeducated and underemployed" in downtown Chicago, the "love jones" between struggling photographer Nina ("Friday's" Nia Long) and struggling writer Darius ("Dead Presidents'" Larenz Tate) is immediate when the two meet at a poetry reading. Complications ensue: Nina's former boyfriend returns, Darius pretends indifference, Nina moves in with her old beau, and Darius finds a new gal. But Darius and Nina discover that one should never underestimate the power of the love jones. Lisa Carson ("Devil in a Blue Dress") and Isaiah Washington ("Girl 6") co-star for writer/director Theodore Witcher. Nick Wechsler ("The New Age") produces for Addis/Wechsler. (New Line, 2/28)

Exploitips: As the weekend slate is currently penciled, New Line's "Love Jones"—an urban-set romantic comedy—is slated to go head-to-head against Columbia's "Booty Call"—a romantic-themed urban comedy. Although one of the titles is likely to move to a new date, that the clash exists is a sign that Hollywood—just a couple years ago pilloried for making only black movies that featured gangstas and guns—has expanded their genres. And the boxoffice till is ringing, as "Friday" and "Waiting to Exhale" showed. Though suburban youths might not feel the same pull for a black romantic comedy (as for the latest "Boyz N the Hood"), urban theatres that are these films' key playdates frankly won't fear attracting/inciting what might be called the "crips crowd." (Latest case in point: Violence at "Set It Off" screenings.)

Hard Eight

See our Sept. '96 issue Trailers. (Goldwyn, 2/28 ltd)

FEBRUARY UNDATED

Love Letters

A meek, quiet girl named Hiroko remains in mourning for her fiance, Itsuki Fujii, who died in a mountain-climbing accident two years earlier. One day, she is shown Itsuki's high-school yearbook by his mother and on a whim decides to write him at his old address. He's dead, of course, and his old home has been destroyed—yet Hiroko still receives a reply, from an Itsuki Fujii, who turns out to be a female classmate of the other Itsuki. As is gradually revealed, she's a woman who shared much more than his name. Miho Nakayama, Etsushi Toyokaya and Katsuyuki Shinohara star. Shunji Iwai directs and scripts, Jiro Komaki, Tomoki Ikeda and Mashiiko Nagasawa produce the Japanese-language film. (Fine Line, NY/LA Feb. undated)

Exploitips: Our Toronto-fest reviewer calls "Love Letters," already highly acclaimed overseas, "lovely and delicate," saying the film evokes the British drama "84 Charing Cross Road" but "goes beyond...to deeper concerns of memory, love, loss and indefinable mystery." The film's scope format will only accentuate Noboru Shinoda's "stunning cinematography" for art-house audiences.

Lost Highway

A jazz musician ("ID4's" Bill Pullman), tortured by the belief his wife is being unfaithful, finds himself accused of her murder. Meanwhile, a young mechanic ("Where the Day Takes You's" Balthazar Getty) is drawn into a web of deceit by a temptress cheating on her gangster boyfriend. Both women—who could be the same person—are played by Patricia Arquette. As the story progresses, postmodern noir transforms into the illogic of dream. Robert Loggia and Robert Blake co-star for filmmaker David Lynch; Deepak Nayar, Tony Sternberg and Mary Sweeney produce. (October Films, Feb. undated)

Exploitips: Despite the star wattage, the Lynch name is the real sell here, known to art-housers ("Blue Velvet") and TV watchers ("Twin Peaks") alike. The soundtrack (already in release via Nothing Records) includes songs by Nine Inch Nails, Smashing Pumpkins (recently voted MTV Europe's top rock act), David Bowie and Lou Reed, so explore cross-promotional opportunities with local radio stations and music stores.

Touch

In this offbeat comedy, Juvenal is a sensitive young man who can heal people with his touch. When the press learns of his ability, Juvenal finds himself at the center of a media circus and must fend off opportunists eager to exploit him. The film features one of the month's most compelling casts: Bridget Fonda, Tom Arnold, Skeet Ulrich ("The Craft"), Christoper Walken, Janeane Garofolo, Gina Gershon ("Bound"), Paul Mazursky and Lolita Davidovich. The always Calvinist-themed Paul Schrader ("Light of Day") directs and scripts, adapting the book by Elmore Leonard; Lila Cazes ("Leaving Las Vegas") and Fida Attieh produce for Lumiere Films. (UA, Feb. undated)

Exploitips: Schrader and comedy—that seems an unlikely pair. But the fact that the filmmaker was able to assemble such an intriguing actor corps suggests an equally intriguing project. Certain similarities to two earlier Travolta titles ("Phenomenon" and "Michael") could dilute audience interest in another paranormal project, but savvy exhibitors can counterbalance this via bookstore tie-ins to highlight the Leonard connection.

The Designated Mourner

Told in direct address to the camera, this drama examines the lives of three characters whose lives are intimately intertwined. Jack (David de Keyser), an average student, suddenly discovers himself considered one of the cultural elite after he marries Judy ("Kansas City's" Miranda Richardson), whose father (Mike Nichols) is a poet revered by the intelligentsia but held in disfavor by an increasingly repressive regime. As the political and military situation deteriorates and violence spreads through his country's society, Jack realizes their ivory-tower life is a prison. David Hare ("Skylight") directs, as he did the stage version by scripter Wallace Shawn ("My Dinner With Andre"); Donna Gray and David Hare produce. (First Look, late Feb.)

Exploitips: Among the literary/stage crowd, "The Designated Mourner" will be a presold item, thanks to a successful run at London's National Theatre. For more mainstream audiences willing to sample specialized fare, Shawn's "My Dinner With Andre" credit will tune them into these proceedings.

Broken English

A young Croatian immigrant, Nina (Aleksandra Vujcic), lives with her refugee family in a poor Auckland migrant enclave. Her relationship with her domineering and racist father ("Before the Rain's" Rade Serbedzija) deteriorates when she begins an affair with a local Maori named Eddie (Julian Arahanga). A crisis ensues when Nina becomes pregnant.

Gregor Nicholas directs, and Nicholas scripts with Johanna Pigott and Jim Salter; Robin Scholes produces for Communicado/Village Roadshow. (Sony Classics, Feb. undated)

Exploitips: Sony Classics debuted "Broken English" for exhibitors at Showeast, showing an appropriate level of confidence by the distributor. As we suggested in our Showeast coverage, "Broken English's" logline could be "Once Were Warriors" meets "Before the Rain," as it merges New Zealand and Serbian/Croat elements. Still, exhibitors might best highlight the romantic entanglement over that of the film's politics to expand the film's audience draw.

Screwed

This Alexander Crawford ("Hated") documentary takes a look at the world of sex mogul Al Goldstein, who made his fame/infamy as the many-times-arrested publisher of Screw Magazine and producer of the cable-access show "Midnight Blue." (Cinema Village Features, February widening after January NY/LA opening)

Exploitips: A suggested catchline: "For those who found 'The People Vs. Larry Flynt' too tame." New specialized distributor Cinema Village is run by Ed Arentz, who runs New York's art house of the same name and is following in the hallowed exhibitor-to-distributor tradition of Brattle/Janus, New Yorker, Strand and Roxie.

Salut Cousin!

Alilo (Gad Elmaleh) arrives in Paris from Algiers to retrieve a suitcase he must deliver back home. While staying with his worldly cousin Mok (Mess Hattou), Alilo is amazed at and attracted by the West's freedoms, so different from his repressive homeland. Meanwhile, his cousin continually schemes to escape the poverty of his immigrant life. Merzak Allouache directs, and co-scripts with Caroline Thivel; Jacques Bidou produces. (Seventh Art, Feb. undated)

Exploitips: Our reviewer (see Dec. '96) cites Elmaleh as an engaging performer and Hattou as an effective character contrast, and also notes that filmmaker Allouache, in exile from Morocco since he made "Bab el-Oued City" (1994), allows his experiences to "give a complexity" to "Salut Cousin!"

Response No. 9

Major Sound Suppliers

A BOXOFFICE Directory

The following companies are manufacturers and distributors of specialized sound equipment and supplies. Listings have been organized by product category based on descriptions provided for inclusion in our 1997 BUYERS DIRECTORY. Companies appearing in more than one category are indexed according to their first survey appearance. Companies wishing to appear in future editions of this directory, or listees who would like to appear under additional product categories, are encouraged to contact BOXOFFICE via FAX at: 213-465-5049.

ACOUSTICAL WALL COVERINGS

AVL SYSTEMS
5540 S.W. 6th Place
Ocala, FL 34474
352-854-1170, 800-ACU-STIC
FAX: 352-854-1278
J. Philip Hale, President
Karen Hales, Vice Pres.
Acoustical panels; diffusers

CINE-LINE/DECOUSTICS
P.O. Box 615
Getzville, NY 14066-0615
303-794-4530, 800-387-3809
FAX: 303-798-1705
Contact: R.C. (Bob) Hanna
Acoustical wall panels/ceiling systems

ECONO PLEAT
2664 S. La Cienega Blvd.
Los Angeles, CA 90034
310-559-RUGS
FAX: 310-559-6357
Larry Sperling, President
Acoustical wall drapery system

KINETICS NOISE CONTROL
HOME OFFICE:
6300 Ireland Place
Dublin, OH 43017
614-889-0480
FAX: 614-889-0540
Larry Holben, VP/Interior Systems

KNC WEST:
835 W. Fairway Dr., Suite 2
Chandler, AZ 85224
602-917-1999
FAX: 602-917-1899
Larry Holben, VP/Sales
Cheryl Van Meter, Factory Agent
Interior wall and ceiling treatments; projection noise/vibration isolation

SOUNDFOLD INTL.
P.O. Box 292125
Dayton, OH 45429-2125
513-293-2671, 800-782-8018
FAX: 513-293-9542
Arthur C. Sickels, CEO
Tony Sickels, President
Acoustical wallcovering, speaker brackets and front ends

TROY SOUND WALL SYSTEMS
3420 S. Malt Ave.
Commerce, CA 90040
800-987-3306, 213-838-3676
FAX: 213-838-3686
Cal Leuning, VP/Mktg.
Sound-absorbing walls and ceilings

AMPLIFIERS/PREAMPS

AB INTL. ELECTRONICS
1830-6 Vernon St.
P.O. Box 1105
Roseville, CA 95678
916-783-7800, 714-951-7435
FAX: 916-784-1050
Robert Bird, President
Irwin Laskey, Vice Pres.
Power amplifiers

AMERICAN DESK/CFS RENTEC
3820 N. Big Spring Dr. S.W.
Grandville, MI 49418
616-249-9400, FAX: 616-249-9422
Thomas M. O'Hara, Dir./Mktg. & Sales
Speakers, amps and sound equipment

ASHLY AUDIO
847 Holt Rd.
Webster, NY 14580-9103
716-872-0010
FAX: 716-872-0739
Robert French, Sr. Exec. Vice Pres.
Power amps, signal processing

BGW SYSTEMS
13130 Yukon Ave.
Hawthorne, CA 90250
310-973-8090, 800-468-AMPS
FAX: 310-676-6713
Brian Gary Wachner, President
Barbara Wachner, Vice Pres.
Joe DeMeo, Sales
Power amps, subwoofer systems

CHRISTIE ELECTRIC CORP.
10550 Camden Dr.
Cypress, CA 90630
714-236-8610, FAX: 714-229-3185
Jack M. Kline, VP/Sales & Mktg.
Joe Delgado, Natl. Sales Mgr.
Stan Larsen, Engineering Coord.
Bevan Wright, Field Svc. Engineer
Xenon console; xenon bulbs

CINEMA FILM SYSTEMS
791 N. Benson, Suite E
Upland, CA 91786
909-931-9318,
FAX: 909-949-8815
Ron Offerman, CEO & Chairman
Dick Niccum, Sr. Vice Pres.
T.C. Costin, VP/Sales
Motion picture equipment

CINEMA GROUP
23679 Calabasas Rd., Suite 518
Calabasas, CA 91302-1502
800-582-9690,
FAX: 818-225-8029
Contact: Clyde McKinney
Digital processor/amplifiers, analog monitors/amplifiers, loudspeakers

CINEMECCANICA U.S., INC.
8753 Lion Street
Rancho Cucamonga, Calif. 91730
909-481-5842,
FAX: 909-481-5845
Victor Nicelli, President
Thomas H. Brenner, VP/Operations
Projector and sound products

COMPONENT ENGINEERING
3601 Gilman Ave. West
Seattle, WA 98199
206-284-9171, FAX: 206-286-4462
Bill Purdy, President
Sound accessories, automations, cue detectors and sound readers

FRAZIER DIVISION
Sound-Craft Systems
1584 Petit Jean Mountain Rd.
Morrilton, AR 72110-9532
501-727-5543, 800-422-7757
FAX: 501-727-5402
J.E. Mitchell, Vice Pres. & Gen. Mgr.
Full-range controlled directivity loudspeaker devices

HAFLER PROFESSIONAL
P.O. Box 1860
Tempe, AZ 85281
800-366-1619, 800-366-3565
FAX: 602-894-1528
Richard Gentry, Natl. Mktg. Dir.
Margie Williams, Natl. Sales Mgr.
Audio amplifiers

JBL (see SPEAKERS)

KELMAR SYSTEMS
284 Broadway
Huntington Station, NY 11746
516-692-6131, 516-421-1230
FAX: 516-421-1274
Andrew Marglin, President
Margaret Pearsall, Exec. VP
Laurie Franz, Accountant
Thomas Mohr, VP/Engineering
Projection and sound equipment

KINTEK
224 Calvary St.
Waltham, MA 02254-9143
617-894-6111
FAX: 617-647-4235
Zaki Abdun-Nabi, President
Sarah Fuller, Admin. Sales & Mktg.
Sound systems and equipment

KLIPSCH PROFESSIONAL
WWR Technology
P.O. Box 1320
Hope, AR 71802-1320
501-777-0693, 800-467-6796
FAX: 501-777-0593
Ian Thacker, President
Digital-ready (high-output, low distortion) loudspeakers

MEYER SOUND LABORATORIES
2832 San Pablo Ave.
Berkeley, CA 94702
510-486-1166
FAX: 510-486-8356
John Meyer, President & CEO
Karen Anderson, Mktg. Coordinator
Loudspeaker systems

PEAVEY ELECTRONICS
711 A St.
Meridian, MS 39301
601-483-5365
FAX: 601-486-1278
Ernie Lansford, Dir. Worldwide Sales
Amplification & loudspeaker systems

QSC AUDIO PRODUCTS
1675 MacArthur Blvd.
Costa Mesa, CA 92626
714-754-6175, 714-754-7100
FAX: 714-754-6174
Barry Ferrell, Cinema Market Mgr.
Pete Kalman, Dir./Sales
Two-channel power amplifiers and crossovers for cinema applications

RGM INDUSTRIES
3342 Lillian Blvd.
Titusville, FL 32780
407-269-4720
FAX: 407-269-4729
Ronald Goigel, President
Mary Schrage, Vice Pres.
Beth Naylor, Purchasing
Stereo sound systems, automation systems and lighting

SMART THEATRE SYSTEMS
945 Peachtree Corners East
Norcross, GA 30071-1337
800-45-SMART, 770-449-6698
FAX: 770-449-6728
Norm Schneider, President
Oscar Nuendorfer, Chief Engineer
Cinema sound products and systems

STEWART ELECTRONICS
20 Blue Ravine Rd., Suite 2
Folsom, CA 95630
916-985-7200, FAX: 916-985-9600
Randall Curlee, VP/Mktg. & Sales
Cinema power amplifiers

TECCON ENTERPRISES
586 Cliffside Dr., P.O. Box 38
San Dimas, CA 91773
909-599-0817, FAX: 909-592-2408
Jacobus L. Dimmers, President
Magnetic heads, calibration/alignment, test films, screening room electronics

ULTRA-STEREO LABS
8730 Oxnard
Suite 208
Tarzana, CA 91356
818-609-7405
FAX: 818-609-7408
James A. Cashin, President
Felicia Cashin, Vice Pres.
Theatre sound systems and stereo film sountracks

WESTAR/INTERNATIONAL CINEMA EQUIPMENT
700 N.E. 39th St.
Miami, FL 33137
305-573-7339
FAX: 305-573-8101
Steven Krams, President
Sara Reusch, Vice Pres.
Stereo processors, xenon bulbs and distributors of Magna-Tech EQ

DC EXCITERS

CHRISTIE (see AMPLIFIERS)

CINEMA FILM (see AMPLIFIERS)

CINEMECCANICA (see AMPLIFIERS)

KELMAR (see AMPLIFIERS)

MARBLE CO.
21 Hart Lane, P.O. Box 160030
Nashville, TN 37216
800-759-5905, 615-227-7772
FAX: 615-228-1301
William Blevins, President
Donald W. Purtee, Gen. Mgr.
Elizabeth Langley, Office Mgr.
Claudia Carillon, Customer Service
Dwight Scott, Shipping & Receiving
Booth supplies, automations, dimmers, lenses, sound processors

DESIGN

CINEMA FILM (see AMPLIFIERS)

COMPONENT ENGINEERING (see AMPLIFIERS)

FRAZIER (see AMPLIFIERS)

HIGH PERFORMANCE STEREO
64 Bowen St.
Newton Centre, MA 02159-1820
617-244-1737,
FAX: 617-244-4390
John F. Allen, President
Sound equipment

KELMAR (see AMPLIFIERS)

KINTEK (see AMPLIFIERS)

LUCASFILM LTD. (THX Division)
P.O. Box 10327
San Rafael, CA 94912
415-492-3900, 818-285-2430
FAX: 415-492-3999
Monica Dashwood, Gen. Mgr./THX Division
Jerry Zernicke, Oper. Mgr./THX Theatres
Custom-designed sound system; crossover and systems rack

TEXAS THEATRE SUPPLY
346 Senova Dr.
San Antonio, TX 78216
210-344-3823, 210-340-5766
FAX: 210-344-2522
E.G. Olivarri Jr., Owner & Dir.
R.O. Taylor, Gen. Mgr.
Complete line of equipment & supplies

TROY SOUND (see ACOUSTICAL WALL COVERINGS)

DIGITAL STEREO

DIGITAL THEATER SYSTEMS
31336 Via Colinas, Suite 101
Westlake Village, CA 91362
818-706-3525,
FAX: 818-706-1868
Terry Beard, CEO
Bill Neighbors, President & COO
James Ketcham, Vice Pres.
Andrea Nee, VP/Operations
Jon Kirchner, VP/Intl. Bus. Dev.
DTS 6-track digital theatre sound system

DOLBY LABORATORIES
NORTHERN CALIFORNIA:
100 Potrero Ave.
San Francisco, CA 94103
415-558-0200, FAX: 415-863-1373
Bill Jasper, President
Joan Allen, Vice Pres.
David Watts, VP/Mktg.
Bob Warren, Cinema Products

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:
3375 Barham Blvd.
Los Angeles, CA 90068
213-845-1880
FAX: 213-845-1890
David W. Gray, VP/L.A. Film Div.

NEW YORK:
1350 Avenue of the Americas
New York, NY 10019
212-767-1700
FAX: 212-767-1705
Michael D. Cosimo, VP/N.Y. Film Div.

DOLBY LABS U.K.
Wootton Bassett
Wiltshire, SN4 8QJ
United Kingdom
(17)93842100
FAX: (17)93842101
Dolby Stereo Digital, Dolby Stereo SR and Dolby Stereo cinema sound

KARASYNC DIGITAL AUDIO
17 Washington St.
Norwalk, CT 06854
203-899-0671, FAX: 203-348-1430
Contacts: John Karamon, Jenene Karamon
All-electronic system for multichannel digital audio for film and video

PEAVEY (see AMPLIFIERS)

SONY CINEMA PRODUCTS
10202 W. Washington Blvd.
Culver City, CA 90232
310-280-5777, FAX: 310-280-2024
James N. Fiedler, President
Dan Taylor, VP/Business Development, N. America
Bill Mead, VP/Business Development, Intl.
Gemma Richardson, VP/Worldwide Marketing
Elizabeth Figge, Mgr./North American Sales
Digital and analog theatrical sound systems; SDDS digital playback system; Sony DCP-1000 processor

DRIVE-IN AUDIO

AUDIO VISUAL SYSTEMS
320 St. Louis Ave.
P.O. Box 2107
Woonsocket, RI 02895-2351
401-767-2080, FAX: 401-767-2081
Ronald W. Adams, President
Assistive hearing devices; FM stereo radio sound systems for drive-ins

PROJECTED SOUND
469 Avon Ave.
Plainfield, IN 46168
317-839-4111, FAX: 317-839-2476
Tom Hilligoss, President
J. Hilligoss, Engineer
Drive-in in-car speakers, junction boxes

EQUALIZERS

AB (see AMPLIFIERS)

ASHLY AUDIO (see AMPLIFIERS)

CINEMA FILM (see AMPLIFIERS)

FRAZIER (see AMPLIFIERS)

JBL (see SPEAKERS)

KINTEK (see AMPLIFIERS)

MEYER SOUND (see AMPLIFIERS)

PEAVEY (see AMPLIFIERS)

ULTRA-STEREO (see AMPLIFIERS)

EXCITER LAMPS

CINEMA FILM (see AMPLIFIERS)

MARBLE (see DC EXCITERS)

RGM IND. (see AMPLIFIERS)

EDW. H. WOLK, INC.
921 S. Jefferson St.
Chicago, IL 60607-4422
312-939-2720, 800-621-4424
FAX: 312-939-0654
Charles Wolk, President
Norman Lauterbach, Gen. Mgr.
Carol Prescott Davern, Export Mgr.
Cinelite xenon bulbs

HEARING ENHANCEMENT SYSTEMS

AUDIO VISUAL SYS. (see DRIVE-IN AUDIO)

HITEC GROUP INTL.
8760 Madison
Burr Ridge, IL 60521
708-654-9200, 800-288-8303
FAX: 708-654-9219
Richard Uzuanis, Vice Pres.
Assistive listening devices for individuals and public facilities

LPB
EAST:
28 Bacton Hill Rd.
Frazer, PA 19355
215-644-1123,
FAX: 215-644-8651
Edward W. Devecka Jr., President
Miriam C. McDonough, Bus. Mgr.
John E. Devecka, Sales Mgr.
Sound systems for the hearing impaired and for drive-in theatres

WEST:
20944 Sherman Way
Canoga Park, CA 91303
818-340-4590
Richard W. Burden, Principal
Radio sound systems

MARBLE (see DC EXCITERS)

ODYSSEY PRODUCTS
HOME OFFICE:
5644 Baldwin Ct.
Norcross, GA 30071
770-448-4873
FAX: 770-453-9626
Eve Miller, Mktg. & Admin.

SHIPPING AND ENGINEERING:
5845 Oakbrook Pkwy. Suite G
Norcross, GA 30093
770-825-0243
FAX: 770-453-9626
Ken Reeves, Engineering
Infrared assistive equipment, support, digital interface kits, alarms, sound racking and harnesses

PHONIC EAR
AMERICA:
3880 Cypress Dr.
Petaluma, CA 94954-7600
707-769-1110, 800-227-0735
FAX: 707-769-9624
Jim Mulford, President
Rick Steighner, VP/Sales
Rick Pimentel, VP/Mktg.

CANADA:
7475 Kimbel St., Unit 10
Mississauga Ontario
CANADA L5S 1E7
905-677-3231
FAX: 905-677-7760
Janice Cockburn, Managing Dir.
FM & infrared hearing assistance systems for ADA compliance

SMART (see AMPLIFIERS)

ULTRA-STEREO (see AMPLIFIERS)

WILLIAMS SOUND
10399 W. 70th St.
Eden Prairie, MN 55344-3459
612-943-2252, 800-843-3544
FAX: 612-943-2174
Todd Bergum, Natl. Sales Mgr.
FM and infrared hearing assistance systems for theatres

NOISE REDUCERS

CHRISTIE (see AMPLIFIERS)

CINEMA FILM (see AMPLIFIERS)

DOLBY (see DIGITAL STEREO)

KINTEK (see AMPLIFIERS)

RGM IND. (see AMPLIFIERS)

PROCESSORS

AB INTL. (see AMPLIFIERS)

CFS/RENTEC
3840 S. Helena St.
Aurora, CO 80013
303-699-7477, FAX: 303-680-6071
T.C. Costin, VP/Sales
All motion picture equipment

CHRISTIE (see AMPLIFIERS)

CINEMA FILM (see AMPLIFIERS)

DOLBY (see DIGITAL STEREO)

KELMAR (see AMPLIFIERS)

KINTEK (see AMPLIFIERS)

MARBLE (see DC EXCITERS)

PEAVEY (see AMPLIFIERS)

RGM IND. (see AMPLIFIERS)

SMART (see AMPLIFIERS)

SONY (see DIGITAL STEREO)

ULTRA-STEREO (see AMPLIFIERS)

WESTAR (see AMPLIFIERS)

SOUNDHEADS/ SUPPLIES

CINEMA FILM (see AMPLIFIERS)

CINEMECCANICA (see AMPLIFIERS)

TECCON (see AMPLIFIERS)

WESTAR/ICE (see AMPLIFIERS)

WOLK (see EXCITER LAMPS)

SPEAKERS

AB INTL. (see AMPLIFIERS)

ALTEC LANSING
600 Cecil St.
Buchanan, MI 49107
800-234-6831, 616-695-6831
FAX: 616-695-1304
Monte Wise, Natl. Sales Mgr.
Loudspeakers and electronics

AMERICAN DESK/CFS RENTEC (see AMPLIFIERS)

APOGEE SOUND
2180 S. McDowell Blvd.
Petaluma, CA 94954
707-778-8887
FAX: 707-778-6923
James Lamb, Natl. Sales Mgr.
Speaker systems and amplifiers

BELL THEATRE SERVICES
Unit 19, The Gate Studios
Station Rd.
Borehamwood, Herts
UNITED KINGDOM WD6 1DE
(18)12075131;
FAX: (18)12075100
Contact: Max Bell
Projection and sound equipment

BGW SYSTEMS (see AMPLIFIERS)

BOSTON LIGHT & SOUND
124 Brighton Ave.
Boston, MA 02134
617-787-3131;
FAX: 617-787-4257
C. Chapin Cutler Jr., President
Projection and sound equipment, service and installation

CFS/RENTEC (see PROCESSORS)

CINEMA FILM (see AMPLIFIERS)

CINEMA GROUP (see AMPLIFIERS)

DAS AUDIO OF AMERICA, INC.
Hazeltine Commerce Center
14141 Covello St., Unit 4C
Van Nuys, Calif. 91405
818-786-0904, FAX: 818-786-0905
Nat Hecht, Manager
Loudspeakers for theatrical venues

EAW
One Main St.
Whitinsville, MA 01588
508-234-6158, FAX: 508-234-8251
Sandy McDonald, Rep.
Cinema speakers

ELECTRO-VOICE
600 Cecil St.
Buchanan, MI 49107
800-234-6831, 616-695-6831
FAX: 616-695-1304
Monte Wise, Natl. Sales Mgr.
Loudspeakers and electronics

FF&E ENTERPRISES (Cal-Rand)
7502 Greenville Ave., Suite 400
Dallas, TX 75231
214-369-1034
FAX: 214-369-1768
Randy Taylor, President & CEO
Concession, projection and sound equipment; theatre furnishings

FRAZIER (see AMPLIFIERS)

HADDEN THEATRE SUPPLY
10201 Bunsen Way
Louisville, KY 40299
502-499-0050, FAX: 502-499-0052
Louis Bornwasser, Owner
Projection and sound equipment

HIGH PERF. STEREO (see DESIGN)

JBL PROFESSIONAL
HOME OFFICE:
8500 Balboa Blvd.
Northridge, CA 91329
818-894-8850
FAX: 818-830-1220
Mark Mayfield, Dir., Cinema Mktg.
David Bell, VP sales
Cinema loudspeaker systems

KINTEK (see AMPLIFIERS)

MARK IV AUDIO CANADA
345 Herbert St., Gananoque
Ontario, CANADA K7G 2V1
613-382-2141, 613-382-2955
FAX: 613-382-7466
Rod Marsh, General Manager

MARK IV CINEMA SYSTEMS
600 Cecil St.
Buchanan, MI 49107
616-695-6831, 800-234-6831
FAX: 616-695-1304
Paul McGuire, President
Brian Blackmore, Comm. Dir.
Electro-Voice speakers

MEYER (see AMPLIFIERS)

OMNIMOUNT SYSTEMS
1501 W. 17th St.
Tempe, AZ 85281-6225
602-829-8000, FAX: 602-756-9000
Garret E. Weyand, CEO
Monica Pershall, Sales & Cust. Svc.
Mounting devices

PEAVEY (see AMPLIFIERS)

RGM (see AMPLIFIERS)

SMART (see AMPLIFIERS)

TOTAL AUDIO
3006 Strong Ave.
Kansas City, KS 66106
913-362-3762, FAX: 913-362-5642
Richard Stevenson, Owner
Stage and surround speakers

TSI—THEATRE SYSTEMS INTEGRATION
EAST:
289 Highway 33 East, Building B
Manalapan, NJ 07726
908-792-1221
FAX: 908-792-1305
Janine Masten, President
Sam Helms, Vice Pres.

WEST:
361 S. Frontage Road, Suite 104
Burr Ridge, IL 60521
708-654-4392, FAX: 708-654-4941
Janine Masten, President
Sam Helms, Vice Pres.
Cinema sound systems

STEREO SYSTEMS

AB INTL. (see AMPLIFIERS)

CHRISTIE (see AMPLIFIERS)

CINEMA FILM (see AMPLIFIERS)

DOLBY (see DIGITAL STEREO)

FRAZIER (see AMPLIFIERS)

JBL (see SPEAKERS)

KELMAR (see AMPLIFIERS)

KINTEK (see AMPLIFIERS)

RGM IND. (see AMPLIFIERS)

SMART (see AMPLIFIERS)

STAGE ACCOMPANY
Anodeweg 4
Hoorn 1627 LJ, NETHERLANDS
(31)229212542,
FAX: (31)229211192
Contact: Claus Spreyer
Complete sound systems

SUMINISTROS KELONIK SA
Calle Badajoz 159 Bis
08018 Barcelona, SPAIN
(34)33004361,
FAX: (34)33000315
Contact: Lorenzo Garcia
Cinema sound systems

TSI (see SPEAKERS)

ULTRA-STEREO (see AMPLIFIER

WESTAR/ICE (see AMPLIFIERS)

SYNTHESIZERS

CHACE PRODUCTIONS
201 S. Victory Blvd.
Burbank, CA 91502
818-842-8346,
FAX: 818-842-8353
Robert Heiber, President
Sound enhancement/stereo synthesizer

CHRISTIE (see AMPLIFIERS)

CINEMA FILM (see AMPLIFIERS

KINTEK (see AMPLIFIERS)

SMART (see AMPLIFIERS)

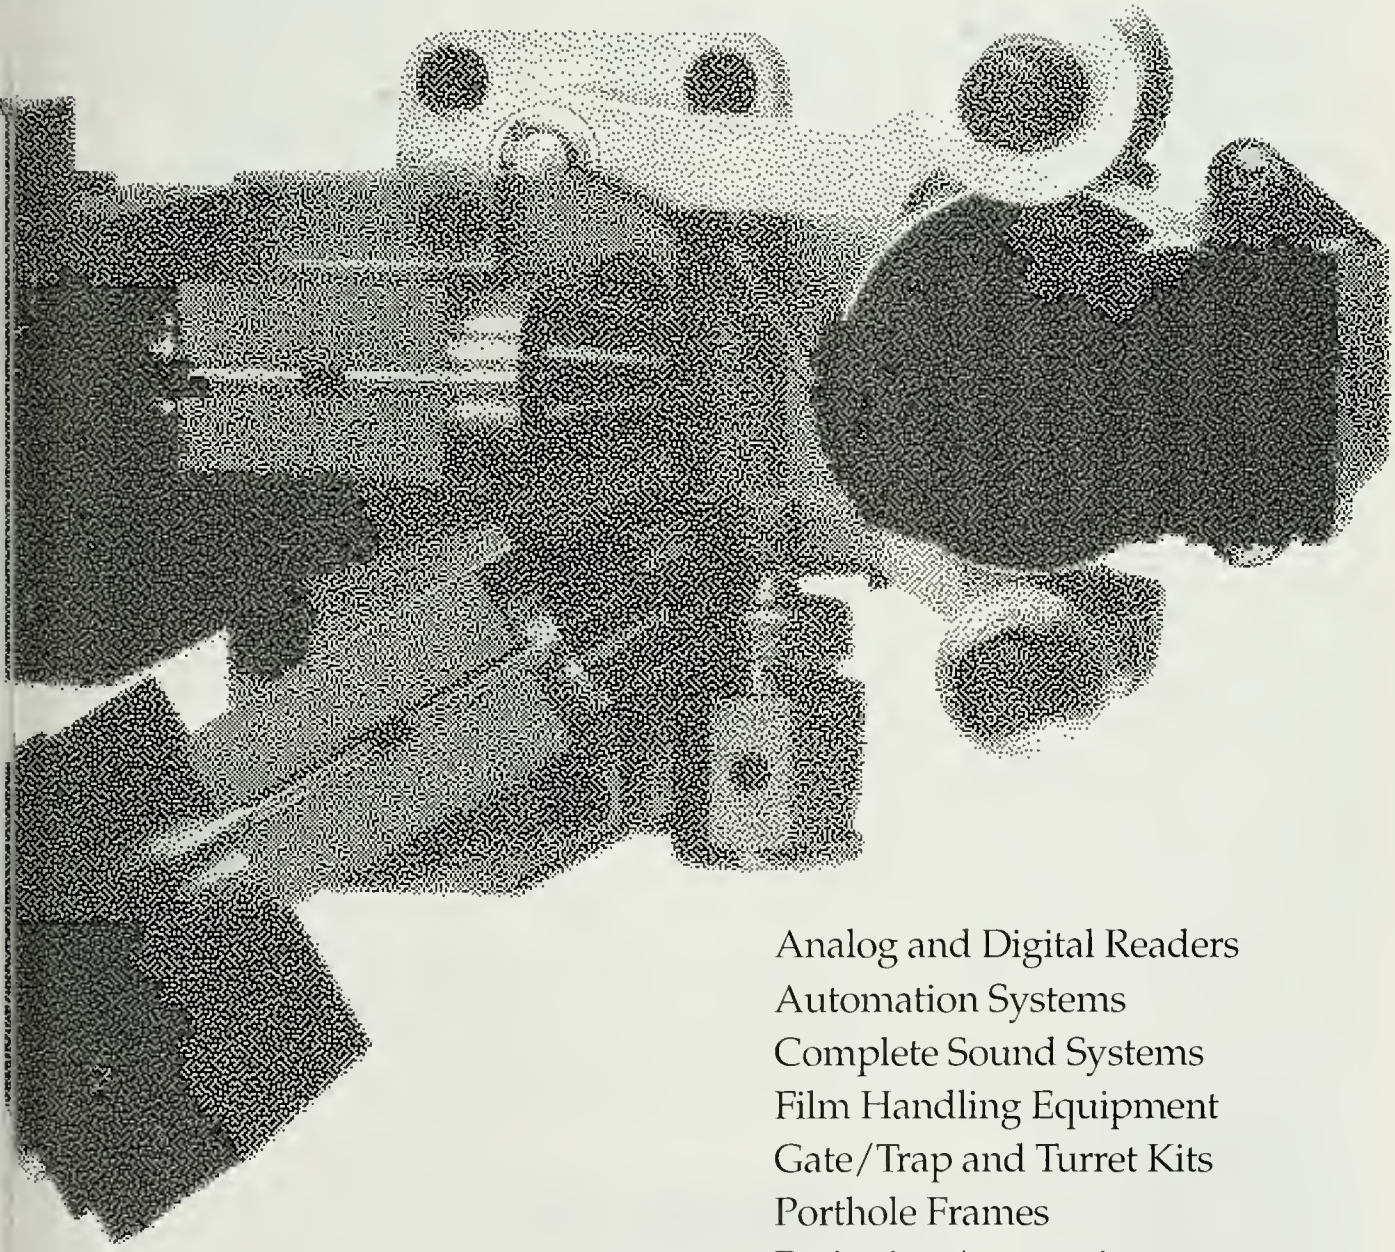
ULTRA-STEREO (see AMPLIFIER

OTHER

HADDEN THEATRE SUPPLY
10201 Bunsen Way
Louisville, KY 40299
502-499-0050, FAX: 502-499-0052
Louis Bornwasser, Owner
Projection and sound equipment

KOSS
4129 N. Port Washington
Milwaukee, WI 53212
414-964-5000, 800-USA-KOSS
FAX: 414-964-8615
Stereophones

RANGERTONE RESEARCH
115 Roosevelt Ave.
Belleville, NJ 07109
201-751-6833, FAX: 201-751-9741
George Zazzali, President
Daniel Zazzali, Vice Pres.
Projection and sound equipment



RAVEN LABORATORIES
87 Central Ave.
Glen Rock, NJ 07452
201-444-7766
FAX: 201-444-7793
Warren Jenkins, President
Automation, lighting and sound systems; cue detectors

STRONG INTL.
4350 McKinley St.
Omaha, NE 68112
402-453-4444
FAX: 402-453-7238
Ron Echtenkamp, President
John Wilmers, Exec. Vice Pres.
Projection and sound equipment

TALK-A-PHONE
5013 N. Kedzie Ave.
Chicago, IL 60625
312-539-1100,
FAX: 312-539-1241
Robert Shanes, Mktg. Dir.
Intercom systems, talk-through equipment, Cat. 2F technology

XETRON
A Division of Neumade
10 Saddle Rd.
Cedar Knolls, NJ 07927
201-267-8200
FAX: 201-267-4903
Mark Smith, VP/Sales & Mktg.
Projection and sound equipment

KELMAR
SYSTEMS INC.

Analog and Digital Readers
Automation Systems
Complete Sound Systems
Film Handling Equipment
Gate/Trap and Turret Kits
Porthole Frames
Projection Accessories

KELMAR SYSTEMS INC., 234 BROADWAY
HUNTINGTON STATION, NEW YORK 11747

Response No. 196

SOUND ADVICE

BOXOFFICE Talks To 11 Sound Industry Leaders

For this year's sound issue, we decided to do something different. The brief interviews below are meant to introduce you to some highly-qualified experts you might already be doing business with. We've asked 11 sound industry experts to tell us about themselves and the industry they serve so well.

IOAN ALLEN, VP, DOLBY LABORATORIES

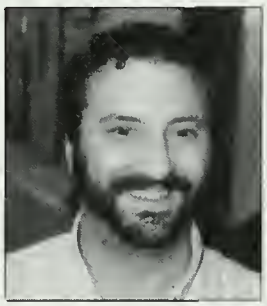
Career Highlights: 100 percent of the professional multi-track tape recorders in Los Angeles, New York and London are equipped with Dolby Noise reduction by 1973. First Dolby stereo film, "Lisztomania," released in 1975. "Star Wars" and "Close Encounters" mark Dolby's increased market penetration in 1977. First Dolby Digital release, "Batman Returns," 1992. Dolby Digital receives Scientific and Engineering Achievement plaque from Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences, 1996.

Favorite Dolby Product: The CP-500, Dolby's latest digital audio processor. "It's revolutionary in the sense that it's the first unit that does virtually all the processing in the digital domain." Dolby has installed approximately 2,000 CP-500s.

Earliest Movie Memory: "Twelve O'Clock High." "I've seen it [again recently], and actually it is a very good war film."

Advice to Exhibitors: "Worry about the quality of picture and sound. The quality of what's projected in the cinema is what's going to make or break certain theatre chains."

JOHN ALLEN, FOUNDER & PRESIDENT, HIGH PERFORMANCE STEREO



Career Highlights: Built sound system for Boston Pops Fourth of July 1976 Bicentennial concert—one of the largest stereo systems ever built in New England. Collaborated on first digital presentation of a motion picture in a movie theatre, "Fantasia," in February 1985. "That showed the potential of what digital sound could be, because it was all music, and the sound at times was at times concert hall quality."

Favorite High Performance Stereo Product: The HPS-4000-XL Sound System. "It's eight times as powerful as the next best sound system on the market, and has 90 percent less distortion."

Earliest Movie Memory: "Hans Christian Andersen" in the early '50s. "I remember the color, the ballet, Danny Kaye, and the charm of the picture."

Advice to Exhibitors: "Invest heavily in digital sound, and sound systems that can play back digital sound. Most people have no idea what they're missing."

KEN BERGER, PRESIDENT & CEO, EAW

Career Highlights: Founded EAW in 1978 at age 21. EAW now the number one supplier of loudspeaker systems to sports arenas and stadiums throughout the world, and number one supplier of packaged loudspeaker systems for touring sound, "from the Pope to Hootie and the Blowfish."

Favorite EAW Product: The K5850 one-box flying system. "That's the world standard for touring sound and is also extensively used in fixed installations."

Earliest Movie Memory: "The Blob" with Steve McQueen.

Advice to Exhibitors: "Be a leader in the ongoing digital revolution and look beyond the status quo."

MARCO D'AMBROSIO, SYSTEMS DESIGNER, LUCASFILM LTD./THX

Career Highlights: Background in both acoustics and music. Began working with THX in 1989. Active composer and producer of soundtrack music: "I just did an interactive CD-ROM for Tribeca, and I'm presently working on two animated films for video for LucasFilm. Acoustic consultant on numerous facilities around the world.

Favorit THX Produc The MPTS-Sound Syste and the R Acoustica Measuremen System. MPTS 1: "A very high quality but compact soun system designed for professional mix room and high-end screening rooms." The R2: "A acoustical test system that has streamlined th way technicians make measurements an align a sound system."

Earliest Movie Memory: "As a kid in Italy my parents took me to see 'The Bicycle Thief' an Italian neo-realist film."

Advice to Exhibitors: "If you are trying t upgrade a theatre to accommodate digita soundtracks, it's important to consider the acous tics of the theatre as well."

BARRY FARRELL, CINEMA MARKET MANAGER, QSC

Career Highlights: Worked way through college as a projectionist. Worked for Strong Intl. for three years; six years ago came to QSC as an applications engineer. Became one of four QSC market managers in 1995. Member Board of Directors, International Theatre Equipment Association.

Favorite QSC Product: The MX 1500a "Our biggest seller—a 350-watt-per-channe stereo power amplifier featuring optiona built-in crossovers and subwoofer filters."

Earliest Movie Memory: "The thing tha made the most impact was seeing 'The Sound of Music' in 70mm 6-track when I was in the sixth grade."

Advice to Exhibitors: "The competition is heating up and the theatres with the best sound are the ones that are going to get the business."

IF YOUR THEATER IS A PLACE OF PEACE, SERENITY, AND HAPPINESS, YOU MUST BE ON MARS.®

If your theater management system gives you the confidence of knowing you won't lose valuable information during a crisis, you must be on MARS. If your service calls get answered by a human being, you must be on MARS. If you are able to close out your theater quickly each night, you must be on MARS.

MARS is a system designed to run on off-the-shelf hardware while giving you the flexibility to handle all aspects of managing your theaters. From the box office to the concession stand, it allows managers to quickly perform functions so they can spend less time managing their system and more time managing their theater.

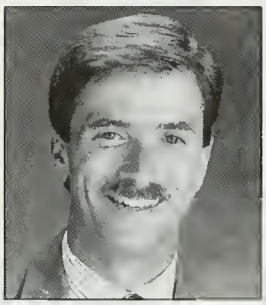
To learn more about MARS, call John Ventura at 212-450-8140.

Mars II®
Theater Management System

A division of MovieFone, Inc.

RICK GENTRY, DIRECTOR OF MARKETING, HAFLER PROFESSIONAL

Career Highlights: Played as a solo guitarist in Phoenix, Ariz. as a youth. Made indie records; played guitar on studio recordings and movie soundtracks. Moved to San Francisco in early '80s and took a job at NADY Systems as a sales manager, learning the ropes from Pete Kalman who now heads QSC. Following that, was a manufacturers rep in Northern California. Returned to Arizona in late '80s and took a position with Hafler as regional salesperson. Three years ago was named to his current position.



Favorite Hafler Product: The TransNova 9505 DIABLO. "It's a high-end reference power amplifier."

Earliest Movie Memory: "A Cinerama screen presentation of 'The Brothers Grimm' in our new red-and-white Oldsmobile, which caught on fire and burned up on the way home."

Advice to Exhibitors: "Don't kid yourselves or sell the public short. Sound quality and picture quality matter more than you think. Don't cut corners in any of those areas."

MARK MAYFIELD, DIRECTOR OF CINEMA MARKETING, JBL

Career Highlights: Has a Bachelor of Science in Psychology and an MBA in Marketing. Being a guitarist and singer/songwriter led him into audio business. After college, worked as a recording engineer for five years in Indianapolis, Ind.; Albany, N.Y. and Boston, Mass. He then went back to business school for his MBA. Worked for Bose Corp.'s Professional Products group as marketing manager, product manager and communications manager. Started to learn about cinema business, then joined JBL as market manager in 1994. Now focus is solely on cinema market.

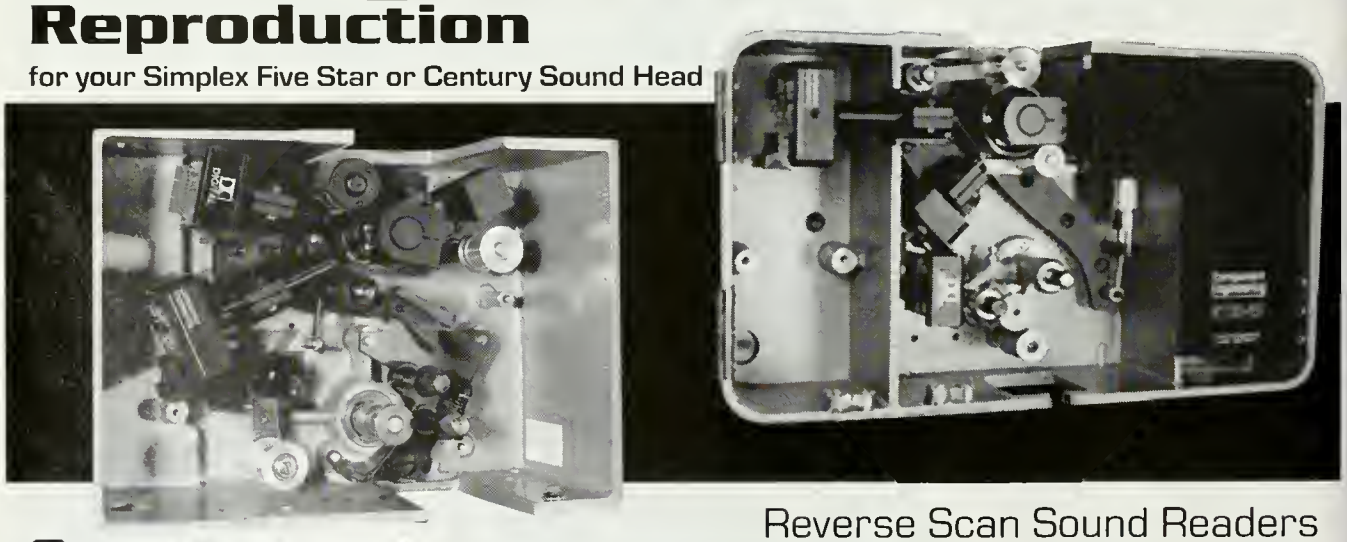
Favorite JBL Product: The 3000 series, which was launched last year, and the next series, "which everyone will have to stay tuned for. It's a full product line that will set a new standard in the industry."

Earliest Movie Memory: "'Mary Poppins,' 'The Sound of Music'—big musicals of the '60s in the grand old movie palaces."

Advice to Exhibitors: "We're in the middle of a huge market boom driven by technology. Make sure that your theatres are up to presenting the great product that is being offered in the way that it deserves. Don't be afraid of the new technology, because it's going to help everybody in the long run."

BILL NEIGHBORS, PRESIDENT & COO, DIGITAL THEATER SYSTEMS LP

Career Highlights: Degree is in Finance and Economics. Was general manager of RTS Systems in Burbank, which built intercom systems for live TV broadcast and TV production. Has 14 years experience in marketing and manufacturing audio and related electronic products. Has experience in mergers, acquisitions and international business development. Was the first employee hired at DTS when it was formed in January 1993.



Favorite DTS Product: The DTS-6E Digital Playback Unit. "That is the world's leading provider of high-quality multi-channel digital sound for motion pictures."

Earliest Movie Memory: "The Love Bug" in 1969.

Advice to Exhibitors: "Keep up the commitment to quality presentations. It's much appreciated by the audiences."

For superb
Analog & Dolby Digital® Reproduction
for your Simplex Five Star or Century Sound Head

Component Engineering

Reverse Scan Sound Readers using the Visible Light L.E.D.'s & Receptors developed by Dolby Laboratories

3601 Gilman Avenue West • Seattle, WA 98199 • 206.284.9171 • fax 206.286.4462

Response No. 150

GEMMA RICHARDSON, VP, WORLDWIDE MARKETING, SONY

Career Highlights: Came from England's "very small, male-dominated film industry to America, where there's so many more opportunities and funding. If you're determined enough to do something, it can be done in America." SDDS launch in '94 was "very historical, and I was there to witness that."

Favorite Sony Product: "The best thing I like about the [SDDS] technology is the eight-channel capability. Because [with the extra channels] they can pump even more things like violins, drums, trumpets, anything into those channels, and they can be isolated and separate from everything else, so it's cleaner."

Earliest Movie Memory: "'Doctor Zhivago.' Omar Sharif's eyes [laughs]. I really remember that because David Lean was my father's idol. So 'Lawrence of Arabia' and 'Doctor Zhivago' were Sunday afternoon viewing."

Advice to Exhibitors: "Recognize that home theatre, home entertainment systems are becoming so advanced that the public has alternatives to see movies. And it's exhibitors'] responsibility to make sure that the moviegoing experience is of premium value to the audience. And in order to achieve that, they have to make the cinema the best place that these people could ever see a film. And that includes sound, picture, seats, concessions, everything. The whole experience when you go into a theatre should be exciting."

NORM SCHNEIDER, PRESIDENT, SMART

Career Highlights: Was regional manager for JBL for 16 years. SMART received Teddy Award in 1995 for Outstanding Manufacturer from the International Theatre Equipment Association.

Favorite SMART Product: DSP—Digital Signal Processing. "It's an entirely new technology than what's been used in the past. We're the second manufacturer to offer this besides Dolby."

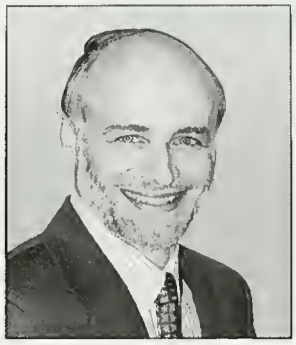
Earliest Movie Memory: "Gone With the Wind."

Advice to Exhibitors: "I would suggest to exhibitors that they do everything they can to put on the best presentation, in that you have competition from home video and other areas that are trying to get the attention from consumers. Theatres need to put on the best presentation they can or they'll lose it."

MONTE WISE, NATIONAL SALES MANAGER, MARK IV CINEMA SYSTEMS

Career Highlights: Owned sound company, Earational Audio, for five years. For past 25 years has done mixing work at a few large churches nationwide, and owned a large maintenance company "which provided the cash." Put together sound systems, worked as a promoter in St. Louis. Moved to Madison, Wis., in 1993, got a job as director of contracting at Full Compass, a pro audio dealer. Joined Milam Audio in 1994 in the same capacity. Joined Mark IV last January as national sales manager.

Favorite Mark IV Product: The TL880D, a dual 18-inch subwoofer that uses the EVX-180A. "We think it's the best low-frequency driver there is."



Earliest Movie Memory: "The Concert for Bangladesh."

Advice to Exhibitors: "I'd encourage them to pay more attention to the audio in comparison to other aspects of the theatre. With the changes in stadium seating and soundtrack being more dynamic, they need to pay more attention to the quality of components."

THE EIGHT-CHANNEL ADVANTAGE

By John F. Allen

Sony Dynamic Digital Sound is the only digital eight-channel motion picture sound release format currently being offered to exhibition, bringing back and expanding a widely heralded stereo format with five full-range speakers behind the screen. BOXOFFICE contributing writer John F. Allen provides some insights into eight-channel stereo and the considerable history behind it.

October, 1984. It was a moment I had long awaited: my first opportunity to hear a 70mm six-track motion picture, recorded and played with five full-range channels behind the screen. When all was at last ready, I signaled the projectionist to bring down the lights and roll the film. For years I had heard how wonderful this format had been, how much better than the others using only three screen channels. But really, I had thought, how good could it be? Weren't the three-channel systems I was so used to as satisfying as they could be? Now was the moment of truth. I was finally going to be able to decide for myself.

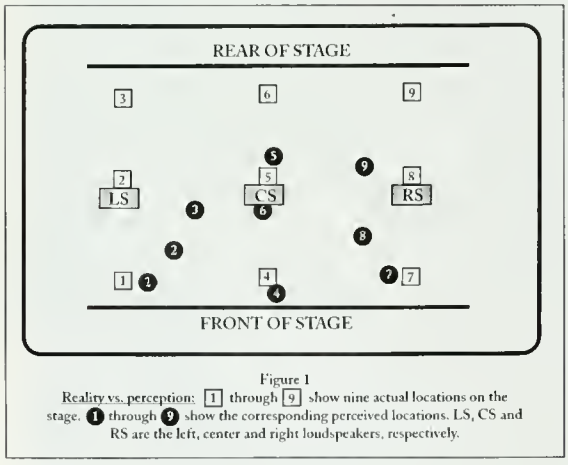


Figure 1
Reality vs. perception: 1 through 9 show nine actual locations on the stage. ❶ through ❾ show the corresponding perceived locations. LS, CS and RS are the left, center and right loudspeakers, respectively.

The film began. Frankly, I couldn't believe my ears. As a music and sound lover, I was truly wowed. Never had I heard anything like it in a movie theatre before. As I sat there in amazement, I began to question how I had been able to tolerate listening to sound systems with only three screen channels for so long. The experience I had so anticipated suddenly became a moment of both happy discovery and intense self-doubt.

For almost the past 20 years, stereo motion picture soundtracks have employed just three main loudspeakers behind the screen. Yet, clearly, five channels add a quality and dimension unattainable by these smaller systems. And yet, today, Sony's eight-channel SDDS is the only digital release format offering this advantage. Where did this superior format come from? Where is it now? Why is it better? Why has this presentation and marketing advantage been left dormant for so long?

BOXOFFICE CINEMA SOUND 1997

THE BASICS

The answers to these questions go back more than 60 years. In 1933, engineers from Bell Laboratories, under the auspices of the National Academy of Sciences, performed what is believed to be the first large-scale demonstration of stereophonic sound reproduction. The goal was to perform a live concert of the Philadelphia Orchestra in their home, the Philadelphia Academy of Music, and reproduce it live, over loudspeakers, in Washington, D.C.'s Constitution Hall, 141.6 miles away. Many of the most basic principles and practices employed by audio engineers today can be traced back to this fundamental and pioneering work.

In this early attempt at stereophonic sound, it was realized that mere recreation of the sound of the Philadelphia Orchestra was not enough. The orchestra had to be reproduced in full auditory perspective as well. Not only should the instruments be heard in Constitution Hall as they sounded in the Academy of Music, but also they should appear to be located in the same positions within the orchestra: left to right and front to back.

The most basic hurdle to overcome was determining the number of independent channels required. The first thought that comes to mind is what audio pioneer W.B. Snow referred to as a "curtain" of small microphones placed in front of the orchestra in Philadelphia, and a corresponding "curtain" of loudspeakers placed on the stage in Washington D.C. The idea, of course, is that, if one is to capture the curtain (or wall) of sound produced by an orchestra, one "simply" needs as many channels as possible.

After much (now legendary) experimentation, it was discovered that a satisfactory illusion of auditory perspective could be created using only three discrete channels of microphones and speaker systems. Three channels also provided the most economical means to demonstrate the fundamentals of stereo. Thus, full-scale stereophonic sound reproduction was born as a three-channel medium. Since the 1930s, much has occurred to modify this approach, some good and some not so good.

For the purists, perhaps one of the least welcome evolutions was the development of the two-channel phonographic long playing record (LP). Although the stereophonic LP did indeed bring stereo to the "masses," it also seemed to fix everyone's mind on stereo as a two-channel (left and right) medium.

If one examines the papers that came out of the 1933 Bell Labs experiments, one sees that, although a good left-to-right perspective was attained with the three-channel system, nearly half of the virtual depth of the stage was lost. (See Figure 1 on the previous page.) In other words, the front-to-back perspective was only about one-half of what it should have been.

Clearly, five channels add a quality and dimension unattainable by smaller systems.

Another phenomenon one observes is the tendency of the sound sources to be grouped around the three speakers. Rather than creating a "curtain" of sound, the three-channel system had a tendency to become three spot sources that the sound came from. Although the test conditions may have exaggerated this effect, listening to three-channel systems today confirms its existence.

Another 20 years would pass before the next major advance in stereophonic sound.

MOTION PICTURES LEAD THE WAY

The earliest predecessor of the Sony eight-channel format first appeared in U.S. movie theatres more than 40 years ago. In the early 1950s, television began to affect filmgoing attendance; many theatres were closed. The motion picture industry responded with several new widescreen film formats. The two largest of these formats were Cinerama, a three-projector process, and Todd-AO, a 70-mm single-projector system. Both of these 35mm formats included discrete multichannel stereophonic sound and were easily capable of projecting very large pictures indeed. Screens of 60 or more feet in width were not uncommon.

In developing these formats, engineers quickly realized that, even with the largest loudspeakers, three channels of sound behind the screen were not enough. The "holes" in the spaces between the speakers were far more than just noticeable. This was due to the fact that the speakers would be even farther apart than had been the case in the Bell Labs work two decades earlier. Something had to be done.

It was also recognized that motion picture sound is in motion, literally moving around from scene to scene, often within a scene—something sound from a symphony orchestra never does. If a sound was required to be panned across a screen with only three channels, it appeared to virtually jump from speaker to speaker, rather than moving smoothly from one point to another. Clearly, something had to be done.

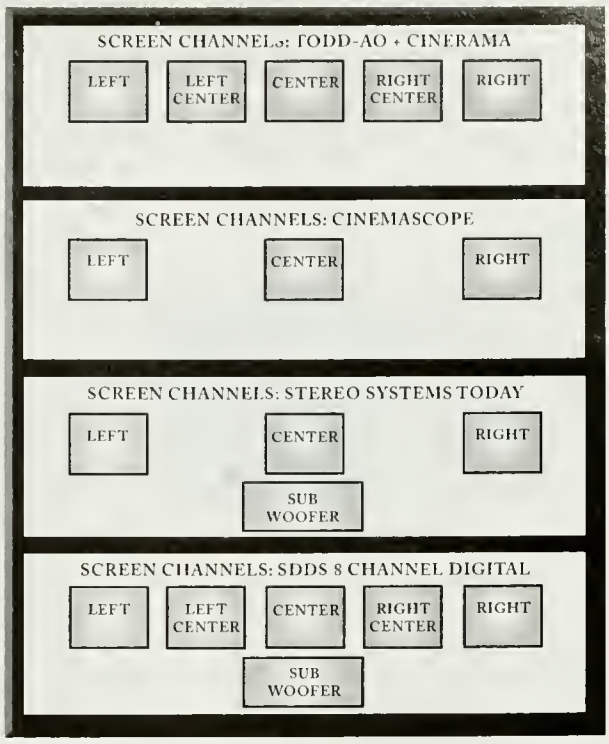

Figure 2
Screen channel configurations

Of course, adding more than the minimum three channels to the Bell Labs system would have been a difficult decision due to the costly 141.6-mile transmission link. But this problem does not present itself in movie theatres. As such, a sound format for motion pictures can easily provide the opportunity to employ enough channels for the finest possible sound.

For the sound engineers of the 1950s, the solution became obvious. To maintain the continuous wall of sound that stereo is supposed to be, to increase the virtual depth of the stage, or scene, and to eliminate the "holes" between the speakers, more than three channels were needed. After considerable research, it was found that, with two additional channels increasing both the number of directional cues as well as the total radiating area of the loudspeakers by 66 percent, five full-range channels behind the screen added a significant and seamless dimension to stereophonic sound.

With the addition of the surround channel, 70mm Todd-AO was introduced with a discrete six-track format on October 10, 1955. The soundtrack was recorded on the now familiar magnetic stripping placed on either side of the film's perforations. This became the release print format of choice for major motion pictures for the next 40 years.

Todd-AO was not alone. The engineers at Cinerama, and others overseas as well, had themselves reached the same conclusion and also used five channels behind the screen. However, in 1977 there was a major change in the way the screen channels were allocated. The left-center and right-center channels were eliminated in favor of a separate subwoofer channel. For the first time since its introduction, the 70mm sound format was, in the opinion of some, downgraded. Though the subwoofer channel was a welcome addition, the 70mm format now offered only three channels behind the screen, the same as 35mm stereo films. For the next 17 years, motion picture sound remained a three (screen) channel format. (See Figure 2 above.)

STEREO QUALITY VS. NUMBER OF SCREEN CHANNELS

Sound and cinema engineers in Russia were also studying stereophonic film sound. In his book "Wide-Screen Cinema and Stereophonic Sound,"

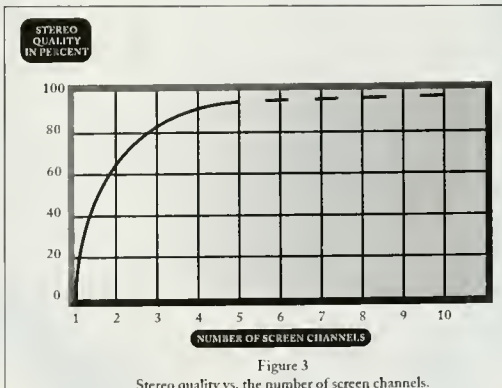

Figure 3
Stereo quality vs. the number of screen channels.
Previously published

Michael Wysotsky published a most interesting graph comparing the quality of stereophonic reproduction to the number of screen channels employed. (See Figure 3 above.)

This graph assumes a stereo quality rating of 100 percent to be perfect and natural sound, indistinguishable from the original. Note that with one channel there is no stereo; therefore, the stereo quality is zero. With three channels, the stereo quality is around 85 percent. With five channels, the stereo quality increases to about 95 percent—

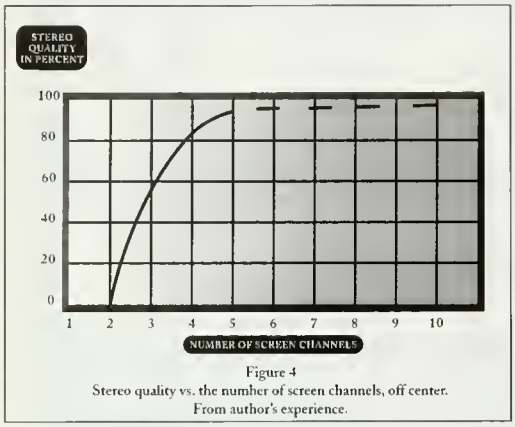

Figure 4
Stereo quality vs. the number of screen channels, off center.
From author's experience.

roughly a 10 percent improvement over results when using three screen channels.

In my own experience, Wysotsky's chart seems conservative, perhaps significantly underestimating the advantage of five screen channels. This would seem especially true if one considers those seated off to one side of a theatre. Figure 4 above shows my own experience and factors in those sitting off center, which is most of the audience.

Consider that we have all had the experience of hearing only the speaker we are closest to, when we sit off center with a two-channel home stereo. As we move off center, the sound becomes mono—actually less than mono, because all the information isn't there. This explains my zero percent stereo quality rating for a two-channel system, when sitting off center.

When sitting off to one side (say the left) in a cinema with three channels behind the screen, the stereo image collapses to the left and center speakers, not strictly to the left. Three channels, after all, are better than two. But when five screen channels are used, virtually filling the entire width of the screen with sound, the stereo image is better maintained throughout the theatre. This makes sense intuitively, as there is no such "image collapse" in a concert hall.

SDDS

From its earliest inception, the engineers at Sony felt that, if they were going to offer a deluxe digital motion picture soundtrack, it had to be all inclusive. It had to be a sound-on-film format. It had to provide all digital processing right up to the outputs to the power amplifiers. It had to meet a long list of Sony digital specifications.

But, most of all, the system had to return the advantage of five full-range screen channels to the film industry. With the subwoofer and stereo surround channels included, the SDDS system was introduced in 1993 as the industry's first discrete eight-channel genera release digital sound format.

Today's SDDS eight-channel motion pic ture mixes often make full use of this advar tage by typically recording their orchestra with five main microphones, one for each c the five screen speakers. The result is the clos est possible replication of an orchestra as we as a huge increase in stereo quality and aud ence involvement with the film.

Rerecording mixer Chris Carpenter ("Inde pendence Day," "Immortal Beloved") note that mixing in eight channels provides a greate clarity and openness than is possible with th conventional six channels. The bigger the mix the greater the advantage. Although musi derives the most benefits, Carpenter points ou that effects are also improved and that pannin opportunities are enhanced.

With five channels behind the screen there is less "competition" among tracks. I other words, in an intense scene the left-cer ter and right-center might carry some lou effects while the center remains clear fo dialogue. The added discreteness helps th audience keep everything separated an hear the dialogue more easily and clearly.

EIGHT-CHANNEL INSTALLATIONS

Some might be surprised to learn the actua number of eight-channel theatres. As of thi writing, Sony reports that there are well ove 500 eight-channel installations worldwid Ninety percent of these are in North America

NATIONAL CINEMA SERVICE CORPORATION

(800) 726-2609

ITEA International Theatre Equipment Association

PROFESSIONAL SERVICES AND PRODUCTS INCLUDING

INSTALLATION
AUDIO RACKING
THX RECERTIFICATIONS
TECHNICAL CONSULTING
24 HOUR ANSWERING SERVICE
VIDEO PROJECTION
INTERMITTENT REPAIR

EQUIPMENT
PROJECTION SERVICE*
SOUND SERVICE*
PARTS
BOOTH SUPPLIES
*Annual Contracts or Demand Service

XENON BULBS
SOUND SYSTEMS
CONCESSION EQUIPMENT
LOBBY FIXTURES
FRONT ENDS
LENSES
USED EQUIPMENT

P.O. Box 10799
New Orleans, Louisiana 70181

GOOD SIGHT, GOOD SOUND
THE KEY TO GREAT CONCESSIONS

Response No. 169

his might be an especially surprising total hen one considers that it exceeds the number 70mm Todd-AO installations by some 200 ditoriums. In addition, nearly 50 films have en mixed in this powerful format.

In addition to their technical advantages, ese eight-channel theatres can boast a nuine marketing advantage as well. aserdiscs already provide discrete six .1) digital soundtracks for home viewing. ese can sometimes be superior to the undtracks played in theatres. As the new gital video disc (DVD) gains acceptance, -channel stereo will become increasgly relegated to little more than a fairly mmon home format. Movie theatres uipped to present films in eight full chanls can build and maintain a greater marting edge over home theatres.

Of course, the SDDS processors are uipped to fold-down eight-channel undtracks for playback in conventional six 1) channel and even four-channel theatres. is ability ensures that all the sound is reproced even with the smaller systems. Hower, eight channels should not be considered t for the larger screens.

SCREEN SIZE DOESN'T MATTER

I used to subscribe to the general notion that, screen widths up to 40 feet, there was little no advantage in employing five backstage eakers over three.

As it turns out, this is not so.

Rerecording mixer Chris Carpenter ("Independence Day," "Immortal Beloved") notes that mixing in eight channels provides a greater clarity and openness than is possible with the conventional six channels.

Nothing could drive this point home more than an experience I recently had in a Sony screening room with a mere 12-foot-wide screen. The film I was listening to included a fairly equal amount of both original music recorded for five screen channels, and licensed popular music played through only the three left, center and right speakers.

The difference in stereo quality between the original and licensed music was startling. The original music had more depth, more fullness and a far more natural quality. With such a sound as a comparison, listening to the three-channel licensed music became an annoying and distracting disappointment, even with a 12-foot screen. Obviously my earlier notion had been mistaken. The SDDS eight-channel advantage will work in any theatre.

© 1997 John F. Allen. All Rights Reserved.

John F. Allen is the founder and president of High Performance Stereo in Newton, Mass. He is also the inventor of the HPS-4000 cinema sound system and in 1984 was the first to bring digital sound to the cinema.

Allen wishes to thank rerecording mixer Chris Carpenter, sound historian Ted Uzzle and representatives of Sony Cinema Products Corp. for their valuable assistance in preparing this article.

THEATRE EXHIBITION EQUIPMENT

XENON BULBS

BOOTH SUPPLIES & LENSES

FILM PROJECTORS & SOUND SYSTEMS

NCS CORPORATION

WORLDWIDE CINEMA SUPPLY DEALER

NCS 1926 70 YEARS 1996 CORPORATION

★ ONE STOP SHOPPING SOURCE

★ FACTORY DIRECT PRICING

★ TOLL FREE ORDERING

NEW! ★ MAJOR CREDIT CARDS ACCEPTED NEW!

★ PROFESSIONAL SUPPORT TEAM

★ WORLDWIDE PRODUCT DISTRIBUTION

★ OUR GUARANTEE - 100% SATISFACTION

Call 1-800-776-6271

VISA

Supplying the Entertainment Industry Since 1926

CONCESSION & LOBBY PRODUCTS

LOBBY & BOX OFFICE FIXTURES

NEW & USED EQUIPMENT

SCREENS & FRAMES

NOISES OFF

Three Keys to Successful Digital Acoustics

Digital sound in a theatre is great. That same digital sound seeping into the auditorium next door isn't. Three acoustic elements can make or break a digital sound environment.

By Marco d'Ambrosio

One day this past summer, I went to see "The Postman." I was very excited about viewing this poetic film, as it had recently won the Academy Award for best score. Much to my disappointment, I wound up watching this quiet art film while listening to most of "Independence Day," which was playing its multichannel discrete digital soundtrack in an adjacent auditorium. Although I was also looking forward to seeing "Independence Day," this was not my idea of a "two for one" screening pass.

Whether onscreen or behind the screen, the latest development in sound technology—digital sound—does sell tickets. What are often neglected, however, are the acoustics of the space in which this technology is to perform and its interrelation to the surrounding spaces.

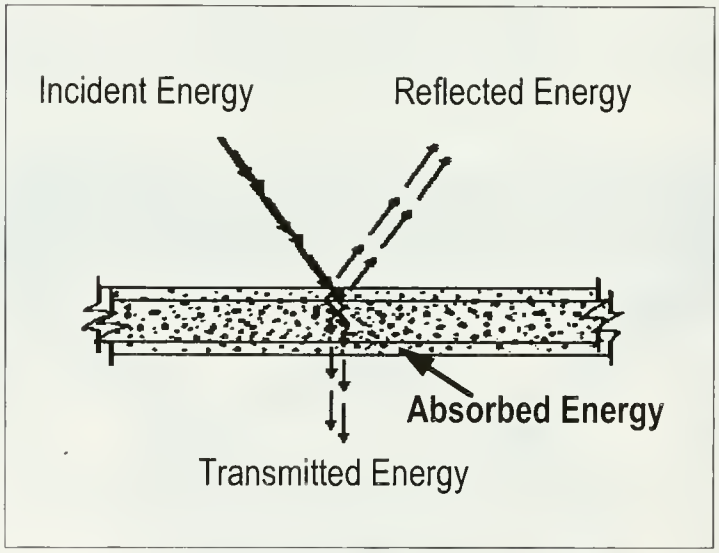

Figure 1. Sound energy can be reflected, absorbed or transmitted.

As we've all experienced, digital technology has significantly improved the sound quality of films over that of previous 35mm analog optical formats. Some of the digital capabilities include discrete channels, extended low-frequency response in the subwoofer and surround channels, improved dynamic range, and virtually unmeasurable noise, wow and flutter. Many of these audio features approach (and some exceed) features previously available only with 70mm SR release prints.

Such A-Chain features combined with a B-Chain system designed to handle these capabilities bring the general audience much closer to hearing the film the way the director heard it in the mix room. But, in most cases, simply making the A-Chain digi tal and installing more powerfu loudspeakers and amplifier won't make a theatre "digita ready." Most mix rooms hav been designed with a great degre of consideration given to the acoustics—specifically, in hov the various surfaces in the roor absorb and reflect sound, hov well the room is isolated fror other rooms, and how much am bient noise is allowed into th room. It is these three interrelate acoustic factors (absorption, isc lation, and background noise that need to be addressed mor critically in the construction c theatres in this digital age.

First, it's important to under stand the different ways soun can be transmitted. One way is fc sound to create alternating waves of pressur in the air, as occurs with speech during conversation or with music through a soun system. This is called airborne transmissior and it's the most common way people perceiv sound. Another way is for a vibrating object t be connected, or acoustically coupled, to ar other object that in turn picks up the vibratio and transmits it along to other objects that ar also coupled. This is called structure-born transmission.

If we are touching anything in this path, w can sense the vibrations. Also, at some or man points along the path, the air around the objec is also excited, and we perceive this as airborr noise. In general, structure-borne noise issue tend to be more difficult to deal with than thos that are solely airborne in nature.

BOXOFFICE
CINEMA SOUND 1997

ABSORPTION

This is a complex physical property, which all surface materials in a theatre possess. In basic terms, absorption is the amount of airborne sound energy a material absorbs when that energy strikes the material. That trapped sound energy is actually dissipated within the material as heat. What isn't absorbed either reflects back into the theatre or passes completely through the material until it reaches another surface, as shown in Figure 1 on the previous page. That figure also exhibits how absorption and isolation are interrelated.

It is also important to note that a material's absorptive qualities actually vary with frequency, meaning that it could be a good absorber of high frequencies and a poor absorber of low frequencies (or vice versa). Thus, a material's absorptive qualities are measured across a wide frequency range (typically in octave bands) and listed as a table of coefficients of absorption, or ∂s.

∂ is actually the mathematical relationship between sound energy that strikes the material and that which is reflected back; therefore, a material completely absorptive at a given frequency would have a ∂ of 1 at that frequency, and a completely reflective material would have a ∂ of 0.

How a material is mounted will also affect its absorptive properties. In general, spacing a material away from its mounting surface or increasing its thickness will make it a better absorber at low frequencies. Placing a perforated or slotted facing in front of an absorptive panel will decrease absorption at higher frequencies, leaving absorption at lower frequencies unaffected. Also, under the careful design of an acoustical consultant, tuned resonators or slot absorbers can be designed to absorb very specific frequency bands. See Figure 2, below.

In relatively nontechnical terms, absorption is important in a theatre because it helps control reverberation (the overall decay of sound) and audible slap echoes either from sidewall to sidewall or from the screen to the projection wall. This is particularly important in theatres with digital playback systems, as pristine dialogue, exact stereo imaging of music and sound effects, and careful placement of stereo surround effects can be easily smeared by a theatre with inadequate absorption. Absorption within the theatre will also help reduce how much sound is transmitted to adjacent spaces. Although that isn't the primary purpose of absorption within a room, every little bit counts, especially when an exhibitor can have in excess of 113 decibels of subwoofer thumping away.

Other important issues to consider when fitting a theatre with absorptive treatment, besides how much treatment, are where and how thick. A common contempo-

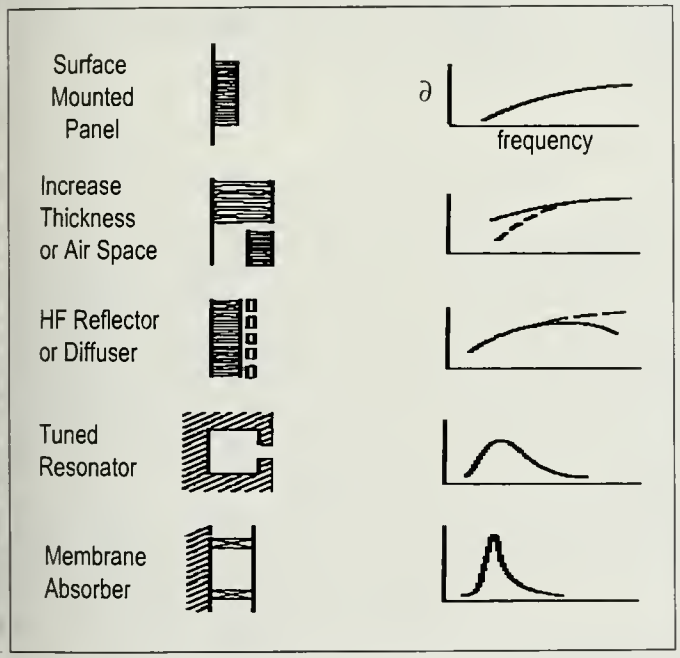

Figure 2: A material's absorptive qualities vary with frequency. (∂ is the relationship between sound and its reflection.)

It's getting

in the box office!

Thermal Stock For All Theatre Systems:

- ICON
- OMNITERM
- BOCA
- TICKET PRO
- B.E.A.T.
- MARS
- GATEWAY
- PACER/CATS
- MARBLE
- PRYSM
- THEATRON

Also available: Automatickets, Roll Tickets, Custom-printed Souvenir Invitation Tickets, Coupon Books and Gift Certificates

National TICKET CO.®

P.O. Box 547
Shamokin, PA 17872

Call Our Customer Service Dept. 800-829-0829 • Fax 800-829-0888
International Dept. 717-672-2900 • International Fax 717-672-2999
Internet http://www.nationalticket.com

Response No. 72

THE BEST!

Know who you deal with personally! One phone call gets the owner of America's best equipped shop and design lab. IDEAS to save time, money and difficulties.

HADDEN
THEATRE SUPPLY COMPANY
10201 Bunsen Way
Louisville, KY 40299
(502) 499-0050
(502) 499-0052 FAX:

Louis Bornwasser, Owner

Design-Consultation-Sales

Response No. 40

rary practice is to overtreat a digital theatre with thin acoustical panels. But this absorbs too much high-frequency energy, creating an unnatural feel while leaving too much bass hanging around in the room. As a general rule, an auditorium doesn't need to be treated completely with acoustical panels. Although the projection wall should be entirely treated to absorb sound hitting it directly from the screen channels across the room, the sidewalls in most cases can be covered between 50 percent and 75 percent.

What's more important with sidewalls is that the absorptive treatment be brought down to below seated ear height—as close to the finished floor as possible. Also, the projection wall treatment should be thicker than the sidewall's, in order to better absorb the low frequencies that build up at a theatre's rear. If possible, parallel or curved reflective surfaces should be eliminated. Lastly, if the auditorium has an acoustical tile ceiling with a large air plenum above it, one can take advantage of this by turning it into a low-frequency absorber; this can be done by placing fiberglass directly on top of the ceiling tile.

ISOLATION

Audiences the past couple of years have enjoyed the tremendous power a digital soundtrack can have if played back at calibrated levels through a properly designed, installed and aligned sound system. It's because of this that acoustic isolation has become one of the most critical issues in theatre construction today—especially for those modern multiplexes and megaplexes that boast many adjacent digital houses.

Acoustic isolation is the control of outside noise entering an auditorium as well as the control of sound from that theatre to the outside. Another important fact: Such intrusive noises can be airborne and/or structure-borne in nature. Therefore, the quality of construction of the floor, ceiling, screen wall, projection wall and sidewalls is equally important. As they do with absorption, such partitions provide varying levels of isolation at different frequencies. At lower frequencies, it's the mass and stiffness of the materials used that affects isolation performance; in the middle to higher ranges, isolation is dominated by the kind of composite construction employed, along with how well everything is built.

The term used to describe acoustic isolation at any given frequency is called Transmission Loss, or TL. The higher the TL, the better the isolation at that frequency. By plotting all the TL values on a graph and using a curve-fitting method, a single value called Sound Transmission Class, or STC, is derived to describe the overall performance of a partition. Notably, STC values apply primarily to airborne transmission. Another measurement and rating system called Impact Insulation Class, or IIC, is used to determine the performance of structures (typically ceiling/floor systems) against impulsive structure-borne noises.

Although true STC values can be calculated only in a laboratory, field measurements (such as Field STC, or FSTC) can be done to evaluate real-world constructions. Published STC ratings, however, are used when recommending a wall design. After much research and field measurement, my company's studies show that the design goal for wall constructions between two digital theatres should be STC 75. Between a digital theatre and a non-critical listening space, lobby, projection room or similar area, a minimum STC 65 is acceptable. The wall types that fall into these categories typically consist of double studs with multiple layers of drywall or a composite construction of masonry block or concrete with gypsum board on each side. The use of large air cavities between studs also increases low-frequency performance. In many cases, the design of shared corridors around digital theatres can reduce the wall constructions to STC 65.

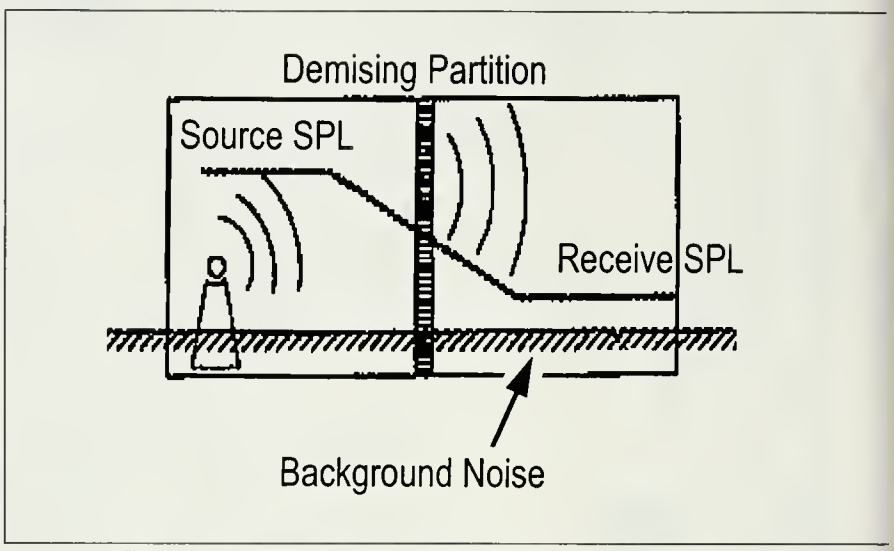

Figure 4: The ultimate goal in soundwall separation is to decrease the sound so that it's below (not above, as here) the background noise.

One of the most essential factors to remember when building an isolation wall is that the quality of construction must be constantly monitored. Theatre walls must extend to the roof deck, and there should be no defects or holes between theatres. Acoustical sealant should be applied between layers and at the wall perimeters.

Figure 3, below left, shows the dramatic difference in STC ratings between a wall that is sealed at the roof deck and one that is not. The use of solid entry/exit doors with perimeter sound seals is also important, as is a double-layer glass projection port.

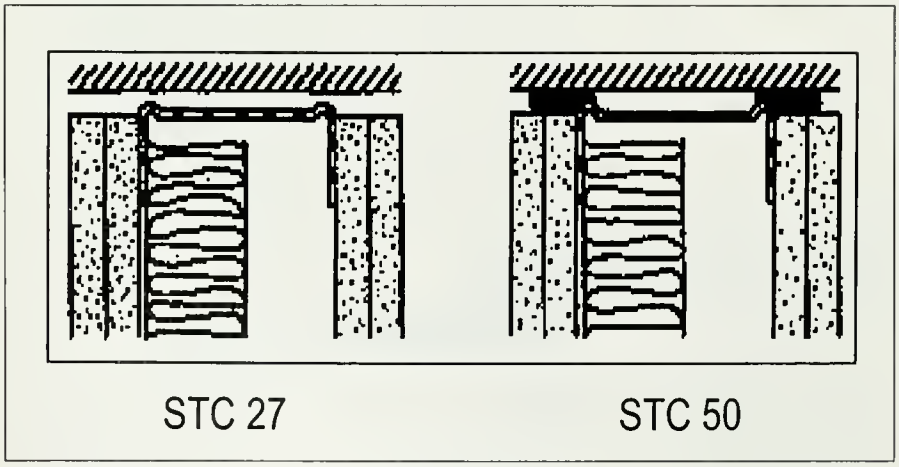

Figure 3: There's a sizable STC gain when a soundwall is sealed at the roofdeck (right).

BACKGROUND NOISE

Background noise in movie theatres is defined as the steady-state ambient and impulsive noise that invades the entire space. It is typically generated by air conditioning, electrical equipment and exterior noises such as road, rail or air traffic. Although generally not desirable, such background noise can be used to an advantage.

Whereas too much background noise will mask the low-level signals than can now be recorded and reproduced on a digital soundtrack, too little background noise can reveal the limitations of an auditorium's acoustic isolation. The sonic ideal is somewhere in between—a background noise level that masks sound coming from adjacent spaces while remaining below the digital soundtrack's dynamic range. Figure 4, above, illustrates this relationship.

Measurement of background oise in the field is normally done octave or third octave frequency ands. Those measurements are

In summation, there are close relationships among absorption, isolation and background noise and their effects on the optimum lotted against Noise Criteria, or C, curves; such curves are re- ted to listeners' subjective re- ponses to loudness. A noise easurement is assigned a single C rating, which is based on the equency band reaching the high- st NC curve.

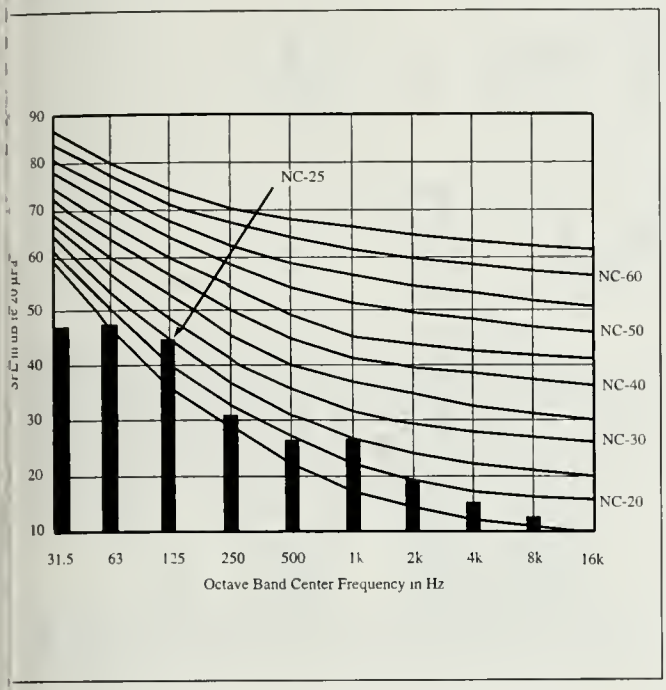

Figure 5: Noise Criteria curves (sound pressure level vs. frequency) with data indicating NC-25.

Because the dynamic range nd signal-to-noise ratio of digi- l soundtracks are the same in a heatre as in a mix room, back- round noise levels should also e the same—around NC 25. Al- wing the background noise in theatre to reach NC 30 will help ask some intrusive noise with- t critically impeding the digi- l soundtrack. Figure 5 above ows a background noise mea- rement of NC 25.

Background noise in the higher equencies tends to be airborne— pically airflow noise, fans, ghting equipment, and ise leakage through doors. hose are relatively easy to x. Low-frequency back- round noise is usually ructure-borne and can be ore difficult to eliminate, ecause that requires finding e offending piece of equip- ent and acoustically de- upling it from the ructure. Poorly isolated oftop units, compressors d chiller pumps are often the orst culprits.

theatre playback of digital soundtracks. Because the correct balancing of these intertwined acoustic factors is such a complex proposition, it's often wise to engage the services of an acoustical consultant familiar with contemporary cinema design.

Designing a theatre with digital soundtracks in mind allows exhibitors to greatly reduce or eliminate the higher costs necessary to do future retrofits after the fact, as well as stop patron complaints about being able to hear the movie one hall over. After all, when "The Postman" knocks twice, he shouldn't be answered by an explosion from next door.

Marco d'Ambrosio is a systems designer at the THX Division of Lucasfilm Ltd., headquartered in San Rafael, Calif.

Marco d'Ambrosio.

Let us help you put the right package together and give you "state-of-the-art" presentation

Randy Taylor Technical Services and Cal-Rand, Inc.

For all your equipment needs. Let the competition beware.

- Complete line of projection and sound equipment
- Consultation — 22 years experience
- Quality Installation and Service
- THX certified, R-2 equipped
- Service after the sale
- The very best in technical support
- Over 100 manufacturer and vendor accounts
- Prompt, efficient and affordable, all work guaranteed.

CAL-RAND, Inc.
7502 Greenville Avenue,
Suite 400, Dallas, Texas 75231
Phone: 214-369-1034 Fax: 214-369-1768

Response No. 127

The Phone Call is FREE
The Price is RIGHT
The Service is EXCELLENT

Call for the Best Price on

Quality Sound & Projection Equipment, Booth Supplies, Xenon Bulbs and more...

800-552-7502

Theatre Equipment Association

Bruce Worrell SOUND & PROJECTION

Response No. 188

SOUNDS OF SILENCE

How to Soundproof Your Theatres

You've booked a big-bang action flick in theatre #1, but a quiet romance is playing in theatre #2. How can you keep explosions from drowning out the pillow talk? Digital-age soundwalls are one way to go.

By Bill Bergiadis with Janis Hunt Johnson

You're a theatre owner, and "Star Trek: First Contact" is premiering tonight. It's really packed them in. Your sound system is equipped to handle the spectacular digital soundtrack the movie ads have promised and, when the alien Borg blast away, the audience feels it in the pits of their stomachs. They sit in awe at the technology of today's movie experience. Afterward, as they exit, you hear remarks of excitement and praise for your theatre's sound system.

But there's a problem. The folks exiting from the auditorium next door are complaining about how the romantic scenes in "The Mirror Has Two Faces" were ruined by sound leaking through from "First Contact."

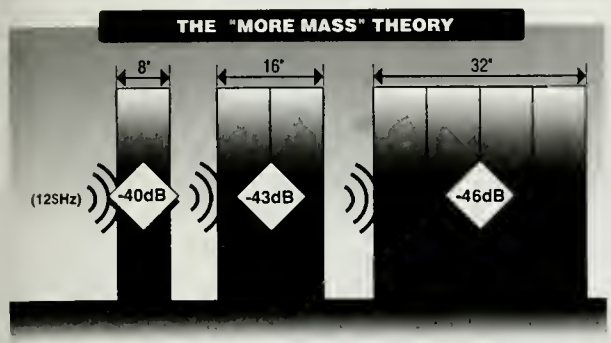
For the contemporary exhibitor, this can be an all-too-common occurrence. Digital sound has brought a richer movie experience, but it's also brought new problems. Most multiplex theatre structures existing today weren't built to withstand digital's expanded dynamic range, so sound often "bleeds" between halls, drastically decreasing the enjoyment of the moviegoer's experience.

So what's an owner to do? You have to keep up with the latest in sound technology to remain competitive. (If you're running "Mars Attacks" with an analog sound system, and the theatre down the road offers that film in digital sound with THX, people will drive those extra miles for the earthshaking sound.) Still, you can't afford to hinder the movie experience of customers in neighboring screening rooms.

Tomlinson Holman, best known for developing the THX criteria for cinema sound, describes the predicament this way: "When sound systems went over to digital sources, the theory was that they were merely copying the capability of 70mm film. In reality, the maximum level of the subwoofers went up 7 or 8 decibels [dB]. This was first noticed on "Batman," when the Batmobile roared to life. Suddenly, instead of topping out at roughly 105 dB, they were topping out at around 113 dB."

Holman says filmmakers, exhilarated with the new extra-low frequency capabilities of their soundtracks, overused it at the outset. Quite a few theatre loudspeakers were blown before owners discovered what was happening. In most cases, installing improved subwoofers to handle the extreme low frequencies or using limiters solved the problem. But upgrading sound systems so they can reproduce the expanded spectrum is only the first part of the solution.

Controlling bleed between screening rooms is just as important. Older theatre facilities originally designed for a 60 dB dynamic range are now routinely exposed to increases of up to 30 dB. Decibel levels increase like the Richter scale, so an increase of 10 dB is 10 times as loud, an increase of 20 dB is 100 times as loud, etc., leaving patrons next door to these sonic exhibitions angered over the interruption of their movie's quiet moments.



The solution to these sound quandaries is Typically, the simple solution would be to build thicker and heavier concrete walls. But the old adage that "more mass" is all that matters is an outdated concept, according to sound control experts Jim Barath and Felic Doggett. Mass can't solve today's noise reduction problems, they say, because digital's overwhelming increase in dynamic range makes it impractical. (See Figure 1, next page.)

For instance, doubling the thickness of an 8-inch wall to 16 inches alleviates only an additional 3 dB (at 125 Hz) and doubling it again to 32 inches stops only another 6 dB. That means all those spectacular explosions and rumbles will still bleed right through, in both directions, unabated. Perhaps more important is the fact that exhibitors need to maintain profitability, and thicker walls mean less seating space, fewer tickets sold, and ultimately lower profits.

Barath, an acoustics consultant with Denver-based Omnivest Technologies, specializes in acoustic design and engineering for large-format cinemas. Space is a big consideration for most theatre owners, Barath says, so the ndustry has used more creative designs in the past few years that employ "mass-air-mass" combinations to achieve higher performance with a lighter-weight wall with decreased dimensions.

"I think that [space] is first and foremost," Barath says, "because obviously that means real estate we're giving up, and it means seats that we're giving up, if we have very thick, massive walls. What one does now is have walls that are tailored specifically for the use of digital soundtracks—walls that will give us an acceptable amount of Transmission Loss [TL] and enough attenuation between auditoriums to meet a desirable standard for this industry."

The typical solution for solving sound leakage between screening rooms has been to utilize the "more mass" theory. Although it is effective, the wall width necessary to stop today's digital sound range decreases seating space so dramatically that it is impractical for modern theater owners.

FIGURE 1: "No mas" for the more-mass theory.

Doggett, owner of Philadelphia-based Metropolitan Acoustics, specializes in providing sound solutions. Like Barath, she emphasizes looking at TL values when constructing walls. Doggett suggests that an exhibitor begin with three goals in mind:

- Decide what level of sound isolation (the TL factor) will be the acceptable standard between individual theaters;
- Accept only an extremely low reverberation time inside each theatre; and
- Select a mechanical system (heating and cooling) with very low background noise.

Doggett says that a combination of materials with air space is the solution, as that can stop low frequency noise as well as a more massive concrete wall. "It's best to use some air space so there's not a connection between the two sides of the wall. When the sound does come through one side, then it's not a total connection to the other side."

Both Barath and Doggett suggest, in addition to using air space to help minimize sound leakage, using combinations of building materials, such as furred-out drywall, stud walls with resilient clips, gypsum board, insulation, and composite materials. All elements depend on the sound control standards desired and the specific needs of the facility. "Using layers of materials will also help attenuate resonant frequencies," Doggett says. "Each material has a frequency that sound comes through best. So, if you use different materials, you're catching a lot of those resonant frequencies."

Barath suggests also using a Noise Criterion (NC) value to determine the efficiency of an auditorium. The NC rating can be determined by an acoustics/engineering designer to decide how best to mitigate internal ambient noise and external intrusive noise. Considering TL, NC and Sound Transmission Class (STC) values is certainly essential, but every structure is unique. The final answer, Holman says, depends on the locale. Building material prices can vary widely, and local weather and altitude considerations will also affect the design, as will county, state and national building regulations.

Of course, a certain amount of sound leakage might be acceptable, depending upon how stringent an exhibitor wants to be. To achieve the best answers for each specific situation, it is important that a theatre owner communicate with the architect, acoustician, design engineer and construction firm and make sure they are all working together to arrive at the best sound solutions.

The bottom line is this: The high quality the public has come to expect will determine what's acceptable and what's not. Today, their sound systems at home, and even in their cars, are of extremely high quality. Exhibitors seeking profitability must demand a new standard that is, Barath says, "at least commensurate or better than what the majority of these moviegoers would experience in their own environments."

With a dozen years of construction industry experience (the last two spent in Troy Walls' research and development area), Bill Bergiadis developed the design used in Troy Sound Wall Systems, which consist of super-efficient wall materials that allow maximum sound dampening (an STC rating of 68, exceeding even THX criteria) with minimal space usage. By condensing standard wall mass, incorporating limp mass within the design, Troy walls provide the highest transmission loss values with minimum dimensions. Based in Commerce, Calif, Troy can be reached at 800-987-3306 or 213-838-3676. Janis Hunt Johnson is Managing Editor of Ask Janis Editorial & Rewrite Services. The authors wish to thank Jim Barath, Michelle Branton Koks, V. Wade Contreras, Felicia Doggett, Tom Holman, David C. Johnson and Cal Leuning for their expert assistance in this article's preparation.

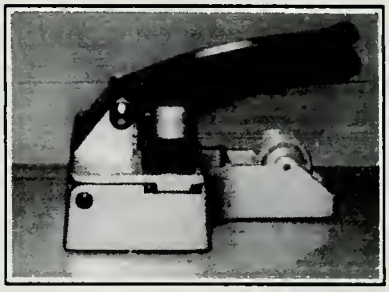
Bill Bergiadis

ENTERTAINMENT INSURANCE

FOR

THEATRES
•
CONCESSIONAIRES
•
PRODUCERS

MOC



MAROEVICH O'SHEA & COGHLAN
INSURANCE BROKERS
425 MARKET STREET, 10TH FLOOR
SAN FRANCISCO, CA 94105

(800)951-0600
(415)957-0600
FAX(415)957-0577
HTTP://WWW.MAROEVICH.COM

Response No. 70

ONLY $199.95

A new conception in 35 mm splicers that must be seen to be believed.

- Top quality
- Inexpensive price
- All metal — no plastic
- Wholesale to the public

EQUIPMENT, ETC.
P. O. Box 1194
Snellville, GA 30278
Phone–(770) 979-3456
Fax–(770) 979-0919
Ans. Mach. 24 Hrs. A Day

Response No. 443

DIGITAL SOUND: OVER THERE

DTS, Dolby SR-D and SDDS Do the (Inter)Continental

By Jon Matsumoto

From Geneva to Jakarta, new theatre screens are popping up like wildflowers. A 13 percent increase in the total number of screens worldwide is forecast between now and the year 2005. And, in many cases, exhibitors are looking to adopt some form of digital sound to further enhance their patrons' movie-going experience.

ONE FOR ALL: AMC's Canal City 13 in Fukuoka, Japan, went exclusively with SDDS in all its auditoriums.

"There's a general trend [overseas] that mirrors what's happening in the U.S.," says Jon Kirchner, vice president of international business development for Digital Theatre Systems (DTS), which is partly owned by Universal Studios parent MCA. "Exhibitors want to present a film in its best possible format. That includes building better screens, providing more comfortable seats and offering digital sound."

Currently, three companies are battling it out in the expanding digital sound marketplace. Of these competitors, San Francisco-based Dolby Laboratories was the first to go public with the technology when it emerged with Dolby SR-D in 1992. A year later, Westlake Village, Calif.-based DTS came out with its DTS-6D digital system. In 1994, Sony Cinema Products Corp., housed on Sony's Culver City, Calif., studio lot, joined the digital party with its launch of the Sony Dynamic Digital Sound (SDDS) format.

Dolby is leading the field in terms of the number of non-North American theatres it has equipped with digital sound. Its quick ascension in this area was aided by both its early start and its long-time presence as an internationally known and respected cinema sound company. Dolby has more than 4,800 digital sound units in theatres outside of the United States and Canada. Meanwhile, DTS has more than 3,100 units in these areas, and Sony—despite its later entrance—already has more than 530 units in overseas territories.

"We have a significant [numerical] lead over our competitors in the rest of the world," contends Kurt Schwenk, Dolby's vice president of film applications. "For 10 or 15 years, we've had dubbing consultants throughout the world who deal with all the major studios and who are [overseas] to advise and technically assist in doing foreign language versions [of films] to match the U.S. originals. Our sound consultants were out in the field and were quite well known" when Dolby SR-D was launched.

BOXOFFICE

CINEMA SOUND 1997

But the battle for theatrical supremacy in t international digital sound market is ju getting started. Which company holds t largest share of this market in the long run w depend largely on which does the best job co vincing exhibitors, consumers and filmmake that its system is the most desirable.

DTS is significantly different from its com petitors in design and might appear to l strongly geared toward the internation sphere. Both Dolby and SDDS soundtracks a encoded directly onto the film; DTS stores i six-channel soundtrack onto a CD-ROM th is synched to a time code on the film. Thus, t DTS system allows for easier multi-languag capability, because an array of languag soundtracks can be matched to any print en ploying the DTS format.

"Not only are we dealing with differe languages, but in some cases we're dealin with different dialects," says DTS' Kirchne "There are some cou tries that have multip dialects, like India an China. DTS has an ad vantage because w can cater to differe audiences [at the sam theatre] in the sam day. It offers cost sav ings and flexibility," i good part becaus there's no need for mu tiple prints. Kirchne also says that DTS CD-ROM format of fers sound that doesn degrade over time. "It's going to sound as goo the 10,000th time as it did the first."

Dolby's Schwenk counters that the CD ROM digital sound system carries added cost such as more expensive shipping fees. Th six-channel SR-D system boasts a unique, sin gle-inventory distribution system in which single print can serve digital, analog or mon theatres. It's the most cost-efficient system, insists Schwenk: "For example, if Warner Bros. runs 4,000 prints of 'Batman Forever,' which [the studio] did, all 4,000 can be done on a single print run. You don't have to stop and do 300 prints with a different [analog or mono] track."

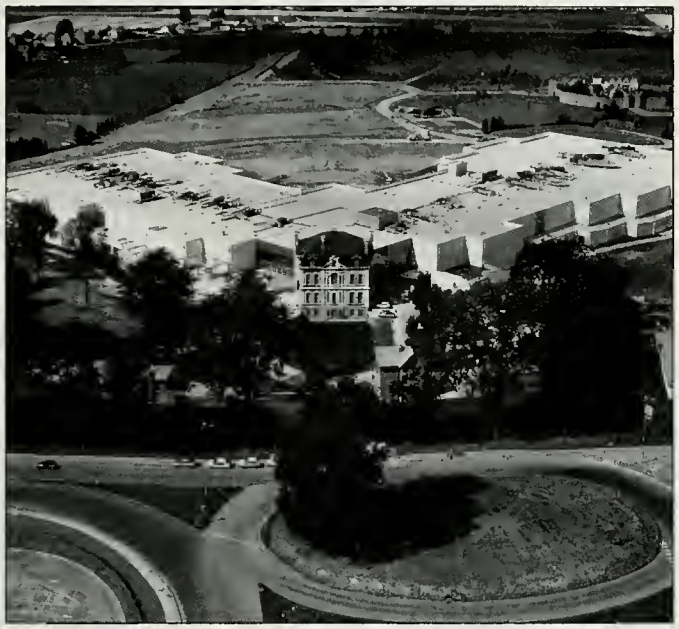
SDDS, already equipped in more than 2,600 screens in North America, could offer the most attractive digital system for the audiophile. It features a cross-redundancy format in which the same digital information is contained on each side of the film. If one side is damaged, the backup digital track takes its place. More significantly, the eight-channel SDDS boasts two additional channels of sound. (However, the system is also capable of presenting films in six channels.)

Both Dolby's Schwenk and DTS' Kirchner contend that the eight-channel advantage is not one at all, because the vast majority of screens and theatres in existence overseas aren't big enough to take advantage of an eight-channel system. As more multiplexes and megaplexes appear on foreign soils, however, Sony is betting that a big future lies ahead for larger theatres built to house even more dazzling digital sound.



"[You're seeing more] gigantic megaplexes and more stadium seating [worldwide], which is going to lead to larger screens on different angles," says John A. Scarcella, president and CEO of Sony Cinema Products. "Eight-channel capability is going to be even more important as the screen size gets larger. Also, with the advances that home theatre systems have made, the theatre owner is going to have to recognize that he's going to have to do something differently to get the person out of the living room. Until you've listened to eight-channel and compared it to something else, you don't know how good it is."

All three companies agree that an audience thirst is growing in foreign markets for films with digital sound. Not surprisingly, given their top 10 status in the world's movie markets, France and Germany are viewed as countries with particularly great appreciations for this format.

"France is the most advanced country in Europe for sound and the moviegoing experience in general," says Gemma Richardson, vice president of worldwide marketing for Sony Cinema Products. "They enjoy new, exciting ways to see movies. In Paris and other major cities, they have laser shows before a movie starts that will play to some famous sound score like 'Star Wars.'"

"Germany is probably our top country," Dolby's Schwenk adds. "The Germans want to hear everything, and they're one of the largest filmgoing audiences in Europe."

India, Southeast Asia and Latin America are other areas cited as having potential for great growth in terms of digital theatre sound systems. Schwenk believes a country's willingness to embrace digital sound has less to do with its overall economic wealth and more to do with how important it views movies as a cultural value. Kirchner says DTS is doing "extremely well" in India, for example; although it's a relatively underdeveloped country, India is known for its great love of movies. Schwenk notes that more films are produced in India than in Hollywood.

ALL FOR ONE: The Kinepolis Group's new Le Chateau du Cinema outside Lille, France, boasts DTS, Dolby SR-D and SDDS installations.

China represents another potentially lucrative market for those involved in producing digital theatre sound systems. In a proposition that mirrors the wishes of many exhibitors stateside and their fellows abroad for a single industry format, the Chinese government plans to choose just one digital sound system to implement in its theatres.

Kirchner says that in countries like Thailand a new thirst for a more high-tech moviegoing experience has led many theatres to move from primitive mono sound directly to the digital format. Digital might seem particularly well suited to areas like Latin America and some countries in Asia, where elaborately produced action-adventure movies—the very genre that most boldly exhibits digital's ability to handle "big-bang" sound—are the rage.

Of course, there are new theatres in foreign markets that are opting for analog sound systems. But Kirchner states that many of these theatres are being built so that a digital system can be implemented at a later date.

SDDS' Richardson says doing business in most foreign markets is "surprisingly easy." She points out that the theatre exhibition and sonics segments of the international film industry are relatively small in terms of the number of key business players involved. Richardson adds that many of the overseas dealers with which Sony interacts speak very good English.

One exception on the foreign scene, however, is Latin America countries, where conducting business can be problematic at times. Sony has SDDS screens in Buenos Aires, Argentina, Mexico City, Mexico, and in Colombia, Brazil and Ecuador.

"It's pretty hard doing business [in Latin America]," Richardson says, due to the states of certain local economies. "You think you're getting somewhere, but it's really all talk. You always encounter some major problem with legalities with shipping, or some horrible tax that you have to pay.... [But] I wouldn't say it's dishonest.

"The standard of living is tough there, and money is short," she says. "If you take into consideration the devaluation of the peso since digital sound has been around, [digital] has come in at a very unstable time in Latin America."

Because each film print can be tailored to one, two or all of the digital sound systems, securing the rights to top-flight movies is a key component to the success of each digital sound company. DTS jumped off to a fast start in North America when it debuted with the blockbuster Universal release "Jurassic Park," and the company continues to lead the U.S. market in terms of the number of digitally equipped screens in operation. DTS also has exclusive deals to present all MGM-United Artists films and all Universal titles in its digital format.

Sony Cinema Products handles Sony movies (released via the studio's Columbia, TriStar, Triumph and Sony Classics labels) in SDDS and recently signed a deal to provide the digital sound for all Buena Vista productions. Dolby Digital does not yet have any exclusive film company deals, but that's hardly stopped it from handling the digital sound duties for a plethora of major and independent films.

The digital sound marketplace is such a complex one that it's unlikely any one format will triumph anytime soon. DTS' Kirchner, for example, believes the campaign to make digital sound the accepted standard for theatres around the globe is going to be a long one for DTS, Dolby and Sony.

"We still have a fair amount of work to do to make DTS a household word in each of these countries," he says. "They've been accustomed to listening to analog or mono sound. Part of [converting them to digital] involves having post-production equipment available in each of these countries so they can choose our [digital system]. We've actually made a substantial amount of headway in this area.

"It's going to take some years for the entire world to get there," Kirchner says. "But things are going to go digital. No question about it."

ON A ROLL

Tootsie Roll Industries: Celebrating 100 Years and Still Going Strong

By Pat Kramer

Melvin Gordon, chairman and chief executive officer of Tootsie Roll Industries, and Ellen Gordon, president and chief operating officer, are suckers for Tootsie Roll's Tootsie Pop.

When a year ends and a new one begins, there's always some unfinished business to attend to. BOXOFFICE couldn't let 1996 depart without making sure we noted the centennial anniversary of one of the most unique and perennial confectionery items to ever grace a moviehouse concession stand or stick to the bottom of a theatre seat. And so, as our readers look back on the year just passed, we send 1996 out and welcome 1997 in with a little something extra to chew on. Enjoy!—Ed.

In 1896, when Austrian immigrant Leo Hirshfield first started producing the chocolatey-chewy candy known as Tootsie Roll, he couldn't have foreseen the popularity and longevity his original candy recipe would have. Named after his five-year-old daughter who was nicknamed "Tootsie," the company has grown over the decades from a small store in New York City to a major corporation. With net annual sales in excess of $313 million, Tootsie Roll Industries Inc. has come a long way from the days when Tootsie Roll was hand-rolled and delivered to customers via horse-drawn carriage. The company now operates manufacturing plants in Massachusetts, New York, Tennessee, Chicago and Mexico and is a world leader in candy sales, producing more than 49 million Tootsie Rolls and 16 million lollipops per days.

It's a select circle of confections that have what it takes to become a candy classic. While there are many factors that have contributed to the Tootsie Roll's survival, Tootsie Roll Industries President and COO Ellen Gordon points not to marketing strategies or packaging but the candy itself. "The chocolatey chew is a very appealing taste," she points out.

The Tootsie Roll is now available in many different forms. The penny-candy "midgie" and the three-inch version are favorites, with six-inch and footlong sizes also popular on the market. And the Tootsie Pop, with its hard candy outside and Tootsie Roll center, is the world's best-selling lollipop.

Another key element in Tootsie Roll's century-long history was the candy's role in World War II. Selected as part of the standard-issue rations for its ability to withstand severe weather conditions and provide an instant energy boost, the Tootsie Roll became a mainstay for soldiers fighting in the trenches from 1942-1945. By the end of the war, everyone was familiar with the candy and production soared with renewed growth beyond pre-war levels.

As the company's distribution increased, movie theatres started stocking Tootsie Rolls as a regular concession item in the 1950s. When Melvin Gordon joined the company as chairman and chief executive officer in 1962, the company name was changed to Tootsie Roll Industries Inc. Soon, a new plant was opened in the Midwest and by the end of the decade, operations expanded to Mexico, Canada and the Far East.

The '70s started a new era for the company with the acquisition of other successful candy companies that were already well-known to the exhibition trade. In 1972, the Mason Division of Candy Corporation of America joined Tootsie Roll Industries, adding the ever-popular Mason Dots and Crows to the product line. With Ellen R. Gordon named Tootsie Roll's president and chief operating officer in 1978, further growth followed. In 1985, another candy manufacturer that got its start in the late 1800s, Cellas Confections Inc., was acquired, contributing their premiere chocolate covered cherries to the company and adding a new diversity in theatre concessions. Three years later, in 1988, the Charms Company, known for their bubblegum-filled lollipops, came under the company umbrella, which, when coupled with the Tootsie Pop, made Tootsie Roll Industries the global leader in lollipop production.

Major growth has continued in the '90s, with the company acquiring the caramel and chocolate brands of Warner-Lambert Company in 1993. This acquisition added Junior Mints to Tootsie Roll's line, another top-selling exhibition concession. Says Ellen Gordon of that acquisition, "Junior Mints was a very natural companion to our Mason Dots—they go hand in hand. Since we acquired them, they've been going strong in theatres." Other candies Warner-Lambert's purchase provided include Sugar Daddy, Sugar Babies and Charleston Chew candies.

A Tootsie Roll employee circa 1940

While acquisitions of other candy companies have built Tootsie Roll's product line, the development of new candies continues to be a major focus from within. The latest candy to satisfy those with a sweet tooth, says Melvin Gordon, is the Tootsie Caramel Apple pop which has proven to be a big hit. Adds Ellen Gordon, "We are presently planning some new products—specially designed for movie theatres—which we think they will be good companions to Junior Mints and Mason Dots."

While new products continue to generate public interest, Ellen Gordon says one aspect of their company which can't be overlooked is the familiarity they've built over generations of consumers. From their sponsorship of popular children's TV shows "Howdy Doody," "Rin Tin Tin," "Bozo," "The Pinky Lee Show" and "Rocky and Bullwinkle," children growing up in the '50s remember Tootsie Rolls as part of their childhood. "People really enjoy passing on candies to their children—candy which they enjoyed when they were children. And it keeps going on from generation to generation."

HOW FAR YOU GO DEPENDS ON WHERE YOU GET YOUR START.

1-800-854-CLUB

The Positive Place For Kids.

MERCHANDISER

Stein Industries designers gave this unit a large pre-packed display area with sliding plexi-glass doors. Featuring a stainless steel storage bin with an oversized heavy gauge stainless steel door and removable stainless steel chaff drawers gives added convenience. These units have the capability of keeping bulk popcorn warm and pre-packed bags and/or pre-packed buckets of popcorn at a constant temperature for warmth and crispness. The popcorn Merchandiser is available in a counter-top model, and helps concession stands sell hot popcorn during peak periods without having to fill bags or buckets.

STEIN INDUSTRIES INC.
22 Sprague Avenue, Amityville, NY 11701-0536
(516) 789-2222 FAX (516) 789-8888

Response No. 101

CINETECH INC
Projection
Planning
Equipment
Sound
Seating
Construction
Upgrading

Cinetech
Corporate Center
225 W. Howard Street
Stowe, PA 19464
800-432-4847
Fax 610-323-1664
email infomagic@AOL.com
www.cinetech-infomagic.com

SLIDE SHOW
GRAPHICS * TRIVIA
* INSTALLATION
* Call our InfoMagic Dept.
and ask for Brian Walters
or Bruce Fitzsimmons

Response No. 150

REVIEWS

★★★★★ OUTSTANDING
★★★★ VERY GOOD
★★★ GOOD ★★ FAIR
★ POOR
(no stars) BOMB

KAMA SUTRA ★★

Starring Sarita Choudhury, Indira Varma and Naveen Andrews. Directed by Mira Nair. Written by Helena Kriel and Mira Nair. Produced by Lydia Dean Pilcher. A Trimark release. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 115 min. Screened at the Toronto fest. Opens 2/14 ltd.

The great Indian book on the art of love-making is center stage in "Kama Sutra," but the movie, though full of nudity and sex, is strangely chaste. In 16th-century India, Princess Tara ("Mississippi Masala's" Sarita Choudhury) and servant girl Maya (newcomer Indira Varma) are inseparable companions. As they mature, the sexually precocious Maya begins to blossom while the sexually repressed Tara retreats into her shell. When Tara's betrothed, the king Raj Singh ("The English Patient's" Naveen Andrews), takes a long look at the sensuous Maya, the stage is set for a rift between the two women. And that's where "Kama Sutra" quickly fails. Maya and Tara part, and their combative drama disappears, too.

The history of the time is fascinating, and filmmaker Mira Nair's previous films ("Saalam Bombay," "Mississippi Masala" and "The Perez Family") enticingly mixed history with provocative tales of outcasts. But Nair's latest merely bores, playing like a Harlequin Romance, with lots of beautiful bodies—ravishingly shot by ace cinematographer Declan Quinn ("Vanya on 42nd Street")—and exclamatory, breathless emotions. (Stereotypically, it's the lower-class woman who knows how to have more fun.)

It doesn't help that the film is an English-language production. What would no doubt sound authentic in Hindi is too colloquial and contemporary in English. There's even an unlikely reference to Raj's undressing women with his eyes. Also, the film's treatment of intercourse, while reasonably explicit given the source material, isn't all that passionate.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

FOREVER MOZART ★★★★

Starring Ingrid Rubio, Carlos Fuentes and Agata Lys. Directed and written by Jean-Luc Godard. Produced by Alain Sarde and Ruth Waldenburger. A New Yorker release. Drama. French-language; English subtitles. Unrated. Running time: 85 min. Screened at the Toronto fest. Opens 2/14.

This feature from veteran iconoclast Jean-Luc Godard is as dense and complex as the rest of his later films, but it's more focused, perhaps due to its subject matter. Although Godard is not to everyone's taste, "Forever Mozart" should delight the filmmaker's loyal following.

The film has four distinct storylines, and in each an elderly director is trying to cast and shoot a movie about recent events in Bosnia. As is usual with Godard, there is no conventional plot or memorable character. Rather, Godard ruminates on the relationship between art and politics and on the role cinema plays in this exchange. Not surprisingly, "Forever Mozart" tackles ideas with intellectual rigor while retaining a suggestive and poetic air. But the highlight—thanks in part to exquisite cinematography by Christophe Pollock—is Godard's mastery of beautiful images.—Craig Vickers

SUBURBIA ★★

Starring Giovanni Ribisi, Steve Zahn, Amie Carey, Nicky Katt, Jayce Bartok and Parker Posey. Directed by Richard Linklater. Written by Eric Bogosian. Produced by Anne Walker-McBay. A Sony Classics release. Comedy/drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 120 min. Screened at the New York fest. Opens 2/7.

Director Richard Linklater has an obsession with philosophizing slouchers, and it's getting old. Helmer of 1991's "Slacker," 1993's "Dazed and Confused" and 1995's "Before Sunrise," Linklater seems unable to proceed beyond telling the story of pontificating teens and twentysomethings mired in inaction. The musing losers this time are particularly abhorrent: the all-id Buff (Steve Zahn of "That Thing You Do!"); racist/boozer/dropout Tim (Nicky Katt); untalented performance artist Sooze (Amie Carey); teen alkie Bee-Bee (Dina Spybey); and tripe-writing rock star Pony (Jayce Bartok).

Jeff (Giovanni Ribissi) sees the hopelessness for what it is but proves incapable of extricating himself, instead hanging with his wretched pals behind the Circle A (symbolizing an anarchy they're too lazy to enact). Although the actors do a good job portraying these parts, it's unclear what it is the characters possess that would make the audience care enough about them to invest two hours of their (hopefully more fulfiling) lives watching them.—Christine James

RIPE ★

Starring Monica Keena, Daisy Eagan and Gordon Currie. Directed and written by Mo Ogrodnik. Produced by Suzy Landa and Tom Razzano. A Trimark release. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 93 min. Screened at the Toronto fest. Opens January undated.

Bonding between females is a hot movie topic, and "Ripe" buys into the false motifs of such dramas, in which the men are usually bad and the women are their victims. Here, the two protagonists are 15-year-old fraternal twins, first seen as young children being terrorized by their abusive father. Years later, the parents are killed in a car crash, and the two girls decide to flee the accident and head out on their own. The events that follow are among the most absurd in any recent American movie. Tomboyish Rosie (Daisy Eagan) and innocent but seductive Violet (Monica Keena) stumble onto and freely roam an army base with the most lax discipline this side of Beetle Bailey, where they hook up with Pete (Gordon Currie), the base's longhaired handyman. Trouble follows.

Nothing in "Ripe" rings true. The movie is sometimes coy—Pete takes them to the base's annual dance—but other times it's graphic, as when Violet nearly gets raped. Writer/director Mo Ogrodnik seems to want to condemn a world that stunts the sexuality of young women, but the two actresses as leads are so inexpressive, and their situtations so unsubtle, that "Ripe" says nothing. This half-baked film never earns its title.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

THE CRUCIBLE ★★★★1/2

Starring Daniel Day-Lewis, Winona Ryder, Paul Scofield and Joan Allen. Directed by Nicholas Hytner. Written by Arthur Miller. Produced by Robert A. Miller and David V. Picker. A Fox release. Drama. Rated PG-13 for intense depiction of the Salem witch trials. Running time: 115 min. Adds NY 12/11; exp 12/20.

It is both unbelievable and unbelievably fortunate that Arthur Miller's 1953 play "The Crucible" was never adapted for the English-language screen until Miller and director Nicholas Hytner got around to it in 1996. Unbelievable because "The Crucible" is both Miller's most enduring work (in the sense that it is by far his most oft-produced play) and because "The Crucible" has always seemed too "epic" (i.e., too

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 54 / R-4)

REVIEWS

Bad Moon	R-7
The Crucible	R-2
Dear God	R-7
The English Patient	R-5
Forever Mozart	R-2
Hype	R-6
Kama Sutra	R-2
Mad Dog Time	R-6
The Mirror Has Two Faces	R-5
Normal Life	R-8
Ransom	R-5
Ripe	R-2
Set It Off	R-6
Space Jam	R-5
Stephen King's Thinner	R-8
Suburbia	R-2
Wm. Shakespeare's Romeo + Juliet	R-7

DAY AND DATE: 1/31

Everyone Says I Love You	R-4

FLASHBACK REVIEW

Star Wars (1977)	R-6

NEW FEATURE: RETROVIEWS

An index to upcoming movies already reviewed in BOXOFFICE	R-7

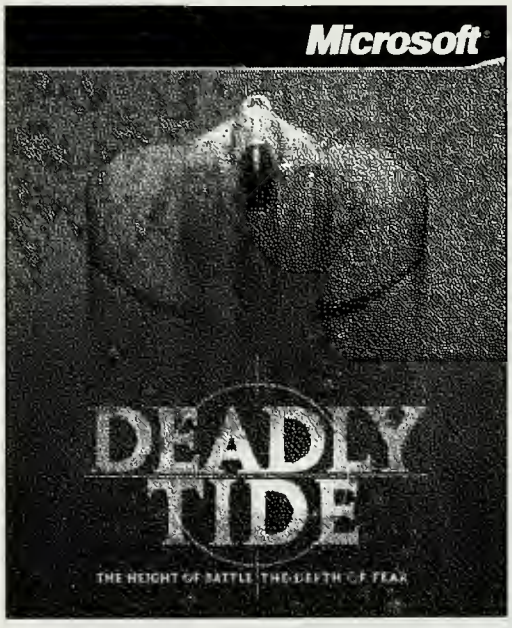
Hit http://www.boxoff.com every Friday for reviews of the latest releases!

Showmandiser Promotion of the Month

SHIFTING "TIDE"

UATC/Microsoft Venture Takes Showmanship High-Tech

By Ann Kwinn



Audio: They come from another world to destroy us. And as the battle to rule the earth wages, not in our skies but in our seas, only one person can save us from drowning.

Text: THAT PERSON IS YOU. Deadly Tide. Surfacing on a PC near you.

So goes a minute-long trailer with a difference, the linchpin of a movie-style promotion campaign for the hot new Microsoft CD-ROM "Deadly Tide." The simple act of creating a movie trailer for a CD-ROM makes an implicit comparison between the computer game and a feature film, thereby conferring on Microsoft's product a perceived level of greater quality. This fall, Microsoft partnered with the United Artists Theatre Circuit to show its "Deadly Tide" trailer on over 600 screens in eight major cities across the U.S. before action movies such as "Independence Day," "Mission: Impossible," "The Crow: City of Angels," "Chain Reaction" and "Escape from L.A." The trailer (which was also shown on monitors in UATC lobbies) was also supported by onscreen slide ads.

One of the more unique components of the entire campaign was a joint Microsoft/UATC event called "Stay and Play," in which "Deadly Tide" was projected on a UATC moviescreen, allowing theatregoers to play the game in real time in front of other members of the audience. No retrofitting was required, since a number of UATC theatres are outfitted with Proteus video projection equipment for teleconferencing, according to Chris DiCesare, Product Manager of Action Games at Microsoft Corporation. "I was concerned that it would be 'pixelated,'" says DiCesare, "that its quality wouldn't be as good as on the computer. But everyone I know was surprised."

Radio stations in the various cities gave away "twofer" tickets to the "Deadly Tide" event and to a sneak preview of "Extreme Measures," the Sony feature starring Gene Hackman and Hugh Grant, which preceded it. Attendees were handed raffle tickets upon entering the theatre. After the movie ended, a disc jockey serving as emcee called out three ticket numbers. The ticket holders became contestants for the game. Each "Deadly Tide" event lasted about a half hour to 45 minutes.

"I was concerned that it would be 'pixelated,' that its quality wouldn't be as good as on the computer. But everyone I know was surprised. ...People were transfixed by the screen."

"The involvement was different based on the market," says DiCesare. "In Minneapolis, people were transfixed by the screen. Some people didn't stay for the whole event, although they found it unique and alluring."

Microsoft also gave out movie-style posters, and contestants were eligible to win Microsoft gift-packs of six new holiday titles, or a truly grand Grand Prize: 500 United Artists theatre tickets, awarded to a single person.

DiCesare says that the whole idea started when the developers themselves, who had individually worked on such notable projects as "Robocop," "Total Recall," and the "Star Trek: The Next Generation" TV show, created a movie trailer for the product. DiCesare decided to re-work the trailer and take it on the road after investigating the high correlation between PC usage and movie attendance.

The game's target audience—males 18 to 30 years of age—was also a good match for action moviegoers.

DiCesare describes the game as having a "cinematic quality," which was a key reason why Microsoft saw the UATC promotion as a perfect fit. "It is 'high end,' even for the [very technologically-based] games business. Previously, I had promoted our 'Mortal Kombat' and 'NBA Jam' titles. This is a more visceral experience. The line I use is that it is a 'movie in a box.'"

"Cinematic" may seem like a somewhat curious description for a game that has no live action footage and no human actors. All of the visuals are CGI (computer generated imagery). "Think Toy Story," says a Microsoft rep.

Asked whether or not such an ambitious promotion was especially expensive, DiCesare says, "Both UA and Microsoft wanted it to be a success. They were trying it out. It was not so costly, especially to set it up. They are using the [video projection] equipment more and more for entertainment. These events differentiate them from the other chains."

So would DiCesare use a movie tie-in to promote a Microsoft title again? "It has a lot to do with having the right product. I really enjoyed working with UA. I would like to do something with them in the future."

filmic in scope) for the regional and community playhouses that have kept it alive over the years. And unbelievably fortunate because it is only now, after the passage of four decades and the end of the Cold War, that it's possible to view "The Crucible" as a work in its own right, without undue reference to the events in Miller's own personal and professional life that gave rise to it.

"The Crucible's" one previous filmic incarnation (financed in part by sources in then-communist East Germany) offers an instructive comparison. In 1956, a group of radical French intellectuals, including existentialist philosopher Jean-Paul Sartre and actors Yves Montand and Simone Signoret, adapted "The Crucible" for the French screen. What was it that drew Sartre, Montand and Signoret to Miller's text? The milieu? It could hardly have been that, because "The Crucible" is set in colonial Massachusetts and deals with the infamous Salem Witch Trials, a uniquely American moment of madness. Miller's use of language? Unlikely, given the fact that Sartre rewrote Miller into French. So why would a gaggle of French Communists settle on a mainstream play by a world-famous American author as a project to rally around? Simple. Because in those days "The Crucible," which dramatizes events that had become the American Left's primary metaphor for describing the political "witch-hunts" of the anti-communist McCarthy era, was viewed predominantly as a masterpiece of propaganda—a thinly veiled allegory of the suffering of Miller and his friends during the time of the American blacklist.

Structured as it is on the moral and judicial dilemma of naming names to an illegitimate kangaroo court, "The Crucible" does in fact bear the mark of Miller's political trials and those of his comrades in the '50s. But it's far too narrow a view of any work of art to say that it is only the sum of its influences; when a work is a true piece o literature, there is a qualitative differenc between the thing itself and that from whic it sprung, which is why we still read (an make movies from) Shakespeare's histor plays like "Richard III," while Holinshed' Chronicles, the history text from whic Shakespeare drew much of his event struc ture, is a title few can name and even fewe have read. The strange necromancy of th creative process transmutes the things i absorbs into something different and hope fully better; although it's useful to know that Miller wrote "The Crucible" in part a a direct response to seeing friends and pro fessional collaborators like director Eli Kazan name names to the House Un American Activities Committee in order t save their careers at the expense of others to view "The Crucible" solely from tha perspective is to deprive it of life.

The adaptation by Englishman Hytne ("The Madness of King George"), create in close collaboration with the 81-year-ol Miller himself, illustrates the point b largely ignoring any political undercurrent present in the original play and instead fo cusing on the moral struggles faced b Miller's based-on-fact creations. "The Cru cible" is everything Roland Joffe's "Th Scarlet Letter" could have been but wasn't where the Joffe film felt obliged to modif Nathaniel Hawthorne's original with mod ern asides about feminism and justice fo Native Americans, Hytner and Miller in habit the world of 17th-century Americ with an almost frightening exactness.

The result is a layered examination o mob hysteria and of the Puritan mindset o which America was founded and whic still dictates so much of our belief syste in this era of "family values" rhetoric Watching the madness of officially sanc tioned murder take hold of seemingly san and moral Salem, it's hard not to reflect o how easily even a carefully controlled so cial structure can break down when dis course devolves into the demonizing of "them" by an "us." The American McCar thy era was certainly one such period, bu "Tailgunner Joe" hardly had a monopol on the rhetoric of hate. It survives to thi day, in Zaire, Bosnia, the West Bank; i flares to life every time another arsonis burns down an American church.

Half a decade after the Cold War's end Miller, Hytner and their impeccable cas have made it possible to find in "Th Crucible" something far richer and mor rewarding than the simple political po lemic it has previously been taken for Simultaneously more epic and more inti mate than the play that gave rise to it, thi "Crucible" steers clear of using character as mouthpieces for politics, instead tellin its tragic tale in the starkest and most com pelling of human and dramatic terms. I there's any justice when Oscar time come around, "The Crucible" (which takes it name from the ancient alchemist's mixin tool) will perform an alchemy of its own turning movie footage into richly deserve Academy gold.—Ray Greene

DAY AND DATE: JAN. 31 WIDE

EVERYONE SAYS I LOVE YOU ★★★1/2

Starring Woody Allen, Goldie Hawn, Alan Alda and Julia Roberts. Directed and written by Woody Allen. Produced by Robert Greenhut. A Miramax release. Musical comedy. Rated R for one use of strong language. Running time: 100 min. Earlier opens 12/6 NY/LA.

An odd yet fulfilling musical comedy as only Woody Allen could conceive, "Everyone Says I Love You" combines affectionate nostalgia with modern neuroses to create his most purely enjoyable movie since 1987's "Radio Days." Not quite a traditional musical yet adhering to certain musical traditions, it's a strangely delightful hybrid of Allen's usual personal concerns and deeply felt tributes to early 20th-century popular songs.

Miramax's "Everyone Says I Love You."

The story might be similar to most "Woodys," in that couples separate, become involved with others, and separate again, but it's without the bitter bile of "Husbands and Wives" or the self-righteous preaching of "Crimes and Misdemeanors." Allen has more fun with family relationships here, yet an underlying seriousness prevents triviality from intruding. When the characters sing standards like "I'm Through With Love" and "All My Life," it's to express romantic desire and frustration that words alone couldn't properly convey.

The cast works magic as the most lilting ensemble of any Allen film. Though not trained singers, except for a radiant Goldie Hawn and charming Alan Alda, they deliver a touching sincerity and purity that make the numbers register. Most roles lack strong individuality or dimensions, but that's in keeping with the movie's lighter, buoyant spirit.

A deft mix of fantasy and reality, the bright colors create just the right stylized setting as the camera slowly glides in long shot through the musical numbers. Perhaps his style is too consciously daring to achieve a great film, but its delectable nuttiness makes the film irresistible.

As his characters search for elusive perfection, Allen's wit proves as razor sharp as ever, infusing his latest effort with a substantial amount of human insight and sensitivity that once again places him in the upper pantheon of moviemakers.—Dale Winogura

REVIEWS

SPACE JAM ★★★1/2

Starring Michael Jordan, Bill Murray, Bugs Bunny and Daffy Duck. Directed by Joe Pytka. Written by Leo Benvenuti & Steve Rudnick and Timothy Harris & Herschel Weingrod. Produced by Joe Medjuck and Daniel Goldberg. A Warner release. Animation/live-action fantasy/comedy. Rated PG for some mild cartoon language. Running time: 88 min.

TV commercial director Joe Pytka has spent so much time promoting products and condensing ideas into 30-second nuggets that he's forgotten that feature films both offer and require a lot more breathing time. Hence, "Space Jam," playful and funny as it is, leaves a moviegoer feeling like he's just watched a two-hour high-pressure sales pitch. What's more, the product it's pushing (NBA star Michael Jordan, done in Madison Avenue shorthand—slo-mo, slam-dunk sequences that echo every Nike ad made) isn't what people want to see. The central draws (pun intended) here are Warner's classic Looney Tune characters, whose overheated action makes Jordan's athletic artistry look downright dull.

Despite four writers ("The Santa Clause's" Steve Rudnick & Leo Benvenuti, and "Twins'" Timothy Harris & Herschel Weingrod), the plot doesn't do much, and the cel-painted story they create seems like a low-rent "Who Framed Roger Rabbit" adventure. But they provide Bugs Bunny, Daffy Duck et al. with plenty of occasions to crack wise and pull pranks, and those antics are a hoot despite their distracting 3-D rendering.—Thomas Quinn

THE MIRROR HAS TWO FACES ★★1/2

Starring Barbra Streisand, Jeff Bridges, Pierce Brosnan, George Segal and Lauren Bacall. Directed by Barbra Streisand. Written by Richard LaGravenese. Produced by Barbra Streisand and Arnon Milchan. A TriStar release. Romantic comedy. Rated PG-13 for language, sensuality and some mature thematic material. Running time: 126 min.

The obligatory scene in every Barbra Streisand movie is an astonished male hunk gasping words to the effect of "God, you're beautiful." That moment in "The Mirror Has Two Faces" is the raison d'etre of the entire film, which casts Streisand as a frumpy professor transformed into a knockout babe. In her third outing as director, Streisand has gone for broadly crowd-pleasing comedy and romance, playing off her own persona in a self-consciously congratulatory manner that will gratify her many diehard fans but will leave other viewers feeling shortchanged.

The rewrite by Richard LaGravenese ("A Little Princess") of the French film "Le Miroir a Deux Faces" tends to skate blithely along the shallow surface of the tale, seldom reaching for deeper emotion. Streisand's empathy with the loveless life of Columbia University romance literature prof Rose Morgan carries some conviction, especially in scenes with her aging but still glamorous mother (a superbly stylish Lauren Bacall) habitually denigrating her daughter's appearance. But, as any Streisand fan knows from the start, this second-hand Rose isn't really an ugly duckling; she's only dressed as one. After fitness training, she emerges, unsurprisingly, as a dead ringer for a certain glamorous Hollywood actress/singer/director.

The single novelty here is the grating partner with whom Streisand's character is saddled: fellow professor Gregory Larkin (Jeff Bridges), a dullish sort who's been burned by passion and wants only the refuge of a platonic marriage. Rose's desperate efforts to stir his libido become terribly demeaning, giving this "fine romance, with no kisses" a strangely retro aura of sexist humiliation. It takes all of Bridges' considerable charm to make his creepy embodiment of 1990s male sexual anxieties marginally bearable. Marvin Hamlisch's gushy score (which, as the press notes insist, "adapts the 'Love Theme' composed by Barbra Streisand") is even more of a turnoff.—Joseph McBride

HURLEY SCREEN

SUPERGLO
A durable pearlescent, smooth surface offers maximum reflectivity & light distribution.

SILVERGLO
A smooth, aluminized surface offering the highest reflectivity for special applications such as 3D.

MW-16
A heavy guage matte white surface offering excellent light distribution, image clarity, and color rendition.

Screen Framing • All Types Available
FAX # (410) 838-8079

Automatiket

Theatre Equipment Association

AUTOMATED HIGH SPEED U/L APPROVED TICKETING EQUIPMENT
Factory Service, the only authorized manufacturer and repair center.

AUTOMATICKET
A Division of Cemcorp

HURLEY SCREEN CORP.
A Subsidiary of Cemcorp

110 Industry Lane - P.O. Box 296
Forest Hill, MD 21050
410-838-0036 • 410-879-3022 • 410-879-6757 • 410-836-9333

Response No. 57

THE ENGLISH PATIENT ★★1/2

Starring Ralph Fiennes, Juliette Binoche, Willem Dafoe, Kristin Scott Thomas and Colin Firth. Directed and written by Anthony Minghella. Produced by Saul Zaentz. A Miramax release. Romance. Rated R for sexuality, some violence and language. Running time: 159 min. Expands wide 12/25.

"I am a bit of toast, my friend," an Allied interrogator is told by Count Laszlo de Almasy (Ralph Fiennes), a Hungarian explorer who has been reduced by flames—of a Saharan plane crash's fires and a desert romance's disastrous fervors—to a dying creature referred to as the English patient. The time is World War II; the place is Italy. Suspected of being a German collaborator, Almasy claims he can remember nothing, including his name. As a French-Canadian nurse, Hana (an underused Juliette Binoche), ministers to him in an abandoned Tuscan monastery, reading to her patient from a book of Herodotus he clutches, his tale—beginning in prewar North Africa, among a cartographic expedition by England's Royal Geographic Society—gradually pours forth.

Four people are involved: Almasy; an aristocratic English couple, Geoffrey and Katharine Clifton (Colin Firth and Kristin Scott Thomas) who apprentice themselves to this self-dubbed International Sand Club; and, in Cairo, a Canadian thief named Caravaggio (Willem Dafoe) spying for the English as war with Germany nears. Through a crisscross of events, involving Almasy and the married couple in a web of adultery and Almasy and Caravaggio on opposite ends of intrigue, all four come to death or dismemberment.

In its long, $33 million telling, what "The English Patient" (based on Michael Ondaatje's Booker Prize-winning novel) becomes is both more and less than a bodice buster. More, because there's a veneer of culture, intelligence and symbolism; less, in that the central romance is so subdued there's no bodice busting. Without the exoticism of era and locale, the tale would be quite ordinary.—Kim Williamson

RANSOM ★★★

Starring Mel Gibson, Rene Russo, Gary Sinise, Delroy Lindo, Lili Taylor and Brawley Nolte. Directed by Ron Howard. Written by Richard Price and Alexander Ignon. Produced by Scott Rudin, Brian Grazer and B. Kipling Hagopian. A Buena Vista release. Thriller. Rated R for graphic bloody violence and strong language. Running time: 121 min.

In this thriller, Mel Gibson stars as rich airline mogul Tom Mullen, who with his wife (Rene Russo) lives in the limelight. But, when kidnappers looking for a big payday abduct their young son, Sean (Brawley Nolte, actor Nick's son), they would trade all their wealth for his safe

FLASHBACK: JUNE 6, 1977
What BOXOFFICE said about...
STAR WARS

[George Lucas is readying a 20th-anniversary, digitally updated re-release of his famed sci-fi trilogy. "Star Wars," which launched the series in May 1977, makes its bow on Jan. 31, 1997. Here's what BOXOFFICE had to say about it two decades ago.]

The spirit of Buck Rogers lives on as writer/director George Lucas continues to pay homage to that gentleman of the 25th century in a wow of a sci-fi film. Using 70mm Panavision, with Technicolor prints by DeLuxe and ear-splitting Dolby sound, the Lucasfilm Ltd. production is one of the most entertaining films of its type yet done. The special effects, conjured by an army of experts, are nonstop, and the action is first rate. Few fantasies have been made with such a sense of humor, and the script contains virtually every cliche to be uttered in a war film or adventure epic.

The actors—especially Harrison Ford in a Chevy Chase-like performance—add to the fun by delivering their lines in an offhanded way. The pace rarely lets up, because the Gary Kurtz production moves as quickly as the serials from which it was patterned. Credit for the success of the film must begin with Lucas and continue down the lengthy participant list to DePatie-Freleng for master film effects. Alec Guinness, Peter Cushing, Mark Hamill, Harrison Ford, Carrie Fisher, Anthony Daniels and David Prowse star. The film was shot in Tunisia, Guatemala, Death Valley (Calif.) and EMI Elstree Studios in Borehamwood, England. A symphonic score is provided by John Williams. "Star Wars" should be a very big success.

EXPLOITIPS

The special effects are superb and can be the biggest draw. But don't overlook the other elements. The soundtrack is available from 20th Century Records and Tapes.

CATCHLINES

A Long Time Ago In A Galaxy Far, Far Away....

REVIEWS

return. Yet, when Tom realizes that paying the ransom might in fact expedite his son's murder, he takes a different tack and goes on the offensive, annoucing the demanded $2 million instead will be a bounty on the abductors' heads. This panics his wife, and FBI agent Lonnie Hawkins (Delroy Lindo) also tries to convince Tom that he's made a fatal mistake. But the audience—privy to the kidnappers' scheme—knows he's done the right thing.

Lili Taylor, Liev Schreiber, Donnie Wahlberg and Evan Handler make an unlikely kidnapping crew for ingenious copgone-bad Jimmy Shaker (Gary Sinise), but the eclectic characters do provide dark entertainment value. Meanwhile, Shaker's unstable malevolence provides tension.

Although not quite edge-of-your-seat caliber, this two-hour thriller is well-paced and well-acted, with superior, powerfully tense performances by Gibson and Sinise. An otherwise climactic ending trails off, but overall "Ransom" is a satisfying mix of suspense, human drama, character study and the ever-popular vigilante-style comeuppance.—Christine James

MAD DOG TIME ★★★

Starring Jeff Goldblum, Richard Dreyfuss, Gabriel Byrne, Ellen Barkin and Larry Bishop. Directed and written by Larry Bishop. Produced by Judith Rutherford James. A UA release. Comedy. Rated R for violence, language and sexuality. Running time: 93 min.

The actor credit scroll for this UA pickup could really have been prefaced "in order of disappearance." Key characters are killed off so fast in "Mad Dog Time" that an audience can be forgiven for wondering who (if anyone) is going to be left by the end.

Offbeat humor spliced with full-face shots and slow motion coupled with a high-caliber cast make Larry Bishop's writing/directing debut a worthy one. The film also pays effective homage to the original Rat Pack (of which Bishop's father, Joey Bishop, was a member), in part by including jazzy tunes on the soundtrack from Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin and Sammy Davis Jr.

Bishop succeeds in creating a timeless period movie; the audience is transported to a place and time that bear resemblances to the prohibition era, but the accents are those of contemporary technology. Patrons might be confused by some elements—"Mad Dog Time" straddles the borderlines of the art-house and mainstream—but suspense, tension and cunning humor hold it together.—Dwayne E. Leslie

HYPE ★★1/2

Featuring Soundgarden, Pearl Jam, Nirvana and Mudhoney. Directed by Doug Pray. Produced by Steve Helvey. A CFP release. Documentary. Unrated. Running time: 84 min.

Born in Seattle in the mid-'8s and popularized by bands like Nirvana, Alice in Chains and Green River, "grunge" music's garage band sound has metamorphosized into a multibillion-dollar industry. Featured prominently in this film are grunge "founding fathers" Bruce Pavitt and Jonathan Poneman of Seattle independent label Sub Pop Records, which introduced the music to the rest of the world through creative marketing strategy that spurred the flannel-shirted fashion statement and eventual ascension of the music/art form to MTV, Vogue and Wall Street.

Through numerous interviews with musicians, fans, music promoters, footage of live performances, sound recordings and still photos, "Hype" shows the cheesy, ludicrous, dark and decadent sides of grunge as well as the intense attraction and influence it has on its fans. Filmmaker Doug Pray adopts a tongue-in-cheek approach in his modest but effective documentary.—Pat Kramer

SET IT OFF ★★★

Starring Jada Pinkett, Queen Latifah, Vivica A. Fox and Kimberly Elise. Directed by F. Gary Gray. Written by Kate Lanier and Takashi Bufford. Produced by Dale Pollock and Oren Koules. A New Line release. Action/drama. Rated R for strong graphic violence, pervasive language, some sex and drug use. Running time: 121 min.

Set in the Los Angeles projects, this film follows sensible Stony ("The Nutty Professor's" Jada Pinkett), trying to raise enough money to send her brother to UCLA; lesbian Cleo (rap artist Queen Latifah), who wants to turn her car into a hotrod; single mother Tisean (Kimberly Elise), who can't afford daycare; and Frankie (Vivica A. Fox of "Independence Day"), just fired from her bank-teller job. Tired of being victims of circumstance, the girls decide to knock off a few banks.

Shootouts, car chases, fast getaways: "Set It Off" is a typical action film. Yet Director F. Gary Gray ("Friday") and screenwriters Kate Lanier ("What's Love Got to Do With It") and Takashi Bufford ("House Party 3") don't glorify the brutal violence or turn their criminals into heroines. The tense, fast-paced film also depicts the tough problems women face without male-bashing or pity.—Lea Russo

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE'S ROMEO + JULIET ★★★

Starring Leonardo DiCaprio, Claire Danes, Brian Dennehy, John Leguizamo, Pete Postlethwaite, Paul Sorvino and Diane Venora. Directed by Baz Luhrmann. Written by Craig Pearce & Baz Luhrmann. Produced by Gabriella Martinelli and Baz Luhrmann. A Fox release. Drama. Rated PG-13 for scenes of contemporary violence and some sensuality. Running time: 120 min.

It seems that every generation feels the need to recast "Romeo and Juliet" in its own image and likeness. In the 1950s, when "juvenile delinquency" was postwar America's hot-button issue, Jerome Robbins and Leonard Bernstein crossed the rudiments of Shakespeare's plot with the attitudes and language of "Rebel Without a Cause" and called it "West Side Story." In the '60s, reputed Shakespearean purist Franco Zeffirelli cast dewy-eyed teenagers Olivia Hussey and Leonard Whiting in his more conventional production, then marketed it to the flower-power set as a mod rendering of eternal teenage torment and the "generation gap."

Now comes "Strictly Ballroom" director Baz Luhrmann's '90s rendering of what he calls "William Shakespeare's Romeo + Juliet," a gun-crazy, up-to-the-minute cine-collage with art direction that crosses "Reservoir Dogs" and "Mad Max," camerawork and editing blending Hong Kong action ace John Woo with Jean-Luc Godard, and a grafted-on recasting of Shakespeare's event structure by way of urban-themed '70s-era TV shows like "Baretta" and "Starsky and Hutch." Postmodernism and the odd inflection borrowed from MTV struggle for mastery here, creating a visual pastiche of a very high order—a gleeful pictorial souffle comprised of contemporary movie violence and Elizabethan melodrama that succeeds quite nicely as long as Luhrmann sticks to his (very large) guns.

What's for the most part missing, though, from this trigger-happy take on one of literature's great romances is something pretty fundamental: romance. Luhrmann is so preoccupied with the brute exhilaration of style and decor that he can scarcely be bothered with the more measured, poetic cadences of his source material.

Nowhere is this more obvious than in the work of his two leads. The youthful gorgeousness of Leonardo DiCaprio and Claire Danes as Romeo and Juliet makes them visually perfect, which unfortunately seems to be almost all that has been asked of them. When it comes to hip wardrobes, cool lighting and intricate staging, Luhrmann has spared no effort to make his leads look good. But, when it comes to the rich, dense and lyrical pentameters of their lines, he leaves them to fend for themselves—a dangerous tactic even with experienced Shakespearean actors, and an all but fatal one for iambic novices like DiCaprio and Danes. The visual inventiveness of Luhrmann's staging is so ravishing that the at times tin-eared line readings of his principals seem like an annoying distraction, which is a fairly remarkable achievement of sorts, given the fact that they are reciting some of the most beautiful romantic poetry ever written.

Ah, well. Luhrmann's "Romeo + Juliet" may be full of sound and fury, but it doesn't signify nothing. As perhaps the most extreme movie modernization of a Shakespearean work, Luhrmann's effort will very likely linger as an enduring curio in moviedom's Shakespearean canon.

As a virtual who's who of nascent and emerging film stars, this "Romeo + Juliet" will also almost certainly be looked back on as a stepping stone in some soon-to-be-hot movie careers. And, as perhaps the most kinetic and visually daring major studio film of the year, "Romeo + Juliet" is almost sure to be remembered as the turning point for a brazen new cinematic talent: Luhrmann's.—Ray Greene

DEAR GOD ★★★

Starring Greg Kinnear, Laurie Metcalf, Maria Pitillo and Tim Conway. Directed by Garry Marshall. Written by Warren Leight and Ed Kaplan. Produced by Steve Tisch. A Paramount release. Comedy. Rated PG for language and mild thematic elements. Running time: 111 min.

Though well-intentioned and generally likable, "Dear God" could have been more than its fluffy final edit. In this comedy, charismatic con man Tom Turner (Greg Kinnear) reluctantly agrees to get a job (to avoid going to jail). Working in the U.S. postal service's Dead Letter Office (final home of missives to Santa, Elvis, the Easter Bunny and God), Tom sets about purloining goodies; nearly caught by his mysterious supervisor (Hector Elizondo), he pretends he's merely returning the items and sends them off to a random addressee—as it turns out, an impoverished mother (Ellen Cleghorne) who'd written to the Lord about her plight. A fellow co-worker (Laurie Metcalf) witnesses Tom's actions; believing he's on a mission to do good work, the entire ragtag misfit team of DLO employees soon join in, reading letters addressed to God and trying to aid those in need. Meanwhile, Tom is more interested in beautiful single mom Gloria (Maria Pitillo). But she sees through him, and her honest nature catalyzes him to make a change.

Unfortunately, what weakens the strong premise of this film is the lack of realistic characters. The love-interest plot is empty, and certainly incapable of inciting a 180-degree personality change. The postal workers are mostly cartoons, and the recipients of assistance aren't that sympathetic. Scenarios that could stir emotion are cut short by wackiness, probably the film's main flaw. "Dear God" could have been a powerfully affecting movie had it been a drama with comedic elements.—Christine James

BAD MOON ★★

Starring Mariel Hemingway, Michael Pare and Mason Gamble. Directed and written by Eric Red. Produced by James G. Robinson. A Warner release. Horror. Rated R for horror violence and gore, brief language, and a scene of sexuality. Running time: 79 min.

A standard, predictable fright flick, "Bad Moon" comes to life in the last two reels with a fair number of assured scares and jolts. Though hokum is kept to a minimum by writer/director Eric Red (adapting Wayne Smith's novel "Thor"), a lack of stereotypes doesn't make up for unimaginative plotting and limited-dimension characters.

A gory jungle prologue has photojournalist Ted Harrison ("Children of the Damned's" Michael Pare) mauled by a werewolf. Back home in the Pacific North-

RETROVIEWS

Welcome to a new-for-1997 review feature that reflects BOXOFFICE's continuing commitment to bring you movie reviews as early as possible. During the past year, we've already covered the following December and January releases; to help you locate those critiques, the alphabetical list below notes the issue of BOXOFFICE in which the review appeared and provides distributor and release date info.

"Albino Alligator": Miramax, 12/13 Oscar run, 1/17 exp; see Nov. 1996.
"Angel Baby": CFP, 1/10 NY/LA/Seattle; see April 1996.
"Citizen Ruth": Miramax, 12/13 NY/LA/Omaha, 12/25 exp; see Nov. 1996.
"Farmer & Chase": Arrow, 1/10 NY/SF; see Dec. 1996.
"Flipping": Dove, January undated; see Nov. 1996.
"I'm Not Rappaport": 12/26 NY/LA, 1/24 exp; see Nov. 1996.
"johns": First Look, 1/31 NY/LA; see April 1996.
"Kolya": Miramax, 1/24 NY/LA; see Dec. 1996.
"La Ceremonie": New Yorker, 12/20 NY/LA; see Nov. 1995.
"Les Voleurs" ("Thieves"): Sony Classics, 12/25 NY; see July 1996.
"Mother": Paramount, 12/25 NY/LA, 1/10 exp; see Nov. 1996.
"Nothing Personal": Trimark, January undated; see July 1996.
"The Portrait of a Lady": Gramercy, 12/27 ltd, 1/17 exp; see Nov. 1996.
"Ridicule": Miramax, 12/20 & 12/25 exp; see Aug. 1996.
"Shine": Fine Line, 12/25 & 1/17 exp; see April 1996.
"Sling Blade": Miramax, 12/13 exp; see Nov. 1996.
"Some Mother's Son": Columbia, 12/26 ltd; see Aug. 1996.
"The Substance of Fire": Miramax, 12/6 NY/LA, 1/10 exp; see Nov. 1996.
"The Whole Wide World": Sony Classics, 12/25 NY; see Nov. 1996.

Review Digest

Story-type key: (Ac) Action; (Ad) Adventure; (An) Animated; (C) Comedy; (D) Drama; (Doc) Documentary; (F) Fantasy; (Hor) Horror; (M) Musical; (My) Mystery; (R) Romance; (Sat) Satire; (SF) Science Fiction; (Sus) Suspense; (Th) Thriller; (W) Western.

TITLE/MPAA DISTRIBUTOR 5 Excellent 4 Very Good 3 Good 2 Fair 1 Poor	RUN TIME	GENRE	REVIEWED IN ISSUE	BOXOFFICE	VARIETY	H. REPORTER	L.A. TIMES	N.Y. TIMES	USA TODAY	AVERAGE	TOTAL BOXOFFICE $*
The Associate PG-13 (BV)	114	C	12-96	3	3	2	3	2	2	2.5	11.9
Big Night (Gol)	110	D	9-96	3			4	3		3.4	9.2
Bound R (Gra)	111	Th	4-96	3	4	4	4	3	4	3.6	3.4
The Chamber R (Uni)	111	D Th	12-96	3	3	2	2	3	3	2.7	14.1
D3: Mighty Ducks PG (BV)	104	C	12-96	2	3	3		3		2.8	20.8
Dear God PG (Par)	111	C	1-97	3	3	3	2	2	1	2.3	6.5
Emma (Mir)	111	R C	8-96	4	4	3	3	3	5	3.7	22.1
The English Patient R (Mir)	159	R	1-97	3	3	4	4		4	3.6	0.3
Extreme Measures R (Col)	110	Th	11-96	2	3	2	2	3		2.4	17.4
First Kid PG (BV)	101	C	11-96	3	3	3	2	3	2	2.7	24.9
First Wives Club PG (Par)	105	C	11-96	3	3	4	2	3	3	3.0	99.4
Fly Away Home PG (Col)		D	10-96	3	4	4	4	4		3.8	23.4
The Funeral R (Oct)	96	D	10-96	2	3	4	3	4		3.2	0.4
Get On the Bus R (Col)	121	D	11-96	4	4	3	3	3		3.4	5.7
The Ghost & The Darkness R (Par)	117	AcAd	12-96	3	3	3	2	4	2	2.8	36.2
The Glimmer Man R (WB)	91	Ac	12-96	3	2	3	2	2		2.4	19.8
High School High PG-13 (TS)	86	C	12-96	3	2	2	2	3	2	2.8	19.1
Hunchback G (BV)	88	Ani	8-96	3	3	3	3	2	5	3.2	98.8
ID4 PG-13 (Fox)	143	AcSF	9-96	2	3	4	3	4		3.2	304.7
Jack PG-13 (BV)	111	CD	10-96	2	2	2	2	2	2	2.0	57.2
Jude R (Gra)	123	D	8-96	3	3	4	3	2	2	2.8	0.3
Larger Than Life PG (UA)	94	C	12-96	3	2	2		2	2	2.2	7.9
Lone Star R (SPC)	134	D	7-96	4	4		4	5	3	4.0	12.7
Long Kiss Goodnight R (NL)	120	Ac	12-96	3	3	3	3	3	2	2.8	31.4
Looking for Richard PG-13 (Fox)	113	Doc	7-96	4		2	2	4	3	3.0	0.9
Mad Dog Time R (UA)	93	C	1-97	3	1	2	3			2.3
Matilda PG (Tri)	100	C F	10-96	4	4	4	2	3	3	3.3	32.9
Michael Collins R (WB)	132	D	10-96	4	3	4	4	3	2	3.3	9.5
Microcosmos (Mir)	74	Doc	10-96	3	4	3	4			3.5	0.4
The Mirror Has Two Faces PG-13 (TS)	126	R C	1-97	2	2	4	2		3	2.6	12.2
Mother Night R (FL)	114	D	12-96*	4			3	3		3.3	0.2
The Nutty Professor PG-13 (Uni)	96	C	9-96	3	4	4	3	3	4	3.5	128.6
Phenomenon PG (BV)	117	D	9-96	4	2	4	2	2		2.8	103.8
Ransom R (BV)	121	Th	1-97	3	4	4	3	4	3	3.5	67.1
Romeo + Juliet PG-13 (Fox)	120	D	1-97	3	3	3	3	2	3	2.8	31.4
Secrets and Lies R (Oct)	142	D	7-96	4	4	4	4	4		4.0	4.0
Set It Off R (NL)	121	Ac D	1-97	3	3	2	3	2		2.6	20.8
Sleepers R (WB)	146	D	12-96	3	4	2	2	2	3	2.7	47.1
Space Jam PG (WB)	88	F C	1-97	3	3	3			3	3.0	27.5
Surviving Picasso R (WB)	124	D	11-96	3	4	2	3	3		3.0	1.8
Swingers R (Mir)	96	C	11-96	3	3	4	3	3	3	3.2	1.6
That Thing You Do! PG (Fox)	105	D	11-96	3	4	3	3	3	3	3.2	23.9
Thinner R (Par)	92	Hor	1-97	1	2	2	3	3		2.2	14.2
A Time to Kill R (WB)	142	D	9-96	2	4	4	2	3		3.0	108.6
Tin Cup R (WB1)	134	R C	10-96	2	3	3	2	3	3	2.8	53.8
To Gillian... R (Tri)	105	D	10-96	2	2	3	2	2	2	2.2	4.0
Trainspotting R (Mir)	93	D	7-96	4	4	3	4	3		3.6	16.2
Trees Lounge R (Ori)	89	D	10-96	2	3	3		4		3.0	0.6
Twelfth Night PG (FL)	125	C	11-96	3	2	3	2	3	3	2.7	0.3
2 Days.. Valley R (MGM)	105	C D	11-96	2	3	2	3	3		2.6	11.0
Unhook the Stars R (Mir)	105	D	12-96	3	4	4	3	2	3	3.2

 Total boxoffice, in millions, as of Nov. 19, 1996

REVIEWS

west mountains, Harrison moves next door to his sister Janet (Mariel Hemingway), her son Brett ("Dennis the Menace's" Mason Gamble) and Thor, their pet German Shepherd (a dog named Primo). When several neighbors are discovered killed in brutal fashion, police suspicion falls on the pooch, but only the smart canine (and the audience) knows the culprit.

There are few surprises here, but Red's direction at least has solid technical acumen and some polish, taking advantage (with the aid of cinematographer Jan Kiesser) of British Columbia locations in atmospheric Panavision. Red's visual style provides tense moments, notably when Pare and the dog eye each other with fear and daring.

Pare eventually brings credible animalistic shadings as his character becomes more threatening. But Hemingway is just awkward and uncomfortable, and Gamble can't do much with a thankless part. But Primo must be the most expressive German Shepherd since Rin Tin Tin, splendidly embodying a loyal, intelligent canine. That makes the film a better tribute to animal courage than a "B" movie.—Dale Winogura

STEPHEN KING'S THINNER ★

Starring Robert John Burke, Joe Mantegna and Lucinda Jenney. Directed by Tom Holland. Written by Michael McDowell and Tom Holland. Produced by Richard P. Rubinstein and Mitchell Galin. A Paramount release. Horror. Rated R for horror violence and gore, language and sexuality. Running time: 92 min.

Scarcely a moment of terror or suspense infiltrates this cheap and inept potboiler, which fails to achieve any of Stephen King's offbeat sensitivity to character and situation. Though director/cowriter Tom Holland closely follows the 1985 novella (published under King's "dark half" pseudonym, Richard Bachman), roles here are reduced to venal stereotypes, allowing the story to become even more skeletal than it was on paper.

Displaying the absence of taste and talent he did in t so-called horror classi "Fright Night" and "Chil Play," Holland confus forced hysterics with nigl marish frenzy. His pedestri cinematic technique a slack pacing could be ov looked if he had any imagin tion, but his exaggerat melodramatics and ugly se sibilities mangle this tale surely as he did on TV wi King's superior novella, "T Langoliers." The one creati touch that Holland adds is sweet-revenge climax, b it's too little, too late in a st pid and hateful slab of revo ing diversion that ranks wi "Christine" and "Firestarte as the worst King adapt tions.—Dale Winogura

NORMAL LIFE ★

Starring Luke Perry a Ashley Judd. Directed John McNaughton. Writte by Peg Haller and Bo Schneider. Produced Richard Maynard. A Fi Line release. Drama. Rated for scenes of violence, sex ality, drug use and languag Running time: 100 min.

A story of how one youn couple—a policeman (" Seconds'" Luke Perry) an his beautiful bride ("Heat's Ashley Judd)—turn to arme robbery to afford a split-lev suburban life would see promising as a more seriou retake on "Fun With Dick an Jane." But "Normal Life lacks even the most rudimen tary sense of drama.

Hitchcock once likened h films to "real life, but with a the dull bits snipped out." N only have director John Mc Naughton ("Mad Dog an Glory") and writers Pe Haller and Bob Schneider le the dull bits in aplenty, b they've also failed to lend an critical distance, motivation credibility or narrative coher ence to the events.

Other than the most basi aspect of the story—Co Turns Criminal—there's n dramatic movement. Charac terization is even more iner Judd's Pam could be an inter esting mess but, once the ru diments of her character ar established early on, it's al ways more of the same, wit subsequent scenes revealin nothing new.—Alex Albanes

NATIONAL NEWS

DORAN AND MANCUSO: RE-UNITED

MGM/UA chairman and CEO Frank Mancuso continued to put his stamp on the studio's executive roster with the hiring of Lindsay Doran to replace John Calley as president of United Artists.

Doran and Mancuso go back to Mancuso's days running Paramount in the late 1980s, during which time Mancuso was studio chairman and Doran was a production executive. After leaving Paramount, Doran joined Sydney Pollack's Mirage Entertainment in 1989 and served as Mirage's president for seven years before exiting her post in October of 1996. Industry speculation had been rife with rumors that Doran was a top contender for the UA post, with Disney-based Caravan Pictures head Roger Birnbaum the other noteworthy candidate. The UA presidency was far from Doran's only post-Mirage job opportunity; Sony, DreamWorks and Paramount are all known to have been vying for her services.

Doran's producing resume includes the hits "Dead Again" and "The Firm" at Mirage, as well as work during her days as a Paramount executive on such titles as "Pretty in Pink," "Planes, Trains & Automobiles" and "Ghost." In 1996, Doran received a Golden Globe award for producing the Emma Thompson-starring "Sense and Sensibility," which later won an Oscar for best adapted screenplay.

In an ironic twist, Doran's assumption of the UA presidency will unite her professionally with her former Mirage partner's daughter Rebecca Pollack, who serves currently as UA's VP of production.

DREAMWORKS: RUDE AWAKENINGS?

The announced plans for the building of a new, state-of-the-art studio production facility at Playa Vista, Calif. by the DreamWorks SKG "dream team" may undergo radical alteration including a possible relocation of the facility owing to a combination of factors including growing unrest among development company Maguire Thomas Partners and DreamWorks' outside strategic partners, and slowdowns brought about by environmentalist protests and legal actions.

Such high-profile participants in the original Playa Vista plan as IBM and James Cameron's Digital Domain effects house have already opted not to take space in Playa Vista according to some reports. At issue are a variety of scheduling and financial uncertainties, including rental pricing for space on the property; the date of availability for rental space; and the restructuring of debt incurred on the Playa Vista site back in the late 1980s and early 1990s, before DreamWorks became involved with developing the location.

A major source of frustration for the DreamWorks principals, Maguire Thomas, and other proposed participants has been the failure of Maguire Thomas to meet its originally projected construction deadlines. When plans for the Playa Vista location were announced last December with much fanfare, the groundbreaking for the site was to occur in June of 1996. Recent statements from Maguire Thomas now indicate that this schedule may have been over-optimistic by approximately almost a full year, with groundbreaking expected to occur no earlier than May 1997 if the Playa Vista development partnership holds together.

Maguire Thomas stated publicly that the delays were primarily based on the complexity of the overall Playa Vista development blueprint, which includes plans for an integrated, fiber-optically connected "community of the future" designed to exploit state of the art developments on the Internet. Among the rumors that were flying at press time was one that DreamWorks was reconsidering creating its production facility on a site located in the San Fernando Valley, which such other studios as Warner Bros., the Walt Disney Co. and Universal already call home.

NEW LINE VS. BOTTOM LINE

1996 proved a troublesome year for New Line Cinema, with the company's worst-ever financial performance and continuing uncertainty over ownership issues related to Ted Turner's alliance with Time Warner.

Though the break-out success of the female gangsta flick "Set It Off" in late fall provided some light at the end of 1996's fiscal tunnel, 1996 was expected to be the first year in the last 30 that New Line actually lost money. In large part, the rocky year is attributable to New Line's recent embrace of high-profile, mega-budget, talent-driven projects—the exact opposite of the low-risk, niche-marketing philosophies that proved so successful for New Line before the Turner buyout in 1993. Leading the list of budget-fueled boxoffice failures was director Renny Harlin's Geena Davis-starring action pic "The Long Kiss Goodnight," which cost almost $100 million to produce and market, according to published reports, and which was expected at press time to gross less than $35 million domestically. Other pricey studio misses in '96 included "The Island of Dr. Moreau," which grossed less than $30 million on a $50 million production budget, and Walter Hill's "Last Man Standing," for which Bruce Willis was paid a reported $16 million to star in a film that took in $18 million at the U.S. boxoffice.

Adding to New Line's worries was the question of who would end up owning the company in the wake of Ted Turner's successful closing of his deal to sell New Line parent Turner Entertainment to Time-Warner. Though technically a part of Time-Warner/Turner at press time, it was a foregone conclusion that New Line would either be sold off or required to find a deep-pocket financial partner as it moves out of the Time/Turner fold. New Line's depressed earnings in 1996 were expected to make the urgent task of seeking a compatible buyer that much more difficult.

Still, New Line's long history of profitability and the formidable marketing and producing track record of its principal executives had most industry observers betting the company would regroup and rebound from its year of substantial but not insurmountable reversals. The surprisingly strong opening of "Set It Off" proved that New Line still knows how to develop and create a niche-market winner when it puts its mind to the task.

LATE FALL B.O.: HELD TO "RANSOM"

Late fall boxoffice shot into the stratosphere in mid-November with the stunning $34 million opening weekend for Buena Vista's Mel Gibson starrer "Ransom." The Ron Howard-directed thriller became the highest-grossing live-action opener in Disney's history, with only the studio's animated champ "The Lion King" pulling bigger first weekend numbers for Buena Vista. A savvy, risk-taking marketing campaign initiated by production chief Joe Roth (who had Buena Vista begin running ads as far back as last summer) was credited with the breakout success, along with a carefully orchestrated publicity blitz by Gibson, and the drawing power of the Gibson and Howard names.

"Ransom" entered a marketplace that had already been picking up steam as it headed toward the holiday season, thanks to the surprise Fox hit "Romeo and Juliet" and robust early returns for Barry Levinson's Warner drama "Sleepers." The real sleeper of the late fall, though, was New Line's "Set It Off," a $10 million production that grabbed $11.1 million in its first five days of release, and which has spawned a hit soundtrack album to boot.

The successes of the first half of November had exhibitors crossing their fingers that the upcoming Thanksgiving to Christmas release frame would put 1996 back on track. October of 1996 was an abysmal month, with U.S. domestic performance coming in at just under $340 million, a five-year low. But hope springs eternal for plucky U.S. exhibitors; with eagerly-awaited holiday titles still in the offing, conventional wisdom was that 1996 might offer-up a green (meaning greenbacks) Christmas after all.

INTERNATIONAL BLOC BUSTERS

Meanwhile, mega-budget U.S. product continued to find extremely lucrative favor with overseas audiences in 1996, making for what U.S. distribution execs were terming an amazing international year. As it did in the U.S., "Independence Day" set the global pace, invading moviehouses to the tune of some US$366 million in overseas receipts during its first 12 weeks of international release. "Mission: Impossible" was closing on the equivalent of US$250 million after 17 weeks; "Twister" had churned up US$226.8 million after 14 weeks; "The Rock" was rock-solid at US$185 million after 16 weeks; and "Eraser," the Arnold Schwarzenegger action hit, had US$132 million stamped indelibly on its ledgers during 11 weeks of play.

The growing importance of the international market is demonstrated by the fact that virtually every one of the above named blockbusters had already outperformed its 1996 U.S. domestic gross via overseas bookings at press time, with cash registers still ringing for each film worldwide.

EXHIBITION BRIEFINGS

NATIONAL AMUSEMENTS ADDS 74 SCREENS IN FOUR COUNTRIES

National Amusements has opened six new theatres with a total of 74 screens in four countries on three continents. In October, the 14-screen Farmingdale Multiplex Cinemas opened in Long Island, N.Y.; in November, North Attleborough, Mass.' 12-screen Showcase Cinemas opened its doors; following that was the 12-plex Showcase Cinemas Reading in England and a 14-plex in Scotland named the Showcase Cinemas Glasgow East. In December, a Showcase Cinemas 10-plex opened in Santiago, Chile, as well as a 12-plex in Cincinnati, Ohio. The new sites are part of National Amusements' long-term expansion plan. The Scotland and Chile sites are National Amusements' first forays into those markets.

GCC PROMOTES NEW CHICAGOLAND THEATRES WITH TV INFOMERCIAL

General Cinema Theatres took an innovative tack in promoting the openings of the Northbrook Court 14 in Northbrook, Ill. and the Randhurst 16 in Prospect, Ill., by entering the realm of the infomercial, an advertising medium no longer restricted to hair products and exercise equipment. Featuring holiday movie previews, a behind-the-scenes look at how GCC designs, builds and operates its theatres, and a sneak preview of the two megaplexes, the half-hour informercial, produced by MarkeTVision Direct Inc. and titled "General Cinemas' Coming Attractions," aired four times in November on Chicago's CBS affiliate WBBM TV-2. The Northbrook Court 14 and Randhurst 16 both opened in late November. Each auditorium in both plexes has both stadium and theatre-style seating, the front half being gently sloped, and the back half stadium-style. All the theatres also have an average of 10 "love seats" (39-inch-wide chairs as opposed to the traditional 20 to 22 inches). The concession operation includes Starbucks coffee and pastries, Pizzeria Uno pizza, and self-service centers for popcorn, soft drink and mixed-candy purchases. The Northbrook Court 14 also has a full-service cafe with seating.

OH, BOISE: CINEPLEX BUILDS 16-PLEX IN IDAHO

Cineplex Odeon will build a new 16-plex in Boise, Idaho's 8th Street Marketplace, a mixed-use entertainment hub in the process of being redeveloped and expanded. The 60,000-square-foot, all-stadium seating theatre will feature 3,000 high-back seats, large curved screens, and a 1,500-square-foot Cinescape multimedia family entertainment center offering the latest in interactive game technology. The theatre will replace Cineplex's nearby existing twin, which will close upon the opening of the 16-plex.

SOUNDS GOOD: NEWS FROM DTS, DOLBY

DTS SIGNS DEAL WITH MGM/UA; ANNOUNCES DTS 6AD PROCESSOR

Digital Theater Systems (DTS) has signed a three-year contract with MGM/UA, under which all MGM and United Artists productions will be released in the DTS Digital Sound Format. The pact takes effect Jan. 1, 1997, expanding an earlier agreement that called for 50 percent of all MGM/UA films to be released in DTS.

DTS has also announced that the DTS 6AD Digital Cinema Processor will be available in the first quarter of 1997. The product will feature optical, non-sync and digital inputs, DTS digital audio, a built-in monitor, automation accessory, crossovers, and room equalization.Launched June 11, 1993, with the release of Universal's "Jurassic Park," Westlake Village, Calif.-based DTS now ha nearly 8,000 installations worldwide.

DOLBY REPORTS RECORD CINEMA PROCESSOR SALES

During August and September, Dolby Laboratories report they took orders for ove 1,300 Dolby Digital film sound processors Over the last year, more than 3,500 Dolby Digital units have been installed, bringing the total number of screens equipped fo Dobly Digital to over 6,700.

Dolby Laboratories is based in San Fran cisco, with film division offices in New York and Los Angeles, and European headquarters in England.

MAGIC MULTIPLIES IN PA., N.J.

New Jersey-based Magic Cinemas recently opened the Northampton Crossings 11, a 2,500-seat complex in Easton, Pa. that features stadium seating, plush rocking chair seats, state-of-the art projection and all three digital sound formats. Video monitors screen trailers in the lobby, which is accented by fiber optic and neon lighting. A multi-station concession stand offers self-service bulk candy. The Northampton Crossings 11 offers free refills on drinks and large popcorn, and the grand opening included giveaways of flashlights, T-shirts and 2,500 bottles of Pepsi.

Magic Cinemas has also announced a massive expansion of its circuit over the next two years to 200 screens, with commitments in place to open theatres in East Windsor, N.J.; North Bergen, N.J.; Phillipsburg, N.J.; and Quakertown, Pa. Magic Cinemas currently operates 48 screens.

MUVICO ACQUIRES HIALEAH'S "GENERAL" ADMISSIONS

Muvico Theaters, headquartered in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., has acquired General Cinema's eight-plex in Hialeah, Fla. It will be operated under Muvico's newly-formed discount theatre division, Favorite Cinemas, which will feature $1.50 admissions for all shows at all times. "Typically, discount theatres have been twin and three-screen theatres," says Muvico president Hamid Hashemi. "However, offering movies at a modern multiplex with state-of-the-art sound and projection is well-received throughout the country." Favorite Cinemas will be upgrading all sound systems and projectors in the theatre with digital sound.

LOEK-ING GOOD WITH 20-PLEX

Jack Loeks Theatres Inc. is adding eight screens to the existing Cinema 12 Theatre in Muskegon, Mich., making it a 20-screen megaplex. All new auditoriums will offer giant wall-to-wall screens, stereo and digital sound, and state-of-the-art projection. The Cinema Carousel 20 will also be the first theatre to introduce West Michigan patrons to stadium-style seating. And true to its name, the Carousel will now feature a full-sized, carnival-type carousel, with 30 horses ar two chariots. The chain is also building 3,000-seat, 58,000-square-foot 15-plex Benton Harbor/St. Joseph, Mich., which slated for a May 1997 opening.

DICKINSON ROCKS NORTHROCK

Wichita, Kansas will be the site of Dicki son Theatres' NorthRock 20, a destinatic entertainment facility that will encompa 72,000 square feet at the ground level, ar will also feature a 3,000-square-foot fami recreational mezzanine. The theatre will be major renovation and expansion Dickinson's existing NorthRock 6. "All th stops have been pulled out," says Wood Dick inson, who added that Dickinson's custo seating, UltraComfort, will make its U. debut at the NorthRock 20.

CROWNING ACHIEVEMENTS IN CONNECTICUT

Crown Theatres' kingdom will soon have majestic new addition—construction recent began on the Crown Majestic in downtow Stamford, Conn. The theatre, which will hav between six to eight screens, will feature high back rocking chair seating with cupholde armrests; advanced purchase ticketing; and state-of-the art concession stand. Eac auditorium will be Dolby Stereo equipped with Dolby, DTS and SDDS Digital soun system capabilities.

Crown has also completed a major renova tion of its Greenwich Plaza 3 in Fairfiel County, Conn. The recently reopened theati now boasts a spacious new concession stan redesigned decor and new washrooms.

LYONS ROARS ABOUT ENTERTAINMENT CENTER

Showboat of Lyons, L.L.C. has announce plans for a family entertainment center i Lyons Township outside Lake Geneva, Wis The center will include an eight-screen movi theatre with stadium seating and digita sound, a 360-car drive-in movie theatre wit FM stereo sound, a food court, high-tec video game room, an ice rink and a nine-hol par three gold course. The project i scheduled for completion in April 1997.

REGAL'S EXPANDING KINGDOM

Rapidly-growing Regal Cinemas has added even more screens to its realm. Most recently, the chain opened the Countryside Cinema 14 in Sterling, Va. The theatre's highlights include giant wall-to-wall screens with Dolby surround sound; DTS, Dolby and Sony Dynamic Digital Sound; stadium-style seating; rocking chairs, love seats and cupholder armrests; computerized ticking stations with advance ticketing; a continuous loop lobby projection screen playing coming attractions; a video game room; and a space station-themed lobby. Activity rooms are also available for birthday parties and other special events.

Regal has also opened the WestGate Mall Cinema 8 in Spartanburg, S.C., which offers DTS and Dolby digital sound; love seats and cupholder armrests; computerized ticketing; hearing-impaired listening devices and wheel- chair-accessible seating; a neon-enhanced lobby; and two large concession stands. Opening festivities at both cinemas, which involved advance previews of the theatres, movie screenings, free video game play and 50-cent popcorn and sodas, took place late October, and benefitted the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation and the Family Care Council for the prevention of child abuse.

LIFE'S A BEACH FOR PACIFIC THEATRES

Pacific Theatres has opened the 16-screen Beach Cities Cinema in El Segundo, Calif., the first of four megaplexes the circuit plans to build in Southern California over the next year. The 3,500-seat Beach Cities Cinema offers state-of-the-art projection; Sony SDDS, DTS and Dolby Digital sound systems; THX-certified auditoriums; stadium seating; and a "peace-of-mind" service which offers parents the opportunity to borrow complimentary silent, vibrating pagers so that they can be contacted by their child's caregiver during a film without disturbing other patrons.

STRAWVOTE PREDICTED PRESIDENT

For the eighth consecutive presidential election, General Cinema's StrawVote poll accurately predicted the victorious candidate by polling moviegoers in its 192 theatres nationwide. From Sept. 6 through Nov. 4, a total of 2,018,254 moviegoers cast their "vote" for president by selecting a Democrat, Republican or Reform party straw with their drink. While GCC's results had Bill Clinton winning with 46 percent of the vote, Bob Dole with 38 percent and Ross Perot with 16 percent, the actual results were Clinton with 49 percent, Dole with 41 percent and Perot with eight percent.

TEA HOLDS SEMINAR SERIES

The International Theatre Equipment Association will hold its fifth annual seminar series Jan. 13, 14 and 15 at the Universal Hilton in Los Angeles. For more information call 212-246-6460.

Q&A: HAIL MARY: GRASSO PROMOTED TO NATO VP

Mary Ann Grasso, longtime executive director of the National Association of Theatre Owners, has recently been elected to the post of NATO's vice president. Born in New York and raised in California, Grasso graduated Phi Beta Kappa with a bachelor's degree in art history from the University of California and a masters degree in library science from the University of Oregon. She fell into exhibition after a divergent career that included an 11-year position as director of the Warner Research Collection (a specialized service designed to assist writers, directors, producers, scenic artists and designers with production research), followed by three years with the CBS television network as a manager in its docudrama department. In 1988, she joined NATO as executive director. Now, eight years into her NATO tenure, Grasso still exudes an obvious enthusiasm for the exhibition industry, speaking excitedly about projects in the works, particularly the upcoming NATO/Hollywood Online joint venture, which will provide NATO members with their own websites, unifying and strengthening exhibition's presence on the Internet.

BOXOFFICE: How did you get into the exhibition industry?

MARY ANN GRASSO: I was just lucky! [laughs] And I mean that in all sincerity. I started off as a researcher in production and film research, and I found that I liked being involved in the film business, but I didn't particularly enjoy the production end of it. I really liked the business end of it. An opportunity was made available when the executive director at NATO retired, and I was recruited for the job. And it's been the best experience I've ever had.

BOXOFFICE: What new duties does the office of VP hold?

GRASSO: This promotion really reflects an expansion of the duties in the last couple of years. The organization has grown immensely, and my position now incorporates a great deal of going out to the membership, public speaking, and meeting with the state and regional units. [Additionally], the responsibilities will include our vision for international [endeavors]. NATO is looking at an outreach to the international exhibition community, expanding our services and our focus there.

BOXOFFICE: Will this be competing with the international equivalents of NATO?

GRASSO: No, we will be sister organizations. We cannot offer international members what their trade associations can offer them. We don't have the expertise in legal areas or government or the trade opportunities and policies in different countries. We would primarily be providing information about technology and American films. It's a sort of a sharing that a lot of trade associations do. We learn how exhibitors work in their countries; they learn how we work in our country, and we take the best of both. It's a method of sharing information and making us both smarter and stronger as a result of that.

BOXOFFICE: Are there any changes or new programs you'd like to initiate?

GRASSO: We will be working on an expanded membership program. We have, over the last few years, been very fortunate to be attracting new members based almost exclusively on word of mouth from our members, and from some of the work that we do through the conventions. But we've never made a real concerted effort to go out to exhibitors across the country and say 'We would like you to join with us and we would like you to be a part of our organization.' So we will probably be spending a great deal of time on that.

BOXOFFICE: What are some of the predominant issues NATO's currently dealing with?

GRASSO: Right now, of course, we are very excited about [NATO's partnership with] Hollywood Online and the Internet. We're very excited about providing this opportunity to our members because every person will have a website—they'll have their own home page where they can talk about their theatre. Not only is it going to be good for exhibition and for our members, but it's also a wonderful way to communicate our excitement about movies and going to the movies. So it's going to serve the public as well as to serve our industry.

We've [also] really put a great deal of focus and energy and attention into technology over the last couple of years. NATO has developed a Blue Ribbon technical committee that comprises the best and the brightest of exhibition and distribution to tackle technology issues that improve the moviegoing experience.

BOXOFFICE: What is it about this industry that compels you?

GRASSO: It's fascinating to me to see how business operates in a creative environment. This is showmanship at its best. I'm sure it's fun for the filmmaker to make the film, and it's certainly fun for me as the consumer to enjoy it, but it's wonderful to see what happens in the movie theatre. That's the best part. My members get such a thrill about bringing the movie to the public, and finding new and interesting ways to make that film fun for people. For example, I love serving on these committees where you judge [theatre] marketing ideas. It's so fun to me to see how creative our young people are, and how innovative they are, and what ideas they have to bring people in. It's that old sort of ballyhoo thing from the '30s and '40s. That's very appealing to me. It really is showmanship on the first level. That is what I like. [My job is] creative, it's different every day, we deal with different issues every day. But it really is bringing the show to the people. And I know that sounds corny, but it's true.

EUROVIEWS

European News Notes by Melissa Morrison

LEAD STORY: CINECITTA PRIVATIZES

ROME—Italy's mammoth, state-owned Cinecitta production facility is being partially sold in an attempt to resuscitate the legendary studio's fortunes. The deal is symptomatic of the current state of the Italian film industry, which has been in decline since the days of Fellini and pre-expatriate Dino De Laurentiis.

A 49-percent share of Cinecitta Servizi, the company that runs the studio, was opened in October to European bidders with an estimated value of $3.3 million. A deal was expected to be concluded by the end of 1996. Suitors include France's Compagnie General des Eaux and Britian's Carlton TV, as well as mogul Vittorio Cecchi Gori. Americans, however, need not apply—unless they are willing to commit to making movies in Italy, or to invest heavily in the planned Cinecitta multiplex.

The sale, which will give the buyer a not-quite-controlling interest in Cinecitta, is aimed at attracting ready cash and more interest from European filmmakers. The ultimate goal is to restore the studio's reputation as an international presence. Italian filmmaking bigwigs such as producer De Laurentiis and Cecchi Gori have blamed Italian tax and film-production laws for excluding foreigners from using Italian facilities, thus starving the domestic industry of cash and, in some cases, artistic prestige.

Italy's new Communist-led coalition government, is, surprisingly, behind the proposed sale, and also plans to pass laws making Italy a more attractive site for foreign filmmakers.

AU REVOIR, LES TAX BREAKS

PARIS—Film funding may suffer as France scales back its budget deficit and increases taxes in order to get its fianancial house in order for the impending European monetary union. In immediate danger is the country's Sofica tax-break system, which, until recently, allowed private companies and individuals to shelter up to 25 percent of their grosses from taxes. Parliament voted in October to slash the deductible to a flat US$10,000.

The change is expected to dramatically impact French film-funding, of which 10 percent is paid for with Sofica funds. Last year, the amount totaled almost US$30 million for features. Many large production companies, including Gaumont (currently making "Les Visiteurs II" with Jean Reno) and MK2 (making "Rien Na Vas Plus" with Isabelle Huppert), help fund their films through their own established Sofica companies.

Independent production companies are expected the feel the cut the deepest: They count on obtaining almost one-third of their funding from four Sofica funds. But there is little hope of a reprieve from the parliamentary action, which is part of a broader shift in spending policies necessitated by the strict fiscal rules of the European union.

STUDIO CITIES

SWEDEN, GREAT BRITAIN, RUSSIA—Two new European film-production sites are in the works, along with two new cutting-edge post-production facilities.

Sweden's Memfis production company and Zentropa, co-founded by director Lars von Trier, are building a full-scale studio at Trollhaettan on the Swedish coast, beginning with a $1 million post-production facility, to be completed next year. Memfis director Lars Joensson hopes the new studio will provide a new platform for Swedish filmmaking away from the capital of Stockholm. Joensson also has plans to start a production-investment company to finance films in the area. Other Scandinavian production companies may yet join the venture.

While the proposed Swedish studio wi be built out of converted airplane hang a British studio site may be carved out an abandoned warehouse in Hertfordsh Producers of the latest James Bond seq have had trouble booking space in U facilities—including Leavesden Stud which Eon Productions had built in 19 to make "GoldenEye."

Rather than force the filmmak abroad, local officials are negotiatin create a new space to accommodate $48 million production, which again st Pierce Brosnan.

Meanwhile in Moscow, the state- the-art Mosfilm Fantasy post-productio studio is scheduled to open in the n year. It will house a $6 million comput controlled studio for special effects a other services for film and television. T project is a joint venture between the sta owned Mosfilm Studios and B S Graphi which is Russia's largest post-productio concern.

GERMAN JOLT

FRANKFURT—The German film industry is getting a boo from two well-known industry players, one a German compa making tentative forays into America, the other an Americ company making deeper forays into Germany.

The German television group ProSieben is jumping into t feature-film business with plans to invest in cinemas, distribu films and back co-productions. ProSieben's plan is to conquer percent of the German exhibition industry by buying major stakes in existing theatres for a total of 200 screens. That cou make its new distribution project all the more successful—Pr Sieben wants to distribute eight to 10 titles annually. And it h begun to sponsor international co-productions, beginning wi "Detour," which got underway in the United States this fall.

Meanwhile, the local branch of U.S.-based Buena Vista Inter national, which was already established in Germany as a distribut will back domestic projects with its new production arm, Bue Vista Productions. BVP plans to produce four to six pictures 1997 with local partners. Films on the BVP include Katja v Garnier's "Bandits," Vivian Naefe's "Never Trust A Woman," a Michael Juncker's "Frauen Luegen Nicht."

The latest Buena Vista venture is only the latest in a string major American companies supporting local co-productio Disney's German representative last spring partnered wi Germany's Mr. Brown Entertainment to produce "Knocking Heaven's Door." Warner Bros. has also collaborated on loc productions, while Fox and Columbia are reportedly scanning f similar opportunities.

CONTACT MELISSA MORRISON IN CARE OF THE PRAGUE POST AT: NA PORICI 12, 115 30 PRAGUE 1, CZECH REPUBLIC
email: tomelis@bohem-net.cz

Q&A: JACK VALENTI: AN AMERICAN IN PRAGUE

Jack Valenti, the peripatetic president of the Motion Picture Association of America, is a familiar face to everyone in the film industry. His globe-trotting on behalf of U.S. film interests is legendary, as is his charm, energy and the political clout he wields as perhaps the most powerful representative of movie industry interests ever to bend ears and press the flesh in Washington.

BOXOFFICE MAGAZINE'S European correspondent Melissa Morrison had a rare recent opportunity to witness Mr. Valenti in overseas action during his recent 12-day goodwill visit to Europe, where he met heads of state and film-industry representatives in the United Kingdom, France, Hungary and the Czech Republic. Mr. Valenti was on hand to promote dialogue between American and European filmmakers, and to allay European fears of American cultural hegemony—never an easy task. An excerpt from that conversation:

BOXOFFICE: In your discussions with European filmmakers, how did you defend Hollywood against the charge that its movies dominate European cinemas at the expense of domestic releases?

JACK VALENTI: I said, "The cinema business is very simple. If you make movies that a lot of people want to see, you will do well. If you make movies people do not want to see, you will not do well. Period." It has nothing to do with some American invasion. We make a lot of movies that fail. So when somebody said, "You're killing our business," I said, "Why? I don't have an army of the 101st Airborne with bayonets forcing people [to see American movies]."

When I speak to film students in Europe, they think I'm Satan. I'm respectful of a film's need for an audience. Many of these young film students disdain audiences. I had one tell me, "Audience? I don't want to make movies that please the audience, I want to make movies that please me!" I said, "I have no problem with that. Fine. But if you're going to ask somebody to put up $2-3 million to make a movie, where's the expectation they might get the money back?"

"When somebody said, 'You're killing our business,' I said, 'Why? I don't have an army of the 101st Airborne with bayonets forcing people [to see American movies].'"

BOXOFFICE: But don't Hollywood movies have the audience advantage because they're accompanied by huge promotional budgets, whereas most European movies aren't?

VALENTI: What a huge promotional budget can do is get 'em in that first two days. After that, when the critics and the audiences get ahold of [the film], all the money in the world won't save that picture. There's nothing to prevent, by the way, the European companies from doing the same thing we do: forming a distribution company, putting in big money for marketing and advertising. You've got wealthy, wealthy people, wealthy, wealthy companies. Why couldn't they form a consortium and have a pan-European distribution set-up? Nothing to prevent it. Why isn't it done? Most bankers in Europe say, "No, no, no, it's risky. I'll put it in motorcars, I'll put it in pharmaceuticals, but movies are too risky."

BOXOFFICE: What do you think about Europe's efforts to boost popularity of its own movies? The French, for example, are notoriously protectionist about their culture.

VALENTI: Well, France is different. France has stern views that collide with the Germans. The Germans, the British, the Swedes, the Danes, the Dutch, the Finns think differently than the French. The old-fashioned way of building a wall around your country might have worked in the days of just over-the-air television and movies. But now you've got cable, you've got satellite to hurl things down at the speed of light. You've got optic-fiber, where every fiber that's no bigger than a thread can make 1,500 programs available instantaneously. Now, how do you build walls around that? Satellites don't know anything about borders. They're 23,000 feet in the atmosphere, and when they beam down, they don't go, "Longitude, latitude, I can't go here." It goes. So the old-fashioned methods are out-of-date.

BOXOFFICE: How can Europe attract Hollywood productions? Here in Prague in spring 1995, the "Mission: Impossible" production team and Tom Cruise were very vocal about their troubles with the Czech bureaucracy.

VALENTI: Hollywood production goes where it's hospitably treated. Now ["Evita" producer] Andy Vajna said in Budapest he was delighted with what he received. Whatever he wanted, they gave him. If he wanted to close off a street—which you can't do in America without everybody going crazy—they closed the street. In this part of the world, where you have everything—you've got ancient buildings near modern areas, you've got marvelous landscapes—you can shoot almost any picture here. I think you could shoot a Wild West picture here if you got out into the forest and the plains.

BOXOFFICE: How can Europe make Hollywood production companies feel more welcome?

VALENTI: Tax incentives. Say, "Come here and you can save 15-20 percent on your budget. We have somebody from our ministry of culture who's going to see anything you want is done. If you want to shoot, we've got a file of photographs of just about every kind of landscape you want to see. Come to Prague, we'll fly you in a government airplane north, west, east and south so you can see some of these places yourself." So you begin with the tax incentives, saying, "I can make this picture cheaper. Now can I make it better?"

Another thing I've found in the Czech Republic and Hungary is that most of the people speak English. It's a big advantage. Go to Russia sometime, or China to make a film. Getting your words across, the translation, will double your work time. And that costs money.

NORTHERN EXPOSURE

Canadian News Notes by Shlomo Schwartzberg

LEAD STORY: CINEPLEX LOCKS OUT PROJECTIONISTS

Failed contract negotiations have led Cineplex Odeon Corp. to lock out its projectionists in 38 Ontario theatres. The company wants to cut their shifts and their wages, which can run over C$20 (US$15.27) an hour, arguing that the new automated technology in theatres makes projectionists less indispensable than before.

The projectionists, who had been working without a contract since Dec. 31, 1995, face wage cuts of at least 50 percent. Cineplex also wants them to work reduced hours, restricting them to the popular discount Tuesday nights and weekends. Cineplex would have cinema managers run projection booths the rest of the week.

"The issue is what is a fair wage for a job done," insists Howard Lichtman, Cineplex's executive vice-president of marketing and communications. "We don't need separate projectionists, [but] the union continues to ignore that."

Lichtman points out that Cineplex went three months without projectionists in Chicago in a similar situation and that many Cineplex theatres, in key markets such as Quebec, San Francisco, Houston and Los Angeles, currently utilize part-time projectionists or have theatre managers do the job. He also expects similar issues to pop up in other provinces and states as contracts continue to expire. As for reports of projection problems at local theatres since the lockout, Lichtman says there aren't any more than the norm. The lockout, he says, will continue "until they [the union] come back with a reasonable compromise."

FLYER FLAP: FILMMAKER GREYSON ARRESTED

Cineplex Odeon found itself at the center of another controversy when filmmaker John Greyson was arrested at a Cineplex theatre after he refused to stop handing out leaflets protesting provincial government policies.

Greyson was invited to the Cineplex Carlton multiplex to say a few words before the Friday evening show of his film "Lilies," which opened that day. He did so but also urged audience members—and later theatregoers outside the cinema—to attend the anti-government Days of Actions march, taking place the next day in Toronto. Greyson was protesting the government's gutting of the Ontario Film Development Corporation, which had helped fund "Lilies." Cineplex told him to desist and when he demurred, the police were called in, eventually resulting in Greyon's arrest.

"We share Mr. Greyson's concerns about the funding of Canadian films," says Cineplex's Howard Lichtman. "[But] he didn't obtain prior approval [to hand out the leaflets]. We have to maintain our policy [that leaflets] can't be disseminated in our theatre without prior approval."

Cineplex has since apologized to Greyson, and is trying to get the charges dropped. Greyson told Toronto paper "The Globe & Mail" he's waiting for a formal written apology. "When I receive the apology and the charges are dropped, I look forward to working together again with Cineplex Odeon," he said.

FAMOUS PLAYERS' UPTOWN THEATRE DISABLED BY LACK OF WHEELCHAIR ACCESSIBILITY

Meanwhile, Famous Players Inc., Canada's other major theatre chain, incurred some negative publicity of its own after a disabled patron at Toronto's downtown Uptown theatre was told not to return to the cinema as it was not wheelchair accessible. A similar incident occurred at Winnipeg's Northstar cinema where another disabled patron was given similar advice.

Roger Harris, Famous Player's vice president of marketing, doesn't deny those incidents but points out that of all Famous Players theatres, "90 percent are wheelchair accessible." The patron at the Uptown was let into the theatre by a doorman by mistake, he adds, and the Northstar is the only one of the 17 screens in Winnipeg that is not wheelchair accessible. "We recently spent $335,000 [US$255,045] on the Cumberland [fourplex] to improve the [accessibility] situation," says Harris. "It's not as if we're sitting back and not doing anything."

The Uptown and Northstar theatres are among Famous' older building and "it's very difficult to get them up to snuff, says Harris. "The Uptown is a complicated structure to improve on," he explains. Famous will do what it can to make all their theatres accessible to the disabled, he says. "Nine out of 10 times, we welcome them want them to come regularly."

ASTRAL PROJECTIONS: C$18.5M

Montreal-based Astral Communications has decided to sell off its distribution arm, Astral Distribution, and its program development branch, Astral Programming Enterprises, to another Montreal company, Coscient Group. Coscient, which owns Allegro Films and Allegro Films Distribution, will merge those two companies with the Astral acquisitions under a new banner, Astral/Coscient. Yves Moquin, chairman and CEO of Coscient Group, says the Astral companies will add C$18.5 million (US$14.1 million) to his company. Coscient expects to generate revenues of C$81 million (US$61.7 million) this year.

"CRASH" AND BURN: RELEASE DELAY WILL HARM FILM'S BOXOFFICE PROSPECTS, SAYS CRONENBERG

Rumors that New Line owner Ted Turner has kiboshed the October 1996 release of David Cronenberg's "Crash" are apparently true—at least according to the Toronto director.

In November, Cronenberg told "Maclean's," Canada's newsweekly magazine, that a New Line executive had confirmed that Turner was morally offended by the film (which deals with a group of people who are fetishistically attracted by bloody car collisions), and felt that it could lead impressionable youths to copy scenes. In fact, Cronenberg doubts that Turner would allow "Crash's" scheduled March release to happen, either. "I'm still worried that it will not be released. And the delay has already done hideous damage to the film," Cronenberg said. "We've lost the momentum we'd built up from Cannes." ("Crash" won a special award for its "audacity" at the French festival.)

But Ruth Vitale, president of New Line subsidiary Fine Line which is to release "Crash," was quoted in the Maclean's article as promising the film would be released in the U.S. in March. "The movie is outrageous and wonderful," she said. "It deserves time." To which Cronenberg replied, "I'm still not convinced." (Turner was unavailable for comment.)

The United States is not the only place where "Crash" has had censorship problems. A British MP called for its ban after its premiere at the London Film Festival, and Norway's largest theatre chain has indicated that it will not book the film.

DO YOU HAVE AN EXHIBITION-RELATED NEWS ITEM ABOUT THE CANADIAN MARKET? CONTACT SHLOMO SCHWARTZBERG IN CARE OF OUR CANADIAN NEWS BUREAU AT: 416-638-640

Boxoffice Magazine presents

MovieFone's Moviegoer Activity Report

For the Month of October 1996

MovieFone® (777-FILM®) and its sister service, MovieLink® Online, are now the single largest source of movie showtime information in the country, providing information to over 12 million moviegoers each month. The following information represents the most requested theatres and exhibitors on MovieFone.

Top 10 Exhibitors & Theatres

Most Requested Exhibitors

Rank	Exhibitor	Total Requests	Last Month's Rank
1	United Artists	424,759	1
2	Cineplex Odeon	424,469	2
3	Sony	395,228	4
4	AMC	372,198	3
5	General Cinemas	222,511	5
6	Century	114,201	6
7	Mann	88,139	9
8	Cinemark	84,797	7
9	National Amusements	83,330	8
10	Famous Players	68,856	14

Most Requested Theatres

Rank	Market	Theatre	Total Requests	Last Month's Rank
1	NY	Sony Lincoln Square	49,526	1
2	LA	AMC Century 14	31,001	3
3	NY	Sony Orpheum	23,853	5
4	BO	Sony Cheri	23,506	7
5	NY	CO Chelsea	23,151	4
6	NY	CO Worldwide	22,965	2
7	NY	Sony Village 7	22,487	6
8	NY	Sony 19th St. East	18,362	13
9	NY	CO Ziegfeld	18,294	716
10	PH	UA Riverview Plaza	16,506	9

Most Requested Theatres Per Screen

Total Requests	Rank	Theatre (# screens)	Total Requests	Last Month's Rank
New York	1	CO Ziegfeld (1)	18,294	46
812,611	2	Sony Paris (1)	7,848	2
	3	CO Beekman (1)	6,686	6
Los Angeles	1	Mann National (1)	4,087	1
412,642	2	Mann Bruin (1)	4,002	19
	3	CO Century Plaza (4)	11,327	3
Dallas	1	AMC Highland Pk. (4)	5,272	6
307,390	2	GCC Irving Mall (3)	2,907	14
	3	AMC Forum (6)	5,661	7
San Francisco	1	UA Coronet (1)	3,072	5
196,587	2	Blm Regency II (1)	3,077	1
	3	Blm Regency I (1)	2,922	2
Miami	1	GCC Riviera (4)	4,332	6
191,144	2	Cobb Kendall (9)	9,468	3
	3	AMC Mall of Americas (14)	14,366	4
Philadelphia	1	UA Sameric (4)	10,679	1
168,253	2	Devon Theatre (1)	2,023	2
	3	Cinemagic 3 at Penn (3)	5,322	4
Boston	1	Sony Cheri (4)	23,506	1
160,712	2	NA Circle Cinema (7)	14,788	3
	3	Sony Nickelodeon (5)	8,999	2
Chicago	1	Village North Theatre (1)	1,936	1
142,886	2	CO Biograph (3)	4,836	2
	3	Sony Esquire (6)	6,292	5
Toronto	1	Famous Uptown (3)	7,735	9
112,072	2	Famous Eglinton (1)	2,188	1
	3	Famous Plaza (2)	2,848	3
Phoenix	1	Hark Cine Capri (1)	1,558	1
91,356	2	Hark Christown (5)	3,719	5
	3	Century Glendale D-I (9)	6,336	2
Houston	1	Landmk River Oaks (3)	2,185	1
84,005	2	CO River Oaks Plaza (12)	8,339	3
	3	CO Spectrum (9)	5,874	5
San Diego	1	Mann Cinema 21 (1)	790	1
82,615	2	Pacific Cinerama (6)	2,714	10
	3	Mann Sport Arena (6)	2,332	7

Total Requests	Rank	Theatre (# screens)	Total Requests	Last Month's Rank
Atlanta	1	AMC Galleria (8)	2,513	3
56,120	2	UA Tara (4)	1,223	1
	3	AMC Phipps Plaza (14)	4,225	2
Seattle	1	CO Cinerama (1)	844	1
53,490	2	Landmk Seven Gables (1)	842	20
	3	CO Southcenter (1)	772	4
Kansas City	1	Dksn Glenwood (4)	2,507	1
51,298	2	Dksn Antioch Twin (2)	1,037	2
	3	Dksn Westglen (12)	5,901	3
Minneapolis	1	CO Edina (4)	1,633	7
43,672	2	Mann MN Suburban World (1)	394	6
	3	UA St. Anthony Main (5)	1,912	3
Cleveland	1	Sony Cedar (2)	1,138	3
41,806	2	GCC Parmatown (5)	2,399	1
	3	GCC Ridgepark Square (8)	3,257	6
Denver	1	UA Continental (1)	1,793	1
37,152	2	Landmk Esquire (2)	591	2
	3	Mann Cherry Creek (8)	2,270	3
Las Vegas	1	Century Cinedome (12)	5,816	1
36,391	2	Century Rancho (16)	6,936	2
	3	UA Green Valley (5)	2,096	6
Detroit	1	Star Lincoln Park (8)	1,705	2
28,553	2	Star Taylor (10)	2,067	3
	3	AMC Southland (4)	697	1
Sacramento	1	Century Century 21 (2)	1,695	1
27,130	2	Century Capitol (4)	2,111	5
	3	Century Cinedome (9)	4,110	2
Washington, DC	1	CO Uptown (1)	766	3
19,404	2	CO West End (4)	777	8
	3	AMC Courthouse (8)	1,233	9
Tampa	1	Cobb Northdale Court (6)	1,146	1
16,830	2	Muvico Palm Harbor (10)	1,744	2
	3	Fun-Lan D-I (3)	506	4
Orlando	1	Cobb Southchase (7)	1,234	4
15,047	2	GCC Renaissance (8)	949	9
	3	AMC Fashion Village (8)	923	7

Top 3 Actively* Requested Theatres:

1. CO Worldwide New York, NY
2. Sony Lincoln Sq. New York, NY
3. AMC Mall of Americas Miami, FL

*Caller specifically requested theatre

Key to Exhibitors

AMC	AMC Theatres, Inc.	Cobb	Cobb Theatres
Act III	Act III Theatres	Dksn	Dickinson Theatres
Blm	Blumenfeld Theatres	Famous	Famous Players
Carmike	Carmike Cinemas, Inc.	GCC	General Cinema Theatres
Century	Century Theatres	General	General Theatres
CO	Cineplex Odeon Corp.	Hark	Harkins Theatres
Hollywood	Hollywood Theatres	Muvico	Muvico Theatres
Landmk	Landmark Theatre Corp.	Pacific	Pacific Theatres
Mann	CinAmerica Theatres, LP	Sony	Sony Theatres
Mann MN	Mann Minneapolis	Star	Loeks-Star Theatres
Met	Metropolitan Theatres Corp.	UA	United Artists Theatre Circuit

777-FILM

BOXOFFICE

	October	November	December	JANUARY (Current)
Buena Vista (818) 567-5000 (212) 593-8900	D3: The Mighty Ducks, 10/4, Com, PG, 104 min, Flat, Dolby SRD. Emilio Estevez, Joshua Jackson, Jeffrey Nordling, Heidi Kling. Dir: Rob Lieberman. The Associate, 10/25, Com, PG13, 108 min, Flat, Dolby SRD. Whoopi Goldberg, Dianne Wiest, Tim Daly, Bebe Neuwirth. Dir: Donald M. Petrie.	Ransom, 11/8, Thr, R, 121 mins., SR, SR-D, SDDS, Flat. Mel Gibson, Rene Russo, Gary Sinise, Lili Taylor. Dir: Ron Howard. 101 Dalmations, 11/27, Live Act C, G, 103 mins., SR, SR-D, SDDS Anamorphic. Glenn Close, Jeff Daniels. Dir: Stephen Herek. The War at Home, 11/22 ltd., Dra, R, 125 min., SR, SR-D, Anamorphic. Emilio Estevez, Martin Sheen, Kathy Bates. Dir: Emilio Estevez.	The Preacher's Wife, 12/13, Rom/Com, 124 mins., SR, SR-D, SDDS, Flat. Denzel Washington, Whitney Houston, Gregory Hines. Dir: Penny Marshall. Evita, 12/25 NY,LA, 1/10/97 wide, Mus./Drama, 130 mins., PG-13, SR, SR-D, SDDS, Anamorphic. Madonna, Antonio Banderas, Jonathan Pryce. Dir: Alan Parker.	Metro, 1/17, Dra, SR, SR-D, SDDS, Anamorphic. Eddie Murphy, Carmen Ejogo, Michael Rappaport. Dir: Thomas Carter.
Columbia (310) 280-8000 (212) 833-8500	Get on the Bus, 10/16, Dra, R, 122 min, Flat, Dolby A, SR, SDDS. Charles S. Dutton, Ossie Davis, Isaiah Washington, Richard Belzer. Dir: Spike Lee. Picnic (1955 reissue), Dra, PG, 115 min, Anamorphic. William Holden, Rosalind Russell, Kim Novak, Cliff Robertson. Dir: Johsua Logan.		Ghosts of Mississippi, 12/20 ltd, 1/3 exp., Dra. 123 min., PG-13, Dolby A, Sr, SDDS, Flat. Alec Baldwin. Dir: Rob Reiner. Hamlet, 12/25 ltd, 1/24 exp. Dra, 242 mins. Scope. Dir/Star: Kenneth Branagh. Some Mother's Son, 12/26 ltd , SR, Flat. Dra, R, 112 min. People Vs. Larry Flynt, 12/27 ltd, 1/10 exp, Dra, R, 130 min. Dolby A, SR, SDDS, Scope. W Harrelson, Courtney Love. Dir: Milos Forman.
MGM/UA (310) 449-3000 (212) 708-0300	Mad Dog Time(formerly Trigger Happy), 10/4 ltd, 11/1 exp, Com, R. Richard Dreyfuss, Jeff Goldblum, Ellen Barkin, Gabriel Byrne. Dir: Larry Bishop.	Larger Than Life, 11/1, Com, PG, 93 min, Flat, Dolby A, DTS. Bill Murray, Janeane Garofalo, Linda Fiorentino, Keith David, Matthew McConaughey. Dir: Howard Franklin.		Turbulence, 1/31, Act/Dra. Ray Liotta, Lauren Holly, Hector Elizondo. Dir: Robert Butler.
Miramax (212) 941-3800 (213) 845-4200	Small Wonders (formerly Fiddlefest), 10/4 NY, LA, Doc, G, 80 min. Dir: Allan Miller. Microcosmos, 10/9, Doc, G, 75 min. Dirs: Claude Nuridsany, Marie Perennou. Swingers, 10/18, 11/1 exp, Com, R, 96 min. Jon Favreau, Vince Vaughn. Dir: Doug Liman. Unhook the Stars, 10/31, Nov exp, R, 102 min. Gerard Depardieu, Gena Rowlands, Marisa Tomei, Jake Lloyd Dir: Nick Cassavetes.	Everyone Says I Love You, 11/1, Mus, R, 107 min. Dir: Woody Allen. The English Patient, 11/15, ltd., 11/22 wide, Dra. Ralph Fiennes, Juliette Binoche. Dir: Anthony Minghella. Albino Alligator, 11/15, Dra, R, 96 min. Dir: Kevin Spacey Sling Blade, 11/22, Dra, R, 140 min. Dir/Star. Billy Bob Thornton. Nightwatch, 11/22. Nick Nolte. Dir. Ole Bornedal. Ridicule, 11/27, Dra, 102 min. Fanny Ardant. Dir: Patrice Leconte	Substance of Fire, 12/6, R, 98 min Sarah Jessica Parker, Timothy Hutton. Dir: Dan Sullivan. Citizen Ruth, 12/13, Jan exp, Com, 102 min. Laura Dern, Swoosie Kurtz. Dir: Alexander Payne. Marvin's Room, 12/18 Meryl Streep, Diane Keaton, Leonardo DiCaprio. Dir: Jerry Zaks. Scream (formerly Scary Movie), 12/20 wide, Hor/Com. Drew Barrymore, Courteney Cox, David Arquette. Dir: Wes Craven.	Kolya, Dra. Zdenek Szerak. Dir: Jan Szerak.
New Line (310) 854-5811 (212) 649-4900	The Long Kiss Goodnight, 10/11, Act/Thr, Anamorphic, Dolby SR & SRD, SDDS. Geena Davis, Samuel L. Jackson, Yvonne Zima, Craig Bierko.Dir: Renny Harlin.	Set It Off, 11/6, Dra, R, Flat, Dolby SR & SRD, SDDS. Jada Pinkett, Queen Latifah, Vivica Fox, Kimberly Elise. Dir: F. Gary Gray.	Michael, 12/25, Rom/Com. SR, SR-D, SDDS, Flat. John Travolta, Andie MacDowell, William Hurt. Dir: Nora Ephron. In Love and War, 12/25 ltd, 1/24/97 wide, Rom/Dra. SR, SR-D, SDDS, Anamorphic. Sandra Bullock, Chris D'Donnell. Dir: Richard Attenborough.	Jackie Chan's First Strike 1/10, Act, PG-13. SR, SR-D, SDDS, Anamporphic. Jackie Chan. Dir: Samo Hung. In Love and War, 1/24/97 wide, Rom/Dra. SR, SR-D, SDDS, Anamorphic. Sandra Bullock, Chris O'Donnell. Dir: Richard Attenborough.
Paramount (213) 956-5000 (212) 373-7000	The Ghost and the Darkness, 10/11, Adv/Dra, R. Val Kilmer, Michael Douglas, Bernard Hill, John Kani. Dir: Stephen Hopkins. Stephen King's Thinner, 10/25, Dra/Thr, R. Robert John Burke, Joe Mantegna, Michael Constantine. Dir: Tom Holland.	Dear God, 11/8, Com. Greg Kinnear, Laurie Metcalf, Hector Elizondo, Tim Conway Dir: Garry Marshall. Star Trek: First Contact, 11/22, SF Patrick Stewart, Brent Spiner, Jonathan Frakes, LeVar Burton, Michael Dorn. Dir. Jonathan Frakes.	Beavis and Butthead Do America,12/20, Ani. Voices: Mike Judge. Dir: Mike Judge. Night Falls on Manhattan, 12/20 NY, LA, Dra. Andy Garcia, Richard Dreyfuss. Dir: Sidney Lumet.. The Evening Star, 12/25 ltd, Dra, PG13. Shirley MacLaine, Bill Paxton, Juliette Lewis, Ben Johnson. Dir. Robert Harling. Mother, 12/25 NY,LA, Com. Rob Morrow, Debbie Reynolds. Dir/Star: Albert Brooks.	The Relic, 1/17, Thr, R. Penelope Ann Miller, Tom Sizemore, Linda Hunt. Dir: Peter Hyams.
TriStar (310) 280-8000 (212) 833-8500	High School High, 10/25, Com, PG-13, 86 min, Flat, Dolby A & SR, SDDS. Jon Lovitz, Tia Carrere, Mekhi Phifer, Louise Fletcher. Dir: Hart Bochner.	The Mirror Has Two Faces, 11/15, Rom/Com, PG-13, 125 mins. Dolby A & SR, SDDS, Flat. Barbra Streisand, Jeff Bridges, Pierce Brosnan, Mimi Rogers. Dir: Barbra Streisand.	Jerry Maguire, 12/13, Com/Dra, R, Dolby A & SR, SDDS Flat. Tom Cruise, Cuba Gooding Jr., Kelly Preston, Rene Zellweger Dir: Cameron Crow	Beverly Hills Ninja, 1/17, Com, PG-13, 90 mins., Flat, Dolby A & SR, SDDS. Chris Farley, Nicolette Sheridan. Dir: Dennis Dugan.
20th Century Fox (310) 369-1000 (212) 556-2400	That Thing You Do!, 10/4, Rom/Com, PG, 110 min, Flat, Dolby SR & SRD, SDDS, DTS Tom Hanks, Liv Tyler, Tom Everett Scott, Johnathan Schaech. Dir: Tom Hanks.	Romeo & Juliet, 11/1, Rom/Dra, R, Anamorphic, Dolby SR &SRD. Leonardo DiCaprio, Claire Danes, John Leguizamo. Dir: Baz Luhrmann. Jingle All the Way, 11/22, Com, PG SR, SR-D, Flat. Arnold Schwarzenegger, Phil Hartman. Dir. Brian Levant. The Crucible, 11/27 ltd, Dra, PG-13, 115 min, Flat, Dolby SR & SR-D. Daniel Day-Lewis, Winona Ryder, Joan Allen.Dir: Nicholas Hytner	One Fine Day, 12/20, Rom/Com, PG, 105 min, Flat, Dolby SR & SR-D. Michelle Pfeiffer, George Clooney, Mae Whitman, Alex Linz. Dir: Michael Hoffman.	Star Wars (1977 reissue), 1/31, SF, PG, Anamorphic, Dolby SR & SRD, SDDS, DTS. Harrison Ford, Mark Hamill, Carrie Fisher, Alec Guiness, Peter Cushing. Dir: George Lucas.
Universal (818) 777-1000 (212) 759-7500	Vertigo (1958 reissue), 10/6 NY, 10/9 Wash., 10/19 SF. Dra/Thr, Vista-vision, Dolby SR, DTS. James Stewart, Kim Novak, Barbara Bel Geddes Dir: Alfred Hitchcock The Chamber, 10/11, Thr, R, Dolby SR, DTS. Chris O'Donnell, Gene Hackman,		Daylight, 12/6, Act, PG-13, Dolby SR, DTS. Sylvester Stallone, Amy Brenneman, Viggo Mortensen Dir: Rob Cohen.	Fierce Creatures, 1/10, Com, 98 min, Anamorphic, Dolby SR, DTS. Kevin Kline, Jamie Lee Curtis, John Cleese, Michael Palin. Dir: Robert Young
Warner Bros. (818) 954-6000 (212) 484-8000	The Glimmer Man, 10/4, Act, R, 91 min. Steven Seagal. Dir: John Gray. Michael Collins, 10/11, 136 min, R. Liam Neeson. Sleepers, 10/18, 149 min. Robert DeNiro, Brad Pitt. Dir: Barry Levinson. Sunchaser, 10/18, R, 118 min. Woody Harrelson. Dir: Michael Cimino. Surviving Picasso, 10/25, Dra, R, 120 min. Anthony Hopkins. Dir: James Ivory.	Bad Moon (formerly Thor), 11/1, Thr, R, 81 min., Dolby SR, Anamorphic. Mariel Hemingway, Michael Pare. Dir: Eric Red. Space Jam, 11/15, Ani. PG, 87 min., SR, SR-D, SDDS, DTS. Flat. Michael Jordan, Bugs Bunny, Theresa Randle, Charles Barkley. Dir: Joe Pytka North Star, Adv, R, 88 min, SR, Anamorphic. James Caan, Christopher Lambert, Catherine McCormack. Dir: Nils Gaup.	Mars Attacks!, 12/13, SF/Com. Jack Nicholson, Pierce Brosnan, Glenn Close. Dir: Tim Burton. My Fellow Americans, 12/20, Com. Jack Lemmon, James Garner, Dan Aykroyd, Lauren Bacall. Dir: Peter Segal. The Honest Courtesan, 12/20 ltd. Catherine McCormack, Moira Kelly, Rufus Sewell. Dir: Marshall Herskovitz. Rosewood, 12/20 ltd, 1/17 wide, Dra. Jon Voight, Ving Rhames. Dir: John Singleton.	Murder at 1600, Thr. Wesley Snipes, Diane Lane, David Benzali, Dennis Miller. Dir: Dwight H. Little.

FEATURE CHART — JANUARY 1997

February	March	Forthcoming
That Darn Cat, 2/14, PG, Flat. Christina Ricci, Doug E. Doug, Dyan Cannon. Dir: Robert Spiers. Grosse Pointe Blank, 2/14, Com, R. John Cusack, Minnie Driver, Dan Aykroyd, Joan Cusack. Dir: George Armitage.	Jungle2Jungle, 3/97, Com. Tim Allen, Martin Short. Dir: John Pasquin.	Gone Fishin', Com, PG. Joe Pesci, Danny Glover. Dir: Christopher Cain. ConAir. Act/Adv, .Spring, Nicolas Cage, John Malkovich. Dir: Simon West. Deep Rising, Act/Thr. Treat Williams. Dir. Stephen Sommers. George of the Jungle, Live Act. Brendan Fraser. Dir. Sam Weisman. G.I. Jane (or Navy Cross), Act. Demi Moore. Dir: Ridley Scott. Nothing to Lose, Com. Martin Lawrence, Tim Robbins. Dir: Steve Oedekerk. Playing God, Dra. Timothy Hutton. Dir: Andy Wilson. Pretontaine, Dra. Jared Leto, Amy Locane. Dir: Steve James. Romy and Michelle..., Com., Summer, Mira Sorvino, Janeane Garofalo. Dir. David Mirkin. The Shadow Conspiracy, Dra, R. Charlie Sheen. Dir: George P. Cosmatos. Sixth Man, Spring, Com. Marlon Wayans. Dir: Randall Miller. Washington Square. Dra. Jennifer Jason Leigh. Albert Finney. Dir: Agnieszka Holland	Buena Vista (818) 567-5000 (212) 593-8900
Absolute Power, 2/7, Act/Thr, Dolby A &SR, SDDS. Anamorphic. Clint Eastwood, Gene Hackman, Scott Glenn, Ed Harris, Judy Davis. Dir: Clint Eastwood. Fools Rush In, 2/14, Rom/Com, Dolby A, SR, SDDS, Flat. Matthew Perry, Salma Hayek, John Tenney. Dir: Andy Tennant. Booty Call, 2/28, Com. Jamie Foxx, Viveca Fox. Dir: Jeff Pollack.	The Devil's Own, 3/26, Sus/Thr, Dolby A & SR, SDDS, Anamorphic. Harrison Ford, Brad Pitt, Margaret Colin, Treat Williams. Dir: Alan J Pakula.	AFO (formerly Air Force One), B/1. Harrison Ford, Gary Oldman, Glenn Close. Dir. Wolfgang Peterson. Anaconda, 4/18, Adv. Jon Voight, Jennifer Lopez, Ice Cube. Dir: Luis Llosa Bad Boys 2, Act/Com. Will Smith, Martin Lawrence. Dir. Tom Dey. Buddy, Summer, Com. Rene Russo, Robbie Coltrane, Paul Reubens. Dir. Caroline Thompson. Cattaca (formerly The Eighth Day), SF. Ethan Hawke, Uma Thurman, Jude Law. Dir: Andrew Niccol. The Fifth Element, 5/9. Bruce Willis, Gary Oldman. Dir: Luc Besson. Excess Baggage,Summer, Act/Adv. Alicia Silverstone, Benecio del Toro. Dir: Marco Brambilla. Men in Black, 6/6, SF. Tommy Lee Jones, Will Smith, Linda Fiorentino. Dir. Barry Sonnenfeld.	Columbia (310) 280-8000 (212) 833-8500
Touch, Dra. Tom Arnold, Bridget Fonda, Christopher Walken, Gina Gershon, Janeane Garofalo.Dir: Paul Schrader.	Hoods (formerly Hoodlum), 3/28, Dra. Laurence Fishburne, Tim Roth, Andy Garcia, Vanessa Williams.Dir: Bill Duke.	All Along the Watchtower, Dra. All the Pretty Horses, Dra. Dir: Mike Nichols. Bond 18, 11/20/97. Pierce Brosnan. Dir: Roger Spottiswoode (tent). The Day After Tomorrow, Sus.The Fantasticks, Mus/Com, PG, 108 min. Joel Grey, Joe McIntyre. Dir: Michael Ritchie. Fireworks, Dra. Dir: Mark Rydell. Killer's Kiss, Act/Thr. Linda Fiorentino. Kiss Me Deadly, Thr. Dir: Michael Mann. Sea Hunt. Sixteen Pleasures. Dir: Michael Apted. Supernova, SF/Thr. Dir: Joe Nimziki. To Brave Every Danger, Dra. Warriors of Virtue. Angus MacFadyen, Mario Yedidia, Marley Shelton. Dir: Ronny Yu. Wild Card. Dir. Robert Altman. The Fortune Cookie, C, Bette Midler, Candice bergen. Dir.: John Amiel.	MGM/UA (310) 449-3000 (212) 708-0300
Temptress Moon, Dra. Gong Li, Leslie Cheung. Dir: Chen Kaige.	Mimic, 3/97, SciFi, Mira Sorvino, Charles Dutton.	B. Monkey, Dra. Jared Harris, Rupert Everett. Dir: Michael Radford. Children of the Revolution Judy Davis, Sam Neill. Dir: Peter Duncan. Copland. Dra. Sylvester Stallone, Robert DeNiro. Dir James Mangold.Dogwater, Rom/Com. David Schwimmer, Lara Flynn Boyle. Dir. David Schwimmer. Mouth to Mouth (Spain), Com. Javier Bardem, Maria Barranco. Dir. Manuel Gomez Pereira Operation Condor, Act/Adv. Jackie Chan. Dir: Jackie Chan. Talk of Angels, Dra. Polly Walker, Vincent Perez. Dir: Nick Hamm. Sarajevo. Dra. Woody Harrelson, Marisa Tomei. Dir: Michael Winterbottom.She's DeLovely. Sean Penn, Robin Wright, John Travolta, Gena Rowlands. Dir: Nick Cassavetes. Wings of a Dove, Dra. Helena Bonham Carter, Linus Roache. Dir: Ian Softley.	Miramax (212) 941-3800 (213) 845-4200
Lovejones. SR, SR-D, SDDS, Flat. Larenz Tate, Nia Long. Trial and Error, Com. 2/14, Anamorphic. Michael Richards, Jeff Daniels. Dir: Jonathan Lynn.	B.A.P.s, Com. 3/28, SR, SR-D, SDDS, Flat. Halle Berry, Martin Landau. Dir. Robert Townsend.	America's Most Wanted, Act/Com. Keenan Ivory Wayans. Dir. David Hogan. Austin Powers: International Man of Mystery, Com. Mike Meyers, Elizabeth Hurley. Dir: Jay Roach. Boogie Nights 6/6, Com/Dra. Mark Wahlberg, Julianne Moore. Dir: Paul Thomas Anderson. Dangerous Ground, 4/18, Act/Dra., R, SR, SDDS, Flat. Elizabeth Hurley, Ice Cube. Dir: Darrell James Roodt. Dark City, Thr. William Hurt. Dir: Alex Proyas. Edwards and Hunt, Com. Chris Farley, Matthew Perry. Dir Christopher Guest. Money Talks, 5/2, Act/Com. Charlie Sheen, Chris Tucker. Dir: Brett Ratner. One Night Stand, Dra. 4/11, SR, SR-D, SDDS. Flat. Wesley Snipes, Nastassija Kinski, Robert Downey Jr. Dir: Mike Figgis. Spawn, 9/97, SF. Michael Jai White, John Leguizamo, D.B. Sweeney. Dir: Mark Dippe.	New Line (310) 854-5811 (212) 649-4900
Howard Stern's Private Parts, 2/14, Com, R. Howard Stern, Robin Quivers, Fred Norris, Mary McCormack. Dir: Betty Thomas. Miss the Girls, Sus. Morgan Freeman, Ashley Judd, Richard Timothy Jones, Cary Elwes. Dir: Gary Fleder.		Beautician and the Beast, Com. Fran Drescher, Timothy Dalton. Dir: Ken Kwapis Face Off. Act. John Travolta, Nicolas Cage. Dir. John Woo. The Flood, Act. Christian Slater, Morgan Freeman. Dir: Mikael Salomon. Going West in America. Thr. Dennis Quaid, Danny Glover. Dir. Jeb Stuart. Illumination (formerly Dne Golden Afternoon), Dra. Peter O'Toole. Dir. Charles Sturridge In and Out, Com. Kevin Kline, Tom Selleck, Joan Cusack, Debbie Reynolds. Dir. Frank Dz Prince Valiant, Act/Adv. Stephen Moyer. Dir. Anthony Hickox. Rainmaker, Dra. Laurence Fishburne, Claire Danes, Mickey Rourke. Dir: Francis Ford Coppola. The Saint, Act/Adv. Val Kilmer, Elisabeth Shue. Dir: Phillip Noyce. 'Til There Was You. Jennifer Aniston, Dylan McDermott. Dir: Scott Winant. Titanic, Rom/Adv. Bill Paxton, Kate Winslet, Leonardo DiCaprio. Dir: James Cameron.	Paramount (213) 956-5000 (212) 373-7000
Donnie Brasco, 2/28, Dra. Johnny Depp, Al Pacino, Anne Heche, Michael Madsen. Dir: Mike Newell. The Pest, 2/7 Com. John Leguizamo, Jeffery Jones, Edoardo Ballerini. Dir: Paul Miller.		The Colony. Thr. Jean-Claude Van Damme, Dennis Rodman, Mickey Rourke. Dir: Tsui Hark Desperate Measures, 8/8, Act. Michael Keaton, Andy Garcia. Dir: Barbet Schroeder Kilronen, Thr. Jonathan Schaech, Jessica Lange, Gwyneth Paltrow. Dir. Jonathan Darby. My Best Friend's Wedding, 6/27, Rom/Com. Julia Roberts, Dermot Mulroney. Dir: P.J. Hogan. Old Friends, Dra. Jack Nicholson, Helen Hunt, Greg Kinnear. Dir. James Brooks. Peter Pan, Adv. Dir: John Hughes Starship Troopers, 7/2, SF. Neil Patrick Harris, Denise Richards, Dina Meyer. Dir. Paul Verhoeven. Truth or Consequences, Dra., Kiefer Sutherland, Vincent Gallo. Dir.: Kiefer Sutherland Stinkers, Com. B.D. Wong. Dir: Barnet Kellman	TriStar (310) 280-8000 (212) 833-8500
Volcano, 2/28, Act/Adv. Tommy Lee Jones, Anne Heche. Dir: Mick Jackson. The Empire Strikes Back (1980 reissue), 7/21, SF, PG Anamorphic, Dobly SR & SRD, SDDS, DTS. Harrison Ford, Mark Hamill, Carrie Fisher, Billy Dee Williams. Dir: Richard Marquand. Mighty Morphin Power Rangers II, 3/21	Return of the Jedi (1983 reissue), 3/7, SF, PG Anamorphic, Dobly SR & SRD, SDDS, DTS. Harrison Ford, Mark Hamill, Carrie Fisher, Billy Dee Williams. Dir: Richard Marquand.	Alien 4: Resurrection. Sigourney Weaver, Winona Ryder. Dir: Jean-Pierre Jeunet. Anastasia, Ani. Dirs: Don Bluth, Gary Goldman. Anna and the King. Rom./Dra., Chow-Yun Fat. Bookworm. Act./Thr.. Anthony Hopkins, Alec Baldwin. Dir. Lee Tamahori. Fantastic Voyage, Ac./SF. Dir Roland Emmerich. Firestorm, Ac./Adv., Howie Long, Suzy Amis. Dir. Dean Semler Great Expectations, Dra. Robert De Niro, Gwyneth Paltrow, Ethan Hawke. Dir. Alfonso Cuaron. Inventing the Abbots. Liv Tyler, Joaquin Phoenix. Dir: Pat D'Conner. A Life Less Ordinary, Dra. Cameron Diaz, Holly Hunter. Dir. Danny Boyle. Out to Sea, Com. Walter Matthau, Jack Lemmon. Dir: Martha Coolidge. Picture Perfect, Rom/Com. Jennifer Anniston. Dir: Glenn Gordon Caron. Planet of the Apes. Arnold Schwarzenegger. Dir: Danny Boyle. Speed II. Act. Sandra Bullock. Dir. Jan De Bont.	20th Century Fox (310) 369-1000 (212) 556-2400
	Liar, Liar, Spring, Com, Dolby SR, DTS. Jim Carrey, Maura Tierney, Cary Elwes, John Lovitz, Swoosie Kurtz, Jennifer Tilly. Dir: Tom Shadyac.	Commandments. Aidan Quinn, Courteney Cox. Dir: Daniel Taplitz. Dante's Peak. Act/Adv. Pierce Brosnan, Linda Hamilton. Dir: Roger Donaldson The Day of the Jackal, Thr. Bruce Willis, Richard Gere, Sidney Poitier. Dir: Michael Canton-Jones. The Fairy Godmother (or A Simple Wish), Com. Mara Wilson, Martin Short. Dir: Michael Ritchie Leave it to Beaver, Com. Janine Turner, Christopher McDonald. Dir: Andy Cadiff.The Long Rains, Act./Thriller, Dir.: John Frankenheimer. The Lost World. Memorial Day. Adv. SR, DTS. Jeff Goldblum, Julianne Moore. Dir: Steven Spielberg McHale's Navy, Com. Tom Arnold, David Alan Grier. Dir: Rod Daniel. Primary Colors. Fall '97. Dra. Emma Thompson. Dir: Mike Nichols. That Old Feeling, Com. Bette Midler, Dennis Farina, Danny Nucci. Dir: Carl Reiner. Reach the Rock, Dra. Bill Sadler, Karen Sillas. Dir: Bill Ryan.	Universal (818) 777-1000 (212) 759-7500
Incognito. Thr. Jason Patric. Dir: John Badham. L.A. Confidential, Dra. Kevin Spacey, Kim Basinger, Danny DeVito, Russell Crowe. Dir: Curtis Hanson. Fire, Dra. Billy Crudup, Donald Sutherland, Monica Potter, Judith Ivey. Dir: Robert Towne. Trojan War, Com. Will Friedle. Dir: George Huang	Cat's Don't Dance, 3/21, Ani. Voices: Scott Bakula, Kathy Najimy. Dir. Mark Dindal. 187, Dra. Samuel L. Jackson, John Heard. Dir: Kevin Reynolds. Wild America, Adv. Jonathan Taylor Thomas. Dir: Bill Dear. Fire Down Below, Act/Adv. Steven Segal.	Addicted to Love, Rom/Com. Meg Ryan, Matthew Broderick. Dir: Griffin Dunne. Anna Karenina, D, Sophie Marceau, Sean Bean, Mia Kirschner, Dir.: Bernard Rose. Batman and Robin. Act/Adv. George Clooney, Chris O'Donnell. Dir: Joel Schumacher. Father's Day (or Les Comperes), Com. Robin Williams, Billy Crystal. Dir. Ivan Reitman. Free Willy 3. Fam/Adv. Jason James Richter. Dir. Sam Pillsbury. Mad City,4/97, Dra/Thr. John Travolta, Dustin Hoffman. Dir: Constantin Costa-Garvas. Steel, Act. Shaquille O'Neal, Judd Nelson. Vegas Vacation. Chevy Chase, Beverly D'Angelo. Dir. Stephen Kessler.	Warner Bros. (818) 954-6000 (212) 484-8000

BOXOFFICE Independent Feature Chart JANUARY 1997

DECEMBER

CFP
212-995-9662

Losing Chase, Dra, R, 92 min. Helen Mirren, Kyra Sedgewick, Beau Bridges. Dir: Kevin Bacon. 12/6

Films Incorporated
800-323-4222, ext. 200

Walkabout (re-issue, director's cut), Dra, 100 min. Jenny Agutter, Lucien John. Dir: Nicolas Roeg. 12/27

Fine Line
212-649-4800

Shine, Dra, PG-13, 105 min. Armin Mueller-Stahl, Lynn Redgrave, Sir John Gielgud. Dir: Scott Hicks. 11/22 ltd, 12/25, 1/17/97, 1/31/97 exp

Gramercy
310-777-1960

I'm Not Rappaport, Com, PG-13, 135 min. Walter Matthau, Ossie Davis, Amy Irving. Dir: Herb Gardner. 12/26

Portrait of a Lady, Dra, PG-13, 150 min. Nicole Kidman, John Malkovich, Barbara Hershey. Dir: Jane Campion. 12/27

Fox Searchlight
310-369-4402

Ice Storm, Dra. Kevin Kline, Joan Allen, Sigourney Weaver, Christina Ricci. Dir: Ang Lee. 12/20 NY, LA

New Yorker Films
212-247-6110

La Ceremonie (France), Thr, 111 min. Isabelle Huppert, Sandrine Bonnaire. Dir: Claude Chabrol. 12/20

Sony Classics
212-833-8851

The Whole Wide World, Rom/Dra, PG, 111 min. Rene Zellweger, Vincent D'Onofrio. Dir: Dan Ireland. 12/25

Les Voleurs, Dra. Daniel Auteuil, Laurence Cote, Catherine Deneuve. Dir: Andrew Techine.

Trimark
310-314-3040

Kama Sutra, Dra, 114 min. Sarita Choudhury, Naveen Andrews. Dir: Mira Nair.

JANUARY '97

Arrow
212-258-2200

Farmer and Chase, Dra, NR 97 min. Ben Gazzara, Lara Flynn Boyle. Dir: Michael Seltzman. 1/10 NY

CFP

Angel Baby (Australia), Dra, NR, 105 min. John Lynch. Dir: Michael Rymer. 1/10

Guantanamera, Com, 124 min. Carlos Cruz. Dirs: Thomas Gutierrez Alea and Juan Carlos Tabio Rey. 1/24

Concorde-New Horizon
310-820-6733

Terminal Virus, SF, 86 min. 1/8/

Blood Song, Hor, 86 min. 1/22

Dove
310-786-1600

Flipping, Thr, R, 110 min. Keith David, David Amos, David Proval. Dir: Gene Mitchell. 1/97

Filmopolis
310-914-1776

Blue Juice (UK), Com/Dra, 100 min. Sean Pertwee. Dir: Carl Prechezer.

Fine Line

Nowhere. Dir: Gregg Araki. 1/24

First Look
310-855-1199

johns, Dra., R, 99 min. David Arquette, Lukas Haas, Keith David. Dir: Scott Silver. 1/31

First Run
212-243-0600

The Jew (Portugese), Dra, 85 min. Dir: Jom Tob Azulay. 1/8 NY

Fox Searchlight

Blood and Wine, Dra, R. Jack Nicholson. Dir: Bob Rafelson.

Gramercy

Gridlock'd, Dra. Tupac Shakur, Tim Roth. Dir: Vondie Curtis Hall.

Greycat
702-737-0670

Parallel Sons, Rom/Dra, 93 min. Gabriel Mick, Laurence Mason. Dir: John C. Young. 1/97 NY

Kino Intl.

A Tickle in the Heart, Doc, 83 min. Dir: Stefan Schweitert. 1/25 NY

Saint Clara (Israel), Dra, 85 min. Dir: Ori Sivan and Ari Fu. 1/29

Orion
310-282-2948

Prisoner of the Mountains (Russian), Dra. Dir: Sergei Budrov. 1/97 LA, 2/97 NY

Strand

Boys Life 2, (shorts compilation), Com/Dra, 90 min. Dir: Four directors.

The Graduate (1967 reissue), Com/Dra, 105 min, R. Dustin Hoffman. Dir: Mike Nichols.

Inside, Dra, 95 min. Nigel Hawthorne, Eric Stoltz. Dir: Arthur Penn.

Trimark

Meet Wally Sparks, Com, PG-13. Rodney Dangerfield, David Ogden Stiers. Dir: Peter Baldwin. 1/10

Nothing Personal, Dra, R. John Lynch. Dir: Thaddeus O'Sullivan.

Ripe, Dra. Dir: Mo Ogrodnik.

Sprung. 1/31

FEBRUARY '97

CFP

Margaret's Museum (Canada), Dra, R 118 min. Helena Bonham Carter, Kate Nelligan. Dir: Mort Ransen. 2/7

The Daytrippers, Com, 90 min. Parker Posey, Stanley Tucci. Dir: Greg Mottola. 2/14

Sir John Gielgud and Noah Taylor in Fine Line's "Shine."

Dove

Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy, Com/SF, 92 min. Featuring Douglas Adams. Dir: Neil Davies.

Inside the Goldmine, Thr, 92 min. Josh Evans, Alicia Tully Jensen. Dir: Josh Evans.

Fine Line

Love Letter (Japan), Dra, PG, 116 min. Miho Nakayama, Etsushi Toyokawa. Dir: Shunji Iwai.

Roseanna's Grave, Com. Jean Reno, Mercedes Ruehl, Polly Walker, Mark Frankel. Dir: Paul Weiland. 2/14

First Look

Slaves to the Underground, Dra. Dir: Kristine Peterson.

First Run

Boyfriends (England), Dra/Com, 82 min. Dirs: Neil Hunter and Tom Hunsinger. 2/14

Fox Searchlight

The Van, Com, R. Colm Meaney, Donal O'Kelly, Ger Ryan. Dir: Stephen Frears. 2/14

Smilla's Sense of Snow, Thr. Julia Ormond, Gabriel Byrne. Dir: Billie August. 2/28

Goldwyn
310-284-9273

Hard Eight (formerly Sydney), Dra, Gwyneth Paltrow, Samuel L. Jackson, Colm Meaney. Dir: Paul Thomas Anderson. 2/7

Gramercy

When We Were Kings, Doc. Dir: Leon Gast. 2/14

Live
818-778-3174

Hotel De Love, Rom/Com, 93 min. Aden Young, Simon Bossell, Saffron Burrows. Dir: Craig Rosenberg. 2/7 LA, 2/14 exp

BOXOFFICE Independent Feature Chart JANUARY 1997

Seventh Art
213-845-1455

Salut Cousin (French Algeria), Com. Dir: Merzak Allouache.

Sony Classics

SubUrbia, Com/Dra. Giovanni Ribisi, Steve Zahn, Parker Posey. Dir: Richard Linklater. 2/7

Broken English, Dra. Sashka Vujcic, Rade Serbedzija. Dir: Gregor Nicholas.

Trimark

Warrior of Waverly Street, SF. Joseph Mazzello. Dir: Manny Coto.

Triumph
310-280-8059

Bliss, Rom/Dra. Terence Stamp, Craig Sheffer. Dir: Lance Young. 2/14

MARCH '97

Artificial Eye
212-255-1922

Monhomme (France), Com/Dra, 95 min. Dir: Bertrand Blier. 3/7

CFP

Hollow Reed, Dra, 106 min. Martin Donovan, Ian Hart, Joely Richardson. Dir: Angela Pope.

The Pillow Book, Dra, 126 min. Vivian Wu, Ewan McGregor. Dir: Peter Greenaway.

Fine Line

All Over Me. 3/7

Anthem. 3/21.

Crash, Dra, 100 min. Holly Hunter, James Spader, Rosanna Arquette, Elias Koteas. Dir: David Cronenberg.

The Quiet Room, Dra. Chloe Ferguson, Celine O'Leary, Paul Blackwell. Dir: Rolf de Heer. 3/21

Fox Searchlight

Love and Other Catastrophes (Australia), Com. Alice Garner. Dir: Emma Kate Croghan. 3/21

Goldwyn

Napolean, Ani, G, 82 min. Voices: Adam Wylie, Bronson Pinchot. Dir: Mario Andreacchio. 3/11

Gramercy

Commandments, Dra. Courteney Cox, Aidan Quinn.

Live

Gentlemen Don't Eat Poets, Dra. Sting, Theresa Russell. Dir: John Paul Davidson.

New Yorker Films

Flamenco, Doc. Manolo Sanlucar, Matilde Coral, Manuela Carrasco. Dir: Carlos Saura.

Orion

Independence, Dra. Dean Cain, Drew Barrymore. Dir: Tamra Davis. 3/97

Strand

Nights of Cabiria (1957 Italian reissue), Dra, 110 min. Giulietta Masina, Francois Perier. Dir: Federico Fellini.

APRIL '97

CFP

Bandwagon, Com/Mus, 103 min. Kevin Corrigna, Lee Holmes. Dir: John Schultz.

Fine Line

Love! Valor! Compassion! Dra. Jason Alexander, John Glover. 4/23

Pink Flamingos (1972 reissue). Divine. Dir: John Waters.

First Look

This is the Sea, Rom/Dra. Richard Harris, John Lynch, Gabriel Byrne. Dir: Mary McGuckian. 4/97

Fox Searchlight

Paradise Road, Dra. Glenn Close, Frances McDormand, Julianna Marguiles, Jean Simmons. Dir: Bruce Beresford.

Goldwyn

Kissed, Dra, 80 min. Molly Parker, Peter Outerbridge. Dir: Lynne Stopkewich. 4/11

Gramercy

How To Be a Player, Com. Bill Belamy. Dir: Lionel Martin. 4/97

MAY '97

Artificial Eye

Le Bonheur Dans Lepres (France), Com, 102 min. Dir: Etienne Chatiliez. 5/16

Fox Searchlight

Intimate Relations, Dra. Julie Walters, Rupert Graves. Dir: Philip Goodhew. 5/9 ltd.

Orion

Eight Heads in a Duffle Bag, Com/Dra. Joe Pesci, Carol Kane, Kristy Swanson, George Hamilton. Dir: Tom Schulman. 5/97

FORTHCOMING

Cabin Fever
203-622-3449

The Elevator, Com. Martin Landau, Martin Sheen.

The Secret Agent Club, Act. Hulk Hogan, Barry Bostwick.

Skeletons, Hor. Dir: Ken Russell.

CFP

Shivers, Hor, 87 min. Paul Hampton, Joe Silver, Lynn Lowry. Dir: David Cronenberg.

Dove

Wrong Exit, Dra. Billy Campbell, Heather Graham. Dir: Bo Zenga.

Dreamworks SKG
818-733-7000

El Dorado: City of Gold, Ani. Dir: Will Finn.

Mousehunt, Com/Ani. Nathan Lane. Dir: Gore Virbinsky.

The Peacemaker, Act/Adv. George Clooney, Nicole Kidman, Gary Werntz, Holt McCallany. Dir: Mimi Leder.

The Prince of Egypt, Ani.

Fine Line

Head Above Water, Dra/Com. Harvey Keitel, Cameron Diaz, Billy Zane. Dir: Jim Wilson.

The Tears of Julian Po. Christian Slater, Robin Tunney.

Winter Guest. Emma Thompson. Dir: Alan Rickman. 6/18

First Look

The Apprentices (France), Com, 97 min. Francois Cluzet, Guillaume Depardieu. Dir: Pierre Salvadori.

The Designated Mourner. Dra/Com. Mike Nichols, Miranda Richardson. Dir: David Hare.

Hugo Pool, Rom/Com. Robert Downey Jr., Sean Penn, Cathy Moriarty. Dir: Robert Downey Sr.

Fox Searchlight

Cousin Bette, Dra. Jessica Lange, Elisabeth Shue, Bob Hoskins. Dir: Des McAnuff.

Goldwyn

Paperback Romance (formerly Lucky Break), Rom/Com. Anthony LaPaglia. Dir: Ben Lewin.

Gramercy

The Eighth Day (France), 108 min. Daniel Auteuil, Pascal Duquenne. Dir: Jaco Van Dormael.

Kit Parker
800-538-5838

Day For Night (1973 French reissue), Dra, PG, 120 min. Francois Truffaut, Jacqueline Bisset. Dir: Francois Truffaut.

Death in Venice (1971 Italian reissue), Dra, PG, 130 min. Dirk Bogarde, Mark Burns. Dir: Luchino Visconti.

Legacy
213-461-3936

Adrenaline, Thr. Christopher Lambert, Natasha Henstridge. 11/97

Live

DMZ, Act/Dra. Michael Biehn. Dir: Steven Anderson. 6/97

Critical Care, Dra/Thr. James Spader, Albert Brooks, Kyra Sedgewick, Helen Mirren. Dir: Sydney Lumet. 10/97

Movieworld Ent.
510-244-5590

The Killing Kind, Dra. Kirk Harris.

New Yorker Films

Forever Mozart, 84 min. Madeleine Assas, Frederick Pierrot. Dir: Jean-Luc Godard.

Gabbeh, Dra, 75 min. Dir: Mohsen Makhmalbas.

A Mongolian Tale (China), Dra. Dir: Xie Fei.

October

Kicked in the Head. James Woods, Michael Rappaport. 6/97

Lost Highway, Dra/Thr, R. Bill Pullman, Patricia Arquette. Dir: David Lynch.

Orion

Ulee's Gold, Dra. Peter Fonda. Dir: Victor Nunez. 6/97

Gang Related, Dra, R. Tupac Shakur, Jim Belushi, Lela Rochon. Dir: Jim Kous. 9/97

Sony Classics

Call Me Victor (France), Com, PG, 100 min. Jeanne Moreau. Dir: Guy Jacques.

The Myth of Fingerprints, Dra. Noah Wyle, Julianne Moore. Dir: Bart Freundlich.

Waiting for Guffman, Com. R, 82 min. Eugene Levy, Parker Posey, Catherine O'Hara, Fred Willard. Dir/Star: Christopher Guest.

Strand

Contempt (1963 French-Italian reissue), Com, 103 min. Brigitte Bardot, Fritz Lang. Dir: Jean-Luc Godard.

The Tit and the Moon, Com, 92 min. Dir: Bigas Lunas.

Tara
415-454-5838

Mushrooms (Australia), Com, 93 min. Julia Blake, Lynette Curran. Dir: Alan Madden.

Trimark

Crimetime, Thr, R. Stephen Baldwin. Dir: George Sluizer.

Underworld, Thr. Denis Leary, Joe Mantegna. Dir: Roger Christian.

Triumph

Jackal (or Untitled Carlos Project). Aidan Quinn, Ben Kingsley. Dir: Christian Duguay.

Smart Alec, Act/Com. Patrick Stewart, Vincent Kartheiser, Brenda Fricker. Dir: Roger Christian

THE BOXOFFICE HOME RELEASE CHART

BOXOFFICE

JANUARY 1997

HOME VIDEO RELEASE DATE	TITLE	BOXOFFICE GROSS	SCREENS	THEATRICAL RELEASE	THEATRICAL/VIDEO DISTRIBUTOR
January 7	Fled	$17,200,000	2,104	July 19	MGM/UA
January 7	Kingpin	$25,000,000	1,975	July 26	MGM/UA
January 14	Bordello of Blood	$5,600,000	1,695	August 16	MCA/Universal
January 14	Phenomenon	$103,100,000+	2,139	July 3	Buena Vista/Touchstone
January 14	She's the One	$9,500,000	459	August 23	Fox
January 21	Eddie	$31,000,000	2,000	May 31	Buena Vista/Hollywood
January 21	Escape From L.A.	$25,000,000	2,312	August 9	Paramount
January 28	Dead Man	$1,100,000	37	May 10	Gramercy/PolyGram
January 28	The Fan	$18,500,000	2,016	August 16	TriStar/Columbia TriStar
January 28	Il Postino	$21,300,000	430	June 16 (1995)	Buena Vista/Miramax
January	Bogus	$7,620,000	1,209	September 6	Warner Bros.
January	Carpool	$3,300,000	1,487	August 23	Warner Bros.
January	Courage Under Fire	$59,000,000	2,001	July 12	Fox
January	Harriet the Spy	$26,400,000	1,876	July 10	Paramount
January	Joe's Apartment	$4,600,000	1,512	July 26	Warner Bros.
January	A Time to Kill	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
February 1	Trigger Effect	$3,600,000	524	August 30	MCA/Universal
February	Chain Reaction	$20,600,000	2,256	August 2	Fox

January	Harriet the Spy	$26,400,000	1,876	July 10	Paramount
January	Joe's Apartment	$4,600,000	1,512	July 26	Warner Bros.
January	A Time to Kill	$108,300,000+	2,313	July 26	Warner Bros.
February 1	Trigger Effect	$3,600,000	524	August 30	MCA/Universal
February	Chain Reaction	$20,600,000	2,256	August 2	Fox
February	Big Night	$7,600,000	366	September 20	MGM/UA
February	Emma	$22,000,000	585	August 2	Buena Vista/Miramax
February	First Kid	$24,800,000	1,878	August 30	Buena Vista/Hollywood
February	House Arrest	$7,000,000	1,623	August 14	MGM/UA
February	Jack	$56,600,000	2,232	August 9	Buena Vista/Hollywood
February	Lone Star	$11,900,000+	189	June 21	Sony Classics
February	Maximum Risk	$14,100,000	2,358	September 13	Columbia/Columbia TriStar
February	Rich Man's Wife	$8,300,000	1009	September 13	Buena Vista/Hollywood
February	Supercop	$16,100,000+	1,469	July 26	Buena Vista/Miramax
February	A Very Brady Sequel	$21,300,000+	2,147	August 23	Paramount
February	Walking and Talking	$1,300,000	60	July 17	Buena Vista/Miramax
March 4	Hunchback of Notre Dame	$98,600,000+	2,835	June 21	Buena Vista/Walt Disney
March	Alaska	$11,500,000	1,566	August 14	Columbia/Columbia TriStar
March	Extreme Measures	$17,300,000	2,298	September 27	Columbia/Columbia TriStar
March	Kansas City	$1,350,000	215	August 16	Fine Line
March	Solo	$5,000,000	1,230	August 23	Triumph
March	The Spitfire Grill	$12,500,000	1,247	August 23	Columbia/Columbia TriStar
March	Trainspotting	$16,100,000+	357	July 19	Buena Vista/Miramax
March	2 Days In the Valley	$10,900,000	855	September 27	MGM/UA
April	First Wives Club	$97,100,000+	2,406	September 20	Paramount
April	Fly Away Home	$22,700,000+	1,401	September 13	Columbia/Columbia TriStar
April	Last Man Standing	$17,700,000	2,579	September 20	New Line

Compiled by BOXOFFICE MAGAZINE. Numbers for Boxoffice Gross represent total domestic boxoffice grosses to the nearest $100,000; + signs indicate that films remain in theatrical release. Number of Screens indicates the maximum number of screens in widest, simultaneous release. Entries in the Theatrical/Video Distributor column list two names when the video releasing company is different from (or releases through a subsidiary different from) the theatrical distributor. Exact day-and-date specific entries for Home Video Release are confirmed; in all other cases, the month indicated for a release is forecast by the editors of BOXOFFICE. BOXOFFICE is not liable for errors or omissions in the chart.

ADVERTISER INDEX

Automaticket/Hurley Screen	55
Cal-Rand, Inc.	45
Cinetech Inc.	51
Component Engineering	36
D.T.S.	13
Dolby Laboratories	9
Electronic Creations, Inc.	73
Equipment, Etc.	47
Hadden Theatre Supply	43
Hafler Professional	15
International Cinema Equipment	73
Kelmar Systems	33
Lucasfilm Ltd.	29
Marlin Software	C-2
Maroevich, O'Shea & Coghlan	47
MovieFone	35
National Cinema Service Corp.	40
National Cinema Supply Co.	41
National Ticket Co.	43
Odyssey Products, Inc.	37
Peavey Electronics Corp.	23
QSC Audio	C-3
Smart Theatre Systems	5, 25
Sony Cinema Products Corp.	7
Stein Industries Inc.	51, C-4
Troy Sound Wall Systems	17
Ultra-Stereo	21
Worrell Sound	45

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

RATES: $1.00 per word, minimum $25, $15 extra for box number assignment. Send copy with check to BOXOFFICE, P.O. Box 25485, Chicago, IL 60625, at least 60 days prior to publication.

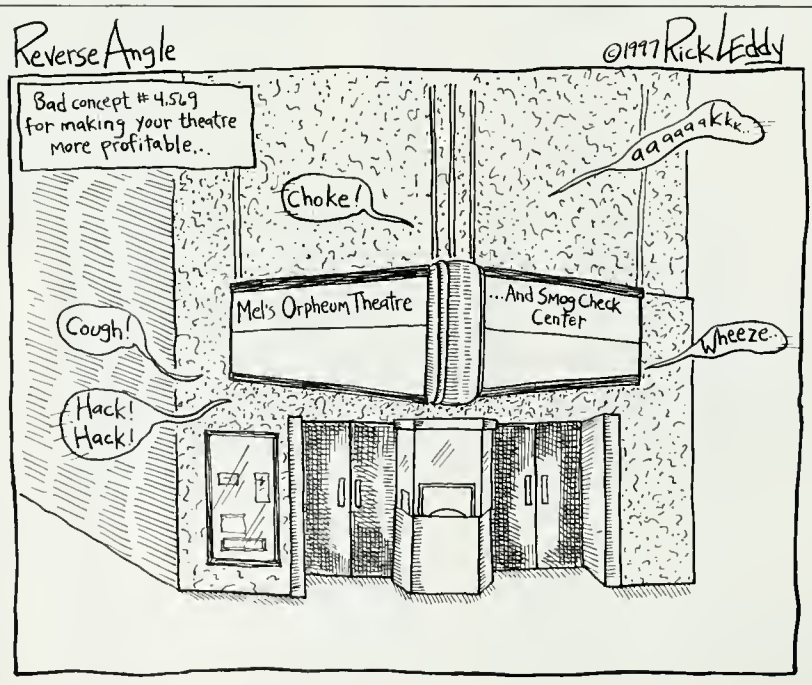
HELP WANTED

ART/FOREIGN CINEMAS need experienced multiplex and espresso/deli managers. Camera Cinemas, P.O. Box 720728, San Jose, CA 95113. Fax resume to (408) 294-3300.

LET THE GOVERNMENT FINANCE your new or existing small business. Grants/loans to $500,000. Free recorded message: (707) 448-0201. (RN7)

Manager and Management Trainee positions are available. We are people-oriented and believe that excellent customer service and state-of-the-art technology are the keys to success in the movie theatre/swap meet industry. We offer a wide variety of benefits, competitive salaries and opportunities for professional growth. Join our team as we expand in California, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico, Utah and beyond. If you are looking for growth and opportunity, have the ability to prepare, monitor and achieve budgetary goals, and have the enthusiasm and the ability to manage/motivate people, now is the time to let us hear from you! Theatre/Swap or other management experience required and some college helpful. Send your resume and salary requirements to Century Theatres and Swaps, Attn: Human Resources—Job Code MGR1096, 150 Golden Gate Ave., San Francisco, CA 94102. No faxes or phone calls please.

Expanding national circuit is looking for experienced multiplex managers and assistant managers. Immediate opportunities in the Northeast, South-Central and West Coast regions. Send resume/references and salary requirements to Boxoffice Response Number 4732. All inquiries held in strictest confidence.



Regal Cinemas Inc. has opportunities available for experienced multiplex managers and assistant managers in the southern and eastern areas of the country. Individuals must be self-starters and possess the leadership qualities needed to thrive within an aggressively expanding circuit. Salary commensurate with experience plus concession commission and benefits. Replies held in strictest confidence. Send resume and references to: Regal Cinemas, 7132 Commercial Park Drive, Knoxville, TN 37918, Attention: Jan Frazee.

THE MOVIE INDUSTRY HAS OPENINGS FOR YOU!!! Cineplex Odeon is EXPANDING its operations with new locations and newly enlarged existing locations throughout its Chicagoland area and other major cities in the United States. This will offer many opportunities for qualified candidates to join our management team, including several current openings. If you are a team player, enjoy working with the public and are interested in a career in the entertainment field, consider looking into the following openings: THEATRE MANAGERS, ASSISTANT MANAGERS, MANAGER TRAINEES. Cinema theatre experience would be helpful. We offer good pay benefits and opportunities for advancement within the company. For confidential consideration, please fax or mail a resume to: VP Operations, Cineplex Odeon Corp., 70 E. Lake St., Suite 1600, Chicago, IL 60601. Fax: (312) 726-2732. EOE—M/F/D/V.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE

ACOUSTIC SOUND PANELS & CUSTOM WALL DRAPERIES available in flameproofed colors and fabrics, artistic or plain. CINEMA CONSULTANTS & SERVICES INTERNATIONAL INC., P.O. Box 9672, Pittsburgh, PA 15226. Phone (412) 343-3900; Fax (412) 343-2992.

BURLAP WALL COVERING DRAPES: $2.05 per yard, flame retardant. Quantity discounts. Nurse & Co., Millbury Rd., Oxford, MA 01540 (508) 832-4295.

Century, Simplex, Christie, Prevost, Cinemeccanica projection systems, seating, concession, boxoffice, ticketing, platters, lamphouses, consoles, automation, sound systems, lenses, all in stock. Factory new, rebuilt with warranty or used. Call us for a quote on your next single or multiplex job. Full consultation, engineering, design, installation, service and support worldwide. International Cinema Equipment Co. Inc., 100 NE 39th Street, Miami, FL 33137, USA. Phone (305) 573-7339, fax (305) 573-8101. Internet: http://www.ICECO.com. E-mail: ICECO@concentric.com.

COMPLETE THEATRE EQUIPMENT: (New, Used or Rebuilt) Century SA, R#, RCA 9030, 1040, 1050 Platters: 2 and 5 Tier, Xenon Systems 1000-4000 Watt, Sound Systems mono and stereo, automations, ticket machines, curtain motors, electric rewinds, lenses, large screen video projectors. Plenty of used chairs. PROFESSIONAL SERVICE AND INSTALLATION AVAILABLE OOLBY CERTIFIED. Call Bill Younger, Cinema Equipment, Inc., 1375 N.W. 97th Ave., Suite 14, Miami, FL 33172. (305) 594-0570. Fax (305) 592-6970. 1-800-848-8886.

CUPHOLDER ARMREST. "State of the art." Call Cy Young Industries Inc. 800-729-2610.

DIGITAL AND ANALOG STEREO SOUND SYSTEMS: Dolby DA-10/CAT.700 $6,750; CP-200 $7,500; CP-100 $2,450; CP-65 $5,850; CP-55 $4,250; CP-50 $1,950; CP-45 $3,950; DTS Digital $3,900; Sony SDDS $7,995; Smart MOD II $1,450; Eprad Starscope 4 $1,200; Eprad Starscope 6 $1,950; Eprad Starlet $1,200; Kintek front surround system $1,950. QSC, EV, JBL speakers, amplifiers, crossovers all at considerable savings. Upgrade now and save. International Cinema Equipment Co. Inc., 100 NE 39th Street, Miami, FL 33137, USA. Phone (305) 573-7339, fax (305) 573-8101. See our home page on the Internet at http://www.ICECO.com. Loads of bargains. Or E-mail: ICECO@concentric.com.

EXPORT SPECIALS—16, 35 AND 70MM: Cinemeccanica V-4, 5, 8, 9, 10, 12 projection systems, Kinoton FP-18, FP-20, DP-75, DP-70, Bauer U-3 and 4, Prevost P-55, P-93, P-16, Zeiss, Meopta, Tokiwa, BTH, Westrex, and much more. The world's largest supplier of refurbished and new projection systems. INSTALLATIONS ANYWHERE. SERVICE WORLDWIDE. 220V/380V 50 cycles/60 cycles. What do you need? Trades accepted. Catalogs available. International Cinema Equipment Co. Inc., 100 NE 39th Street, Miami, FL 33137, USA. (305) 573-7339, fax (305) 573-8101. Home page: http://www.ICECO.com; E-mail: ICECO@concentric.com.

FOR SALE: Equipment from twin theatre, very good condition. Includes projection equipment (Christie), Christie platters, stereo and DTS sound system, speakers, etc. Also, Irwin Citation seats with cupholder armrests. Reply to P.O. Box 56, Duncansville, PA 16635.

Immaculate 35mm Century projection equipment (w/ORC lamphouses). 330 American Stellar seats in excellent shape. Call (603) 224-2751 or write Box 830, Concord, NH 03302.

MICRO-FM™ STEREO RADIO Sound Systems for Drive-In Theatres. Meets FCC part 15. Static free. Available soon: low cost Micro-FM-jr. For the hearing impaired. Call or write: AUDIO VISUAL SYSTEMS & ENG., 320 St. Louis Ave., Woonsocket, RI 02895. (401) 767-2080; Fax (401) 767-2081.

OPTICAL SERVICES! CUSTOM OPTICAL OR GLASS NEEDS? Need anti-reflective porthole glass? We can help! Call ULTRAFLAT, 20306 Sherman Way, Winnetka, CA 91306, (818) 884-0184. http://www.cris.com/~Ultraflt

Rebuilt Century SA & R3 projector/soundhead $4250. Simplex XL $4450. Xenon lamps, platters, many lenses, excellent line of other used projection and sound equipment. TANKERSLY ENTERPRISES, P.O. Box 2039, Denver, CO 80201. (303) 298-8077; fax (303) 296-4080.

PURCHASE THE MOST WIDELY USED COMPUTERIZED ticketing and concession systems for as low as $139 per month. Complete systems start at $2,340. Includes free technical support, installation, and warranty. System Operating Solutions. Call (800) 434-3098.

(SCG) PORTHOLE GLASS. It's a CRYSTAL CLEAR GLASS that's perfect for projecting color images through, resulting in the CLEAREST, SHARPEST & BRIGHTEST IMAGE you can possibly get, with glass or plastics. Plus, it allows LIGHT & COLOR to pass through it WITHOUT IMAGE DISTORTION. For more information, and a FREE (SCG) SAMPLE, call LEE'S PHOTO PRODUCTS at (630) 595-6469, or fax (847) 985-9104

TABLET TRAYS. Fits into all cupholder armrests. Call Cy Young Industries Inc. at 800-729-2610.

TELEPHONE ANSWERING EQUIPMENT. All major brands of reliable, heavy-duty tape announcers and digital announcers are available at discounted prices. Please call Jim at Answering Machine Specialty, (800) 222-7773.

TICKET MACHINES: 5-unit oldest style (one motor drives all), good for parts. AW-2 parts: dual motors; 52" platter-discs; modules; trees with roller/arms. Submit offer for used items. Also center feed-out assemblies, new and used for Super-Platter. WE REBUILD INTERMITTENTS: REPAIR/EXCHANGE AVAILABLE! Cinema Equipment Sales, (714) 470-0298, fax (714) 470-0835.

Two Ballantyne Pro-35s and two Mark VII soundheads. Excellent condition. Plus many new spares. Call Larry, (619) 321-0866.

USED PROJECTION EQUIPMENT: Replacement equipment, single or multi booths available. Please call if you are purchasing or selling. CINEMA CONSULTANTS & SERVICES INTERNATIONAL INC., P.O. Box 9672, Pittsburgh, PA 15226. (412) 343-3900, Fax (412) 343-2992.

USED PROJECTION/SOUND EQUIPMENT. Century SA—2 pcs @ $2,000 each; Cinemeccanica V8R—2 pcs @ $3,500 each; Simplex XL-ST gates—2 pcs @ $2,000 each. Ship anywhere. (818) 444-7090; fax (818) 444-6863.

USED PROJECTION: Sound heads, sound equipment, etc., Century, Simplex, Cinemeccanica, Altec, JBL, etc. Kurluff Enterprises, (818) 444-7079; fax (818) 444-6863.

WESTAR QUALITY CINEMA EQUIPMENT, PARTS & ACCESSORIES: New Westar multi-coated projection lenses now available from stock. 50, 55, 60, 65, 70, 75, 80, 85, 90mm. Fully guaranteed $450. Westar 35mm splicers, heavy duty, $275. Westar projectors and soundheads, new, 2 year parts warranty, in stock. Westar precision projector parts for your Westar, Century, Westrex, Cinecita, RCA, Simplex, or Monee projectors and soundheads in stock at discount prices. Free catalogs and price lists. Trades accepted. International Cinema Equipment Co. Inc., 100 NE 39th Street, Miami, FL 33137, USA. (305) 573-7339, fax (305) 573-8101. Internet: http://www.ICECO.com. E-mail: ICECO@concentric.com.

EQUIPMENT WANTED

VINTAGE TUBE TYPE AMPS, woofers, drivers, horns, parts, from Western Electric, Westrex, Altec, Jensen, JBL, EV, Tannoy, McIntosh, Marantz. Phone David at (818) 441-3942. P.O. Box 80371, San Manno, CA 91118-8371.

WANTED DEAD OR ALIVE: We will purchase Century projectors or soundheads, new or old, complete or incomplete, for cash. Also interested in XL and SH-1000. Call (502) 499-0050. Fax (502) 499-0052, Hadden Theatre Supply Co., attn. Louis.

We will buy or trade for used/new equipment on any projector/soundhead/platter/lamphouse/console/speakers/lens and concession equipment. We can remove or pick up anywhere in the U.S. or overseas. Call (303) 298-8077 or fax (303) 296-4080. Tankersley Enterprises, P.O. Box 2039, Denver, CO 80201.

WE BUY TICKETING AND CONCESSION SYSTEMS! CALL (360) 805-9396.

WE WILL PURCHASE your used theatre equipment. Consignments, outright purchases, trades, what have you? There is only one INTERNATIONAL CINEMA EQUIPMENT COMPANY at one location in the USA. Buy and sell from the original and buy with confidence. International Cinema Equipment Co. Inc., 100 NE 39th Street, Miami, FL 33137, USA. Phone (305) 573-7339, fax (305) 573-8101. Internet: http://www.ICECO.com. E-mail: ICECO@concentric.com.

THEATRES FOR SALE/LEASE

COUNT YOUR MONEY ON THE BEACH!! Award-winning Florida Gulf Coast theatre now for sale. Serving an affluent, year-round, niche market, theatre has virtually no competition. An area landmark for over 50 years, located on valuable beach area property, theatre is a mix of classic architecture and backstage modernization. Call or fax now for fact sheet. Ask for Ms. Cruz at (813) 360-6697, or fax (813) 360-5154.

ONE TO SIX SCREEN THEATRES: For sale locations: Flushing, NY; Merced, CA; Montclair, CA; New City, NY; Philadelphia, PA. For sublease locations: Dallas, TX; El Paso, TX, Mesa, AZ; Milwaukee, WI; Kansas City, MO; Phoenix, AZ; Sparks, NV. Call David Nigro at (305) 285-1035.

700- and 350-seat first-run cinemas in California town of 24,000. Well-maintained with reliable staff. Seller financing to cover both profitable operations and real property. Agent. (805) 836-6296.

THEATRES WANTED

Indoor/Drive-In theatre wanted to purchase/lease in Ohio or adjacent states. P.O. Box 771092, Lakewood, OH 44107.

Several of our clients are seeking to buy or lease multi-screen theatres in the eastern U.S. Call toll free: Theatre Confections Inc., (888) 271-0858.

DRIVE-IN CONSTRUCTION

DRIVE-IN SCREEN TOWERS Since 1945 Selby Products, Inc., P.O. Box 267, Richfield, Ohio 44286 (216) 659-6631, 800-647-6224.

SCREEN TOWERS INTERNATIONAL New, used, transplanted, complete tower service. Box 399, Rogers, TX 76569. Phone: 800-642-3591.

THEATRE SEATING

"ALL AMERICAN SEATING" by the EXPERTS! Used seats of quality. Various makes, American Bodiform and Stellars from $12.50 to $32.50. Irwins from $12.50 to $30.00. Heywood & Massey rockers from $25.00. Full rebuilding available. New Hussey chairs from $70.00. All types theatre projection and sound equipment. New and used. We ship and install all makes. Try us! We sell no Junk! TANKERSLEY ENTERPRISES P.O. BOX 2039, 2100 Stout Street, Denver, CO 80201 Phone: 303-298-8077 Fax: 303-296-4080.

ALLSTATE SEATING is a company that is specializing in refurbishing, complete painting, molded foam, tailor-made seat covers, installations, removals. Please call for pricing and spare parts for all types of theatre seating. Boston, MA. Phone (617) 268-2221, FAX (617) 268-7011.

"BOOSTER B. SAURUS" Child booster seats. Call Cy Young Industries Inc. at 800-729-2610.

ON-SITE UPHOLSTERY and replacement covers. Parts available for many chairs. Our "Bakers Dozen" gives you 13 covers for the cost of 12. Nationwide service. Free samples made up. Call Complete Industries for pricing. (800) 252-6837.

SEAT AND BACK COVERS: Most fabrics in stock. Molded cushions. Cy Young Industries, 800-729-2610.

SEATING FOR SALE: One of the largest selections of used theatre seating in the USA. Irwin Citations from $25, American Stellar M35s from $20, American highback deluxe rockers from $27.50, Wakefield self risers from $20. Thousands of bargains. Photos available. International Cinema Equipment Co. Inc., 100 NE 39th Street, Miami, FL 33137, USA. (305) 573-7339, fax (305) 573-8101.

SEATS CLEANED on site, $1.56-$2.36 per seat (coast to coast). Call (800) 879-2311, 24 hours, for brochure and information. The Carpet Cleaner, Box 154, Osceola, MO 64776.

USED AUDITORIUM CHAIRS: Choose from a large selection of different makes and models and colors, American Stellars and Irwin Citations competitively priced, shipped and installed. ACOUSTIC SOUND PANELS AND CUSTOM WALL DRAPERIES available in flameproofed colors and fabrics, artistic or plain. CINEMA CONSULTANTS & SERVICES INTERNATIONAL, Inc. P.O. Box 9672, Pittsburgh, PA. 15226. Phone (412) 343-3900, Fax (412) 343-2992.

SERVICES

FRONT END INSTALLATION with frames, motors and masking tracks. Call Cy Young Industries Inc. 800-729-2610.

NEW FILM BUYING/BOOKING SERVICE—BEST RATES AROUND! Let us book your theatre and watch your business grow. Check us out. We have a lot to offer! Call (307) 634-3980.

SOUND/DRAPING FABRICS IN STOCK. All new selection of fabrics. Installation on brackets available, or sewn in pleated drapes. Call Cy Young Industries Inc., 800-729-2610.

SOUNDFOLDS & CURTAINS cleaned and fireproofed on site $.20-$.40 per hung sq. ft. (coast to coast). Call (800) 879-2311, 24 hours, for brochure and information. The Carpet Cleaner, P.O. Box 154, Osceola, MO 64776.

ULTRAFLAT. REFLECTORS: Why buy new when you can have it restored? "Hopeless" cases restored to brightness. Call your dealer or ULTRAFLAT, 20306 Sherman Way, Winnetka, CA 91306. (818) 884-0184. http://www.cris.com~Ultraflt

WE REPAIR AND SUPPORT the most widely used ticketing and concession systems. Our prices are approximately 50% less than our competitors. Our customers include 30% of the top 50 circuits and many independents. Ask about our thermal printer service. System Operating Solutions. Call (800) 434-3098.

"WHILE THE THEATRE SLEEPS" On-site reupholstery. Top fabrics, molded seat cushions and "State of the Art" Cy Young cupholders. Call Cy Young Industries Inc., 800-729-2610.

MISCELLANEOUS

8 to 35MM EDUCATIONAL, Adult, Exploitation—all subjects. Features, shorts. Buy/sell any size collection. Archives, Box 10672, Oakland, CA 94610. Phone/fax 510-268-0811.

Box Office '96
Ticketing & More...

Windows '95 Based Microsoft Access Database
Concession Sales & Inventory
State of the Art - Reliable
18 Years Experience
Custom Development
Satisfaction Guaranteed

Electronic Creations, Inc.
Ph (619) 480-1002 Fax (619) 480-6830

Response No. 203

quality spare parts

Spare parts for 35 & 35/70 mm Westar, Century, Westrex, Cinecita, Monee, Cinemex, Simplex, Brenkert, Motiograph, and many other projectors, soundheads and sound systems

Finest quality, attractively priced, dealer discounts, fast service. Write for our list. Dealer inquires invited.

Westar precision machine parts exclusively distributed by International Cinema Equipment Company, Inc.

international cinema equipment company inc.
100 N.E. 39th Street, Miami, FL 33137-3632
Ph: (305) 573-7339, Fax: (305) 573-8101

Response No. 15

MOVIE POSTERS WANTED: HIGHEST PRICES PAID FOR LOBBY CARDS, 1-, 3- AND 6-SHEETS, WINDOW CARDS, BANNERS, GLASS SLIDES. Dwight Cleveland, P.O. Box 10922, Chicago, IL 60610-0922. (312) 525-9152 or fax (312) 525-2969.

MOVIE POSTERS WANTED! I pay top dollar for vintage material. John Hazelton, 235 Horton Highway, Mineola, NY 11501. Call toll-free 1-800-CAGNEY4.

MOVIE POSTERS WANTED: No collection too large or too small! Immediate cash payments! Top prices for vintage material! Call toll free: 1-800-213-8431.

ULTRACLEAN!! REFLECTOR SCALE REMOVER. This will remove tuff scaling on xenon reflectors. $24.95 plus $4.50 S/H. ULTRAFLAT, 20306 Sherman Way, Winnetka, CA 91306. (818) 884-0184. http://www.cris.com~Ultraflt

WANTED: 35mm XXX titles. Wanted in good condition. Please send your titles to fax # (305) 592-6970.

The Big Picture

Although the concept of the cinematic actor/director seems to have gathered renewed vitality of late, the phenomenon is in fact as old as the movies themselves. D.W. Griffith, the legendary silent filmmaker and a man largely credited with inventing the visual syntax of the modern feature film, began his creative career as a stage actor who later took work in the "flickers" only as a way to make ends meet during the off-season. During the nickelodeon era, even starving stage players were ashamed to be associated with the movies, which they (like most people of the day) considered to be a lowbrow form of entertainment. Griffith shared this prejudice initially, preferring to work without screen credit in the films he appeared in, which included a stint at the Edison studio, where in 1908 he played the hero in a short called "Rescued From an Eagle's Nest" for "Great Train Robbery" director Edwin S. Porter. But Griffith—who was among the first to grasp the range of creative possibilities inherent in the movie medium—changed his tune within months: before 1908 was out, he was already directing a film every two weeks for the Biograph studio; by 1915, when his most famous feature "The Birth of a Nation" was released, Griffith was putting his name in the promotional materials, in letters as large as the title itself.

It was Charlie Chaplin, though, who charted the trajectory of most modern actor/directors by using his boxoffice clout to take control over the projects he appeared in. As his star began to rise during his early days at Mack Sennett's Keystone studio, Chaplin began to insist on what was already the star prerogative of most major Keystone actors (Mabel Normand and Fatty Arbuckle were also directors at Keystone). But of all the Keystone comics, Chaplin alone viewed directing as an extension of the artistic explorations he was making onscreen; his performing and directing blossomed simultaneously, so that by the time he made the leap to feature filmmaking with 1921's "The Kid," the maturation of both his comedic talents and his skill as a writer/director launched an almost unheard of run of great cinematic works that lasted all the way into the 1950s.

The "studio era" (roughly the late 1920s through the early '60s) was not an especially accommodating time for actor/directors. Most star talent was under long-term contract to the major moguls: the Warners at Warner Bros., L.B. Mayer at MGM, Harry Cohn at Columbia, Adolph Zukor at Paramount Pictures. Terms were often onerous, and artistic freedom was a closed issue; talent did as it was told, with the studio making all the choices about what film a star would appear in, and with whom. A few acting/directing achievements stand out anyway—Robert Montgomery's immortal (if somewhat misguided) Raymond Chandler knock-off "The Lady in the Lake," shot entirely in subjective camera, with the star himself only appearing onscreen whenever he happened to see himself in a mirror; Charles Laughton's "Night of the Hunter;" and of course the films of Orson Welles. Illustrious as his achievements were, Welles' filmmaking career demonstrates how reluctant the studios of his day were to cede directing control to their stars; though Welles never had trouble getting work as an actor, his Hollywood directing career was essentially over less than eight years after he revitalized the entire medium with the release of "Citizen Kane."

The end of the studio era and the court-ordered severing of the studios' corporate ties to the exhibition circuits which ensured the profitability of their output put much of the packaging power for feature films into the hands of star talent and the agents who service it, a situation which has changed little in the last three decades. Along with Woody Allen, Clint Eastwood was one of the first major post-studio system film stars to make a go of directing over the long-term; his career as a filmmaker has run virtually parallel to his career as a superstar, culminating in his Academy Award for directing "Unforgiven" in 1992. By then, the concept of the star actor/director had become so entrenched that Eastwood was actually following in the footsteps not just of Allen (who grabbed both writing and directing Oscars for 1977's "Annie Hall") but of Robert Redford (who was Best Director for "Ordinary People" in 1980), Warren Beatty ("Reds," 1981), Richard Attenborough ("Ghandi," 1982) and Kevin Costner ("Dances With Wolves," 1990)—all stars who won Oscars as directors without ever winning them as performers. Last year's Best Director winner Mel Gibson is the latest member of this august company to fit that profile.

But it is Quentin Tarantino who really opened things up for actor/directors in the '90s, by demonstrating with "Pulp Fiction" that quirky, well-made niche titles can find crossover success. It would be unfair to tar such intriguing recent efforts as Kevin Spacey's "Albino Alligator," Steve Buscemi's "Trees Lounge," Stanley Tucci's "Big Night," and Matthew Broderick's "Infinity" with the same dreaded post-Tarantino brush—each film is as different as the person who made it. But it is significant that each of these actor/filmmakers has chosen to go the low-budget, indie filmmaker route in making their directing debuts—a course that made Tarantino into the first "rock star director," and a scene over which (despite some recent setbacks) his shadow still looms large.

The irony, of course, is that Tarantino himself has shown signs of being predominantly a frustrated actor who just happens to make brilliantly executed gangster masterpieces as his day job. While actors have consistently demonstrated their ability to grasp the intricacies of moviemaking, such post-"Pulp" Tarantino star turns as "Destiny Turns on the Radio" and "From Dusk Till Dawn" go a long way toward raising the question of whether or not the process works both ways. But given the increasing intertwining of acting and directing as creative pursuits, chances are moviegoers will get other opportunities to test that hypothesis before too much time has passed.—Ray Greene

Screen Stars

QSC Professional Amplifiers supply power to the hottest screens in the country.

In fact, QSC Audio is the largest supplier of professional amplifiers and accessories to the cinema industry. Legendary reliability, awesome performance, versatile features and outstanding value have made QSC the industry standard. Fourteen amplifier models are currently approved for THX® cinema installations, with more on the way! Each model carries a commercial UL listing, as well as TUV and CSA approval for safety. Optional QSC plug-in accessories are available to meet the specific signal processing requirements of digital cinema sound systems.

Optional accessory capability optimizes amps for bi-amplification of screen channels, protects surround speakers and equalizes the response of popular cinema subwoofers.

Audiences demand the most powerful presentation of everything that digital soundtracks have to offer. Because power amplifiers are critical to the digital sound chain, QSC powers todays biggest Screen Stars. Stars demand the best. Shouldn't you? Call 714-754-6175 for valuable details.

A few of the other theater chains featuring QSC Power Amplifiers: Allen Theatres, Associated Theatres, Budget Cinemas, Central States Theatres, Cinema World, Cineplex Odeon Theatres, Classic Cinemas, Dickinson Theatres, Douglas Theatres, Edwards Cinemas, General Cinemas, GKC Theatres, GTI Theatres, Harkness Cinemas, Loew's Theatres, Malco Theatres, Mann Theatres, Manos Theatres, Marcus Theaters, Mulane Theatres, Muvico Theatres, National Theatres, Neighborhood Cinemas, Pacific Theatres, Plitt Theatres, Rhyan Theatres, SoCal Cinemas, U.C.I. Theatres, Warner International Theatres, Western HTS Cinemas, and many, many more...

QSC™ AUDIO

The Power Behind The Pictures.™

LUCASFILM THX AUDIO

Lucasfilm and THX are trademarks of Lucasfilm, Ltd
"The Power Behind The Pictures" is a trademark of QSC Audio Products, Inc..
"QSC" and the QSC logo are registered with the U.S. Patent Office.

QSC Audio Products, Inc. 1675 MacArthur Blvd., Costa Mesa, CA 92626-1468
PH (714) 754-6175 FAX (714) 754-6174 E-mail: info@qscaudio.com
QSC WorldGroup BBS: (800) 856-6003 or (714) 668-7569

Response No. 26

EST. 1932

WE DESIGN, BUILD & INSTALL CONCESSION STANDS AROUND THE WORLD!

We will custom design and build your concession stand to your special requirements. We combine state-of-the-art technology with professional craftmanship, incorporating all the clearly received ideas of the clients. Every feature is designed with a concept towards practical performance...controls devised for easy, fast operation.
Concession Stands, Box Offices, Popcorn Poppers, Butter Dispensers, Popcorn Warmers, Nacho Warmers, and any related theatre lobby fixtures.

STEIN INDUSTRIES INC.

CALL: 516-789-2222 • FAX: 516-789-8888

Response No. 101

JOHN ARGONIS ASI

CINEASIA '97

BOXOFFICE®

THE BUSINESS MAGAZINE OF THE GLOBAL MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

FEBRUARY 1997, $3.95

HONG KONG AT THE VANISHING POINT

THE CHRISTIE P35GP PROJECTOR WITH LED SOUNDHEAD RAISES SOUND AND LIGHT TO A HIGHER LEVEL.

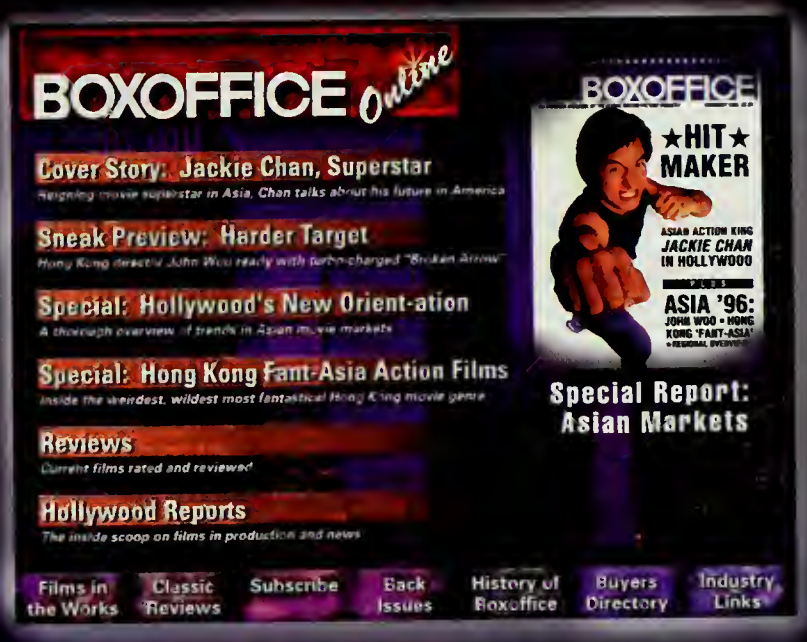
When it comes to extraordinary sound from conventional analog prints and greater light efficiency, the Christie P35GP projector reaches a new height of performance.

The Christie LED soundhead features a high-intensity LED array from Dolby Labs that provides uniform illumination across the entire soundtrack. It reduces level-dependent distortion, improves stereo imaging, increases dynamic realism and eliminates interference due to stray light.

With a flat frequency response extending to 16kHz, it reproduces sound with the exceptional detail and clarity previously heard only from digital. Thanks to the reverse scanning system, crosstalk is eliminated between the optical soundtracks.

No more exciter bulb, exciter supply, or time-consuming realignments. You'll now enjoy an expected life span of more than five years, further lowering your operating costs.

See and hear for yourself how the new Christie projector with improved shutter design and LED soundhead reveals the true capabilities of your surround system and increases the visual quality on your screen.



CHRISTIE®

We Make Film Come Alive

10550 Camden Drive,Cypress, CA 90630 • (714) 236-8610

Response No. 3

THE REVOLUTION IS HERE...

ACCESS THE FUTURE ON THE WORLD WIDE WEB

http://www.boxoff.com

BOXOFFICE
FEBRUARY, 1997 VOL. 133 NO. 2

UNQUOTE: There's always going to be some sort of contradiction between the role that filmmakers see for themselves and what the government sees for them.—Tsui Hark

SPECIAL REPORT: ASIA 1997/CINEASIA

Boxoffice's annual look at the Asian market, timed to coincide with CINEASIA 1997—the premier event for exhibition professionals doing business on the Asian continent! CINEASIA 1997: JAN. 28-30, SINGAPORE INTERNATIONAL CONVENTION CENTER.

PART I: SPECIAL REPORT—ASIA 1997

5 CINEASIA 1997 SCHEDULE OF EVENTS
On your way to this year's CINEASIA? Here's a handy directory of the event schedule awaiting you when you arrive.

28 COVER STORY: HONG KONG ON THE EDGE OF FOREVER *by Wade Major
Hong Kong, one of the world's busiest film production centers, prepares for the end of British rule and reversion to China on July 1, 1997. Boxoffice talks to film biz insiders about the cultural, political and cinematic impact of this unprecedented change.

34 MADE IN JAPAN: TOKYO'S CINEMA CITY *by Buzz Hays
A uniquely Japanese multiplex takes the Tokyo market by storm. PLUS: Japan's revolutionary DCS sound automation system.

40 TSUI HARK: THIRD "TEAM" *by Wade Major
Like John Woo and Ringo Lam before him, Tsui Hark—one of Asia's most successful directors ever—makes his U.S. debut directing Jean-Claude Van Damme in an action flick: "Double Team."

42 INDIA: MIRA NAIR'S "KAMA SUTRA" *by Wade Major
Indian director Mira Nair's controversial and erotic "Kama Sutra."

44 MICHELLE KHAN: ALIVE AND KICKING *by Wade Major
In conversation with Hong Kong's "Female Jackie Chan."

90 THE BIG PICTURE: SHADOW OVER CHINA *by Ray Greene
The Chinese mainland—one of the most desirable markets in the world—is also one of the most restrictive. Boxoffice examines the intellectual shadow falling over today's China.

PART II: FEBRUARY FEATURES

10 SNEAK PREVIEW: HOWARD'S TURN *by Christine James
EXCLUSIVE! Controversial "shock jock" Howard Stern mouths off about his autobiographical star turn in the filmic "Private Parts."

26 INDIE SHOWCASE: BEST LITTLE ART-HOUSE IN TEXAS *by Susan Lambert
Austin's Dobie Theatre keeps the independent spirit alive.

46 DISTRIBUTION PROFILE: OCTOBERFEST *by Christine James
Spotlight on October Films, the rising indie film powerhouse.

50 WIRED WORLD: NATO GOES ONLINE *by Christine James
The inside scoop on NATO's strategic alliance with Hollywood Online and the impending launch of the NATO website network.

52 FROM WHERE I SIT: CDP—JUST THE FACTS *by Dr. Richard Vetter
As part of our ongoing discussion of the Compact Distribution Print, CDP inventor Richard Vetter dispels some mistaken impressions about his revolutionary film format.

54 TRIBUTE: DEATH OF A GIANT *by John Allen
Kingston, Jamaica's Carib Theatre: Gone but not forgotten.

BOXOFFICE (ISSN 0006-8527). Published monthly by RLD Communications, Inc., 203 N. Wabash Ave., Suite 800, Chicago, IL 60601. Subscriptions: $30 per year. Canada and Mexico: $40; airmail: $80. Overseas subscriptions (all airmail): $80. Periodical postage paid at Chicago, IL, and additional mailing offices. Postmaster: Send address changes to Boxoffice, 725 South Wells St., 4th Floor, Chicago, IL 60607.

© Copyright 1997 RLD Communications, Inc. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or part without permission is prohibited.

DEPARTMENTS

Hollywood Updates 6
Hollywood Report 8
Trailers 14
Review Digest 60
National News 75
Exhibition Briefings 76
International News: Europe 78
International News: Canada 80
Moviefone Moviegoer Activity Chart 81
Studio Feature Chart 82
Independent Feature Chart 84
Home Release Chart 86
Classifieds 88
Reverse Angle 88
Advertiser Index 88

REVIEWS

(beginning on pg. 56)

Beavis and Butt-head Do America 67
Daylight 69
Eva Peron 62
The Evening Star 62
Evita 61
Ghosts of Mississippi 63
Gridlock'd 57
Hamlet 61
In Love and War 64
Inside 60
Jerry Maguire 67
Jerusalem 58
Jingle All the Way 71
Losing Chase 69
Lost Highway 56
Mars Attacks! 68
Marvin's Room 66
Michael 63
My Fellow Americans 65
One Fine Day 64
101 Dalmatians 69
The People vs. Larry Flynt 60
The Preacher's Wife 68
Prisoner of the Mountains 59
Scream 66
Screwed 60
The Sadness of Sex 59
Star Trek: First Contact 70
When We Were Kings 58

SUNDANCE REVIEWS

All of Them Witches 74
Aristotle's Plot 72
Buddha Bless America 72
Joe's So Mean to Josephine 73
John Henrik Clarke 74
Snakes and Ladders 72
When the Cat's Away 72

SUNDANCE/DAY AND DATE

All Over Me 73

FLASHBACK REVIEW

Krakatoa, East of Java (1969) 58

For reviews of films opening each weekend, visit our website every Friday. Just enter: http://www.boxoff.com.

SPECIAL REPORT: CINEASIA 1997

Because of the explosive economic development currently underway in most Asian nations, the increasing significance of the Asian marketplace to theatrical exhibition and the companies that service it cannot be overstated. Rising disposable incomes and a relatively primitive and underscreened infrastructure are factors which, in combination, will make Asia an inevitable and expanding profit center in the years to come.

Business thrives on relationships. As most international-minded business people already know, this is particularly true of Asian countries, where it can be difficult to penetrate new and emerging markets without close ties to local business communities.

All of this is what makes Singapore-based CINEASIA such an important opportunity for U.S. exhibition professionals. By bringing together leading figures from the Asian exhibition communities with their U.S. and European counterparts, CINEASIA offers the chance to get in on the ground floor of a market that will still be growing exponentially well into the next century.

The following is a listing of events scheduled for this year's CINEASIA:

MONDAY, JANUARY 27

10:00 AM-5:00 PM: CineAsia/Coca-Cola Hospitality Area (Ballroom Foyer)

12:00 PM-7:00 PM: General Convention Registration (Main Level, SICEC)

10:00 AM-7:00 PM: Trade Show Registration (Hall 601, SICEC)
7:00 PM-9:00 PM: Screening (TBA)

TUESDAY, JANUARY 28

7:30 AM-7:30 PM: General Convention Registration (Main Level, SICEC)

7:30 AM-6:00 PM: Trade Show Registration (Hall 601, SICEC)

8:00 AM-8:30 AM: Continental Breakfast
Sponsor: ITT Singapore
Host: Russell Scott, General Manager, Marina Square

8:30 AM-10:00 AM: Technical Seminar (Marina Square)
"The S's of Cinema: Screen, Sight, Sound, Sensation & Service"
Moderator: Russell Scott, General Manager, International Theatre Technology, Singapore
Presentations by: Russell Scott, ITT Singapore; Patrick Artiaga, Lucasfilm/THX; Ian Sims, Harkness Screens; Greg McKibbin, Eastman Kodak

10:00 AM-12:30 PM: Columbia/TriStar Screening (Marina Square)

10:00 AM-5:00 PM: Coca-Cola Hospitality Area (Ballroom Foyer, SICEC)

1:00 PM-2:30 PM: Luncheon (Ballroom, SICEC)
Sponsor: Columbia/TriStar Film Distributors International
Hosts: Duncan Clark/Tony Manne
Keynote Address: Robert Dowling, Hollywood Reporter

2:30 PM-6:00 PM: Opening Day CineAsia Trade Show & Cocktail Reception (Hall 601, SICEC)
Sponsor: Sony Cinema Products Corp.
Hosts: John Scarcella/Gemma Richardson, Sony

6:15 PM-7:45 PM: Opening Night Welcome Dinner (TBA)

8:30 PM-10:00 PM: Buena Vista Screening

10:00 PM-10:30 PM: Dessert Party (UATC Theatre, Bugis Junction)
Host: United Artists

10:30 PM-12:45 AM: Screening (UATC Bugis Auditorium)

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 29

7:30 AM-6:30 PM: Convention Registration (Main Level, SICEC)

8:00 AM-8:45 AM: Continental Breakfast (Suntec Ballroom Foyer)

9:00 AM-5:30 PM: Trade Show Registration (Hall 601, SICEC)

8:45 AM-10:15 AM: International Concessions Forum (Suntec Auditorium 2nd Floor) Moderator: Steve Smith

10:00 AM-5:00 PM: Coca-Cola Hospitality Area (Ballroom Foyer, SICEC)

10:45 AM-12:45 PM: Warner Bros. Screening (UA Cinemas at Bugis Junction) (Buses to SICEC depart following screening)

1:00 PM-4:00 PM: Trade Show Floor Luncheon (Ballroom, SICEC)
Sponsor: Warner Bros. International
Hosts: Ed Frumkes/Ivan Cheah

5:30 PM-8:30 PM: Gala Dinner Party
Sponsor: Twentieth Century Fox International Hosts (Fox Int'l): Jim Gianopulos, President & Paul Hanneman, VP Asia/Pacific Fox (Far East)

9:00 PM-11:00 PM: Twentieth Century Fox Screening (UA Cinemas at Bugis Junction) (Buses depart for the Pan Pacific Westin Hotels immediately following the screening)

THURSDAY, JANUARY 30

7:30 AM-6:00 PM: General Convention Registration (Main Level, SICEC)

8:00 AM-12:45 PM: Trade Show Registration (Hall 601, SICEC)

8:30 AM-9:00 AM: Continental Breakfast (Ballroom Foyer, SICEC)

9:00 AM-10:30 AM: "Projecting the Future of Exhibition in the Asia/Pacific Marketplace" with a focus on Japan, a summary of Vietnam and China (Auditorium)
Moderator: Don Groves, Asia/Pacific Bureau Chief, Variety
Panelists: Toru Okuyama, Shochiku; Adam Gower, UCI Japan; Mark McDonald, AMC; Osaka Sato, Warner Mycal; Bill Ireton, Warner Bros.; Julian Levin, 20th Century Fox

10:00 AM-5:00 PM: Coca-Cola Hospitality Area (Ballroom Foyer, SICEC)

10:30 AM-1:00 PM: CineAsia Trade Show (Ballroom, SICEC)

1:00 PM-2:15 PM: Luncheon
Sponsors: United International Pictures
Hosts (UIP): Andrew Cripps, Executive V.P. Int'l Sales; Hy Smith, Exec. V.P. Int'l Marketing; Steve Ashmore, VP Sales SouthEast Asia. (Buses to Bugis Junction depart at 2:15 PM)

2:45 PM-4:45 PM: United International Pictures Screening (Bugis Auditorium, UA Cinemas at Bugis Junction)

7:00 PM-8:00 PM: Cocktail Reception (Ballroom Foyer, SICEC)
Sponsor: Eastman Kodak
Hosts: Jack Teahan/David Sanderson

8:00 PM: Gala Final Night Awards Banquet
Sponsor: Coca-Cola International
Hosts (Coca-Cola): Ben Knight, V.P. & Dir. Cust. Serv., Pacific Group; Steven Smith, Dir. Cust. Serv. (On-Premise) Middle and Far East Group

THIS JUST IN...

At press time, rumors were circulating that a major U.S. exhibition circuit was about to put itself up for sale. As the available information was impossible to verify in time for our editorial deadline, BOXOFFICE has elected to wait for confirmation from the circuit in question before publishing any speculative details. A full report on this breaking story will appear in the next issue of BOXOFFICE, should circumstances warrant it.

HOLLYWOOD UPDATES

Fourteen months after Michael Ovitz rocked Hollywood by leaving CAA, the agency he co-founded, to become president of the Walt Disney Co., the superagent-turned-studio topper has stunned industry onlookers again by stepping down from his post. The move was reportedly a mutual decision between Ovitz and Disney chairman and CEO Michael Eisner, with both agreeing the arrangement wasn't working. Some insiders blame a poorly-defined job description, with lack of specific instruction causing Ovitz to infringe upon other executives' territory. No immediate plans to fill the position have been announced. Ovitz has not divulged what he plans to do, but he won't be on line at the unemployment office: Under his settlement with Disney, he's leaving with at least $50 million in cash and $3 million in stock options, plus an additional $10 million due upon termination of his contract on Jan. 31—a buyout that had some Disney stockholders seething. Not bad for a little over 400 days' work. Ovitz will continue to serve as a consultant to the company.

It's official: As anticipated, MCA Inc. has formally changed its name to Universal Studios Inc., a move that marks a directional change under the leadership of parent company Seagram Inc. A new audiovisual Universal logo will debut in theatres on Memorial Day, timed to coincide with the opening of Steven Spielberg's Universal-distributed "Jurassic Park" sequel, "The Lost World." With the name change, MCA, which came into its own as a pioneering talent agency before acquiring Universal in the early '60s, has effectively ceased to exist.

After a three-year hiatus, Billy Crystal has announced he'll be resuming his role as host of the Oscars. This will be the fifth time Crystal has emceed the awards telecast, having hosted four years in a row from 1990-1993. Crystal's major task, besides co-writing a script that will keep the show moving briskly, will be to top his elaborate comic entrances of previous years, which included memorable parodies of "Silence of the Lambs" and of '50s Biblical epics. Crystal received Emmy nominations for his performances in 1991, 1992 and 1993, and won the Emmy in '91. He also won writing Emmys for the 1991 and 1992 shows. The Oscar ceremony will be held March 24 at the Los Angeles Shrine Auditorium.

French actress Isabelle Adjani ("Diabolique") has been selected as president of the 1997 Cannes Film Festival jury. The festival, which takes place May 7-18, will celebrate its 50th anniversary this year. Adjani won Best Actress honors at Cannes in 1981 for her roles in James Ivory's "Quartet" and Andrzej Zulawski's "Possession."

Actor George Clooney ("One Fine Day") and producer Robert Lawrence ("Clueless") have signed a three-year, first-look deal with Warner Bros. to develop and produce features. The much sought-after Clooney's decision to strike a long-term deal with Warner comes as no surprise; Clooney is already slated to replace Val Kilmer as the Caped Crusader in Warner's upcoming "Batman" title, "Batman and Robin." On the boards for Clooney's and Lawrence's new production company, Left Bank Prods., is "Becky Downtown," a romantic comedy in which Clooney may star.

Also signing with Warner is red-hot actor Matthew McConaughey ("A Time To Kill") and his production company, j.k. livin prods. (which is short for "just keep living"). The first-look pact calls for McConaughey to produce, star in and possibly direct films. McConaughey will next be seen in Warner's Jodie Foster starrer "Contact," fulfilling one film of a two-picture option that was part of his "A Time To Kill" contract.

Director Wes Craven ("Scream") has entered into a multi-picture deal with Miramax Films, under which Craven will direct for both Miramax and its sci-fi/horror genre label, Dimension. The first project under the deal will be "Bad Moon Rising," a tale about a havoc-wreaking motorcycle gang with a lycanthropic twist.

Barry Barnholtz, co-founder and senior vice president of Trimark, is leaving the company to start Barnholtz Entertainment, a production, sales and acquisitions company. He'll still maintain ties with Trimark, however. Barnholtz Entertainment has a first-look deal with Trimark, and Barnholtz remains Trimark's third-largest shareholder.

Film exec Jeff Lipsky has joined East-West Film Partners as head of distribution. The first film to be released under Lipsky's leadership will be "Good Luck," a comedy starring Gregory Hines and Vincent D'Onofrio as two disabled former athletes. Lipsky, who co-founded October Films with Bingham Ray in 1991, left the company in 1995 to pursue filmmaking. He's since directed a feature, "Childhood's End," which is still looking for a distributor, and he plans to direct a second film, "Dear Monica," after "Good Luck" is released.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF
Ray Greene

MANAGING EDITOR
Kim Williamson

SENIOR EDITOR
Christine James

ASSOCIATE EDITOR
Lea Russo

EDITORIAL ASSISTANT
Linda Andrade

CONTRIBUTING EDITOR—SPECIAL ASIAN CONTENTS
Wade Major

CONTRIBUTING WRITERS
Alex Albanese
John Allen
George T. Chronis
Carole Glines
Pat Kramer
Ann Kwinn
Lael Loewenstein
Jean Oppenheimer
Shlomo Schwartzberg

EUROPEAN CORRESPONDENT
Melissa Morrison
e-mail: tomelis@bohem-net.cz

BOXOFFICE ONLINE WEBSITE ADDRESS:
http://www.boxoff.com
email: boxoff@earthlink.net
Online service provided by Marlin Software

FOUNDER
Ben Shlyen

PUBLISHER
Bob Dietmeier (312) 338-7007

NATIONAL ADVERTISING DIRECTOR
Robert M. Vale (213) 465-1186

ADVERTISING CONSULTANT
Morris Schlozman (816) 942-5877

EAST COAST ADVERTISING REP.
Mitchell J. Hall (212) 877-6667

WEST COAST ADVERTISING REP.
Gwen Campbell (310) 820-8846

BUSINESS MANAGER
Dan Johnson (312) 338-7007

CIRCULATION DIRECTOR
Chuck Taylor (312) 922-9326

OFFICES
Editorial and Publishing Headquarters:
6640 Sunset Blvd., Suite 100, Hollywood, CA 90028-7159 (213) 465-1186, FAX: (213) 465-5049
Corporate: Mailing Address: P.O. Box 25485, Chicago, IL 60625 (312) 338-7007

The Audit Bureau

Circulation Inquiries:
BOXOFFICE Data Center
725 S. Wells St., 4th Floor
Chicago, IL 60607
(312) 922-9326
FAX: (312) 922-7209

Our new DSP150 matrix fits cinema stereo processors manufactured by Dolby Laboratories, Inc. No modifications or readjustment required. Just replace the old matrix card in a CP50, CP55, CP65, CP100, or CP200 with the new DSP150 card. Same great SRS feature.

All registered trademarks are the property of their respective companies.

DSP WITH SRS

Now all SMART 4-channel and 6-channel cinema stereo processors are being shipped with the new DSP (Digital Signal Processing) matrix for optical sound. This precision module provides the best clarity and channel separation you can get! No additional cost, no laptop computer setup, no modification. Easy installation if you wish to upgrade an older processor!

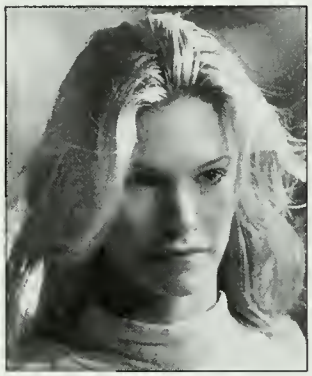
Also the amazing SRS Sound Retrieval System enhancement is built-in. Just throw the SRS switch and hear the fuller, more panoramic stage sound!

X-ACT™

Digital Signal Processing

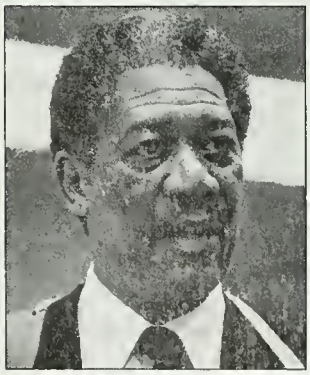
SMART Theatre Systems
5945 Peachtree Corners East
Norcross, Georgia 30071 - U.S.A.
(800) 45-SMART or (770) 449-6698
FAX: (770) 449-6728
e-mail: smart@america.net
Internet:www.smartdev.com

Please visit us on the internet and get the latest new product information.



Response No. 267

HOLLYWOOD REPORT



LEONARDO DI CAPRIO

"Iron" Man

NATASHA HENSTRIDGE

Collars "Dog"

MORGAN FREEMAN

Sets Sail With "Amistad"

"THE SECRET LIFE OF WALTER MITTY" Jim Carrey ("The Cable Guy") will take the title role in this remake of the 1947 Danny Kaye starrer, based on the classic story by James Thurber, about a mild-mannered milquetoast who has a heroic alter existence in his daydreams. (New Line)

"THE MAN IN THE IRON MASK" In this adaptation of the Alexandre Dumas classic novel, Leonardo DiCaprio ("Romeo & Juliet") will play twin brothers, one of whom becomes the King of France while the other is raised by D'Artagnan, leader of the Three Musketeers. Gerard Depardieu is in talks to play Musketeer Porthos. (UA)

"DOG PARK" Former "Kids in the Hall" star Bruce McCulloch scripted and will direct this romantic comedy about a man who pines over his ex-girlfriend (Natasha Henstridge, "Maximum Risk"), and manipulates her into spending time with him by making her attend therapy sessions for the benefit of their dog. Henry Czerny ("Mission: Impossible") is in talks to star. (Distribution is to be set)

"BOYS' NIGHT OUT" In this thriller, Sean Patrick Flanery ("Powder"), Jay Mohr ("Jerry Maguire"), Johnny Galecki (TV's "Roseanne") and Henry Thomas ("Legends of the Fall") will portray prep school boys who kidnap a Mafia don ("The Funeral's" Christopher Walken) in order to negotiate a trade for the kidnapped sister of one of the boys. The script is by Wayne Rice ("Only You") and Gina Goldman (TV's "The Wonder Years"). (LIVE Entertainment)

"FOR RICHARD OR POORER" Tim Allen ("Jungle2Jungle") is set to star for director Bryan Spicer ("McHale's Navy") in this comedy about a real estate hustler and his socialite wife who are on the brink of divorce, but suddenly must go into hiding together when they get into trouble with the IRS. They wind up in an Amish town in Pennsylvania where they must pretend to be long-lost relatives. (Universal)

"THE KISS" In this comedy-drama, Holly Hunter ("Crash") will play a woman who befriends an elevator operator ("Matilda's" Danny DeVito) after her husband leaves her. Richard LaGravenese ("The Fisher King") scripts and directs. (New Line)

"AMISTAD" Steven Spielberg's next directing project after the "Jurassic Park" sequel "The Lost World" will be this historical drama about the 1839 mutiny on the African slave ship Amistad. The script is by David Franzoni ("Citizen Cohn") and Steve Zaillian ("Schindler's List.") Morgan Freeman ("Moll Flanders") is attached to star. (DreamWorks)

"MR. MAGOO" Director Stanley Tong ("Jackie Chan's First Strike") goes from action films to live-action in this adaptation of the '60s cartoon series that featured an eccentric, likable curmudgeon whose nearsightedness caused him to constantly misinterpret his surroundings. Mr. Magoo, who was voiced by Jim Backus on the TV show, will be played by Leslie Nielsen ("Spy Hard"). Pat Proft, who wrote the Nielsen starrer "Naked Gun," will script. (Buena Vista)

"MEET JOE BLACK" Brad Pitt ("Sleepers") will star for director Martin Brest ("Scent of a Woman") in this comedy, which is based on the 1934 film "Death Takes a Holiday," in which the Grim Reaper decides to vacation on the earthly plane, where he falls in love with a mortal woman. (Universal)

"FROSTY" Anyone who's daunted by the lack of originality in Hollywood screenplays should do a double-take at this plot synopsis. George Clooney ("One Fine Day") is in talks to star in this film about a jazz musician who doesn't pay enough attention to his child. He dies suddenly, and gets a chance to redeem himself when he's reincarnated as Frosty the Snowman. Sam Raimi ("Army of Darkness") will direct from a script by Mark Steven Johnson ("Grumpy Old Men"). (Warner)

"HOME FRIES" Drew Barrymore ("Mad Love") is the object of two brothers' obsession in this film—one adores her, the other wants to kill her. Jake Busey ("Starship Troopers") and Catherine O'Hara ("Waiting for Guffman") also star. (Warner)

"DINNER AT FRED'S" Christopher Lloyd ("Addams Family Values"), Gil Bellows ("The Shawshank Redemption"), Parker Posey ("Party Girl") and John Neville ("The Adventures of Baron Munchausen") will star in this comedy about a man whose car breaks down on his way to his future in-laws' house for Christmas dinner, and is rescued by a strange man named Fred. The script is by standup comic Shawn Alex Thompson. (Distribution is to be set)

"HOME ALONE 3" Audiences and exhibitors probably figured that with Macaulay Culkin reaching an age where being home alone was no longer a big deal, that would be the end of one majorly successful franchise. But in Hollywoodland, anything's possible. Postpubescent Mac is being replaced by 7-year-old Alex D. Linz, who made his film debut in "The Cable Guy" and most recently appeared in "One Fine Day." In this take on the child-repeatedly-thwarts-bumbling-adult-crooks theme, Linz will play a boy who must protect his home from mysterious, malevolent neighbors. (Fox)

"GIRL INTERRUPTED" James Mangold ("Copland") will direct Winona Ryder ("The Crucible") in this true story about Susanna Kaysen, a teenager who admitted herself into a mental institution and later wrote a book about the experience. (Columbia)

"FEAR AND LOATHING IN LAS VEGAS" Alex Cox ("Sid and Nancy") will direct and co-script with Tod Davies this adaptation of Hunter S. Thompson's cult classic book of the same name about a road trip taken under the influence of extreme amounts of drugs and alcohol. Johnny Depp ("Donnie Brasco") is in talks to play the iconic gonzo journalist. (Rhino)

ET CETERA: Anjelica Huston and Alicia Silverstone will play mother-daughter scam artists in UA's comedy "Breakers"... Ewan McGregor ("Trainspotting") will star in "Velvet Goldmine," about the '70s glitter-rock scene, for director Todd Haynes ("Safe"). He'll also play Irish author James Joyce in the Pat Murphy-helmed "Nora," a biopic of Nora Barnacle, Joyce's lover...British actor-comedian Lee Evans ("Funny Bones") has joined Nathan Lane in DreamWorks' "Mousehunt," about two brothers who try to sell a mansion they've inherited, but are thwarted by an ingenious rodent...Richard Harris has signed on as the eponymous coiffeur in the Julia Ormond starrer "The Barber of Siberia." Harris and Ormond recently worked together on the upcoming "Smilla's Sense of Snow."

ORC

WHEN YOU NEED THE

BEST

AND THE BRIGHTEST

THERE'S ONLY

ONE SOURCE

ORC

ORC Lighting Products is one of the world's largest manufacturers of specialty discharge lamps and a recognized innovator of sophisticated illumination systems.

ORC Lighting Products
A BEC Group Company
1300 Optical Drive, Azusa, CA 91702
Tel: (818) 969-3344 In US: (800) 755-LAMP
Fax: (818) 969-2260
E-mail: ORCLIGHT@aol.com

Response No. 99

Sneak Preview

Radio's Controversial First Amendment Poster-Boy Reveals His "PRIVATE PARTS" by Christine James

If you're going to put out a movie, it better be damn well kick-ass and great," asserts Howard Stern, whose long-in-development "Private Parts" will finally go public this March. After Stern's first film, "Fartman," about a flatulent but benevolent superhero, ran out of gas at New Line in 1993, and "Private Parts" was juggled from cash-strapped Savoy to Paramount in '96, fans grew restless and critics wondered aloud if Stern would ever make it to celluloid. Says Stern of his detractors: "I remember seeing all these articles popping up, 'Howard Stern can't make a movie,' 'Howard Stern doesn't have any clout,' 'Howard Stern is afraid to make a film,' and I was reading all this s—, and I go, you know, I'm the one f—ing idiot who has some integrity. I'm not like those 'Saturday Night Live' guys, just grabbing a script and making any damn piece of s— movie. You'd think someone would applaud that. But of course I got attacked for it."

Howard Stern—the name has become synonymous with the term "shock jock," a phrase Stern claims was created in recent years just for him. Whether it's used contemptuously, admiringly or merely descriptively, this two-word expression, which basically conveys the fact that he's a deejay who says outrageous things, can't even begin to summarize Stern's remarkable and bizarre decades-spanning career.

The radio talk show host-cum-superstar has drawn a lot of fire over the years for radicalizing modern media with his controversial radio program. He's been vilified by the religious right, minority groups and the Federal Communications Commission as the embodiment of evil, the feculent foundation of all that is wrong in the world. Rarely a day goes by that an irate listener doesn't call in warning Stern that his soul will burn in hell. "The people who tell you your soul's gonna be damned are the ones who probably are gonna end up in hell," says Stern. "I don't trust anybody who starts evaluating people's souls. Bible Belt types—you sit and listen to these people and you realize how phony they are."

A reluctant poster-boy for the First Amendment, Stern claims he just tells it like it is, with no intent to shock or scandalize. His humor, he contends, is constantly misconstrued by a society that can't laugh at itself, for fear of breaching some unwritten yet incontrovertible code of political correctness.

"I think a lot of people sort of cop an attitude about what I do because they think it's somehow raunchy or filthy or bad for society or something like that," he says. "And some people might honestly just listen to the show and feel that way. But I know that there are a lot of people who have never listened to the show, or have never really spent more than a minute or two on what I'm saying, and they might hear something that's a little outrageous because I'm being honest. And then suddenly they take it the wrong way and they haven't given the show a chance. I think the misconception is that the show is just raunchy without being funny or perhaps without making a point. I think the show can actually be, dare I say, intelligent at times.

"I want people to think what I do is wacked out and outrageous and wrong. I know when I go on the radio sometimes, even I think some of the things I'm saying are outrageous, because I can't believe I'm letting them come out of my mouth. But that's the strength of the show."

With his 6'5" frame, long dark hair and rock 'n' roll wardrobe, Stern cuts an imposing figure that's well-matched to his notoriously aggressive, love-to-hate-him personality. No ordinary deejay by any means, Stern never plays a single record—unless he's talking over it, ridiculing the artist, discussing the physical attributes of the artist's current girlfriend, or making up his own preposterous, possibly semi-obscene lyrics to the song. An excellent debater with the intelligence to back up his assertions and that notorious twisted sense of humor to keep things lively, Stern is the host of a daily program that's four to five straight hours a day of just talk—predominantly extemporaneous dialogue among himself, co-host Robin Quivers, writers Fred Norris and Jackie Martling, and producer Gary "Baba Booey" Dell' Abate. Entertainment and world news are discussed; over the course of a morning, current events, pop culture and the personal lives of the entire radio crew are targets for Stern's wit. Radio station interns become running gag characters. His studio is populated by a constant parade of world-renowned celebrities, aspiring starlets, professional strippers, amateur strippers, and a wide variety of human oddities with strange physical or mental afflictions, extremist doctrines or sociologically astounding patterns of behavior.

> "I've often said that off the air, I'm play-acting. When I go home, I can't say whatever I want, I can't behave the way I want to. Because obviously they'd lock me up in a mental institution if I behaved the way I do on the air."

Stern is ruthless in pointing out the foibles of his guests, all manner of public figures and anyone else who happens to be around him, but he's just as cruel to himself. "A lot of my humor is self-effacing because I really feel I am a disaster," he says bluntly. "I think I am a train wreck. There's nothing pretty about me. There's a lot of things wrong with me. And I point them out because I think that if you're going to be honest, you'd better damn well talk about your own faults, not just everyone else's." Alternately megalomaniac and mercilessly self-deprecating, Stern is a dichotomy it's hard to get a fix on. But every weekday morning, 18 million people laugh at his mercurial moods, his tirades, his bodily-function jokes, his lasciviousness and his political and social commentaries. It begs the question: Could 18 million people be wrong?

Among his humongous fan base are numerous Hollywood luminaries who regularly drop by to plug their latest project, knowing full well they're not going to escape before getting the grilling of their lives. Daring to ask megastars like Arnold Schwarzenegger, Sting and Jim Carrey how their wives are in bed is just one example of what makes Howard Stern different from any other media figure in the world. He says whatever is on his mind—anything to get a rise out of his interviewee. It makes for great radio. And television—Stern's show is filmed and shown daily on the E! cable TV network, and he had his own syndicated series in the early '90s, which was comprised mostly of bizarre skits and game shows involving both celebrities and idiosyncratic people off the street.

A BOXOFFICE EXCLUSIVE

HOWARD'S

TURN

The next medium the self-proclaimed King of All Media plans to conquer is film, with the release of his biopic, "Private Parts," which is based on Stern's best-selling autobiography of the same name. Directed by Betty Thomas ("The Brady Bunch Movie"), produced by Ivan Reitman ("Twins") and scripted by Len Blum ("Stripes"), "Private Parts" tells how Stern first got into radio, and of his constant battles with manager after manager, all of whom tried to squelch his personality and turn him into another run-of-the-mill automaton record-spinner. "The people that I worked for—they didn't get what I was doing at all," Stern recalls. "They were really—some of them were downright awful. It is unbelievable, the plotting and planning that went on behind my back." But a mouth like Stern's couldn't be silenced.

GOD BLESS AMERICA: Stern with director Betty Thomas.

"I think people are really going to be fascinated with this movie. A lot of people probably think I'm sitting and spanking girls for two hours. But really, it is my true story, and anybody who has a [job] knows how people are always sitting there and telling you how things should be done. And sometimes you have a vision of the way things should be done, and you know you're right, but nobody else gets it. Quite frankly, when I look back on it now, I can't believe I didn't buckle under, you know? It would have been so much easier!"

YEE-HAW: Stern's brief '80s stint as Country Music Howie is documented in "Private Parts."

As recounted in his book, Stern went from station to station, always encountering managers and program directors who at first seemed to appreciate his unique talents but inevitably tried to crush any and all creativity out of him. Despite the fact that it could have—and often did—cost him his job at a time when he had a wife and young daughter to support, Stern stood his ground, though he's still not sure what gave him the strength to do so.

"Probably some of it was stupidity," he laughs. "I mean, I just didn't know any better. I swear to you that I really always knew what kind of radio show I wanted to do, since I was five years old. I mean, it takes me a while to get to that point, as you'll see in the movie. I'm awful on the air. When I first get on the air, that's half the fun of the movie. I'm just so bad. And everyone wants to fire me. Not because I'm outrageous, but because I suck so bad. But I think I had this clarity of purpose, if you will. And believe it or not, the clarity of purpose is for telling penis jokes. But I knew what I wanted to do. And because I knew what I wanted to do, I couldn't take no for an answer from these people, and I think that's what gave me the strength to go on. I felt like there was a lot of good radio stuff I could be doing if I could just get around these obstacles, which was really bad management."

What was a frustrating and nearly career-destroying hindrance in real life serves as comedy on his show, in his book and now in his movie. "The people who play these managers, they nail the essence of the people I dealt with. And they just do such a beautiful job," Stern enthuses. "They're the real stars of the film, in a sense. They just keep this thing going. You sometimes go, 'How do you take these guys?!' They're funny. They're comical. They're [Marx Bros. foil] Margaret Dumonts, in a way. They're funny even though they don't know they're being funny."

Also focused on in the film is Howard's family life, from his dysfunctional upbringing to his marriage to Alison Stern, who's played in the film by Mary McCormack. ("Mary did a super job. When we're sitting and yelling at each other, it feels like home," Stern jokes.) "Private Parts" the movie spans 43-year-old Stern's entire life. "The story starts from when I'm a little kid all the way to the present day. It's this travel through the radio career, and it's sort of the woman-behind-the-man kind of thing. A lot of people are really curious about my personal life. They go, 'Who the hell would be married to this guy? He's such a monster,' or 'He's such a maniac, he's—' everything you can think of. I don't think my fans or anybody has ever seen me at home, you know, quite this way." Despite daily on-air encounters with strippers, masseuses, porn stars, Playboy models and other miscellaneous female exhibitionists, Stern has repeatedly claimed complete fidelity to his wife of almost 20 years, with whom he has three young daughters. It's just another facet of the dichotomy.

Although "Private Parts" is a humanizing portrait of Stern, he doesn't pretend that he is anything other than the abrasive character on the radio. "I've often said that off the air, I'm play-acting. I'm living a lie. I think that most of us have to pretend to be a certain way most of the day. When I go home, I can't say whatever I want, I can't say what's on my mind. I can't behave the way I want to. Because obviously they'd lock me up in a mental institution if I behaved the way I do on the air. When I get on the air, I find that that's the point where I'm most free and really most like myself. And I'm really expressing what's on my mind and not putting a governor on myself, you know? I'm allowing things to happen. So I kind of think that the guy off the air is probably the phony. The one on the air is really truthful."

And yet he routinely tells wife Alison that the opposite is true. "Of course. You have to, because you have to be a phony," he affirms.

But, says Stern, there is more to him—and his story—than meets the eye. "I hope people don't sort of get caught up in, 'Oh, Howard Stern, he's an asshole, I can't go see his movie.' I hope that somehow word gets out, and that people get to see it, because it is a good movie, and that they don't get swayed by what they think I am, as opposed to what I really am."

While imitators try to replicate Stern's success by being mean-spirited, lewd and contentious, they always fall short. That indefinable Howard Stern quality—call it charisma, high intelligence, low cunning or just plain gall—isn't there to balance it out and make it work. It's a formula that cannot be duplicated. For better or worse, when Howard Stern was made, they broke the mold.

"Private Parts." Starring Howard Stern, Mary McCormack, and Robin Quivers. Directed by Betty Thomas. Written by Len Blum, based on the novel by Howard Stern. Produced by Ivan Reitman. A Paramount release. March 14.

CinemAcoustics
CA-CP600
FINALLY, A COMPLETE CINEMA PROCESSOR.
Our CA-CP600™ Cinema Processor is a full-featured, digitally-based processor, supplying the signal processing and monitoring requirements for today's motion-picture theatre. Comprised of the CA-DP300™ Digital Processor and the CA-M300™ Monitor/Controller, the CA-CP600 is full-featured out of the box, supporting direct digital 5.1 audio from formats such as DTS™, two 5.1 analog inputs, matrixed stereo optical sound, as well as two stereo non-sync channels. The CA-CP600™ also includes booth monitor, exciter lamp supply, and solar cell preamp. And just to make your installation easy, the cables are on us.
PEAVEY
CA - DP300
CinemAcoustics
DIGITAL CINEMA PROCESSOR
PEAVEY
CA - M300
CinemAcoustics
CINEMA MONITOR/CONTROLLER
CinemAcoustics CA-S 5330
CA-CP 600 CinemAcousti
The Future of Digital Cinema
Bob,
Thanks for the tip. The Cinemacoustics systems approach looks Great, Especially with Direct Digital Input!
THE ONE SINGLE SOURCE.
YOUR SOURCE
PEAVEY
Response No. 84

MARCH TRAILERS

One way or another, this promises to be a precipitous month

Will this be a month for ledgers, or ledges?

Given that the studios' dreadnoughts were fired over the Christmas and President's Day holidays, March's larder—although numbering 36 in total releases—is relatively star-shy, leading exhibitors to wonder whether it'll be a month of ticket sales or ticket plunges. For those films that have set dates, it's not till March 14 that a genuinely big new title arrives: Buena Vista's "Jungle 2 Jungle" (see photo below), starring "The Santa Clause's" Tim Allen. Two weeks later, in superstar fashion, Harrison Ford and Brad Pitt arrive in "The Devil's Own" from Columbia.

Also, although not yet dated, Universal's "Liar Liar"—the latest $100 million possibility from Jim Carrey—makes up the third of the month's top trio.

Although numbered among the remainder are several studio titles with breakout potential, like Warner's "Selena" and Columbia's sci-fi "Gattaca" (name change, please), March will be an interesting will-the-promise-deliver test of the industry's move toward megaplexes during the past two years.

Indie distributors have been eager to have their fare win large-site plays, and this month they might, as exhibitors wanting to fill their new teens- and twenties-hall plexes turn to such specialized titles as Miramax's "Mimic," Fox Searchlight's "Love and Other Catastrophes" and Orion's "Independence." Indeed, of March's movie total, indies account for a hefty two-thirds. Will they provide sure footing?

MARCH 7

Return of the Jedi

The third film in the "Star Wars" trilogy, "Return of the Jedi" follows Luke Skywalker (Mark Hamill) and Han Solo (Harrison Ford) as they face the ultimate battle with the Imperial forces, aided by the toy-cute Ewoks. Originally released in 1983, the film also stars Carrie Fisher and was directed by Richard Marquand. (Fox, 3/7)

Exploitips: Fox concludes its 25th-anniversary rollout of the George Lucas trilogy. As with the original releases, expect numbers for this iteration to modestly best the new returns for last month's "The Empire Strikes Back."

Mon Homme

A cheerful and kindhearted prostitute finds a pimp through a strange set of circumstances, and he becomes her man. Bertrand Blier directs this French film starring Anouk Grinberg and Gerard Lanvin. (Artificial Eye, 3/7)

Exploitips: Artificial Eye head Tom Prassis was sure enough of "Mon Homme" to showcase it at Showeast. As Prassis suggests, exhibitors should play up the film's sensuality—sex does sell—but not forget its Continental humor. Arthouse audiences looking to warm themselves from a long winter are the likely candidates here.

Boys Life 2

This collection of shorts is a followup to 1994's successful "Boys Life" and relates more stories of gay adolescence, coming of age and manhood by a number of directors. (Strand, 3/7)

Exploitips: A presold item with its select moviegoing audience, "Boys Life 2" is that rarity in gay cinema: a sequel, certainly highlightable as such. The release was held from late 1996.

MARCH 14

Jungle 2 Jungle

In order to marry Charlotte (Lolita Davidovich), a New York businessman named Michael ("The Santa Clause's" Tim Allen) must finalize his divorce with his first wife (JoBeth Williams). He travels to the heart of the Amazon to find her; there, he learns he has a 13-year-old son, Mimi Siku (Sam Huntington), who's been raised in the wilds by his mother and a local tribe. When Mimi returns to New York with Michael, cultures clash. Martin Short co-stars for director John Pasquin (who paired with Allen for "The Santa Clause"); Charlie Peters, Ray Gideon and Bruce Evans script; Brian Reilly produces. See photo, this page. (Buena Vista, 3/14)

Exploitips: TV favorite Allen (ABC's "Home Improvement") became an instant movie exhibitor favorite with the $100+ mil. performance of "The Santa Clause." Disney has high expectations here, having acquired English-language remake rights to the French comedy "Little Indian, Big City" in part by dubbing and releasing the original Thierry Lhermitte film stateside. The studio might be right; the casting is perhaps the month's most perfect, and the plot—a man is transformed via adventures with his son—will sound pleasingly familiar to family audiences.

Wide Awake

In this coming-of-age-story, a 10-year-old boy and girl develop a special friendship. Denis Leary ("Two If By Sea"), Rosie O'Donnell, Dana Delany ("Fly Away Home") and Joseph Cross star. M. Night Shyamalan ("Praying With Anger") directs; Cary Woods and Cathy Konrad (who paired for Miramax's "Citizen Ruth") produce. (Miramax, 3/14)

Exploitips: Shyamalan's debut film, in which he also starred, was heartfelt to a fault, barely performing in specialized houses. With a pro cast like this, however, his instincts might receive the playing they need, and the Woods/Konrad imprimatur is an increasingly solid one.

Hearts and Minds

Set in South Africa in the '80s, first-time director/co-writer Ralph Ziman's film follows apartheid death-squad member Andries Fourie (Danny Keogh of the forthcoming "Bliss") who is hired to assassinate an ANC leader (co-writer Patrick Shai). When Andries loses his job after the release of Nelson Mandela, he is forced to face his dark past. Ziman and Benjamin Howell produce. (Northern Arts, 3/14)

Exploitips: Northern Arts' more active slate is a sign of the tiny distributor's success with overlooked art-house fare. Expect this to perform best in college towns; similarities to the recent release "Inside" might curtail turnout.

MARCH 21

Power Rangers II

Jason David Frank, Steve Cardenas, Johnny Yong Bosch, Catherine Sutherland and Nakia Burrise star in the second cinematic offshoot (also known as "Turbo: A Power Ranger Adventure") of TV's "Mighty Morphin Power Rangers" that finds the superheroes on another quest. David Winning directs; Shuki Levy and Shell Danielson script; Jonathan Tzachor produces. (Fox, 3/21)

Exploitips: "Mighty Morphin Power Rangers" provided underwhelming ($37.8 mil.) returns after its midsummer 6/30/95 bow, but that could be attributed to that weekend's "Apollo 13" success in drawing not only adults but also the family demo. This time, in a less-crowded late winter frame, the key competition will be second-weekend auds for "Jungle 2 Jungle"—which could be competition enough, as "Miracle on 34th Street" and "The Swan Princess" found opening against weekend #2 of "The Santa Clause." Also, Fox will have to battle decreased strength in the Power Ranger fad, as shown in Christmas toy sales; too bad the producers can't work a Tickle Me Elmo into the proceedings.

The Quiet Room

A seven-year-old girl (Chloe Ferguson) stops talking when she comes to believe that words are the cause of her family's problems. In this drama, writer/director Rolf De Heer ("Bad Boy Bubby") explores the disintegration of a family. Celine O'Leary and Paul Blackwell star; De Heer also produces with Domenico Procacci. (Fine Line, 3/21)

Exploitips: "Bad Boy Bubby" drew mixed reviews at its recent AFI run—some strong, some negative. On Fine Line's current slate, this can be expected to be among the lower-profile entries (there are no stars, and the lead character is a child), meaning the dedicated art-house crowds that attended the likes of "Manny & Lo" are the probable candidates.

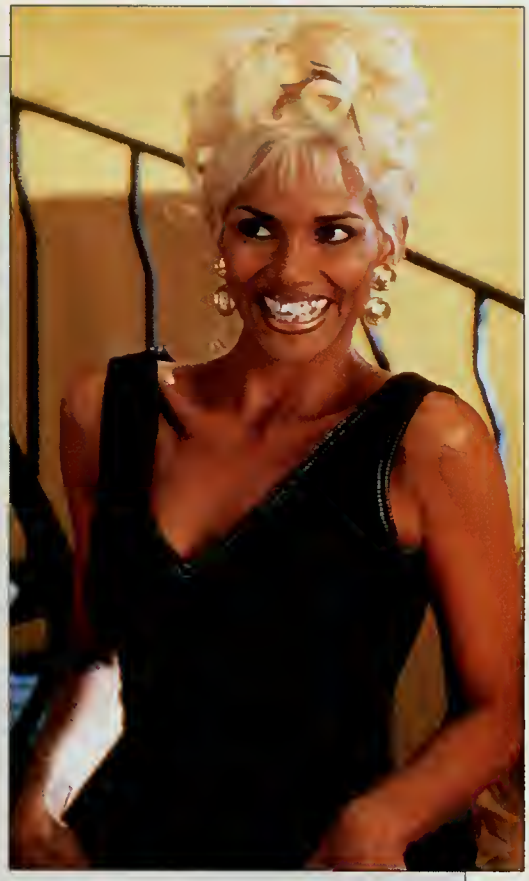
Mimic



Two scientists try to rid the world of disease-infested cockroaches—with interesting results. Mira Sorvino ("Mighty Aphrodite") and Jeremy Northam ("The Net") star. This sci-fi tale is written by a compelling trio of talents: John Sayles ("Lone Star"), Steven Soderbergh ("King of the Hill") and Guillermo del Toro ("Cronos"); del Toro also handles the directing duties. (Miramax, 3/19)

Exploitips: If Miramax can avoid having "Mimic" thought of as the second coming of "Joe's Apartment," it might see good art-house returns here. Even more than the Sorvino name, the Sayles/Soderbergh/del Toro triumvirate promises something different.

B.A.P.S.

In this comedy, Halle Berry ("Executive Decision") stars as Nisi, a poor girl from Georgia who moves to Beverly Hills with her friend Mickey (Natalie Deselle) to pursue fame and fortune. Nisi is soon hired to entertain dying millionaire Mr. Blakemore ("Ed Wood's" Martin Landau) for $20,000, but what she doesn't realize is that she's in the middle of a setup. Robert Townsend ("Hollywood Shuffle") directs; Troy Beyer scripts; Mark Burg produces. (New Line, 3/28)

Exploitips: Reviewers and moviegoers seem to agree on two things about Halle Berry movies: She's impossibly gorgeous, and they're, well, not. Unlike the adult-themed "The Rich Man's Wife" and the family-oriented "Race the Sun," "B.A.P.S." might play first to urban audiences, meaning it will need time to begin a crossover push, o lo "Waiting to Exhale." Townsend's recent track record (e.g., "The Meteor Man") doesn't inspire absolute confidence that will happen, however, especially given that the urbon demo (at least for male-choice ticket sales) for the 3/28 frame is likely to be governed by "Hoods."

Gray's Anatomy

Steven Soderbergh ("The Underneath") directs the third monologue from Spalding Gray ("Swimming to Cambodia," "Monster in a Box"). Fearing eye surgery, Gray discusses his adventures into alternative medicine. Gray scripts with Renee Shafransky; John Hardy produces. (Seventh Arts, 3/19)

Exploitips: Although "Swimming to Cambodia" provided good specialized boxoffice, "Monster in a Box" was less successful. To boost interest here, exhibitors might try a catchy Q&A contest, with questions based on the famed medical text, and the prize being a (plastic, we hope) human skeleton.

MARCH 28

The Devil's Own

Brad Pitt ("Sleepers") and Harrison Ford ("The Fugitive") star in this action drama about a vengeful IRA soldier who is taken in by a New York City cop. Alan J. Pakula ("All the President's Men") directs; Kevin Jarre scripts; Lawrence Gordon ("Die Hard") produces. (Columbia, 3/26)

Exploitips: This project garnered a lot of bad press during its filming, with tabloidists highlighting supposed Pitt-vs.-Ford contretemps over last-minute script changes that boosted the "Seven" star's character profile here. But this is one of the few A-list vehicles this month, so audiences will be star-starved. And, as "Sleepers" showed, testosterone-heavy casts can deliver big openings.

Hoods

In this actioner, gangster Bumpy Johnson tries to overthrow mob boss Dutch Schultz and take control of the numbers racket in 1930s Harlem. Laurence Fishburne ("Othello"), Tim Roth ("Four Rooms") and Vanessa Williams ("Eraser") star. Bill Duke ("Deep Cover") directs; Chris Brancato scripts; Frank Mancuso, Jr. produces. (UA, 3/28)

Exploitips: UA wants the 3/28 weekend to go after holiday audiences, but "The Devil's Own" seems rather weighty competition; not only is it the same genre but, tine actors that they are, Fishburne and Roth don't have the massive mainstream draw of Ford and Pitt. Just as the Lion found earlier dates too bumpy for "Turbulence," expect this one to move, or else settle for urban-audience dominance.

Love and Other Catastrophes

An Australian comedy from first-time director Emma-Kate Croghan, this film follows the adventures of five university students. Mia (Frances O'Connor) and Alice (Alice Garner) search for a roommate, but aren't keen on Mia's girlfriend, Danni (Radha Mitchell), as a choice. Classics student Ari (Matthew Dyktynski) falls for Alice, but so does Michael (Matt Day), a shy medical student. Croghan scripts with Yael Bergman and Helen Bandis; Stavos Andonis Efthymiou produces. (Fox Searchlight, 3/28)

Exploitips: This Down Under effort arrives still warm with accolades from Cannes; our reviewer (see our Aug. '96 issue) called it "engaging" and "one of the festival's genuine

LATE MOVIE MOVES INTO FEBRUARY...

Jerusalem

Bille August ("The House of the Spirits") directs this period story of a preacher who influences two young lovers, ultimately disrupting their lives. Based on the novel by Selma Lagerlof, this Swedish film stars Maria Bonnevie, Ulf Friberg, Olympia Dukakis and Max Von Sydow. (First Look)

Exploitips: Which August will show up here—the man behind "The Best Intentions" and "Pelle the Conqueror," or the man behind "The House of the Spirits"? Our Toronto fest reviewer (see this issue) says the latter, but expect the August/Swedish combination to win a select following.

The Sadness of Sex

Music video/commercial helmer Rupert Wainwright explores sex in this collection of 15 vignettes. Peta Wilson stars. Barry

Yourgrau writes and narrates; Rupert Maconick and David Lancaster produce. (Tara)

Exploitips: Our reviewer has some reservations about this, but the title has a built-in sales cachet. Target the twentysomething, MTV and college crowds.

Plump Fiction

In this spoof of Quentin Tarantino's "Pulp Fiction," two insect exterminators—Jimmy (Second City troupe comedian Paul Dinello) and Julius ("In Living Color's" Tommy Davidson)—work for L.A.'s meanest boss, Montello (Robert Costanza). All goes well until Montello asks Jimmy to take out his plump wife Mimi (Julie Brown of "Earth Girls Are Easy"). Sandra Bernhard co-stars. Bob Koherr directs and scripts; Gary Binkow produces. (Rhino)

Exploitips: Another entry whose strongest element is its title (and which shares "The Sadness of Sex's" demos), "Plump Fiction" might've been more timely had it arrived this past summer as planned. But runs in college markets could pay dividends.

Fire on the Mountain

Directors/producers Beth Gage and George Gage's documentary combines interviews and historical footage to tell the story of the U.S.'s 10th Mountain Division, an infantry trained for winter warfare that fought in World War II. (First Run)

Exploitips: Best marketing move: Buy 30-second local avails on The Discovery Channel and The History Network (both of which heavily program WWII documentaries) via your cable operator, who might be willing to do a cross-promo.

Message to Love

Featuring rare footage of '60s music greats Jimi Hendrix, Jim Morrison and Joni Mitchell, this documentary offers a behind-the-scenes look at the 1970 Isle of Wight Musical Festival. Other acts include Leonard Cohen, The Who and Emerson Lake & Palmer. Murray Lerner ("From Mao to Mozart") directs. (Strand)

Exploitips: Aim at both the Boomer and Gen-X crowds; a tie-in with your local cable operator carrying MTV and VH-1 would reach those demos.

Sudden Manhattan

Adrienne Shelly (who writes and directs) stars as a penniless twentysomething who, in her New York wanders, meets an array of characters, like fortune-teller Domingo ("Bananas'" Louise Lasser) and philosopher/actor Adam ("Courage Under Fire's" Tim Guinee). Marcia Kirkley (who executive-produced "Dogs: The Rise and Fall of an All-Girl Bookie Joint") produces. (Phaedra)

Exploitips: Another college crowd/Gen-X title, "Sudden Manhattan" could attract the distaff audience that didn't get "Beavis and Butt-head Do America."

Cobra Verde

This 1987 German film by writer/director Werner Herzog (who adapts the novel "The Viceroy of Ouidah") follows a poor man (Klaus Kinski) who becomes an outlaw. Lucki Stipetic produces. (Roxie)

Exploitips: The Herzog name is the sell here, as it has resonance with older art-housers (the largest segment of the specialized audience).

To Have (Or Not)

Fish canner Alice (Sandrine Kiberlain) searches for a happier life in Lyon. Roschdy Zem co-stars, and French directors Claire Denis and Didier Flamand appear in cameos. French writer/director Laetitia Masson makes her filmmaking debut. (Cinema Parallel)

Exploitips: Emphasize the French-language angle to attract the goodly Francophiles among art-house auds.

Le Samourai

Alain Delon ("Assassination of Trotsky") stars as a hitman in this 1967 film noir. Natalie Delon ("Le Sex Shop") co-stars. French filmmaker Jean-Pierre Melville ("Breathless") directs; the movie will be released in the original uncut 35mm version. (Artificial Eye) sleepers," although at 76 minutes "It seems a bit slight." That last element could work against it for more serious art-housers, who prefer their movie fare like their espressos—dark and dense. Exhibitors should emphasize the distaff doings here, including the 23-year-old director, in hopes of drawing the twentysomething female crowd that made the likes of "Muriel's Wedding" a breakout success.

Exploitips: As with "Cobra Verde," emphasize the Delon and Melville names; the primary demo here is mature art-housers.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 18

Chasing Amy

This romantic comedy, written and directed by Kevin Smith ("Clerks," "Mallrats"), follows a man who falls in love with a lesbian. Ben Affleck ("Last Call"), Joey Lauren Adams ("Dazed and Confused"), Jason Lee ("Mallrats") and Dwight Ewell ("Amateur") star. Scott Mosier produces. (Miramax, 3/28)

Exploitips: If "Love and Other Catastrophes" grabs the progesterone-type twentysomethings, then "Chasing Amy" might find itself chasing testosterone-type twentysomethings. Even if "Mallrats" wasn't the hit or even success d'estime "Clerks" was, Smith still has a following among the young-adult crowd that can be exploited by exhibitors. Daring theatre owners might try an offbeat Dating Game contest to garner publicity. Just don't pull a Jenny Jones.

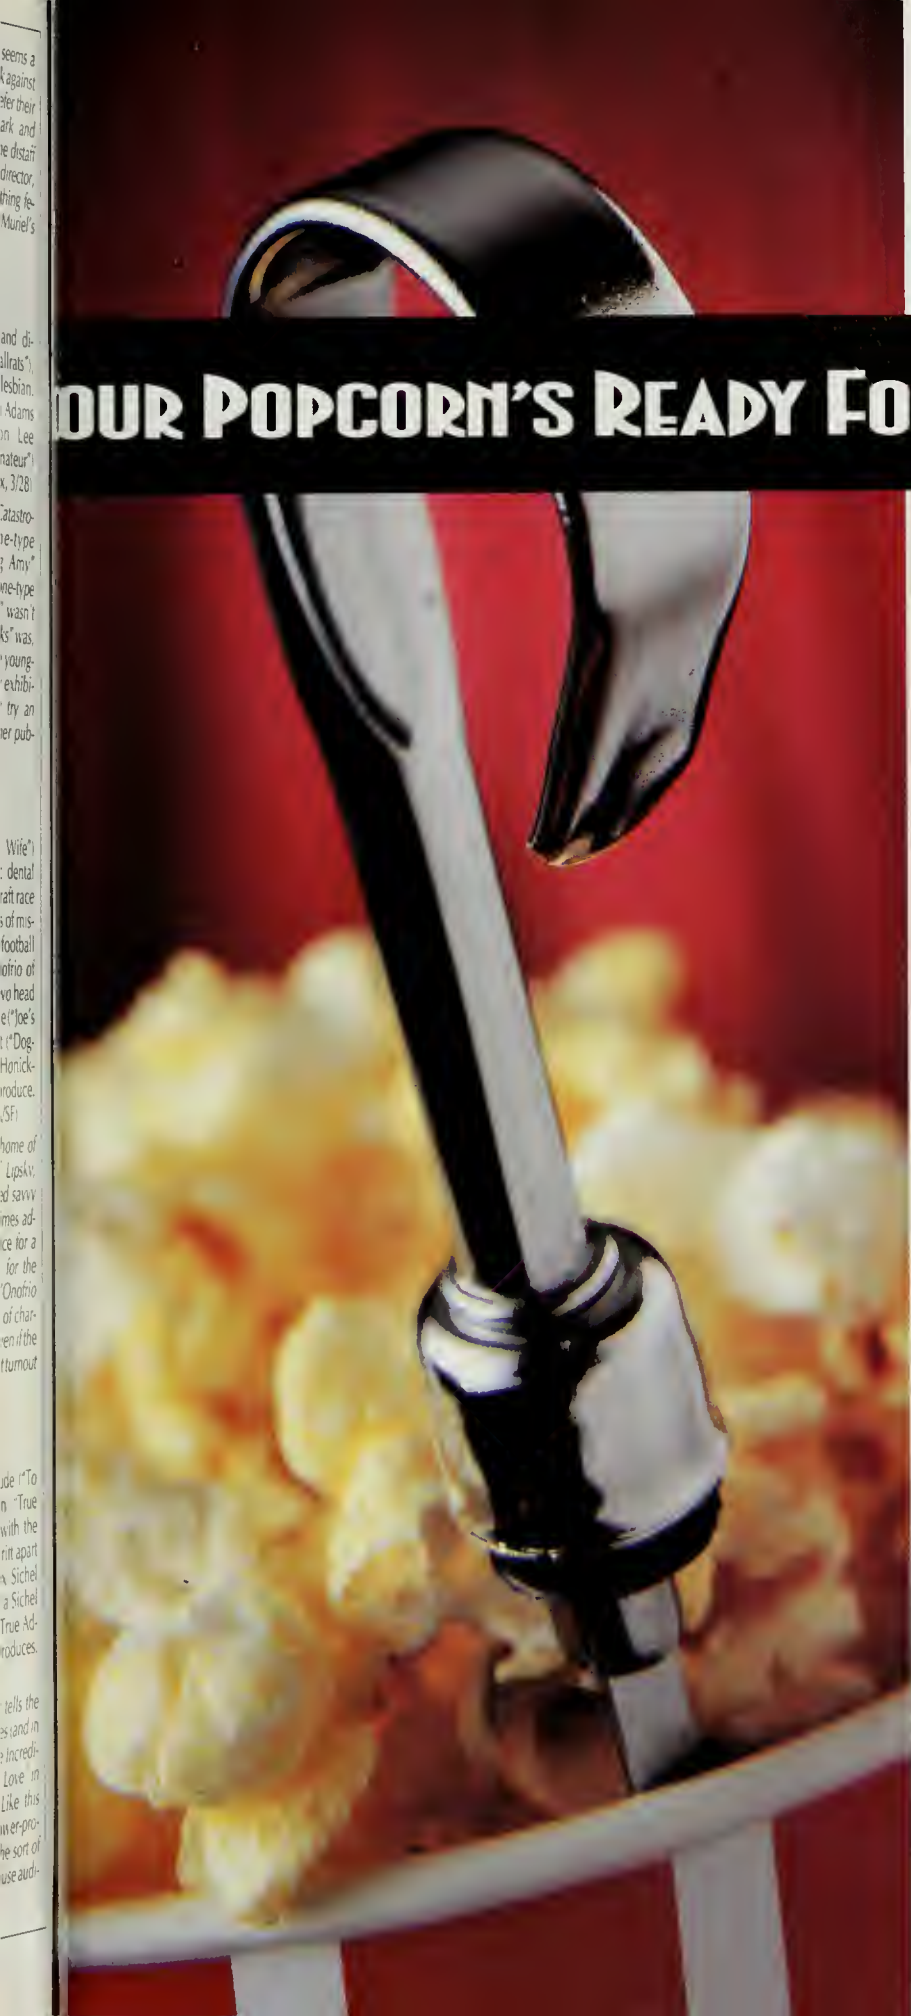
Good Luck



Gregory Hines ("The Preacher's Wife") plays Bernard Lemley, a paraplegic dental technician who dreams of running a raft race over treacherous waters. After a series of mishaps, Bernard teams up with blind ex-football hero Tony Olezniak (Vincent D'Onofrio of "The Whole Wide World") and the two head off on a wild adventure. Richard LaBrie ("Joe's Rotten World") directs; Bob Comfort ("Dogfight") scripts; Richard Hahn, Shirley Honickman Hahn and Andrzej Kamrowski produce. (East West Film Partners, 3/27 NY/LA/SF)

Exploitips: East West is the new home of former October Films founder Jeff Lipsky, who exhibited substantial specialized savvy during his tenure there. This good-times adventure might seem a change of pace for a Lipsky project (almost a "Kingpin" for the art-house crowd), but the Hines-D'Onofrio pairing holds promise, both in terms of character interplay and audience draw, even if the lack of a love-story subplot could limit turnout by the distaff demo.

All Over Me

Fifteen-year-old best friends Claude ("To Die For's" Alison Folland) and Ellen ("True Crimes'" Tara Subkoff) must deal with the pain of separation as they begin to drift apart and make new acquaintances. Alex Sichel directs her feature debut; sister Sylvia Sichel scripts; Dolly Hall ("The Incredibly True Adventures of Two Girls in Love") produces. (Fine Line, 3/28)

Exploitips: The Dolly Hall credit tells the story here; expect the same audiences (and in the same quantity) as attended "The Incredibly True Adventures of Two Girls in Love" in '95 and "Manny & Lo" in '96. Like this month's "The Quiet Room," this is lower-profile Fine Line fare, but it's exactly the sort of against-the-grain product that art-house audiences can find provocative.

OUR POPCORN'S READY FOR AN OIL CHANGE.

Introducing PopWise® popping oil the only oil that gives you more nutritionally attractive popcorn plus incredible flavor and aroma appeal and excellent performance PopWise has all the qualities you need to satisfy your customers, increase popcorn sales and boost your bottom line.

Nutritional Appeal

- Less than 10% saturated fat
- Not hydrogenated
- Zero cholesterol

Customer Appeal

- Classic theater popcorn flavo
- Excellent buttery aroma

Performance Appeal

- Easy to handle
- Keeps kettle cleaner longer
- Extends popcorn holding time
- Safer operation
- Pump line won't clog

ISN'T IT TIME YOU GOT WISE?
Contact your distributor or call 1-800-328-3534 for more information.

POPWISE®
POPPING OIL
WE'RE MAKING POPCORN GOOD AGAIN!®

A CARGILL FOODS produc

Response No. 52

©1995 Cargill, In

CATS DON'T DANCE

This animated musical tells of the adventures of two cats who want to be Hollywood stars. "Cats Don't Dance" features the voices of Scott Bakula, Natalie Cole, Ashley Peldon and Kathy Najimy. Mark Dindal directs; executive producer Sandy Russell Gartin also handles scripting chores; David Kirschner ("The Pagemaster") and Paul Gertz produce. (Warner Bros., 3/28)

Exploitips: Although the Kirschner-produced "Pagemaster" didn't set boxoffice records during its Thanksgiving 1994 run, it hod an intelligent narrative (perhaps too intelligent) and some intriguing visuals. "Cats Don't Dance" sports the animals 'n' singing combination that family audiences more commonly expect of animated films. But the usual caveat applies here: Only the Disney imprimatur is a guarantee of tot turnout for feature-length cartoon fare.

MARCH UNDATED

Liar Liar

As his birthday present, the son of a fanatical liar/attorney ("The Cable Guy's" Jim Carrey) receives his wish, and his father is forced to tell the truth for 24 hours. Maura Tierney and Cary Elwes ("Twister") co-star. Tom Shadyac ("Ace Ventura: Pet Detective") directs; "City Slickers" scripters Lowell Ganz and Babaloo Mandell team with writers Paul Guay and Stephen Mazur ("The Little Rascals") for the screenplay; Brian Grazer ("Apollo 13") produces. (Universal)

Exploitips: The reason Universal was a bit product-shy this past Christmas was that "Liar Liar" had been slated to be U's big holiday title. As distribution president Nikki Rocco (and all exhibitors) say, however, this is a 12-months-a-year industry, so a Carrey title—even after the comparatively low returns for "The Cable Guy"—arriving in March holds promise. And the Lion certainly profited with a big-star comedy last March with "The Birdcage." More importantly, the scenario here could return Carrey to his frantic antic mode, which is what moviegoers pay their $7 to see.

Selena

Writer/director Gregory Nava (who scored with New Line's "My Family/Mi Familia") explores the life and death of the superstar Tejano singer Selena (rising star Jennifer Lopez, most recently in "Jack" and "Blood and Wine"), who was murdered in 1995. Edward James Olmos ("Caught") also stars. (Warner)

Exploitips: Advanced from May, "Selena" holds promised of being an unexpectedly big hit. Expect heavy turnout from youth, female and Hispanic audiences, which comprised Selena's millions-deep fan base. Nava's most recent, "My Family/'Mi Familia," garnered substantial critical acclaim, so "Selena" could become "The Rose" of the '90s.

Inventing the Abbotts

Raised in the shadow of an unresolved secret between their families, two brothers—one whose soul is filled with anger, and one whose soul is fueled by love—compete for the affections of three wealthy sisters. Billy Crudup ("Sleepers"), Joaquin Phoenix ("To Die For"), Liv Tyler ("Stealing Beauty"), Jennifer Connelly ("Mulholland Falls") and Joanna Going ("Wyatt Earp") star. Pat O'Connor ("Circle of Friends") directs; Ken Hixon adapts the Sue Miller short story; Brian Grazer and Janet Myers produce for Imagine. (Fox)

Exploitips: The strong young cast, teaming with O'Connor (who gave Savoy its one good film), gives "Inventing the Abbotts" sleeper promise. Depending on when Fox slates the film's first weekend, one might expect strong initial interest from the twenty- and thirtysomething crowd; if reviews are good, other demos could come in on succeeding frames.

Commandments

After losing his job, wife and home, Seth ("Michael Collins'" Aidan Quinn) is hit by a lightning bolt while yelling at God, and must live with his dead wife's sister ("Scream's" Courteney Cox) and her tabloid reporter husband ("Trees Lounge's" Anthony LaPaglia). To

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 16

LATE INTO FEBRUARY...

Boyfriends

Directed, written and produced by Neil Hunter and Tom Hunsinger, this contemporary comedy explores the relationships of three gay couples as they spend Easter weekend together in the country. James Dreyfus, Michael Urwin, David Coffey, Mark Sands, Andrew Ableson and Darren Petrucci star. (First Run)

Exploitips: Catchline: "The Big Chill" goes gay. If your run continues through the end of March, emphasize the Easter theme to give this a seasonal flavor.

I Was a Jewish Sex Worker

This documentary, mode by directar/writer/producer Phillip B. Roth, explores the life of the filmmaker as he grapples with his religion, family and homosexuality—all the while as he works as an erotic masseuse. (Greycat)

Exploitips: Despite the diverting title, this will likely play only to the specialized gay demo. Controversy could cause crossover.

Satantango

At 430 minutes, "Satantango" is an epic that explores the corrosian of ideals in Eastern Europe during the fall of communism. Bela Tarr directs. (Cinema Parallel)

Exploitips: And some thought "Hamlet" long. Think of it this way: If you have an intermission every 90 minutes, "Satan Tango" provides four breaks for concessions.

Scream of Stone

Two climbers (Vittorio Mezzogiorno and Stephan Glowacs) ascend the world's most difficult peak. Werner Herzog directs; Hans-Ulrich Klenner and Walter Saxer script, and Soxer produces with Henry Lange and Richard Sadler. (Roxie)

Exploitips: As with "Cobra Verde," the Herzog name is the selling point here.

Without Air

South American filmmaker Neil Abramson directs, writes ond photographs this film about a stripper/blues singer (Lauri Crook) who has outgrown her junkie boyfriend (Jock May). Leigh-Anne Potter, Nakie Taylor and Pat Lawyer co-star; John Bick produces. (Phaedra)

Exploitips: Although our Sundance review (Aug. '96) was only 2 1/2 stars, it notes that "Lauri Crook gives a riveting autobiographical performance."

The Daytrippers

Directed by Greg Mottola, this comedy stars Hope Davis, Stanley Tucci, Parker Posey, Liev Schreiber, Anne Meora and Campbell Scott. (CFP)

Exploitips: Highlight the players' recent efforts: Scott/Tucci's "Big Night," Pasey's "subUrbia," Schreiber's "Denise Calls Up."

INNOVATIONS IN FILM HANDLING

FILM CABINETS IN 35/70MM UP TO 45 MINUTES

NEW STATE OF THE ART ESP ELECTRONIC CONTROL PLATTER

NEW NSP ELECTRO/MECHANICAL PLATTER

NEW MT-3 MAKE UP TABLE

CFS/RENTEC
Cinema Film Systems, Incorporated

Corporate Offices • Factory
719 N. Benson Ave.
Upland, CA 91786 U.S.A.
• Tel: (909) 931-9318
• Fax: (909) 949-8815

Midwest/International Sales
3840 S. Helena
Aurora, CO 80013 U.S.A.
• Tel: (303) 699-7477
• Fax: (303) 680-6071

Response No. 274

Gattaca

In this futuristic sci-fi film, genetic engineering is a prosperous and competitive business. Predestined to die in his early 30s, Vincent Freeman ("Before Sunrise's" Ethan Hawke) tries desperately to change his fate. Uma Thurman ("Beautiful Girls") and Alan Arkin ("Mother Night") star in writer/director Andrew Niccol's feature debut. Danny DeVito, Stacey Sher and Michael Shamberg produce for their Jersey Films production company, lately moved to Universal. (Columbia)

Exploitips: Even though there's no top A-list talent here (at least compared to Columbia's other big title this month, the Ford-Pitt "The Devil's Own"), the "Gattaca" genre is A-list at least for the first weekend, when the sci-fi crowd usually can be counted on to turn out in abundance. Also aim at the twenty- and thirtysomething crowd, Hawke and Thurman's strong suits.

get God's attention, Seth decides to break the ten commandments. Writer/director Daniel Taplitz makes his feature debut with this black comedy; Michael Chijich, Joe Medjuck and Daniel Goldberg produce. (Universal) Exploitips: Similar not only in studio but in setup and genre to this month's "Liar Liar," this could generate less attention simply due to comparative casting. If Universal opens "Liar Liar" first, however, be sure to program "Commandments" trailers to inform and attract their shared audiences.

Crash

Based on the 1973 novel by J.G. Ballard, this film follows a married man ("Two Days in the Valley's" James Spader) who becomes fascinated with sex and danger after he survives a near-fatal car crash with Dr. Helen Remington ("The Piano's" Holly Hunter). Elias Koteas ("Exotica"), Deborah Kara Unger and Rosanna Arquette co-star. David Cronenberg ("Naked Lunch") directs, scripts and produces. (Fine Line)

Exploitips: Not only Ted Turner doesn't like "Crash's" explicitness—it's the world, with country after country weighing in with objections. Fine Line (pre-Ted) had planned to release this NC-17, but it has an R version ready. Best bet: Use a banned-in-Boston approach to emphasis the high-PR controversy.

Gentlemen Don't Eat Poets

Set in the countryside of 1949 England, director John-Paul Davidson's film follows aristocrat Sir Hugo Coal (Alan Bates), who

Gold Medal...the most profitable poppers & funfood equipment

Improving the way the world makes funfood.

The Astro-Pop 20 delivers perfectly popped corn every time and is just one of the top quality theatre poppers available from Gold Medal. Sleek stainless steel designs and illuminated headers attract customers' attention and provide decades of dependable service!

High volume concession stands need a high capacity floor model warmer! Provides fast heat-up and even "holding" temperatures from top to bottom!

Gold Medal's newest hot dog cart has a stainless steel cabinet and long life expectency. Stainless steel bun warmer and sneeze guard are available.

Display your pizza and pretzels with Gold Medal's Combo Pizza/Pretzel humidified cabinet. Ultra small space required.

Call, write or fax today for our theatre popper brochure!
CALL TOLL FREE 1-800-543-0862
FAX TOLL FREE 1-800-542-1496

SEE US AT CineAsia Booth #503

GOLD MEDAL® PRODUCTS CO.
35 World Headquarters Bldg., 2001 Dalton Ave., Cincinnati, OH 45214
(513) 381-1313 • Fax (513) 381-1570 E-Mail: goldme19@eos.net

Response No. 14

EQ YOUR BLUES AWAY!

The USL, Inc. MMP-10 Microphone Multiplexer is a must for anyone doing acoustical analyzation of any kind. The MMP-10 utilizes four laboratory grade microphones to aid the technician's work. Compatible with virtually any analyzer. Each set of microphones are matched to their unit for accuracy. The MMP-10 is rugged, portable and compact. With microphone mounts included, the MMP-10 is the perfect compliment to any analyzer package.

USL,Inc.
Quality Cinema Products

...n of ULTRA*STEREO Labs, Inc. • 13737 Onaro Street, Suite 206, Tarzana, California 91356 • PHONE: (818) 609-7405 • FAX: (818) 609-740...
Response No. 2

becomes furious when his favorite daughter ("The Summer House's" Lena Headey) decides to marry a practitioner of the poetic arts (Steven Mackintosh). Theresa Russell stars as Hugo's bored wife. Patrick McGrath scripts; Trudie Styler produces. (Live)

Exploitips: At long last, former home video-only concern Live—which two years ago said it was entering the theatrical production/distribution game—seems to be carrying through. Expect this fare to score with the same group that responded to Live's "Hotel de Love" last month.

Independence

In this comedy/drama, a group of friends on their way to attend a wedding find themselves caught in the midst of a bank heist. Dean Cain (best known as TV's Superman) and Drew Barrymore ("Everyone Says I Love You") star. Tamra Davis ("Billy Madison") directs. (Orion)

Exploitips: Orion (which had recently handled Live efforts like "The Arrival") also seems to be returning to stride after a couple years offering only occasional Orion Classics titles. Barrymore is a known movie name (for a few generations, even), and among female auds the Cain moniker might generate some interest from twentysomething tube watchers.

A Brother's Kiss

Writer/director Seth Zvi Rosenfeld's film tells the story of two brothers living in the New York ghetto. Lex ("Con Air's" Nick Chinlund) dreams of becoming a pro basketball player; his younger brother Mick ("Federal Hill's" Michael Raynor) wants to become a detective. When Lex screws up his life, he turns to drugs and crime, and his brother, try as he might, can't save him. Rosie Perez, Cathy Moriarty and John Leguizamo co-star; Bob Potter produces. (First Look)

Exploitips: The title might be an offputting minus here with the likely male demo, but First Look—even in the post-Ray Price era—has done an excellent job of selecting its specialized titles. This one might need time to build, so accelerate word-of-mouth by emphasizing positive coast reviews.

Dead Men Can't Dance

In this action-genre film, a group of soldiers must cross enemy lines in order to secretly demolish a Korean nuclear power plant. Michael Biehn ("Tombstone"), Adrian Paul and Kathleen York star. Stephen M. Anderson ("South Central") directs; Bill Kerby, Mark Sevi and Paul Sinor script; Elaine Hastings-Edel produces. (Live)

Exploitips: Live seems to be specializing in catchy titles this month; with a month that sees both "Dead Men Can't Dance" and "Gentlemen Don't Eat Poets," it's showing it will be offering exhibitors diverse fare. This actioner will likely play to the male crowd that attended "The Arrival."

Broken English

A young Croatian immigrant, Nina (Aleksandra Vujcic), lives with her refugee family in a poor Auckland migrant enclave. Her relationship with her domineering and racist father ("Before the Rain's" Rade Serbedzija) deteriorates when she begins an affair with a local Maori named Eddie (Julian Arahanga). A crisis ensues when Nina becomes pregnant. Gregor Nicholas directs, and Nicholas scripts with Johanna Pigott and Jim Salter; Robin Scholes produces for Communicado/Village Roadshow. (Sony Classics)

Exploitips: Sony Classics debuted "Broken English" for exhibitors at Showeast, showing an appropriate level of confidence by the distributor. As we suggested in our Showeast coverage, "Broken English's" logline could be "Once Were Warriors" meets "Before the Rain," as it merges New Zealand and Serbian/Croat elements. Still, exhibitors might best highlight the romantic entanglement over that of the film's politics to expand the film's audience draw. Held from Feb. '97.

Female Perversions

A high-powered prosecutor ("Orlando's" Tilda Swinton) in line for a judgeship must hang on to her sliding personal life when her combative sister (Amy Madigan) is arrested for shoplifting and when she falls in love with a woman psychiatrist ("What Happened Was...'s" Karen Sillas). Susan Streitfeld directs and co-adapts a nonfiction book by Freudian therapist Louise J. Kaplan. (October Films)

Exploitips: So full of stylizations and symbolism about the female psyche that it's almost uninterested in narrative, "Female Perversions" could win interest among arthousers of both genders; exhibitors might play up its strangeness for marketplace cachet. Held from Nov. '96.

Response No. 9

RICOS

ORIGINATORS OF NACHOS IN CONCESSIONS

NACHO CHEESE PORTION CUPS

TASTES GREAT HOT OR COLD

GREATLY IMPROVE!

- ☑ Profits
- ☑ Inventory Control
- ☑ Transaction Time
- ☑ Preparation Time
- ☑ Shelf Life

ELIMINATE!

- ☒ Waste
- ☒ Mixing
- ☒ Leftovers
- ☒ Shrinkage
- ☒ Clean-up
- ☒ Refrigeration

Just the right amount of zest to MAXIMIZE BEVERAGE SALES!

TEN to the PROS...

SALES UP 30%

UNITED ARTISTS

We firmly believe in the Portion Pack program, enjoying increased nacho sales of over 30%. They're easy to prepare and clean-up. Most of all, customers appreciate a fresh delicious serving of Ricos Nachos every time...

Maria Angles, UA Theaters
National Concessions

INCREASED STAFF PRODUCTIVITY!

amc
AMC ENTERTAINMENT INC.

"Our customers enjoy a great taste and consistent quality from coast to coast... Our theatres realize increased staff productivity through ease of preparation and clean-up, as well as, a significant decrease in product waste."

John Sherley
Manager
Concession & Ancillary Revenue

CONSISTENT QUALITY!!

MANN

Eliminates waste, easy preparation, great customer acceptance, consistent quality...

Wally Helton
Executive Director of Concession Operations

EWARDING!!

Cobb Theatres

Our experience with the Ricos Portion Pack Nacho System has been very rewarding. We have inventory control on nachos - which we haven't had in the past. And we've virtually eliminated cheese on the seats

Lee DeFore, Cobb Theatres
Vice President Concessions

EASY & NEAT!!

HOYTS
Hoyts Cinemas Corporation

Thanks to Ricos new Portion Pack, We have now added nachos to our menu list. It's easier for our employees and much neater for the patrons

Dan Vieira, Hoyts Cinemas
Vice President/Operations

CIRCUIT WIDE

Metropolitan Theatres Corporation

Portion Pack gives us the control we are looking for throughout our circuit.

INVENTORY CONTROL

Deborah Clark, Metropolitan Theatres
Vice President/General Manager

Response No. 49

S MANUFACTURING CO., INC. 621 South Flores San Antonio, Tx. 78204 (210) 223-1415

Sleepover

After lying to their parents about their whereabouts for the coming night, three teenage boys stay out all hours and find themselves in life-threatening situations. Michael Albanese, Karl Giant, Shannon Berry, Heather Casey, Ken Miles and Megan Shand star. John Sullivan directs and scripts; Jim McNally produces. (Artistic License)

Exploitips: This could generate interest from Baby Boomer males who pulled the same sleepover stunt during their youth, but the older-teen and twentysomething date-night crowd is the likelier target.

The Watermelon Woman

An African-American lesbian filmmaker, Cheyrl (played by writer/director Cheyrl Dunye), researches the life of a Golden Age actress known only as the Watermelon Woman in hopes of trying to confirm her suspicion that the actress was involved in an interracial lesbian relationship. Guin Turner ("Go Fish") co-stars. Harry Swimar and Alexandra Juhasz produce. (First Run)

Exploitips: Not only homosexual audiences but also the more experimental college crowd, female but also male, might be attracted by this unconventional fare. "Go Fish" was a select-site hit for Goldwyn, so the Turner name and that credit will ring a bell with lesbian moviegoers.

Mushrooms

In this Australian comedy, widows and boarding-house owners Minnie (Lynette Curran) and Flo (Julia Blake) resort to shoplifting to get by after their husbands go to their heavenly rewards. When a crook named Grubb (Boris Brkie) dies in their house, they must try to get rid of the body while not incurring the suspicion of the resident policeman (Simon Chilvers). First-time feature filmmaker Alan Madden directs and scripts; Brian Rosen produces. (Tara)

Exploitips: "Arsenic and Old Lace" goes Down Under and less deadly. Aussie comedies (e.g., "Muriel's Wedding") have a way of playing stateside, so this could build strength as Tara bicycles the prints around America. Play up the reviews, especially any calling "Mushrooms" a distaff "Shallow Grave."

Mandela

Jo Menell and Angus Gibson's documentary chronicles the turbulent life of South African President Nelson Mandela, who narrates the film. "Mandela" is produced by Jonathan Demme, Edward Saxon and Peter Saraf for Clinico Estetico. (Island)

Exploitips: Expect interest from college-town demos, although January's "Inside"—which covered similar thematic ground—might cut into returns here (as with this month's "Hearts and Minds"). To counter this, emphasize the well-regarded Mandela name. A nod to Demme and Saxon (who paired for the big-title likes of "Philadelphia") can't hurt.

Salut Cousin!

Alilo (Gad Elmaleh) arrives in Paris from Algiers to retrieve a suitcase he must deliver back home. While staying with his worldly cousin Mok (Mess Hattou) Alilo is amazed at and attracted by the West's freedoms, so different from his repressive homeland. Meanwhile, his cousin continually schemes to escape the poverty of his immigrant life. Merzak Allouache directs, and co-scripts with Caroline Thivel; Jacques Bidou produces.(Seventh Art)

Exploitips: Our reviewer (see Dec. '96) cites Elmaleh as an enaging performer and Hattou as an effective character contrast, and also notes that filmmaker Allouache, in exile from Morocco since he made "Bab el-Oued City" (1994), allows his experiences to "give a complexity" to "Salut Cousin!" As did Sony Classics with "Broken English," Seventh Art held this from this year's crowded February.

Flipping

Writer/director Gene Mitchell's crime drama explores the life of Hollywood mobster Michael Moore ("The Takeover's" David Amos), who tries to overthrow the neighborhood boss ("Dead Presidents'" Keith David). Meanwhile, an undercover cop (David Proval of "The Shawshank Redemption") falls in love with Moore and loses his objectivity. Mitchell and Amos also produce. (Dove)

Exploitips: Held from Dove's '96 slate, "Flipping" has generated select good reviews on the fest circuit that exhibitors can exploit. The against-the-genre homosexual wrinkle, which with certain male demos could work against the film, is also a plus, providing exhibitors serving specialized gay audiences with an added marketing hook.

Let Proctor Build You a Profit Center.

When it comes to concession stands, Proctor's got you covered. From design and manufacture to equipment and replacement parts, we've got the products and expertise you need to maximize your bottom line. We build in excellent workmanship, professional installation and quick shipping, no matter where in the world you are. With 25 years expertise, we can give you a stand that rewards you with many happy returns.

NEW CATALOG • TO RECEIVE A COPY OF OUR NEW CATALOG, CALL TOLL FREE (800) 221-3699, EXT. 201. • NEW CATALOG

10497 Centennial Road,
Littleton, CO 80127
Phone: (303) 973-8989
Fax: (303) 973-8884
E-Mail: pdi@proctorco.com

PROCTOR COMPANIES

SEE US IN BOOTH 322

Response No. 461

IN MULTI-LINGUAL EXHIBITION, DTS MAKES A WORLD OF DIFFERENCE.

Tagalog at ten? Mandarin at midnight? No problem. With the remarkable flexibility of DTS, staging multi-lingual performances is simply a matter of switching discs, not prints. Combine that with our crisp, clear digital sound and you can amaze audiences around the world. So, for your next release, call us. We're ready to speak your language.

DIGITAL
dts
SOUND

LISTEN. AND BE AMAZED.

31336 Via Colinas #101 Westlake Village CA 91362 (818)706-3525 (800)959-4109
European Office: 51-55, rue Gustave Huberti 1030 Brussels, Belgium Phone: 32 2 245-9622
Visit our Website http://www.dtstech.com

Response No. 467

THE BEST LITTLE ART-HOUSE IN TEXAS

Scott Dinger Explains Why the Dobie Theatre is Austin's Premier Venue for Alternative Fare

By Susan Lambert

Scott Dinger in the Dobie's Gothic auditorium, one of four grandiosely themed cinemas.

There is a lot of film going on in Austin," says Scott Dinger, owner of the Dobie Theatre. And he's not just talking about the number of screens the capital city of Texas supports. Among independent filmmakers, the Dobie Theatre—located in the heart of the fair Lone Star city—is the stuff of legends. A few years back, then-unknown filmmaker Richard Linklater approached Scott Dinger about showing his independent movie—which some would later call the quintessential film of Austin—at the Dobie. Dinger agreed to give "Slacker" a try.

Sold-out shows and a subsequent string of film festivals led Hollywood straight to Linklater, and he followed up his efforts with "Dazed and Confused," "Before Sunrise" and "subUrbia." When fellow Austinite Robert Rodriguez broke onto the scene with "El Mariachi," his success also inspired a generation of Texas film students and Austin artists to a boom of independent production never before seen in the city. Scott says proudly, "At this year's New York IFM [Independent Film Market], there were six films in there from Austin."

And Austinites are just as proud of their theatre. As one Austin filmmaker put it, "If you could keep only one theatre open in all of Austin, it would have to be the Dobie. No question."

Scott Dinger began his exhibition career when his brother, Jeffrey Dinger, who runs a theatre in Rockport, Texas, decided to buy a local drive-in and asked Scott to come down from Philadelphia and help run it. "The drive-in had been closed for some time, and we spent months making sure everything was ready and getting all the speakers working. I'd just gotten some test film in when a hurricane came through the Gulf of Mexico and we had to evacuate." They returned to a destroyed drive-in. "So that was my short-lived drive-in career." But Scott stayed to help Jeffrey run his surviving theatre. "I had never worked in a theatre before, and that's where I learned the mechanics—projection, threading, trouble-shooting and all that stuff."

After a few years, Scott grew bored with Rockport. "It's on the water and it's real pretty, but it's a small resort town. So I moved to Austin." And briefly out of the movie business.

Then, around Christmas 1985, Scott noticed the theatre located in the Dobie Center mall was shuttered. "So I talked to Jeff and I said, 'You know, I think we can do this.'" Scott and Jeff worked long and hard to persuade the then-owner, Presidio—a local chain that thought the two-screen Dobie too small for its expansion plans—to sell to the Dingers and keep the Dobie going. It started out as a second-run house, but, as the market grew and changed in Austin, Scott found there was a need for something different. Eleven years later, the Dobie is considered one of the premier art/alternative houses in Texas and plays host to every film festival in Austin.

As for being the only independent theatre left in Austin, Scott is fairly blunt about the competition. "It's cutthroat," he says. "Austin is a big city, but the majors have come in and just squeezed everybody out."

Scott recently renovated the Dobie from two to four screens. "One of the reasons we did this expansion was the competition. It was a do-or-die kind of thing." The theatre was built as a one-screener in 1970, though it was almost immediately expanded to two screens. "And it was that way for 20 years, so we basically knocked everything down." The theatre took over the neighboring lot and Dinger renovated the entire area. "Basically it's a new theatre. New lobby, new concession stand, new restrooms, new seating, new everything."

And each auditorium was opulently and dramatically designed with a different theme. "My idea was that we play different kinds of movies, so I wanted the theatres to be different-looking. The largest theatre [275 seats] is Egyptian. The next one [175 seats] is what we call Gothic. We created archways with stained glass and gargoyles. The third one [150 seats] is art deco, and the smallest one [100 seats] is the hardest to describe. It has a lot of tapestries on the wall and it has a big old red velvet curtains with gold tassels down by the screen." Scott says his goal was to create something singular. "To me it really hearkens back to what it must have been like years ago with movies. It's like, 'Hey, this is showmanship.' You have to get the public excited, and that's what I feel some of this is."

The 275-seat Egyptian auditorium, the Dobie's largest theatre.

Scott asserts the challenge to survive has made the Dobie stronger. "We had to develop things to survive: courting all the film festivals that come to town, or creating our own, like a Hong Kong festival or a 3-D festival, that sort of thing. I think it's a lot of the things that made us what we are." Scott thinks the independent theatre owner is a special breed. "There are some that have been in the business forever and it's in their blood. There is all this video and competing markets, but they are still there in these smaller towns, you know, showing movies. I guess maybe it's that little bit of show business. You couldn't close them down if you wanted to. They love it."

"Excitement" is how Scott would capture the movie business in one word. "It's getting people out and getting them into lines to buy their ticket. That whole pre-show excitement. The lights come down and all that—that to me is the movie experience."

To generate interest, Scott has several methods of getting the word out on upcoming screenings. "We do a lot of promotion on the films. I think it would be tough for somebody who wouldn't actually be owning it and actually operating it to keep it going that way." Along with the usual calendar put out every two months, the Dobie Theatre has its own successful website (http://www.hyperweb.com/dobie). The Dobie also does promotions with radio stations, record stores and many other institutions. For "Kansas City" it did cross-promotion with the well known jazz clubs in town. The Dobie also works with neighboring businesses. "We'll do trades that will allow us to put posters up in their windows and in high-traffic areas."

"To me it really hearkens back to what it must have been like years ago with movies. It's like, 'Hey, this is showmanship.' You have to get the public excited, and that's what I feel some of this is."

One of the cinemas can accommodate 16mm and video projection along with 35mm. Scott says the versatility comes in quite useful for the film festivals, schools and local filmmakers. "We get a real interesting mix. We rent the theatre out for one-time show type things to a lot of different people."

The Dobie's usual crowd is not just the local University of Texas students, but what Scott calls the "hip crowd" of Austin. "We run seven days a week and we run midnight movies seven days a week. Four midnight movies every night. There are some movies, like 'Welcome to the Dollhouse,' where the midnight movie does better than the 7 o'clock show." Scott explains it's because much of his clientele isn't usually families, unless they play a family film. "Like last summer our biggest film was 'The Secret of Roan Inish.' We played it all summer and it went through the roof."

"What we're doing here is a lot of work, but it's extremely satisfying also," says Scott. "Because each film or festival or series that you put together is really unique. And of course you get to do really interesting things, like have Quentin Tarantino sitting in your office for 10 days."

Yes, the Quentin Tarantino. The Dobie recently ran a special 10-day program featuring the notorious filmmaker with some of his personally owned film prints. "He's a real film collector," explains Scott. "I think he owns prints of maybe 200 films. He was here for 10 days and each day was a different sort of genre. So one night was 'Good 'Ol Boy' night—films from the '70s set in the south with someone running moonshine and big car chases. One was 'Cheerleader Night' and 'Kung Fu' night. We had a big horror-thon that went on until like 5 in the morning." They would usually show double features and Tarantino would introduce each film. "And then he'd sit in the audience and most times actually yell at the movies. It was a lot of fun." The proceeds went to benefit the Austin Film Society which was started at the Dobie Theatre 10 years ago by Richard Linklater and Lee Daniels (cinematographer for "Slacker" and "Dazed and Confused"). Scott says it's those kinds of events that offer the most triumphant moments of being a film exhibitor. "It's creating a unique event at the Dobie that to me is a real memorable thing. That's the high."

The Dobie Theatre
2021 Guadalupe Street
Austin, TX 78705
(512) 472-3240
Owners: Scott & Jeffrey Dinger

Earliest Movie Memory: "Those Magnificent Men in Their Flying Machines," 1965

Favorite Concession Item: Soft pretzels with mustard and light salt

Favorite Boxoffice Feature: Independent Feature Chart; Reviews Section; Independent Exhibitor Showcase. "When I get my Boxoffice, I go through it the back first. I really like to look at the Independent Feature Chart. I like to look at the reviews because the reviews have really been expanded into more of something that I'm looking for. I also enjoy the Independent Exhibitor Showcase because you can get some ideas from it. You see what someone is doing and say, 'Hey, I could adapt that to my theatres.'"

Advice to Other Independents: "It's a niche market and you just work it."

HONG KONG: THE CITY ON THE EDGE OF FOREVER

RED TIDE: The looming presence of reunification has more and more frequently become the subject of Hong Kong films. Jet Li, a top HK draw and the star of "Bodyguard From Beijing," is one of few HK actors actually born in China itself. Li retains his Chinese citizenship.

At the stroke of midnight, June 30, 1997, a hundred years of British colonial rule in Hong Kong will come to an end as one of the world's most bustling capitalistic metropolises reverts to the People's Republic of China. With the expiration of Britain's century-long lease comes a flood of anxiety, anticipation, expectation and uncertainty. The reversion is especially unique in the annals of the post-Cold War world in that it marks the first peaceful transfer of territory from a democratic, capitalistic state to an authoritarian, communist one.

Nowhere, however, is the hand-over viewed with more scepticism than by the world's filmmaking community. Symbol of artistic freedom in the West, preferred tool for propaganda in the East, the cinema and its artisans continue to find themselves in the eye of the political storm in virtually all corners of the world. And all will be watching with bated breath as two of the world's most dynamic yet radically different film industries prepare to merge.

Promises to maintain the status quo in Hong Kong for another 50 years notwithstanding, most observers believe that some degree of change in the Hong Kong and mainland film industries will occur almost immediately. It is fitting, perhaps, that the hand-over occurs as both industries find themselves in a critical downturn. While filmmakers on the mainland are under increasing pressure to toe a rigid party line, and once-lauded status directors like Zhang Yimou and Chen Kaige are made to endure official censure for "pandering" to foreign audiences, Hong Kong is finally reaping the fruits of such pandering as the exodus of talent to Hollywood continues, leaving the once thriving industry in a state of disarray and chaos.

The truth of the matter is that Hollywood has made vast inroads with the moviegoing public in both China and Hong Kong and, despite the better efforts of authorities, audiences are continuing to abandon their domestic cinema. Precisely how and if two film industries built on such diametrically opposed principles will be able to consolidate remains to be seen, particularly in light of the dim view with which Communist Party officials regard the explicit use of sex and violence on which Hong Kong cinema has historically thrived.

In an attempt to cast a bit of fresh light on the future, BOXOFFICE consulted with a number of industry insiders and experts close to the situation. Sadly, representatives from Hong Kong and China were conspicuously uncooperative and evasive when approached for their perspective. For this reason, by their own choosing, an official government viewpoint is not represented here..

by Wade Major

THE CITY ON THE EDGE OF FOREVER: Hong Kong at night. This and other cityscapes courtesy the Hong Kong Tourist Association.

BOXOFFICE

SPECIAL REPORT:

ASIA 1997

TERENCE CHANG PRODUCER, WCG ENTERTAINMENT

Longtime producer and partner of director John Woo, Terence Chang's credits include Woo films on both sides of the Pacific like "Hard Boiled," "Hard Target," "Broken Arrow" and the forthcoming "Face Off." Chang is presently partnered with Woo and former William Morris agent Chris Godsick in Los Angeles-based WCG Entertainment.

The Hong Kong film industry is not very healthy at the moment. In fact, it's never been worse. And that's why a lot of talent, actors and directors, have come to Hollywood to look for work. That John [Woo] has succeeded here is encouraging. But I think things are so bad, they have nowhere to go but up. Five years ago, no one was thinking about the hand-over. They were thinking, "We've got five more years. Make as much money as possible and we'll worry about it when the time comes." Now the time has come and the feeling is very, very different.

I think there are two ways to think about it. One is to be optimistic and look at China as a huge new market. While markets in other parts of Asia are shrinking, China is growing. And many Hong Kong producers are already working with studios in China. On the other hand, even directors working in China, like Chen Kaige, want to come to Hollywood and make films because they don't have the freedom to make whatever they want. Censorship is a problem for them. Even American studios are realizing that. If you can work around the regulations, I think things should change very little. Hong Kong was never a true democracy. We've always had a very politically-sensitive censorship system. Anything that is politically hostile is discouraged. So it's not something entirely new in that way.

Whether or not the two industries will be able to consolidate artistically, I don't really know. But I'd like to think positively. There is a huge pool of talent in China which we don't know about. And the drain of talent from Hong Kong to Hollywood seems to be leveling off right now. Overall, I'd say I'm optimistic. It's going to be a totally new picture and Hong Kong obviously will not be producing the same kinds of films in the future. But I still think it will be good. It's time for a change.

TOM GRAY, SR. VICE PRESIDENT IN CHARGE OF PRODUCTION, GOLDEN HARVEST

As an executive with American majors like Paramount and United Artists during the 1970s, Gray became instrumental in helping to spread the popularity of Hong Kong cinema by becoming the first-ever person to purchase Jackie Chan films from Hong Kong-based entertainment conglomerate Golden Harvest for foreign distribution. Soon thereafter, he joined Golden Harvest, where he is presently Sr. Vice President in Charge of Production and principal Los Angeles liaison for the company.

The Hong Kong industry has been diving downward these past few years, for several reasons. Foremost is that a lot of the top-talent directors have emigrated to the United States. John Woo, Ringo Lam, Stanley Tong—the stalwarts, their best directors—have all come over here and gotten themselves production deals, and they're doing quite well. Another reason is that in the run up to 1997, no one is certain what's going to happen. So there are a lot of films that are just thrown out there that aren't cutting edge. And people are getting tired of films coming out that have no clear-cut direction. Also, Taiwan used to be a great buyer of Hong Kong films, accounting for a lot of revenue. But that's dried up as the Taiwanese exhibitors got together and decided they weren't going to pay those top dollars anymore. But probably the biggest reason for the decline is that the American majors have been able to move in and get a real stranglehold on the high end of the market. In Hong Kong, people got a taste of the more spectacular American product and they decided they like it. Those $100 million budget U.S. blockbusters are doing very well in Hong Kong, and one result is that the local product has suffered.

BRAIN DRAIN: As June 30 approaches, the leading lights of Hong Kong cinema have been seeking higher international profiles. Jackie Chan's "Rumble in the Bronx" gave its star the U.S. hit he'd sought for years, making an overseas film career possible.

I just came from Hong Kong, and it's hard to predict precisely what's going to happen come July. We have taken the initiative to produce films in China, doing 12 this year alone, basically for local consumption. There's no question that we all have to face up to the fact that the reversion is probably not going to reinforce the status quo. Although the official line is that we'll be able to do what we want, I have my doubts that filmmaking as we now know it will continue under the same guidelines. Category III films, which are the sexy films, and/or politically-themed films probably will not be allowed to be made. We don't know yet, but that's my suspicion.

The [communist] party line against "pandering" to foreign audiences is going to be a problem, but even the films that we are making in China today are already tailored to reflect the official guidelines. What's important to remember is that this is all still in the experimental stage, and we haven't put enough product through the pipeline yet to determine whether it's a viable way to do business. But censorship runs in strange ways, like anything else. Tolerance exists until there's an outcry, and then it gets slammed back.

As for the notion that Hong Kong may be the tail that wags the dog [by teaching the mainland the ways of capitalism], I think that's overly optimistic and I have my doubts about Hong Kong being kept separate for the next 50 years. I would imagine that the vibrant Hong Kong industry as we've known it will probably go through a further decline and then resurrect itself with some newer directors coming up who may be more palatable [to the powers that be] in terms of subject matter. It's also possible that some of the directors who've emigrated to Hollywood won't do so well here and will go back to Hong Kong to become the so-called "new stimulus." They may pick up some new techniques, go back and make films closer to the Hollywood style.

In general, though, people are nervous about the changeover. The frequency in moviegoing is down, people aren't spending as much money, the retail business is not doing as well. There's a general malaise in the market. People who have leisure money are not spending it like they used to. It's a wait and see attitude, and we've seen it have a pretty dramatic effect even on the American pictures. Unless it's a superblockbuster.

But I'd say I'm cautiously optimistic. We have to recognize China's potential. We've taken the optimistic approach by going in, trying to develop relationships and find new talent. There's no question we have to do it. You have to be aggressive to go into China. Whether we're successful or not remains to be seen. But clearly, there is talent there and there is a market there, and that's what we're trying to tap into.

TSUI HARK
WRITER/PRODUCER/ DIRECTOR

Hong Kong's most successful filmmaker ever, Tsui Hark's 50-plus credits as a writer, director and producer include the popular series "A Chinese Ghost Story," "Swordsman" and "Once Upon a Time in China" along with classics like "Peking Opera Blues," "Green Snake," "The Lovers" and "The Blade." As a producer in Hong Kong, he helped establish figures like John Woo and Chow Yun-Fat, and his influence has been visible in major American titles as diverse as "Mortal Kombat" and Francis Coppola's "Dracula." In 1997 his Hollywood debut, "Double Team," starring Jean-Claude Van Damme, will be released through Columbia Pictures.

The situation in Hong Kong right now is not political. It's more a transition period from one trend to another. I think the industry throughout the world is moving toward a different kind of filmmaking. People have become so media-saturated that motion pictures have become a familiar language. Audiences can predict almost anything that will happen onscreen. So I think we're all looking for something fresh and original with character and style. The situation in the Hong Kong industry is no different. We know that every so often we go through periods like this, and need a change. The reversion is just one such period. On the one hand we're excited, but we're also curious about what happens next.

Of course, there's a lot of anticipation and worry and frustration about the situation. But I think it's too early to say anything certain. I believe there's going to be a boom in every aspect in Hong Kong simply because everyone wants it that way. Even the Chinese government wants to come up with better prospects in Hong Kong. And they are very aware of the film industry and the kind of mentality we have in Hong Kong. Even with the government we have now, there are invisible restrictions on the media. You have this in America with the MPAA ratings. It works the same way. In Hong Kong we just see ourselves as a mirror reflecting different aspects of the environment around us.

But there's always going to be some kind of contradiction between the role that filmmakers see for themselves and what the government sees for them. I would hope that this kind of situation wouldn't develop too quickly. If it does happen, maybe we'll find some way to work it out. It's just too early to say.

Dolby Digital: the right choice.

•Twice as many titles

Over 670 Dolby Digital titles have been released or announced, more than twice as many as the other digital formats combined.

•Unlimited prints

Dolby Digital titles are issued single-inventory with digital soundtracks on all prints. Even with titles nominally released in multiple digital formats, all prints have Dolby Digital soundtracks, while only a limited number of digital soundtrack discs and prints are usually issued for the other formats.

•Far more practical

Dolby Digital doesn't depend on costly separate discs. And because they require only one digital track with data bits are nearly twice as large, Dolby Digital prints that are made with a much higher yield than the other on-film digital format.

•Incomparable name recognition

No other name is more widely associated with quality sound in the theater, in the home, and on the go than "Dolby."

•No conflicting affiliations

Dolby Laboratories is an independent company, committed only to making films sound better. With Dolby Digital, the playing field is level for all studios, distributors, and exhibitors alike.

Dolby Laboratories Inc.
100 Potrero Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94103-4813
Telephone 415-558-0200 Fax 415-863-1373
Wootton Bassett, Wiltshire, SN4 8QJ England
Telephone 01793-842100 Fax 01793-842101

Response No. 95

NEON TWILIGHT?: Will the urban energy of contemporary Hong Kong survive its assimilation into the mainland?

ALEXANDRA SUN
PRESIDENT,
THE FILM LIBRARY GROUP

As President and Founder of The Film Library Group, with offices in Australia, Hong Kong and Beijing, Alexandra Sun is one of the most active importers and exporters of films from and to mainland China and Hong Kong, including such titles as "The Bride With White Hair 2" by Ronny Yu, along with award winners like Zhang Jin's "Sweet Grass" and Yim Ho's antiwar drama "Buddha's Lock."

I think people in Hong Kong seem to be more concerned right now with the generally bad condition of the market. The boxoffice figures are not very good for most Hong Kong films. A lot of companies aren't doing well, others have closed down. Mandarin Films even closed down their whole cinema chain. They're not exhibitors anymore. For this reason, many producers see mainland China as an expanding market. People have been shooting in China and doing co-productions there because, when you do an official co-production with China, you can distribute your film there. In the past, you could only sell your finished film to the Chinese government buying agency, which would pay you very little money. Because many producers now see China as a huge, expanding market of more and more importance, they're doing their best to familiarize themselves with the regulations and to build up connections.

What's difficult at the moment, particularly this year, is that the Chinese government has tightened up censorship rules. Even with some of the big Hong Kong producers, their production activities have been severely restricted in China because the government regards their films as too violent or because officials may not be happy with their activities in China. The dilemma right now is that a really good, commercial script would be very hard to get through the censors. But if a script's not commercial enough, why bother doing it? And this is frustrating for two types of producers. The first are the typical Hong Kong action producers who are frustrated because their films aren't doing well in Hong Kong and who're also finding it hard to get into China. The others are the art-house producers, whose films have never had a strong traditional market in Southeast Asia to begin with. It's not a very happy picture.

"What's difficult at the moment is that the Chinese government has tightened up censorship rules. Even with some of the big Hong Kong producers, their production activities have been severely restricted in China because the government regards their films as too violent or officials aren't happy with their activities in China. The dilemma right now is that a really good, commercial script would be very hard to get through the censors. But if a script's not commercial enough, why bother doing it?"

Still, I'd imagine that, after the takeover, there won't be so many changes as such. Even in China, producers are struggling to do films that are commercial, that audiences will like. I think that both Hong Kong and China are trying to do the same things. Hong Kong producers will just have to be more politically aware. You have to be more aware whenever you're operating in China. I represent films from China to other territories, and I've also been selling foreign films to China. And there are so many rules and regulations that you have to be aware of! And that means that your personal connections are very important.

Clearly, though, Hong Kong talent is more international than talent from the mainland. Most Hong Kong talent speaks English, and they are more Westernized. The Hong Kong culture is such that they can easily blend in and adapt to Western culture and what Western cinema demands. For mainland Chinese directors, the vision is very uniquely and strongly Chinese. And I don't think they can easily adapt to making a Western film.

Based on that schism, I think the two industries will remain somewhat separate because there are these cultural differences. Look at Taiwan and Hong Kong. The Taiwanese industry has always been very different from the Hong Kong industry. I think that more and more talent will try to get out, and not just because of politics. It has more to do with economics. They want to do bigger films that will travel wider. And it's been a blessing that Jackie Chan and John Woo have made it in Hollywood. Now others are trying to do it: Ringo Lam, Tsui Hark, Kirk Wong, Stanley Tong, Ronny Yu. And I think more talent will come out and try to work on the bigger international filmmaking circuit rather than just being seen as Hong Kong talent.

A regular contributor to BOXOFFICE MAGAZINE, Wade Major has written about film for a variety of regional and national publications.

We're keeping the Theatre Industry Strong Around the World!

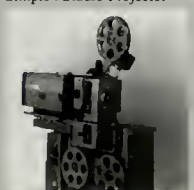
Metropolis 24
Antwerp, Belgium



Act III Theatres
Portland, Oregon

STRONG INTERNATIONAL®

1 800 424 • 1215

Find out more! Call our toll-free number for more information and the location of a Strong International® dealer near you.

Simplex Studio Projector

Century Projector

Super Lume-X Lamphouse

Isco Optic Lenses

Automation/Platter Systems

Special Venue Projectors

© 1995 STRONG INTERNATIONAL

Response No. 23

MADE IN JAPAN

Cinema City Takes Tokyo by Storm by Buzz Hays

Hirotaro Kawate, the owner, developer, and creative spirit behind the Cinema City—a remarkable six-screen theatre complex in Tachikawa, Japan, just outside of Tokyo—literally grew up in the cinema. Kawate began working in the theatre business in 1970, though his experience with the exhibition industry started when he was very young: his father was an actor who translated and performed live voices for silent films in his own small movie theatres.

Having grown up in Tachikawa, Kawate wanted to locate his own theatre there. When he began dreaming about Cinema City 14 years ago, there were only three other theatres in the area, primarily built to service U.S. Air Force base personnel. Once the base closed, the theatres went out of business, and the area remained theatre-free for many years (even today, the nearest competitive theatres are about 25 minutes away by train).

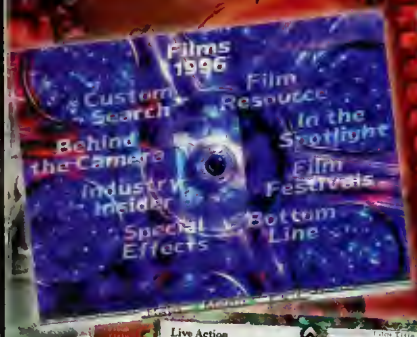
The concept for Cinema City was simple: to create a social center for the pure enjoyment of cinema. Some theatre owners and developers design theatres primarily to facilitate bottom-line concerns like concessions, with little regard for the social aspects of moviegoing. Cinema City was created to capture the feel of a private screening room in each theatre, coupled with specialized and inviting spaces for people to gather and discuss films before and after screenings.

The architecture is understated in order to let the films engage the patrons, avoiding the neon glitz of a cacophonous lobby. Little about the theatre complex design appears traditional to American cinemas. The complex is quiet, pleasing to the eye—a very comfortable place to enjoy films. Kawate's concepts have helped Cinema City to stand out; it has quickly become one of the most successful theatres in the Tokyo region.

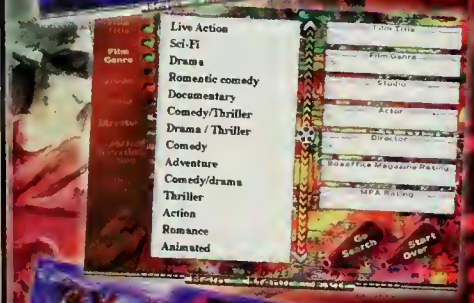
When Kawate and his company, Tatsumi Corporation Inc., originally decided to build the theatre complex in Tachikawa, the local city government came forward and asked them to develop a larger area in addition to the theatres that would include shopping, restaurants, banking, and office space which would help revitalize the area. Kawate accepted the challenge, with the stipulation that all of the design work would be handled by his team in order to keep things in harmony with neighboring businesses. The result is a remarkable blend of art, architecture, and entertainment.

The entire Cinema City complex is dotted with works of sculpture, painting, and various forms of electronic art. Over 150 individual artworks reside in and around the buildings of Cinema City. Artists from all over the world contributed to the project—the U.K., Japan, Poland,

BOXOFFICE
SPECIAL REPORT:
ASIA
1997



BOXOFFICE® Online



presents

only $29.95
call 800-921-9581
to order your copy today!

MovieYear 1996

An Interactive CD-ROM of the Year in Film

Whether you're an industry insider, sophisticated cineast or an avid popcorn movie fan seeking out the latest releases on home video, you will find what you're looking for on the BOXOFFICE CD-ROM! Hundreds of reviews of the big and small films from 1996.

One-on-one interviews with celebrities and filmmakers - Both superstars and up-and-comers. If you never made it to the local theatre to see all of the films of 1996, this CD-ROM is for you!

- Intelligent, incisive reviews on the entire year in film from the film critics of Hollywood's BOXOFFICE MAGAZINE.
- Weekly and monthly updates via the BOXOFFICE website (www.boxoff.com).
- 650 megabytes of photos, reviews, interviews and video trailers from both major studios and independent filmmakers.
- Learn who won and lost at the boxoffice!
- All film reviews cross-referenced by director, stars, studio and much more!
- Credits for each film and bios on the stars of the movie.
- "Special FX" and "Behind the Camera" interviews and articles.
- Coverage of international film festivals.

PC and MAC compatible

Marlin
www.marlinsoft.com

Mac OS
Windows 95
QuickTime

© 1996 Boxoffice. All rights reserved. All logos and trademarks are property of their respective holders.

Response No. 145

REMOTE CONTROL

CINEMA CITY SHOWCASES AN AUDIO TECHNOLOGY THAT COULD CHANGE THE WORLD by Buzz Hays

The DCS sound system at the Cinema City theatre was developed by DCS engineer Fumitaka Morita and Soundman, Inc. of Tokyo, Japan. The system is comprised of digitally controlled processors which control all aspects of the theatre's B-chain, including equalization, electronic crossovers, and level controls; all of which allow self-calibration after the initial installation. Once the B-chain alignment is completed for the first time, the system stores the frequency response curves and level adjustments for each of the screen and surround channels. At any point in the future, this system information can be recalled and checked against existing conditions in the theatre by placing a calibrated microphone in designated areas of the auditorium. The DCS checks the current measurements against the stored X-curve data, and makes automatic adjustments as necessary. The system has capabilities which allow remote control via modem, so a central office can keep track of a number of sound systems at any distance, making the adjustments with no more than an assistant at each theatre to place the microphone for the measurements.

umitaka Morita, inventor of the prototypal DCS sound system, promises to have a second-generation DCS prototype by mid-1997.

There are a number of safeguards built into the system to prevent potentially dangerous level and equalization corrections from occurring during the automated alignment. All of the system controls are a displayed on an LCD control panel. The crossover system is a digital implementation of the Linkwitz-Riley crossover with the appropriate time delay adjustments provided. 1/3 and 1/6 octave equalization and level adjustments for each channel are provided, and the complete alignment data set can be backed up to removeable RAM cards.

The DCS system installed at the Cinema City in Tachikawa is a prototype system which is comprised of a Dolby CP-65 processor, DCS Processing System, JBL MPA400 & MPA750 power amplifiers, JBL 4508A/2226H HF horns/drivers, JBL 2360A/2446H LF cabinets, ten (10) JBL 8330 surround loudspeakers, and four (4) JBL 4518A/2245H subwoofers.

A complete set of acoustical and electro-acoustical measurements was compiled by Fumitaka Morita (system inventor), Hiroyuki Takahashi (Soundman, Inc.), and Tsuyoshi Takahashi (Wakabayashi Acoustic Design Corp.). Measurements were done with a TEF20 spectrum analyzer with a B&K4006 calibrated microphone. All measurements were taken at four points within the auditorium and averaged. Sound pressure levels were taken from a location 2/3 of the way back in the theatre, slightly off center (Dolby Laboratories' recommended measurement position.) System measurements were compared with the THX Sound System installed in a second auditorium, and subjective listening tests were performed by the engineers. Recent screenings of "Independence Day" were held in both the DCS and THX theatres at Cinema City for industry professionals to compare the results for themselves. The initial conclusions of the design team indicated that the DCS system met or exceeded the performance characteristics of the THX Sound System. (It should be noted that no representatives of THX were present at the tests. The author also noticed a prominent difference in the subwoofer levels between theatres, the DCS system having a noticeably higher subwoofer level than the THX System. The calibration of the two systems was accomplished by different means.) Additional testing and refinement will continue over the coming months, and Mr. Morita expects to have the second-generation of the system ready to go in mid-1997. This is certainly a technology to keep an eye on.

Uruguay, Israel, India, Lebanon, and the U.S., to name just a few. Future plans involve an elevated walkway extension to the Tachikawa train station three blocks away, and the inclusion of a monorail station just one block away from the complex.

The actual design process used to create Cinema City was as unique as the results. Kawate spent a considerable amount of time with an environmental designer. Each floor of the complex has an entirely different look and feel, although functionally they are all the same. The complex is a vertical design with six screens, and four separate lobby areas, each with its own unique style ranging from highly-stylized post-modernism to spare simplicity.

The ticket booth is on the street level, set back from the sidewalk, and elevators take the patrons to the various theatres above. The first theatre is on the second floor, just behind the Cinema Cafe. This screen features a prototype sound system called the Digitally Controlled Sound System (DCS) developed by Fumitaka Morita, Soundman Inc., and Wakabayashi Acoustic Design Corporation. Theatre Two features a THX Sound System, and the remaining four screens have JBL and Altec loudspeakers and JBL power amplifiers with Dolby processors.

The Cinema Cafe lobby, located one story above street level, is the largest concession area in the Cinema City theatre. It has a glass-framed front wall made of green anodized aluminum, which overlooks the street below. Cafe tables and chairs are sprinkled about a veranda area outside, also overlooking the street. The cafe area has seating for roughly 20 patrons. The aquamarine blue walls are offset with a mahogany-stained pine bar area in the center of the room.

The wall material is a sandwich of translucent blue glass with aluminum backing. The floor is a polished concrete slab, sparsely dotted with aluminum accents. The very high ceiling is enhanced by custom light fixtures, and a stainless steel low-RPM fan above the concession bar. A suspended steel catwalk traverses the space above, providing access to the projection room for the DCS-equipped Theatre One. Dramatic lighting patterns accent the walls.

Each of the remaining three floors features a unique concession and lobby area. The second theatre (with the THX System) has a wildly post-modern design with blue-anodized brushed aluminum walls and an aluminum plate floor. A giant clock face is projected onto the wall behind

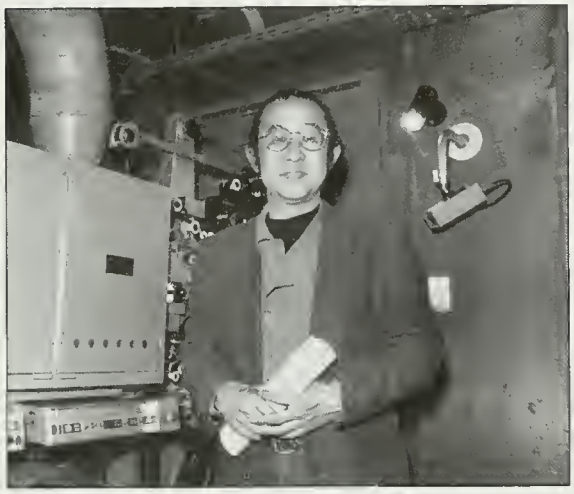
The World's Finest Stereo Processor

The THX approved SMART PANASTEREO cinema processor exceeds the specifications and performance of every other cinema stereo processor including the expensive CP-500 and 5 year old CP-65. The list of features is so long it takes a 4-page brochure to tell you all it offers. When you told your dealer you wanted the best, did he tell you about the precision crafted PANASTEREO? If not, we will!

Did you know you must buy a $650 option card to add a DTS digital player to the CP-500? Not the Panastereo! We have three digital inputs for any type of player.

. . . Has a New Companion!

The new CSP1200 has the computer controlled function buttons built directly into the front panel. It costs a little less. You can still use the full function remote control as an option.



See the new features of the CSP1200 at booth #511 at Cine Asia in January.

SMART Theatre Systems
(800) 45-SMART or (770) 449-6698
FAX: (770) 449-6728
e-mail: smart@america.net
Internet: www.smartdev.com

Response No. 35

the concession bar, and the entrance to the theatre is marked by large circular bank-vault style door handles.

The remaining two lobby and concession areas have been designed to offer a more spare and elegant space, with mural art provided by one of the local designers. Each of these smaller lobby areas serves two small theatres.

Hirotaro Kawate, owner of Tachikawa, Japan's Cinema City.

Careful design consideration has been utilized so that there are no common walls between the theatres in order to minimize sound isolation problems throughout the complex. Each of the auditoriums is designed within a range of very appropriately dark colors (blacks and grays), with accents of color provided by custom lighting fixtures unique to each room. Once the room lights go out, the walls disappear, and the audience's attention is focused right where it should be: on the film presentation.

Elevators are located just outside of each lobby, providing convenient access to the shopping center and restaurant floors of the adjacent building. (There are 15 restaurants within walking distance of the theatre.) The common areas outside of the theatre are decorated with custom display cabinets showing the current and coming attractions of the Cinema City.

Projection and sound systems are state-of-the-art. Each theatre features Dolby CP-65 units, JBL power amplifiers and loudspeakers, Cine Forward projectors and lamphouses, and a variety of DTS and SR-D processors. The automation system is a custom-designed unit by the engineers at Cine Forward. Each auditorium is represented by a video monitor in the manager's office.

Color CCD cameras keep an eye on the concession area, projectors, and the screen in each auditorium. An array of six of these monitors lines the wall of the office, each with music playback and pre-show messaging systems installed. The staff can monitor the primary audio channels from any of the six theatres from a single location. Pacer/CATS ticketing system computers are located in the manager's office as well, allowing for centralized operation. Cinema City has even provided complete dressing room facilities for live presentations in conjunction with film programs.

The unique DCS Sound System installed in Theatre One is a self-tuning sound system that performs diagnostics and calibration of the entire B-chain, with remarkably good results (see sidebar, page 36, for system details). All in all, technology plays a large role in the successful operation of the Cinema City, and Kawate's willingness to try new technologies such as DCS will continue to keep the theatre on the cutting edge.

Although Kawate has no immediate plans for similar projects, he has hosted theatre owners and developers from around the world who have travelled thousands of miles to experience Cinema City for themselves. In one form or another, the art of cinema is being celebrated in Tachikawa at Cinema City, a wonderful venue for those who love film as much as the man who created it.

Buzz Hays is a filmmaker who co-produced the theatrical feature "Swimming With Sharks." His production company, Stone's Throw Films, is currently at work on "Not Fade Away." Hays is the former Director of Engineering for Lucasfilm Ltd.

CINEMA CITY, TACHIKAWA, JAPAN

A SCREEN-BY-SCREEN LISTING OF PERTINENT TECHNICAL SPECIFICATIONS THEATRE ONE

Auditorium: 226 seats.
2 Cineforward FX-3000FA projection systems.
CX-2000 lamphouses w/ 2kW lamps.
Schneider Super Cinelux lenses (for 1.85:1, 1.66:1 and 2.35:1 images).
Dolby CP-65 processor, SR-D, DTS-6, and a DCS Sound System prototype.
JBL power amplifiers and loudspeakers.
Tamaboshi 1.3 gain screen.
Figueras #5036 chairs.
Custom wall sconces.

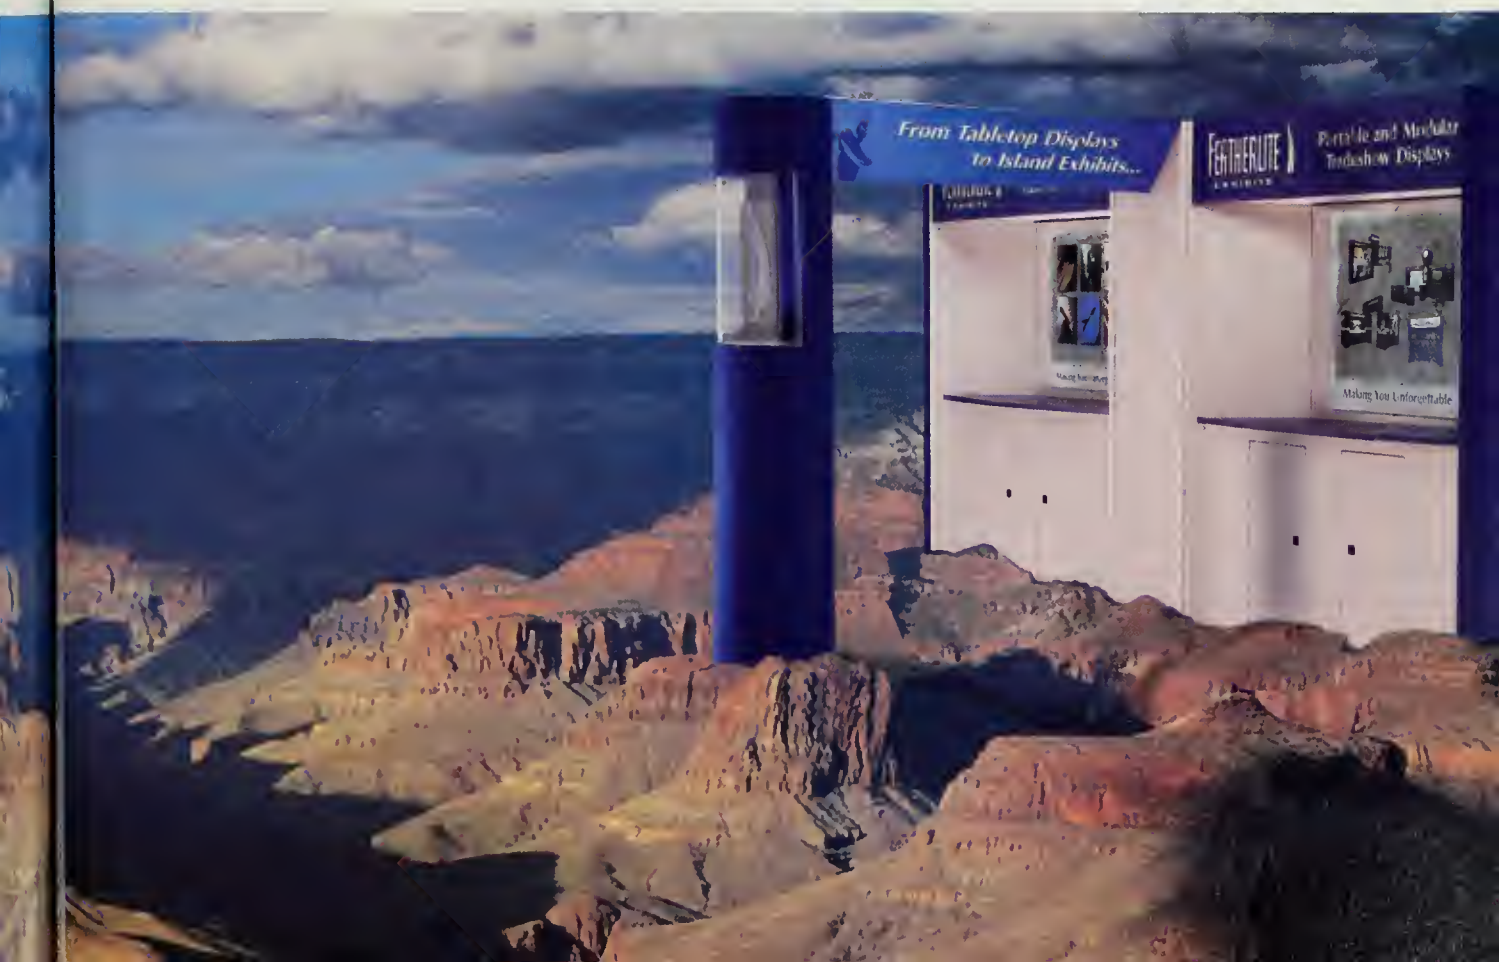
THEATRE TWO

Auditorium: 288 seats.
2 Cineforward FX-3000FA projection systems.
CX-2000 lamphouses w/ 2kW lamps.
Schneider Super Cinelux lenses (for 1.85:1, 1.66:1 and 2.35:1 images).
Dolby CP-65 processor, SR-D, DTS-6, and a THX Sound System.
JBL power amplifiers and loudspeakers.
Tamaboshi 1.3 gain screen.
Figueras #5036 chairs.
Custom wall sconces.

THEATRE THREE

Auditorium: 112 seats.
2 Cineforward FX-3000FA projection systems.
CX-2000 lamphouses w/ 2kW lamps.
Schneider Super Cinelux lenses (for 1.85:1, 1.66:1 and 2.35:1 images).
Dolby CP-65 processor
JBL power amplifiers and loudspeakers.
Tamaboshi 1.3 gain screen.
Figueras #5036 chairs.
Custom wall sconces.

THEATRE FOUR



Auditorium: 170 seats.
2 Cineforward FX-3000FA projection systems.
CX-2000 lamphouses w/ 2kW lamps.
Schneider Super Cinelux lenses (for 1.85:1, 1.66:1 and 2.35:1 images).
Dolby CP-65 processor, and DTS-6 digital system.
JBL power amplifiers and Altec Lansing loudspeakers.
Tamaboshi 1.3 gain screen.
Figueras #5036 chairs.
Custom wall sconces.

THEATRE FIVE

Auditorium: 80 seats.
2 Cineforward FX-3000FA projection systems.
CX-2000 lamphouses w/ 2kW lamps.
Schneider Super Cinelux lenses (for 1.85:1, 1.66:1 and 2.35:1 images).
Dolby CP-65 processor.
JBL power amplifiers and loudspeakers.
Tamaboshi 1.3 gain screen.
Figueras #5036 chairs.
Custom wall sconces.

THEATRE SIX

Auditorium: 192 seats.
2 Cineforward FX-3000FA projection systems.
CX-2000 lamphouses w/ 2kW lamps.
Schneider Super Cinelux lenses (for 1.85:1, 1.66:1 and 2.35:1 images).
Dolby CP-65 processor, SR-D, and DTS-6 digital system.
JBL power amplifiers and loudspeakers.
Tamaboshi 1.3 gain screen.
Figueras #5036 chairs.
Custom wall sconces.

THIRD "TEAM"

Tsui Hark Joins Van Damme's Hong Kong Club With "Double Team"

by Wade Major

When John Woo did it, no one paid much attention. When Ringo Lam did it, people got suspicious. Now that Tsui Hark (pronounced "choy hok") has become the third Hong Kong director to mark his Hollywood debut with a Jean-Claude Van Damme film, though, things are looking downright conspiratorial.

Tsui, however, simply chuckles. "I don't mind when people ask me, 'Why Van Damme again?' I think it's become a sort of ritual for people to work with Van Damme to get into Hollywood."

In view of the tepid boxoffice response to Van Damme's previous collaborations with Hong Kong super-directors—Woo's "Hard Target" and Lam's "Maximum Risk," not to mention his forgettable 1985 debut film "No Retreat, No Surrender," directed by future "Legend of Fong Sai Yuk" helmer Corey Yuen-Kwai—one might be tempted to wonder why Tsui chose to follow in such ominous footsteps. But Tsui isn't merely another Hong Kong action director looking for a Hollywood toehold; he is, in fact, the single most successful filmmaker in the history of Hong Kong cinema—Asia's answer to Howard Hawks, Irving Thalberg and Ben Hecht all rolled into one. More importantly, Tsui saw opportunities in "Double Team" (formerly titled "The Colony") that could transcend what audiences had come to expect from Van Damme films.

"Van Damme is a friend of mine and he asked me to do it," Tsui explains matter-of-factly. "I was attracted by his sincerity. And I'd seen what John and Ringo did, so I wanted to see if I could do something different. Also, the story covers material that I've always liked a lot—espionage and spies. I've been a James Bond fan for a long time. So, when I read the script, I said, 'Let's do it.'"

With shades of Bond, "The Prisoner" and "The Fugitive," "Double Team" features Van Damme as Jack Quinn, a CIA operative whose botched assassination attempt on an international terrorist named Stavros (Mickey Rourke) lands him in a secret island prison for ex-spies called The Colony. But, when Stavros kidnaps Quinn's pregnant wife (Natasha Lindinger), Quinn teams with fellow prisoner and weapons specialist Yaz (NBA star Dennis Rodman) to escape the island, save his wife and child, and finish the job on Stavros.

"It was a totally different experience from a Hong Kong production," says Tsui, whose 50-plus credits include such classics of Hong Kong cinema as "Peking Opera Blues," the

BOXOFFICE

SPECIAL REPORT:

ASIA 1997

"Once Upon a Time in China" series, Jackie Chan's "Twin Dragons," and the "Swordsman" films. "It's difficult to compare the two.

"I tried to do that at first, but eventually you have to just go with the system and work with people instead of trying to compare who's doing what and what has to be done. It's like comparing cake to dim sum."

Born in Vietnam in 1951, Tsui emigrated to Hong Kong at the age of 15. Later, after obtaining his education at the University of Texas, he began working with Hong Kong broadcast station TVB. Having exhibited a cinematic flourish there, Tsui in 1983 made his famous debut film "Zu: Warriors from the Magic Mountain."

The following year he established the Film Workshop for independent filmmakers, in which he would flourish as a producer, overseeing the careers of directors like John Woo and Ching Siu-Tung, whose films "The Killer" and "A Chinese Ghost Story" would become genre classics. Many credit Tsui for rejuvenating the Hong Kong film industry at a time when lowbrow comedies had brought boxoffice to a virtual standstill.

"I wanted to see something more serious," he says. "The trick is to combine elements and try to create a trend. Sometimes it works, sometimes it doesn't. Entertainment, for me, is like cooking. You work like a chef, try different things. Sometimes it's gourmet, and sometimes it's bad."

Tsui's facility with comedy, martial arts, action, fantasy, romance and drama leaves some seeing his move to Hollywood as an overdue transition. But Tsui has no intention of abandoning his career in Hong Kong. Ideally, he would like to continue working in both Hollywood and Hong Kong—and Europe. "I'd also be interested in shooting a film in France, in French and using French actors. I am very curious about how different it would be for an Asian director to work on a French film. Oshima did it once." Also in the offing are a long-delayed project with Francis Ford Coppola and a reteaming with Jackie Chan.

Now without the added burden of having to produce his own material, Tsui feels creatively freer than ever before. "When I was doing Hong Kong productions, I was doing two or three jobs at the same time. Now that I'm only doing the one job," Tsui says, "that makes it very relaxing to shoot. Compared to past experiences, it's the most fantastic thing ever.

"I suddenly feel like a director again."

"Double Team." Starring Jean-Claude Van Damme, Mickey Rourke, Dennis Rodman and Natasha Lindinger. Directed by Tsui Hark. Written by Paul Mones. Produced by Moshe Diamant. A Columbia release. Action. April 4.

IF YOUR THEATER IS A PLACE OF PEACE, SERENITY, AND HAPPINESS, YOU MUST BE ON MARS.®

If your theater management system gives you the confidence of knowing you won't lose valuable information during a crisis, you must be on MARS. If your service calls get answered by a human being, you must be on MARS. If you are able to close out your theater quickly each night, you must be on MARS.

MARS is a system designed to run on off-the-shelf hardware while giving you the flexibility to handle all aspects of managing your theaters. From the box office to the concession stand, it allows managers to quickly perform functions so they can spend less time managing their system and more time managing their theater.

To learn more about MARS, call John Ventura at 212-450-8140.

Mars II®

Theater Management System

A division of MovieFone, Inc.

"KAMA" KARMA

Mira Nair Conjures Erotic Controversy With "Kama Sutra"

by Wade Major

Whoever said that Indian women were demure and submissive never met Mira Nair. Charismatic, outspoken and independent, the director of "Salaam Bombay," "Mississippi Masala" and "The Perez Family" bears little resemblance to the stereotypical Western image of an Indian woman. Yet her sensibilities remain Indian, an enigmatic blend of characteristics one might expect of a filmmaker daring enough to base a film on no less a controversial subject than the infamous third-century love manual called the Kama Sutra.

In making the film, Nair says, "My goal was to counter the fairly obscene and often subversive images of women in both Indian and international cinema and to address the rarity of a female view of sexuality. What my co-writer, Helena Kriel, and I wound up doing was making a film that is about sexual politics, not just sexual positions. Those games, those rituals are as valid today as they were when the Kama Sutra was written."

Not that sexual politics are anything new to Nair's work. On the heels of her Oscar-nominated 1988 debut film "Salaam Bombay," Nair next tackled a pair of unusual Hollywood romances, exploring the nature of romantic love from both an interracial perspective in "Mississippi Masala" and a class perspective in "The Perez Family." Neither film, however, quite tempted controversy like "Kama Sutra."

Shot in English with an all-Indian cast, the tale (set in the 16th century) centers on the friendship and rivalry between two young women—servant Maya (newcomer Indira Varma) and princess Tara (Sarita Choudhury)—as they seek love and purpose in a patriarchal world. Completing the romantic entanglement are two men: an intemperate king ("The English Patient's" Naveen Andrews) who will become Tara's husband and Maya's lover, and a proud sculptor (Ramon Tikaram) in whom Maya will finally find true love. Linking the story to its literary namesake is renowned Indian actress Rekha as Rasa Devi, a wizened teacher of the Kama Sutra who counsels Maya in the ways of both love and spirituality.

"I felt quite terrified, energized and also burdened by the idea of the title," Nair says. "But I wanted that title because, in the truest sense of the word, it is the Kama Sutra, which means 'lessons on love.' And our film is about lessons on love. Our film is about the many faces of love. If you read the ancient text of the Kama Sutra, it is so far from what everybody thinks it is—just a book on sexual positions."

BOXOFFICE

SPECIAL REPORT:

ASIA 1997

After seven years in Hollywood, Nair expresses an exhilaration at returning to work in India. "I feel really charged here," she says. "Both visually and emotionally." But Nair's love for her country is not without its reservations. The culture in which the Kama Sutra was authored nearly 2000 years ago, she points out, exists today only in remnants, with that earlier era's sexual openness long displaced by taboo and repression. What has not disappeared is the patriarchal grip that men still hold on the nation's culture.

"Even though sexuality was integrated into life at that time, there wasn't anything extraordinary or pleasant about it when it came to women," Nair says. "Women existed to please men. So our story became one of women pleasing men and finally empowering themselves."

To lend their story the requisite dramatic weight, Nair and Kriel drew upon numerous classical inspirations, both Western and Eastern. "We certainly threw around Shakespearean references as well as Indian classical references, which aren't so well known in the West but which are also very Shakespearean. What's remarkable in many of these [referenced] mythological 13th-century Indian poems is how the erotic becomes divine. This struggle to get to a spiritual level through eros is very Indian and something we've come very far from up to now."

Having already run afoul of native censors over her film's explicit depictions of lovemaking, Nair's next step has been an appeal to the Indian Supreme Court. "My film challenges the notion of where you draw the line with nudity," she says. "And that is so hypocritical. With satellite, we get everything you get, all the same smutty movies. And then our own movies have their own share of vulgarity, incredible vulgarity with people simply wearing slivers of wet clothes. My film just has directness."

Fortunately, Nair says, her reputation among international distributors absolves her of the need to depend exclusively on either Indian or American boxoffice. And that, in turn, grants her a freedom of creativity she wouldn't exchange for anything in the world.

"I like the risks of independent filmmaking, because I'm putting my money where my mouth is," Nair says. "The bottom line of doing it this way is having complete control. And, for all the pleasures of working in Hollywood, you almost never have that there."

"Kama Sutra." Starring Sarita Choudhury, Indira Varma, Naveen Andrews and Ramon Tikaram. Directed by Mira Nair. Written by Helena Kriel and Mira Nair. Produced by Lydia Dean Pilcher. A Trimark release. Drama. Opens 2/14 ltd.

Order Now!

996-97 NATO Encyclopedia of Exhibition

(818) 506-1778

ALIVE & KICKING

Meet Michelle Khan, Hong Kong's "Female Jackie Chan"

by Wade Major

If someone had told me 12 years ago that I'd have a movie screened in America," says Michelle Khan, "I would have fallen over laughing my head off."

Seated yoga-style on the floor of her Beverly Hills hotel suite, the actress who stateside is best known as Jackie Chan's "Supercop" co-star glows with enthusiasm at the prospect of a Hollywood career. After more than a decade as one of Hong Kong's pre-eminent action stars, success in America would be a perfect coda to a career path characterized by crushing setbacks and triumphant comebacks.

"I literally just go with the flow of my life," the actress says in impeccable English. "If I look back at the last 12 years in Hong Kong, nothing went as planned—because I never planned anything to begin with."

Trained as a dancer since childhood, Khan saw her hopes for a career in dance come to an abrupt halt when she was sidelined by a ballet injury during postgraduate studies at London's Royal Academy of Dance. Returning to her native Malaysia, she discovered that her mother had enrolled her in a beauty pageant and reluctantly followed through. Several months later, she was crowned 1983's Miss Malaysia.

As part of her subsequent celebrity chores, Khan was invited to Hong Kong to appear in a TV commercial with Jackie Chan. Impressed by her talent, director Po Chi-Leung arranged for a contract with D&B Films, and Khan made her entry into the chaotic, hazardous world of Hong Kong action filmmaking.

"As a dancer, you have to be disciplined and very dedicated," she says. "You have to learn to live with a lot of pain and injuries, much like martial artists do. Because athletics had always been in my blood, when they suggested action movies it just seemed natural."

The next seven years, however, proved anything but natural. After four years and five films (a meager output by Hong Kong standards) Khan announced her impending marriage and retirement. But the marriage failed and she returned to films three years later with "Supercop." Four years after that, "Supercop" was finally released in the U.S. by Miramax.

"It was my comeback movie," she says. "And to have it be such a big success was so gratifying. My career escalated again. It's not often that people get a second chance. To retire at my peak, come back and still have the chance to work with the best talent in Hong Kong—I still can't believe it."

BOXOFFICE

SPECIAL REPORT:

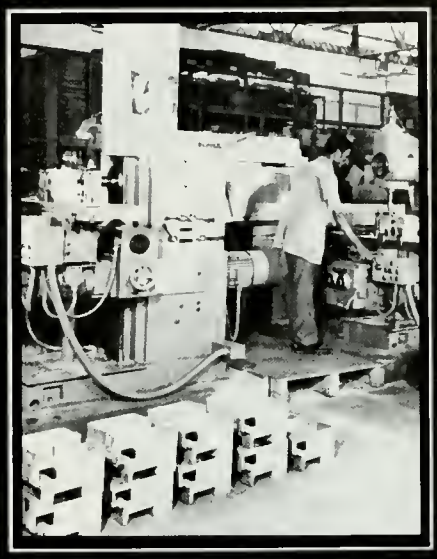
ASIA 1997

Women have always figured prominently in Hong Kong action films, but colleagues credit Khan with earning them the same attention for fighting skills and stunt work as their male counterparts. "When I made my second film, 'Yes, Madam,' for director Yuen Kwai, he came to the gym to see if I was someone who was not afraid to get a few bruises, a few knocks. Then, in my first scene, I had to do a running leap onto the back of a car, land with a gun in my hand and shoot. After we did a couple takes, he came up to me and said, 'Your arm is getting dirty from all that jumping around.' When he tried to wipe it off, he realized it wasn't dirt but bruises. That's when he saw I was a fighter."

In addition to working frequently with Hong Kong's leading male action stars Jackie Chan and Jet Li, Khan has scored notable solo successes with "Wing Chun" and "Once a Cop." Her role as Invisible Woman, one of a trio of female superheroes in "The Heroic Trio" and "Executioners," is one Khan is especially fond of. "We had so much fun on those movies," she says of working with co-stars Anita Mui and Maggie Cheung. "The three of us are such good friends. When we started, they said, 'Now, don't do anything crazy, because if you do the director will expect us to do it, too!'"

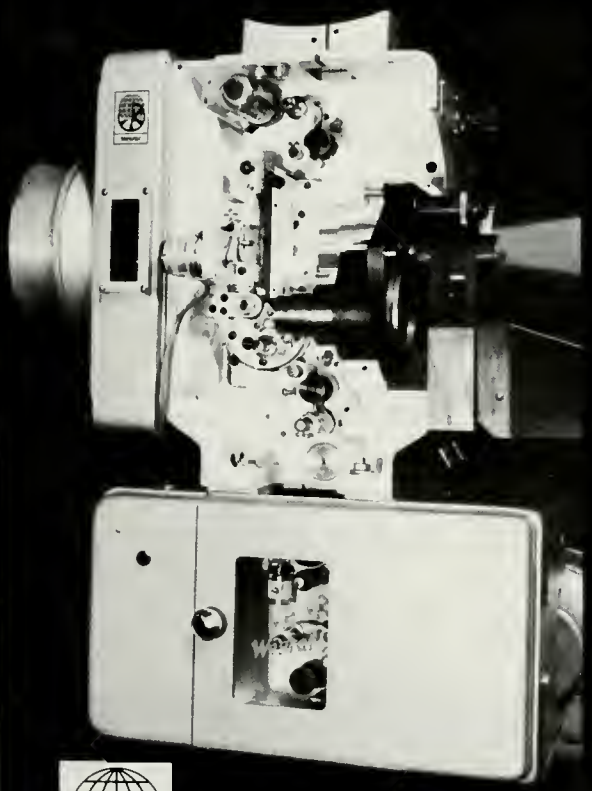
On one of her more recent films, director Ann Hui's "Stuntwoman: The Story of Ah Kam," Khan suffered her first major injury. "I thought it was the end of my career, to be honest," Khan says. "The movie was my own little tribute to the stunt people of Hong Kong, because I wouldn't be here without them as my mentors, watching out for me. In one stunt I landed on my head, and my legs came out from behind me. I thought I'd snapped my back. I just thank God I'm so agile after all these years of training. The doctors are flabbergasted. I shouldn't even be walking. But I am."

During her recovery, Khan began to reflect on the future course of her career. "I think that time lying in the hospital with a cast around me—not able to do anything, a complete invalid—is when I started to think, 'Yes. It's time to move on.' And that's when America opened up." While her agents and managers cautiously field offers and consider her options, Khan is simply grateful that she has made it this far.



"I'm very excited that people have voiced an interest in having me do dramatic roles as well, which is very fulfilling as an actress," Khan says. "Being a Buddhist, I believe in fate and destiny, but I also believe that, if a chance comes, you had better work very hard to make sure something comes of it.

"If it doesn't, it's nobody's fault but your own."



WE'VE GOT IT ALL!
Total Cinema Development

We offer total planning, development and operations consultation to open a cinema anywhere in the world

International Cinema Equipment Company is pleased to announce that our products and services now include total cinema development, planning, supply, installation and operations consultation. Our organization and staff has been expanded to include a variety of resources. These include:

- architectural consulting
- design conceptualization • projection
- concession and snack bar design
- seating layouts • sight line design
- projection, acoustical consultation and design
- operations training and management

We have a unique program. It could provide full consulting services for your project included with your purchase. Thus, at no additional cost to you or your client, you will get the very best advice on your project. This will minimize your risk and exposure and insure that your return on investment is a healthy one indeed.

Let the professionals at International show you how easy it is to build, equip and operate a modern Multi Cinema Complex. Call us today!

iceco

international cinema equipment company, inc.

100 N. E. 39th Street, Miami, FL 33137 U.S.A. / Phone: (305) 573-7339 / Fax: (305) 573-8101

Response No.: 4

OCTOBERFEST

With Headline-Making Acquisitions, a Slate of Acclaimed Titles and Top Honors at Cannes, October Films Is Poised as the Next Mega-Indie

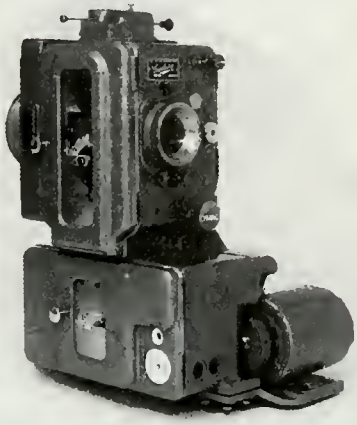
by Christine James

From left: Bingham Ray, John Schmidt and Amir Malin head October Films.

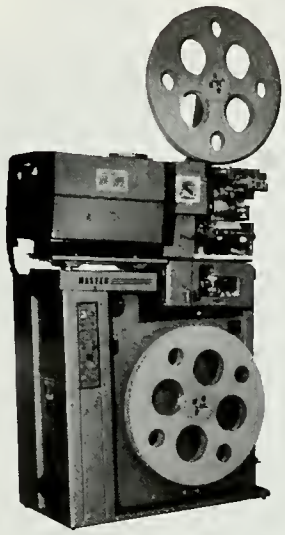
The Russian revolution was October 17, when they overturned the Czar, and communism was born," says Bingham Ray of the reasoning behind the name October Films, the distribution company he co-founded with Jeff Lipsky in 1991. "We're not communists, I don't mean to say that," he explains. "But we are left-leaning liberal democrats. So we were trying for the spirit of revolution. And I thought that was embodied with October being a month which, you know, among politically-minded people is very well known.

"And we played around with having a 'k' instead of a 'c,' and a backwards 'r,' but we thought that was pretty stupid, so we just spelled it the way it's spelled. People always ask 'why October?' and you know, it's simple. We were both born in October, and it's the month of revolution—and," he pauses dramatically, "it happens to be the best month of the year. And I have the best birthday! In the best month of the year."

Such colorful reflections quickly characterize Bingham Ray as a fairly atypical executive. He smoothly vacillates from articulate and professional October topper to witty raconteur to fall-down-funny, sardonic comedian. While some would try to squeeze as much company rah-rahing into an interview as possible, Ray instead assumes the roles of multiple characters to tell BOXOFFICE an anecdote about a luncheon with his mother. "Let me tell you a story about when I was trying to tell my mother what I did," he begins. "She didn't get it, you know. I don't think she gave a lot of thought to how films actually got to these various theatres around her neighborhood. [One day] my mom took me to lunch with a bunch of her friends. It was like this little old lady kind of deal. I had known some of these ladies since I was a kid, you know. They were just kind of checking up on me and finding out what I'm doing, and I would try to explain to them what I do.



"There was this one friend of my mom's who was older even then my mom, who was really very hard of hearing. And she kept saying to my mother [adopts squawking, octogenarian voice], 'What'd he say?! What'd he do?! What?!' And it was like I wasn't there at this lunch. This lady goes 'What does he do?!' and my mother said to her, right in her ear, she yells, 'He talks on the phone for a living!' And that's how she boiled it down. That's what I did. That's what she could understand. She would say to me, 'Well, what, do you travel?' I'd say, 'Yeah, I travel all the time, Mom.' 'But how do you talk to these people? What do you do?' I said, 'Well, I talk to them on the phone, and I get these movies into their theatres, and I try to prepare the press for it, and I try to interest people like you and me into going to see it.' And she just, I don't know, she couldn't get her mind around that. I talked on the phone for a living. So that's what I do."



And he does it well, judging from some of October's recent coups. Soon after acquiring Mike Leigh's "Secrets and Lies" and Lars von Trier's "Breaking the Waves," the films won Cannes' Palme d'Or and Grand Prix, respectively—a double victory Ray had fantasizingly foreseen.

"A journalist had called me up—he was doing a pre-Cannes piece for the New York Post," recounts Ray. "And he asked me what did I want to see happen in Cannes. And I kind of glibly said, 'Look. In the perfect world, do you really want to know what I want to have happen? I'd really like to split the Palme d'Or between "Secrets and Lies" and "Breaking the Waves," and win it twice.' That was the kind of kismet thinking that I had. I was really optimistic, as were my partners, and the whole

NEW AND USED THEATRE EQUIPMENT

CINEVISION CORPORATION brings you one of the largest selections of new, used and rebuilt theatre equipment in the country. With 24 years of experience this enables us to provide installations and service world-wide. All rebuilt equipment sales are backed by a full one-year warranty. Trade-ins of your surplus equipment are accepted.

PROJECTOR HEADS-35MM-USED
CENTURY C 70.6mm Lens Holder	$ 2,095.00
C ENTURY C 101.6mm Lens Holder	2,295.00
CENTURY SA	2,495.00
SIMPLEX 35 Late Model	2,700.00
BALLANTYNE PRO-35	2,095.00
CHRISTIE P-35	2,250.00

SOUNDHEADS-35MM-USED
CENTURY R-3/TR-3	$ 1,595.00
SIMPLEX 5-STAR	1,595.00
SIMPLEX SH-1000	1,095.00
SIMPLEX SH-1020	1,095.00
MOTIOGRAPH SH-7500	395.00

PROJECTORS AND SOUNDHEADS SOLD ONLY WITH COMPLETE BOOTH

PROJECTION SYSTEMS-USED
CINEMECCANICA V-4	$ 2,500.00
CINEMECCANICA V-8	4,395.00
CINEMECCANICA V-9	3,500.00
NORELCO FP-20	3,995.00

35/70MM PROJECTION-USED
CENTURY JJ-2	$ 6,500.00
CINEMECCANICA V-8	5,995.00
KINOTONE DP-75	4,995.00
NORELCO AA-II TODD-AO	3,750.00

XENON LAMPHOUSES-USED
CHRISTIE 500 Watt	$ 995.00
CHRISTIE 1000 Watt	1,895.00
CHRISTIE 2000 Watt	2,200.00
CINEMECCANICA ZENITH	1,795.00
ORC 1000 Built-in Power Supply	1,595.00
ORC 1600 W/Separate Supply	1,895.00
ORC 4000	2,495.00
STRONG X-16	1,595.00
STRONG SUPER LUMEX	2,995.00
XETRON XH-2000	2,395.00

~THE ABOVE LAMPHOUSES INCLUDE POWER SUPPLIES~

XENON CONSOLES-USED
CHRISTIE CH-10	$ 2,250.00
CHRISTIE CH-20	2,495.00
CHRISTIE CH-40	3,995.00
FILM SYSTEM 2000 WATT	2,395.00

PLATTER SYSTEMS-USED
BALCO 3-DECK	2,100.00
ORC CP-302 3-DECK	2,250.00
SPECO LP-270	2,250.00

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS-USED
MONO Sound Systems	from $	550.00
KELMAR AS7200 Sound System		795.00
NT.50 Sound System		495.00
SMART MOD II-B		2,495.00
DOLBY CP-50		2,695.00
DOLBY CP-65		C A L L
DTS-6 Digital Processors		C A L L
ALTEC A-7 Stage Speaker		595.00
ALTEC A-4 Stage Speaker		695.00
ORC Automation System		595.00
CINEVISION/CENTURY Manual Lens Turret		495.00
B&L CINEMASCOPE Lenses		375.00
MAGNACOM Attachments		350.00
IRWIN CITATION Chairs	from	25.00
AMERICAN M-35 Chairs	from	22.50

CINEVISION
C O R P O R A T I O N
3300 N.E. Expressway, Building 2A
Atlanta, Georgia 30341
{770} 455-8988
{770} 455-4066 fax

PARTS REBUILD EXCHANGES
We have an extensive inventory of parts in stock to fit most projectors. Dealer discounts available. We offer excellent repair and exchange services on projectors, intermittents, soundheads, etc. Export inquiries invited.

company, that we would fare well in Cannes. We were hoping that people would like both films. But we had no idea, nor did we really predict the kind of reactions that we got on both of them, or that they would win anything, let alone what they won. So it came as a great surprise, and it was just exceedingly pleasant."

Winning both the Palme d'Or and the Grand Prix was certainly an acceptable alternative to Ray's dream scenario of splitting the top prize. Add to that the high-profile acquisition of David Lynch's "Lost Highway" during the Cannes festivities and a slate of intriguing films by both renowned and up-and-coming directors, and you have a company that's on the fast track to success.

Ray and October co-founder Jeff Lipsky first met while cutting their teeth in the early '80s at New Yorker Films. In 1990, Ray was working for Avenue Pictures and Lipsky was with Skouras Pictures when the two friends decided to start their own company. "We were ready to get out from under the yoke of oppression of working for other people," as Ray hyperbolically puts it. "We decided that we would quit our jobs and just leap into the void." The company was launched with what turned out to be an art-house hit: Mike Leigh's acclaimed "Life Is Sweet."

And life is just getting sweeter for October. The company is now headed by an egalitarianly titleless triumvirate of "co-managing executives" comprised of Ray (in charge of acquisitions and distribution), John Schmidt (financial and strategic affairs) and Amir Malin (business and legal affairs). (Lipsky left in March of '95 to pursue writing, directing and producing.) The three share a vision of the company that is dedicated to bringing compelling fare to screens nationwide. The company gained fame with John Dahl's 1994 thriller "The Last Seduction"; recent releases have included Fina Torres' "Celestial Clockwork," Gillies MacKinnon's "Small Faces," Jim McKay's "Girls Town," Abel Ferrara's "The Funeral," Mike Leigh's "Secrets and Lies" and Lars von Trier's "Breaking the Waves." Coming up are controversial titles like Susan Streitfeld's "Female Perversions," David Lynch's "Lost Highway," Matthew Harrison's "Kicked in the Head" and a new Mike Leigh film that is currently untitled.

"I think that we're trying to be an alternative forum for hip young filmmakers, and trying to encompass the entire marketplace of specialized needs," says Amir Malin. "Specialized film doesn't necessarily have to be an art film. Specialized film can be a very hip, genre-oriented film. I mean, to me, 'Pulp Fiction' is basically a specialized film that has worked out very, very well and reached a boxoffice of $100 million. The lesson of the past eight, nine years in this marketplace is that you really can stretch the envelope with specialized films and find a much broader marketplace for them than ever existed before.

"I think right now we will be typified by the David Lynch film 'Lost Highway.' We will be getting more and more into those kinds of films," says Malin, citing Gramercy's "The Usual Suspects" and "Fargo" as other examples of the genre in which October is interested. "Those types of films have a crossover specialized commercial feel to them, with a potential of hitting a very large part of the moviegoing public."

October's release slate over the past five years has not only included some remarkable art-house fare, but it has also introduced some of the finest American and European acting and directing talents. 1994's "The Last Seduction" brought both actress Linda Fiorentino and film noir director John Dahl to prominence. 1993's "Un Coeur en Hiver" solidified the stateside reputations of Emmanuelle Beart ("Mission: Impossible") and Daniel Auteuil ("The Eighth Day"). Ashley Judd ("Heat," "Smoke") exhibited uncommon emotional maturity in her screen debut, 1993's "Ruby in Paradise." And Charlotte Gainsbourg ("Jane Eyre") made her first English-language turn with another 1993 October entry, "The Cement Garden," a British film about brother-sister incest that also showed October was willing to tread controversial ground. Stephen Rea came to prominence with 1992's Miramax smash "The Crying Game," but his performances in October fare—1991's "Life Is Sweet" and 1993's "Bad Behavior"—were equal artistic successes for the actor. "Life Is Sweet" also firmed director Mike Leigh's standing with American critics and introduced actor David Thewlis ("The Island of Dr. Moreau").

Lars von Trier's "Breaking the Waves" was the Grand Prix winner at Cannes and is October's latest release.

"You know how hard it is to get independent films released, and released successfully, in the States. It's a minefield."

As to what sets October apart from the competition, John Schmidt says he thinks it's "our way of dealing with people, our particular passion for films, and our eye for films. We're quite a straightforward company and very accessible, and we are now the only true independent in the market. The others are doing very good work, but they're all part of big studios with deep pockets, and that sort of makes them think and act a little differently."

Schmidt says October plans to average 12-15 films in the marketplace yearly. "We don't want to grow it to 25 or 30 like some of our competitors, because I don't think we can handle them right. And [those 12-15 titles] will be a mix, from the larger films like the David Lynch to the smaller films that we'll see at festivals and want to buy. And then we will be expanding into the sale of foreign rights as well."

October won't be getting involved with the production end, however. "We believe that there's a business in distribution, and those are our roots, and that's where we're going to stay," says Schmidt.

And the business of distribution is not always an easy road, by any means. "You know how hard it is to get independent films released, and released successfully, in the States. It's a minefield," says Ray. "And there are a million pitfalls. I take a lot of pride in just being able to survive amongst such formidable competition as Miramax and Sony [Classics] and Fine Line and Gramercy and the others. I take pride that we get up every day and we're still here.

"We love film. We have great passion for movies here. Now, I know that's really kind of easy to say. But we really do care about movies. We wouldn't be in this business if we didn't care about it. And it's a great privilege to do it. I've always felt that way.

"When I was working [at New Yorker] back in the early '80s, seeing a film by Luchino Visconti at 11 in the morning, when other people were actually working for a living, I thought that was the greatest single thing in the world. I have not really gotten over that. Because movies are movies! They're just pieces of light and shadow, you know? And it's an amazing business to be in. You get to deal with so many bright people, and so many different kinds of personalities, and you're dealing in a business where decisions have to be made, and rightly or wrongly, you've got to live by those decisions, and you can't let fear or any other emotion or outside indicator dictate what you have to do. And ultimately, if you are even remotely successful, you'll do pretty well. Some people are wrong all the time and still are incredibly famous and powerful and wealthy beyond any kind of reason. A business like that, you gotta love it."

TWI

The Leader in Exhibit Freight Logistics

International • Import Services Accommodations • Travel

Las Vegas
Tel: 702/691-9000
Fax: 702/691-9045

Los Angeles
Tel: 310/568-9300
Fax: 310/338-0316

New York
Tel: 718/656-7220
Fax: 718/656-7241

San Mateo
Tel: 415/573-6900
Fax: 415/573-1727

Dallas
Tel: 214/748-5044
Fax: 214/343-2105

Ottawa
Tel: 613/592-6317
Fax: 613/592-6327

Response No. 116

NATO GOES ONLINE

NATO and Hollywood Online Partner to Make Exhibition A Major Roadside Attraction on the Information Superhighway

by Christine James

To exhibitors, the phrase "going online" has always conjured images of patrons standing in a queue, excitedly waiting to be let in for the feature attraction. Now it means powering up the Powerbook and surfing the Internet. More and more, modern-day moviegoers are turning on their computers and seeking out that ubiquitous http:// prefix to find the information that they need to decide where and when they're going to see the latest Hollywood blockbuster.

With approximately 8,000 theatres nationwide, it would be an ambitious undertaking indeed for each theatre to set up its own website. And most theatre owners are too busy running their cinemas to look into what's entailed in building a home page. Plus, there's still a good number of exhibitors out there who only use their computers to stick post-it notes on (you know who you are). Fortunately, the National Association of Theatre Owners' marketing committee, led by Cineplex Odeon's executive vice president of marketing and communications Howard Lichtman, has initiated a plan to take all of exhibition into the Computer Age in one fell swoop, through an alliance with Times Mirror Corp.-owned website Hollywood Online.

The NATO/Hollywood Online venture is the brainchild of Howard Lichtman, head of NATO's marketing commitee.

"Exhibitors in general were receiving phone calls at the rate of a dozen a week suggesting that they set up websites in and unto themselves," says Lichtman of the genesis of this project. "I believe there's power in numbers, and I felt the best thing for us to do would be to direct all of our customers to one movie information website, because in doing so, we would be certain that the information that was being disseminated was accurate, and we wouldn't spend our lives servicing dozens of websites."

"The matter was brought to our attention initially by Howard Lichtman and some of his colleagues on the NATO Marketing Committee," recalls NATO president Bill Kartozian. "This was at least a year and a half ago. And they explained to the rest of us how explosive the Internet was, how many people were looking at the Internet every day, and what the rate of growth was, and that they thought it would be advisable for the theatre industry to secure a place on the Internet on terms that we can negotiate more or less as equal partners rather than being late in catching the train and buying a ticket on terms dictated by someone else. They certainly convinced us that their thoughts were right, that they were well ahead of the curve, that this was something we needed to do. We began negotiations and ultimately concluded an agreement with the Times Mirror Corp. and Hollywood Online."

One of the seminal and most complete entertainment-themed sites on the web, Hollywood Online was a logical partner for the project Lichtman envisioned. "We went through a process of receiving proposals from a number of websites, and we felt from a content and business viability perspective that Hollywood Online would provide the best product for the consumer," explains Lichtman. Founded in 1993 by executive vice president Stuart Halperin and CEO Steven Katinsky (who were later joined by Anthony Farwell as president, Bruce Cameron as CFO, and, most recently, Michael Rollens as chairman), Hollywood Online was purchased in January 1996 and now has a powerhouse of a parent company in the Times Mirror Corp.

Once Hollywood Online was selected, the next step was to negotiate a definitive agreement, which had to be signed by each exhibitor who was to be a part of this endeavor. Lichtman and the marketing committee spoke at NATO board meetings and met one-on-one with many of the exhibitors during the sign-up process.

Due to be ready by early February, the NATO home page and website network will be accessible through Hollywood Online's website (http://www.hollywood.com), which has "information about films and movie ratings, chat lines with stars, and everything you would expect from a Hollywood web page," says Lichtman. The NATO section will have detailed movie theatre listings, as well as a wide assortment of information specific to each individual theatre. "It'll have what's playing, in which theatre, on which screen; it'll have information on the sound systems in the theatres; it'll have information on wheelchair accessibility; there'll be maps as to how exactly to get to the theatres and so on and so forth." The information can be accessed by area, by chain, by theatre, by film, or numerous other criteria, thanks to a search engine that can seek out practically any form of data request a user types in.

Hollywood Online and NATO have collaborated on a design for a standard template into which all the above-mentioned information is plugged in for each theatre's individual website. But for exhibitors who already have a website or want to build one with different features, they can still be a part of the project by linking their site. "The individual exhibitor can either have a basic website, which Hollywood Online is providing, or they can create their own souped-up website and be hot-linked to [the Hollywood Online/NATO page]," says Lichtman. "The nice part about this is it offers the same opportunity both to small circuits and big circuits. A person who's got two or three theatres or is in a small town will have the same accessibility [as a major chain]."

"The nice part about this is it offers the same opportunity both to small circuits and big circuits. A person who's got two or three theatres or is in a small town will have the same accessibility [as a major chain]."

The benefit that Hollywood Online gets out of the arrangement is mass-promotion, with exhibitors displaying Hollywood Online posters, screen advertisements and other forms of publicity. "Theatres throughout America will be telling all their customers, the millions and millions of patrons who walk through their doors, 'Go to the Hollywood Online movie site for movie listing information,'" says Lichtman. "And you can't buy that kind of exposure or promotion for money."

Advertising-supported Hollywood Online benefits from the high traffic this alliance promises to generate. The more hits they get, the more advertising impressions they can report to their clients—as valuable a statistic as a magazine's circulation is in the non-virtual reality world. According to Hollywood Online executive vice president Stuart Halperin, the site currently receives a very impressive six to seven million page impressions per month.

But the burgeoning business of the Internet is still in its formative stages, and most major websites are operated under the given assumption that it will be a while till the industry solidifies to the point that they're in the black. "Hollywood Online is not making money yet," admits Hollywood Online supervisor Harry Chandler, who's also the (Times Mirror owned) L.A. Times' Director of New Business Development. "But it's growing rapidly as user traffic is growing rapidly, and advertisers are increasingly coming to Hollywood Online as a place to advertise."

And NATO plans to turn some "'Net" profits too, in addition to getting exposure to millions of Internet users. "Websites are very similar to newspapers, in that what newspapers do is they utilize the traffic that the movie theatre listing information generates to create revenue for themselves," explains Lichtman. "So in other words, people read newspapers to get the movie theatre listings information as to where and when a movie is playing, and the newspaper in turn sells that traffic to the studios and other parties in the form of display advertising. And I feel that the same situation will occur with respect to the website. Exhibition in general should benefit from the revenue that is being generated. So NATO is receiving marketing funds [from Hollywood Online] on behalf of all of exhibition, in return for providing them with our movie theatre listings."

The most difficult thing about pulling off this proposition, agrees Lichtman, Kartozian and Chandler, was working out the deal with all the exhibitors. "Every exhibitor had a little different perspective on it, and we finally now have a pattern contract that they're signing," says Chandler. "That was a long, laborious process, but we're there. [Concerns included] how they would deliver their data to us, how much promotion would be involved. It seems like a simple deal, but [the contract] is 40 or 50 pages." But ultimately, a united goal was reached, and a new medium of showmanship will soon be born. Says Chandler, "It's a brand new way to reach out to the theatre audience and excite them about the experience of moviegoing. It allows them to sample clips and games about the movies, celebrity profiles, and then ultimately [enables them] to find where a film is playing near them and hopefully one day to also buy tickets." (Online ticketing, which is currently not available, is on the boards for the future.)

Lichtman says that exhibitors have been "very positive" about the project, and excitement is mounting as the completion date nears. "People realize that it's the technology of the next millennium, and they're pleased that NATO as an organization is taking a leadership role in guiding them through the confusion.

"That's what a national association is all about. Can you gain more by working together than working on your own? And I believe so."

NATO president Bill Kartozian.

L.A. Times Director of New Business Development Harry Chandler.

Hollywood Online chairman Michael Rollens.

"FROM WHERE I SIT..."

Our Forum For Readers Just Like You

CDP: JUST THE FACTS

by Dr. Richard Vetter

Some misleading information has appeared recently in film industry publications that concerns the Compact Distribution Print, or CDP. Unfortunately, the quoted sources have not seen CDP demonstrations, so the opinions expressed are speculation and have no factual basis. The purpose of this brief article is to state the facts and set the record straight.

CDP has been demonstrated widely, in split-screen comparison, to studio executives, the creative community, and projection and audio members of SMPTE. A leading independent testing laboratory evaluated CDP picture and sound performance in July 1996. A summary of the 21-page Evaluation Report appears here in a table on P. 53. Fact: All of the original print-negative information reaches the screen via the compact print process, and picture and sound performance meets or exceeds current SMPTE standards.

Fact: All of the original print-negative information reaches the screen via the compact print process, and picture and sound performance meets or exceeds current SMPTE standards.

Fact: A compact print is 37.5 percent shorter than a current print. Its advantages and impact are obvious; they include substantially reduced costs for film stock, printing, shipping, and handling in the theatre. Also, wider release of major films becomes possible without affecting distribution budgets.

Fact: The compact print does not affect production or post-production, which are performed according to standard practice. At the time of release, as is customary, a standard timed interpositive is made from the completed production original. From that point forward, the compact print process is applied.

CDP is a simple three-step process:

- Step 1. Making a compact picture internegative.
- Step 2. Making a compact sound negative.
- Step 3. Making a retrofit to a standard projector.

Let's take those step by step, fact by fact:

1. A compact internegative is made from a standard timed interpositive. Fact: The practical limit of image resolution in original photography is, at best, 40 line pairs per millimeter (80 lines), and the new resolution limit using the new Eastman intermediate film (5244) is greater than 130 line pairs per millimeter (260 lines). Fact: All of the original negative picture elements (pixels) are resolved on the compact print, as confirmed by independent laboratory tests. Step 1 requires new state-of-the-art computer-designed printing lenses compatible with the new high-resolution intermediate film stock. Fact: These are the first new computer-designed printing lenses expressly for the release printing process in over a decade. Fact: No print will exhibit better quality than the quality of the original element from which it is derived.

2. A compact sound negative is made from the completed sound master. Fact: Sound negative film stock has the capacity to resolve greater than 20 kHz, although the standard in theatre reproduction is 12.5 kHz. Fact: Frequency response of CDP extends from 31.5 Hz to 12.5 kHz, again as confirmed by independent lab tests. The compact print demonstrates both analog and digital sound in accordance with SMPTE audio performance standards.

3. A standard projector is equipped with a new retrofit permitting projection of current and compact prints. Fact: Once the retrofit is made, a projection attendant can convert from one mode of operation to the other in less than 20 minutes. Fact: With CDP, picture steadiness is improved and print life is extended due to the physical dynamics of 56 ft./min. vs. the current 90 ft./min.

COST OF IMPLEMENTATION

Although a final draft of the CDP Business Plan is pending, it appears that cost of implementation in North America will be recouped within the third quarter of the first year of majority use of the compact print process. According to the present business plan, it is not contemplated that exhibitors will be required to make any investment.

CDP AT 30 FRAMES PER SECOND

Fact: The superiority of a frame rate of 30 per second has been demonstrated for decades, yet the film industry has been reluctant to financially embrace it as a new standard. Fact: At 30 fps, flicker is eliminated and motion, definition and brightness are substantially enhanced. It is proposed that CDP can serve as the catalyst for adopting the higher frame rate. Fact: At 30 fps, a compact print is 22 percent shorter than a current print at 24 fps. Presentation of movies at the elevated frame rate will favorably affect boxoffice revenue and patron satisfaction.

According to the present business plan, it is not contemplated that exhibitors will be required to make any investment.

CONCLUSION

CDP has passed all technical tests and has been awarded numerous U.S. and foreign patents based on novelty and utility. CDP supports the survival of film over an electronic alternative. Although CDP has developed a new lamp condenser lens system for large auditoriums, it does not replace the need for 70mm prints in ultra-largescreen venues. Wider distribution and superior presentation

SUMMARY OF TEST RESULTS (JULY 1996) BY AN INDEPENDENT U.S. TESTING LABORATORY

	CURRENT 4-PERF.	CURRENT 2.5 PERF.
FILM/IMAGE TESTS
Film Resolution (line prs/mm)	68 X 56	80 X 126
Screen Image (jump & weave)	Meets SMPTE Std. Class A	Meets SMPTE Std. Class A
Split-Screen Comparison	Increased jump & weave	Less jump & weave; no screen image degradation
Film/Perf. Life (1000 passes)	No damage	No damage
AUDIO TESTS
Frequency Response	31.5 Hz to 12.5 kHz (+/- 1 dB)	31.5 Hz to 12.5 kHz (+/- 1 dB)
Noise	No measurable difference	No measurable difference
Flutter	0.10 percent	0.09 percent
Channel Separation	-35 dB	-36 dB

coupled with improved economy are what CDP offers the film industry today.

Historically, there has always been a resistance to change. But the music industry discovered ways to progress from 78 rpm records to CDs, and magnetic tape recording has shrunk from 30 ips to 3 3/4 ips and less. Motion picture film speed has remained, unchanged, at 90 ft./min. for more than 60 years, and the four-perforation format dates to 1889! These standards have clearly outlived their usefulness. We at United Artists Theatres and Todd-AO believe it's time for a change for the common good of the film industry and its valued patrons.

Located in Pacific Palisades, Calif., Dr. Vetter is director of research and development for United Artists Theatre Circuit and Todd-AO. During his 45-year industry career, he has invented Dimension 150 (a 70mm widescreen process), Todd-AO's 35mm anamorphic widescreen process (for which the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences awarded him a 1973 technical achievement award), and the Prismalite outdoor screen system. Dr. Vetter, who is the inventor and patent holder for CDP, has also been involved in the development of a xenon projection illumination system and various film systems like StereoSpace 3-D, CineMax 70 and CineCircle 360.

THEATRE EXHIBITION EQUIPMENT

XENON BULBS

BOOTH SUPPLIES & LENSES

FILM PROJECTORS & SOUND SYSTEMS

NCS CORPORATION

WORLDWIDE CINEMA SUPPLY DEALER

Theatre Equipment Association

NCS 1926 70 YEARS 1996 CORPORATION

NAC CONCESSIONAIRES

★ ONE STOP SHOPPING SOURCE

★ FACTORY DIRECT PRICING

★ TOLL FREE ORDERING

NEW! ★ MAJOR CREDIT CARDS ACCEPTED NEW!

★ PROFESSIONAL SUPPORT TEAM

★ WORLDWIDE PRODUCT DISTRIBUTION

★ OUR GUARANTEE - 100% SATISFACTION

Call 1-800-776-6271

VISA

Supplying the Entertainment Industry Since 1926

CONCESSION & LOBBY PRODUCTS

LOBBY & BOX OFFICE FIXTURES

NEW & USED EQUIPMENT

SCREENS & FRAMES

Response No. 6

DEATH OF A GIANT

Saved by Sound, Jamaica's Carib Is Doomed by Flames

by John Allen

Longtime readers of my sound columns may recall not one but two separate articles about Jamaica's giant Carib Theatre. The Carib is owned and operated by the Palace Amusement Co. (1921) Ltd., headquarted in Kingston. The first article was published in the October, 1982 issue of BOXOFFICE. The second was published in the February, 1991 issue. Both articles described the theatre as well as its enormous and unprecedented sound system.

At just under 1,000,000 cubic feet, the theatre boasted statistics that made other large theatres seem small by comparison. With an acoustic output equal to 20 symphony orchestras all playing at once, the sound system I designed and built for the Carib Theatre was by far the most powerful of its kind ever built. It was also the first cinema sound system to be completely designed by a computer. To see and hear a film in this place was an incredible experience.

Sadly, this giant of grand old theatres was recently destroyed by fire. Starting in the auditorium's ceiling, the fire spread rapidly throughout the structure and turned the theatre into a smoldering ruin in just three hours. One firefighter was killed and two others injured attempting to save the building.

Palace's managing director, Douglas Graham, was himself hospitalized for nearly a week, suffering from smoke inhalation. Desperate to save his flagship, he spent more than 30 minutes in the burning building helping the fire crews.

At just under 1,000,000 cubic feet, the theatre boasted statistics that made other large theatres seem small by comparison.

Plans are now underway to build new theatres within what can be saved of the original walls of the Carib. Unfortunately, it cannot be rebuilt as a single screen with today's construction costs.

In many ways, the success story of the Carib's last years is one that mirrors the success of many businesses that realize a concentration on quality is a key to the future. In the early 1980s, exhibition in Jamaica was in the doldrums. Competition from video was reducing theatre attendance. In downtown Kingston, two theatres—the Carib and the Regal—fought it out. Both theatres were of similar size, though the Carib was larger. They were located just a few hundred yards apart in one of the city's busiest areas.

Back then, Douglas Graham's father ran Palace. Seeing attendance weak and getting weaker, Graham took it upon himself to seek out ways to turn the situation around. He attended a National Association of Theatre Owners convention. Speaking with several manufacturers and colleagues, he explained the size of his theatre as well as the business situation. Happily, some of them suggested that he visit my booth. Upon hearing of the volume of this room, I decided I needed to visit the Carib myself.

The first time I entered the theatre, I was awestruck. I had never seen such a large auditorium. I wondered how I was going to approach a sound system design for so big a theatre. In addition to requiring a new sound system, the theatre needed just about everything else, from a fresh coat of paint to a new concessions area (all of which came to pass).

During this visit, I learned that Graham had been advised to install only the most minimal of sound systems. The audience, some would say, wouldn't know the difference. All he needed were small speakers, 100-watt amplifiers and an inexpensive stereo processor—all of which would have been inadequate for a screening room, let alone a theatre like his. It turns out that the folks at the Regal theatre were being told the same thing. Graham convinced the directors of his company that, if the Carib were to survive and the company to grow, they had to install the mammoth sound system that I had proposed.

In 1982, we did the installation. It was a powerful system: more than 6,000 watts (increased to 10,000 in 1991). The Regal installed the 100-watt per channel sound system at the same time and opened with the Jamaican premiere of "Raiders of the Lost Ark." The Carib wasn't so lucky: It debuted its new sound system with two "B" pictures, "Seven" and "Dogs," both from the late '70s. But the audience quickly made its choice. The Carib outgrossed the Regal's "Raiders" run and never looked back. The Regal's owners never knew what hit them as audiences deserted their theatre for the Carib and its incredible new sound system.

With an acoustic output equal to 20 symphony orchestras all playing at once, the sound system designed and built for the Carib Theatre was by far the most powerful of its kind ever built.

As time went by, Regal's attendance dropped so low that its owners approached Douglas Graham and asked if his company would run the theatre for them. He agreed, but it was too late. Nothing could save the Regal. Perhaps the most telling sign was the refusal of the audience to go to the Regal even when it was playing the same film as the Carib. If the Carib was sold out, people waiting in line would be told that they could see the same film, at a lower price, starting in a few minutes at the Regal. They wouldn't budge—choosing instead to wait more than two hours, in the rain if necessary, to see the film in the Carib.

Not long after, the Regal was closed and became a shopping center.

The Carib soon became the highest-grossing theatre in the entire West Indies. Palace now had such a successful theatre on its hands that it was able to expand its circuit for the first time in years. Throughout the 1980s and early 1990s, we also upgraded the Carib's sound system at every opportunity. First it was Dolby SR; later it was more modern amplifiers; and finally came digital sound. Even though the theatre had regained its former glory and had eliminated its competition, Graham and Palace's directors refused to rest on their laurels. To avoid a repetition of the conditions in 1980, their customers would not be taken for granted.

During one of my visits, I was asked to join the board of directors for lunch. In recounting the story of the Carib's rebirth, it was said that the company had come to realize the importance of the presentation and sound quality. "We realized that we are not in the movie business," said Douglas Graham. "We are not in the concessions business. We are in the sound business!"

Copyright 1997 John F. Allen. All Rights Reserved.

Plans are now underway to build new theatres within what can be saved of the original walls of the Carib. Unfortunately, it cannot be rebuilt as a single screen with today's construction costs.

John F. Allen is the founder and president of High Performance Stereo, headquartered in the Boston suburb of Newton, Mass. He is also the inventor of the HPS-4000 cinema sound system and in 1984 was the first to bring digital sound to the cinema.

BOXOFFICE

REVIEWS

February 1997

★★★★★ OUTSTANDING
★★★★ VERY GOOD
★★★ GOOD ★★ FAIR
★ POOR
(no stars) BOMB

REVIEWS

Beavis and Butt-head Do America	R-21
Daylight	R-23
Eva Peron: The True Story	R-16
The Evening Star	R-16
Evita	R-15
Ghosts of Mississippi	R-17
Gridlock'd	R-11
Hamlet	R-15
In Love and War	R-18
Inside	R-14
Jerry Maguire	R-21
Jerusalem	R-12
Jingle All the Way	R-25
Losing Chase	R-23
Lost Highway	R-10
Mars Attacks!	R-22
Marvin's Room	R-20
Michael	R-17
My Fellow Americans	R-19
One Fine Day	R-18
101 Dalmatians	R-23
The People vs. Larry Flynt	R-14
The Preacher's Wife	R-22
Prisoner of the Mountains	R-13
Scream	R-20
Screwed	R-14
The Sadness of Sex	R-13
Star Trek: First Contact	R-24
When We Were Kings	R-12

SUNDANCE REVIEWS

All of Them Witches	R-28
Aristotle's Plot	R-26
Buddha Bless America	R-26
Joe's So Mean to Josephine	R-27
John Henrik Clarke	R-28
Snakes and Ladders	R-26
When the Cat's Away	R-26

SUNDANCE/DAY AND DATE

All Over Me	R-27

FLASHBACK REVIEW

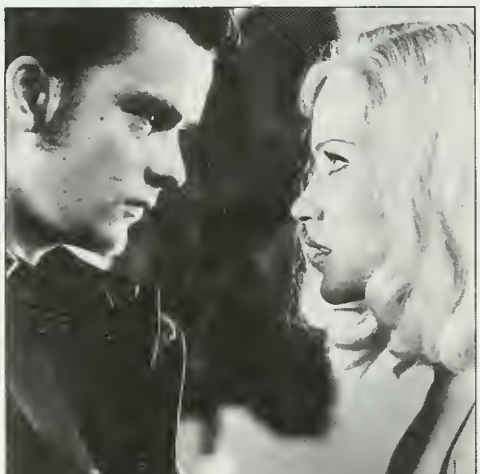
Krakatoa, East of Java (1969)	R-12

PREVIOUSLY REVIEWED

Our new reader guide	R-11

REVIEW INDEX

Our monthly release overview	R-14



Hit http://www.boxoff.com every Friday for reviews of the latest releases!

LOST HIGHWAY ★★★★

Starring Bill Pullman, Patricia Arquette, Balthazar Getty, Robert Blake and Robert Loggia. Directed by David Lynch. Written by David Lynch and Barry Gifford. Produced by Deepak Nayar, Tom Sternberg and Mary Sweeney. An October Films release. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 135 min. Screens at Sundance; opens 2/21.

Shadowy underworld figures and seductive but faithless women are prominent elements in this shadowy work that employs both classic and avant-garde artistic sensibilities. Part film noir thriller and part surreal horror epic, "Lost Highway" could have been concocted only by the slightly deranged mind of David Lynch, its director and co-writer.

The lengthy but engaging film is actually divided into two sections that connect in a haunting and bizarre manner. Initially, moviegoers are introduced to Fred Madison (Bill Pullman) and his wife Renee (Patricia Arquette), both typically oddball Lynchian characters who behave as if they've just popped out of some "Invasion of the Body Snatchers" pod. Their relationship is icy, to say the least, and it's possible that Fred suspects Renee is having an affair. The couple start to show some human life when they begin finding mysterious videotapes on their doorstep. The first tape is simply brief footage of the front of their upscale home. But the following tape shows the couple sleeping in their bed and the third tape finds Renee viciously murdered. As it turns out, the attractive brunette really has been butchered, and Fred is the thoroughly discombobulated prime suspect. These events connect to a strange and patently evil man that Fred had recently met at a party. Looking very much like Death from Bergman's "The Seventh Seal," this pale-faced mystery man (Robert Blake) has a chillingly omniscient view of Fred's life.

Balthazar Getty and Patricia Arquette star in October Film's "Lost Highway."

The second section of "Lost Highway" features Pete (Balthazar Getty), the favorite mechanic of an underworld figure named Mr. Eddy (Robert Loggia). The crime boss treats the young man like a son. But, when Pete can't resist the sexual advances of Mr. Eddy's favorite young mistress Alice, he finds himself being pulled into a sordid world of murder and pornography. This femme fatale is also played by Patricia Arquette in what initially seems like a bit of clever casting; eventually, it's clear that there's some kind of otherworldly link between Alice and Renee and Fred and Pete. Again, the smirking mystery man appears to further tie together the two segments of this outrageous thriller.

"Lost Highway" does possess more baffling loose ends than would be tolerable in a mainstream movie, yet it's unrealistic to expect a David Lynch film to be always conventional or completely understandable. What Lynch does do wickedly well is distort reality and exaggerate human behavior in a way that's both wryly satirical and disturbing. "Lost Highway's" best moment features Mr. Eddy and his henchmen running a tailgater off the road with their sleek Mercedes. After beating the frightened man to a pulp, the suddenly pious mob boss begins to lecture the driver about the dangers of his motoring habit. This oddly hilarious scene is one that's not likely to be soon forgotten.—Jon Matsumoto

REVIEWS

"Lost Highway" and "Gridlock'd" are but two of the standout films readying for their Sundance debuts. For more opening coverage of the festival, see pp. 72-74.

GRIDLOCK'D

★★★★

Starring Tim Roth, Tupac Shakur and Thandie Newton. Directed and written by Vondie Curtis-Hall. Produced by Damian Jones, Paul Webster and Erica Huggins. A Gramercy release. Comedy. Rated R for graphic drug use, pervasive strong language, some violence and brief nudity. Running time: 91 min.

"Kickin' it" isn't easy for Stretch (Tim Roth) and Spoon (the late Tupac Shakur). In their unstable world of addiction, there's no such thing as security. Friends like Cookie (Thandie Newton), the female third of their poetic trio, face harm and horror on the streets with a certain omniscience. Making a buck to get by is challenging, especially for Spoon and Stretch, who prefer to engage in comic masquerades. Still, their life is hardly bearable, so why not reform by seeking public assistance? The duo discover, however, that that reformation would mean hours of paperwork so tedious that even needles seem less painful.

"Gridlock'd" includes the best of several movie worlds; it's comic and dramatic, true and adventurous. It also leaves the audience with a message that's deep and exceptional. Different from former films that have portrayed drug abuse as a glamorous way to survive, "Gridlock'd" demonstrates the real side of addiction, where using heroin and cocaine is like toying with a bomb.

A story of guns, drugs, poverty, death but also joviality, "Gridlock'd" provides an evening of excellent entertainment. Roth is exceptional, as always, and even nonfans of the controversial Shakur are likely to find his performance appealing. (In his honor, the film closes with the dedication "For Tupac 'One Love' RIP."—Heidi Easter

PREVIOUSLY REVIEWED JAN./FEB. RELEASES

In light of our continuing commitment to bring you reviews as early as possible, we now provide a reader guide to upcoming releases we've already critiqued. The alphabetical list below notes the issue of BOXOFFICE in which the review appeared, gives its star rating, and provides updated distributor and release date information.

"Albino Alligator" ★★: Miramax, 1/17 exp; see Nov. 1996.
"Angel Baby" ★★★★: CFP, 1/24 NY, 1/31 exp; see April 1996.
"Citizen Ruth" ★★★★: Miramax, 1/1 exp; see Nov. 1996.
"The Crucible" ★★★★1/2: Fox, 1/1 wide; see Jan. 1997.
"Daytrippers" ★★★1/2: CFP, 2/12 NY; see Aug. 1996.
"Drunks" ★1/2: Northern Arts, Feb. undated; see Dec. 1996.
"The Eighth Day" ★★1/2: Gramercy, 2/21 NY/LA; see July 1996.
"Everyone Says I Love You" ★★★1/2: Miramax, 1/17 wide; see Jan. 1997.
"Farmer & Chase" ★: Arrow, 1/10 NY/SF; see Dec. 1996.
"Hotel de Love" ★★★★: Live, 2/14 excl; see Nov. 1996.
"I'm Not Rappaport" ★★★: Gramercy, 1/24 exp; see Dec. 1996.
"The Jew" ★: First Run, 1/8 NY; see Dec. 1996.
"Johns" ★★1/2: First Look, 1/31 NY/LA; see April 1996.
"Kama Sutra" ★★: Trimark, 2/21 NY/LA, 2/28 exp; see Jan. 1997.
"Kolya" ★★★: Miramax, 1/24 NY/LA; see Dec. 1996.
"Margaret's Museum" ★★: CFP, 2/7 NY/LA/Chi; see Nov. 1995.
"Mother" ★★★★1/2: Paramount, 1/10 exp; see Nov. 1996.
"Nothing Personal" ★★★1/2: Trimark, 2/7 NY/LA; see July 1996.
"The Portrait of a Lady" ★★★: Gramercy, 1/17 wide; see Nov. 1996.
"Scream of Stone" ★: Roxie, Feb. undated; see Aug. 1996.
"Shine" ★★★★★: Fine Line, 1/17 & 1/31 exp; see April 1996.
"Sling Blade" ★★★1/2: Miramax, 2/21 exp; see Nov. 1996.
"The Substance of Fire" ★★: Miramax, 1/10 exp; see Nov. 1996.
"subUrbia" ★★: Sony Classics, 2/7 NY; see Jan. 1997.
"A Tickle in the Heart" ★★★1/2: Kino, 1/25 NY; see Dec. 1996.
"Unhook the Stars" ★★★: Miramax, 2/14 exp; see Dec. 1996.
"Waiting for Guffman" ★★★: Sony Classics, 1/31; see Nov. 1996.
"Without Air" ★★1/2: Phaedra, Feb. undated; see Aug. 1996.

ODELL'S
We Pop and Top America's Popcorn

REAL BUTTER
America's Favorite Popcorn Topping
Premium 100% CANOLA OIL
★★ Now Available ★★
Non-Hydrogenated Popping Oil
No Trans-Fat
SUPUR-KIST TWO
Buttery Flavored Popcorn Topping

For Good Taste and Profits
Call Our 24 Hour Toll Free Number:
1-800-635-0436
Response No. 73

FLASHBACK: JUNE 9, 1969
What BOXOFFICE said about...

KRAKATOA, EAST OF JAVA

[This month, two studios—if they can hit their post-production deadlines—release two competing volcano-in-America movies: Fox's "Volcano" and Universal's "Dante's Peak." In June 1969, Cinerama took audiences overseas and back in time for similar eruptions in the Super Panavision 70 "Krakatoa, East of Java"; originally released at 136 minutes, it was soon cut to 101 minutes and retitled, in cut-to-the-chase fashion, "Volcano." Note: Krakatoa was actually located off the west coast of Java, in the Sunda Strait.]

Based on the factual explosion of the volcanic island of Krakatoa in the 1800s —after which the shock wave circled the globe seven times, the blast was heard 3,000 miles away, and a resulting tidal wave and fires killed thousands—this spectacular roadshow production features some of the most beautiful and awesome sights and sounds ever to grace the huge Cinerama screen. At the same time, the pictures carries a tale of high adventure aboard a fictitious ship, the Batavia Queen. The American Broadcasting Cos./Cinerama Inc. presentation was produced by William R. Forman and Lester A. Sansom and marks the feature film debut of Bernard L. Kowalski as director. The scenes of nature's violence and pyrotechnics—volcanic eruptions, tidal wave, typhoon, fireballs—are so well refined that the use of miniaturization is not readily discernible, thanks to the work of an able technical crew. Throughout the cataclysmic phenomena, the fictional personal stories have been woven into the production with skill and believability by Kowalski and writers Clifford Gould and Bernard Gordon, with the action carried off creditably by the entire cast (which includes Maximilian Schell and Diane Baker.)

EXPLOITIPS

Tie up with White Front stores on TV, radio, store windows and in print. Use ABC Records and New American Library promotions on the soundtrack and paperback novel. Utilize the 16mm featurette, Study Guides and Readers' Digest feature in schools and clubs.

CATCHLINES

The New Cinerama Hurls You Into The Incredible Day That Shook The Earth To Its Core...You Outrun A Raging River Of Molten Lava...You Are Engulfed By The Terrifying Tidal Wave.

REVIEWS

JERUSALEM ★★

Starring Ulf Friberg, Maria Bonnevie and Pernilla August. Directed and written by Bille August. Produced by Ingrid Dahlberg. A First Look release. Drama. Swedish-language; English subtitles. Running time: 166 min. Opens 2/14.

Bille August's latest film, based on a Selma Lagerlof novel, is an epic set in late 19th-century Sweden. The story begins with the death of a father who, before he dies, tells his son Ingmar that he must grow up to be a leader if the local parish is to survive. Grown to young manhood, Ingmar (Ulf Friberg) begins to romance a local preacher's daughter, Gertrud (Maria Bonnevie), even as he tries to revive the family logging business.

One day, a fire-and-brimstone preacher named Hellgum arrives; the effect on the parish inhabitants is immediate. When a showdown with the distrustful Ingmar causes Hellgum to leave, he persuades many followers—including Gertrud and Ingmar's sister Karin (Pernilla August)—to set sail for the holy city of Jerusalem, where they will await the Second Coming. Before she leaves, Karin auctions off the family farm. So that he will eventually possess the property, Ingmar enters into a loveless marriage with the new owner's daughter. For the rest of the film, August parallels Ingmar's life in the parish with the trials of the new colony in Jerusalem.

August (who also helms this month's "Smilla's Sense of Snow") tries to endow each event with monumental significance; as a result, the narrative is a virtual catalogue of catastrophe. The writer/director doesn't allow the audience to emotionally engage with his hero; Ingmar is noble and diligent, but the despair and anguish he feels never comes through.

August fares better with Gertrud, making her religious mania palpable. The performances are strong, and the cinematography by Jorgen Persson is ravishing. Minor characters, including those played by veterans Max Von Sydow and Olympia Dukakis, are mere window dressing, and the 166-minute film could use a good trimming. A film of "Jerusalem's" length should be totally absorbing; instead, it's episodic and rambling, allowing only intermittent interest.—Craig Vickers

WHEN WE WERE KINGS ★★★1/2

Starring Muhammad Ali, George Foreman and Don King. Directed by Leon Gast. Produced by David Sonenberg, Leon Gast and Taylor Hackford. A Gramercy release. Documentary. Rated PG for images of violence, brief nudity and some language. Running time: 88 min. Opens 2/14 top 10 markets.

A positive, joyous affirmation of the power to overcome obstacles, "When We Were Kings" is a revealing and balanced documentary portrait of a great fighter and a time in world history when African-Americans began to develop a public sense of identity and individuality. The struggles that Muhammad Ali went through in 1974 to win back his heavyweight championship title in a classic bout against George Foreman in Zaire is chronicled with intense love and devotion by director Leon Gast, without resort to preaching or patronizing.

Gast filmed most of this footage more than 20 years ago; when Taylor Hackford ("Bound by Honor") came into the project in 1995, he shot interviews with Norman Mailer and George Plimpton and helped give the final film a punchy rhythm he earlier displayed in another black-culture documentary, "Hail Hail! Rock 'n' Roll."

Smoothly integrating concert footage of Miriam Makeba, B.B. King and James Brown with sociopolitical views of Africa in the early 1970s, the film gives Ali's life at the time more perspective by placing him in context with the forces that influenced him. Although there's plenty of screen time detailing Ali's trademark humor, charming egomania and boxing skills, the filmmakers wisely let the specter of racism insinuate itself into the structure so that the boxer's victory is made all the sweeter.

Ali's opponent is not given short shrift in the account, but "When We Were Kings" could have been even richer than it is had Foreman been characterized as more than just an adversary. Overall, however, "When We Were Kings" is a most rewarding picture, full of delightful anecdotes and even touches of suspense.—Dale Winogura

REVIEWS

THE SADNESS OF SEX ★★

Starring Barry Yourgrau and Peta Wilson. Directed by Rupert Wainwright. Written by Barry Yourgrau and Rupert Wainwright. Produced by David Lancaster and Rubert Maconick. A Tara release. Vignettes. Unrated. Running time: 85 min. Opens 2/14 L.A., March natl.

Writer Barry Yourgrau and music video/commercial director Rupert Wainwright decided to throw all the genres together to come up with "The Sadness of Sex," a collection of 15 vignettes that are part rock video parody, surreal art film, and romantic comedy. It's a shame the end result is too ridiculous to be funny, too pretentious to inspire admiration, and too obnoxious to sustain interest.

Told through a mishmash of visuals—cartoons, home video, noir, '50s TV shows—and narrated by an outrageously dramatic Yourgrau, the film explores the relationship process, from the spark of passion to the inevitable terrible end. Though Yourgrau's prose is often beautifully written, evoking dreams and nightmares with wry insanity, the film has not a thoughtful, subtle moment. Too greedy, Wainwright here tries to have it all, but he winds up with nothing.—Lea Russo

PRISONER OF THE MOUNTAINS ★★★★

Starring Oleg Menshikov, Sergei Bodrov Jr., Jemal Sikharulidze and Susanna Mekhralieva. Directed by Sergei Bodrov. Written by Arif Aliev, Sergei Bodrov and Boris Giller. Produced by Boris Giller and Sergei Bodrov. An Orion Classics release. Drama. Russian-language; English subtitles. Rated R for some violence and language. Running time: 99 min.

With "Prisoner of the Mountains," filmmaker Sergei Bodrov has created a stirring drama that brings sharp human and physical dimensions to ethnic tensions that have long plagued Russia and its adjacent republics. The idea for this drama actually preceded Chechnya's current and sometimes bloody quest for independence from Russia; Sergei Bodrov's film is a contemporary version of Leo Tolstoy's "Prisoner of the Caucasus," written 150 years ago. Tolstoy's tale involves a young man captured by an enemy in an eternal war between Russia and its neighboring nations. "Prisoner of the Mountains" finds two Russian soldiers held captive by a Muslim patriarch in the Caucasus; local villagers urge Abdoul-Mourat (Jemal Sikharulidze) to kill his prisoners; he decides instead to try to trade the two for his own son, who has been interned by the Russians.

"Prisoner of the Mountains" doesn't take sides. The source of this seemingly endless conflict appears less important to Bodrov than the fact that people have been dying tragically for years as a result of the mutual ill-will. Audiences might feel a natural tendency to pull for hostages Sacha (Oleg Menshikov) and Vania (Sergei Bodrov Jr.) because they will be killed unless a deal between Abdoul-Mourat and the Russians can be struck. At first, the two prisoners come across like a Russian version of the Odd Couple; Sacha is an officer with an outward toughness and biting sense of humor that belie a basically good heart and a sad past. Vania is a gentle recruit who seems better suited to writing poetry than shooting a rifle. Eventually, the two form a personal bond that is engaging, moving and even funny.

The Muslims are also treated with humanity and dignity. The elderly Abdoul-Mourat is a proud but caring man who is now raising his young daughter Dina (Susanna Mekhralieva) by himself. Sikharulidze gives his character an emotionally searing presence, conveying stoic strength as well as the poignant sorrow of a man who has lost his wife and, possibly, his son.

In "Prisoner of the Mountains," Muslims lead very different lives from urban Russians. Abdoul-Mourat and his fellow mountain dwellers seem to be products of a very uncomplicated pre-industrial era. Moviegoers are left with the feeling that the Muslims' distrust of the Russians in this day and age has just as much to do with lifestyle differences as it does with ethnic or religious chasms.

However, "Prisoner of the Mountains"—which received 1996's best screenwriting Felix award—is ultimately about the similarities and not the differences between such rivals. When Dina and Vania forge a touching friendship, Bodrov exhibits clearly how insane such century-old conflicts really are.—Jon Matsumoto

THE BEST!

We are proud that the very highest quality Dolby and Digital sound systems come from us. So many, in fact, that there is probably one in operation near you. You deserve the same service!

HADDEN THEATRE SUPPLY COMPANY
10201 Bunsen Way
Louisville, KY 40299
(502) 499-0050
(502) 499-0052 FAX:

Louis Bornwasser, Owner

Design-Consultation-Sales

Response No. 40

NEW CONSTRUCTION

$50 PER SQUARE FOOT

Pre-engineered steel and masonry buildings on your site anywhere in the United States starting at $50 per sq. ft.

- Most jobs completed in 20 weeks or less
- Circuits, Independents, Newcomers
- 25 years theatre construction experience

RENOVATIONS, ADDITIONS, CONVERSIONS

"Now taking orders for 1997 openings"

1-800-272-2432

LARGO CONSTRUCTION INC.
555 STREET ROAD, BENSALEM, PA 19020
215-245-0300 • FAX 215-638-7933

Response No. 162

Review Digest

Story-type key: (Ac) Action; (Ad) Adventure; (An) Animated; (C) Comedy; (D) Drama; (Doc) Documentary; (F) Fantasy; (Hor) Horror; (M) Musical; (My) Mystery; (R) Romance; (Sat) Satire; (SF) Science Fiction; (Sus) Suspense;

TITLE/MPAA DISTRIBUTOR 5 Excellent 4 Very Good 3 Good 2 Fair 1 Poor	RUN TIME	GENRE	REVIEWED IN ISSUE	BOXOFFICE	VARIETY	H. REPORTER	L.A. TIMES	N.Y. TIMES	USA TODAY	AVERAGE	TOTAL BOXOFFICE $*
The Associate PG-13 (BV)	114	C	12-96	3	3	2	3	2	2	2.5	12.3
Big Night (Gol)	110	D	9-96	3			4	3		3.4	10.8
Bound R (Gra)	111	Th	4-96	3	4	4	4	3	4	3.6	3.8
Breaking the Waves R (Oct)	158	D	7-96	2	3	5	2	4		3.2	0.5
The Chamber R (Uni)	111	D Th	12-96	3	3	2	2	3	3	2.7	14.3
Citizen Ruth (Mir)	102	C	11-96	4		2	3		3	3.0	0.1
The Crucible PG-13 (Fox)	115	D	1-97	4	3	4	3	4		3.7	0.3
D3: Mighty Ducks PG (BV)	104	C	12-96	2	3	3		3		2.8	21.1
Daylight PG-13 (Uni)	114	Ac D	2-97	2	2	3	2	2	2	2.2	16.7
Dear God PG (Par)	111	C	1-97	3	3	3	2	2	1	2.3	6.9
English Patient R (Mir)	159	R	1-97	3	3	4	4	4	4	3.7	16.0
Everyone Says I Love You R (Mir)	100	MusC	1-97	3	4	4			3	3.5	0.1
First Kid PG (BV)	101	C	11-96	3	3	3	2	3	2	2.7	25.9
First Wives Club PG (Par)	105	C	11-96	3	3	4	2	3	3	3.0	101.7
Fly Away Home PG (Col)		D	10-96	3	4	4	4	4		3.8	23.7
The Funeral R (Oct)	96	D	10-96	2	3	4	3	4		3.2	1.0
The Ghost and the Darkness R (Par)	117	AcAd	12-96	3	3	3	2	4	2	2.8	37.7
High School High PG-13	86	C	12-96	3	2	2	2	3	2	2.8	20.4
Hunchback... G (BV)	88	Ani	8-96	3	3	3	3	2	5	3.2	99.3
ID4 PG-13 (Fox)	143	AcSF	9-96	2	3	4	3	4		3.2	306.1
Jack PG-13 (BV)	111	CD	10-96	2	2	2	2	2	2	2.0	58.3
Jerry Maguire R (TS)	138	D	2-97	4	4	2	3		4	3.4	17.1
Jingle All the Way PG (Fox)	89	C	2-97	3	2	3	2	2	3	2.5	43.3
Larger Than Life PG (UA)	94	C	12-96	3	2	2		2	2	2.2	8.3
Lone Star R (SPC)	134	D	7-96	4	4		4	5	3	4.0	12.1
The Long Kiss Goodnight R (NL)	120	Ac	12-96	3	3	3	3	3	2	2.8	32.2
Looking for Richard PG-13 (Fox)	113	Doc	7-96	4		2	2	4	3	3.0	1.3
Losing Chase R (CFP)	94	D	2-97	2		3	3	3		2.8	0.1
Mars Attacks! PG-13 (WB)	104	C	2-97	3	3	4	3		3	3.2	9.4
Michael Collins R (WB)	132	D	10-96	4	3	4	4	3	2	3.3	10.8
Microcosmos (Mir)	74	Doc	10-96	3	4	3	4			3.5	0.9
The Mirror Has Two Faces PG-13 (TS)	126	R C	1-97	2	2	4	2	3	3	2.6	39.1
The Nutty Professor PG-13 (Uni)	96	C	9-96	3	4	4	3	3	4	3.5	128.8
101 Dalmatians G (BV)	103	C	2-97	3	3	3	2	2		2.6	75.6
Preacher's Wife PG (BV)	124	RC	2-97	3	3	3	3		3	3.0	7.6
Ransom R (BV)	121	Th	1-97	3	4	4	3	4	3	3.5	117.5
Ridicule R	102	CD	8-96	4	4	4	4	3		3.8	0.4
Romeo + Juliet PG-13 (Fox)	120	D	1-97	3	3	3	3	2	3	2.8	42.7
Secrets & Lies R (Oct)	142	D	7-96	4	4	4	4	4		4.0	4.9
Set It Off R (NL)	121	Ac D	1-97	3	3	2	3	2		2.6	33.3
Shine (FL)	104	D	4-96	5	5	4	4	3	3	4.0	0.9
Sleepers R (WB)	146	D	12-96	3	4	2	2	2	3	2.7	51.8
Space Jam PG (WB)	88	F C	1-97	3	3	3	3	3	3	3.0	76.5
The Spitfire Grill (Col)	117	D	4-96	4			3	3		3.7	12.6
Star Trek: First Contact PG-13 (Par)	110	SF	2-97	3	4	4	4	3	3	3.3	76.7
Surviving Picasso R (WB)	124	D	11-96	3	4	2	3	3		3.0	2.0
Swingers R (Mir)	96	C	11-96	3	3	4	3	3	3	3.2	3.4
That Thing You Do! PG (Fox)	105	D	11-96	3	4	3	3	3	3	3.2	25.2
Trainspotting R (Mir)	93	D	7-96	4	4	3	4	3		3.6	16.5

 Total boxoffice, in millions, as of Dec. 18, 1996*

REVIEWS

INSIDE ★

Starring Nigel Hawthorne, Eric Stoltz and Louis Gossett Jr. Directed by Arthur Penn. Written by Bima Stagg. Produced by Hillard Elkins, Louis Gossett Jr., and Dan Paulson. A Strand release. Drama. Unrated. Running time: 94 min. Screened at the Toronto fest.

Arthur Penn once built his career on making the kinds of daring and ambiguous films that constantly shifted our expectations and moral values—movies like "The Left-Handed Gun," "Bonnie and Clyde," "Alice's Restaurant" and (at least parts of) "Little Big Man." Who'd have thought that, with the political drama "Inside," Penn would make the kind of narrow-minded movie his earlier work transcended?

This apartheid-themed film rests on black/white parallels, but the whole lays out each side so methodically it's like "Death and the Maiden" on quaaludes. As the racist Kruger, Nigel Hawthorne is pure hambone evil (he needs only a moustache to twirl). As a changed man, Eric Stoltz is thoughtful, but his scenes are conceived in one dimension.—Kevin Courrier

SCREWED ★★★

Directed by Alexander Crawford. Produced by Todd Phillips and Andrew Gurland. A Cinema Village Features release. Documentary. Unrated. Running time: 85 min.

"Screwed," by underground documentarian Alexander Crawford ("Hated: GG Allin and the Murder Junkies"), is an unflinching look at the life of Screw Magazine publisher Al Goldstein. Launched in 1968, Screw and its weekly mix of graphic sex, editorial rant and callgirl/massage adds (in tandem with Goldstein's other magnum opus, the raunchy cable show "Midnight Blue") have landed Goldstein in jail 19 times, made him wealthy, and given him the pleasure of beating a federal obscenity rap.

Following Goldstein through his working day—at editorial meetings, photo shoots, the TV studio, and the set of his latest porn film—this documentary (subtitled "Al Goldstein's Kingdom of Porn") intercuts interviews of Goldstein with fans and nonfans. But a good deal more could have been done with the film (which marks the first release of New York exhibitor-turned-distributor Cinema Village). Several stretches of "Screwed's" 85 minutes bog down; a more aggressive editorial approach could have made this good movie great.—Alex Albanese

THE PEOPLE VS. LARRY FLYNT ★★★

Starring Woody Harrelson, Courtney Love, Edward Norton, Brett Harrelson and James Cromwell. Directed by Milos Forman. Written by Scott Alexander and Larry Karaszewski. Produced by Oliver Stone, Janet Yang and Michael Hausman. A Columbia release. Drama. Rated R for strong sexual material, nudity, language and drug use. Running time: 126 min.

Hustler Magazine publisher Larry Flynt is one of the unlikeliest heroes imaginable for a mainstream Hollywood movie, but the biggest surprise about "The People vs. Larry Flynt" is how mild and inoffensive this Ixtlan/Phoenix production manages to be. One might expect that, with a protagonist who gleefully labels himself a "scumbag" and spends his life behaving as outrageously as possible, his biopic would be equally provocative and disturbing. Instead, the filmmakers use Flynt's strange career for an overly earnest preachment about the First Amendment.

The movie's heart might be in the right place, but the movie itself seems inappropriately timid, pussyfooting around Flynt's demented world. Moviegoers get little sense of what it was that made Hustler so offensive, and Woody Harrelson's engaging performance as Flynt makes his battles with the Establishment seem more endearing than threatening. Screenwriters Scott Alexander and Larry Karaszewski ("Ed Wood") enjoy the irony of portraying Flynt as an ostracized champion of American freedoms, but the film never rises to its declared level of ambition.

"The People vs. Larry Flynt" focuses on legal battles over obscenity and other free-speech issues, with Flynt gradually finding a sense of purpose in court for his otherwise rampantly hedonistic life. His antagonists include such well-known figures of smarmy hypocrisy as Charles Keating Jr. ("Star Trek: First Contact's" James Cromwell) and the Rev. Jerry Falwell (Richard Paul), as well as a legal system that Czech emigre director Milos Forman (who won Oscars for "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" and "Amadeus") portrays as mostly farcical. Forman's satirical bent sometimes enlivens the proceedings, but not enough to overcome the feeling that this is an HBO movie escaped to the big screen.

REVIEWS

Flynt's relationship with his drug-addicted, AIDS-infected wife Althea Leasure, played by rock singer Courtney Love ("Feeling Minnesota"), is treated as the stuff of romantic tragedy. But, despite her harrowing portrayal of Leasure's final years, Love starts out looking so wasted that there's little room for modulation in her performance.—Joseph McBride

HAMLET ★★★★

Starring Kenneth Branagh, Derek Jacobi, Julie Christie and Kate Winslet. Directed and written by Kenneth Branagh. Produced by David Barron. A Columbia release. Drama. Rated PG-13 for some violent images and sexuality. Running time: 242 min.

"There is a special providence in the fall of a sparrow," says the Danish prince Hamlet near the all exeunt end of this four-hour, full-length version, and actor/adapter/director Kenneth Branagh gives the words a fragilely melancholic understanding that makes it one of the film's most finely delivered lines from a play fraught with many famous utterances. (Among them, "To be or not to be," here done passably, and "Alas, poor Yorich," done so perfectly—with the aid of, believe it or not, Billy Crystal as the Gravedigger—it might be called the platonic form of all its renderings). Toiling in classical terrain he clearly "gets"—his best films have been retellings of Shakespeare's "Henry V" and "Much Ado About Nothing")—Branagh makes that simple sentence read like a sentencing of life and the world. Indeed, his achievements in this sixth sound-era screen version of Shakespeare's 1602 tragedy return Branagh to the levels of that best work, which has always been powered by an existentialism that comprehends both a "sparrow's" rise and fall.

Like its complex lead, however, "Hamlet" is not without flaws. An updating to a 19th-century setting seems inconsequential, and certain cameos (notably Robin Williams as Osric and Jack Lemmon as Marcellus) feel like stunt casting. As the Dane, Branagh occasionally slips into the onanistic overplaying—call it trumpet torture—that sank "Mary Shelley's Frankenstein" and "A Midwinter's Tale." Elsewhere, Branagh makes Hamlet's complaints almost whiny and his grief far too made of anger.

In the end, though, it's unlikely that the film's probable upscale audiences will leave the multiplex feeling defeated joy, as "Hamlet" boasts too many rewards. Those include a topnotch supporting cast, longtime Branagh collaborator Patrick Doyle's symphonic score, and the grand yet precise 65mm cinematography of Alex Thomson. Standing apart from virtually all other movie fare this season, "Hamlet" makes for a fertile promontory.—Kim Williamson

EVITA ★★★★

Starring Madonna, Antonio Banderas and Jonathan Pryce. Directed by Alan Parker. Written by Alan Parker and Oliver Stone. Produced by Robert Stigwood, Alan Parker and Andrew G. Vajna. A Buena Vista release. Musical. Rated PG for thematic elements, images of violence and some mild language. Running time: 136 min.

Alan Parker's extravagant screen adaptation of the Andrew Lloyd Rice/Tim Rice stage musical "Evita" is a feast for both eye and ear. Superbly staged and choreographed (dance sequence editing is especially impressive) and beautifully lit and shot by Darius Khondji (who lensed last year's "Seven"), the Hollywood Pictures release also benefits from exceptionally fine performances by both Madonna and Antonio Banderas.

Madonna portrays Eva Peron, the ambitious small-town girl who rose from poverty to the top echelons of Argentine society as the mistress and, later, wife of the country's fascist president Juan Peron ("Carrington's" Jonathan Pryce). A calculating woman who used people—usu-

CINEMA & SERVICES CONSULTANTS INTERNATIONAL INC.

THANK YOU!!

Due to your overwhelming response, we have expanded our phone system to better serve your needs.

Our new numbers are:

412-343•3900
FAX 412-343•2992

New & Used Equipment
- Projection
- Sound
- Parts
- Seatings
- Xenon Bulbs
- Projector & Intermittent Rebuilding
- Concession Equipment
- Concession Counters
- Draperies
- Low Voltage Lighting

For Your Convenience, We Accept Mastercard, Visa, American Express Discover

Home of "One Stop" Theatre Shopping
1250 Brookline Blvd.
P.O. Box 9672
Pittsburgh, PA 15226
412-343-3900
Fax 412-343-2992

Response No. 109

ally men—to get what she wanted, Peron also evinced great sympathy for her nation's impoverished masses.

Helping to guide the audience through both Peron's life and Argentina's complex political situation in this Cinergi production is Banderas as a kind of one-man Greek chorus, providing a strong singing voice and smoldering good looks. In fact, all the film's voices are fine, yet they suffer from seeming disembodied. All screen musicals are lipsynched, but here the songs don't seem to be emanating from the characters.—Jean Oppenheimer

EVA PERON ★★★1/2

Starring Esther Goris, Victor Laplace and Pepe Novoa. Directed by Juan Carlos Desanzo. Written by Jose Pablo Feinman. Produced by Hugo Eduardo Lauria. An Aleph S.A. production; no distributor set. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 120 min.

An illuminating biography that provocatively grapples with complex polemics, "Eva Peron" makes the connections between a leader's personal life and political convictions with forceful intelligence and cinematic acuity. Argentina's eminently worthy entry for this year's foreign-language Oscar eschews historical spectacle, providing a perfect companion piece to Alan Parker's overpowering revolutionary canvas "Evita."

The cerebral, densely structured screenplay by Jose Pablo Feinman centers on Argentina's beloved first lady, Eva Duarte de Peron (Esther Goris), in her 1951 election bid for vice president. The gloriously magisterial and gutsy performance that Goris delivers begins as a hard-nosed, defiant demagogue, but her charismatic and sympathetic qualities later emerge; when Eva is diagnosed with cancer, her tragic vulnerability and earthy saintliness take over.

The handsomely modest, resourceful production is directed by Juan Carlos Desanzo with focused, graceful intimacy. Though the film sometimes bogs down in verbose intellectualism and TV soap-opera melodrama, overall it's handled with sharp, incisive artistry.—Dale Winogura

THE EVENING STAR ★★

Starring Shirley MacLaine, Bill Paxton, Juliette Lewis, Miranda Richardson, Marion Ross and Jack Nicholson. Directed and written by Robert Harling. Produced by David Kirkpatrick, Polly Platt and Keith Samples. A Paramount release. Comedy/drama. Rated PG-13 for some sexual situations and brief strong language. Running time: 129 min.

An unenthusiastic sequel to 1983's multi-Oscar winning "Terms of Endearment," this Rysher production suffers from one key drawback: It's unneeded. There's no way, or reason, to improve on the original. Robert Harling (who wrote "The First Wives Club") makes his directing debut, but it's the script that seems unseasoned.

The story is fragmented, following the indomitable Aurora Greenway (Shirley MacLaine) willy-nilly as she scrapes against a variety of antagonists. Among them are her three troubled grandchildren (an underused but still diverting Juliette Lewis, plus Mackenzie Astin and George Newbern). They have been in Aurora's (one would argue questionable) care—they might prefer the word incarceration—since their mother Emma (played earlier by a much-missed Debra Winger) died. As astronaut Garrett Breedlove, Jack Nicholson has a too-little, too-late cameo.

Like a retiring baseball player taking a last circle toward home, "The Evening Star" seems engineered to touch all the old bases. Characters are shuffled onstage and off as their bows are deemed needed; the Aurora-Garrett drive along the beach is even reprised. Experienced trouper she is, MacLaine at least keeps matters admirably afloat, even if the narrative zing is gone; powered by her performance, "The Evening Star" is likely to keep audiences mildly entertained for its 129-minute run (which feels longer). But this is a pale copy; when "The Evening Star" and Aurora meet their end together, none will wish for a part three.—Kim Williamson

NATIONAL CINEMA SERVICE
CORPORATION

(800) 726-2609

ITEA International Theatre Equipment Association

PROFESSIONAL SERVICES AND PRODUCTS INCLUDING

INSTALLATION
AUDIO RACKING
THX RECERTIFICATIONS
TECHNICAL CONSULTING
24 HOUR ANSWERING SERVICE
VIDEO PROJECTION
INTERMITTENT REPAIR

EQUIPMENT
PROJECTION SERVICE*
SOUND SERVICE*
PARTS
BOOTH SUPPLIES
*Annual Contracts or Demand Service

XENON BULBS
SOUND SYSTEMS
CONCESSION EQUIPMENT
LOBBY FIXTURES
FRONT ENDS
LENSES
USED EQUIPMENT

P.O. Box 10799
New Orleans, Louisiana 70181

GOOD SIGHT, GOOD SOUND
THE KEY TO GREAT CONCESSIONS

Response No. 169

REVIEWS

MICHAEL ★★1/2

Starring John Travolta, William Hurt, Andie MacDowell and Robert Pastorelli. Directed by Nora Ephron. Written by Nora Ephron and Delia Ephron. Produced by Nora Ephron, Sean Daniel and Jim Jacks. A New Line release. Romantic comedy. Rated PG for a mild barroom brawl, some language and sensuality. Running time: 105 min.

This saccharine heart-warmer isn't without its moments, 98 percent of which are John Travolta's. Travolta plays the title character, an archangel whose visit to earth causes quite a stir. Smoking, drinking, carousing and gluttonizing, Michael seems more terrestrial than celestial, but he has charisma—an aura of joy and the aroma of home-baked cookies. When a trio of tabloid reporters (William Hurt, Andie MacDowell and Robert Pastorelli) are sent to get a story on Michael, even these cynics are (inevitably) all affected by him.

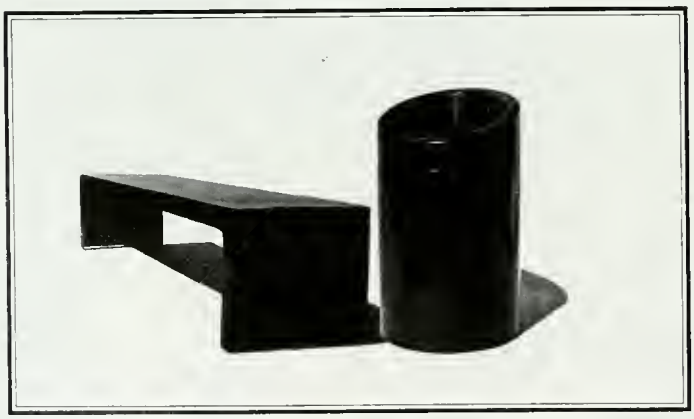
It's obvious from the onset that the contentious relationship between Hurt and MacDowell will turn into romance. But, despite the players' talents, their roles' shallowness makes their interaction uninteresting. Pastorelli's character, though comic, is almost extraneous. Though Travolta gives a winsome portrayal of an atypical angel, even he can't perform a miracle large enough to give this Nora Ephron film its necessary magic.—Christine James

GHOSTS OF MISSISSIPPI ★1/2

Starring Alec Baldwin, Whoopi Goldberg, James Woods, Craig T. Nelson, William H. Macy and Susanna Thompson. Directed by Rob Reiner. Written by Lewis Colick. Produced by Rob Reiner, Frederick Zollo, Nicholas Paleologos and Andrew Scheinman. A Columbia release. Drama. Rated PG-13 for a strong scene of violence and for racial dialogue. Running time: 123 min.

Thirty-one years after civil rights activist Medgar Evers was felled by an assassin's bullet on the front porch of his Mississippi home, his killer was finally convicted for the crime. Although justice has been done in the sentencing of white supremacist Byron De La Beckwith, the same can't be said of Evers' life and work. With "Ghosts of Mississippi," director Rob Reiner has once again taken Hollywood's easy way out in telling a tale of racism and injustice. As did Alan Parker with "Mississippi Burning," Reiner has fashioned a film seen through the eyes of a white protagonist. Consequently, although certainly unknowingly, he has done a disservice to the legacy of a great humanitarian leader. Also, unlike Parker's similarly themed 1988 effort, "Ghosts of Mississippi" isn't compelling in the least. Reiner lacks Parker's talent as a filmmaker and, as a result, his movie could well be nicknamed "Mississippi Boring."

With prodding by Evers' widow Myrlie Evers (Whoopi Goldberg), assistant D.A. Bobby DeLaughter (Alec Baldwin) decides to reopen the Evers case. Despite public and private pressures to let the past lie (his seething racist wife leaves him), DeLaughter makes it his duty to bring Beckwith (James Woods) to justice not only for his own conscience but for the pride of his native state as well.



It's scary to think that Reiner is already stealing from himself after directing only a half-dozen movies. Reiner gives the relationship between DeLaughter and Evers as much depth as a silly romance ("When Bobby Met Myrlie..."?), with Goldberg delivering one of the worst performances in memory. Her acting is dreadfully mannered, and with no orgasm-in-a-deli jokes to save her she flounders. Baldwin is sufficient, but his extended courtroom climax (see "A Few Good Men") makes Chris Darden look like Clarence Darrow. Woods is great, but he's given such a ridiculously slight role that he is relegated to choking on scenery. As a consequence, his caricature becomes laughable (a la "This Is Spinal Tap"), not menacing.

Three decades after Ever's death, his killer finally rests in the jail where he has so long belonged. Unfortunately, the activist's story still has not been properly put onscreen.—Alex Demyanenko

Response No. 145

CINETECH INC
Projection
Planning
Equipment
Sound
Seating
Construction
Upgrading
Cinetech
Corporate Center
225 W. Howard Street
Stowe, PA 19464
800-432-4847
Fax 610-323-1664
email infomagic@AOL.com
www.cinetech-infomagic.com
SLIDE SHOW
GRAPHICS * TRIVIA
* INSTALLATION
* Call our InfoMagic Dept.
and ask for Brian Walters
or Bruce Fitzsimmons
Response No. 159

Genuine
GLASSFORM®

Fiberglass Trash Receptacles and Bench Seating.
1-800-995-8322 or 1-800-842-1121
Response No. 62

REVIEWS

ONE FINE DAY ★★★

Starring Michelle Pfeiffer and George Clooney. Directed by Michael Hoffman. Written by Terrel Seltzer and Ellen Simon. Produced by Lynda Obst. A Fox release. Romantic comedy. Rated PG for language and mild sensuality. Running time: 109 min.

"I have a dark chocolate layer," says curmudgeonish newspaper columnist Jack Taylor ("From Dusk Till Dawn's" George Clooney) to his psychiatrist. And why shouldn't he feel dark: his ex-wife is off on a new honeymoon, he's left to uncomfortably care for their five-year-old daughter Maggie (Mae Whitman), and Jack will soon learn he'll be fired if he doesn't find new corroboration for his printed allegations against City Hall. But audiences of this Fox 2000 production well know that there's sweet chocolate in him too—and so eventually too does single mom Melanie Parker (Michelle Pfeiffer), a struggling architect who in "One Fine Day's" 18-hour narrative span struggles to complete a new building plan, parent her five-year-old son (Alex D. Linz) and ultimately decide whether the not-so-cutely-met Jack is a nightmare or the man of her dreams.

Fox made a bold but wise move in advancing "One Fine Day's" planned 1997 opening into a crowded Christmas. Director Michael Hoffman, who failed to get the tone right in his most recent "Restoration," here weaves together laughs and love as if making a pleasing taffy, ably assisted by a script by Terrel Seltzer ("Chan Is Missing") and Ellen Simon ("Moonlight & Valentino") that continually draws its two leads together for comic contretemps—Jack and Melanie frequently bicker like couples in '40s films—and the gradual rise (of course) of irresistible romance.

Clooney proves he has the charm to hold the big screen even when sharing that silver with a seasoned knockout like Pfeiffer. The actress is hardly challenged here in the way "Love Field," "Dangerous Liaisons" and "The Russia House" brought out her best, but "One Fine Day" has an innate enchantment that raises it above programmer status.—Kim Williamson

IN LOVE AND WAR ★★★

Starring Sandra Bullock, Chris O'Donnell, Ingrid Lacey, Emilio Bonucci and Mackenzie Astin. Directed by Richard Attenborough. Written by Clancy Sigal, Allan Scott and Anna Hamilton Phelan. Produced by Richard Attenborough and Dimitri Villard. A New Line release. Romantic drama. Rated PG-13 for graphic war injuries and some sensuality. Running time: 115 min.

If the central character of "In Love and War" weren't Ernest Hemingway, this would seem a rather ordinary and predictable, if beautifully rendered, wartime romance between a wounded Red Cross ambulance driver and his nurse. Although director Richard Attenborough ("Shadowlands") and his staff have compellingly recreated the atmosphere of Italy during World War I, the story can't help being a pallid imitation of Hemingway's novel "A Farewell to Arms," for which this true-life love story served as raw material.

REVIEWS

Chris O'Donnell ("The Chamber") is the teenaged Hemingway, a callow Midwesterner with a disturbing compulsion for proving his manhood under fire. His recklessly brave actions put him into an American-run hospital under the care of nurse Agnes von Kurowsky, played by Sandra Bullock ("A Time to Kill"). The story of Hemingway's largely unrequited passion for the comely, more experienced woman was transformed into the tragic romance of "A Farewell to Arms," and it's an odd concept to film the writer's actual experience rather than his imaginative reshaping of it.

But Attenborough's sensitivity with actors gives the story more weight than it otherwise might have sustained. The sparks between Agnes' emotionally reserved but deeply empathetic character and "Ernie's" impetuous, unformed nature make for some touchingly nuanced scenes of courtship between Bullock and O'Donnell. Attenborough also explores Hemingway's caddish, brutal streak and, although O'Donnell is barely able to suggest Hemingway's potential as a writer, he believably captures the warring sides of the character.

"In Love and War" is most impressive in its vision of wartime Italy, from the nightmarish battlegrounds and field hospitals to the bustling streets and contrastingly tranquil palazzi. Cinematographer Roger Pratt, production designer Stuart Craig and costume designer Penny Rose have done a marvelous job of transporting the viewer back into the period. If the pacing seems too languid for a war movie, that problem unfortunately is inherent in the story.—Joseph McBride

MY FELLOW AMERICANS ★★★

Starring Jack Lemmon, James Garner, Dan Aykroyd and John Heard. Directed by Peter Segal. Written by E. Jack Kaplan & Richard Chapman and Peter Tolan. Produced by Jon Peters. A Warner Bros. release. Comedy. Rated PG-13 for salty language and innuendo. Running time: 101 min.

This "Grumpy Old Presidents" scenario involves two voted-from-office Chief Executives—stingy Republican Russell Kramer (Jack Lemmon) and womanizing Democrat Matthew Douglas (James Garner)—who find themselves the targets of an attempted frameup concocted by the current Prez (Dan Aykroyd), who hopes to shunt responsibility for a brewing kickback scandal onto Kramer's head. Next thing the crotchety chaps know, the helicopter in which they were supposed to continue traveling together on state business explodes. To prove Kramer's innocence and save their skins, the dueling duo head cross-country to where Kramer's presidential library has his official (and hopefully exonerating) papers.

GOLDBERG BROTHERS, INC.

Slide Projector Port

With Fully Adjustable Shelf

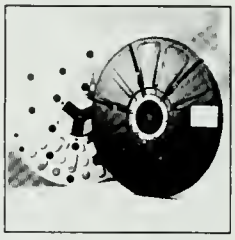
- Easily removable • 12″ x 12″ glass frame
- Adjustable shelf
- Non-skid surface prevents projector movement

Adjustable Film Clamps

• Quick and simple • Transfers up to 16,000 feet of film without breaking it down • Sold in sets of three

Projection and View Port Glass Frame Sets

- 16″ x 20″ hinged glass frame
- Opens easily • White water float glass with anti-reflection coating



Surround Speaker Mounting Brackets

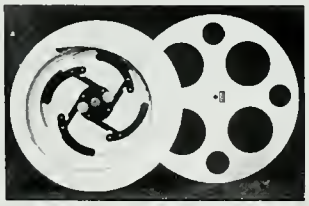
• Accommodates most popular surround speakers • Shock absorbers between the base plate and side pieces • Adjustable for a wide range of speaker sizes.

Film Guidance Rollers

• For projectors or wallmount

Show Shipper ELR System

• 6,000 ft & 12,000 ft available



Ticket Box

- Easily changeable schedule sheets
- Hinged schedule window w/access to flashlight compartment
- Lockable stub holding area
- Separate lockable lost and found area
- Clipboard holder in door

Trailer Retrieval Reel

A QUICK & EASY way to handle the coming attractions that have been pulled out of the feature for tear down.

Office: (303) 321-1099 • Fax: (303) 388-0749
8000 East 40th Avenue, Denver, Colorado 80207

Response No. 36

REVIEWS

Along the way, giving "My Fellow Americans" its title and its theme, they encounter "real America" and its various denizens along the way. Moviegoers who loved Lemmon's two "Grumpy" pairings with Walter Matthau are most likely to appreciate the goings-on here, and Garner's customary charismatic turn will make even the grumpiest fans not miss Matthau's natural curmudgeonry. Taking matters down a notch in this latest from director Peter Segal ("Tommy Boy") is a played-too-broad subplot involving the evil machinations of secret government operatives.—Kim Williamson

MARVIN'S ROOM ★★★

Starring Diane Keaton, Meryl Streep and Leonardo DiCaprio. Directed by Jerry Zaks. Written by Scott McPherson. Produced by Scott Rudin, Jane Rosenthal and Robert De Niro. A Miramax release. Drama. Rated PG-13 for thematic elements and brief language. Running time: 97 min.

Although "Marvin's Room," adapted by Scott McPherson from his play, does tug pretty hard on the more kleenexy heartstrings, it avoids bathos by virtue of a powerful cast and a slightly offbeat sensibility. When the film opens, Bessie (Diane Keaton) for years has been caring for her bedridden father (Hume Cronyn) and dotty aunt Ruth (Gwen Verdon). When she herself falls ill, Bessie must call upon her estranged sister Lee (Meryl Streep) and Lee's troubled son Hank (Leonardo DiCaprio) for help—opening old wounds and forcing both sisters to confront the difficult choices they've made in their lives.

"Marvin's Room" is a sudser for sure, with a plot contrived to give everyone his or her Big Emotional Moment. But the situation is a plausible one, and Keaton and Streep are such powerhouses that moviegoers aren't likely to mind the sappier flourishes. Although this is an adapted play being helmed by a theatre director with no prior cinematic experience, "Marvin's Room" never feels stagebound or static. The theatre version was applauded for its humor, an element lacking here. Still, audiences seeking a fine character drama are likely to overlook a few pat moments and a certain basic predictability. And they'll hit the hankies.—Cathy Thompson-Georges

SCREAM ★★★

Starring Neve Campbell, David Arquette, Courteney Cox, Skeet Ulrich and Drew Barrymore. Directed by Wes Craven. Written by Kevin Williamson. Produced by Cary Woods and Cathy Konrad. A Miramax release. Horror/comedy. Rated R for strong graphic horror violence and gore, and for language. Running time: 111 min.

Although Kevin Williamson's script for this Dimension release—which tells the story of the efforts of a female teenager ("The Craft's" Neve Campbell) to evade the bloody fates of various schoolmates when serial killings being to ravage their quiet California town—doesn't make for classic horror fare, it provides enough bounces, chills and chuckles to entertain its target moviegoers. Although being sold almost as a satire of the genre's usual rules ("don't answer the door," "don't have sex," "don't go back in the house"), the spoofing appears only intermittently throughout the narrative, giving the film a fractured quality; do they mean it, or not?

Indeed, "Scream's" most effective scenes are those involving the most dire peril, as when one young lovely asks a malevolent male phone caller "What do you want?" and is answered with "To see what your insides look like." (Regardless of line reading, there could never be any yucks there.) Cast members, even the most temporary, do a good job during all the screaming, scramming and slaughtering; although she's a goner early, Drew Barrymore plays an important role by getting matters off to proper hysterics, and Courteney Cox (one of TV's uber-"Friends") provides a possible crossover draw for tube-prone youth audiences. Nonetheless, male slasher aficionados are the likely demo here.—Kim Williamson

Creative Producers Of Quality

Theatre Film Trailers Now Using

Digital Picture And Sound Technology

"Trust A Company With Experience"

FILMACK STUDIOS

1327 S. Wabash Avenue Chicago, IL 60605-2574 U.S.A.

TEL 312-427-3395 FAX 312-427-4866

1-800-FILMACK (1-800-345-6225)

Featuring Scotchgard™ Film Protector Coating

— Exhibiting at CineAsia - Booth #403 —

Response No. 61

REVIEWS

BEAVIS AND BUTT-HEAD DO AMERICA ★★★

Voices by Mike Judge, Robert Stack and Cloris Leachman. Directed by Mike Judge. Written by Mike Judge and Joe Stillman. Produced by Abby Terkuhle. A Paramount release. Animation. Rated PG-13 for continuous crude sex-related humor and language, and for a drug-related scene. Running time: 80 min.

"Uh, huh huh huh. This movie is cool because our, uh, fans can see us on the wide screen."

"Hey, Butt-head! You said 'wide.' Heh heh heh."

"Shut up, butt-munch! I'm trying to review our movie!"

"Oh. Heh heh. Sorry. Heh heh heh."

"There's these, uh, dudes who take our TV, which really sucks."

"Yeah. That sucks. Not having a TV totally sucks."

"And then Beavis and me are looking for it when we meet this other dude who wants to pay us to 'do' his wife."

"Yeah, heh heh heh. He wants to pay us to score with his wife!"

"Huh huh huh. That was cool."

"Yeah, heh heh. That was cool."

"But when we find the chick in Las Vegas, she, uh, puts this, uh, unit in Beavis' pants..."

"Heh heh heh. You said 'unit.' Heh heh heh heh."

"And first she wants to pay us more money to 'do' her husband."

"Doing a dude would suck!"

"Yeah. That would suck. But then she says we can 'do' her if we meet her in Washington. So we travel, like, uh, about a hundred miles across the country with these cops looking for us, but we keep running into this old chick with lots of candy and, uh, stuff."

"I am Cornholio! I need t.p. for my bunghole!"

"Shut up, Beavis!"

"Are you threatening me? I am a Gringo! I am Cornholio!"

"Huh huh huh. That was cool."

"You will give me t.p.?!"

"So, uh, huh huh, our movie is really cool because it doesn't suck. And anyone who doesn't like it is some kind of butt-monkey."

"Yeah, heh heh heh. They're just a bunch of butt-monkeys!"—Wade Major

JERRY MAGUIRE ★★★★

Starring Tom Cruise, Cuba Gooding Jr., Renee Zellweger, Bonnie Hunt and Regina King. Directed and written by Cameron Crowe. Produced by Bruce S. Pustin and John D. Schofield. A TriStar release. Drama. Rated R for language and sexuality. Running time: 138 min.

"Jerry Maguire" scores a touchdown for all parties involved, with star Tom Cruise and writer/director Cameron Crowe ("Say Anything," "Singles") taking home the lion's share of the credit. Feeling considerably shorter than its nearly 2 1/2-hour running time, "Jerry Maguire" ranks among the precious few films that manage to invoke the full spectrum of human emotion while appearing neither contrived nor insincere.

Centering around a successful sports agent (Cruise), the story focuses less on the politics of professional athletics than on Maguire's tumultuous personal struggle to retain both integrity and reputation after a sudden indulgence of conscience gets him fired from a prestigious agency. Following Maguire on his uncertain journey is his one remaining client, a talented but temperamental wide receiver named Rod Tidwell (Cuba Gooding Jr.), and a doe-eyed single mother and former agency accountant named Dorothy Boyd (Renee Zellweger). Bouts of pain and exultation ensue and, between the two, Maguire discovers a hidden capacity for love, friendship and commitment that forces him to finally confront his demons and find true happiness.

Armed with Maguire's stockpile of insecurities and inadequacies, Cruise has what may well be the best role of his career, and Gooding exploits his meatiest part since "Boyz N the Hood." Zellweger's enchantingly lovable ingenue seems certain to vault the up-and-comer to instant A-list status. More than a triumph for the actors, though, "Jerry Maguire" is Crowe's. Witty, touching and meaningful, "Jerry Maguire" marks the filmmaker's coming-of-age as an American auteur, whose storytelling here ranks among the best of this or any year.—Wade Major

Response No. 202

MARS ATTACKS! ★★★

Starring Jack Nicholson, Glenn Close, Pierce Brosnan, Sarah Jessica Parker, Martin Short, Annette Bening, Jim Brown, Michael J. Fox, Lukas Haas and Natalie Portman. Directed by Tim Burton. Written by Jonathan Gems. Produced by Tim Burton and Larry Franco. A Warner Bros. release. SF/comedy. Rated PG-13 for sci-fi fantasy violence and brief sexuality. Running time: 104 min.

While "ID4" was an overblown, special effects-driven, factory-generated formula blockbuster playing on patriotism and America's kick-ass mentality, "Mars Attacks!" is a Tim Burton-brand dark satire freakshow, overall much more interesting and entertaining, but likely with much more limited appeal as well. It's also a somewhat unsettling film, with extreme violence comically depicted and the "Ak! Ak!" barking of the cartoonish Martians quickly getting under one's skin. The aliens' experimentations are hilarious but also unapologetically jaw-droppingly sick and twisted. Major characters are wantonly decimated, bringing the tension up much higher and for much longer than "ID4" was able to. Yet sympathy and a rooting spirit are only vaguely evoked for a few characters.

Visually compelling with superior computer animation, great use of color and a fantastic opening credit sequence depicting a formidable armada of '50s-style flying saucers advancing on earth in perfect formation, "Mars Attacks!" is a bizarre combination of eye candy, warped humor, social satire and comedic ultraviolence. Added to that is an all-star ensemble cast, all sporting outlandishly over-the-top roles. But the lack of any message (even a sardonic one), the diffuse storyline and the done-before solution combine to leave a certain emptiness.—Christine James

THE PREACHER'S WIFE ★★1/2

Starring Denzel Washington, Whitney Houston, Courtney B. Vance and Gregory Hines. Directed by Penny Marshall. Written by Nat Mauldin and Allan Scott. Produced by Samuel Goldwyn, Jr. A Buena Vista release. Romantic comedy. Rated PG for brief mild language. Running time: 124 min.

Other than the decision to change the race of the principal characters from white to black in this Nat Mauldin/Allan Scott script (adapting the work of Robert E. Sherwood and Leonardo Bercovici), there's relatively little in "The Preacher's Wife" to distinguish it from Henry Koster's original 1947 Cary Grant/David Niven favorite "The Bishop's Wife." Much like its forebear, "The Preacher's Wife" is a sweet, sentimental, well-intentioned spoonful of holiday cheer that's pleasant enough as long as one doesn't take too close a look at how little of it really makes any sense.

Assuming the formidable mantle of Grant, Denzel Washington is charming as an exuberant angel sent to earth to help a discouraged preacher (Courtney B. Vance in the Niven role) and his beautiful wife (Whitney Houston in the Loretta Young role) salvage their neighborhood church. Romantic tension develops between angel and wife, but it's never clear why an angel would be detoured by such earthbound emotions (other than to give the film some romance).

On the plus side, audiences will appreciate this Touchstone effort for its positive portrayals of both religion and black family life—two institutions that have taken more than a fair beating from Hollywood of late. Neither Houston nor Vance is ever less than engaging, and Penny Marshall provides direction that consistently attains genuine sentiment without the usual melodramatic excess. Fans of Houston's singing, too, will thrill to the singer's return to her gospel roots.—Wade Major

Act III Theatres • Carmike Cinemas • Cinamerica Theatres • Cineplex Odeon • Cynos Anedos Cinemas • Dickinson Theatres • Eastern Federal • Edwards Cinemas • Empire Theatres • Finnkino Oy Cinemas • First International Theatres • Harkins Theatres • Mann Theatres • Marcus Theatres • Metropolitan Theatres • National Amusements Pacific Theatres • Regal Cinemas • United Artists Theatre Circuit • United Cinemas International • Virgin Cinemas • Wallace Theatres • Warner Brothers International

As I went to sit in my seat
my hands held a drink cold & sweet,
but when I sat down
my face showed a frown,
cause my drink spilled all over my feet.

Since then I have been to a place
that provides me a neat little space,
where I can sit back
with my cup in a rack,
and relax with a smile on my face.

Jim Fischer

Are your patrons smiling?

Call, The Caddy Guys

1-800-845-0591

Caddy Products • 7667 Cahill Road • Minneapolis, MN 55439 • 612-828-0030 • Fax 612-829-0166

Response No. 421

REVIEWS

DAYLIGHT ★★1/2

Starring Sylvester Stallone, Amy Brenneman and Viggo Mortensen. Directed by Rob Cohen. Written by Leslie Bohem. Produced by John Davis, Joseph M. Singer and David T. Friendly. A Universal release. Action/drama. Rated PG-13 for disaster-related peril, death, and destruction. Running time: 114 min.

For audiences that enjoy action-packed films reminiscent of "The Poseidon Adventure," in which the stuntpeople outnumber the actors and dramatic music and camera angles outweigh the strength of the plot, "Daylight" will be on the money. In making their movie for that demo, though, director Rob Cohen ("Dragonheart") and writer Leslie Bohem have left little to the imagination, giving "Daylight" a feeling of being formulated for mass consumption.

In this latest Stallone actioner, an underwater commuter tunnel in New York City is the scene of a horrific incendiary explosion that traps a handful of survivors in its depths. As death nears for them, former emergency-services veteran turned cab driver Kit Latura (Stallone) decides to attempt the impossible. By saving the survivors, he hopes to redeem himself from a past mistake that cost precious lives.

The plot is predictable, but the supporting cast provides colorful moments, notably from the film's romantic interest, Madelyne ("Heat's" Amy Brenneman). "Daylight's" effects are complex and amazing, with Industrial Light & Magic providing two grand explosions.—Pat Kramer

LOSING CHASE ★★

Starring Helen Mirren, Beau Bridges and Kyra Sedgwick. Directed by Kevin Bacon. Written by Anne Meredith. Produced by Milton Justice. A CFP release. Drama. Rated R for brief language. Running time: 94 min.

In "Losing Chase," actor Kevin Bacon's directorial debut, necessity is the mother of insanity. Chase, a middle-aged married woman (Helen Mirren), goes crazy in order to avoid dealing with her deep unhappiness. Unable to ease her pain, her husband (Beau Bridges) hires Elizabeth (Kyra Sedgwick), a psychology student, to spend the summer with them on Martha's Vineyard and take care of the children. But Elizabeth has her own demons to contend with.

At first, "Losing Chase" (which already played on Showtime) seems an honest and sensitive portrait of women bound together by their identity crises; neither of them are sure of who they are or what they want. Yet, in order to provide a quick solution to their characters' problems—a catalyst for change—the filmmakers sexualize the relationship. It's a cheap way out for a film that had promise.—Lea Russo

101 DALMATIANS ★★1/2

Starring Glenn Close, Jeff Daniels, Joely Richardson and Joan Plowright. Directed by Stephen Herek. Written by John Hughes. Produced by John Hughes and Ricardo Mestres. A Buena Vista release. Comedy. Rated G. Running time: 103 min.

Aptly enough, John Hughes' script is based on the Dodie Smith novel "The One Hundred and One Dalmatians," and not on the original animated version. That Disney classic still has the fifth biggest boxoffice (in adjusted dollars) of any film ever, and one reason for that moviegoer response was an appreciation of the wonderfully personal voices that the puppies, their dad Pongo and mom Perdy, and sundry other animal participants possessed. Here, in their most questionable decision, director Stephen Herek (working closer to his "The Mighty Ducks" territory than that of his recent "Mr. Holland's Opus") and writer/producer John Hughes (who again provides numerous "Home Alone" moments) have decided that their critters won't speak. In de-animating "101 Dalmatians," its creators have also significantly lowered its emotions.

Not helping matters is a tedious second half (this film version runs 103 minutes, telling the same story that fit perfectly before in 79) that concludes with a climax

A Great Booking Means More Patrons!

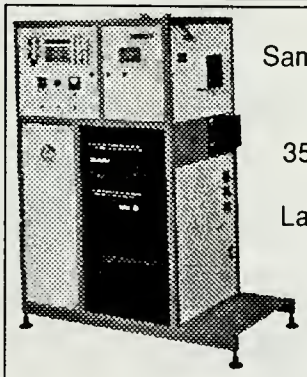
Increase your advance receipts with a complete certificate program.

10 ADMISSIONS TO YOUR THEATRE
COUPON BOOK



Single certificates also available.

Custom design a COUPON BOOK for your theatre to include ADMISSIONS, CONCESSIONS, and SPECIAL OFFERS and DISCOUNTS.
A Proven Method of Increasing Profits!

Bar Coding, Variable Information, Safety Papers, and Copyproof Designs are available.

National TICKET CO.®
Call for details:
P.O. BOX 547 SHAMOKIN, PA 17872
ORDER DEPARTMENT 800-829-0829
TOLL FREE FAX 800-829-0888
INTERNATIONAL DEPARTMENT 717-672-2900
INTERNATIONAL FAX 717-672-2999
INTERNET http://www.nationalticket.com

Response No. 72

Same unbeatable optics as the Xenex II

35.5" of std. rack space

Large access doors and panels

Clean and uncluttered interior for easy maintenance

THE NEW KNEISLEY CONSOLE

WHATEVER YOUR CHOICE, CONSOLE OR XENEX II, YOU WILL OBTAIN THE HIGHEST PICTURE QUALITY AVAILABLE.

Write or call for descriptive literature.

KNEISLEY ELECTRIC COMPANY

P O Box 4692
TOLEDO, OHIO 43610

(419) 241-1219 FAX (419) 241-9920

Response No. 41

MERCHANDISER

Stein Industries designers gave this unit a large pre-packed display area with sliding plexi-glass doors. Featuring a stainless steel storage bin with an oversized heavy gauge stainless steel door and removable stainless steel chaff drawers gives added convenience. These units have the capability of keeping bulk popcorn warm and pre-packed bags and/or pre-packed buckets of popcorn at a constant temperature for warmth and crispness. The popcorn Merchandiser is available in a counter-top model, and helps concession stands sell hot popcorn during peak periods without having to fill bags or buckets.

STEIN INDUSTRIES INC.
22 Sprague Avenue, Amityville, NY 11701-0536
(516) 789-2222 FAX (516) 789-8888

Response No. 101

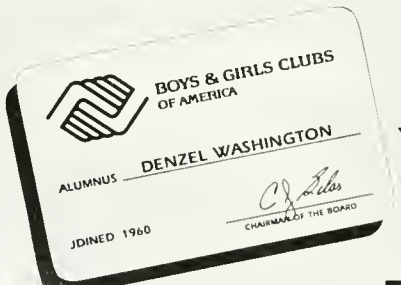
•24hr Phone Assistance
•Intermittents Overhauled
•Contract Service Available
• Next Day Parts Shipping
• 1 Year Warranty on all NETS Overhauled Equipment
•Dealer Discounts Available
•Sound - Dolby Certified

Call Toll Free
1-800-388-7547

•Buy and Sell Used Equipment
•Screens Installed
• Drapes
• Maskings
• Servicing Major Circuits and Independents
• Consulting
• Stereo Systems Custom Fabricated

New England Theatre Service, Inc.

295 Treadwell St. (203) 281-6583 Hamden, CT 06514



Response No. 77

complete line of . . .
Concession, Snack Bar and Janitorial Supplies
plus Projection and theatre equipment also parts
For The Best In Service . . . Give Us a Call

CINEMA SUPPLY COMPANY, INC.
P.O. BOX 148, MILLERSBURG, PA. 17061
TELEPHONE: (717) 692-4744 1-800-437-5505

Response No. 96

HOW FAR YOU GO DEPENDS ON WHERE YOU GET YOUR START.

1-800-854-CLUB

The Positive Place For Kids.

REVIEWS

so underpowered only its placement at movie's end clues the audience in to its nature. Whereas the first portion begins with a bang—the character setups are perfect for Cruella DeVil (Glenn Close, right on target with her society-woman evil, wanting the pups' fur for a coat) and the dog-loving couple who (too quickly) become husband and wife, Roger (Jeff Daniels) and Anita (Joely Richardson)—in the latter section the three human leads, plus Pongo and Perdy, virtually disappear. In their wake are mostly indiscriminate puppies, nameless barnyard denizens and bumbling burglars Jasper (Hugh Laurie) and Horace (Mark Williams), an inept duo that undergo a sequence of bonk, slip and splash catastrophes.

Nonetheless, youngsters are likely to find the ongoings more on than off, although the littlest among them—unlike their parents, who can fill in the animals' vocal blanks from their memories of the original—might become lost when "101 Dalmatians" becomes almost a silent movie. For adults, this "101 Dalmatians"—even if it's more library asset maximization than real moviemaking—provides a fitfully entertaining cruise across three decades back to their own childhoods.—Kim Williamson

STAR TREK: FIRST CONTACT ★★★

Starring Patrick Stewart, Brent Spiner, James Cromwell and Alice Krige. Directed by Jonathan Frakes. Written by Brannon Braga & Ronald D. Moore. Produced by Rick Berman. A Paramount release. SF. Rated PG-13 for some sci-fi adventure violence. Running time: 110 min.

This eighth film in the "Star Trek" franchise borrows heavily from James Cameron's "Alien" and "Terminator" series, which should come as no surprise to anyone who watches television. TV shows routinely take their best ideas from the feature film arena. Even "Trek" creator Gene Roddenberry appropriated good stuff from "Forbidden Planet." But Roddenberry's handpicked heir, producer Rick Berman, can't quite generate the scope its central cyborg/human conflict (and a first-class theatrical film) demands.

The story takes off from a two-part episode of the "Next Generation" series, in which Captain Picard (Patrick Stewart) was captured and almost "assimilated" into the semi-robotic, quasi-Communist Borg, an imperialistic race of "Terminator"-type creatures. In this new outing, Picard uses his knowledge of the Borg to combat their latest strategy for universal domination: going back in time to change (for the worse) human history.

There's a slightly desperate feeling in "First Contact's" patched-together script that writers Brannon Braga and Ronald D. Moore are making up the rules as they go along, and there are signficant cheats at the end involving Data (Brent Spiner) and Picard. There's also a slow, ill-conceived sequence outside the ship with Picard and crew members battling the somnambulant Borg, and an opening attack scenario wouldn't be out of place in an old "A-Team" episode on the small tube.

REVIEWS

In fairness, producer Berman and his writers were probably hamstrung by their own "prime directive": not to upset the delicate balance of the "Trek" star egosystem. Only Alice Krige's dominatrixy Borg Queen suggests the full-throated passion required of a feature film. Yet "First Contact" is never less than watchable for non-Trekkers, and it will positively delight the legions of Trek fans.—Rick Schultz

JINGLE ALL THE WAY ★★★

Starring Arnold Schwarzenegger, Sinbad, Rita Wilson and Phil Hartman. Directed by Brian Levant. Written by Randy Kornfield. Produced by Chris Columbus, Mark Radcliffe and Michael Barnathan. A Fox release. Comedy. Rated PG for action violence, mild language and some thematic elements. Running time: 89 min.

A zany, cartoonish romp in the proud tradition of such concept-driven holiday comedies as John Hughes' "Plains, Trains & Automobiles" and the Hughes/Chris Columbus collaboration "Home Alone," "Jingle All the Way" won't win any awards for believability, but as purely escapist family entertainment on a grand scale it's a tough act to beat.

Essentially little more than a parade of slapstick set pieces, each more outrageous than the last, "Jingle All the Way" stars Arnold Schwarzenegger as Howard Langston, a loving but neglectful Minneapolis father whose devotion is put to the test when he has to find his little boy (Jake Lloyd) the season's hottest toy on Christmas Eve; on the same quest is a borderline-lunatic mail carrier (Sinbad). With time running out, the two desperate fathers run a seemingly never-ending gauntlet of celebrity cameos and wacky obstacles.

Aided by an excellent supporting cast, including Rita Wilson as Howard's wife and Phil Hartman as his overly libidinous neighbor, the Schwarzenegger/Sinbad pairing proves an inspired one. Although director Brian Levant (recovering from the leaden "The Flintstones") deserves ample due for his able helming of yet another technically challenging project, it is producer Chris Columbus' trademark blend of shameless sentiment and madcap wackiness that is most evident throughout.—Wade Major Want the latest word on the newest films? Then make it a Friday habit to go online with* BOXOFFICE *at http://www.boxoff.com for reviews of that weekend's openings!

READY THEATRE SYSTEMS
SOFTWARE FOR TICKETING, CONCESSIONS & COMPLETE INVENTORY CONTROL
800 676-9303 616 463-8458
Response No. 130

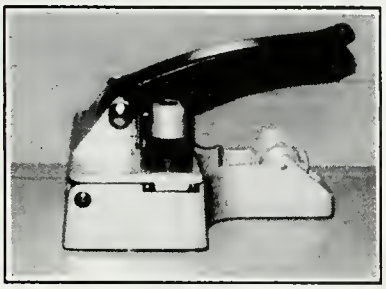
Theatre Ticketing and Concessions Systems
Crain/Atlanta's Theatre Ticketing System combines PC Standard equipment with eighteen years of experience in Buying, Booking & Film Rental Software Systems to assure PERFORMANCE, PRICE & RELIABILITY. Over 50 Ticketing Systems are Installed Internationally in Circuits from 5 to over 400 Screens.

- Easy to Learn and Operate
- Daily/Weekly Box Office & Concessions Reporting
- Up to 4 Ticket Selling Stations
- No Mandatory On-going Charges
- Continuous Sales Status Display
- Daily Home Office Transmissions
- Customization Available
- Six Months Free Telephone Support
- Rapid Printing of Professional Quality Tickets

Exceptional Service to the Theatre Industry since 1978

Crain/Atlanta, Inc. 2786 N. Decatur Road # 250 Decatur, GA 30033 404-299-3400 FAX 404-299-1226
Response No. 164

Buy One Get One 50% off!



June - mid December sailings only. Restrictions apply.

Explore the Caribbean on a 6 or 13 day sailing adventure.
For your free 'Great Adventure Booklet' call your travel agent or 1-800-327-2601
Windjammer Barefoot Cruises LTD.
P.O. Box 190120, Dept. 5558 , Miami Beach, FL 33119
Check out our web site: http://www.windjammer.com
Response No. 165

ONLY $199.95

A new conception in 35 mm splicers that must be seen to be believed.

- Top quality
- Inexpensive price
- All metal — no plastic
- Wholesale to the public

EQUIPMENT, ETC.
P. O. Box 1194
Snellville, GA 30278
Phone–(770) 979-3456
Fax–(770) 979-0919
Ans. Mach. 24 Hrs. A Day

Response No. 443

Call Sharon, Scott, or Clara for

CLASSICS
CARTOONS
MATINEES

KIT★PARKER★FILMS

800•538•5838

Response No. 58

SUNDANCE REVIEWS

WHEN THE CAT'S AWAY ★★★★

Starring Garance Clavel, Sinedine Soualem and Renee Le Calm. Directed and written by Cedric Klapisch. Produced by Aissa Djabri, Farid Lahoussa and Maunuel Munz. A Vertigo/France 2 production; no distributor set. Comedy. French-language; English subtitles. Not yet rated. Running time: 95 min.

Writer/director Cedric Klapisch has made a winning and thoughtful film with "When the Cat's Away." Its plot concerns Chloe, a dissatisfied modeling agency assistant whose life revolves around work and her only friend, gay roommate Michel. She decides to take a vacation and leaves her cat with Mademoiselle Renee, a neighborhood eccentric. When Chloe returns, she finds that her cat has disappeared. Mme. Renee alerts others in the neighborhood and instigates an exhaustive block-by-block search. Along the way, Chloe meets a host of culturally diverse characters; suddenly, her life is filled with adventure, intrigue and romance.

This French production is charming without being cloying, funny without being cute. Klapisch effortlessly entertains his audience but at the same time addresses such serious concerns as poverty, homelessness and racial prejudice. There's also a sense of foreboding as characters are evicted from apartments, and buildings stand vacant. The film's deft combination of comedy and social awareness is a rarity.—Craig Vickers

BUDDHA BLESS AMERICA ★★★★

Starring Lin Cheng-sheng and Chiang Shu-na. Directed and written by Wu Nien-jen. Produced by Yang Teng-kuei and Yeh Wen-li. A Taiwan Film Center production; no distributor set. Comedy. Mandarin- and Cantonese-language; English subtitles. Not yet rated. Running time: 111 min.

In a Taiwanese village in the 1960s, there are rumors that the American military is coming to carry out a series of maneuvers. This suits a former schoolteacher nicknamed Brain, because he believes in all things American, including NASA and Elvis. Brain's brother has lost his fingers (which he preserves in a pickle jar), and Brain is convinced that American doctors will be able to reattach them.

"Buddha Bless America's" premise is comic, but the tone that director Wu Nien-jen sets for his second feature is one of wry amusement rather than broad belly laughs. He gently pokes fun at the U.S. military, local government and village inhabitants. A complicated plot, which culminates with an accidental theft of a soldier's corpse, is handled deftly by Wu; the film is complex without being confusing.

A tender and touching portrait of an educated man and his illiterate brother, "Buddha Bless America" with hilarity and devastation demonstrates the enormous misunderstandings that can result from cultures clashing.—Craig Vickers

SNAKES AND LADDERS ★★

Starring Pom Boyd, Gina Moxley and Sean Hughes. Directed and written by Trish McAdam. Produced by Lilyan and Chris Sievernich. Drama. A Miramax release. Not yet rated. Running time: 92 min.

Much ado about nothing, "Snakes and Ladders" is the kind of bad movie that isn't trying to say anything, so it therefore just ambles along innocuously. With this film, moviegoers just mark time, which luckily isn't long.

Jean (Pom Boyd) and Kate (Gina Moxley), roommates in Dublin, are also street performers. Their mettle as friends and entertainers is tested when Jean's hangdog boyfriend (Sean Hughes) proposes marriage. All goes awry when Jean panics, has an affair, and gets a job on TV, while the boyfriend stews, gets Jean pregnant after a drunken one-night stand, and eventually makes his way back to Jean. And that's about all there is to it.

Director Trish McAdam seems to be aiming for an amiable farce about the trials of romance between women who are close friends as well as artistic competitors. But she doesn't develop the heat that their competitiveness could generate. Her temperament won't allow her to just let the fur fly; she wants us to feel cozy with these two women, which wipes out any potential tension that could inspire any interest in them. (Even their music act is played for cuteness.) With McAdam flattening the drama as if it were a made-for-TV picture, the actors look like they're trying out for a sitcom. And none of the actors do anything that you probably haven't seen on an episode of "Friends." McAdam knows how to tell a story but she doesn't yet know how to develop one. In that vein, "Snakes and Ladders" is a romantic comedy without a romantic impulse or comic spark.—Kevin Courrier

ARISTOTLE'S PLOT ★★★

Starring Seputla Sebogohi and Albee Lesotho. Directed and written by Jean-Pierre Bekolo. Produced by Jacques Bidou. A JBA production; no distributor set. Drama. French-language; English subtitles. Not yet rated. Running time: 72 min.

Jean-Pierre Bekolo was invited to make Africa's entry for a British Film Institute series commemorating the centenary of cinema, and this French/Zimbabwean coproduction is the result. Rather than make a straightforward documentary, Bekolo opts for a postmodern hybrid of satire and fantasy that evokes Jean-Luc Godard. "Aristotle's Plot" is an often puzzling, sometimes entertaining and occasionally delightful film, but moviegoers might find a knowledge of African cinema necessary.

The story: A group of trash-talking, would-be gangsters sporting names like Van Damme and Bruce Lee hang out at their local moviehouse. A cineaste tries to enlist them in his cause to replace Hollywood fare with native productions. When they resist, he becomes a kind of vigilante.

SUNDANCE REVIEWS

The film is mostly a series of contradictory ideas about cinema, which Bekolo dramatizes playfully and often satirically. The photography is striking, and the film is challenging, but confusion will reign for all but art-housers.—Craig Vickers

JOE'S SO MEAN TO JOSEPHINE ★★★★

Starring Eric Thal, Sarah Polley and Don McKellar. Directed and written by Peter Wellington. Produced by Susan Cavan. An Alliance production; no distributor set. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 89 min.

Josephine (Sarah Polley), a bright college student, spots Joe (Eric Thal) in a bar one night, and romance follows. Unfortunately, Joe—a surly tough trapped in a life of petty crime and illegal wiretaps—has more than his share of emotional problems. When she tries to break up with him, it's too late; Joe is hooked and refuses to let Josephine go.

The plot sounds like a dreary erotic thriller, but in fact the film is surprisingly heartfelt, spilling over with a sense of promise in the early scenes (told mostly from Josephine's perspective) and bristling with frustration and loneliness as the film moves on (and assumes Joe's point of view). Deservedly, it recently won a Genie for best first feature.

First-time director Peter Wellington is a deft technician—it runs in the family; brother David Wellington made "A Man in Uniform"—but he never permits pyrotechnics to obscure the story or characters. The two leads do some excellent work; in particular, Polley (best known for her work on the PBS series "Road to Avonlea") shows startling range and charisma.—Steve Gravestock

DAY AND DATE: MARCH 28

ALL OVER ME ★★★1/2

Starring Alison Foland, Tara Subkoff, Pat Briggs and Cole Hauser. Directed by Alex Sichel. Written by Sylvia Sichel. Produced by Dolly Hall. A Fine Line release. Drama. Rated R for sexuality and drug use involving teen girls, and for language. Running time: 89 min. The film debuts at Sundance and opens 3/28 NY/LA/SF.

Unlike both "Foxfire" and "The Craft," which depict a group of teenage girls battling against society's strict confines, "All Over Me" explores the more personal, internal struggle two best friends face as their relationship slowly begins to disintegrate. Compelling, gritty and sincere, the Sichel sisters' debut feature melds the rawness of Larry Clark's "Kids" with the angst of the '90s riot grrl scene.

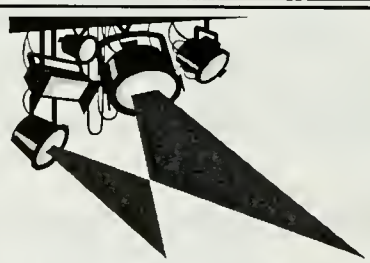
Tara Subkoff and Alison Foland star in Fine Line's "All Over Me."

A stocky wannabe guitar player with hair the color of red-tinted copper, easygoing Claude ("To Die For's" Alison Foland) mostly hangs out in her room with her best friend Ellen ("Freeway's" Tara Subkoff), a petite, mercurial blonde. But as their world becomes larger—Ellen gets a boyfriend ("Higher Learning's" Cole Hauser) and Claude makes friends with a gay rocker (Pat Briggs of the band Psychotica)—the girls change, altering their friendship forever.

With the exception of a cool soundtrack, which features Babes in Toyland, Patti Smith and Ani DiFranco, "All Over Me" often seems like a documentary due to its realistic portrayal of the girls' friendship. They might fight one moment and hug the next, but they always speak the truth to each other—hard as that might sometimes be. Even when Claude betrays Ellen, she tells her immediately.

Not always lovable or even sympathetic, "All Over Me's" characters are human, easy to wound and quick to attack. Foland and Subkoff are naturals, registering a mass of conflicting emotions at once—desire, love, revulsion, fear. "All Over Me" reveals the adolescence most everyone went through (or witnessed) but no one talks about.—Lea Russo

DEEPER 3D



DEEP VISION 3-D

Red - Blue / Green
Anaglyph Glasses

- LOW PRICES,
FAST SERVICE
- 24 HR HOTLINE

DEEP VISION 3-D
P.O. BOX 38386
HOLLYWOOD, CA 90038
213-465-5819

Response No. 58

ENTERTAINMENT INSURANCE
FOR
THEATRES
•
CONCESSIONAIRES
•
PRODUCERS

MOC
MAROEVICH O'SHEA & COGHLAN
INSURANCE BROKERS
425 MARKET STREET, 10TH FLOOR
SAN FRANCISCO, CA 94105

(800)951-0600
(415)957-0600
FAX(415)957-0577
HTTP://WWW.MAROEVICH.COM

Response No. 70

NOW PREMIERING:

CPI Cinema Products International

Your 1st Choice for Booth Supplies, Equipment, Computer Ticketing and Accessories!

For detailed product information and prices, contact:
Ron Purtee, President or Wayne Hemmerly, Account Executive

P.O. Box 198811 • 1015 5th Avenue North • Nashville, TN 37219
615-248-0771 • FAX 615-248-2725 • Toll Free: 800-891-1031 • FAX 888-891-0554

Response No. 170

PRESENTING THE FANTASTIC 4

XR171 ANTI-STATIC
non-yellowing
pearlescent surface

XRL LENTICULAR
prevents cross reflection of light
Cotton backing prevents bellying on curved screens

HILUX silver surface approved for 3D

MATTE WHITE seamless
heavy gauge vinyl

WHEN QUALITY IS NECESSARY
SELECT ONE OF THESE SPECIALIZED SCREENS

TECHNIKOTE CORP.

Available from your authorized Theatre Equipment Supply Dealer

PROFESSIONAL SCREENS OF SUPERIOR QUALITY

63 Seabring Street, Brooklyn, N. Y. 11231—(718) 624-6429 / Fax: (718) 624-0129

Response No. 68

HURLEY SCREEN

SUPERGLO
A durable pearlescent, smooth surface offers maximum reflectivity & light distribution.

SILVERGLO
A smooth, aluminized surface offering the highest reflectivity for special applications such as 3D.

MW-16
A heavy guage matte white surface offering excellent light distribution, image clarity, and color rendition.

Screen Framing • All Types Available
FAX # (410) 838-8079

Automatiket

Theatre Equipment TEA Association

AUTOMATED HIGH SPEED U/L APPROVED TICKETING EQUIPMENT
Factory Service, the only authorized manufacturer and repair center.

AUTOMATICKET
A Division of Cemcorp

HURLEY SCREEN CORP.
A Subsidiary of Cemcorp

110 Industry Lane - P.O. Box 296
Forest Hill, MD 21050
410-838-0036 • 410-879-3022 • 410-879-6757 • 410-836-9333

Response No. 57

SUNDANCE

JOHN HENRIK CLARKE ★★★1/2

Directed by St. Clair Bourne. Written by Lou Potter. Produced by Kimiko Jackson. A Black Dot Media production; no distributor set. Documentary. Not yet rated. Running time: 90 min.

Wesley Snipes is the narrator and executive producer of this fascinating documentary, subtitled "A Great and Mighty Walk," about pre-eminent African-American historian John Henrik Clarke. Directed with an assured, confident style by veteran documentarian St. Clair Bourne ("Making Do The Right Thing"), the result is not only entertaining but also enlightening.

Now in his 80th year and blind, Clarke provides a crash course in African history from ancient Egypt on. Drawing from his personal experiences, he adds anecdote to objective history; Clarke was a participant in the Harlem Renaissance and knew the likes of Martin Luther King and Malcolm X. He doesn't shy from criticism: King's passive resistance comes under fire, and the Million Man March draws particularly scathing mention from Clarke.

Boume wisely lets the man talk, inventively orchestrating the film with archival footage. A welcome addition to black history, "John Henrik Clarke: A Great and Mighty Walk" is an intriguing and elucidating mix that's as thoughtful and gracious as its subject.—Craig Vickers

ALL OF THEM WITCHES ★1/2

Starring Susana Zabelata, Alejandro Tommasi and Delia Casanova. Directed by Daniel Gruener. Written by Gabriel Gonzalez Melendez and Daniel Gruener. Produced by Ignacio Sada Madero. A Televicine production; no distributor set. Horror. Spanish-language; English subtitles. Not yet rated. Running time: 100 min.

"All of them witches" is a quotation from Roman Polanski's masterpiece of paranoia and black magic, "Rosemary's Baby," and this film attempt to be a playful yet suspenseful Mexican update. The film opens with Dolores, an attractive young housewife who lives in an apartment, hearing her best friend being murdered. For her own safety, her husband Andres forbids her to investigate. One day, though, she sneaks out to do just that, and before you can say conspiracy Dolores becomes caught in a plot involving slaying and a cult of witchcraft.

The main problem is the narrative: It's often incomprehensible, which makes it hard for an audience to feel suspense. On the plus side, the art direction is stunning; indeed, the film seems more to have been art-directed than written. Also, the music is appropriately moody, and the cinematography is excellent. As a horror film, though, "All of Them Witches" fails, because it baffles rather than frightens.—Craig Vickers

NATIONAL NEWS

DISNEY REVS UP

While many of the studios did well in their third quarter (which ended Sept. 30, 1996), the Walt Disney Co. surprised the Wall Street execs who had predicted the company would increase revenues up to 50 percent. When the reports were totaled, Disney had raised revenues 68 percent, bringing net profit to $354 million, up $133 million from last year. The growth was due in large part to Disney's film and television production arms, which increased 31 percent in operating income, helped by the domestic and international success of movies such as "The Rock," "Phenomenon" and "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." Disney's theme parks and resorts also contributed to the company's growth, rising 16 percent.

Perhaps Disney's fourth quarter earnings are not so surprising, considering that Disney had already beat its record for North American boxoffice before the quarter figures were announced. From 1994 to 1995, Disney was the only company to gross $1 billion in a year from U.S. and Canadian boxoffices. In 1995, Disney beat their 1994 $1 billion record by a day. In 1996, Disney beat their record by five weeks.

Hot on the heels of this success, Disney's vice chairman Roy E. Disney announced plans to build a $77 million, 14-stage studio complex in Manhattan Beach, Calif. Roy Disney's Shamrock Holdings Inc. will team with CFN/Flesch & Neuhauser Llc. development group to form Shamrock Entertainment Investors II Inc. Designed by architect Gary Bastien, who worked with Ronald Flesch of CFN/Flesch & Neuhauser on the CBS Studio Center's 250,000-square foot expansion project, Manhattan Beach Studios will be built on 22 acres of land, bought from TRW Space & Electronics for an undisclosed seven-figure amount. The facilities will include 225,000 square feet for offices, parking, and a commissary; three 25,000-square-foot soundstages, ten 18,000-square-foot sound stages, and one 30,000-square-foot soundstage when it is completed. Beginning construction on the development this July, Shamrock Entertainment Investors plan to be partly operational by the summer of 1998.

"KUNDUN" CONUNDRUM

Despite smooth national planning, Disney may run into expansion problems in China because of the turmoil over Martin Scorsese's "Kundun," a film about the fourteenth Dalai Lama, Tenzingyatso. "Kundun" takes a sympathetic view of Tibet's struggle for independence and of the Dalai Lama, who was exiled in 1951. Officials at the China Film Bureau professed their strong opposition to the making of the film, believing that it would exalt the Dalai Lama and consequently disrupt national affairs. Chinese officials have threatened that if Disney releases the film, the government could destroy the company's chances of developing a theme park in China (Disney currently owns over 130 Mickey's Corner stores in China). Despite China's warning, Disney is standing its ground and plans to distribute the film domestically and in the U.K. through its Miramax label. UGA, a French film company, owns the rest of the international rights, which they bought at Cannes last year.

WIRED WORLD

ONLINE FILM INVESTMENT

What started out as an internet game called the "Hollywood Stock Exchange" may turn out to be a golden opportunity for independent filmmakers. Conceived of by former Wall Street stockbroker Max Keiser and Prudential Securities media group managing director Michael Burns, the game (http://www.hsx.com) gives each player $1 million to invest in actors, films, studios, and scripts. Information HSX gains from players, such as development ideas, will be placed in a database that Hollywood execs can access.

But in March, the game will become a real business venture, in which anyone will be able to invest money in an actual film via HSX. For example, Burns plans to find a million investors on the web, charging $40 per person, in order to raise $3 million to make a film. HSX is currently developing a picture called "Atomic Highway," and has plans to produce four others.

While HSX is gearing up for the virtual to reality transition, entertainment company Netter Digital Entertainment Inc. has already posted its public offering on the net via the IPONet World Wide Web site (http://www.zanax.com/iponet). In late October of last year, Netter Digital, producer of TV's "Babylon 5," offered up $5 million of its stock over the web at nine dollars per share.

IT'S TURNER TIME, BUT WHAT'S MY LINE?

After two years as a standalone label, Turner Pictures absorbed into Warner Bros. as part of the mammoth Time Warner/Turner merger just one month before its first picture, "Michael" starring John Travolta and Andie MacDowell, was released. So far, Warner Bros. has committed to release a number of Turner Pictures projects, among them, "Edwards and Hunt: The First American Road Trip," starring Chris Farley and Matthew Perry; "Fallen" featuring Denzel Washington; and "City of Angels," which headlines Meg Ryan and Nicolas Cage. Four other Turner projects are also likely to be picked up by Warner. Turner president of production Amy Pascal will return to Columbia Pictures as president of that studio early next year.

Time Warner has certainly seen some changes in the last couple of months. In addition to the absorption of Turner Pictures, New Line, a sister company, may be up for sale, and at least 10 potential buyers have signed nondisclosure agreements to view its financials. At the same time, Warner may consider a joint venture with the right company or they might sell their majority stake of the studio's shares. Despite a not-so-healthy year ("The Long Kiss Goodnight," "Last Man Standing"), New Line is not in a precarious position, and Warner may not sell if the price and buyers aren't right. Indeed, things may be picking up for New Line, as Jim Carrey, who has already made millions for the company, signed a deal to star in the remake of 1947's "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty," which originally starred Danny Kaye and Virginia Mayo. Babaloo Mandell and Lowell Ganz ("City Slickers") are set to write the comedy.

HOLIDAY B.O. SEES SPOTS

The eighth film in the franchise, Paramount's "Star Trek: First Contact" took first place over the weekend of November 23, 1996 with an estimated $30.5 million at the boxoffice, up $7.4 million from 1994's "Star Trek: Generations," which grossed $23.1 million on its opening weekend. The film broke the series record, as Star Trek fans showed their loyalty in boxoffice dollars.

Even a successful series can't beat a remake of a children's classic on a holiday weekend. Over Thanksgiving, Buena Vista's live-action re-creation of the 1961 cartoon "101 Dalmatians" broke the $43 million 1989 record set by Universal's "Back to the Future II" with a gross of $46 million in five days. On the art-house front, Fine Line's "Shine" dominated over Thanksgiving, taking in $156,673, followed by Miramax's "Swingers" at $86,928. But a boxoffice plunge one week later (led by the disappointing opening of the Stallone disaster flick "Daylight" which grabbed a measely $10 million on over 2,000 screens) left the ultimate status of the holiday play period in doubt.

SAG AFTRA MERGER EMERGING

There may be a single national actors union if the proposed merger between SAG and AFTRA is completed. In a meeting between boards of directors for both unions, a new constitution and a five-year budget were approved, though some SAG execs denounced the plan by walking out. The merger will require $50 million to operate in its first year, a cost that will force the organization to substantially increase dues. The combined 120,000 members can expect their dues to rise to a $200 a year minimum (up from $85) and $2,400 maximum (up from SAG's $2,260 and AFTRA's $1,585 L.A. rate and $1,650 N.Y. rate) based on income. The new union would also require a percentage of members' profits—1.3 percent of $100,000 annually, and 0.3 percent over $100,000 up to $400,000 annually. The dues structure would most affect low-income members who will face a 135 percent increase. For the merger to transpire, 60 percent of combined membership of each union must vote for it.

EXHIBITION BRIEFINGS

UATC TOPPER BLAIR RESIGNS

Stewart Blair has resigned as the chairman, CEO and president and as a member of the Board of Directors of United Artists Theatre Circuit Inc., effective immediately, the company announced. Management of the company will be overseen by an operating committee of senior management and members of the Board of Directors until Blair's replacement has been selected. The reason for Blair's departure was not revealed.

MANN TO OPEN 76 NEW SCREENS BY THE END OF 1997

Mann Theatres has announced plans to open 76 new screens in seven locations over the course of 1997, which will increase the circuit's screen count to 475 in 73 locations. Scheduled to open this spring is Mann's largest facility to date—a 16-screen megaplex in southeast Denver. Other new theatres and screen expansions are planned in several northern and southern California cities. All auditoriums in the new complexes will be built to THX specifications and will feature multi-channel digital stereo sound and giant curved screens.

WEHRENBERG EXPANDS ST. CHARLES 10 TO A 22-PLEX

Wehrenberg Theatres will add 12 screens to its existing St. Charles 10 Cine, located in St. Charles, Mo. The 22-plex is scheduled for completion in the fall of 1997. The project is part of an aggressive building plan in the works for St. Louis-based Wehrenberg, which currently has 252 screens in Missouri, Illinois and Arizona and recently celebrated its 90th anniversary.

HOORAY FOR CINEMA HOLLYWOOD: NEW COMPANY BUILDS SIX-PLEX

Cinema Hollywood LLC, a new Bloomfield Hills, Mich.-based company, has finalized plans to construct a six-plex in Birch Run, Mich. All auditoriums will have stadium seating, high-backed rocker seats, extra-wide row spacing and digital sound. The company plans to expand the theatre to 10 or more screens in the future.

MARCUS BUILDS 12-PLEX IN WISCONSIN

Marcus Theatres Corp. will be building a 45,000-square-foot 12-screen theatre in Kenosha, Wis., that will have seating for more than 2,500 people. The state-of-the-art facility will offer stadium seating, THX-certified auditoriums and digital sound. The Kenosha theatre, due to open in mid-'97, will be part of a 100-acre retail center currently being constructed.

TORU OKUYAMA, TONY MANNE, SHAW ORGANIZATION HONORED AT CINEASIA

After 72 years in exhibition and distribution, the Shaw Organization was chosen to receive CineAsia's 1997 Exhibitor of the Year Award. The pioneer company was founded in 1924 by two brothers, the late Tan Sri Runme Shaw and Sir Run Run Shaw, who built Asia's largest studio and ran a chain of over 200 theatres, covering territory from Singapore and Malaysia to Hong Kong.

Under the current management team—Vee Meng Shaw, Harold Shaw, and Vee King Shaw—the Shaw Organization instituted the first multiplex in Singapore, and in the '80s built a 22-story complex housing retail stores, restaurants, offices and an eight-screen theatre. The company has several new projects under construction, including two single-screen cinemas.

President and CEO of Shochiku Company Unlimited since 1991, Toru Okuyama is the recipient of CineAsia's 1997 Lifetime Achievement Award. Okuyama began working for Shochiku in 1964, after obtaining his degree from the Law Department of Kyoto University. Four years later, he joined the Board of Directors.

Now, after 32 years with Japan's oldest motion picture company, Okuyama oversees distribution, the operation of Shochiku's 70 theatres, its amusement park (Kamakura), satellite TV channels, and home video division. Recently, Okuyama created Shochiku Multiplex Theatres, a company which will develop and operate multiplex theatres.

CineAsia's Distributor of the Year Award goes to Tony Manne, executive vice president of Columbia TriStar Film Distributors International. A veteran of international sales, Manne started working at Columbia in 1963, operating out of the company's various offices in Rio de Janeiro, Rome, Paris, and Lisbon.

Nine years later, Manne decided to create his own distribution company in Brazil and left Columbia. After becoming a partner in New York's JAD Films Inc. and serving as a vice president for United Artists, Manne returned to Columbia in 1981. Since then, he has worked for Columbia as the vice president and supervisor of Europe, Africa, and the Middle East; the executive vice president of international sales; and the executive vice president of distribution.

REGAL REACHES NEW HEIGHTS

Regal Cinemas Inc. has opened the Middleburg Heights Cinema 12 in Middleburg Heights, Ohio. All 12 auditoriums have giant wall-to-wall screens and DTS, Dolby Digital, SDDS, and Dolby surround sound, and selected theatres have stadium seating. Regal's Cafe Del Moro offers an alternative to traditional concessions, with freshly-baked cookies, muffins and soft pretzels, as well as cappuccino, espresso, hot chocolate and tea.

CINEPLEX ADDS TUCSON SCREENS

Cineplex Odeon has announced plans to add eight screens to its 7-plex in Tucson, Ariz.'s Foothills Mall. The 15-plex will also feature a new Cinescape multi-media entertainment center, which will offer the latest in inteactive game technology. The renovated complex is scheduled for completion this summer.

MAGIC JOHNSON ATLANTA OPENING DRAWS 20,000 PATRONS

The newest Magic Johnson Theatre, located in Atlanta, Ga.'s Greenbriar Mall, celebrated its grand opening with $1 movie admissions, a promotion that drew more than 20,000 patrons to the state-of-the-art 12-plex. Opening weekend festivities also included the "Sprite Playground at NBA Jam Session," an interactive basketball-themed family attraction. The 60,000-square-foot complex has a total of 3,200 seats, and each auditorium features stadium seating, oversized rocking chair seats with cupholder armrests, and SDDS sound.

GCC INTRODUCES CARTOON "MATOONAYS"

General Cinema Theatres, in a partnership with the Cartoon Network and Kraft Foods Inc., has kicked off a year-long schedule of cartoon matinees, or "MaTOONays." MaTOONays, which are comprised of 20 minutes of Cartoon Network entertainment, hope to recapture the success of the animated shorts that years ago regularly preceded feature films. The program, which started Jan. 11 in 50 General Cinema theatres throughout the country, shows a different MaTOONay each Saturday morning, followed by a feature-length family-oriented film.

GCC also recently unveiled its new opening trailer, featuring state-of-the-art animation from Digital Domain. It tells the story of "Popcorn Man," who meets his "Pepsi" movie date to see a film that's introduced by a rock band of candy musicians.

NATIONAL AMUSEMENTS' CURTAIN RAISER "USHERS" IN A NEW PROMOTIONAL CHARACTER

National Amusements wowed moviegoers this Christmas season with its elaborate new curtain raiser, which the company claims is the first ever curtain raiser to integrate live-action with animation. The two-minute film celebrates 100 years of cinema and introduces the "National Amusements Usher," a new corporate figure who will be incorporated into future advertising and promotions. The live-action usher is transported through the past century, encountering an antique arcade of turn-of-the-century mutascope movie machines; a 1930s Busby

Berkeley-style refreshment center with dancing hot dogs; a film noir vignette delivering a "no smoking" message; '50s flying saucers; the psychedelic Yellow Submarine; and a futuristic spaceman movie usher.

EDWARDS UNLEASHES 505 DALMATIANS AT METRO POINTE

Edwards Theatres Circuit Inc. had 505 Dalmatians at the opening of its new Metro Pointe Stadium 12 in Orange County, Calif.—that is, five prints of "101 Dalmatians," the largest number of "Dalmatian" prints released to a single theatre complex in the country, according to the circuit. Also featured at the theatre's debut was 12-cent popcorn, music, mimes, caricatures and giveaways. Edwards Metro Pointe, which offers DTS, Dolby Digital and SDDS sound systems, is Orange County's first all stadium-style seating theatre.

ON THE MOVE

Loews Theatres (formerly Sony Theatres) has promoted Travis Reid to president, a post that has been vacant for the past three years. Reid joined Loews five years ago as head film buyer and was promoted to executive vice president in 1995...Wood Dickinson, president and CEO of Dickinson Theatres, announced that Bill Burnett, VP of operations, has been promoted to executive vice president...Chris Hollebone has been named director of operations of Digital Theater Systems' European branch, DTS SA. Hollebone, who has 25 years of experience in the pro-audio field, previously served at TimeLine Vista Inc. as director of European Operations, and worked for 15 years in sales and marketing at Sony Broadcast and Professional Europe...Cherise McVicar has been upped to the position of vice president, national promotions, for Buena Vista Pictures Marketing. She will oversee the development and execution of national promotions for all motion pictures released under the Walt Disney, Touchstone and Hollywood Pictures banners...Mark Ward has been appointed marketing manager for Toronto-based simulation attraction company SimEx. Ward, who will be working out of SimEx's Orlando, Fla. office, will primarily focus on establishing a stronger presence for the company in the United States...Regal Cinemas' COO Greg Dunn announced a restructuring of the circuit's operations department, which includes Northern Region VP Mike Kivett's move to VP of the Southern and Western regions; Director of Marketing Mike Levesque to VP, Northern Region; VP South Leon Hurst to VP of Security and Quality Control; FunScape Operations Supervisor Robin Levesque to FunScape Director of Operations; Assistant Booker Rosemarie Melomo to Director of Film Reporting Systems; and Film Assistant Joel Curnell to Assistant Booker. Regal also reported two new hirings: Phil Zacheretti is the circuit's new Director of Marketing and Publicity, and Fred Buffum takes on the position of District Manager of the Northeast.

Q&A: MUY CALIENTE: CINEMEX BURNS UP MEXICO CITY MARKET

New chain on the block Cinemex is hot, hot, hot. Having already established a strong foothold in one of exhibition's most dynamic new markets, this Mexico City-based circuit has become a major player in its mere 15 months of existence. Boasting 65 screens in seven theatres, with 38 more screens currently under construction, Cinemex is rapidly closing in on Mexico's top circuit, Ramirez, in terms of both attendance and boxoffice. A recent deal with Hoyts Cinemas, under which the Australian-based chain is investing US$22 million for a 35 percent interest in Cinemex, further cemented Cinemex's ambitious plans to build many more state-of-the-art multiplexes in screen-starved Mexico City. BOXOFFICE spoke with Matthew Heyman, Cinemex's 34-year-old co-founder and director of programming & strategic planning, about Cinemex's experiences as a new company on the rise.

BOXOFFICE: How did Cinemex come to be?

HEYMAN: In 1991 I [met Cinemex partners Miguel Angel Davila, director of operations and finance, and Adolfo Fastlicht, director of real estate development] at Harvard Business School. We actually did our business plan on Cinemex. And it won both the business plan awards of Harvard Business School. On April 12, 1993, we finished the business plan and began trying to raise money. It was tough, but by Oct. 8, we had a commitment from J.P. Morgan, who put several million dollars into the company.

BOXOFFICE: And you recently sealed a $22 million deal with Hoyts. How did that come about?

HEYMAN: We had a fair number of theatre chains looking around Mexico, and I think several of them decided that the right move was to do something with us versus doing something alone. And basically Hoyts was the most persistent and seemed to be the most in line with the way the company operated, and we seem to have a good rapport with those guys.

BOXOFFICE: How much input are they going to have into the running of your business?

HEYMAN: They're our largest investor, so clearly they're going to have something to say about things. I think they're going to really be more involved in the way we operate the business through the back office than through the front. I think they're going to provide us a lot of support, and they're going to hopefully expedite the learning curve that we're going up. They do have a thousand screens—they've been through these growing pains before. I'm sure they're going through them even now, because they're growing pretty fast.

BOXOFFICE: What do you think accounts for the sudden interest in the Mexican market?

HEYMAN: [When we were first entering the market in 1994], everyone thought Mexico was going to become a first-world country in the next three or four years. The numbers were extremely high on attendance per screen. The opportunity appeared very large, with a very stable economy. I think now what's happened is Cinemark has a fair number of buildings, and their new builds open very successfully. And ours have pretty much all opened successfully. The numbers we're generating are extremely large, and the interest is very high because of our success.

BOXOFFICE: What is Cinemex's advantage over other circuits looking to enter Mexico?

HEYMAN: I believe that my two Mexican partners are an incredible advantage in this market, because we operate to government, to the real estate community, and to any area that is indigenous to Mexico, like a Mexican company, 100 percent. But to distributors, to the equipment suppliers—we have to buy things out of the U.S.—to all those types of interests, I handle all those, and I operate just like any old gringo you meet in the U.S. We act extremely Mexican, and we are extremely Mexican, but we have all the benefit of the U.S. experience. And I live here and my two partners live here. If somebody needs to see me, they can see me. I don't need to fly down. I am here.

BOXOFFICE: The consensus seems to be that Mexico needs about 3,000 screens.

HEYMAN: That seems to be the consensus. That's about double what [Mexico has], by the way, at this existing time. My view is Mexico City can support a good 600 screens. As far as the whole country supporting 3,000, I'll leave it to my competitors to give you a more cogent reading on that. Our goal basically is to get 350-400 screens in Mexico City.

BOXOFFICE: What differentiates Cinemex from other chains?

HEYMAN: We try not to use the American exhibitors as our benchmark, because we believe that we can do better. In every way. And it's nothing against American exhibition. It's more a matter of the opportunity to really show yourself in a big way. [People think], "When it's dark, [all theatres are] the same place." When you're in a Cinemex, you know you're in a Cinemex. The sound's rockin', we spent a lot of money on our sound, and our real goal is to try and really deliver the goods to whoever comes in, and we have a real customer service focus.

We used to be little Cinemex sneaking up on everybody. Now everybody's watching us. And it's getting harder. When you're number two, it's easier. And by number two, I don't mean in size or anything other than quality. Nobody really kind of recognizes that you're floating around. It's kind of easy. But all of a sudden, when you're viewed now as a big monster who's trying to change things or introduce new stuff and trying to be cutting edge and invoke a whole new philosophy of operation, all of a sudden, all those guys who thought "These are just three guys running around, they don't know anything," all of a sudden, their attitudes change, and they're saying "Hold on, hold on, hold on, we'd better start watching Cinemex!"

EUROVIEWS

European News Notes by Melissa Morrison

LEAD STORY: BUDAPEST'S BOOM

BUDAPEST—Three multiplexes opened within a month of each other in Budapest at the end of 1996, profoundly altering Hungarians' moviegoing habits. On December 12, Cineplex Odeon launched its first overseas cinema, opening the gate for the Toronto-based company's wider development in Europe. The Polas Center 'plex has six screens and Dolby digital sound. Allen Karp, the company's CEO and president, said Hungary was chosen for Cineplex's first European foray because of its strong post-communist economy, stable government and linchpin location as a relatively new market whose potential has yet to be fully plumbed. Hungary is also centrally located to Cineplex's next intended sites: Germany, Austria, Poland, Italy and the Czech Republic. Cineplex Odeon worked in partnership with Hungary's Granit Polas Ltd. and Canada's Trizec Corporation on the venture.

The Polas Center opened hot on the heels of Village Roadshow International's nine-screen Hollywood Multiplex, a collaboration with Hungarian distributor and exhibitor InterCom that reportedly caused Budapest's admissions to rise by 30 percent after its opening. Both multiplexes are part of a stream of Western-style entertainment and commercial ventures in Hungary. Both opened in newly built malls—a recent consumer phenomenon in the country. The Polas Center, for example, is part of a complex that includes an indoor ice rink, a Wild West town, a miniature theme park, and an entertainment complex full of video games and laser shows.

Unlike its fellow multiples, the third theatre, the Koffuth, debuted in the city center. Its owner, local distributor/exhibitor Flamex, plans to add two more screens next year. The Koffuth opened the second week of December. Hungary will soon be seeing even more screens: Village Roadshow announced plans for three more multiplexes within the next two years.

CRASH-LANDING IN LONDON

LONDON—In an unprecedented move, West End theatres will not screen David Cronenberg's "auto"-erotic film "Crash." The decision came as a result of comments by Virginia Bottomley, the government's National Heritage secretary, who has adopted a Bob Dole-like stance calling for cuts in onscreen violence. The Westminster City Council, which covers most of London's West End, responded by invoking the Cinema Act to veto screenings of the film in its jurisdiction. The council, which had requested that three scenes be cut from the film, was unpersuaded by a petition signed by 50 filmmakers, including Mike Leigh, Ken Loach and Bernardo Bertolucci. Right-wing tabloids, including The Daily Mail, aided Bottomley with a campaign criticizing the film, which is chock-a-block with sex scenes, car crashes, and sex scenes in crashed cars.

Columbia TriStar, the film's distributor in the United Kingdom, said at press time it still planned to open the film on 100 screens in January. "Crash," based on the novel by J.G. Ballard and starring Holly Hunter and James Spader, already screened in the city at the London Film Festival Nov. 9. The film was executive produced by British Film Institute chairman Jeremy Thomas through his company Recorded Pictures Co. (It was Thomas who initiated the artists' petition.)

"Crash" has done already done well in Spain, Portugal, Belgium and Canada, although there have been some calls for its ban in Italy. The film has done especially well in France, where it drew a record 700,000 admissions.

SCHLOENDORFF SOUNDS OFF

BERLIN—Eighteen years after "The Tin Drum" won Germany its first foreign film Oscar since 1927, director Volker Schloendorff is back in the news—this time as an advocate of pan-European production to loosen Hollywood's grip on world cinema. Schloendorff, head of Germany's Babelsberg studio for the last five years, has turned up in high-profile periodicals The International Herald Tribune and The Economist railing against Europe's failure to make films of wide appeal.

"The French make films that are so Frenchie-Frenchie French that nobody in Germany wants to see them anymore," he was quoted as saying in the Nov. 30, 1996, issue of The Economist. He also bemoaned his country's inability to make a significant artwork about Germany's reunification following nearly 50 years of the Iron Curtain. "Here we are, seven years after the wall came down, and we still do not have a book or a movie or even a television series that has captured the emotional turmoil of the event that had the greatest impact on Europe since the war. Can you imagine if in 1952 there had still been no great book or film produced about World War II?" Schloendorff blames a lack of good scripts and a German tendency to block out the memories of their past for the lack of a worthy reunification film to appear.

Cynics might ask Schloendorff to practice what he preaches. His latest offering, "The Ogre," met with scathing reviews at the 1996 Venice Film Festival, where it premiered.

FOR YOUR CONSIDERATION...

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has what seems to be an especially rich choice of 40 films from which to choose its five nominees for the best foreign-language film of 1996.

From the Czech Republic, Jan Sverak's "Kolya" is a comedy-drama about a confirmed bachelor who reluctantly takes in a 6-year-old Russian boy on the eve of Czechoslovakia's Velvet Revolution. "Kolya" has been a runaway success in its homeland, one whose crowd-pleasing numbers have brought hope to the flagging post-communist domestic industry. Although barely in his 30s, Sverak is no stranger to the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion: his 1991 film "Elementary School" was nominated for an Oscar.

Israel's "Saint Clara," a satire, has also been credited with reviving boxoffice at home. The story of a 13-year-old clairvoyant in one of Israel's prefab high-rise neighborhoods was made by Ari Folman and Ori Sivan. France's entry, Patrice Leconte's 18th-century comedy of manners "Ridicule," started its screen life with a prominent debut–it was chosen to open the 1996 Cannes Film Festival—and has lived up to its hype with positive reviews all over the world. "Ridicule" has already received limited release in Europe and America.

Srdjan Dragojevic's "Pretty Village, Pretty Flame" from Serbia was described by the Washington Post as "one of the most significant cultural developments in the Balkans" since the recent war because its Serb director depicts Serbs killing Muslims, and is "more or less objective." "In Full Gallop," Krzystof Zanussi's remembrance of his childhood in Stalinist Poland, is complete with reflective bookends in which the esteemed director himself addresses the audience while surrounded by his cast. And the nominees are...?

Q&A: MEDIA II's JACQUES DELMOLY

As Europe looks toward unification and a single monetary system, Europe's film industry hopes there will be similar unity between the various European production and distribution entities, which have been losing more and more European market share to U.S. product. France's Jacques Delmoly is head of the EEC's Media II, a program launched in 1996 to help support the development of films with cross-border appeal and to facilitate their distribution outside their home countries. He spoke to BOXOFFICE about the EEC's plans for pooling resources and blending talents via Media II.

BOXOFFICE: What kind of filmmakers is Media II aiming at?

JACQUES DELMOLY: This program is for the benefit of European professionals—producers, distributors and so on. The most important rule is to make different programs and films that circulate in all of Europe. Today, there is a tiny proportion of [European product] that circulates in all Europe.

BOXOFFICE: Why is that?

DELMOLY: The absence of a global strategy for the distribution of movies. Why the absence of a global strategy? Because there is no major company in Europe, except maybe PolyGram. We will fund the expenses for the release of the films in Europe between several distributors. And we will be encouraging the [original projects]. We don't intervene at all in the filmmaking. We just help with the development, the production and the distribution. We just focus on the management, and the business planning, financing, and the [use of] new technologies.

BOXOFFICE: Besides broader distribution, what will be some other results of the union?

DELMOLY: Europe produces as many movies as Hollywood, but there is a problem of showing them. So this is why we want to support and encourage the promotion and the exhibition of the films. This is the reason why we want to grant money to theatres that commit themselves to [exhibiting] a certain proportion of European movies. So the final result is to have more European movies which can find an audience— and, at the end of the chain, more movies which are distributed across Europe.

BOXOFFICE: How will you judge whether a subject has transnational appeal in order to fund it?

DELMOLY: We will have technical assistance through external organizations made up of experts to screen the projects. The film may in fact be [focused on] quite a national subject. For instance, we supported Lars von Trier's "Breaking the Waves" through the development support scheme. This film is quite a local national subject, about a very typical community in Scotland. [The movie had] good international success.

BOXOFFICE: How much of an impetus for Media II's goals is Europe's desire to counter the influence of Hollywood on the continent?

DELMOLY: Well, Hollywood is the kind of model everybody wants to copy, but I'm not sure this is a good model for Europe. There is the problem of culture. As you know, even in Hollywood you have the indies on one part and the studio system on the other, and most of the independent movies don't make a lot of money, especially compared with a studio production. So we don't try to make global projects as global productions as such. Every country must have its own inspiration.

CONTACT MELISSA MORRISON IN CARE OF THE PRAGUE POST AT: NA PORICI 12, 115 30 PRAGUE 1, CZECH REPUBLIC
email: tomelis@bohem-net.cz

In 1977 MUVICO Theaters will open a new 20 screen complex with an IMAX 3D PSE in Orlando, Florida. Currently we are recruiting a

MANAGING DIRECTOR

The successful candidate will play a major leadership role in the start-up effort and will assume full general management responsibility for the theater once it is open. As Managing Director your superb people skills mean that your staff will follow your lead in delivering an entertainment experience that embraces the finest in showmanship and hospitality.

The Managing Director must have a solid operations background in the theater industry, excellent verbal and written communication skills and are looking to put your career on a new trajectory in a young, dynamic environment. As Managing Director within an ever-expanding organization, travel and promotion opportunities make this a unique career option. If this challenge excites you please send your resume and salary expectations in confidence to:

Deane Hashemi
MUVICO THEATERS, INC.
3101 N. Federal Highway, 6th Floor
Fort Lauderdale, FL 33306
No telephone calls please.

CY YOUNG
INDUSTRIES, INC.

"THE NAME BEHIND THE PRODUCT"

ON-SITE RE-UPHOLSTERY & CUP HOLDER INSTALLATION

WE INSTALL WHILE YOUR FACILITY SLEEPS...

CY YOUNG
CUPHOLDER ARMRESTS

Also Providing
- New Seat and Back Covers
- Molded Foam
- Child's Booster Bags
- Concession Trays
- Popcorn Bag Holders

1-800-729-2610

Response No. 55

NORTHERN EXPOSURE

Canadian News Notes by Shlomo Schwartzberg

LEAD STORY: FAMOUS PLAYERS HITS 500 SCREENS

Famous Players opened its 500th Canadian screen recently with a new eight-plex in Burlington, Ontario. The latest screen additions, which include a four-screen expansion to Famous' Sarnia, Ontario multiplex and a new eight-plex in Moncton, New Brunswick, are part of the company's aggressive growth plan, which will see the chain hit 750 screens over the next two to three years, according to Roger Harris, vice president of marketing for Famous Players. "We've still got a way to go," says Harris.

The Moncton Famous Players Eight multiplex has some unique features, including a bilingual program, with at least one screen devoted to showing films in French for Moncton's sizeable Francophone community. All the auditoriums in Moncton have curved screens with wall-to-wall picture and DTS sound. Four cinemas also include surround sound. Audex Infrared systems for the hearing impaired are also in place. And for the first time, Famous will offer a Pizza Hut operation inside one of its theatres. The 2,040 seat Famous Players Eight will be the largest theatre in Moncton.

Famous also announced it will maintain its Paramount theatre, which will now show second-run movies at a low admission price of C$2 (US$1.50).

GENIE AWARDEES' WISHES GRANTED

David Cronenberg's controversial "Crash," which has yet to open in the States, won five awards at Canada's Genie ceremonies, including Best Adapted Screenplay and Best Director for Cronenberg. But the Best Picture award went to John Greyson's "Lilies," an artfully directed drama about a gay love triangle in 1912 Quebec, which also won three other technical awards.

Unlike in other years, no one film dominated the ceremonies, though Robert Lepage's "Le Polygraphe," the follow-up to his debut film "Le Confessional," which won the Best Picture Genie in 1995, was completely shut out of the awards, despite multiple nominations. The fact that it was shown without English subtitles to Genie voters may have had something to do with that.

David Wellington's acclaimed adaptation of the Stratford production of Eugene O'Neill's "Long Day's Journey Into Night" swept all the acting awards with William Hutt (Best Actor), Martha Henry (Best Actress), Martha Burns (Best Supporting Actress) and Peter Donaldson (Best Supporting Actor) going home triumphant.

Other winners at the Genies included Pierre Gang's debut film "Sous-Sol," which won Best Original Screenplay. It's also Canada's submission to the Best Foreign language Oscar category. Bruce McDonald's "Hard Core Logo," which opens stateside in the spring, won just one award for Best Original Song for "Who The Hell Do You Think You Are?" And "Crash" also copped The Golden Reel award for highest-grossing Canadian film. It's picked up more than US$1 million at the Canadian boxoffice since its early October opening.

GOVERNMENT SET TO REJECT POLYGRAM'S BID TO DISTRIBUTE IN CANADA

The Canadian government is set to reject Netherlands-based Polygram Filmed Entertainment's bid to distribute its films directly in Canada. Unnamed government sources told Canadian newspapers that the deal would be rejected, even though Polygram promised to invest almost US$15 million in Canadian productions if they were allowed to distribute their films, a Hollywood studios are currently allowed to do i Canada. (Currently, Hollywood studios, whic make up 84 percent of the Canadian theatrical film distribution market, are allowed to release film directly in Canada, while independent film dis tributors are not.)

Darryl Iwai, president of Polygram, repor tedly refused to confirm the government rejec tion, claiming that talks were ongoing, thoug he did say that the government was sending him mixed signals regarding the proposal. A official government announcement should b forthcoming.

TELEFILM GAINS ALLIES IN BATTLE TO COMPETE WITH HOLLYWOOD FILMS

Canada's largest film funding body, Telefilm Canada, has joined forces with four othe English-speaking film agencies to fight U.S dominance of their movie screens.

The agencies, representing Canada, the Unite Kingdom, Ireland, Australia and New Zealand plan to finance eight to 12 films a year that ca be co-produced between two or more of th countries. Its initial fund is set at US$500,000 Bill House, Telefilm's director of operations for the funding body' Toronto office, said about the deal, "It's been a long time i negotiating." The English Language Cinema Plan, House con tinued, will produce "development money to further specific co productions." And while it's difficult to convince one country to help fund another country's film production, says House, th ELCP will ensure that "a couple of projects per year will b furthered in consort with one or two countries. It's an interestin initiative."

NEW BOOK CITES CANADIAN CONNECTIONS IN FILM

Question: What do "Roxanne," "Nowhere to Hide" and "The Beast from 20,000 Fathoms" have in common?

Answer: They all have a Canadian connection of some sort and they all pop up as entries in "Canada and Canadians i Feature Films: A Filmography—1928-1996," which cross-ref erences more than 600 films that are either Canadian, filmed i Canada or have characters, actors or references that ar Canadian. It's arguably the most comprehensive Canadian guid of its sort, and one that Ian K. Easterbook, who compiled th book with Susan Waterman MacLean, considers indispensable to researchers and local film buffs.

He points out, however, that the compendium, which wa released by the Canadian Film Project and the University o Guelph, is careful to avoid any opinions on the quality of th selections listed in the book. "This [book] identifies the films Someone else can make the judgment calls."

DO YOU HAVE AN EXHIBITION-RELATED NEWS ITEM ABOUT THE CANADIAN MARKET? CONTACT SHLOMO SCHWARTZBERG IN CARE OF OUR CANADIAN NEWS BUREAU AT: 416-638-6402

Boxoffice Magazine presents

MovieFone's Moviegoer Activity Report

For the Month of November 1996

MovieFone® (777-FILM®) and its sister service, MovieLink® Online, are now the single largest source of movie showtime information in the country, providing information to over 12 million moviegoers each month. The following information represents the most requested theatres and exhibitors on MovieFone.

Top 10 Exhibitors & Theatres

Most Requested Exhibitors

Rank	Exhibitor	Total Requests	Last Month's Rank
1	United Artists	679,374	1
2	Sony	574,536	3
3	AMC	562,308	4
4	Cineplex Odeon	541,253	2
5	General Cinema	348,771	5
6	Century	175,130	6
7	National Amusements	134,416	9
8	Cinemark	121,619	8
9	CinAmerica	114,978	7
10	City Cinemas	108,513	15

Most Requested Theatres

Rank	Market	Theatre	Total Requests	Last Month's Rank
1	NY	Sony Lincoln Square	58,373	1
2	BO	Sony Cheri	39,779	4
3	LA	AMC Century 14	39,310	2
4	NY	CO Chelsea	39,276	5
5	NY	Sony 84th St. Sixplex	31,639	22
6	NY	Sony Orpheum	31,628	3
7	NY	Sony Village 7	28,314	7
8	PH	UA Cheltenham	28,069	21
9	NY	CityCin Village East	27,483	14
10	PH	UA Sameric	26,964	29

Most Requested Theatres Per Screen

Total Requests	Rank	Theatre (# screens)	Total Requests	Last Month's Rank
New York	1	CityCin 86th St. East (2)	19,808	38
1,148,140	2	CO Ziegfeld (1)	10,792	1
	3	Embassy (1)	8,118	49
Los Angeles	1	GCC Avco (3)	17,520	5
563,191	2	Pacific Cinerama Dome (1)	5,513	9
	3	CinAm Festival Westwood (1)	4,598	6
Dallas	1	GCC Northpark 1 & 2 (2)	4,156	5
466,693	2	AMC Forum (6)	11,388	3
	3	AMC Highland Pk Village (4)	7,501	1
San Francisco	1	Blm Regency I (1)	5,845	3
293,529	2	UA Stonestown Twin (2)	10,359	1
	3	UA Coronet (1)	4,529	7
Philadelphia	1	UA Sameric (4)	25,365	1
272,535	2	UA Cheltenham (8)	28,069	4
	3	UA 69th Street (9)	26,964	7
Miami	1	GCC Riviera (4)	8,227	1
264,753	2	Cobb Miami Lakes (10)	17,685	6
	3	AMC Kendall T & C (10)	17,564	5
Boston	1	Sony Cheri (4)	39,779	2
244,367	2	NA Circle Cinema (7)	22,779	3
	3	Sony Janus (1)	3,142	5
Chicago	1	CO Biograph (3)	9,056	2
224,885	2	CO Broadway (1)	2,621	8
	3	Sony Esquire (6)	12,674	3
Toronto	1	Famous Eglinton (1)	3,500	2
148,203	2	Famous Uptown (3)	8,387	1
	3	Famous Centerpoint (3)	6,154	4
Phoenix	1	Hark Christown (5)	5,564	2
143,021	2	Hark Cine Capri (1)	1,041	1
	3	AMC Lakes (6)	6,011	8
Houston	1	CO Spectrum (9)	10,505	3
133,990	2	CO River Oaks Plaza (12)	11,196	2
	3	Landmk Greenway (3)	2,750	4
San Diego	1	CinAm Cinema 21 (1)	2,494	1
114,358	2	Pacific Clairemont (2)	1,935	25
	3	Pacific Sweetwater (6)	3,569	15

Total Requests	Rank	Theatre (# screens)	Total Requests	Last Month's Rank
Atlanta	1	AMC Galleria (8)	3,564	1
84,630	2	UA Midtown Cinemas (8)	3,286	4
	3	UA Southlake (8)	3,152	10
Kansas City	1	Dksn Glenwood (4)	5,809	1
80,742	2	AMC Oak Park (6)	5,588	13
	3	Dksn Plaza (3)	2,134	5
Seattle	1	CO Northgate (1)	1,313	6
70,668	2	Landmk Broadway Mkt (4)	3,881	11
	3	Landmk Neptune (1)	771	4
Minneapolis	1	UA St. Anthony Main (5)	3,048	3
64,064	2	CO Knollwood (4)	2,302	11
	3	GCC Shelard Park (5)	2,510	9
Cleveland	1	GCC Ridge Park Square (8)	7,383	3
63,258	2	Sony Cedar (2)	1,573	1
	3	Regal Severance (8)	5,709	7
Denver	1	UA Continental (1)	2,872	1
55,375	2	AMC Colorado Plaza (6)	4,730	4
	3	UA Cooper Arvada (6)	3,555	7
Las Vegas	1	Century Las Vegas D-I (6)	5,851	12
52,783	2	Century Redrock (11)	7,749	8
	3	Century Rancho (16)	11,090	2
Sacramento	1	Century Century 21 (2)	4,286	1
44,344	2	UA Laguna Village (12)	4,850	26
	3	Century Cinedome Sacr. (9)	6,066	3
Detroit	1	Star Taylor (10)	3,719	2
40,548	2	Star Lincoln Park (8)	2,406	1
	3	AMC Abbey (8)	1,995	14
Washington, DC	1	CO Uptown (1)	1,027	1
26,211	2	CO Embassy (1)	240	7
	3	AMC Courthouse (8)	1,618	3
Cincinnati	1	SupSav Forest Fair Mall (8)	6,540	7
24,463	2	SupSav Bigg's Center (8)	4,063	12
	3	NA Tri County Cinemas (5)	970	5
Tampa	1	Cobb Northdale Court (6)	2,596	1
23,702	2	Fun-Lan D-I (3)	1,006	3
	3	Carmike University Collection (6)	1,679	5

Top 3 Actively* Requested Theatres:

1. CO Worldwide New York, NY
2. Sony Lincoln Sq. New York, NY
3. CO Chelsea Cinemas New York, NY

*Caller specifically requested theatre

Key to Exhibitors

AMC	AMC Theatres, Inc	CityCin	City Cinemas	General	General Theatres	Muvico	Muvico Theatres
Act III	Act III Theatres	CO	Cineplex Odeon Corp.	Hark	Harkins Theatres	Pacific	Pacific Theatres
Blm	Blumenfeld Theatres	Cobb	Cobb Theatres	Hollywood	Hollywood Theatres	Regal	Regal Cinemas
Carmike	Carmike Cinemas, Inc	Dksn	Dickinson Theatres	Landmk	Landmark Theatre Corp	Sony	Sony Theatres
Century	Century Theatres	Famous	Famous Players	Mann MN	Mann Minneapolis	Star	Loews-Star Theatres
CinAm	CinAmerica Theatres, LP	GCC	General Cinema Theatres	Mel	Metropolitan Theatres Corp	SupSav	Super Saver Cinemas
						UA	United Artists Theatre Circuit

777-FILM

BOXOFFICE

	November	December	January	FEBRUARY (Current)
Buena Vista (818) 567-5000 (212) 593-8900	Ransom, 11/8, Thr, R, 121 mins., SR, SR-D, SDDS; Flat. Mel Gibson, Rene Russo, Gary Sinise, Lili Taylor. Dir: Ron Howard. 101 Dalmatians, 11/27, Live Act Com, G, 103 mins., SR, SR-D, SDDS Anamorphic. Glenn Close, Jeff Daniels. Dir: Stephen Herek. The War at Home, 11/22 ltd., Dra, R, 125 min., SR, SR-D, Anamorphic. Emilio Estevez, Martin Sheen, Kathy Bates. Dir: Emilio Estevez.	The Preacher's Wife, 12/13, Rom/Com, PG, 124 mins., SR, SR-D, SDDS, Flat. Denzel Washington, Whitney Houston, Gregory Hines. Dir: Penny Marshall. Evita, 12/25 NY,LA, 1/11/97 wide, Mus./Drama, 130 mins., PG-13, SR, SR-D, SDDS, Anamorphic. Madonna, Antonio Banderas, Jonathan Pryce. Dir. Alan Parker.	Metro, 1/17, Dra, R, SR, SR-D, SDDS, Anamorphic. Eddie Murphy, Carmen Ejogo, Michael Rapaport. Dir: Thomas Carter. The Shadow Conspiracy, Dra, R. Charlie Sheen. Dir: George P. Cosmatos. 1/31 Pretontaine, Dra, PG-13. Jared Leto, Amy Locane. Dir: Steve James.	That Dam Cat, 2/14, PG, Flat. Christina Ricci, Doug E. Doug, Dyan Cannon. Dir: Robert Spiers. Grosse Pointe Blank, 2/21, Com, R. John Cusack, Minnie Driver, Dan Aykroyd, Joan Cusack. Dir: George Armitage.
Columbia (310) 280-8000 (212) 833-8500		Ghosts of Mississippi, 12/20 ltd, 1/3 exp., Dra. 123 min., PG-13, Dolby A, Sr, SDDS, Flat. Alec Baldwin. Dir: Rob Reiner. Hamlet, 12/25 ltd, 1/24 exp. Dra, PG-13, Dolby A, 242 mins.Dir/Star: Kenneth Branagh. Some Mother's Son, 12/26 ltd., SR, Flat Dra, R, 112 min.	People Vs. Larry Flynt, 12/27 ltd, 1/10 exp, Dra, R, 130 min. Dolby A, SR, SDDS, Scope. Woody Harrelson, Courtney Love. Dir: Milos Forman.	Absolute Power, 2/7, Act/Thr, Dolby A & SR SDDS. Anamorphic. Clint Eastwood, Gene Hackman, Scott Glenn, Ed Harris, Judy Da- Dir: Clint Eastwood. Fools Rush In, 2/14, Rom/Com, Dolby A, S SDDS, Flat. Matthew Perry, Salma Hayek, John Tenney. Dir: Andy Tennant. Booty Call, 2/26, Com. Jamie Foxx, Vivica Fox. Dir: Jeff Pollack.
MGM/UA (310) 449-3000 (212) 708-0300	Larger Than Life, 11/1, Com, PG, 93 min, Flat, Dolby A, DTS. Bill Murray, Janeane Garofalo, Linda Fiorentino, Keith David, Matthew McConaughey. Dir: Howard Franklin		Turbulence, 1/31, Act/Dra. Ray Liotta, Lauren Holly, Hector Elizondo. Dir: Robert Butler.	Touch, Dra. Tom Arnold, Bridget Fonda, Christopher Walken, Gina Gershon, Janear Garofalo.Dir: Paul Schrader.
Miramax (212) 941-3800 (213) 845-4200	The English Patient, 11/15, ltd., 11/22 wide, Dra. Ralph Fiennes, Juliette Binoche. Dir: Anthony Minghella. Sling Blade, 11/22, 12/13 exp. Dra, R, Dolby SR, Flat, 140 min. Dir/Star: Billy Bob Thornton. Ridicule, 11/27, Dra, 102 min. Fanny Ardant. Dir: Patrice Leconte.	Everyone Says I Love You, 11/1, Mus, R, Dolby A SR, Flat, 107 min. Dir: Woody Allen Marvin's Room, 12/18, R, Dolby SR, Flat,93 min. Meryl Streep, Diane Keaton, Leonardo DiCaprio. Dir: Jerry Zaks. Scream, 12/20, Hor/Com. Drew Barrymore, Courteney Cox, David Arquette. Dir: Wes Craven.	Citizen Ruth, 12/13 ltd, 1/1exp, Com, R, Dolby SR, Flat, 102 min. Laura Dern, Swoosie Kurtz. Dir: Alexander Payne. Albino Alligator, 12/13 ltd, 1/17 exp, Dra, R, Scope, 96 min. Dir: Kevin Spacey Kolya,1/24, Dra, R, Dolby A, Flat, 111 min. Zdenek Szerak Dir. Jan Szerak The Substance of Fire, 12/6 ltd, 1/10 exp, Dra, R, Dolby SR, Flat, 101 min. Sarah Jessica Parker. Dir Daniel Sullivan	Nightwatch (remake), 2/14, Dra. Nick Nolte Ewan McGregor. Dir: Ole Bornedal. Cosi, 2/21. Toni Collette, Barry otto. Ben Mendlesohn. Dir Mark Joffe.
New Line (310) 854-5811 (212) 649-4900	Set It Off, 11/6, Dra, R, Flat, Dolby SR & SRD, SDDS. Jada Pinkett, Queen Latifah, Vivica Fox, Kimberly Elise. Dir. F. Gary Gray	Michael, 12/25, Rom/Com,PG. SR, SR-D, SDDS, Flat. John Travolta, Andie MacDowell, William Hurt. Dir: Nora Ephron. In Love and War, 12/25 ltd, 1/24/97 wide, Rom/Dra, PG-13. SR, SR-D, SDDS, Anamorphic. Sandra Bullock, Chris O'Donnell. Dir: Richard Attenborough.	Jackie Chan's First Strike 1/10, Act, PG-13. SR, SR-D, SDDS, Anamporphic. Jackie Chan. Dir. Samo Hung.	Love Jones, R. SR, SR-D, SDDS, Flat. Lar Tate, Nia Long. Trial and Error, 2/14, Com, PG-13. Anam phic. Michael Richards, Jeff Daniels. Dir: J athan Lynn. Dangerous Ground, 4/18, Act/Dra., R, SR SDDS, Flat. Elizabeth Hurley, Ice Cube. Dir Darrell James Roodt
Paramount (213) 956-5000 (212) 373-7000	Dear God, 11/8, Com. Greg Kinnear, Laurie Metcalf, Hector Elizondo, Tim Conway Dir. Garry Marshall. Star Trek: First Contact, 11/22, SF. Patrick Stewart, Brent Spiner, Jonathan Frakes, LeVar Burton, Michael Dorn. Dir: Jonathan Frakes.	Beavis and Butt-Head Do America,12/20, Ani. Voices. Mike Judge. Dir: Mike Judge. Night Falls on Manhattan, 12/20 NY, LA, Dra. Andy Garcia, Richard Dreyfuss. Dir: Sidney Lumet.. The Evening Star, 12/25 ltd, Dra, PG-13 Shirley MacLaine, Bill Paxton, Juliette Lewis, Ben Johnson. Dir: Robert Harling.	Mother, 12/25 NY,LA, Com. Rob Morrow, Debbie Reynolds. Dir/Star. Albert Brooks. The Relic, 1/17, Thr, R. Penelope Ann Miller, Tom Sizemore, Linda Hunt. Dir: Peter Hyams.	Howard Stern's Private Parts, 2/14, Com, Howard Stern, Robin Quivers, Fred Norris, M McCormack. Dir: Betty Thomas. Kiss the Girls, Sus. Morgan Freeman, Ash Judd, Richard Timothy Jones, Cary Elwes. Dir: Gary Fleder.
TriStar (310) 280-8000 (212) 833-8500	The Mirror Has Two Faces, 11/15. Rom/Com, PG-13, 125 mins. Dolby A & SR, SDDS, Flat. Barbra Streisand, Jeff Bridges, Pierce Brosnan, Mimi Rogers. Dir Barbra Streisand	Jerry Maguire, 12/13, Com/Dra, R, Dolby A & SR, SDDS. Flat. Tom Cruise, Cuba Gooding Jr., Kelly Preston, Renee Zellweger Dir. Cameron Crow	Beverly Hills Ninja, 1/17, Com, PG-13, 90 mins., Flat, Dolby A & SR, SDDS. Chris Farley, Nicolette Sheridan. Dir: Dennis Dugan.	Donnie Brasco, 2/28, Dra. Johnny Depp, Pacino, Anne Heche, Michael Madsen. Dir: Mike Newell. The Pest, 2/7 Com, Flat. John Leguizamo Jeffery Jones, Edoardo Ballerini. Dir: Paul Miller.
20th Century Fox (310) 369-1000 (212) 556-2400	Romeo & Juliet, 11/1, Rom/Dra, R, Anamorphic, Dolby SR &SRD. Leonardo DiCaprio, Claire Danes, John Leguizamo. Dir: Baz Luhrman. Jingle All the Way, 11/22, Com, PG. SR, SR-D, Flat. Arnold Schwarzenegger, Phil Hartman. Dir: Brian Levant.	The Crucible, 11/27 ltd, Dra, PG-13, 115 min, Flat, Dolby SR & SR-D. Daniel Day-Lewis, Winona Ryder, Joan Allen.Dir: Nicholas Hytner. One Fine Day, 12/20, Rom/Com, PG, 108 min, Flat, Dolby SR & SR-D. Michelle Pfeiffer, George Clooney, Mae Whitman, Alex Linz. Dir. Michael Hoffman.	Star Wars (1977 reissue), 1/31, SF, PG, Anamorphic, Dolby SR & SRD, SDDS, DTS. Harrison Ford, Mark Hamill, Carrie Fisher, Alec Guiness, Peter Cushing. Dir: George Lucas.	Volcano, 2/28, Act/Adv, Dolby SR, SRD, SDD DTS, Flat. Tommy Lee Jones, Anne Heche. D Mick Jackson. The Empire Strikes Back (19 reissue), 2/21, SF, PG Anamorphic, Dobly S & SRD, SDDS, DTS. Harrison Ford, Mark Hamill, Carrie Fisher, Billy Dee Williams. D Irvin Kershner. Inventing the Abbots. Liv T Joaquin Phoenix. Dir: Pat D'Conner.
Universal (818) 777-1000 (212) 759-7500		Daylight, 12/6, Act, PG-13, 115 min. Dolby SR, DTS. Sylvester Stallone, Amy Brenneman, Viggo Mortensen. Dir: Rob Cohen.	Fierce Creatures, 1/24, Com, PG-13, 98 min, Anamorphic, Dolby SR, DTS. Kevin Kline, Jamie Lee Curtis, John Cleese, Michael Palin. Dir: Robert Young
Warner Bros. (818) 954-6000 (212) 484-8000	Bad Moon, 11/1, Thr, R, 81 min., Dolby SR, Anamorphic. Mariel Hemingway, Michael Pare. Dir: Eric Red. Space Jam, 11/15, Ani. PG, 87 min., SR, SR-D, SDDS, DTS. Flat. Michael Jordan, Bugs Bunny. Dir: Joe Pytka. North Star, Adv, R, 88 min, SR, Anamorphic. James Caan, Christopher Lambert, Catherine McCormack Dir. Nils Gaup.	Mars Attacks!, 12/13, SF/Com,PG-13, 105 min. SDDS, Scope. Jack Nicholson, Pierce Brosnan, Glenn Close. Dir: Tim Burton. My Fellow Americans, 12/20, Com, PG-13, 101 min. SDDS, Flat. Jack Lemmon, James Garner, Dan Aykroyd, Lauren Bacall. Dir Peter Segal Indiscretion(formerly The Honest Courtesan), 12/20 ltd Catherine McCormack, Moira Kelly, Rufus Sewell. Dir: Marshall Herskovitz,	Rosewood, 12/20 ltd, 1/17 wide, Dra. Jon Voight, Ving Rhames. Dir John Singleton	Incognito, Thr. Jason Patric. Dir: John Badh L.A. Confidential, Dra. Kevin Spacey, Kim Basinger, Danny DeVito, Russell Crowe Dir: Curtis Hanson.Pre, Dra. Billy Crudup Donald Sutherland, Monica Potter, Judith Ivey. Dir: Robert Towne.Trojan War, Com Will Friedle. Dir: George Huang.Steele, 2 Act/Adv, Shaquille O'Neal, Judd Nelson. D Kenneth Johnson.

FEATURE CHART — FEBRUARY 1997

March	April	Forthcoming
Jungle2Jungle, 3/14, Com, Flat. Tim Allen, Martin Short. Dir: John Pasquin.	Sixth Man, 4/4, Com. Marlon Wayans. Dir: Randall Miller. Hercules. 6/20, Ani. Voices. James Woods, Danny DeVito. Dirs: Ron Clements, John Musker. Nothing to Lose, Summer, Com. Martin Lawrence, Tim Robbins. Dir: Steve Oedekerk.	Gone Fishin', Com, PG. Joe Pesci, Danny Glover. Dir: Christopher Cain. ConAir, Spring, Act/Adv, Scope. Nicolas Cage, John Malkovich. Dir: Simon West Deep Rising, Act/Thr. Treat Williams. Dir. Stephen Sommers George of the Jungle, Summer, Live Act Brendan Fraser. Dir Sam Weisman. In Pursuit of Honor (formerlyG.I. Jane), Act., R Demi Moore, Anne Bancroft, Viggo Mortensen. Dir: Ridley Scott Nothing to Lose, Com Martin Lawrence, Tim Robbins. Dir. Steve Oedekerk. Playing God, Summer, Dra. Timothy Hutton. Dir: Andy Wilson. Romy and Michelle..., Com., Summer, Mira Sorvino, Janeane Garofalo. Dir: David Mirkin. Washington Square, Dra. Jennifer Jason Leigh, Albert Finney Dir: Agnieszka Holland Space Cadet. Harland Williams, Beau Bridges.	Buena Vista (818) 567-5000 (212) 593-8900
The Devil's Own, 3/26, Sus/Thr, Dolby A & SR, SDDS, Anamorphic. Harrison Ford, Brad Pitt, Margaret Colin, Treat Williams. Dir. Alan J. Pakula. Gattaca (formerly The Eighth Day), SF. Ethan Hawke, Uma Thurman, Jude Law. Dir: Andrew Niccol.	Anaconda, 4/18, Adv, Dolby A, SR, SDDS. Jon Voight, Jennifer Lopez, Ice Cube. Dir: Luis Llosa. The Colony. 4/4, SDDS, Jean-Claude VanDamme, Dennis Rodman, Mickey Rourke.Dir Tsui Hark.	AFO (formerly Air Force One), 8/1, Act, SDDS. Harrison Ford, Gary Oldman, Glenn Close. Dir: Wolfgang Peterson. Buddy, Fall, Com. Rene Russo, Robbie Coltrane, Paul Reubens. Dir: Caroline Thompson. The Fifth Element, 5/9. Bruce Willis, Gary Oldman. Dir: Luc Besson. Excess Baggage,Summer, Act/Adv, Dolby A, SR, SDDS. Alicia Silverstone, Benicio del Toro. Dir: Marco Brambilla. Men in Black, 6/6, SF, Dolby A, SR, SDDS. Tommy Lee Jones, Will Smith, Linda Fiorentino. Dir: Barry Sonnenfeld.	Columbia (310) 280-8000 (212) 833-8500
Hoods (formerly Hoodlum), 3/28, Dra. Laurence Fishburne, Tim Roth, Andy Garcia, Vanessa Williams.Dir: Bill Duke.		All Along the Watchtower, Dra. All the Pretty Horses, Dra. Dir: Mike Nichols. Bond 18, 11/20. Pierce Brosnan. The Day After Tomorrow. Sus.The Fantasticks. Mus/Com, PG, 108 min. Joel Grey, Joe McIntyre. Dir Michael Ritchie. Fireworks, Dra. Dir. Mark Rydell. Killer's Kiss, Act/Thr Linda Fiorentino. Kiss Me Deadly, Thr. Dir. Michael Mann.Sixteen Pleasures. Dir. Michael Apted Supernova, SF/Thr. Dir. Joe Nimziki. To Brave Every Danger , Dra. Warriors of Virtue Angus MacFadyen, Mario Yedidia, Marley Shelton. Dir: Ronny Yu Wild Card. Dir: Robert Altman. The Fortune Cookie, Com, Bette Midler, Candice Bergen. Dir.: John Amiel.	MGM/UA (310) 449-3000 (212) 708-0300
Wide Awake, 3/14, PG. Dana Delany, Denis Leary. Dir: M. Night Shyamalan. Mimic, 3/19, SciFi, Mira Sorvino, Charles Dutton. Dir: Guillermo del Toro. Chasing Amy, 3/28. Ben Affleck, Joey Lauren Adams. Dir: Kevin Smith.	Brassed Off, 4/25 NY LA, Dra, Dolby SR, Flat. Pete Postlethwaite, Tara Fitzgerald. Sonatine. 4/4 NY LA, Takeshi Kitano. B.Monkey,4/25, Dra. Jared Harris, Rupert Everett. Dir: Michael Radford Talk of Angels, 4/18, Dra, PG-13, Dolby SR, Flat, 97 min. Polly Walker, Vincent Perez. Dir: Nick Hamm. Temptress Moon,5/2 Dra. Gong Li, Leslie Cheung Dir: Chen Kaige.	Office Killer, 4/23. Molly Ringwald, Carol Kane, Jeanne Tripplehorn. Dir: Cindy Sherman. Shall We Dance, 4/11, Com. Children of the Revolution, 5/1, Com, Dolby A, Flat, 102 min. Judy Davis, Sam Neill. Dir Peter Duncan.Copland, 8/1, Dra. Sylvester Stallone, Robert DeNiro. Dir: James Mangold. Mouth to Mouth (Spain), 5/16, Com, R, Dolby SRD, Scope, 110 min. Javier Bardem, Maria Barranco. Dir: Manuel Gomez Pereira. Operation Condor, 5/2, Act/Adv. Jackie Chan. Dir Jackie Chan. Sarajevo. Dra. Woody Harrelson, Marisa Tomei. Dir: Michael Winterbottom. She's DeLovely, 9/12, Dra. Sean Penn, Robin Wright, John Travolta, Gena Rowlands. Dir: Nick Cassavetes. Wings of a Dove, 8/15, Dra. Helena Bonham Carter, Linus Roache Dir Ian Softley. Wishful Thinking, Fall. Jennifer Beals, James LeGros. Love Serenade, 6/6. True Blue, Fall.	Miramax (212) 941-3800 (213) 845-4200
B.A.P.s, 3/28, Com, R. SR, SR-D, SDDS, Flat. Halle Berry, Martin Landau. Dir: Robert Townsend.	Money Talks, 4/11, Act/Com. Charlie Sheen, Chris Tucker. Dir: Brett Ratner. Austin Powers: International Man of Mystery. 4/4, Com. Mike Meyers, Elizabeth Hurley. Dir: Jay Roach.	America's Most Wanted, 5/2, Act/Com. Keenan Ivory Wayans, Jon Voight, Mimi Rogers. Dir: David Hogan. Boogie Nights, 6/6, Com/Dra. Mark Wahlberg, Julianne Moore. Dir: Paul Thomas Anderson. Dark City, 7/4, Thr. William Hurt. Dir: Alex Proyas Edwards and Hunt,8/15, Com. Chris Farley, Matthew Perry Dir: Christopher Guest. One Night Stand, Dra. 9/97, SR, SR-D, SDDS. Flat. Wesley Snipes, Nastassija Kinski, Robert Downey Jr. Dir: Mike Figgis. Spawn, 9/97, SF. Michael Jai White, John Leguizamo, D.B. Sweeney. Dir: Mark Dippe.Woo, 9/97. Jada Pinkett, Tommy Davidson, Isaac Hayes. Dir: Daisy Von Scherler Mayer. The Women, Summer '98, Com. Julia Roberts, Meg Ryan. Dir: James Brooks.	New Line (310) 854-5811 (212) 649-4900
		Beautician and the Beast, Com. Fran Drescher, Timothy Dalton. Dir: Ken Kwapis Face Off, Act. John Travolta, Nicolas Cage. Dir: John Woo. The Flood, Act. Christian Slater, Morgan Freeman. Dir. Mikael Salomon Going West in America, Thr Dennis Quaid, Danny Glover Dir: Jeb Stuart . Illumination (formerly One Golden Afternoon), Dra. Peter O'Toole. Dir: Charles Sturridge In and Out, Com. Kevin Kline, Tom Selleck, Joan Cusack, Debbie Reynolds. Dir: Frank Oz. Prince Valiant, Act/Adv. Stephen Moyer. Dir: Anthony Hickox. Rainmaker, Dra. Laurence Fishburne, Claire Danes, Mickey Rourke. Dir: Francis Ford Coppola. The Saint, Act/Adv. Val Kilmer, Elisabeth Shue. Dir: Phillip Noyce.'Til There Was You, Jennifer Aniston, Dylan McDermott. Dir: Scott Winant. Titanic, Rom/Adv Bill Paxton, Kate Winslet, Leonardo DiCaprio. Dir. James Cameron.	Paramount (213) 956-5000 (212) 373-7000
		Desperate Measures, 8/8, Act. Michael Keaton, Andy Garcia Dir. Barbet Schroeder. Kilronen, Thr, SDDS. Jonathan Schaech, Jessica Lange, Gwyneth Paltrow Dir: Jonathan Darby My Best Friend's Wedding, 6/27, Rom/Com, SDDS. Julia Roberts, Dermot Mulroney Dir: P.J. Hogan. Old Friends Dra. Jack Nicholson, Helen Hunt, Greg Kinnear Dir: James Brooks. Peter Pan, Adv Dir. John Hughes Starship Troopers, 7/2, SF, SDDS Neil Patrick Harris, Denise Richards, Dina Meyer. Dir: Paul Verhoeven. Stinkers, Com. B.D. Wong Dir: Barnet Kellman.	TriStar (310) 280-8000 (212) 833-8500
Return of the Jedi (1983 reissue), 3/7, SF, PG Anamorphic, Dobly SR & SRD, SDDS, DTS. Harrison Ford, Mark Hamill, Carne Fisher, Billy Dee Williams. Dir: Richard Marquand. Turbo: A Power Rangers Adventure, 3/21. Jason David Frank, Steve Cardenas. Dir: David Winning.	Picture Perfect, 4/25, Rom/Com. Jennifer Aniston. Dir: Glenn Gordon Caron	Alien 4: Resurrection, Summer. Sigourney Weaver, Winona Ryder. Dir: Jean-Pierre Jeunet. Anastasia, Ani Dirs: Don Bluth, Gary Goldman Bookworm, Fall, Act./Thr Anthony Hopkins, Alec Baldwin. Dir: Lee Tamahori. Firestorm, Act./Adv., '97 Howie Long, Suzy Amis, Scott Glen. Dir: Dean Semler Great Expectations, Fall '97, Dra. Robert De Niro, Gwyneth Paltrow, Ethan Hawke. Dir: Alfonso Cuaron. A Life Less Ordinary, Dra. Cameron Diaz, Holly Hunter. Dir: Danny Boyle. Out to Sea, Summer, Com. Walter Matthau, Jack Lemmon. Dir: Martha Coolidge. Speed II: Cruise Control,7/21, Act. Sandra Bullock, Jason Patric, Willem Dafoe. Dir: Jan De Bont. Home Alone 3, Summer, Alex D.Linz. Dir: Raja Gosnell. Bulworth, '97, Act/Dir: Warren Beatty. Halle Berry, Paul Sorvino. Doctor Dolittle, '97, Eddie Murphy,Vanessa Williams, Vivica Fox Dir: Betty Thoms.	20th Century Fox (310) 369-1000 (212) 556-2400
Liar Liar, Spring, Com, Dolby SR, DTS. Jim Carrey, Maura Tierney, Cary Elwes, John Lovitz, Swoosie Kurtz, Jennifer Tilly. Dir: Tom Shadyac.		Dante's Peak, Act/Adv. Pierce Brosnan, Linda Hamilton. Dir Roger Donaldson The Jackal project, Thr. Bruce Willis, Richard Gere, Sidney Poitier. Dir: Michael Cariton-Jones. The Fairy Godmother (or A Simple Wish), Sum'97,Com. Mara Wilson, Martin Short. Dir: Michael Ritchie Leave it to Beaver, 8/1, Com. Janine Turner, Christopher McDonald. Dir. Andy Cadiff. The Lost World, Memorial Day. Adv SR, DTS. Jeff Goldblum, Julianne Moore Dir: Steven Spielberg McHale's Navy, Spr '97, Com. Tom Arnold, David Alan Grier Dir. Rod Daniel That Old Feeling, 4/97 Com Bette Midler, Dennis Farina, Danny Nucci. Dir: Carl Reiner. Reach the Rock, Spr '97, Dra. Bill Sadler, Karen Sillas. Dir Bill Ryan.	Universal (818) 777-1000 (212) 759-7500
Cats Don't Dance, 3/28, Ani. Voices: Scott Bakula, Kathy Najimy. Dir: Mark Dindal. 187, Dra. Samuel L. Jackson, John Heard. Dir: Kevin Reynolds. Selena 5/2 Jennifer Lopez, Edward James Olmos. Dir: Gregory Nava.	Addicted to Love. 4/18, Rom/Com. Meg Ryan, Matthew Broderick. Dir: Griffin Dunne. Murder at 1600, Thr. Wesley Snipes, Diane Lane, David Benzali, Dennis Miller Dir: Dwight H. Little. Batman and Robin, 6/20, Act/Adv. George Clooney, Chris D'Donnell. Dir: Joel Schumacher. Father's Day , 5/9, Com. Robin Williams, Billy Crystal. Dir: Ivan Reitman.	Anna Karenina, Dra, Sophie Marceau, Mia Kirschner, Dir. Bernard Rose. Free Willy 3, Fam/Adv Jason James Richter. Dir: Sam Pillsbury. Mad City,9/97, Dra/Thr. John Travolta, Dustin Hoffman. Dir. Constantin Costa-Garvas. Vegas Vacation, PG Chevy Chase, Beverly D'Angelo Dir: Stephen Kessler Incognito, Thr, Jason Patric, Irene Jacob. Dir: John Badham. Watch That Man, 7/97. Bill Murray, Peter Gallagher. Dir. Jon Amiel. Contact, 7/18 Jodie Foster, Matthew McConaughey. Dir. Robert Zemeckis Wild America, Adv, PG. Jonathan Taylor Thomas. Dir: Bill Dear. Fire Down Below. Act/Adv. Steven Segal. Rescue Me. Jennifer Love Hewitt. Dir: George Huang. 187 Dra. Samuel Jackson, Kelly Rowan. Dir: Kevin Reynolds.	Warner Bros. (818) 954-6000 (212) 484-8000

BOXOFFICE Independent Feature Chart FEBRUARY1997

JANUARY '97

Arrow
212-258-2200

Farmer and Chase, Dra, NR, 97 min. Ben Gazzara, Lara Flynn Boyle. Dir: Michael Seltzman. 1/10 NY

Artistic License
212-265-9119

Troublesome Creek, Doc, 88 min. Steve Ascher. Dir: Jeanne Jordan. 2/6 LA.

Castle Hill
212-888-0080

Unforgotten: 25 Years After Willowbrook, Doc, 60 min. Dir: Jack Fisher. 1/10

CFP
212-995-9662

Angel Baby (Australia), Dra, NR, 105 min. John Lynch. Dir: Michael Rymer. 1/24 NY, 1/31 exp.

Cinema Village Features
212-431-5119

Screwed, 85 min. Dir: Alexander Crawford. 1/97 ltd. 2/97 exp.

Concorde-New Horizon
310-820-6733

Terminal Virus, SF, 86 min. James Brolin. Dir: Dan Golden. 1/8

Filmopolis
310-914-1776

Blue Juice (UK), Com/Dra, 100 min. Dir: Carl Prechezer.

Fine Line
212-649-4800

Nowhere, James Duval, Traci Lords, Heather Graham. Dir: Gregg Araki. 1/24

First Look
310-855-1199

johns, Dra, R, 99 min. David Arquette, Lukas Haas, Keith David. Dir: Scott Silver. 1/31

First Run
212-243-0600

The Jew (Portugese), Dra, NR, 85 min. Dir: Jom Tob Azulay. 1/8 NY

Fox Searchlight
310-369-4402

Blood and Wine, Dra, R, 100 min. Jack Nicholson. Dir: Bob Rafelson. 1/17

Gramercy
310-777-1960

I'm Not Rappaport, Com, PG-13, 135 min. Walter Matthau. 1/24
Gridlock'd, Dra, R. Tupac Shakur, Tim Roth. Dir: Vondie Curtis Hall. 1/29

Kino Intl.
212-629-6880

A Tickle in the Heart, Doc, 83 min. Dir: Stefan Schweitert. 1/25 NY

Saint Clara (Israel), Dra, 85 min. Dir: Ori Sivan and Ari Fulman. 1/29 NY.

Northern Arts
413-268-9301

Angel Dust, Thr, NR, 116 min. Dir: Sogo Ishii. 1/24

Orion
310-282-2948

Prisoner of the Mountains (Russian), Dra, 104 min. Dir: Sergei Bodrov. 1/31

Sony Classics
212-833-8851

Waiting for Guffman, Com, R, 82 min. Eugene Levy, Parker Posey. Dir/Star: Christopher Guest. 1/31

Strand
310-395-5002

Inside, Dra, 94 min. Nigel Hawthorne, Eric Stoltz. Dir: Arthur Penn. 1/10 NY, 1/17 LA

FEBRUARY '97

Artificial Eye
212-255-1922

Le Samourai (French), 103 min. Alain Delon, Natalie Delon. Dir: Jean-Pierre Melville. 2/28 NY, SF.

Artistic License
Sleepover, Dra, 88 min. Michael Albanese, Karl Giant. Dir: John Sullivan. 2/14 NY

CFP
Margaret's Museum (Canada), Dra, R, 118 min. Helena Bonham Carter. Dir: Mort Ransen. 2/7
The Daytrippers, Com, NR, 90 min. Parker Posey, Stanley Tucci. Dir: Greg Mottola. 2/12

Cinema Parallel
410-442-1752

To Have (Or Not), Dra, NR, 93 min. Dir. Laetitia Masson.
Satan Tango, Dra, NR, 450 min. Dir. Bela Tarr.

First Look
The Designated Mourner. Dra/Com. Mike Nichols, Miranda Richardson. Dir: David Hare.
Jerusalem (Sweden), Olympia Dukakis, Max Von Sydow. Dir: Bille August.

First Run
Boyfriends (England), Dra/Com, 82 min. Dirs: Neil Hunter and Tom Hunsinger. 2/14
Fire on the Mountain, Doc, 72 min. Dirs: Beth Gage, George Gage.

Fox Searchlight
Smilla's Sense of Snow, Thr. Julia Ormond, Gabriel Byrne. Dir: Billie August. 2/21

Goldwyn
310-284-9273

Hard Eight (formerly Sydney), Dra, R, 95 min. Gwyneth Paltrow, Samuel L. Jackson. Dir: Paul Thomas Anderson. 2/28

Gramercy
The Eighth Day (France), Dra, 108 min. Daniel Auteuil. Dir: Jaco Van Dormael. 2/1
When We Were Kings, Doc, 90 min. Dir: Leon Gast. 2/14

Greycat
702-737-0670

Parallel Sons, Rom/Dra, R, 93 min. Dir: John C. Young. 2/97 NY
I Was a Jewish Sex Worker, Doc, NR, 74 min. Dir: Phillip B. Roth. 2/97 NY

Live
818-778-3174

Hotel De Love, Rom/Com, R, 96 min. Dir: Craig Rosenberg. 2/14

New Yorker Films
212-247-6110

A Mongolian Tale (China), Dra, NR, 100 min. Dir: Xie Fei. 2/14

Northern Arts
Drunks, Dra, R, 88 min. Richard Lewis, Faye Dunaway. Dir: Peter Cohn.

October
212-539-4000

Lost Highway, Dra/Thr, R, 95 min. Bill Pullman, Patricia Arquette. Dir: David Lynch.

Phaedra Cinema
310-319-5346

Sudden Manhattan, Rom/Com, 85 min. Tim Guinee, Louise Lasser. Dir/Star: Adrienne Shelly.
Without Air, Dra, 88 min. Lauri Crook, Jack May. Dir: Neil Abramson.

Rhino Films
310-474-4778

Plump Fiction, Com, 85 min. Julie Brown, Sandra Bernhard. Dir: Bob Koherr.

Roxie Releasing
415-431-3611

Cobra Verde (Germany), Dra, NR, 110 min. Klaus Kinski. Dir: Werner Herzog.
Scream of Stone (Germany), Adv, NR, 96 min. Dir: Werner Herzog.

Sony Classics
SubUrbia, Com/Dra, 118 min. Jayce Bartok, Arnie Carey, Parker Posey. Dir: Richard Linklater. 2/7
Broken English, Dra. Dir: Gregor Nicholas.

Strand Releasing
The Graduate (1967 reissue), Com/Dra, R, 105 min. Dustin Hoffman. Dir: Mike Nichols. 2/14
Message to Love, Doc, NR, 126 min. 12/25 NY, 2/21 LA

Tara Releasing
415-454-5838

The Sadness of Sex, Com, NR, 86 min. Dir: Rupert Wainwright.

MARCH '97

Artificial Eye
Mon Homme (France), Com/Dra, 95 min. Anouk Grinberg, Gerard Lanvin. Dir: Bertrand Blier. 3/7 NY

Dove
310-786-1600

Flipping, Thr, R, 110 min. Keith David, David Amos. Dir: Gene Mitchell.

East West Film Partners
212-594-3334

Good Luck, 98 min, Gregory Hines, Vincent D'Onofrio, Max Gail. Dir: Richard LaBrie. 3/27

Fine Line
All Over Me, Dra, R, 90 min. Alison Foland. Dir: Alex Sichel. 3/28
Crash, Dra, NC-17, 100 min. Holly Hunter, James Spader, Dir: David Cronenberg.
The Quiet Room, Dra, PG, 93 min. Chloe Ferguson, Celine O'Leary. Dir: Rolf de Heer. 3/21 NY, 4/18 exp.

First Look
A Brother's Kiss, Dra, Nick Chinlund, Michael Raynor. Dir: Seth Zvi Rosenfeld.

First Run
The Watermelon Woman, Com, 85 min. Guinevere Turner. Act/Dir: Cheyrl Dunye.

Fox Searchlight
Love and Other Catastrophes (Australia), Com, 79 min. Frances O'Connor, Alice Garner, Matthew Dyktynski. Dir: Emma Kate Croghan. 3/28

Gramercy
Commandments, Dra. Courteney Cox, Aidan Quinn. Dir: Daniel Taplitz.

Live
Gentlemen Don't Eat Poets, Dra, R, 98 min. Sting, Theresa Russell. Dir: John Paul Davidson.
Dead Men Can't Dance, Act/Dra, 101 min. Michael Biehn. Dir: Steven Anderson.

Northern Arts
Gray's Anatomy, Com, NR, 80 min. Spalding Gray. Dir: Steven Soderbergh. 3/19
Hearts and Minds, Thr, R, 105 min. Danny Keogh, Patrick Shai. Dir: Ralph Ziman. 3/14

October
Female Perversions, Dra, R, 114 min. Tilda Swinton, Amy Madigan, Karen Sillas. Dir: Susan Streitfeld.

Orion
Independence, Dra. Dean Cain, Drew Barrymore. Dir: Tamra Davis.

BOXOFFICE Independent Feature Chart FEBRUARY 1997

Seventh Art
213-845-1455

Salut Cousin (French Algeria), Com, 95 min. Gad Elmaleh, Mess Hattou. Dir: Merzak Allouache.

Sony Classics
Broken English, Dra, 91 min. Dir: Gregor Nicholas.

Strand
Boys Life 2, (shorts compilation), Com/Dra, 90 min. Dir: Four directors. 3/7
Nights of Cabiria (1957 Italian reissue), Dra, 110 min. Giulietta Masina. Dir: Federico Fellini.

Tara Releasing
Mushrooms (Australia), Com, 93 min. Dir: Alan Madden.

APRIL '97

CFP
Hollow Reed, Dra, 106 min. Martin Donovan, Ian Hart. Dir: Angela Pope. 4/4
Bandwagon, Com/Mus, NR, 103 min. Kevin Corrigna, Lee Holmes. Dir: John Schultz. 4/18

Fine Line
Love! Valor! Compassion! Dra. Jason Alexander, John Glover. Dir: Joe Mantello. 4/25, NY, LA, SF, 5/2 exp.
Pink Flamingos, (1972 reissue), Divine. Dir: John Waters.
For the Love of Roseanna, Com, PG-13, 99 min. Jean Reno, Mercedes Ruehl. Dir: Paul Weiland. 4/4

Fox Searchlight
Paradise Road, Dra. Glenn Close, Frances McDormand. Dir: Bruce Beresford.

Goldwyn
Kissed, Dra, 80 min. Molly Parker, Peter Outerbridge. Dir: Lynne Stopkewich. 4/11

New Yorker Films
Flamenco, Doc, 100 min. Dir: Carlos Saura. 4/4

Northern Arts
Schizopolis, Com, 99 min. Steven Soderbergh, Betsy Brantley. Dir: Steven Soderbergh.

October
Traveller, Crime/Dra. Bill Paxton, Mark Wahlberg. Dir: Jack Green.

Orion
Eight Heads in a Duffle Bag, Com/Dra, R. Joe Pesci, Carol Kane. Dir: Tom Schulman. 4/25

Phaedra Cinema
The Next Step, Dra, 90 min. Rick Negron. Dir: Christian Faber

Sony Classics
The Myth of Fingerprints, Dra. Julianne Moore. Dir: B. Freundlich.

Triumph
310-280-8059

Bliss, Rom/Dra. Terence Stamp, Craig Sheffer. Dir: Lance Young. 4/4
Jackal (working title). Act. Aidan Quinn, Ben Kingsley. Dir: Christian Duguay. 4/25

Zeitgeist
212-274-1989

Irma Vep (France), Com, NR, 98 min. Maggie Cheung. Dir: Olivier Assayas.

MAY '97

Artificial Eye
Le Bonheur Dans Lepres (France), Com, 102 min. Michel Serrault. Dir: Etienne Chatiliez. 5/16 NY

CFP
Guantanamera, Com, NR, 124 min. Carlos Cruz. Dirs: Thomas Gutierrez Alea and Juan Carlos Tabio Rey. 5/16

Fox Searchlight
Intimate Relations, Dra. Julie Walters, Rupert Graves. Dir: Philip Goodhew. 5/9 ltd.
Paperback Romance (formerly Lucky Break), Rom/Com. Anthony LaPaglia. Dir: Ben Lewin.

New Yorker Films
La Promesse, Dra, NR, 93 min. Dirs: Jean-Pierre Gardenne, Luc Gardenne. 5/2
Gabbeh, Dra, 75 min. 5/23

Strand
The Tit and the Moon, Com, 92 min. Dir: Bigas Lunas.

JUNE '97

CFP
The Pillow Book, Dra, 126 min. Vivian Wu, Ewan McGregor. Dir: Peter Greenaway. 6/6

Fine Line
Winter Guest. Emma Thompson. Dir: Alan Rickman. 6/18

Kino Intl.
M (1931 German re-release), Dra. Peter Lorre. Dir: Fritz Lang. 6/27

New Yorker Films
Deep Crimson, Dra, NR, 114 min. Dir: Arturo Ripstein. 6/20

October
Kicked in the Head. Linda Fiorentino, Lili Taylor. 6/97

Orion
Ulee's Gold, Dra. Peter Fonda. Dir: Victor Nunez.

Strand
Contempt (1963 reissue), Dra/Com, 103 min. Brigitte Bardot. Dir: Jean-Luc Godard. 6/97

FORTHCOMING

Cabin Fever
203-622-3449

The Elevator, Com. Martin Landau, Martin Sheen.
The Secret Agent Club, Act. Hulk Hogan, Barry Bostwick.
Skeletons, Hor. Dir: Ken Russell.

Dove
Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy, Com/SF, 92 min. Featuring Douglas Adams. Dir: Neil Davies.
Inside the Goldmine, Thr, 92 min. Josh Evans, Alicia Tully Jensen. Dir: Josh Evans.

Dreamworks SKG
818-733-7000

El Dorado: City of Gold, Ani. Dir: Will Finn.
Mousehunt, Com/Ani. Nathan Lane. Dir: Gore Virbinsky.
The Peacemaker, Act/Adv. George Clooney, Nicole Kidman. Dir: Mimi Leder. Fall/97.
The Prince of Egypt, Ani.
Amistad, His/Dra, Dir: S. Spielberg.
Blue Vision, Dir: Neil Jordan.
Mutiny, Dir: Steven Spielberg.

Fine Line
Head Above Water, Dra/Com, PG-13, 92 min. Harvey Keitel, Cameron Diaz. Dir: Jim Wilson.
The Tears of Julian Po. Christian Slater, Robin Tunney.
Love Letter (Japan), Dra, PG, 116 min. Dir: Shunji Iwai. 3/28

First Look
The Apprentices (France), Com, 97 min.
This is the Sea, Rom/Dra. Richard Harris, Gabriel Byrne. Dir: Mary McGuckian.
Slaves to the Underground, Dra. Marisa Ryan, Jason Bortz. Dir: Kristine Peterson.

Fox Searchlight
The Van, Com, R. Colm Meaney. Dir: Stephen Frears.
Ice Storm, Dra. Kevin Kline, Joan Allen, Sigourney Weaver. Dir: Ang Lee. Fall/97.
Cousin Bette, Dra. Jessica Lange, Elisabeth Shue, Bob Hoskins. Dir: Des McAnuff. Fall/97.

Goldwyn
Napolean, Ani, G, 82 min. Voices: Adam Wylie, Bronson Pinchot. 8/97

Gramercy
How To Be a Player, Com. Bill Belamy. Dir: Lionel Martin. 8/97

Kit Parker
800-538-5838

Day For Night (1973 French reissue), Dra, PG, 120 min. Dir: Francois Truffaut.
Death in Venice (1971 Italian reissue), Dra, PG, 130 min. Dirk Bogarde. Dir: Luchino Visconti.

Live
Critical Care, Dra/Thr. James Spader, Albert Brooks. Dir: Sydney Lumet. 10/97

Milestone Film & Video
212-865-7449

Woman in the Dunes (Japan, 1964 rerelease), 72 min. Dir: Hiroshi Teshigahara.
Antonio Gaudi (Japan, 1985 rerelease), 72 min. Dir: Hiroshi Teshigahara.
Life of Oharu (Japan, 1952 rerelease), 137 min. Dir: Ken Mizoguchi.

Movieworld Ent.
510-244-5590

The Killing Kind, Dra. Kirk Harris.
The Lost Woman, SF, Jennifer Rubin.

New Yorker Films
Forever Mozart, Dra, NR, 84 min. Madeleine Assas. Dir: Jean-Luc Godard.

October
Career Girls, Dra. Catrin Cartlidge. Dir: Mike Lee.

Orion
Gang Related, Dra, R. Tupac Shakur, Jim Belushi. Dir: Jim Kous. 9/10
The Locust, Dra. Kate Capshaw, Ashley Judd. Dir: John Patrick Kelley. 9/97

Shadow Distribution
207-872-5111

Mondo (French), Dra, 87 min. Philippe Petit. Dir: Tony Gatliff

Sony Classics
Call Me Victor (France), Com, PG, 100 min. Jeanne Moreau. Dir: Guy Jacques.

Trimark
310-314-3040

Kama Sutra, Dra, 114 min. Sarita Choudhury. Dir: Mira Nair.
Crimetime, Thr, R. Stephen Baldwin. Dir: George Sluizer.
Underworld, Thr. Denis Leary, Joe Mantegna. Dir: Roger Christian.
Warrior of Waverly Street, SF. Joseph Mazzello. Dir: Manny Coto.
Meet Wally Sparks, Com, PG-13. Rodney Dangerfield, David Ogden Stiers. Dir: Peter Baldwin.
Nothing Personal, Dra, R. John Lynch. Dir: Thaddeus O'Sullivan.
Ripe, Dra. Dir: Mo Ogrodnik.
Sprung, Com., Dir/Star: Rusty Cundieff

Triumph
Smart Alec, Act/Com. Patrick Stewart, Vincent Kartheiser, Brenda Fricker. Dir: Roger Christian. Spr/97
Truth or Consequences, Sus, Kiefer Sutherland, Kevin Pollack, Kim Delaney. Dir: Kiefer Sutherland. Spr/97
Mastermind, Spr/97

THE BOXOFFICE HOME RELEASE CHART

BOXOFFICE

FEBRUARY 1997

HOME VIDEO RELEASE DATE	TITLE	BOXOFFICE GROSS	SCREENS	THEATRICAL RELEASE	THEATRICAL/VIDEO DISTRIBUTOR
February 4	Harriet the Spy	$26,400,000	1,876	July 10	Paramount
February 4	Jack	$58,200,000+	2,232	August 9	Buena Vista/Hollywood
February 11	Feeling Minnesota	$3,100,000	869	September 13	Fine Line/New Line
February 11	First Kid	$25,700,000+	1,878	August 30	Buena Vista/Hollywood
February 11	Trainspotting	$16,500,000+	357	July 19	Buena Vista/Miramax
February 11	A Very Brady Sequel	$22,000,000	2,147	August 23	Paramount
March 1	Fly Away Home	$21,500,000	1,401	September 13	Columbia/Columbia TriStar
March 4	The Hunchback of Notre Dame	$99,200,000+	2,835	June 21	Buena Vista/Walt Disney
March	Alaska	$11,600,000	1,566	August 14	Columbia/Columbia TriStar
March	Courage Under Fire	$59,000,000	2,001	July 12	Fox
March	Emma	$22,000,000	585	August 2	Buena Vista/Miramax
March	Extreme Measures	$17,300,000	2,298	September 27	Columbia/Columbia TriStar
March	First Wives Club	$101,500,000+	2,406	September 20	Paramount
March	House Arrest	$7,000,000	1,623	August 14	MGM/UA
March	Last Man Standing	$18,100,000+	2,574	September 20	New Line
March	Rich Man's Wife	$8,300,000	1009	September 13	Buena Vista/Hollywood
March	The Spitfire Grill	$12,600,000	1,247	August 23	Columbia/Columbia TriStar

March	First Wives Club	$101,500,000+	2,406	September 20	Paramount
March	House Arrest	$7,000,000	1,623	August 14	MGM/UA
March	Lone Star	$11,800,000	189	June 21	Sony Classics
March	Rich Man's Wife	$8,300,000	1009	September 13	Buena Vista/Hollywood
March	The Spitfire Grill	$12,600,000	1,247	August 23	Columbia/Columbia TriStar
March	Supercop	$16,300,000	1,469	July 26	Buena Vista/Miramax
March	2 Days In the Valley	$11,000,000	855	September 27	MGM/UA
April	The Associate	$12,300,000	1,781	October 25	Buena Vista/Hollywood
April	Big Night	$10,500,000+	366	September 20	MGM/UA
April	Bound	$3,600,000	262	October 4	Gramercy/PolyGram
April	Bulletproof	$21,200,000	2,242	September 6	MCA/Universal
April	The Chamber	$14,300,000	2,032	October 11	MCA/Universal
April	The Glimmer Man	$20,300,000	2,236	October 4	Warner Bros.
April	Maximum Risk	$14,100,000	2,358	September 13	Columbia/Columbia TriStar
April	Michael Collins	$10,700,000+	878	October 11	Warner Bros.
April	Sleepers	$51,500,000+	2,080	October 18	Warner Bros.
April	Solo	$5,000,000	1,230	August 23	Triumph
April	Space Jam	$73,400,000+	2,650	November 15	Warner Bros.
April	That Thing You Do!	$25,100,000+	1,887	October 4	Fox
April	Walking and Talking	$1,300,000	60	July 17	Buena Vista/Miramax
May	D3: The Mighty Ducks	$21,000,000	2,060	October 4	Buena Vista/Walt Disney
May	Ghost and the Darkness	$37,600,000+	2,202	October 11	Paramount
May	The Long Kiss Goodnight	$32,100,000+	2,404	October 11	New Line
May	Romeo + Juliet	$41,700,000+	1,276	November 1	Fox
May	Set It Off	$32,400,000+	1,016	November 6	New Line
May	Stephen King's Thinner	$14,800,000+	2,009	October 25	Paramount
May	To Gillian on Her 37th Birthday	$4,000,000	5	October 18	Triumph

Compiled by BOXOFFICE MAGAZINE. Numbers for Boxoffice Gross represent total domestic boxoffice grosses to the nearest $100,000; + signs indicate that films remain in theatrical release. Number of Screens indicates the maximum number of screens in widest, simultaneous release. Entries in the Theatrical/Video Distributor column list two names when the video releasing company is different from (or releases through a subsidiary different from) the theatrical distributor. Exact day-and-date specific entries for Home Video Release are confirmed; in all other cases, the month indicated for a release is forecast by the editors of BOXOFFICE. BOXOFFICE is not liable for errors or omissions in the chart.

ADVERTISER INDEX

Automaticket/Hurley Screen	74
CFS/Rentec	19
Caddy Products	68
Cargill Foods	17
Christie Electric Corp.	C-2
Cinema Consultants & Services Intl.	61
Cinema Products International	74
Cinema Supply Co.	70
Cinetech Inc.	64
Cinevision Corp.	47
Crain/Atlanta Inc.	71
Cy Young Industries Inc.	79
DTS	25
Deep Vision 3-D	73
Dolby Labs	31
Electronic Creations Inc.	89
Equipment, Etc.	72
Featherlite Exhibits	38
Filmack Studios	66
Glassform	64
Gold Medal Products Co.	20
Goldberg Bros.	65
Hadden Theatre Supply	59
ILC Technology Inc.	67
International Cinema Equipment	45
Kit Parker Films	72
Kneisley Electric	69
Largo Construction Co.	59
LucasFilm Ltd.	22
Marlin Software	35
Maroevich, O'Shea & Coglan	73
Moviefone Inc.	41
Muvico Theatres	79
National Cinema Service	62
National Cinema Supply Co.	53
National Ticket Co.	69
New England Theatre Supply	70
ORC Lighting Products	9
Odell's	57
Peavey Electronics	13
Pike Productions	63
Proctor Companies	24
QSC Audio Products	C-3
Ready Theatre systems	71
Ricos Manufacturing Co.	23
Sensible Cinema Software	89
Smart Theatre Systems	7, 37
Stein Industries Inc.	70, C-4
Strong International	33
TWI	49
Technikote	74
Ultra-Stereo Labs	21
Windjammer Barefoot Cruises	71

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

RATES: $1.00 per word, minimum $25, $15 extra for box number assignment. Send copy with check to BOXOFFICE, P.O. Box 25485, Chicago, IL 60625, at least 60 days prior to publication.
BOX NUMBER ADS: Reply to ads with box numbers by writing to BOXOFFICE, P.O. Box 25485, Chicago, IL 60625; put ad box number on letter and in lower-left corner of your envelope.

HELP WANTED

ART/FOREIGN CINEMAS need experienced multiplex and espresso/deli managers. Camera Cinemas, P.O. Box 720728, San Jose, CA 95113. Fax resume to (408) 294-3300.

Dickinson Theatres, midwest theatre circuit, needs Theatre Managers/Manager Trainees. Experience a plus, but will train the right applicant. Please mail your resume along with references to Bill Burnett, c/o Dickinson Theatres, P.O. Box 2905, Mission, KS 66201.

Expanding national circuit is looking for experienced multiplex managers and assistant managers. Immediate opportunities in the Northeast, South-Central and West Coast regions. Send resume/references and salary requirements to Boxoffice Response Number 4732. Inquiries held in strictest confidence.

FIELD CONCESSION SUPERVISOR. San Francisco-based concessionaire operating approximately 100 theatres in U.S. and Canada with a 20-year history of profitability and growth seeks an intelligent people-person to manage, motivate and train concession staff and managers for approximately 20 theatres. This individual will possess good business judgment and strong analytical capabilities. Degree preferred. 50% travel, local and long-distance. Compensation depending on experience. Benefits include company-paid health and dental insurance, fitness, company car and profit sharing. Submit resume with salary history and req's to POB 669, San Bruno, CA 94066 Attn: JEG

FIELD SERVICE ENGINEER: Wehrenberg Theatres Inc is growing and we need your help! If you can perform scheduled and emergency maintenance on 35mm motion picture theatre equipment (electrical, mechanical and audio); install new equipment, and you're PC literate and proficient on a Windows 3.11 laptop computer, you may be just the person for us! Can you use a Realtime Analyzer, Oscilloscope, Volt/OHM Meter, Sound Pressure and Amp Probe, and are you familiar with electronics, acoustics, mechanics AND have your own hand tools? Well, let us hear from you. Associates degree in electronics is preferred. We offer competitive benefits and salary. So, how does that sound? Send/fax resume and salary history to: Human Resources, BOFE, Wehrenberg Theatres, 1215 Des Peres Rd., St. Louis, MO 63131. Fax. (314) 822-8032.

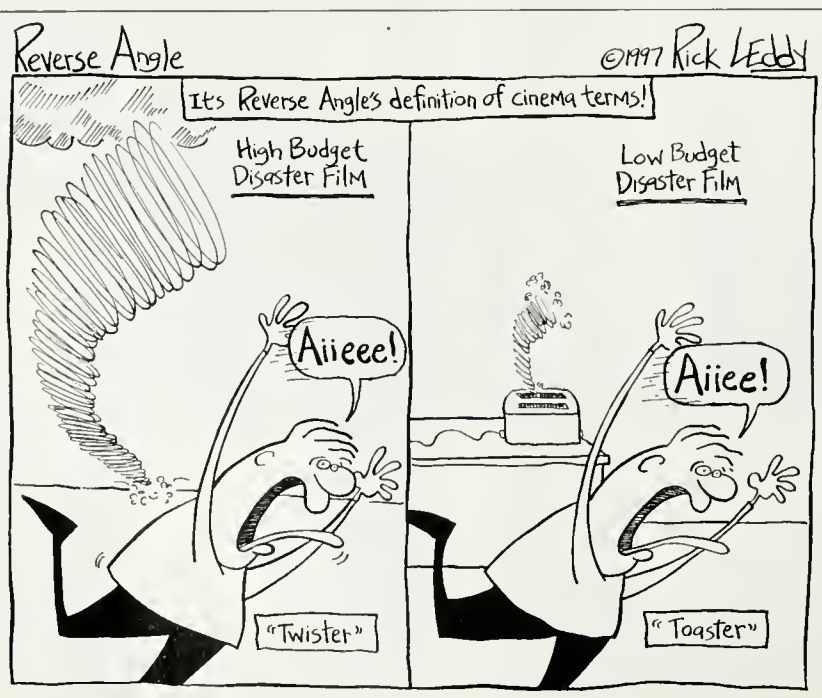
LET THE GOVERNMENT FINANCE your new or existing small business. Grants/loans to $500,000. Free recorded message: (707) 448-0201 (RN7)

Manager and Management Trainee positions are available. We are people-oriented and believe that excellent customer service and state-of-the-art technology are the keys to success in the movie theatre/swap meet industry. We offer a wide variety of benefits, competitive salaries and opportunities for professional growth. Join our team as we expand in California, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico, Utah and beyond. If you are looking for growth and opportunity, have the ability to prepare, monitor and achieve budgetary goals, and have the enthusiasm and the ability to manage/motivate people, now is the time to let us hear from you! Theatre/Swap or other management experience required and some college helpful. Send your resume and salary requirements to Century Theatres and Swaps, Attn: Human Resources—Job Code MGR1096, 150 Golden Gate Ave., San Francisco, CA 94102. No faxes or phone calls please.

MANAGERS AND ASSISTANT MANAGERS. For our new theatres in metropolitan Chicago and throughout Michigan, Indiana and Illinois. Candidates should have experience in multiplex theatres, retail or the fast food industry. While a college degree is preferred, it is not necessary. We offer competitive salaries, concession commissions, quarterly bonus programs and opportunities for advancement. Our benefits include BCBS with dental, optical and prescription coverage, paid vactions, paid holidays, and 401K plan. We will pay moving expenses to relocate managers. No phone calls please, but send your resume, references and salary requirements in confidence to: William T. McMannis, Goodrich Quality Theatres Inc., 4417 Broadmoor SE, Kentwood, MI 49512.

MOVIE THEATRE MANAGERS: Develop your SHOWMANSHIP—let us see what you can do! Wehrenberg Theatres Inc., an exciting and growing regional theatre circuit in the Midwest, has immediate openings for you as a full-time, salaries or part-time manager. Can you work nights, weekends and holidays as part of your schedule and be willing to relocate? Have you had customer-contact experience and can you think independently in solving routine problems? If so, we may have just the spot for you. Previous theatre management experience is preferred, but retail management and supervisory experience are great. Two-year degree required. We offer competitive benefits and salary. Send/fax resume and salary history to: Human Resources, BOTM, Wehrenberg Theatres Inc., 1215 Des Peres Rd., St. Louis, MO 63131. Fax. (314) 822-8032.

NATIONAL AMUSEMENTS INC. is looking for experienced managers and manager trainees for positions throughout the circuit. Must be willing to relocate. Solid growth potential. Good benefits and salary package. Please mail resume to: Operations Department, National Amusements Inc., P.O. Box 9126, Dedham, MA 02027-9126.



Plitt Amusement Co. of WA is in need of a few good multiplex managers who are well-acquainted with projection and concession merchandising. If you would like to live and work in the beautiful Northwest, send your resume and salary history to: Sam Plitt, c/o Plitt Amusement Co., P.O. Box 2339, Oak Harbor, WA 98277.

Regal Cinemas Inc. has opportunities available for experienced multiplex managers and assistant managers in the southern and eastern areas of the country. Individuals must be self-starters and possess the leadership qualities needed to thrive within an aggressively expanding circuit. Salary commensurate with experience plus concession commission and benefits. Replies held in strict confidence. Send resume/references to: Regal Cinemas, 7132 Commercial Park Dr., Knoxville, TN 37918, Attn: Jan Frazee.

THE MOVIE INDUSTRY HAS OPENINGS FOR YOU!!! Cineplex Odeon is EXPANDING its operations with new locations and newly enlarged existing locations throughout its Chicagoland area and other major cities in the United States. This will offer many opportunities for qualified candidates to join our management team, including several current openings. If you are a team player, enjoy working with the public and are interested in a career in the entertainment field, consider looking into the following openings: THEATRE MANAGERS, ASSISTANT MANAGERS, MANAGER TRAINEES. Cinema theatre experience would be helpful. We offer good pay benefits and opportunities for advancement within the company. For confidential consideration, please fax or mail a resume to: VP Operations, Cineplex Odeon Corp., 70 E. Lake St., Suite 1600, Chicago, IL 60601. Fax: (312) 726-2732. EOE—M/F/D/V

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE

ACOUSTIC SOUND PANELS & CUSTOM WALL DRAPERIES available in flameproofed colors and fabrics, artistic or plain. CINEMA CONSULTANTS & SERVICES INTERNATIONAL INC., P.O. Box 9672, Pittsburgh, PA 15226. (412) 343-3900; Fax (412) 343-2992.

BURLAP WALL COVERING DRAPES $2.05 per yard, flame retardant. Quantity discounts. Nurse & Co., Millbury Rd., Oxford, MA 01540 (508) 832-4295.

Century, Simplex, Christie, Prevost, Cinemeccanica projection systems, seating, concession, boxoffice, ticketing, platters, famphouses, consoles, automation, sound systems, lenses, all in stock. Factory new, rebuilt with warranty or used. Call us for a quote on your next single or multiplex job. Full consultation, engineering, design, installation, service and support worldwide. International Cinema Equipment Co. Inc., 100 NE 39th Street, Miami, FL 33137, USA. Phone (305) 573-7339, fax (305) 573-8101. Internet. http://www.ICECO.com. E-mail: ICECO@concentnc.com.

COMPLETE THEATRE EQUIPMENT: (New, Used or Rebuilt) Century SA, R#, RCA 9030, 1040, 1050 Platters: 2 and 5 Tier, Xenon Systems 1000-4000 Watt, Sound Systems mono and stereo, automations, ticket machines, curtain motors, electric rewinds, lenses, large screen video projectors. Plenty of used chairs. PROFESSIONAL SERVICE AND INSTALLATION AVAILABLE. DOLBY CERTIFIED. Call Bill Younger, Cinema Equipment Inc., 1375 N W. 97th Ave., Suite 14, Miami, FL 33172. Phone (305) 594-0570. Fax (305) 592-6970. 1-800-848-8886.

CUPHOLDER ARMREST. "State of the art." Call Cy Young Industries Inc. 800-729-2610.

DIGITAL AND ANALOG STEREO SOUND SYSTEMS: Dolby DA-10/CAT.700 $6,750; CP-200 $7,500; CP-100 $2,450; CP-65 $5,850; CP-55 $4,250; CP-50 $1,950; CP-45 $3,950; DTS Digital $3,900; Sony SDDS $7,995; Smart MOD II $1,450; Eprad Starscope 4 $1,200; Eprad Starscope 6 $1,950; Eprad Starlet $1,200; Kintek front surround system $1,950. QSC, EV, JBL speakers, amplifiers, crossovers all at considerable savings. Upgrade now and save. International Cinema Equipment Co. Inc., 100 NE 39th Street, Miami, FL 33137, USA (305) 573-7339, fax (305) 573-8101. http://www ICECO.com.

EXPORT SPECIALS—16, 35 AND 70MM: Cinemeccanica V-4, 5, 8, 9, 10, 12 projection systems, Kinoton FP-18, FP-20, DP-75, DP-70, Bauer U-3 and 4, Prevost P-55, P-93, P-16, Zeiss, Meopta, Tokiwa, BTH, Westrex, and much more. The world's largest supplier of refurbished and new projection systems. INSTALLATIONS ANYWHERE. SERVICE WORLDWIDE. 220V/380V 50 cycles/60 cycles. What do you need? Trades accepted. Catalogs available. International Cinema Equipment Co. Inc., 100 NE 39th Street, Miami, FL 33137, USA. Phone (305) 573-7339, fax (305) 573-8101.

MICRO-FM™ STEREO RADIO Sound Systems for Drive-In Theatres. Meets FCC part 15. Static free. Available soon. low cost Micro-FM-jr. For the hearing impaired. Call or write: AUDIO VISUAL SYSTEMS & ENG., 320 St. Louis Ave., Woonsocket, RI 02895. Phone (401) 767-2080; Fax (401) 767-2081.

OPTICAL SERVICES! CUSTOM OPTICAL OR GLASS NEEDS? Need anti-reflective porthole glass? We can help! Call ULTRAFLAT, 20306 Sherman Way, Winnetka, CA 91306, (818) 884-0184. http://www.cris.com/~Ultraflt

PATRON TRAY. Fits into cupholder armrest. Call Cy Young Industries Inc. at 800-729-2610.

Rebuilt Century SA & R3 projector/soundhead $4250. Simplex XL $4450. Xenon lamps, platters, many lenses, excellent line of other used projection and sound equipment. TANKERSLY ENTERPRISES, P.O. Box 2039, Denver, CO 80201. Phone (303) 298-8077; fax (303) 296-4080.

PURCHASE THE MOST WIDELY USED COMPUTERIZED ticketing and concession systems for as low as $139 per month. Complete systems start at $2,340. Includes free technical support, installation, and warranty. System Operating Solutions. Call (800) 434-3098.

TABLET TRAYS. Fits into all cupholder armrests. Used in multi-purpose theatres. Cy Young Industries, 800-729-2610.

TELEPHONE ANSWERING EQUIPMENT. All major brands of reliable, heavy-duty tape announcers and digital announcers are available at discounted prices. Please call Jim at Answering Machine Specialty, (800) 222-7773.

TICKET MACHINES: 5-unit oldest style (one motor drives all), good for parts. AW-2 parts: dual motors; 52" platter-discs; modules; trees with roller/arms. Submit offer for used items. Also center feed-out assemblies, new and used for Super-Platter. WE REBUILD INTERMITTENTS. REPAIR/EXCHANGE AVAILABLE! Cinema Equipment Sales, (714) 470-0298, fax (714) 470-0835.

Two Holmes projectors on stands with 50-amp lamps, also 3 spares and Mazda lamps. 3 Super Simplex RCA tube amplifiers. 2 Simplex sound heads. Wanted: 3000-watt lamp with single-phase power supply, also platters. Contact Harold Owen, Box 223, Seymour, MO 65746, or phone (417) 935-2232.

USED PROJECTION EQUIPMENT: Replacement equipment, single or multi booths available. Please call it you are purchasing or selling. CINEMA CONSULTANTS & SERVICES INTERNATIONAL INC., P.O. Box 9672, Pittsburgh, PA 15226. Phone (412) 343-3900, Fax (412) 343-2992.

USED PROJECTION/SOUND EQUIPMENT. Century SA—2 pcs @ $2,000 each; Cinemeccanica V8R—2 pcs @ $3,500 each, Simplex XL-ST gates—2 pcs @ $2,000 each. Ship anywhere. Phone (818) 444-7090; fax (818) 444-6863.

WESTAR QUALITY CINEMA EQUIPMENT, PARTS & ACCESSORIES: New Westar multi-coated projection lenses now available from stock. 50, 55, 60, 65, 70, 75, 80, 85, 90mm. Fully guaranteed $450. Westar 35mm splicers, heavy duty, $275. Westar projectors and soundheads, new, 2 year parts warranty, in stock. Westar precision projector parts for your Westar, Century, Westrex, Cinecita, RCA, Simplex, or Monee projectors and soundheads in stock at discount prices. International Cinema Equipment Co., 100 NE 39th Street, Miami, FL 33137, USA. (305) 573-7339, fax (305) 573-8101.

EQUIPMENT WANTED

VINTAGE TUBE TYPE AMPS, woofers, drivers, horns, parts, from Western Electric, Westrex, Altec, Jensen, JBL, EV, Tannoy, McIntosh, Marantz. Phone David at (818) 441-3942. P.O. Box 80371, San Marino, CA 91118-8371.

WANTED DEAD OR ALIVE: We will purchase Century projectors or soundheads, new or old, complete or incomplete, for cash. Also interested in XL and SH-1000. Call (502) 499-0050. Fax (502) 499-0052, Hadden Theatre Supply Co., attn. Louis.

We will buy or trade for used/new equipment on any projector/soundhead/platter/lamphouse/console/speakers/lens and concession equipment. We can remove or pick up anywhere in the U.S. or overseas. Call (303) 298-8077 or fax (303) 296-4080. Tankersley Enterprises, P.O. Box 2039, Denver, CO 80201.

WANTED: New or used Circle R in-car heaters and all parts to same. Please call or fax between 8am and 5pm EST. Ask for Mr. Bill Clark. Phone: (810) 960-3900, fax (810) 960-9867.

WE BUY TICKETING & CONCESSION SYSTEMS! (360) 805-9396.

WE WILL PURCHASE your used theatre equipment. Consignments, outright purchases, trades, what have you? There is only one INTERNATIONAL CINEMA EQUIPMENT COMPANY at one location in the USA. Buy and sell from the original and buy with confidence. International Cinema Equipment Co. Inc., 100 NE 39th Street, Miami, FL 33137, USA (305) 573-7339, fax (305) 573-8101. http://www.ICECO.com. E-mail: ICECO@concentric.com.

THEATRES FOR SALE/LEASE

COUNT YOUR MONEY ON THE BEACH!! Award-winning Florida Gulf Coast theatre now for sale. Serving an affluent, year-round, niche market, theatre has virtually no competition. An area landmark for over 50 years, located on valuable beach area property, theatre is a mix of classic architecture and backstage modernization. Call or fax now for fact sheet. Ask for Ms. Cruz at (813) 360-6697, or fax (813) 360-5154.

LEWISBURG, WEST VIRGINIA—470-seat, single-screen, plus balcony dining, three apartments, two business spaces and small restaurant included. Located in historic mountain town. $375,000. Frank Hardy, Path Finders Real Estate, (304) 645-2000; Fax (304) 645-2272.

THEATRES WANTED

Indoor/Drive-In theatre wanted to purchase/lease in Ohio or adjacent states. P.O. Box 771092, Lakewood, OH 44107.

Several of our clients are seeking to buy or lease multi-screen theatres in the eastern U.S. Call toll free: Theatre Confections Inc., (888) 271-0858.

Seeking lease or purchase, one- to six-screen facilities presently or recently operated anywhere within 175 miles radius NYC. Please provide key essentials in first letter, including location, number screens/seats, parking, other tenants, box/food figures. Strict confidentiality assured. Reply to P.O. Box 998, Englewood, NJ 07632-0998.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

NEED PARTNER/INVESTOR. Best location—movie theatre owner. Call (510) 674-9623.

DRIVE-IN CONSTRUCTION

DRIVE-IN SCREEN TOWERS Since 1945 Selby Products, Inc., P.O. Box 267, Richfield, Ohio 44286 (216) 659-6631, 800-647-6224.

SCREEN TOWERS INTERNATIONAL New, used, transplanted, complete tower service. Box 399, Rogers, TX 76569. 800-642-3591.

THEATRE SEATING

"ALL AMERICAN SEATING" by the EXPERTS! Used seats of quality. Various makes, Amencan Bodiform and Stellars from $12.50 to $32.50. Irwins from $12.50 to $30.00. Heywood & Massey rockers from $25.00. Full rebuilding available. New Hussey chairs from $70.00. All types theatre projection and sound equipment. New and used. We ship and install all makes. Try us! We sell no Junk!

Sensible Cinema Software®

Ticketing System $399

Free Demo Disk • (615) 790-7797 • Internet ↓

http://www.nashville.com/scs/scs.html

Response No. 135

Box Office '97

Ticketing & More...

Windows '95 Based Microsoft Access Database
Concession Sales & Inventory
State of the Art - Reliable
18 Years Experience
Custom Development
Satisfaction Guaranteed

Electronic Creations, Inc.

Ph (615) 480-1002 Fax (615) 480-6830

Response No. 203

TANKERSLEY ENTERPRISES P.O. BOX 2039, 2100 Stout Street, Denver, CO 80201 Phone. 303-298-8077 Fax. 303-296-4080.

ALLSTATE SEATING is a company that is specializing in refurbishing, complete painting, molded foam, tailor-made seat covers, installations, removals. Call for pricing and spare parts for all types of theatre seating. Boston, MA. Phone (617) 268-2221, FAX (617) 268-7011.

"BOOSTER B. SAURUS" Child booster seats. Call Cy Young Industries Inc. at 800-729-2610.

ON-SITE UPHOLSTERY and replacement covers. Parts available for many chairs. Our "Bakers Dozen" gives you 13 covers for the cost of 12. Nationwide service. Free samples made up. Call Complete Industries for pricing. (800) 252-6837.

SEAT AND BACK COVERS: Most fabrics in stock. Molded cushions. Cy Young Industries Inc., 800-729-2610.

SEATING FOR SALE: One of the largest selections of used theatre seating in the USA. Irwin Citations from $25, Amencan Stellar M35s from $20, Amencan highback deluxe rockers from $27.50, Wakefield self risers from $20. Thousands of bargains. Photos available. International Cinema Equipment Co. Inc., 100 NE 39th Street, Miami, FL 33137, USA. Phone (305) 573-7339, fax (305) 573-8101.

SEATS CLEANED on site, $1.56-$2.36 per seat (coast to coast). Call (800) 879-2311, 24 hours, for brochure and information. The Carpet Cleaner, P.O. Box 154, Osceola, MO 64776.

USED AUDITORIUM CHAIRS: Choose from a large selection of different makes and models and colors, American Stellars and Irwin Citations competitively priced, shipped and installed. ACOUSTIC SOUND PANELS AND CUSTOM WALL DRAPERIES available in flameproofed colors and fabrics, artistic or plain. CINEMA CONSULTANTS & SERVICES INTERNATIONAL, Inc. P.O. Box 9672, Pittsburgh, PA. 15226. Phone (412) 343-3900, Fax (412) 343-2992.

SERVICES

FRONT END INSTALLATION with frames, motors and masking tracks. Call Cy Young Industries Inc. 800-729-2610.

SOUND/DRAPING FABRICS IN STOCK. All new selection of fabrics. Installation on brackets available, or sewn in pleated drapes. Call Cy Young Industries Inc., 800-729-2610.

SOUNDFOLDS & CURTAINS cleaned and fireproofed on site $ 20-$ 40 per hung sq. ft. (coast to coast). Call (800) 879-2311, 24 hours, for brochure and information. The Carpet Cleaner, P.O. Box 154, Osceola, MO 64776.

ULTRAFLAT. REFLECTORS: Why buy new when you can have it restored? "Hopeless" cases restored to brightness. Call your dealer or ULTRAFLAT, 20306 Sherman Way, Winnetka, CA 91306. (818) 884-0184. http://www.cris.com~Ultraflt

WE REPAIR AND SUPPORT the most widely used ticketing and concession systems. Our prices are approximately 50% less than our competitors. Our customers include 30% of the top 50 circuits and many independents. Ask about our thermal printer service. System Operating Solutions. (800) 434-3098.

The Big Picture

You're not looking at a typographical error. The black frame on this page is an intentional gesture, placed where this month's Big Picture should be as our way of dramatizing recent events in communist China which threaten to muzzle free speech by some of the greatest filmmakers of recent times.

The past decade has seen a brace of masterpieces produced in China by the internationally acclaimed "Fifth Generation" filmmakers, whose leading lights include Zhang Yimou and Chen Kaige. As directors who grew up during China's oppressive "Cultural Revolution" under Chairman Mao Tse-Tung, the Fifth Generation shares a sense of pessimism about the totalitarian tendencies of China's communist state—a pessimism their own frustrating history with government censorship validates.

Given China's predisposition for suppressing artistic and philosophical viewpoints it disagrees with, it seemed miraculous when films like Zhang's "Raise the Red Lantern" and "To Live" and Chen's "Farewell, My Concubine" made it off the mainland. These films amazed global audiences with their high level of craft, and are anything but partisan diatribes. Each, in its own way, is a carefully considered study of Chinese culture, expressed in compelling human terms that transcend the immediate Chinese milieu.

While the most famous Fifth Generation films (which have tended to be historical dramas) can be taken in part as measured and careful criticisms of modern Chinese society—incipient fascism in "Raise the Red Lantern;" the oppression of artistic and sexual freedom in "Farewell, My Concubine;" the victimization of the Chinese peasantry by the vast social forces unleashed during the communist revolution in "To Live"—it would be a mistake to view Fifth Generation directors as primarily political in intent. Their main subjects are the most basic of human values—values which transcend ideology, but which are often politicized as a tool for the oppression of individual rights by collectivist, totalitarian states.

Over the course of the last decade, it has been fashionable in some circles to depict mainland China as gradually evolving toward democratic values. Such analysis has tended to focus predominantly on free market reforms which the Chinese government has introduced to reverse the inefficiencies of the Mao era's command economy. The fact, for example, that prison labor is used to produce many Chinese goods has ceased to be an international trade issue—though the practice itself remains widespread. Meanwhile, China is routinely congratulated on its robust domestic economy, and "constructive engagement"—which justifies doing business on the Chinese mainland without bothersome concerns over China's consistent disregard for the most basic human rights—is the international community's modus operandi of choice.

For a time, the fact that the Fifth Generation directors were allowed to show their films overseas and even to travel abroad was held up as a sign that the current Chinese regime was easing ideological suppression. Developments in recent months give the lie to such speculation. China's recent attempts to derail Martin Scorsese's "Kundun," a biography of Tibet's exiled Dalai Lama, is one indication of a renewed commitment to stifle views China disagrees with. Tibet, which has lived under Chinese occupation for decades, reveres the Dalai Lama as its rightful spiritual and political leader. To stop his story from being told, China has threatened to deny the Walt Disney Co. (which is financing "Kundun") commercial access to its large and lucrative markets. Disney has held its ground, for which it is to be applauded.

Meanwhile, the Fifth Generation finds itself increasingly under attack, with Zhang and Chen in particular subjected to an ominous brand of nationalist invective. In rhetoric reminiscent of Mao's "Cultural Revolution," the Fifth Generation has been accused of entering "mistaken territory," of making movies with "grand facades that are devoid of content."

With China in the midst of a state-sponsored "spiritual civilization" campaign which analysts believe is designed to deflect attention from the increasingly unpopular Marxist philosophies the Chinese state was founded on, filmmakers like Zhang and Chen have even been accused of undermining Chinese values on the basis of the international acclaim their films receive. "They just concentrate on the judging committees for Cannes and the Oscars... but do not associate with ordinary Chinese people... [Zhang] does not hesitate to offer up the ugly things in our culture to please Western judging panels" are typical comments.

It is important to remember that historically in communist China, when artistic or political figures have been singled out for public criticism, the end results are often the destruction of their works, followed at times by prison sentences and worse. Already, China's censors are cracking down on indigenously-produced movies said to violate "traditional virtues," with some completed titles suppressed, and others taken out of production to remove "mistakes." Boxoffice had its own brush with this mentality last year when a scheduled interview with Zhang Yimou failed to materialize because Zhang was denied the right to travel virtually on the eve of his trip abroad. The reason? China was attempting to coerce the New York Film Festival into canceling a screening of "The Gate of Heavenly Peace," a documentary about the current regime's massacre of student protestors in Tiananmen Square.

As it too often has in the recent past, there is a shadow falling over the intellectual life of China. It is that grim prospect we contemplate here. We leave it to our readers to decide which is the more terrifying—the spectacle of a political system that punishes its own citizens for the quality of their ideas, or the darkness we who are free to speak out generate, each time we are made aware of such a situation, and then willfully close our eyes.—Ray Greene

Screen Stars

QSC Professional Amplifiers supply power to the hottest screens in the country.

In fact, QSC Audio is the largest supplier of professional amplifiers and accessories to the cinema industry. Legendary reliability, awesome performance, versatile features and outstanding value have made QSC the industry standard. Fourteen amplifier models are currently approved for THX® cinema installations, with more on the way! Each model carries a commercial UL listing, as well as TUV and CSA approval for safety. Optional QSC plug-in accessories are available to meet the specific signal processing requirements of digital cinema sound systems.

Optional accessory capability optimizes amps for bi-amplification of screen channels, protects surround speakers and equalizes the response of popular cinema subwoofers.

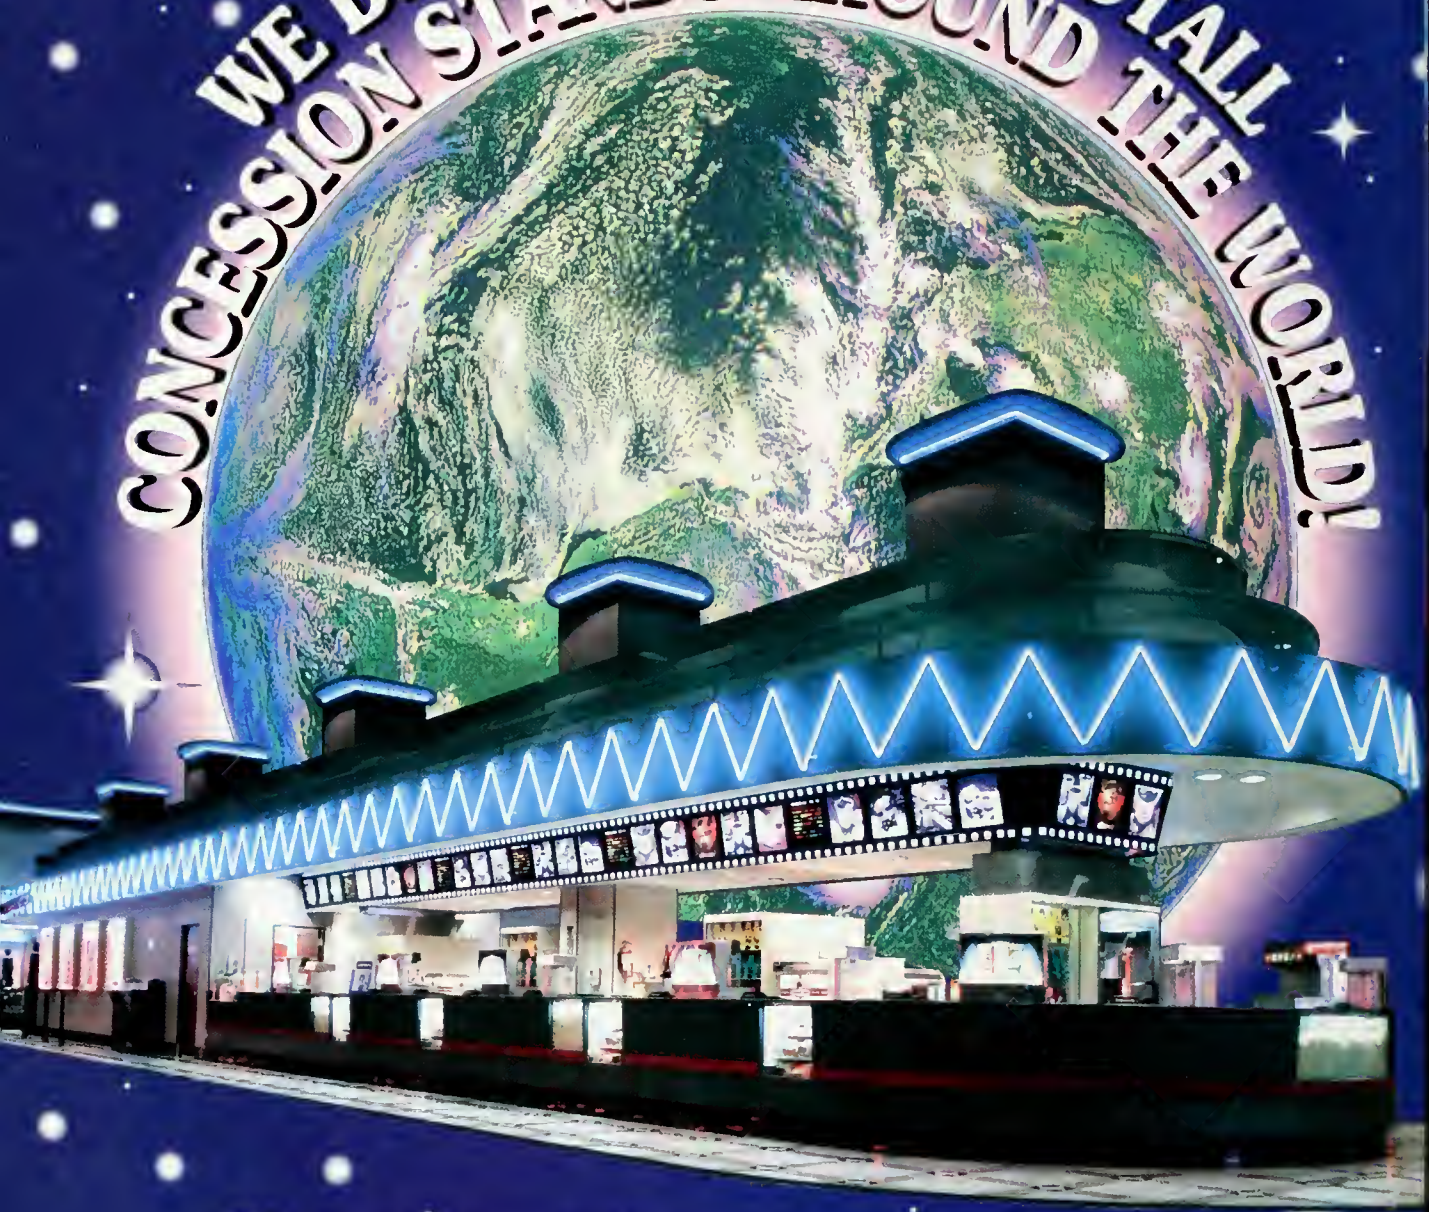
Audiences demand the most powerful presentation of everything that digital soundtracks have to offer. Because power amplifiers are critical to the digital sound chain, QSC powers todays biggest Screen Stars. Stars demand the best. Shouldn't you? Call 714-754-6175 for valuable details.

A few of the other theater chains featuring QSC Power Amplifiers: Allen Theatres, Associated Theatres, Budget Cinemas, Central States Theatres, Cinema World, Cineplex Odeon Theatres, Classic Cinemas, Dickinson Theatres, Douglas Theatres, Edwards Cinemas, General Cinemas, GKC Theatres, GTI Theatres, Horkness Cinemas, Loew's Theatres, Malco Theatres, Mann Theatres, Manos Theatres, Marcus Theaters, Mulone Theatres, Muvico Theatres, National Theatres, Neighborhood Cinemas, Pacific Theatres, Plitt Theatres, Rhyon Theatres, SoCal Cinemas, U.C.I. Theatres, Warner International Theatres, Western HTS Cinemas, and many, many more...

QSC™ AUDIO

The Power Behind The Pictures.

LUCASFILM THX AUDIO



Lucasfilm and THX are trademarks of Lucasfilm, Ltd
"The Power Behind The Pictures" is a trademark of QSC Audio Products, Inc..
"QSC" and the QSC logo are registered with the U.S. Patent Office.

QSC Audio Products, Inc. 1675 MacArthur Blvd., Costa Mesa, CA 92626-1468
PH (714) 754-6175 FAX (714) 754-6174 E-mail: info@qscaudio.com
QSC WorldGroup BBS: (800) 856-6003 or (714) 668-7569

Response No. 26

EST. 1932

WE DESIGN, BUILD & INSTALL CONCESSION STANDS AROUND THE WORLD!

We will custom design and build your concession stand to your special requirements. We combine state-of-the-art technology with professional craftmanship, incorporating all the clearly received ideas of the clients. Every feature is designed with a concept towards practical performance...controls devised for easy, fast operation.
Concession Stands, Box Offices, Popcorn Poppers, Butter Dispensers, Popcorn Warmers, Nacho Warmers, and any related theatre lobby fixtures.

STEIN INDUSTRIES INC.

CALL: 516-789-2222 • FAX: 516-789-8888

Response No. 101

JOHN AHGONIS AD

ROMETER 1997:
996 IN REVIEW

BOXOFFICE®

THE BUSINESS MAGAZINE OF THE G

MARCH 1997, $3.95

AUTO EROTIC

HOLLY HUNTER COLLIDES WITH CRASH

"SAINT" PHILLIP NOYCE • DANA DELANY: "WIDE AWAKE"
BAROMETER: 1996 BOXOFFICE TOTALS FOR OVER 250 FILMS
STAR POLL RESULTS: MARVELOUS MEL, SUPER SANDRA

Dolby Digital: the right choice.

•Twice as many titles

Over 670 Dolby Digital titles have been released or announced, more than twice as many as the other digital formats combined.

•Unlimited prints

Dolby Digital titles are issued single-inventory with digital soundtracks on all prints. Even with titles nominally released in multiple digital formats, all prints have Dolby Digital soundtracks, while only a limited number of digital soundtrack discs and prints are usually issued for the other formats.

•Far more practical

Dolby Digital doesn't depend on costly separate discs. And because they require only one digital track with data bits are nearly twice as large, Dolby Digital prints that are made with a much higher yield than the other on-film digital format.

•Incomparable name recognition

No other name is more widely associated with quality sound in the theater, in the home, and on the go than "Dolby."

•No conflicting affiliations

Dolby Laboratories is an independent company, committed only to making films sound better. With Dolby Digital, the playing field is level for all studios, distributors, and exhibitors alike.

Dolby Laboratories Inc.
100 Potrero Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94103-4813
Telephone 415-558-0200 Fax 415-863-1373
Western Europe: Wootton, Wiltshire, SN4 7PJ England
Telephone 01793-842100 Fax 01793-842101
World Wide Web:

Dolby and the double-D symbol are trademarks of Dolby Laboratories.
© 1996 Dolby Laboratories Inc. All rights reserved.

BOXOFFICE
MARCH, 1997 VOL. 133 NO. 3

UNQUOTE: 'Crash' is so threatening because its center is sexuality. It's been tough for people to see the movie for what it is, based solely on the movie itself.—HOLLY HUNTER

SPECIAL REPORT: BAROMETER 1997: 1996 IN REVIEW

BOXOFFICE's annual summing up of the year in film! Includes statistics on grosses and critical performance for all the year's biggest titles, plus our reader's selections of the top boxoffice stars and a comprehensive review of the year's top entertainment stories!

SPECIAL REPORT: BAROMETER—1996 IN REVIEW

16 ANALYSIS '96: UP, UP AND AWAY! by Ray Greene
A record year at the U.S boxoffice brought back the blockbuster and sold more tickets than at any time in the past 37 years. Some thoughts on what went so right, as well as a few things that went awry.

18 1996 BAROMETER STAR POLL
The readers of BOXOFFICE pick exhibition's favorite stars of the year. Find out who exhibitors thought were the best, and who were the rest.

20 1996 REVIEW DIGEST RECAP
Grosses and critical rankings for 1996's top 250 titles, plus year-end tallies for the industry at large and rankings for the year's top 20 titles.

24 NATIONAL HEADLINES '96
A look back at the top film business stories of the year that was, organized by month.

58 THE BIG PICTURE: GONE BUT NOT FORGOTTEN by Ray Greene
In this month's Big Picture, we pay tribute to some of the leading film personalities who passed away in 1996.

PART II: MARCH FEATURES

6 COVER STORY: NIGHT OF THE HUNTER by Joseph McBride
Oscar-winning actress Holly Hunter explores her dark side as one of the automotive sensation junkies in David Cronenberg's controversial "Crash."

28 SNEAK PREVIEW: "SAINT" PHILLIP by Bridget Byrne
Director Phillip Noyce puts Val Kilmer through his super-sleuth paces as screendom's latest incarnation of a perennial character: "The Saint."

29 SNEAK PREVIEW: DANA DELANY'S "WAKE" UP CALL by Bridget Byrne
Dana Delany goes independent in the Miramax coming-of-age comedy "Wide Awake."

30 INDIE SHOWCASE: FINE "ART" by Melissa Morrison
Meet Krista Griffin, owner-operator of Tempe, Arizona's Valley Art Theatre, home to one of the longest-running "Rocky Horror Picture Shows" in the Southwest.

BOXOFFICE (ISSN 0006-8527). Published monthly by RLD Communications, Inc., 203 N. Wabash Ave., Suite 800, Chicago, IL 60601. Subscriptions: $30 per year. Canada and Mexico: $40; airmail: $80. Overseas subscriptions (all airmail): $80. Periodical postage paid at Chicago, IL, and additional mailing offices. Postmaster: Send address changes to Boxoffice, 725 South Wells St., 4th Floor, Chicago, IL 60607.

© Copyright 1997 RLD Communications, Inc. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or part without permission is prohibited.

DEPARTMENTS

Hollywood Updates 4
Hollywood Report 5
Trailers 10
Exhibition Briefings 32
National News 34
International News 36
Moviefone Moviegoer Activity Chart 49
Studio Feature Chart 50
Independent Feature Chart 52
Home Release Chart 54
Classifieds 56
Reverse Angle 56
Advertiser Index 56

FEST REVIEWS (beginning on pg. 38)

Ayn Rand: A Sense of Life 41
Brassed Off 47
Childhood's End 40
Crime Time 38
The Darien Gap 39
Different for Girls 38
Farewell My Darling 40
Forgotten Silver 40
Gabbeh 41
Hamsun 40
Hits! 41
Holy Week 39
Irma Vep 41
La Rencontre 42
Lilian's Story 41
Love! Valour! Compassion! 39
Not Fourteen Again 39
The Nymph 40
The Phantom Lover 41
Pretty Village, Pretty Flame 40
Riot 42
Saint Clara 39
A Self Made Hero 42
Three Lives and Only One Death 38

FEST/DAY AND DATE

The Quiet Room 42

REVIEWS

Adrenalin: Fear the Rush 48
Beverly Hills Ninja 46
Blood and Wine 43
Dadetown 48
Death by Design 48
Fierce Creatures 44
Fire on the Mountain 44
Freeway 48
Good Luck 43
Jackie Chan's First Strike 46
The Line King: The Al Hirschfeld Story 47
Mandela 43
Meet Wally Sparks 44
Metro 45
Mondo 48
Mon Homme 43
Paris Was a Woman 48
Prefontaine 44
The Relic 45
Sleepover 48
Suite 16 48
Tromeo and Juliet 47
Turbulence 46

FLASHBACK REVIEW

The Saint Strikes Back (1939) 45

SPECIAL FORMATS REVIEWS

The Great American West 46
Survival Island 46

SHOWEST UPDATE

LAS VEGAS—Big and exciting changes are in the works for ShoWest '97, the largest convention in the world devoted to the exhibition and motion picture industries. Under the leadership of new ShoWest president Daniel Wheatcroft, Exhibition's Show of Shows, which takes place March 3-6 at Bally's Hotel in Las Vegas, will have an extra jolt of fanfare this year: the Awards Ceremony, which will be held in the MGM Grand Hotel, will be telecast live for the first time ever by cable's Turner Network Television (TNT), with comic actor Sinbad ("Jingle All the Way") emceeing.

The Coca-Cola Company will sponsor the broadcast editions of this year's ShoWest Awards, which honor actors, directors, producers and screenwriters whose bodies of work represent the best of the motion picture industry. In a new twist to the awards, each winner will be presented with his or her award by a celebrity who is an associate or friend. Awards will include Actor and Actress of the Year, Director of the Year, Producer of the Year, Screenwriter of the Year and Lifetime Achievement. Additionally, there will be three new awards presented this year: Supporting Actor of the Year, Supporting Actress of the Year, and Favorite Movie of the Year.

In a novel development, the Favorite Movie Award will be voted on by moviegoers across America via ballots available through their local movie theatres. Studios have collaborated with theatres nationwide on the production of a trailer promoting the ShoWest Awards and the voting procedure, which will be mounted from Feb. 7 through March 5—just one day before the exciting live cablecast.

ShoWest is also debuting its newly-designed award, the "Marquee," at this year's presentation. The new award features a figure holding a crystal torch. The statue is gold-plated with four layers of 24-carat gold. Encircling the statue is an unspooling film strip carved from a single piece of burnished steel—curving into the shape of an "S" for "ShoWest." The award's foundation is black marble. "We worked on the design for 11 months so that it would reflect not only the importance of the award, but would also be a striking piece of art," says Wheatcroft.

Taking home one of these coveted trophies will be Denzel Washington, star of the 1996 hits "Courage Under Fire" and "The Preacher's Wife," who will receive the Actor of the Year honor. Washington, who won an Oscar for his performance in 1989's "Glory," says he is "especially honored to receive [ShoWest's Actor of the Year] award, because it represents the feelings of those people who know film and support it—the theatre owners who show my movies and the audiences who go see them." As the recipient of this award, Washington joins an impressive company of superstars, including John Travolta, Mel Gibson, Tom Hanks, Sylvester Stallone and Robin Williams.

In other ShoWest news, MGM chairman and CEO Frank Mancuso has been selected to make this year's ShoWest keynote address. The keynote speech will be made at 6 pm this year on Monday, March 3, ShoWest's opening day, which will also be devoted to a variety of specialized events for the international exhibition community.

The Robert W. Selig ShoWester of the Year Award, given to an individual who has throughout his or her career demonstrated a dedication to the exhibition industry and its causes, will go to Barrie Lawson Loeks, co-chairman of Sony Theatres and president of Loeks Star Theatres. In a departure from previous years that's intended to more prominently feature the ShoWester Award, Ms. Loeks will be receiving her trophy in a special presentation, also on Monday, March 3, so attendees will want to save the date...

The NAC's Bert Nathan Memorial Award will go to Bruce Proctor, president of Proctor Co., in recognition of his 25 years of dedicated service within the theatre concessions industry. The award is given in recognition of the receipient's dedication to professionalism throughout all aspects of concessions.

SHOWEST®
MARCH 3-6
1997

J. Wayne Anderson, R/C Theatres' president of operations, will be the recipient of the B.V. Sturdivant Award, which recognizes individuals who have performed extraordinary service to the exhibition industry.

Ann Craft, secretary and general manager of the Theatre Owners of Indiana, will receive the Ida Schreiber Award, which honors a woman who has made a significant philanthropic contribution to her community.

John Greiner of AMC's Burbank 28 in Burbank, Calif., will be celebrated with this year's Customer Service Award for his innovative 411 Touchpad program.

At press time, additional information on this particularly exciting edition of ShoWest was imminent. We'll have a lot more to tell you in the next issue of BOXOFFICE, which, as in years past, will feature wall-to-wall coverage of the show. In the meantime, we'll see you at the show!

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF
Ray Greene

MANAGING EDITOR
Kim Williamson

SENIOR EDITOR
Christine James

ASSOCIATE EDITOR
Susan Lambert

EDITORIAL ASSISTANT
Linda Andrade

CONTRIBUTING WRITERS
Alex Albanese
John Allen
George T. Chronis
Pat Kramer
Ann Kwinn
Wade Major
Joseph McBride
Jean Oppenheimer
Lea Russo
Shlomo Schwartzberg
R.B. Whitter

EUROPEAN CORRESPONDENT
Melissa Morrison
e-mail: lomelis@bohem-net.cz

BOXOFFICE ONLINE WEBSITE ADDRESS:
http://www.boxoff.com
email: boxoff@earthlink.net
Online service provided by Marlin Software

FOUNDER
Ben Shlyen

PUBLISHER
Bob Dietmeier (773) 338-7007

NATIONAL ADVERTISING DIRECTOR
Robert M. Vale (213) 465-1186

ADVERTISING CONSULTANT
Morris Schlozman (816) 942-5877

EAST COAST ADVERTISING REP.
Mitchell J. Hall (212) 877-6667

WEST COAST ADVERTISING REP.
Gwen Campbell (310) 820-8846

BUSINESS MANAGER
Dan Johnson (773) 338-7007

CIRCULATION DIRECTOR
Chuck Taylor (312) 922-9326

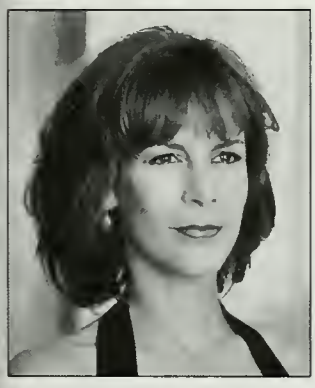
OFFICES
Editorial and Publishing Headquarters:
6640 Sunset Blvd., Suite 100, Hollywood, CA 90028-7159 (213) 465-1186, FAX: (213) 465-5049
Corporate: Mailing Address: P.O. Box 25485, Chicago, IL 60625 (773) 338-7007

The Audit Bureau



Circulation Inquiries:
BOXOFFICE Data Center
725 S. Wells St., 4th Floor
Chicago, IL 60607
(312) 922-9326
FAX: (312) 922-7209

HOLLYWOOD REPORT

GEOFFREY RUSH

"Miserable" Man

JAMIE LEE CURTIS

Catches "Virus"

EMILIO ESTEVEZ

Takes "Holiday"

HOLLYWOOD EXTRA: LOCAL BORG MAKES GOOD

The Borg have infiltrated the BOXOFFICE family! Actor Heinrich James, husband of BOXOFFICE Senior Editor Christine James, was assimilated by Paramount to portray one of the evil drones in "Star Trek: First Contact" (which has earned a stellar $90 million to date.) In the film, Borgification takes hold of its victim in a few seconds, but in real life, getting into the Borg make-up and costume took six-and-a-half hours every day—and the shoots lasted anywhere from 12 to 20 hours. "It was very exhausting, and it was nearly impossible to get comfortable between takes because you're in a form-fitting rubber suit with a power unit poking you in the side," Heinrich says. The audition itself was almost as harrowing: Narrowed down from hundreds of photos were about 15 potential Borgs. "They told us to turn around so they could look at our rear ends," he recounts wryly, explaining that because the suit is a very snug fit, you have to have exactly the right body type.

Heinrich (left) and a fellow drone plan to borgify Captain Picard (Patrick Stewart).

Playing a Borg is only one of the unconventional roles on Heinrich's resume. "I usually play Nazis or terrorists," says Heinrich (who is half-British, half-German, and was raised in Canada and the U.S.). His most notable performance in that persona was as a screaming, bespectacled Nazi Agent in "The Rocketeer." Other nationalities he's been called on to play include Swiss, Russian, Finnish and French, though he had the most fun as ruler of Cyberland in the as-yet-unreleased TV show "Cyberkidz." "I played the wizard Zorak, a centuries-old evil overlord of a world in another dimension," says Heinrich, who chewed the scenery as the Richard Burton/Patrick Stewart-esque voiced villain. While seemingly always playing the maniacal fascist, be it on this planet or another, Heinrich assures BOXOFFICE readers that his dark side is contained to the soundstage. He doesn't know exactly what it is about him that says 'megalomaniacal power-mad incendiary' to Hollywood, but he's happy to keep playing the antagonist. "A good villain can be the best part of a film," he observes. "And they get to die in the most interesting ways."

"PRIMARY COLORS" Mike Nichols ("The Birdcage") will direct this adaptation of Newsweek columnist Joe Klein's satiric best-seller about the rise of a presidential candidate from the south ("Michael's" John Travolta) and his aggressive, take-charge wife ("Sense and Sensibility's" Emma Thompson)—characters who bear thinly-veiled similarities to President Bill Clinton and First Lady Hillary. (Universal)

"DENIAL" This politically and emotionally charged film, based on the play by Peter Sagal, will star Susan Sarandon ("Dead Man Walking") as a Jewish civil-rights attorney who discovers her client is the leader of a group of people who deny the Nazi Holocaust ever occurred. (Paramount)

"THE NEGOTIATOR" Sylvester Stallone ("Daylight") is set to star as a hostage negotiator who is framed for murder and must clear his name. He takes hostages in a plan to find the real culprit; he gets help when he requests a hostage negotiator who's also a friend. (Warner)

"WAG THE DOG" Dustin Hoffman and Robert DeNiro will reteam with "Sleepers" director Barry Levinson in this satire in which a White House adviser and a Hollywood producer conspire to stage a war in order to take the public's focus off the president's scandalous dalliances. They even fabricate a hero—who turns out to be a mentally deranged soldier. David Mamet ("American Buffalo") wrote the script. (New Line)

"LES MISERABLES" In this screen adaptation of the Victor Hugo novel, Geoffrey Rush ("Shine") will play Javert, the inspector who chases escaped convict Jean Valjean ("Michael Collins'" Liam Neeson) for years to bring him to justice. Uma Thurman ("Gattaca") will play Fantine, a factory worker-turned-prostitute. Bille August ("Smilla's Sense of Snow") directs from a script by Rafael Yglesias ("Fearless"). (Distribution is to be set)

"EATERS OF THE DEAD" Adapted from the 1976 Michael Crichton novel, this thriller, set in 922 A.D., tells the story of an Arab courtier ("Evita's" Antonio Banderas) who must try to save Viking barbarians from a lethal flesh-eating disease. John McTiernan ("Die Hard With a Vengeance") helms. (Buena Vista)

"VIRUS" Oscar-winning visual effects pro John Bruno ("The Abyss") will make his directorial debut with another aquatic/extra-terrestrial adventure. Jamie Lee Curtis ("Fierce Creatures") will star in this thriller as a member of a tugboat crew that's forced to take refuge on a Russian ship when a typhoon hits. It's soon discovered that there's an alien lifeform on board the vessel, and it thinks that human beings are a virus that needs to be eliminated. (Universal)

"WALDO'S HAWAIIAN HOLIDAY" Emilio Estevez and director Alex Cox, who worked together on the 1984 cult hit "Repo Man," will reteam in this sequel to the sci-fi satire. Estevez returns from Mars and must decide if his allegiance lies with his boss or his lover. Willem Dafoe ("Tom and Viv") and Harry Dean Stanton, who starred in the original, co-star. (Distribution is to be set)

"BLADE" Wesley Snipes ("The Fan") will portray the Marvel Comics hero Blade in this actioner, with Steven Dorff ("Blood and Wine") playing Blade's power-hungry nemesis. (New Line)

"PHANTOMS" Peter O'Toole ("My Favorite Year"), Joanna Going ("Inventing the Abbots"), Rose McGowan ("Scream") and Ben Affleck ("Chasing Amy") will star in this adaptation of the Dean Koontz novel about a woman doctor who returns to her hometown to find everyone dead. She thinks it's from a virus, but an evil force is behind the murders. (Miramax)

NIGHT OF THE

In David Cronenberg's Controversial CRASH, Oscar-Winning Actress HOLLY HUNTER Explores Her Dark Side

Holly Hunter has nurtured a reputation as an actress unafraid to delve into unconventional, disturbing subject matter. On television, she has won Emmy awards for her roles in the abortion drama "Roe vs. Wade" and the black comedy "The Positively True Adventures of the Alleged Texas Cheerleader-Murdering Mom." Her Oscar-winning performance as a mute, sexually adventurous musician in Jane Campion's 1993 film "The Piano" proved that audiences are willing to follow her into strange new emotional terrain. Now the boxoffice clout Hunter acquired with "The Piano" has helped make possible her most audacious and controversial film, director David Cronenberg's adaptation of J. G. Ballard's 1973 novel "Crash."

"J. G. Ballard says that he wrote it as a cautionary tale, and, frankly, when I read the book I didn't feel that it was cautionary at all," Hunter says. "As a matter of fact, I found it very erotic and very hot. I see the movie in a completely different way, and I think the access to the movie is very different. There is a cool distance between us and the characters. That comes from David—David keeps all his characters at arm's length."

The bizarre story of people who are sexually obsessed with the deadly thrills they obtain from car crashes, Fine Line Features "Crash" bears an NC-17, one of the rare high-profile films to defy the commercial stigma attached to that rating since it was instituted in 1990. Even before its March 21 release in the U.S. by the New Line subsidiary, "Crash" has become a cause célèbre in the debate over artistic freedom and censorship. Although it has been playing in Europe for several months and has been particularly well received in France, the Canadian-made film has been at least temporarily banned in London's West End and almost found itself without a U.S. release.

"Crash" originally was scheduled to open here last October before Ted Turner, head of New Line's parent company, pronounced the film morally objectionable. Although Cronenberg has said "the delay has already done hideous damage to the film," American audiences now will be able to make up their own minds about "Crash," thanks to the sale of Turner Entertainment to Time Warner, a development that has rendered Turner's personal qualms less relevant.

The feisty Hunter has been forthright in her denunciation of "what was going on with 'Crash,' which I really thought was suppressing a right of mine and a right of the movies. It's censorship. This is something that I think is good to speak out about, and to speak out about firmly. Freedom in the arts is imperative to the health of a culture.

"One reason that 'Crash' is so threatening is because its center is sexuality and the exploration of it. If we're not free to explore these extremes in real life, it's an outlet for some anxiety, at the very least. If we can't explore this stuff cinematically, or in literature, or in painting, or in music — it's such a part of being creative, of having ideas, of being able to see where they take you personally."

Although her name may help lure filmgoers, "Crash" is not a Holly Hunter vehicle. She plays the secondary role of Dr. Helen Remington, whose collision with a car driven by a film producer named James Ballard (James Spader) hurls her into a kinky, over-the-top world of violent sexual fetishism. Already embroiled in an anything-goes compact of sexual experimentation with his wife (Deborah Kara Unger), the Ballard character and Dr. Remington join a cult of "auto-eroticism" led by the psychopathic Vaughan (Elias Koteas), a severely scarred car freak who reenacts such famous crashes as those that killed James Dean and Jayne Mansfield.

"What was going on with 'Crash' was suppressing a right of mine and a right of the movies. Freedom in the arts is imperative to the health of a culture."

Obviously, "Crash" is not designed for every taste (the movie "wasn't made to be shown in shopping malls," Hunter wryly notes), and it is sure to provoke heated discussion, both pro and con, when it plays American theatres. Although the little-used NC-17 rating supposedly was devised by the Motion Picture Association of America to accommodate the realm of adult-oriented yet non-hardcore subject matter that "Crash" explores, the film's troubling blend of sex and violence will test the boundaries of artistic tolerance in even some of the most liberal filmgoers.

But for an actress impatient with conventional roles and conventional ways of thinking, that testing process helps drive her choice of material. The "extreme territory" the characters of "Crash" inhabit reminds Hunter of such previous taboo-shattering cinematic landmarks as Nagisa Oshima's "In the Realm of the Senses" and Bernardo Bertolucci's "Last Tango in Paris."

The characters in "Crash" have "made a departure," she notes, to "a place where people normally don't go. These people kiss normalcy goodbye and never refer to it again. And that's one of the things I liked most about the story. There are no real echoes anymore of what their lives used to be. They've entered this new way without regret, without remorse, without even reflection."

Ballard's novel, which has taken on cult status over the years, had often been discussed as a film project. While "incredibly seductive to movie directors," as Hunter aptly puts it, the tale had always seemed too risky, too outré to reach the screen. Even after Ballard's World War II-set autobiographical novel "Empire of the Sun" was filmed by Steven Spielberg in 1987, "Crash" languished in the limbo of famous unmade

HUNTER

by JOSEPH McBRIDE

pictures, although Hunter encountered some "virtually unwatchable" student films made from the novel.

"I think 'Crash' is, in a way, my most autobiographical novel, notwithstanding 'Empire of the Sun,' which was actually about my childhood in Shanghai," the author has commented. "'Crash' is about my inner life, my imaginative life. It is true to that interior life, not the life I have actually led. As a novelist...I was exploring this strange hoodlum scientist Vaughan and these extraordinary women."

CRASH COURSE: David Cronenberg, Holly Hunter and James Spader on the set of "Crash."

Filtered through the equally bent personality of Cronenberg—the celebrated auteurist director of such stylish horror and sci-fi films as "Dead Ringers," "Videodrome," "The Dead Zone," and "Scanners"—"Crash" has emerged as a literally appalling cinematic nightmare, with the same mesmerizing quality as a freeway pileup, littered with twisted metal and limbs. The people in the weird world Cronenberg and cinematographer Peter Suschitzky have created seem as mechanical and cold as the automobiles they treat as erotic extensions of themselves.

"All the characters are experiencing acute alienation and trying to find a reference point for how they're alive now," Hunter observes. "And when they find people who have a commonality with them, they're drawn in a really extreme way to each other. The movie can be taken on so many different levels. I think that's what made it so difficult to figure out how it could ever be done.

"I wanted to play Helen because I liked the fact that her transformation [into a car fetishist] happened onscreen. When you meet her, she is having an accident. She crosses the threshold in movie time. You didn't know anything about her before. I liked how mysterious she is. And I thought the world [created by the story] was extremely interesting. I just wanted to be a part of it. It wasn't about how big the part was. I don't count the lines. If I had, I wouldn't have taken 'The Piano.'"

It's been more than a year since Hunter completed her work on "Crash," filmed in and around Toronto during the fall of 1995. Since then, she has played the secondary role of an angel in the upcoming 20th Century Fox release "A Life Less Ordinary," directed by Danny Boyle ("Trainspotting"). "It's a romantic comedy, but it's Danny Boyle's version of romantic comedy, which is slightly more macabre than people may be accustomed to. It's been a priority of mine to work with interesting directors. That was absolutely the case with 'A Life Less Ordinary.'"

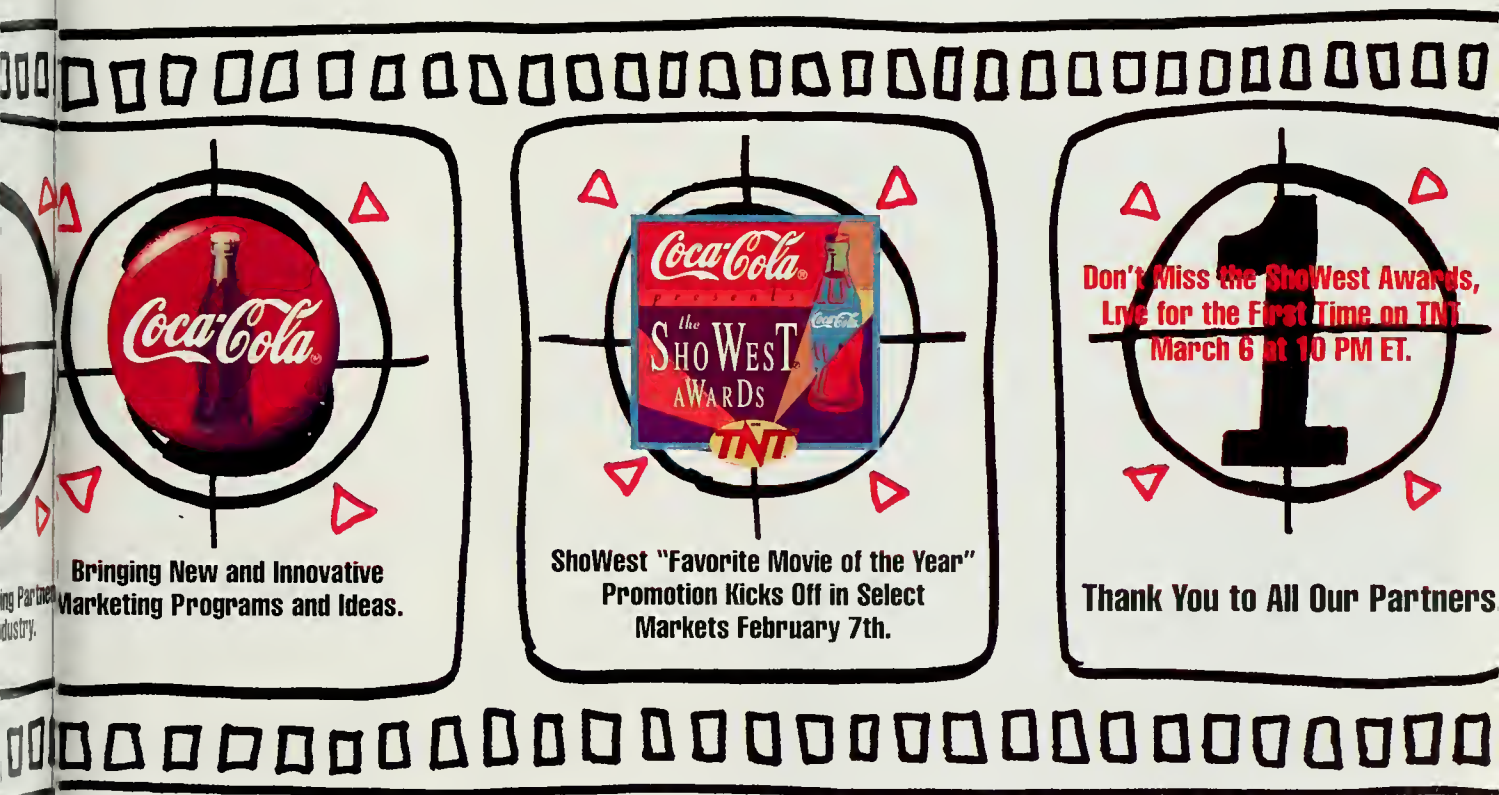
Next on her agenda is a costarring role with Danny De Vito in Jersey Films' "The Kiss." Screenwriter Richard LaGravenese ("The Bridges of Madison County") will make his directing debut this spring with his original screenplay about an Upper East Side Manhattan woman who starts life over after a broken marriage. "This is a woman that I've not played before, and I don't know exactly how it will be done. But I was tremendously drawn toward her, in some of the same ways that I was drawn toward 'The Piano,' in that the woman was such a complete, full human being as written. I don't often encounter that."



> The characters have "made a departure," Hunter notes, to "a place where people normally don't go. These people kiss normalcy goodbye and never refer to it again. And that's one of the things I liked most about the story. There are no real echoes of what their lives used to be. They've entered this new way without regret, without remorse, without even reflection."

Although Hunter has been embroiled in the controversy surrounding "Crash" ever since it debuted at last year's Cannes Film Festival (where the press screening provoked a mixture of boos and cheers), she insists she is not bracing herself for possible negative reaction in this country. "That's such a whole other life of a movie, how it's received. After the movie comes out and it is received, that's one thing. But for me to anticipate how I'm going to feel, or the possible repercussions, I can't participate—who can truly anticipate the life of a movie in the eyes of the public? For one thing, I'm almost always wrong.

"It's been tough for people to actually see the movie for what is and walk away from it saying they liked or disliked it based solely on the merits of the movie itself. I think the movie disappeared in the shuffle, because people were getting upset by it without having seen it. And so then when they would see it, it would already be slightly inflammatory. When all is said and done, it's a David Cronenberg movie. He has a loyal following, and those are probably the people who will respond most to 'Crash.'"

Despite Cronenberg's fears that the delayed release will hurt the boxoffice reception, Hunter comments, "Initially I thought it would. But now because there's been such a stir about it, I think probably a few more people are aware that this movie that deals with controversial subject matter is coming to a theatre near you."

"Crash." Starring James Spader, Holly Hunter and Elias Koteas. Written and directed by David Cronenberg, based on the novel by J.G. Ballard. Produced by Robert Lantos. A Fine Line Release. Thriller, rated NC-17. Opens March 21.

©1997 The Coca-Cola Company "Coca-Cola", the Dynamic Ribbon device, the Red Disc icon and the Contour Bottle design are registered trademarks of The Coca-Cola Company

APRIL TRAILERS

All hands on deck as the studios spring into action

The long cold winter is over, and studios are beginning to motor into theatres their bigger blue-sky fare. Summer is still on its way, so this month's likes of "Anaconda," "L.A. Confidential" and "McHale's Navy" (see photo below) won't be the boxoffice equals of such later fare as "The Lost World: Jurassic Park" or "Batman and Robin." But the majors are raising anchor, moving full speed ahead and loading their torpedoes.

On a by-weekend basis, April looks to be an uncruel, if not kind, month. April 4 has three romantic comedies—Fox's "Picture Perfect," Paramount's "'Til There Was You" and Universal's "That Old Feeling"— and although they'll cut into each other's numbers at least they target different age groups. The two actioners—Columbia's "Double Team" (4/4) and Warner's "Murder at 1600" (4/11)—have openings to themselves and then the month's second half to share.

The third weekend is perfectly played: Columbia's "Anaconda" is for the male adventurers, Buena Vista's "Romy and Michele's High School Reunion" leans distaff and Warner's "Addicted to Love" plays to couples. The final frame finds three thrillers—Paramount's "Kiss the Girls," Miramax's "Office Killer" and Triumph's "The Assignment"—tripping all over themselves, giving 4/25 the makings of a probable potent debut for Warner's "L.A. Confidential."

The specialized labels, though, remain a substantial force, accounting for 25 of 40 releases. Triumph resurfaces with two titles, but the real story is that two indies—Miramax (four debuts, one per weekend) and Fine Line (three debuts, missing only 4/4)—are revving the throttle of nearly a third of that market.

APRIL 4

Double Team

Hong Kong director Tsui Hark directs this high-tech actioner starring Jean-Claude Van Damme ("Maximum Risk") as counterterrorist Jack Quinn, who teams with a wild-haired weapons specialist named Yaz (NBA star Dennis Rodman, making his feature debut). Mickey Rourke and Natasha Lindinger co-star; Paul Mones scripts; Moshe Diamant produces. (Columbia, 4/4)

Exploitips: Van Damme's success curve has been waning; "Space Jam" showed a hoop star could open a movie. All in all, expect the usual first-weekend action crowd, with the usual fast falloff as that demo heads for 4/11's "Murder at 1600." See our Sneak Preview in our Feb. 1997 issue.

The Sixth Man

In this comedy, a college basketball star named Antoine Tyler (Kadeem Hardison) dies but returns as a ghost to lead his team to the NCAA finals. Marlon Wayans portrays Antoine's heartbroken brother, who recovers his drive to win with his sibling's return but eventually must ask the "sixth man" to leave the team so he and his squad can play fair. Randall Miller directs; Christopher Reed and Cynthia Carle script; David Hoberman produces for Touchstone. (Buena Vista, 4/4)

Exploitips: The story seems fraught with emotional possibilities, but "The Sixth Man" plays its plot for laughs, making it a likely bet for urban and youth demos.

Picture Perfect

Jennifer Aniston ("She's the One") stars as an advertising executive who's the last unmarried among her friends; she decides to pass off a man in a photo as her beau, only to have real romantic complications ensue. Kevin Bacon, Jay Mohr, Illeana Douglas and Olympia Dukakis co-star. Glenn Gordon Caron directs this romantic comedy, and he scripts with Arlene Sorkin, Paul Slansky and Jeffrey Abrams; Erwin Stoff and Molly Madden produce for 3 Arts. (Fox, 4/4)

Exploitips: While "The Sixth Man" is capturing the comedy crowd, "Picture Perfect" is likely to garner date-nighters, powered by the star turn by Aniston (still best known as one of TV's "Friends"). The key competition would be "'Til There Was You," a '96 holdover that has Aniston in a co-starring role—if Paramount doesn't move that title again.

'Til There Was You

A hopelessly romantic woman ("Waterworld's" Jeanne Tripplehorn) and a relentlessly practical man ("Miracle on 34th Street's" Dylan McDermott) who've never met are fated for each other. Jennifer Aniston and Sarah Jessica Parker co-star. Scott Winant directs; Winnie Holzman scripts; Penny Finkelman Cox, Tom Rosenberg and Alan Poul produce for Lakeshore. (Paramount, 4/4 tent)

Exploitips: Writer Holzman created TV's lauded "My So-Called Life," so "'Til There Was You" might play more serious and more mature than demo competition "Picture Perfect." If Paramount holds the date, expect "'Til There Was You" to need a couple weekends to build word-of-mouth among adult moviegoers.

That Old Feeling

The battle of the sexes comes full circle in this romantic comedy starring Bette Midler and Dennis Farina as a happily divorced couple who, reunited at their daughter's wedding, begin a passionate affair. Carl Reiner directs; Leslie Dixon ("Mrs. Doubtfire") scripts; Dixon produces with Bonnie Bruckheimer. (Universal, 4/4)

Exploitips: Like "'Til There Was You," "That Old Feeling" is likely to draw older—in this case, the 40-plus folks not often first-nighters. (Both "That Old Feeling" and "'Til There Was You" could benefit on their second weekends from having no new genre competition.) The key ammo here is Midler, who just had a long-running hit with "The First Wives Club." Catchline: What happens when the first wife becomes the new lover?

Sonatine

Takeshi "Beat" Kitano writes, directs and stars in the story of a yakuza who must battle a rival mob in Okinawa. Aya Kokumai and Tetsu Watanabe co-star; Masayuki Mori, Hisao Nabeshima and Takio Yoshida produce this Rolling Thunder effort. (Miramax, 4/4 NY/LA)

Exploitips: To attract more than the action/martial arts demo, make sure to tie in the Quentin Tarantino name (via his Rolling Thunder label), which could attract interest from the hip flick set.

Bliss

In this dramatic love story, Joseph ("Sleep With Me's" Craig Sheffer) learns that his wife, Maria ("Mother Night's" Sheryl Lee) is seeing an unconventional sex therapist. When he confronts the enigmatic Balthazar ("The Adventures of Priscilla, Queen of the Desert's" Terence Stamp), Joseph finds himself on a sensual journey of self-discovery. Lance Young directs and scripts; Allyn Stewart produces. (Triumph, 4/4 ltd)

Exploitips: Triumph did a good job promoting "To Gillian on Her 37th Birthday," though it pulled only $4 mil. despite co-billing for Michelle Pfeiffer. Here, the cast is a bit lower-profile, so expect a similar boxoffice ballpark.

Flamenco

This documentary is directed by Carlos Saura ("Carmen"). The virtually wordless film is a series of vignettes showcasing its male and female performers (Paco de Lucia, Manolo Sanlucar, Lole y Manuel) playing and dancing to the music of flamenco. Juan Lebron Sanchez produces. (New Yorker, 4/4 excl)

Exploitips: Although our 1995 Montreal fest critic (see our Nov. '95 issue) was cool toward "Flamenco" in a two-star review ("'Flamenco' pales as one musical number simply follows another"), he said it was "stunningly shot, scored and directed." Expect the most devoted and mature specialized demo.

APRIL 11

Murder at 1600

Wesley Snipes plays a Washington, D.C. detective investigating a murder at the White House. Soon, he finds himself embroiled in a top-level cover-up. Diane Lane ("Jack") and Alan Alda ("Everyone Says I Love You") co-star. Dwight Little directs; Arnold Kopelson ("Eraser") produces. (Warner, 4/11)

Exploitips: Originally slated by Warner (which houses Clint Eastwood's Malpaso Prods.) to appear before Eastwood's Columbia effort, "Absolute Power," "Murder at 1600" suffers from similarities in storyline. To compensate, exhibitors should accentuate the action and Snipes' presence to best attract the likely young-male/urban audiences.

Kissed

A fateful meeting with a young medical student (Peter Outerbridge) develops the obsession of a young woman (Molly Parker) that love can cross over from the living to the dead. Lynne Stopkewich directs; Stopkewich also scripts with Angus Fraser and produces with Dean English. (Goldwyn, 4/11)

Exploitips: Although an award- (and distributor-) getter at the '96 Toronto fest, our reviewer said Stopkewich steered "a bland course down the middle" in her two-star "necrophilic comedy." This might actually work to the film's benefit, in that its "safe" treatment of a attention-grabbing subject could draw some mainstream moviegoers.

Schizopolis

In this absurdist comedy, Steven Soderbergh creates a (non-German-language!) send-up of Scientology. Soderbergh stars in two roles; Betsy Brantley and David Jensen co-star. Soderbergh directs and scripts; John Hardy produces. (Northern Arts, 4/11 NY)

Exploitips: Although our Toronto fest reviewer said that Soderbergh's deliberately "raw" technique—lines on the screen, badly lipsynched sound and no credits other than the film title and The End—eventually grows tiresome, the movie itself is "more entertaining than one would think." Accent the satire.

Leo Tolstoy's Anna Karenina

Filmed on location in St. Petersburg, Russia, Tolstoy's classic tale follows the heartbreaking, tempestuous romance between the aristocratic Anna Karenina ("Braveheart's" Sophie Marceau) and Count Alexei Vronsky and the contrasting romance and marriage of their friends Levin and Kitty ("The Crow: City of Angels'" Mia Kirshner). Sean Bean and Alfred Molina ("The Perez Family") also star. Bernard Rose ("Immortal Beloved") directs and adapts; Bruce Davey produces for Mel Gibson's Icon Prods. (Warner, 4/4 ltd)

Exploitips: Rose has a penchant for the classic, and this adaptotion lends itself to bookstore tie-ins to attract the literary. But exhibitors should play up the fire-and-ice aspects of this Russian romance—and should highlight the presences of Marceau and Kirshner to interest the most likely distaff demo. Expect full studio support for this production from the Warner-based Icon.

Pink Flamingos

John Waters' infamous 1972 film returns for its 25th anniversary. The story: a trailer-house woman (Divine) competes with other unsavories for the title of the world's filthiest person. David Lochary, Mink Stole and Edith Massey co-star. (Fine Line, 4/11)

Exploitips: Catchline: "After 25 years, this 'exercise in bad taste' tastes even worse."

APRIL 18

Anaconda

A documentary crew's journey on the Amazon River becomes a fight for survival against the world's largest snake in this adventure film from director Luis Llosa. Jennifer Lopez ("Selena"), Ice Cube, Jon Voight, Eric Stoltz and Owen Wilson ("Bottle Rocket") star; Hans Bauer, John M. Mandel, Jim Cash & Jack Epps Jr., Neal Jimenez and Mark Haskell Smith script; Verna Harrah, Carole Little and Leonard Rabinowitz produce. (Columbia, 4/18)

Exploitips: "Congo" was an unexpected hit without a big monster; this has one. But the what's-that-again "Anaconda" title recalls one of Murray Hamilton's "Jaws" lines: "You say, 'Barracuda,' people say, 'Huh? What?' You say, 'Shark'—you have a panic on your hands on the Fourth of July." Yet Columbia has been running TV spots since January to build audience awareness, and this has the adventure genre to itself through month's end.

Romy and Michele's High School Reunion

Best friends and party girls Romy ("Mighty Aphrodite's" Mira Sorvino) and Michele (Lisa Kudrow, another of TV's "Friends") decide to return and reinvent themselves for their 10-year high school reunion by concocting fantasies of wealth and success. But their scheme unravels with the arrival of Heather Mooney ("The Truth About Cats and Dogs'" Janeane Garofalo), who knows their real stories. David Mirkin directs from Robin Schiff's adaptation of her stage play, "The Ladies' Room"; Laurence Mark produces. (Buena Vista, 4/18)

Exploitips: While the boys are over at "Anaconda," the girls will be here. The distaff-themed "The Truth About Cats and Dogs" did $35 million serving that audience, and this looks to be aiming for similar results.

Addicted to Love

In this romantic comedy, Meg Ryan and Matthew Broderick star as jilted lovers who team to exact revenge on their former amours, who have moved in together. Kelly Preston ("Jerry Maguire") and Tcheky Karyo ("La Femme Nikita") co-star for Griffin Dunne; Robert Gordon scripts; Bobby Newmyer and Jeffrey Silver produce for Outlaw. (Warner, 4/18)

Exploitips: Although it's generally true that, while the boys are at "Anaconda" and the girls are at "Romy and Michele's High School Reunion," the boys and girls on dates will be at "Addicted to Love," the latter two are likely to suffer more cross-competition. Expect "Addicted to Love" to enlist 30+ moviegoers, while twentysomethings hang with Romy & Michele.

Roseanna's Grave

In this English-language comedy, a husband (Jean Reno) goes to comic lengths to assure his dying wife (Mercedes Ruehl) a burial plot in her Italian village's almost-full graveyard. Polly Walker co-stars. Paul Weiland directs; Saul Turteltaub, Dick Clement and Ian Le Frenais script; Paul Trijbits, Alison Owen and Dario Poloni produce. (Fine Line, 4/18 NY/LA)

Exploitips: Fine Line was sure enough of this in-house production to showcase it at Showeast; it's also releasing this art-houser in SDDS and Dolby SR-D, another sign it thinks this film has crossover potential.

Talk of Angels

A sort of gender-bender variant on Ken Loach's "Land and Freedom," this PG-13 drama tells the story of a young Irish woman who arrives in Spain on the eve of the country's civil war. Polly Walker ("Restoration"), Vincent Perez ("The Crow: City of Angels"), Frances McDormand ("Fargo") and Franco Nero star for director Nick Hamm; Ann Guedes and Frank McGuinness script; Patrick Cassavetti produces. (Miramax, 4/18)

Exploitips: On one hand, this has elements that could make it one of the month's stronger art-house releases; on the other hand, "Talk of Angels" has long sat on Miramax's clogged to-come slate. Best bets are the date-night college crowd and the usual specialized suspects (the educated 40+ demo).

Hollow Reed

A father ("The Portrait of a Lady's" Martin Donovan) is pitted against his ex-wife in a brutal custody battle that forces him to reveal his homosexuality and threatens the safety of his child. Joely Richardson ("101 Dalmatians") and Ian Hart ("Nothing Personal") co-star for director Angela Pope ("Captives"); Paula Milne scripts; Nik Powell and Stephen Woolley produce. (CFP, 4/18 NY excl)

Exploitips: Our Ft. Lauderdale fest critic in a three-star review calls "Hollow Reed" "restrained but harrowing.... [W]hat might have turned maudlin...is instead quite moving."

APRIL 25

Kiss the Girls

In this suspense thriller, a police psychologist ("Seven's" Morgan Freeman) and a young doctor ("Heat's" Ashley Judd) search for an abducted female. Gary Fleder ("Things to Do in Denver When You're Dead") directs; David Klass adapts James Patterson's best-seller; David Brown and Joe Wizan produce. (Paramount, 4/25)

Exploitips: Will the estimable talent involved counterbalance the narrative's missing boxoffice element, a young male hero, with which the likes of "Seven" have profited? "Kiss the Girls" was moved from 2/28, when it would have gone against the similar-demo, testosterone-heavy "Donnie Brasco."

Office Killer

In this suspense thriller, Molly Ringwald, Carol Kane and Jeanne Tripplehorn star for Cindy Sherman, a conceptual artist/photographer here making her feature directing debut (as did artist Julian Schnabel with Miramax's "Basquiat"). Christine Vachon and Pam Koffler produce for Good Fear, with James Schamus and Ted Hope among four executive producers. (Miramax, 4/23 NY/LA)

Exploitips: Only Miramax would have thought to release "Scream" at Christmas, and only Miramax would insist a movie called "Office Killer" go 4/23—Secretary's Day. And only Miramax would have a conceptual artist do a slasher flick. But the Vachon, Schamus and Hope names are well-proven in indie land, and one can expect one of Miramax's nonpareil marketing schemes here.

The Assignment

In this espionage thriller (aka "Jackal"), U.S. naval officer Annibal Ramirez ("Michael Collins'" Aidan Quinn) must risk his identity by pretending to become an infamous international terrorist. Donald Sutherland and Ben Kingsley co-star as CIA and Israeli agents who select Ramirez for his deadly assignment. Christian Duguay directs; Dan Gordon and Sabi H. Shabtai script; Tom Berry and Franco Battista produce. (Triumph, 4/25)

Exploitips: This Triumph effort won't impede "Kiss the Girls" the way TriStar's "Donnie Brasco" might have, but all three 4/25 thrillers will split their greater genre demo. "Kiss the Girls" has studio strength behind it, but no male

THEATRE EXHIBITION EQUIPMENT

XENON BULBS

BOOTH SUPPLIES & LENSES

FILM PROJECTORS & SOUND SYSTEMS

NCS CORPORATION

WORLDWIDE CINEMA SUPPLY DEALER

Theatre Equipment Association

NCS 1926 70 YEARS 1996 CORPORATION

NAC CONCESSIONAIRES

★ ONE STOP SHOPPING SOURCE

★ FACTORY DIRECT PRICING

★ TOLL FREE ORDERING

NEW! ★ MAJOR CREDIT CARDS ACCEPTED NEW!

★ PROFESSIONAL SUPPORT TEAM

★ WORLDWIDE PRODUCT DISTRIBUTION

★ OUR GUARANTEE - 100% SATISFACTION

Call 1-800-776-6271

VISA

Supplying the Entertainment Industry Since 1926

CONCESSION & LOBBY PRODUCTS

LOBBY & BOX OFFICE FIXTURES

NEW & USED EQUIPMENT

SCREENS & FRAMES

Response No. 6

LaserLens

Narrow slit lens for optical stereo soundtracks with integrated Solid State Laser light source.

Replace your existing sound lens and exciter bulb without modification to the soundhead, quickly and easily.

- 20,000 hours life expectancy of laser light source.
- Better channel separation than conventional exciter system.
- Extended frequency response for better sound fidelity.
- Use present DC exciter supply or low cost special supply.
- Uses the present stereo solar cell. Forward scan.
- Fits Simplex, Ballentine, Century, RCA soundheads.
- Makes any stereo processor sound better.

SMART Theatre Systems
5945 Peachtree Corners East
Norcross, Georgia 30071 - U.S.A.
(800) 45-SMART or (770) 449-6698
FAX: (770) 449-6728

THE ADVENTURES OF SUPERSMART

SMART

Please call for information on how you can get a "Total Support" system of matched components in your theatre.

L.A. Confidential

Based on the James Ellroy crime novel, "L.A. Confidential" is a hard-boiled tale of corruption set in the '50s, when Los Angeles was becoming a metropolis. During this heady era, a cast of gritty, colorful characters on both sides of the law intersect in a web of crime and deceit. Kim Basinger ("Pret-a-Porter"), Kevin Spacey ("The Usual Suspects"), Danny DeVito ("Matilda") and James Cromwell ("Star Trek: First Contact") star. Curtis Hanson ("The River Wild") directs; Brian Helgeland adapts; Arnon Milchan produces for New Regency. (Warner, 4/25)

Exploitips: April 25 could become a Black Friday equal to the infamous 10/13/95, when the similar-demos "Jade," "Strange Days" and "The Scarlet Letter" went head-to-head and all lost. Still, "L.A. Confidential," bearing the cross-promotable Ellroy imprimatur and the weekend's most audience-amenable cast, looks to be the odds-on favorite for first place come Monday's b.o. tally.

lead; "Office Killer" has the savvy Miramax but three female leads; "The Assignment" has the usual male casting but perhaps the least profile. Advantage: "L.A. Confidential."

Eight Heads in a Duffel Bag

In this comedy, Joe Pesci is a mob bag man who finds that his luggage containing the proof of his most recent hit has been switched. Carol Kane, George Hamilton and Kristy Swanson co-star. Oscar-winning scripter Tom Schulman ("Dead Poets Society") makes his directing debut; Brad Krevoy, Steve Stabler and John Bertolli produce for MPCA. (Orion, 4/25)

Exploitips: Heads will roll here and in "Office Killer," but for which will auds stroll the aisles? The marketing nod goes to Miramax, but—all else being equal—comedy outsells suspensers. Pesci also provides marquee help.

All Over Me

Fifteen-year-old best friends Claude ("To Die For's" Alison Folland) and Ellen ("True Crimes'" Tara Subkoff) begin to separate. Alex Sichel directs her feature debut; sister Sylvia Sichel scripts; Dolly Hall ("...Two Girls in Love") produces. (Fine Line, 4/25)

Exploitips: Made for the same audiences that attended "...Two Girls in Love" in '95 and "Manny & Lo" in '96. Held from March.

Brassed Off

A local brass band embarks on the competitive circuit as a mine closure threat hangs heavy over their small Yorkshire hamlet. Pete Postlethwaite ("Dragonheart"), Tara Fitzgerald ("Sirens") and Ewan McGregor ("Trainspotting") star in this gritty but heartwarming tale. Mark Herman directs and scripts; Steve Abbott produces. (Miramax, 4/25 NY/LA)

Exploitips: Bearing good reviews from Sundance, "Brassed Off"—Yorkshire brogue for, ah, "upset"—is its weekend's standard-item art-house fare. McGregor's "Trainspotting" credit is the most salable among the players'.

Mondo

A gypsy boy wanders the streets of Nice. Ovidiu Balan, Philippe Petit and Pierette Fesch star. Tony Gatlif directs and adapts the novel "Ed. Gallinard" by J.M.G. Le Clezio; Michele Ray-Gavras produces. (Shadow, 4/25)

Exploitips: Our critic, in a 3 1/2-star review, called this "rich with beautiful imagery and emotionally stirring music...a sparkling gem in a sea of tired, formulaic films."

APRIL UNDATED

McHale's Navy

This action/comedy stars Tom Arnold ("The Stupids") as the motley-crewed Navy officer lured back into today's service to thwart a new nemesis: a maniacal terrorist (Tim Curry). Co-starring are David Alan Grier, Dean Stockwell and Ernest Borgnine, the original TV McHale. Bryan Spicer ("Mighty Morphin Power Rangers") directs; Peter Crabbe and Andy Rose script; Lance Hool and Perry Katz executive produce for the Bubble Factory. See photo, p. 10. (Universal, likely 4/18 or 4/25)

Exploitips: Universal has had considerable success with its returns to one-time TV properties ("The Flintstones," "The Little Rascals," "Casper"), but its last—the Bubble Factory's "Flipper"—made only $20 mil. Expect "McHale's Navy" to find better sailing based on perfect casting and a wider age reach.

Breakdown

A married couple (Kurt Russell and Kathleen Quinlan) encounter trouble when killers abduct the wife. J.T. Walsh co-stars for writer/director Jonathan Moslow; Dino De Laurentiis produces. (Paramount)

Exploitips: The similar "The Vanishing" did about that at the 1993 boxoffice with similar marquee wattage; the De Laurentiis name is a long-lived one, even if most of his releases were short-lived in theatres. "Breakdown" needs a soft weekend slot to break through.

Venice

Set in 16th-century Venice, this film (aka "Indiscretion" and "The Honest Courtesan") follows a beautiful but poor woman ("Braveheart's" Catherine McCormack) who seeks power to win the man she loves ("Cold Comfort Farm's" Rufus Sewell). Moira Kelly and Jacqueline Bisset co-star. Marshall Herskovitz directs; Arnon Milchan, Sarah Caplan and Ed Zwick produce for New Regency. (Warner)

Exploitips: Moved from Christmas, "Venice" is a period piece with a female lead and a foreign setting—making this fare for the same distaff demo and art-house audiences drawn to "The Portrait of a Lady." So emphasize the romantic passion and exotic setting.

Paradise Road

This drama concerns women interned in a Japanese prison camp during World War II and stars Glenn Close, Frances McDormand ("Fargo") and Julianna Margulies. Bruce Beresford directs and scripts; Greg Coote and Sue Milliken produce. (Fox Searchlight)

Exploitips: Expect identical demos as for "Venice"; the same theme plus a male lead (Dennis Quaid) in 1990 didn't click wide for Fox for Alan Parker's "Come See the Paradise."

Traveller

A veteran swindler ("Twister's" Bill Paxton) and his protege ("Fear's" Mark Wahlberg) become involved with a complicated con set in motion by fellow "Travellers"—an extended family of con men with strict codes of secrecy and conduct—that could bring them wealth or death. Julianna Margulies co-stars. Jack Green directs; Jim McGlynn scripts; Paxton helps produce. (October)

Exploitips: Its cast a sign of October's continued growth, "Traveller" would also require drawing beyond the art-house confines to succeed the way "The Usual Suspects" did for Gramercy. Highlighting the Paxton/Wahlberg duo will help draw older and young males.

Ripe

Two abused sisters (Monica Keena and Daisy Eagan) are freed by car crash from their family hell, but their own relationship grows violent. Mo Ogrodnik directs and scripts; Tom Razzano and Suzy Landa produce. (Trimark)

Exploitips: Our Toronto fest critic gave "Ripe" a one-star review. ("Nothing in 'Ripe' rings true.") But emphasizing the female sibling element can draw the "Manny & Lo" crowd.

The Winner

A winner at Vegas' gambling tables becomes the target of an elaborate con scheme. Rebecca de Mornay, Vincent D'Onofrio ("Good Luck"), Delroy Lindo ("Clockers") and Billy Bob Thorton ("Sling Blade") star. Alex Cox directs; Ken Schwenker produces. (Live)

Exploitips: The name cast could draw mainstream interest, even as the Cox ("Sid and Nancy," "Repo Man") credit will pull art-housers. Bottom line: a similar-numbers turnout as for Goldwyn's February opener, the similarly themed "Hard 8."

Late Bloomers

A high school secretary (Dee Hennigan) suspects a geometry teacher (Connie Nelson) of having an affair with her husband. Confrontation begets friendship begets love. Julia Dyer directs; Gretchen Dyer scripts; both produce with Stephen Dyer. (Strand)

Exploitips: The slightly sensational topic could draw part of the more mainstream distaff demo; still, most business should be in select sites with the lesbian moviegoers that came to the likes of "Go Fish."

The Leading Man

A married playwright has an affair with the leading lady of his new play while the leading man of the show ("Moonlight & Valentino's" Jon Bon Jovi) seduces the wife for his own gain. David Warner, Anna Galiena and Lambert Wilson co-star. John Duigan ("The Journey of August King") directs and scripts; Doug Chapin and Barry Krost produce. (Legacy)

Exploitips: This is perhaps Legacy's strongest entry to date, with solid art-house names (Duigan, Galiena) and a twentysomething fave (rocker Bon Jovi). Possible downside: Duigan has proved far stronger with coming-of-age tales ("The Year My Voice Broke," "Flirting") than with grownup raciness ("Sirens," "Wide Sargasso Sea").

Irma Vep

A has-been French director (Jean-Pierre Leaud) hires Hong Kong action star Maggie Cheung (playing herself) to portray a jewel thief in a remake of a silent classic. As the director loses control of the shoot, his actress encounters her own problems, including the advances of a lesbian costumer (Nathalie Richard). Oliver Assayas directs and scripts; Georges Benayoun produces. (Zeitgeist)

Exploitips: Our Telluride critic gave this a 2 1/2-star review, on the plus side citing its lightness and interesting French/Asian culture-clashing but on the minus calling its characterizations "superficially developed." Yet the setup sounds like a good one for drawing the French-language crowd.

Fetishes

Filmed at Pandora's Box, the infamous S&M parlor in New York, this unique documentary reveals the full range of fetishes, from the humorous to the most bizarre sociopolitical twists. Nick Broomfield ("Hollywood Madam") directs, and he produces with Michelle D'Acosta. (Cinema Village Releasing)

Exploitips: The new Cinema Village is making a quick name for itself with its blue pickups ("Screwed"). Highlighting the blueness will draw the type's specitic constituency. Catchline: "Inside the Pandora's Box of sexuality you will find 'Fetishes.'"

The Next Step

This Broadway dance film follows an aging stage performer (Broadway star Rick Negron) as he tries to decide whether to find a new musical vehicle for himself and give up the woman he loves, or retire from dancing and settle down with her. Broadway dancer Denise Faye co-stars for director Christian Faber ("Bail Jumper"). (Phaedra)

Exploitips: Filmhaus became Filmopolis became Phaedra, and in any incarnation the house has done an intriguing job of finding good but very select-site fare.

Plump Fiction

All is going well for two insect exterminators until their boss asks one to "exterminate" his wife. Paul Dinello, Tommy Davidson, Robert Costanza, Julie Brown and Sandra Bernhard star. Bob Koherr directs and scripts; Gary Binkow produces. (Rhino)

Exploitips: Postponed from summer '96 and then Feb. '97, this "Pulp Fiction" spoof gets less timely the longer Rhino waits. Runs in college markets are the best bet.

NATIONAL CINEMA SERVICE
CORPORATION

(800) 726-2609

ITEA International Theatre Equipment Association

PROFESSIONAL SERVICES AND PRODUCTS
INCLUDING

INSTALLATION
AUDIO RACKING
THX RECERTIFICATIONS
TECHNICAL CONSULTING
24 HOUR ANSWERING SERVICE
VIDEO PROJECTION
INTERMITTENT REPAIR

EQUIPMENT
PROJECTION SERVICE*
SOUND SERVICE*
PARTS
BOOTH SUPPLIES
*Annual Contracts or Demand Service

XENON BULBS
SOUND SYSTEMS
CONCESSION EQUIPMENT
LOBBY FIXTURES
FRONT ENDS
LENSES
USED EQUIPMENT

P.O. Box 10799
New Orleans, Louisiana 70181

GOOD SIGHT, GOOD SOUND
THE KEY TO GREAT CONCESSIONS

UP, UP & AWAY!

Admissions were up, the Blockbuster was back, and the Cold War was finally behind us. A look at the trends of 1996. by Ray Greene

Although the numbers don't quite tell the whole story (they never do), it's clear that 1996 was one of the most impressive movie years on record. Overall U.S. boxoffice was up almost 8 percent to an all-time high of $5.9 billion, with U.S. movie ticket sales running at approximately 1.4 billion—their highest level since 1959.

That date is a significant one, because 1959 is largely thought of as the year TV viewing began to get the upper hand on moviegoing. The current attendance surge can be attributed to a variety of factors: the '90s production boom, which has seen more high-profile films making it to market with each passing year, plus the fact that the studios and "niche" distributors have become more and more sophisticated in their ability to couple "can't miss" megahits with carefully marketed specialty titles, thereby maximizing admissions across all sectors of the audience.

An additional (and too frequently overlooked) key to the recent robust growth in admissions is the upgrading of the U.S. theatre infrastructure as a result of the "megaplexing" phenomenon. In 1996, exhibition circuits with a U.S. presence continued to offer moviegoers bigger screens in larger theatre complexes, featuring more comfortable seating, state-of-the-art acoustics and a variety of themed entertainment incentives that were unavailable just a few short years ago. As it has for so much of the 1990s, the exhibition industry kept building it, and the audience continued to come.

IN: Alien encounters, cost overruns. The emblematic film of the year? Tim Burton's "Mars Attacks!"

TRENDS 1996: THE CREATIVE SIDE

Based on the final returns for the year, the "blockbuster" movie was back bigtime in 1996, although it did take more varied shapes than it has in the recent past. Tough-to-pigeonhole titles like "The Birdcage," "Phenomenon" and "The First Wives Club" were all high on the list of the year's top grossers, while such "surefire" attractions as Disney's animated "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and the Jim Carrey comedy "The Cable Guy" fell well short of expectations.

With the exception of Arnold Schwarzenegger, who did just fine at the boxoffice with his by-the-numbers actioner "Eraser," macho action superstars all had trouble bringing audiences into theatres. The law of diminishing returns seems at last to be working against second-tier action fixtures like Jean-Claude Van Damme (whose two 1996 films, "The Quest" and "Maximum Risk," grossed a paltry combined $34.8 million in the U.S.) and Steven Seagal (whose "Glimmer Man" raked in just $19.8 million).

Part-time action god and "Speed"-ster Keanu Reeves fizzled in "Chain Reaction," despite the directing talents of "Fugitive" filmmaker Andrew Davis. Meanwhile, the once invincible Sylvester Stallone saw his career continue the boxoffice freefall commenced by 1995's "Judge Dredd" and "Assassins." Though paid a reported $20 million for his performance in the disaster flick "Daylight," the Stallone name turned out to be more of a turn-off than a turn-on to U.S. audiences, which stayed away in droves.

In point of fact, slumming "serious" actors Tom Cruise and Nick Cage were arguably the top action draws of 1996. All of which inspires some rumination about the changing face of the American blockbuster. To whit: Despite the boxoffice success of Cage's "Die-Hard-at-Alcatraz" formula epic "The Rock," 1996 demonstrated that the "Rambo"/"Die Hard"/"Lethal Weapon" action model that has reigned at the U.S. boxoffice for the past decade may be on the wane. Given how oversaturated that particular subgenre has been in recent years, it's hard to imagine that any but the most die-hard "Die Hard" fan will ultimately mourn its passing.

Creatively and thematically, 1996 was also the year that U.S.-produced movies finally got over the end of the Cold War. At the popular level, this phenomenon manifested itself in the two most discernible commercial trends of the year: the revival of the '50s-era "space invaders" genre ("Independence Day," "Space Jam," "Mars Attacks!") and the return of the '70s-era "disaster" film ("Twister," "Independence Day" and a host of other titles such as "Volcano" and "Titanic" which were shot in '96 for a '97 release.)

Even given pop culture's ongoing fascination with all things retro, what explains the surprising re-emergence of two movie subgenres so outdated that they had survived into the 1990s only as subjects for camp humor? How did Roger Corman and Irwin Allen suddenly surface as the ancient unsung avatars of the two most prominent strains of contemporary moviegoing entertainment?

The answer is a simple combination of two symbiotic developments. The first is the technological explosion that has taken place in digital imaging. Pretty much anything that can be imagined can be created using CGI technology at this point, so the empty spectacle quotient inherent in large-scale disaster makes martian invasions and the wrath of Mother Nature equally viable screen subjects for the '90s.

More important is the way that both the "extraterrestrial hostilities" and "inexplicable forces of nature" scenarios resolve the fundamental story dilemma of our time. Which is: now that the Cold War is over and there are no Russians to battle, just who is an imposing enough threat to qualify as a menace to the average American audience-member's way of life? As entities beyond ideology, both little green men and the various seismic and climatic shocks this planet is heir to made ideal foes for the transitional, single-superpower era we're moving through today.

BOXOFFICE BAROMETER: 1996 IN REVIEW

THE BUSINESS SIDE

If 1996 was characterized by any one trend on the business side, it was that the creeping gigantism which has been at work in the movie industry since the mid-1970s finally became the film biz's unquestioned norm. Okay, sure. The Hollywood studios have been throwing money at the screen and calling it entertainment for years. But there used to be some (at least feigned) soul-searching about it, some small, still voice of dissent buried within the complete lack of a sense of proportion. There used to be people making movies who seemed to feel like there just had to be a better way.

Not this year, though. Production and marketing costs soared; the estimated average for getting a major studio title to market climbed to a record $60 million by some estimates. Yet conspicuous in its absence was that one big "runaway production" story (a la "Waterworld," "Last Action Hero" or "Bonfire of the Vanities") to act as the unifying metaphor for the wretched excess of current production philosophies. Pundits who used to keel over like the proverbial canary in a coal mine at the first whiff of a $20 million cost overrun barely bothered to comment on such Olympic-sized budget-busters as "Space Jam," "Mars Attacks!," "Eraser" or "The Long Kiss Goodnight"—each a film which might have incited a scathing press and a bestselling nonfiction expose' just a few short years ago.

Movies like "Waterworld" and "Last Action Hero" were easy for the press to single out for punishment because, in the extremity of their overspending, they were still something of the exception. But it's harder to come down on a film like "Eraser" (to take a randomly selected example) since it merely epitomizes the new Hollywood rule. Alleged friction between star and director, last-minute production difficulties, a rewriting process which extended well into filming, plus an unimaginably expensive star salary all combined to push "Eraser" well above its original projected budget. But so what? Variations on that theme were at work on perhaps a dozen of the most expensive theatrical features of 1996, several of which (for example, "The Rock" and "Space Jam," in addition to "Eraser" itself) managed to perform at the boxoffice anyway.

OUT: Formula action films and the stars who populate them. Schwarzenegger did fine, but Van Damme, Seagal and Stallone may have just been erased.

As star salaries rise up to and beyond the $20 million mark and overall production and marketing expenses spiral out of sight, there no longer seems to be a ceiling beyond which film costs cannot rise. The magic of studio accounting, coupled with those ever-popular ancillary revenue sources (and the growing importance of the overseas market, where U.S.-produced product is currently outgrossing its domestic take), somehow manages to keep the whole leaky vessel of big-budget U.S. filmmaking afloat.

In looking over the way the distribution side of the film business operated in 1996, it seems like the sacked executives and blighted careers caught up in such benchmark "runaway" productions of the past as "Cleopatra," "Heaven's Gate," "One From the Heart" and "Apocalypse Now" have earned a serious apology. Where previous observers found nothing but bloat, waste and dry-rot in such overly expensive cinematic efforts, the business cycle of 1996 showed their makers to have been prophets without honor. As the standardization of the $100 million production budget becomes a thinkable possibility, the most historically reckless of Hollywood's big-time spenders may have turned out to be moviemaking's ultimate visionaries, after all.

1997 Barometer Star Poll Results

Female Star of the Year

Sandra Bullock

For the second year in a row, Sandra Bullock found Boxoffice's Barometer Star Poll "a time to" win the Female Star of the Year award. Both in 1996 and this year's 1997 poll, voters selected their engaging star as the number one favorite. Audiences flocked to see her performance as the eager young law student opposite this year's Most Promising Male Newcomer, Matthew McConaughey, in the blockbuster "A Time to Kill." Bullock also starred in the less-than-encouraging romantic comedy effort "Two If By Sea" and the epic romance, "In Love and War." Now filming "Speed II: Cruise Control" with Jason Patrick ("Sleepers"), the A-list actress plans to next star in "Hope Floats" to be directed by Forest Whitaker ("Waiting to Exhale").

Michelle Pfeiffer went from TV reporter ("Up Close & Personal") to dead wife ("To Gillian on Her 37th Birthday") to harried mom ("One Fine Day") and moved up from number five on last year's poll to take second place. "A Thousand Acres" is Pfeiffer's next project out of the gate.

Goldie Hawn wins third place for her return to fine form in "The First Wives Club" and "Everyone Says I Love You."

Most Promising Female Newcomer

Gwyneth Paltrow is the bearer of 1997's Most Promising Female Newcomer award. Paltrow proved herself to be more than just the girl who got Brad Pitt with her engaging performances in "Emma" and "The Pallbearer." Next up for the rising star is "Kilronan" and "Great Expectations." Janeane Garofalo came in second for her comedic presence in "The Truth about Cats and Dogs" and "Larger Than Life." And rock star-daughter-turned-indie-film-poster-girl Liv Tyler earned third place for her breakout performances in three films: "That Thing You Do!," "Stealing Beauty" and "Heavy."

Gwyneth Paltrow

Female Star of the Year

1. Sandra Bullock, " In Love and War," "A Time to Kill," "Two If By Sea"
2. Michelle Pfeiffer, "One Fine Day," "To Gillian...," "Up Close & Personal"
3. Goldie Hawn, "Everyone Says I Love You," "The First Wives Club"
4. Glenn Close, "101 Dalmatians," "Mars Attacks!," "Mary Reilly"
5. Rene Russo, "Ransom," "Tin Cup"
6. Frances McDormand, "Fargo" "
7. Clair Danes, "Romeo & Juliet," "To Gillian..."
8. Meg Ryan, "Courage Under Fire"
9. Uma Thurman, "The Truth About Cats and Dogs," "Beautiful Girls"
10. Natalie Portman, "Mars Attacks!," "Everyone Says...," "Beautiful Girls"

Female Newcomer

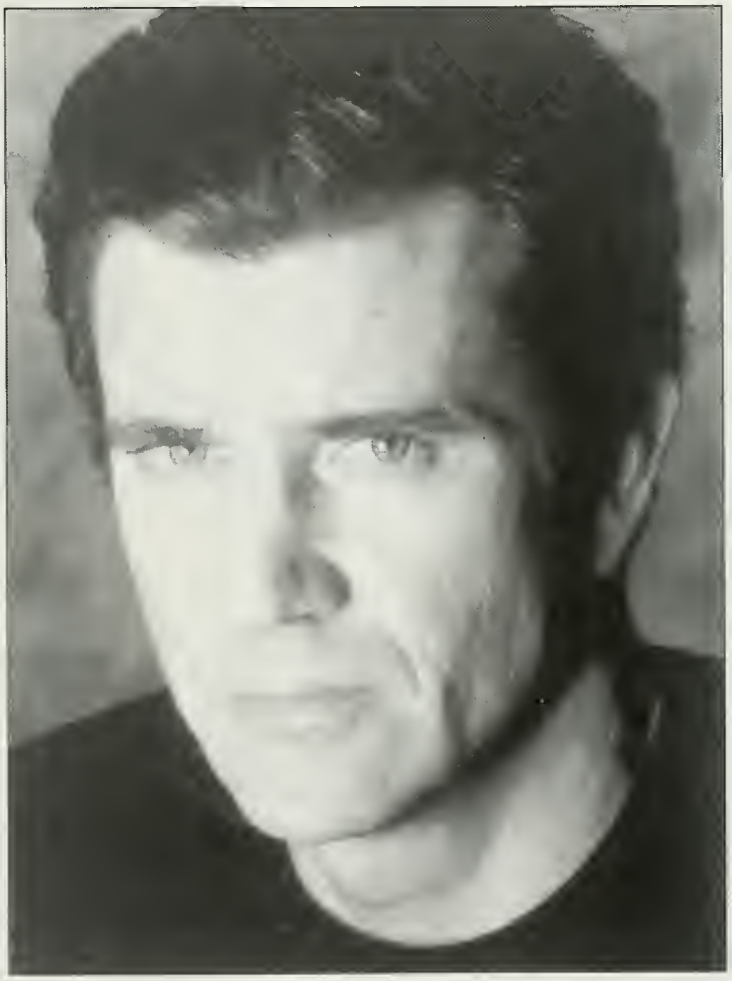
1. Gwyneth Paltrow, "Emma," "The Pallbearer"
2. Janeane Garofalo, "Larger Than Life," "The Truth About Cats and Dogs"
3. Liv Tyler, "That Thing You Do!," "Stealing Beauty," "Heavy"
4. Courtney Love, "The People vs. Larry Flynt," "Feeling Minnesota"
5. Jennifer Aniston, "She's the One"

1997 Barometer Star Poll Results

Most Promising Male Newcomer

Matthew McConaughey sweated out the competition to win the Breakout Star of the Year for his roles in "A Time to Kill," "Larger Than Life" and "Lone Star." McConaughey, a former University of Texas film student, next stars with Jodie Foster in "Contact." Holy Breakouts, Batman!—Television's "E.R." star, George Clooney took second place for roles in "From Dusk Till Dawn" and "One Fine Day." After donning the batsuit for "Batman and Robin," Clooney will star in "The Peacemaker." Nathan Lane captured third place for his hilarious turn as star transvestite/wife/mom in "The Birdcage."

Matthew McConaughey



Male Star of the Year

1. Mel Gibson, "Ransom"
2. Tom Cruise, "Jerry Maguire," "Mission: Impossible"
3. John Travolta, "Michael," "Phenomenon," "Broken Arrow"
4. Sean Connery, "The Rock"
5. Denzel Washington, "The Preacher's Wife," "Courage Under Fire"
6. Robert De Niro, "Marvin's Room," "Sleepers," "The Fan"
7. Samuel L. Jackson, "The Long Kiss Goodnight," "A Time to Kill"
8. Robin Williams, "The Birdcage," "Jack"
9. Gary Sinise, "Ransom"
10. (tie) Kevin Costner, "Tin Cup"
10. (tie) Arnold Swarzenegger, "Jingle All the Way," "Eraser"

Male Newcomer

1. Matthew McConaughey, "A Time to Kill," "Larger Than Life," "Lone Star"
2. George Clooney, "One Fine Day," "From Dusk Till Dawn"
3. Nathan Lane, "The Birdcage"
4. Jackie Chan, "Supercop," "Rumble in the Bronx," "Jackie Chan's First Strike"
5. Tom Everett Scott, "That Thing You Do!"

Male Star of the Year

Mel Gibson

Mel Gibson kidnapped the most votes for his role in "Ransom," playing a powerful businessman who faces the most important negotiation of his life when his son is abducted. Next up, the multi-talented star will be seen opposite Julia Roberts in "Conspiracy Theory" as a cabby obsessed with conspiracy theories who finds himself embroiled in one.

Tom Cruise starred in two of the biggest movies of 1996's blockbuster-happy year garnering Cruise second place on BOXOFFICE's Barometer Poll—for the convoluted "Mission: Impossible" and the sports/love story, "Jerry Maguire" for which he won a golden globe. Cruise is currently in production with wife and co-star Nicole Kidman on "Eyes Wide Shut" from director Stanley Kubrick.

And John Travolta took third place for three hit movies this past year, "Michael," "Phenomenon" and "Broken Arrow." Coming soon from the prolific Travolta is "Mad City" opposite Dustin Hoffman, "Face Off," which reteams him with director John Woo ("Broken Arrow"), "She's De Lovely" and "Primary Colors."

1996 BY THE NUMBERS

Grosses, Critical Performance and Other Pertinent Data on the Year in Film

TITLE/MPAA DISTRIBUTOR 5 Excellent 4 Good 3 Fair 2 Poor 1 Very Poor	RUN TIME	GENRE	REVIEWED IN ISSUE	BOXOFFICE	VARIETY	H. REPORTER	L.A. TIMES	N.Y. TIMES	USA TODAY	AVERAGE	TOTAL BOXOFFICE $ *
Ace Ventura: When Nature Calls PG-13 (WB)	92	C	1-96	2	4	4	2	2	2	2.7	108.3
Across the Sea of Time G (SC)	40	D	2-96	2						2.0	7.7
Adventures of Pinocchio G (NL)	96	F	10-96	3	3	3	3	2	3	2.8	15.0
Alaska PG (Col)	105	Adv	9-96	2	2	3	3			2.5	11.6
All Dogs Go To Heaven 2 G (MGM)	84	Ani	7-96	1	2	2	2	3		2.0	8.5
American Buffalo R (Gol)	85	D	11-96	2	2	2	2	2	2	2.0	0.5
The American President PG-13 (Col)	112	R C	1-96	3	3	4	3	3	3	3.2	59.9
The Arrival PG-13 (Ori)	111	ThSF	7-96	3	2		3	3		2.8	14.0
The Associate PG-13 (BV)	114	C	12-96	3	3	2	3	2	2	2.5	12.3
August PG (Gol)	106	D	7-96	2	2		3	2		2.3	0.1
Babe G (Uni)	91	F	9-95	4	4	4	4	3	4	3.8	63.6
Balto G (Uni)	70	Ani	2-96	3	2	4	3		3	3.0	11.2
Barb Wire R (Gra)	98	Ac	7-96	2	2	2	2	2	1	1.7	3.6
Basquiat R (Mir)	107	D	9-96	3	3	3	2	2		2.6	2.6
Beautiful Girls R (Mir)	115	R C	3-96	4	2	3	2	3		2.8	10.4
Beavis and Butt-head Do America* PG-13 (Par)	80	Ani	2-97	3	3	2				2.8	41.1
Bed of Roses PG-13 (NL)	87	R	3-96	3	3	2	2		2	2.4	19.0
Before and After PG-13 (BV)	108	D	5-96	2	2	2	2	3	2	2.2	8.6
Big Night* (Gol)	110	D	9-96	3			4	3		3.4	11.0
Bio-Dome PG-13 (MGM)	93	C	3-96	2	1	2	1	1	1	1.3	13.1
The Birdcage R (UA)	120	C	5-96	4	4	4	2		3	3.4	123.6
Black Sheep PG-13 (Par)	85	C	4-96	2	2	2	3	2	1	2.0	32.3
Bogus PG (WB)	112	F D	11-96	3	3	3	3	2	2	2.7	4.3
Bordello of Blood R (Uni)	82	Hor	10-96	2	2	3			1	2.0	5.6
Bottle Rocket R (Col)	95	C	3-96	3	3		4	3		3.3	0.4
Bound R (Gra)	111	Th	4-96	3	4	4	4	3	4	3.6	3.8
Boys PG-13 (BV)	87	R D	7-96	1	2	2	2	2	2	1.8	0.5
Breaking the Waves* R (Oct)	158	D	7-96	2	3	5	2	4		3.2	0.9
Broken Arrow R (Fox)	108	Ac	4-96	3	3		3		3	3.0	70.6
Bulletproof R (Uni)	85	Ac C	11-96	2	1	2	1	2	1	1.5	20.6
The Cable Guy PG-13 (Col)	95	Col	8-96	3	2	3	2		3	2.6	59.6
Carpool PG (WB)	89	C	11-96	2	2	2	2	1		1.8	3.3
Celestial Clockwork (Oct)	85	R C	7-96	3		4	3	3		3.2	0.3
Celtic Pride PG-13 (BV)	91	C	7-96	1	3	3	2	2	3	2.3	9.2
Chain Reaction PG-13 (Fox)	107	AcTh	10-96	2	2	2	2	2	2	2.0	20.6
The Chamber R (Uni)	111	D Th	12-96	3	3	2	2	3	3	2.7	14.3
Citizen Ruth (Mir)	102	C	11-96	4		2	3		3	3.0	0.1
City Hall R (Col)	110	D	3-96	2	3	3	2	2	3	2.5	20.2
City of Lost Children R (SPC)	113	F	9-95	2	3	2				2.3	1.0
Cold Comfort Farm PG (Gra)	98	C	11-95	4	4	4	4	3	4	3.8	5.4
Courage Under Fire R (Fox)	116	D	9-96	2	4	3	4	3	5	3.5	58.1
The Craft R (Col)	99	Th	7-96	3	3	3	3	3	2	2.8	24.7
The Crow 2: City of Angels R (Mir)	85	AcSF	11-96	1	1	2	2	2		1.6	17.9
The Crucible* PG-13 (Fox)	115	D	1-97	4	3	4	3	4		3.7	2.3
Curdled R (Mir)	88	C	11-96	3	2	3	1	3		2.4
Cutthroat Island PG-13 (MGM)	123	AcAd	3-96	2	2	1	1		3	1.8	9.8
D3: The Mighty Ducks* PG (BV)	104	C	12-96	2	3	3		3		2.8	21.9
Daylight* PG-13 (Uni)	114	Ac D	2-97	2	2	3	2	2	2	2.2	25.0
Dead Man Walking R (Gra)	122	D	2-96	5	4	4	4	4	5	4.3	39.4
Dear God PG (Par)	111	C	1-97	3	3	3	2	2	1	2.3	6.9
Diabolique R (WB)	145	Sus	6-96	3	2	2	2	2	2	2.2	17.0
Don't Be A Menace... R (Mir)	84	C	3-96	3	2		2	3		2.5	19.7
Down Periscope PG-13 (Fox)	103	C	5-96	2	3	2	2	2	2	2.2	25.6
Dracula: Dead & Loving It PG-13 (Col)	89	Sat	2-96	3	2	2	1		2	2.0	10.6
Dragonheart PG-13 (Uni)	103	Ac F	7-96	2	3	3	2	2	2	2.3	51.1
Dunston Checks In PG (Fox)	88	C	3-96	2	4	3	3	2	3	2.8	9.4
Ed PG (Uni)	95	C	6-96	1	2	2	1		2	1.6	4.0
Eddie PG-13 (BV)	100	C	8-96	3	2	2	2	3	3	2.5	30.3
Emma (Mir)	111	R C	8-96	4	4	3	3	3	5	3.7	22.1
The English Patient* R (Mir)	159	R	1-97	3	3	4	4	4	4	3.7	22.8
Eraser R (WB)	116	Ac	8-96	3	3	3	2	2	3	2.7	101.2
Escape from L.A. R (Par)	101	Ac	10-96	3	2	2	3	2	3	2.5	24.8
The Evening Star* PG-13 (Par)	129	C D	2-97	2		3				2.5	5.3
Everyone Says I Love You* R (Mir)	100	MusC	1-97	3	4	4			3	3.5	0.1
Evita* PG (BV)	136	Mus	2-97	4	4	2				3.3	0.3
Executive Decision R (WB)	133	Ac	5-96	3	3	3	3	3	2	2.8	56.5
Extreme Measures R (Col)	110	Th	11-96	2	3	2	2	3		2.4	17.4
Eye for an Eye R (Par)	100	Sus	3-96	3	2	3	2	1	2	2.2	26.7
Faithful R (NL)	91	C	6-96	2	2	2	2	2		2.0	2.1
A Family Thing PG-13 (UA)	109	D	6-96	3	2	3	3	3	3	2.8	10.0
The Fan R (Tri)	113	Th	10-96	3	1	2	1		2	1.8	18.4
Fargo R (Gra)	98	D	5-96	4	4	3	3		4	3.6	24.0

Key to story-types: (Ac) Action; (Ad) Adventure; (An) Animated; (C) Comedy; (D) Drama; (Doc) Documentary; (F) Fantasy; (Hor) Horror; (M) Musical; (My) Mystery; (Sat) Satire; (SF) Science Fiction; (Sus) Suspense; (Th) Thriller; (W) Western.

* denotes films still in release at year's end.
 denotes films released in 1995 that continued grossing in 1996.

 Total boxoffice, in millions, as of Dec. 31, 1996*

IF YOUR THEATER IS A PLACE OF PEACE, SERENITY, AND HAPPINESS, YOU MUST BE ON MARS.®

If your theater management system gives you the confidence of knowing you won't lose valuable information during a crisis, you must be on MARS. If your service calls get answered by a human being, you must be on MARS. If you are able to close out your theater quickly each night, you must be on MARS.

MARS is a system designed to run on off-the-shelf hardware while giving you the flexibility to handle all aspects of managing your theaters. From the box office to the concession stand, it allows managers to quickly perform functions so they can spend less time managing their system and more time managing their theater.

To learn more about MARS, call John Ventura at 212-450-8140.

Mars II®
Theater Management System

A division of MovieFone, Inc.

TITLE/MPAA DISTRIBUTOR 5 Excellent 4 Good 3 Fair 2 Poor 1 Very Poor	RUN TIME	GENRE	REVIEWED IN ISSUE	BOXOFFICE	VARIETY	H. REPORTER	L.A. TIMES	N.Y. TIMES	USA TODAY	AVERAGE	TOTAL BOXOFFICE$*
Father of the Bride II PG (BV)	106	C	1-96	3	3	3	3	3		3.1	76.5
Fear R (Uni)	97	Th	7-96	2	2	3	2	2	2	2.2	20.5
Feeling Minnesota R (FL)	96	C	11-96	2	2	2	2	2	1	1.8	3.0
First Kid* PG (BV)	101	C	11-96	3	3	3	2	3	2	2.7	26.1
The First Wives Club* PG (Par)	105	C	11-96	3	3	4	2	3	3	3.0	103.4
Fled R (MGM)	98	Ac	9-96	2	2	2	3	2	2	2.2	17.0
Flipper PG (Uni)	96	Adv	7-96	3	3	3	3	3	2	2.8	20.0
Flirting With Disaster R (Mir)	88	C	5-96	2	3	4	4	4	4	3.5	14.5
Fly Away Home* PG (Col)		D	10-96	3	4	4	4	4		3.8	24.3
Foxfire (Gol)	101	D	8-96	4	2	2		2		2.5
The Frighteners R (Uni)	109	Th	9-96	2	2	3	3	2	2	2.3	16.5
From Dusk Till Dawn R (Mir)	107	Hor	3-96	2	3	2		2	2	2.2	25.7
The Funeral R (Oct)	96	D	10-96	2	3	4	3	4		3.2	1.0
Get On the Bus R (Col)	121	D	11-96	4	4	3	3	3		3.4	5.7
Get Shorty R (MGM)	105	C	1-96	2	3	5	3		3	3.2	71.8
Getting Away With Murder R (Sav)	90	C	7-96	2	1		2	2		1.8
The Ghost and The Darkness R (Par)	117	AcAd	12-96	3	3	3	2	4	2	2.8	37.7
Ghosts of Mississippi* PG-13 (Col)	123	D	2-97	2	2	2				2.0	0.5
Girl 6 R (Fox)	107	C	6-96	2	2	3	2	3	2	2.2	4.9
Girls Town (Oct)		D	4-96	2			4	3		2.0	0.4
The Glimmer Man R (WB)	91	Ac	12-96	3	2	3	2	2		2.4	19.8
GoldenEye PG-13 (UA)	130	Ac	1-96	3	4	3	3	2	4	3.2	106.0
Grace of My Heart (Gra)		D	9-96	4	3	3	3	3		3.2	0.5
The Great White Hype R (Fox)	85	C	7-96	2	3	3	2	3	2	2.5	11.4
Grumpier Old Men PG-13 (WB)	101	C	2-96	3	4	3	3		2	3.0	71.4
Hamlet* PG-13 (Col)	242	D	2-97	4	4	4				4.0	0.1
Happy Gilmore PG-13 (BV)	96	D	5-96	2	2	3		2	3	2.4	38.6
Harriet the Spy PG (Par)	97	Adv	9-96	2	3	3	3	3		2.8	26.2
Heat R (WB)	172	Ac D	2-96	4	4	3	4	2	5	3.7	67.3
Heaven's Prisoners R (NL)	131	D	6-96	3	2	3	2	2	2	2.3	4.8
Hellraiser 4: Bloodline R (Mir)	101	Hor	5-96	1	1	1	2			1.2	9.3
High School High* PG-13 (TS)	86	C	12-96	3	2	2	2	3	2	2.8	20.7
Homeward Bound II G (BV)	88	D	5-96	2	3	3	2		3	2.6	32.7
The Horseman on the Roof R (Mir)	118	D	7-96	4	4	4	4	4		4.0	1.3
House Arrest PG (MGM)	107	C	7-96	1	2	3				2.0	6.9
The Hunchback of Notre Dame* G (BV)	88	Ani	8-96	3	3	3	3	2	5	3.2	99.8
I Shot Andy Warhol R (Gol)	100	D	4-96	4	4	4	4	4	4	4.0	1.2
If Lucy Fell R (Tri)	93	R C	3-96	2	3	3	2		3	2.6	2.2
Independence Day PG-13 (Fox)	143	AcSF	9-96	2	3	4	3	4		3.2	306.1
The Island of Dr. Moreau PG-13 (NL)	95	SFHr	11-96	2	1	3	1	1		1.6	26.9
It Takes Two PG (WB)	101	C	1-96	2	2	3	3		2	2.4	19.4
It's My Party R (UA)	109	D	4-96	1			4	3		3.0	0.4
Jack and Sarah R (Gra)	110	R C	2-96	4		4	3	3	3	3.4	0.1
Jack* PG-13 (BV)	111	CD	10-96	2	2	2	2	2	2	2.0	58.5
James & the Giant Peach PG (BV)	80	Ani	6-96	3	4	3	2	3	4	3.2	28.9
Jane Eyre PG (Mir)	110	R D	5-96	3	3	2	2	2	2	2.3	5.2
Jerry Maguire* R (TS)	138	D	2-97	4	4	2	3		4	3.4	60.4
Jingle All the Way* PG (Fox)	89	C	2-97	3	2	3	2	2	3	2.5	53.2
Joe's Apartment PG-13 (WB)	80	C	10-96	1	3	3	1	2	1	1.8	4.6
Jude R (Gra)	123	D	8-96	3	3	4	3	2	2	2.8	0.3
Jumanji PG (Tri)	104	Ad F	2-96	3	2	3	2	3	4	3.0	100.1

TITLE/MPAA DISTRIBUTOR 5 Excellent 4 Good 3 Fair 2 Poor 1 Very Poor	RUN TIME	GENRE	REVIEWED IN ISSUE	BOXOFFICE	VARIETY	H. REPORTER	L.A. TIMES	N.Y. TIMES	USA TODAY	AVERAGE	TOTAL BOXOFFICE$*
The Juror R (Col)	120	Th	4-96	2	2	2	3	2	1	2.0	22.0
Kansas City R (FL)	116	D	7-96	3	3	2	3		4	3.0	1.2
Kazaam PG (BV)	95	AdvF	9-96	2	2	3	2	2		2.2	18.7
Kids in the Hall: Brain Candy R (Par)	90	C	6-96	3	4	3	3	2	3	3.0	2.6
Kingpin PG-13 (MGM)	113	C	10-96	1	3	3	3	1	3	2.3	24.9
Larger Than Life PG (UA)	94	C	12-96	3	2	2		2	2	2.2	8.3
Last Dance R (BV)	108	D	7-96	2	2	2	2	2	2	2.0	5.7
Last Man Standing R (NL)	102	AcTh	11-96	3	2	3	2	2	2	2.3	18.1
The Last Supper (SPC)	94	Sat	4-96	3		2	2	2		2.3	0.3
Lawnmower Man II PG-13 (NL)	90	SFTh	3-96	1	2		2	2		1.8	1.6
Leaving Las Vegas R (UA)	112	D	11-95	4	3	3	4	3	3	3.3	32.0
Little Indian, Big City PG (BV)	90	C	5-96	3		2		1	3	2.3	0.7
Loaded (Mir)	95	D	3-96	3		2	3	2		2.5
Lone Star R (SPC)	134	D	7-96	4	4		4	5	3	4.0	12.1
The Long Kiss Goodnight* R (NL)	120	Ac	12-96	3	3	3	3	3	2	2.8	32.7
Looking for Richard PG-13 (Fox)	113	Doc	7-96	4		2	2	4	3	3.0	1.3
Losing Chase R (CFP)	94	D	2-97	2		3	3	3		2.8	0.1
Lover's Knot R (Leg)	86	R C	9-96	2	2	2	2			2.0
Mad Dog Time R (UA)	93	C	1-97	3	1	2	3			2.3
Manny and Lo R (SPC)	95	D	7-96	2		2	3	3		2.5	0.4
Mars Attacks!* PG-13 (WB)	104	C	2-97	3	3	4	3		3	3.2	25.8
Marvin's Room* PG-13 (Mir)	97	D	2-97	3	3	4				3.3	0.2
Mary Reilly R (Tri)	118	Th	5-96	2	2	2	2	2	2	2.0	5.6
Matilda PG (Tri)	100	C F	10-96	4	4	4	2	3	3	3.3	32.9
Maximum Risk R (Col)	102	AcTh	11-96	3	2	2	3	3	3	2.7	14.0
Michael Collins R (WB)	132	D	10-96	4	3	4	4	3	2	3.3	10.8
Michael* PG (NL)	105	R C	2-97	3						3.0	27.6
Microcosmos* (Mir)	74	Doc	10-96	3	4	3	4			3.5	1.1
Mirror Has Two Faces* PG-13 (TS)	126	R C	1-97	2	2	4	2	3	3	2.6	40.4
Mission: Impossible PG-13 (Par)	112	Ac	7-96	3	3	2	2	3		2.6	180.8
Moll Flanders PG-13 (MGM)	122	D	7-96	3	4	3	3	2	2	2.8	3.4
Mother Night R (FL)	114	D	12-96	4			3	3		3.3	0.3
Mother* PG-13 (Par)	103	C	11-96	4	4	4				4.0	0.2
Mr. Holland's Opus PG (BV)	143	D	2-96	4	3	4	3	3		3.4	82.5
Mr. Wrong PG-13 (BV)	96	C	5-96	2	4	2	3	2		2.6	12.6
Mrs. Winterbourne PG-13 (TS)	103	R C	6-96	2	2	2	2	2	2	2.0	10.1
Mulholland Falls R (MGM)	107	D	7-96	1	2	2	2	3	2	2.2	11.4
Multiplicity PG-13 (Col)	112	C	9-96	3	4	3	3	2		3.3	20.1
Muppet Treasure Island G (BV)	100	Mus	4-96	4	3	4	4	3	3	3.5	34.3
My Fellow Americans* PG-13 (WB)	101	C	2-97	3	3	3				3.0	10.2
Mystery Science Theatre 3000 PG-13 (Gra)	89	C	5-96	3	3	3	3	2	3	2.8	0.9
Nelly & Monsieur Arnaud Unrtd (Art)	106	D	7-96	3		4	4	3		3.5
Nixon R (BV)	190	D	2-96	5	3	4	3		4	3.8	13.3
Nueba Yol Unrtd (Kit)	104	D	7-96	3	3	3		3		3.0	1.2
The Nutty Professor PG-13 (Uni)	96	C	9-96	3	4	4	3	3	4	3.5	128.8
101 Dalmatians* G (BV)	103	C	2-97	3	3	3	2	2		2.6	104.1
One Fine Day* PG (Fox)	109	R C	2-97	3	3	4				3.2	19.4
Original Gangsters R (Ori)	99	Ac D	7-96	2	3	3	3	2		2.6	3.3
Othello R (Col)	125	D	2-96	3	3	4	4	4		3.6	2.5
The Pallbearer PG-13 (Mir)	104	C	6-96	4	3	3	3	2	3	3.0	5.6

TITLE/MPAA DISTRIBUTOR 5 Excellent 4 Good 3 Fair 2 Poor 1 Very Poor	RUN TIME	GENRE	REVIEWED IN ISSUE	BOXOFFICE	VARIETY	H. REPORTER	L.A. TIMES	N.Y. TIMES	USA TODAY	AVERAGE	TOTAL BOXOFFICE $*
The People Vs. Larry Flynt* R (Col)	126	D	2-97	3						3.0	0 6
Persuasion PG (SPC)	103	R D	11-95	4	4	5	5	4	4	4.3	4.9
The Phantom PG (Par)	102	Adv	7-96	3	3	3	3	2	2	2.7	17.0
Phat Beach R (Ori)	90	C	10-96	2	2	2	2	2		2.0	1.3
Phenomenon* PG (BV)	117	D	9-96	4	2	4	2	2		2.8	104.5
Portrait of a Lady* (Gra)	142	D	11-96	3	3					3.0	0.1
The Preacher's Wife* PG (BV)	124	RC	2-97	3	3	3	3		3	3.0	27.9
Primal Fear R (Par)	130	D	5-96	3		3	3	3		3.0	56.0
The Proprietor R (FL)	113	D	12-96	3	2	3	3	2		2.6
The Quest PG-13 (Uni)	95	Ac	7-96	3	3	3	3	2	2	2.7	20.8
Race the Sun PG (TS)	90	D	5-96	2	2	2	2	3		2.2	1.7
Ransom* R (BV)	121	Th	1-97	3	4	4	3	4	3	3.5	124.6
Restoration R (Mir)	118	D	2-96	3	3	4	3	3	2	3.0	3.8
The Rich Man's Wife R (BV)	92	Th	11-96	2	2	2	1	2	1	1 7	8.4
Richard III R (UA)	104	D	2-96	4	4	2	5	3	2	3.3	2.4
Ridicule* R (Mir)	102	CD	8-96	4	4	4	4	3		3.8	0.9
The Rock R (BV)	137	Ac	8-96	3	4	3	2	3	2	2.8	133.6
Romeo & Juliet* PG-13 (Fox)	120	D	1-97	3	3	3	3	2	3	2.8	43.8
Rumble in the Bronx R (NL)	87	Ac	1-96	3		4	3	2		3.0	32.3
Sabrina PG (Par)	127	R C	2-96	3	2	4	2	3	4	3.0	53.5
Scream* R (Mir)	111	HorC	2-97	3	2					2.5	21.3
Screamers R (Tph)	105	SF	1-96	2		2	2		2	2.0	5.7
Search for One-Eye Jimmy R (Nor)	82	C	8-96	3	2	2		2		2.3
The Secret Agent R	95	D	11-96	1	2	2	3	2		2.0
Secrets and Lies* R (Oct)	142	D	7-96	4	4	4	4	4		4.0	5.3
Sense and Sensibility PG (Col)	136	R C	2-96	5	4	4	3	4	4	4.0	42.7
Set It Off* R (NL)	121	Ac D	1-97	3	3	2	3	2		2.6	34.2
Seven R (NL)	125	Th	11-95	3	4	3	3		3	3.2	100.1
Sgt. Bilko PG (Uni)	93	C	6-96	3	2	2	3	3		2.6	30.1
She's the One R (FS)	96	R D	10-96	3	4	3	2	3		3.0	9.4
Shine* (FL)	104	D	4-96	5	5	4	4	3	3	4.0	3.5
Sleepers* R (WB)	146	D	12-96	3	4	2	2	2	3	2.7	52.4
Solo PG-13 (Tri)	94	SF	11-96	2	3	2	2	2		2.2	4.9
Some Mother's Son* (SPC)	112	D	8-96	4	2	2				2.6	0.1
Space Jam* PG (WB)	88	F C	1-97	3	3	3	3	3	3	3.0	81.9
The Spitfire Grill (Col)	117	D	4-96	4			3	3		3.7	12.6
Spy Hard PG-13 (BV)	78	C	7-96	2	2	2	2	2	2	2.0	26.7
The Star Maker R (Mir)	108	D	5-96	2	2	2	3			2.3	0.2
Star Trek: First Contact* PG-13 (Par)	110	SF	2-97	3	4	4	4	3	3	3.3	85.1
Stealing Beauty R (FS)	116	D	7-96	3	4	3	3	3	4	3.3	4 4
Striptease R (Col)	114	C D	9-96	2	3	2	2	3	2	2.3	32.7
The Stupids PG (NL)	90	C	11-96	1	2	1		1		1.2	2.4
The Substitute R (Ori)	114	Ac	7-96	2	3		3	2		2.5	14.7
Sudden Death R (Uni)	110	Ac	2-96	3	3	2	3		3	2.8	20.2
Sunset Park R (TS)	100	C	7-96	1	2	2	2	2		1.8	10.1
Supercop R (Mir)	88	Ac	10-96	4	3	3	3	3	3	3.2	16.2
Surviving Picasso R (WB)	124	D	11-96	3	4	2	3	3		3.0	2.0
Swingers* R (Mir)	96	C	11-96	3	3	4	3	3	3	3.2	3.9
That Thing You Do!* PG (Fox)	105	D	11-96	3	4	3	3	3	3	3.2	25.5
A Thin Line Between Love and Hate R (NL)	107	C Th	6-96	3	2	3	2	2		2.4	34.9
Thinner R (Par)	92	Hor	1-97	1	2	2	3	3		2.2	14.8
A Time to Kill R (WB)	142	D	9-96	2	4	4	2	3		3.0	108.7
Tin Cup R (WB1)	134	R C	10-96	2	3	3	2	3	3	2.8	53.9
To Gillian on Her 37th Birthday R (Tri)	105	D	10-96	2	2	3	2	2	2	2.2	4 1
Tom and Huck PG (BV)	93	Ad	2-96	2	2	2	2		2	2.0	23.8
Toy Story G (BV)	80	Ani	2-96	4	4	5	4			4.3	191.4
Trainspotting R (Mir)	93	D	7-96	4	4	3	4	3		3.6	16.5
Trees Lounge R (Ori)	89	D	10-96	2	3	3		4		3.0	0.6
The Trigger Effect R (Gra)	98	Th	9-96	2	2	2	2	3		2.2	3.5
The Truth About Cats & Dogs PG-13 (Fox)	100	R C	6-96	3	3	3	3	3		3 0	32.6
Twelfth Night PG (FL)	125	C	11-96	3	2	3	2	3	3	2.7	0.5
12 Monkeys R (Uni)	128	SF	2-96	4	2	2	3	3		2.8	57.1
Twister PG-13 (WB)	113	Th	7-96	2	3	3	3	3	4	3.0	241.6
2 Days in the Valley R (MGM)	105	C D	11-96	2	3	2	3	3		2.6	11.1
Two If By Sea R (WB)	95	R C	3-96	2	2		2	2		2.0	10.5
Two Much PG-13 (BV)	115	R C	5-96	2	3	3	2	2		2.4	1.0
Unforgettable R (MGM)	118	Th	5-96	2	2			3	3	2.5	2.5
Unhook the Stars R (Mir)	105	D	12-96	3	4	4	3	2	3	3.2
Up Close & Personal PG-13 (BV)		R D	5-96	2	3	2	3	3	3	2.7	50.9
A Very Brady Sequel PG-13 (Par)	88	C	10-96	3	3	3	3	3		3.0	21.4
The Visitors R (Mir)	106	C	8-96	4	3	2	4	2		3.3	0.1
Waiting to Exhale R (Fox)	124	C D	2-96	3	4	4	3		3	3.4	66.9
Walking and Talking (Mir)	90	D	4-96	4	3	4		3	3	3.6	1.2
Welcome to the Dollhouse (SPC)	87	D	4-96	4	4	4	4	4	4	4.0	4.1
White Squall PG-13 (BV)	128	D	4-96	2		4	2	2	3	2.6	10.2
The Whole Wide World PG (SC)	111	D	11-96	4		4				4.0	0.1

1996 TOTAL BOXOFFICE: $5.9 BILLION●
TOP STUDIO TAKE:
BUENA VISTA $1.2 BILLION●

TOP 20 GROSSERS (IN MILLIONS):

1. Independence Day ($306.1)
2. Twister ($241.6)
3. Mission: Impossible ($180.8)
4. The Rock ($133.6)
5. The Nutty Professor ($128.8)
6. Ransom ★ ($124.6)
7. The Birdcage ($123.6)
8. A Time To Kill ($108.7)
9. Phenomenon ★ ($104.5)
10. 101 Dalmatians ★ ($104.1)
11. The First Wives Club ★ ($103.4)
12. Eraser ($101.2)
13. Hunchback of Notre Dame ★ ($99.8)
14. Star Trek: First Contact ★ ($85.1)
15. Space Jam ★ ($81.9)
16. Broken Arrow ($70.6)
17. Jerry Maguire ★ ($60.4)
18. The Cable Guy ($59.6)
19. Jack ★ ($58.5)
20. Courage Under Fire ($58.1)

(★= FILM STILL IN RELEASE AT YEAR'S END)

(●= BOXOFFICE RECORD)

DATELINE 1996

A Look Back at the Year's Top News Stories

JANUARY

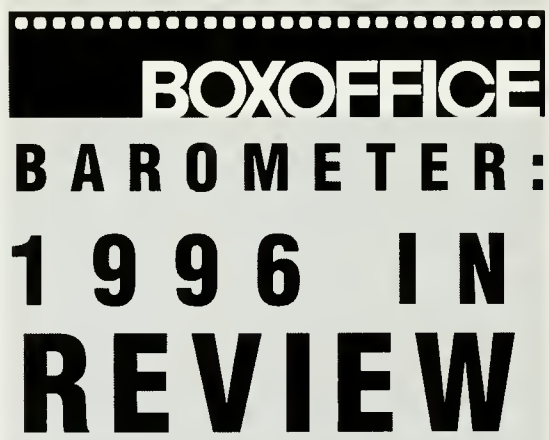
18TH ANNUAL SUNDANCE FILM FESTIVAL CHOOSES BEST INDIES

Todd Solondz's "Welcome to the Dollhouse" and the Jeanne Jordon - Steven Ascher documentary "Troublesome Creek: A Midwestern" earned Grand Jury prizes at the 1996 Sundance Film Festival, with "Troublesome" additionally awarded "Best Documentary." "The Spitfire Grill" won "Best Dramatic Feature" and was promptly acquired by Castle Rock for $10 million—a record buy for an indie production screened at the Fest. "Girls Town" (which October Films snagged) won a filmmakers' trophy and a "special recognition" award for the collaborative nature of its improvisational screenplay. Awards were also given to actress Lili Taylor ("I Shot Andy Warhol"), director of photography Rob Sweeney ("Color of a Brisk and Leaping Day"), Stanley Tucci and Joseph Tropiano for scripting "Big Night" (which Tucci directed with Campbell Scott), directors Rob Epstein and Jeffrey Friedman for "The Celluloid Closet," Leon Gast for "When We Were Kings," and Cuban filmmaker Fernando Perez for "Madagascar."

The 1996 Sundance Festival was marred by much-talked-about controversy concerning two of the festival's most popular projects. Indie Trimark Pictures cried foul over the "The Spitfire Grill" deal, claiming that it had a verbal agreement in place to distribute that title. In an even more notorious incident, Miramax topper Harvey Weinstein confronted Jonathan Taplin, a producer of the film "Shine," in a public restaurant over the decision to distribute that title through Fine Line Features.

FEBRUARY

ROCCO BREAKS DISTRIBUTION'S GLASS CEILING



In what was hailed as a major breakthrough for women in the film industry, Universal Pictures named Nikki Rocco president of distribution. Rocco, a 29-year veteran in a variety of capacities at Universal, took over from 44-year distribution veteran and industry legend Fred Mound, who remains involved with Universal distribution in an advisory capacity. The move made Rocco the first female head of distribution for a major studio in Hollywood history.

METROMEDIA GRABS GOLDWYN

Is a new mini-major in the works? After seven months of speculation about its future, debt-ridden Samuel Goldwyn Company agreed to a $119 million acquisition by John Kluge's Metromedia Group. Owned by billionaire John Kluge, Metromedia was formed in 1995 in a four-way merger with Orion Pictures and three other companies. The Metromedia Goldwyn grab took some industry-watchers by surprise, since it followed protracted negotiations with both Ted Turner and Polygram, each of which were given the inside track on a Goldwyn buy-out at various times. Highlights of the deal included a stock swap: Metromedia offered $5 of its stock per Goldwyn share, and took over the ailing indie's $77 million debt. Goldwyn Chairman Samuel Goldwyn was named chairman of the new Metromedia subsidiary, which has kept the Goldwyn name, but with reduced authority.

MARCH

BOXOFFICE REVAMPS ORIGINAL FILM TRADE WEBSITE

BOXOFFICE MAGAZINE, the oldest film trade publication and the first to embrace the information revolution with the 1994 launch of the original film trade website BOXOFFICE ONLINE, renewed its commitment to stay at the leading edge of new technologies with the launch of a new and improved online edition. The site, which carries a variety of informational databases gleaned from the pages of BOXOFFICE, features the latest and advance film reviews; more than a year's worth of BOXOFFICE cover stories, sneak previews and industry-related articles; plus the complete BOXOFFICE BUYER'S DIRECTORY and additional specialized features, as well as search functions for the easy location of specific pieces of information.

Internet users can access BOXOFFICE ONLINE at: http://www.boxoff.com.

SHOWEST NAMES NEW CHAIRMAN

ShoWest chairman Tim Warner stepped down from his post in 1996 and a new chairman took the helm. Daniel Wheatcroft, who exited his position as vice president of marketing at Universal Pictures/MCA Inc., took over the ShoWest chairmanship from Warner after a brief apprenticeship lasting through the end of Warner's last contract with NATO/ShoWest, which expired on April 15, 1996.

POLLOCK OUT AT MCA

In an era of executive shuffles and studio sales, MCA vice chairman Tom Pollock was considered by many to be an anchor in the entertainment world storm. His 10 years at MCA came to a close when he resigned in March. He had survived the sale of MCA to Seagram Co., but published reports had already begun to suggest that his authority was slowly eroding under new MCA president Ron Meyer and Edgar Bronfman Jr., CEO of MCA parent company Seagram.

FIRST QUARTER B.O. BONANZA

Leap day gave the first three months of 1996 an extra bonus playdate, but the real prize came from the studios, whose larger release slates created boxoffice dividends for exhibitors. February was a boom month by any standard, with a record $389 million dollar take, up a whopping 33 percent from 1995. Buena Vista led the pack with an $88.7 million cut of the pie. March came in like a lion, keeping up the record pace on the way to a highly anticipated summer play period which had exhibitors hopeful thanks to a strong field of summer titles and a greater number of releases scheduled throughout the summer months. According to BOXOFFICE MAGAZINE in a March prediction that proved blessedly true, "At this pace, 1996 looks to be the record breaking exhibition year to beat."

APRIL

KATZENBERG FILES BREACH OF CONTRACT SUIT AGAINST DISNEY

Jeffrey Katzenberg, the "K" of Dreamworks SKG, filed suit against his former employer, the Walt Disney Company, for breach of contract. In his suit, Katzenberg claimed he is still owed his share of studio profits—some $250 million in bonus incentives for projects initiated during his Disney tenure. The suit stated that during his 10 years at Disney, Katzenberg was instrumental in the studio's tremendous profit growth. The Katzenberg suit also called for a court order that would require Disney to open their financial books, a move that would prove more than interesting to everyone in Hollywood if it ever came to pass.

Katzenberg left Disney during a bitter feud with former friend and Disney chairman Michael Eisner. But it's a small world after all: soon after Dreamworks entered into a lucrative co-venture with Capital Cities/ABC to the tune of $200 million, Disney paid $19 billion to acquire CapCities/ABC, putting Eisner and Katzenberg back in business together.

MAY

A FOXY BILLION-DOLLAR DEAL

In what was believed to be the biggest single film financing deal ever, Citicorp put together a $1 billion package for News Corp.'s 20th Century Fox unit. The money was designated to cover the negative costs of the studio's three-year expanded production slate, which Fox projected would see production rise from 12 films annually to 18-25. Most of the money was raised via commercial paper markets, where big firms can raise large amounts of cash with low interest rates. The rest came from equity investors whose returns will depend on film performance.

The deal marked Fox's first outside film financing since the '80s, when tax shelter investment partnerships died out. Since then, the only major studio to raise film financing on the public market has been Walt Disney Co., which had only a fair amount of success with its Touchwood deals. Fox's deal included a bigger pool of films, thereby lowering the overall risk. Financial experts predicted the Fox financing deal could mark the beginning of a trend back toward bank financing as financial institutions become more sophisticated about film risks and movie financing adventures.

KATZ & MOUSE GAME CONTINUES

Disney denied that Jeffrey Katzenberg, who filed a $250 million suit against former employer Walt Disney Co. for breach of contract, was entitled to anything at all. Disney claimed to have "exceeded its contractual obligations" in its severance payments to Katzenberg, and said it would pay nothing more to Katzenberg, who chaired Walt Disney Studios for 10 years before quitting in 1994.

Although both Katzenberg's 1984 and 1988 contracts stipulated "incentive" bonuses amounting to 2 percent of Disney's profits from product put into production during his tenure, Disney claimed that when Katzenberg quit he enacted a clause from his 1988 contract that meant he would not receive any bonus based on the future performance of film and TV programming produced while he was chairman.

Disney also asserted that Katzenberg was not entitled to sue the studio because his contract stipulated that bonus disputes are subject to mandatory arbitration. Bert Fields, Katzenberg's attorney, called Disney's assertions "absurd" and said Katzenberg would seek redress in court. According to Katzenberg's calculations, Disney made more than $12.5 billion in profits during his tenure, making his bonus a healthy $250 million.

JUNE

DISNEY: SAY GOOD-BYE TO HOLLYWOOD

Walt Disney Studios made good on a two-year plan to cut back production by announcing that its Hollywood Pictures arm would stop all development and production activities and remain in use only as a distribution unit servicing Simpson-Bruckheimer and Scott Free films. The move left Disney with three filmmaking entities: Touchstone Pictures and Walt Disney Films, plus Miramax Films, operated as a standalone entity, but with financial backing from Disney. Touchstone planned to continue to produce more star-driven efforts like "Evita" and "The Rock" while the Walt Disney banner remained committed to an output of six to 10 family films a year, including at least one or two "event" pics such as the live-action version of "101 Dalmatians."

U.S. AND CHINA SEE EYE TO EYE ON TRADE WAR

Acting U.S. Trade Representative Charlene Barshefsky cut an 11th-hour deal with China and averted a full-blown trade war between the two countries. As a result of the talks, the U.S. canceled $2 billion in impending trade sanctions against China, which in turn called off counter-sanctions.

The deal called for the immediate closure of 15 CD factories and six distribution centers in China believed to be operating in violation of international copyright standards. Beijing also agreed to destroy much of the equipment used to make illegal products, and to strengthen border and customs procedures on copyrighted goods. A special seven-month crackdown was announced for China's Guangdong province, a hotbed of film, video and music piracy. According to the terms of the deal, 15 "legitimate" factories were to remain open, but would face heavy restrictions.

JULY

SONY SWITCHES HEADS

Sony Pictures Entertainment didn't have any 1996 summer blockbusters, instead distributing "The Cable Guy," "Striptease" and "Multiplicity." After a summer of such disappointments, it came as no surprise when a whole lot of shaking started going on at the Japanese-held company. First, TriStar president Mark Platt stepped down and was quickly replaced by Robert Cooper, former head of HBO Pictures. Cooper was already well-respected within the Hollywood creative community for getting feature-film quality for a fraction of a feature budget in topical and controversial HBO cable films produced on his watch.

Head of marketing Sid Ganis then left his post for a production deal with the studio. Ganis exited after the unusual rollout of "The Cable Guy" turned out to be a big disappointment. In order to release the Jim Carrey comedy on 4,300 screens—the largest ever Columbia/TriStar release—Sony had to ignore the standard exhibition industry practice of "clearances" (i.e. voluntary "no book" zones between theatres showing the same title). Against the better judgment of the rest of the industry, Columbia booked the film in theatres close to one another in a gamble that annoyed the exhibition industry and one which failed to pay off.

Ganis was replaced by Robert Levin, former head of marketing for Buena Vista and at Savoy Pictures.

Following the Ganis departure, Columbia Pictures president Lisa Henson chose to leave her post and join forces with Janet Yang, former president of Oliver Stone's Ixtlan Corp. to form a production company that immediately landed a three year, first look deal at (where else?) Sony.

LION LANDS IN FAMILIAR HANDS

The third time's the charm. At least that's what people were hoping when billionaire investor Kirk Kerkorian bought MGM for the third time after the studio had been "in play" for some months. The $1.3 billion winning bid for the Lion went to a partnership group that included Kerkorian, Australia-based Seven Network and MGM's own in-house management group, led by current MGM chair Frank Mancuso. Kerkorian went in for approximately $650 million and purchased a controlling interest in the board, but said that MGM executives would have firm operational control. As part of his new deal, Mancuso was granted a seat on the MGM board. Kerkorian was to control three seats and Seven another three.

Kerkorian first acquired MGM in 1969 but spent most of the '70s selling off the studio's assets, including the famous backlot in Culver City. On Kerkorian's first watch, MGM even auctioned off props and other property from the company's golden era to raise cash. Kerkorian then sold off MGM to Ted Turner in 1986, then bought back everything but the famous film library, which Turner turned into a goldmine for his TBS and TNT cable networks.

In 1990, Kerkorian sold the studio, ironically enough for $1.3 billion, to a group led by Italian businessmen Giancarlo Parretti and Florio Fiorini. Almost all of the money for the Parretti purchase was financed by state-owned French bank Credit Lyonnaise. Credit Lyonnaise foreclosed within a year and then sued Kerkorian for misrepresentation. Kerkorian settled out of court.

FTC APPROVES TW-TBS MERGER

After months of speculation, federal regulators finally gave the go-ahead to Time Warner Inc.'s $7.5 billion purchase of Turner Broadcasting System Inc. The FTC approval came after both companies agreed to modify terms of their original deal. Restrictions included limits on contract lengths and restrictions on bundling the most popular TW and Turner programs into cable system packages. The proposal also forbade Time Warner from discriminating against competitors in the cable distribution business.

POLYGRAM LOOKS FOR A PIPELINE

After losing out on the buyout of MGM despite making its own $1.3 billion bid, Netherlands-based PolyGram continued to make plans to have a U.S. distribution unit ready to go by 1997. Meanwhile, Polygram was reportedly still shopping for U.S. production and distribution entities. Before MGM went on the block, PolyGram was reported to be interested in buying Castle Rock. The Dutch company was also said to have expressed an interest in New Line if and when Time Warner decided to spin off that unit.

MID-SUMMER BOXOFFICE GETS THE GOLD, SILVER AND BRONZE

Medals should have been bestowed all around for record breaking early and mid-summer boxoffice, which was led by the out-of-this-world success of Fox's "Independence Day" as it broke almost every record in the book, including fastest to $100 million (9 days) and then $200 million (21 days), and was the linchpin in a July 4 weekend that turned out to be the biggest boxoffice weekend ever at $198 million. Other boxoffice hits of early summer included "Twister," "Mission: Impossible," "The Rock" and "The Nutty Professor."

AUGUST

MGM GETS MO' MONEY

The Australian Seven Network, one of the new owners of MGM, sank an extra $350 million into the studio in order to keep hit films like "GoldenEye" and "The Birdcage" coming down the production pipe. Reportedly, this gave MGM $750 million in production budget leeway, enough dollars to keep the coffers full until MGM goes public in an estimated three to five years.

Studio executives also confirmed that MGM is looking to acquire smaller studios to increase the size of its own library, most of which was sold off to Ted Turner in 1986.

DISNEY MOVES UP HEAD COOK

Former president of Buena Vista Pictures Distribution and Worldwide Marketing, Richard Cook was appointed chairman of the Walt Disney Motion Picture Group. Cook continued to answer directly to Joe Roth, chairman of Walt Disney Studios, with Roth and Cook acting as co-heads of production, and Cook directly responsible for domestic and international theatrical marketing and distribution and feature film acquisitions. Under Cook's tutelage as president of Buena Vista Distribution, Disney's boxoffice hits flourished. In 1994 and 1995, Buena Vista set new industry records with consecutive annual boxoffice grosses in excess of $1 billion.

TW-TBS MERGER UPDATE

Time Warner Inc. and Turner Broadcasting System Inc. signed a consent order with the Federal Trade Commission staff giving the go-ahead for the FTC to vote on the proposed merger. TBS and Time Warner had to sign amended merger agreements in order to answer the FTC's concerns. Federal regulators had finally given preliminary approval in June, so there would be little delay moving ahead with a deal to create the largest media and entertainment company in the world.

In related news, TBS reported second-quarter earnings were down 48 percent due to poor performance by Castle Rock Entertainment, which resulted in write-offs of approximately $28 million. Castle Rock, which has been looking for another home recently, produced "Striptease" and "City Hall," among other disappointing 1996 boxoffice efforts.

BOXOFFICE SPEND TRENDS

According to the tenth annual Communications Industry Forecast released by investment bankers Veronis, Suhler & Associates Inc., the communications industry (which includes films, television, digital media, etc.) will post a 7 percent growth over the next five years. The biggest growth in consumer spending will take place in interactive digital media (IDM), which the Forecast predicts will register a growth by the year 2000 of 19.4 percent.

Total spending on filmed entertainment (which includes both features and TV) is expected to rise from $31.4 billion in 1995 to $41.1 billion in 2000. Spending on boxoffice admissions is expected to increase only at a 2.0 percent rate (well below television growth at an expected 7.7 percent). By the millennium, boxoffice spending is expected to total $6.1 billion a year vs. $5.5 billion in 1995.

SEPTEMBER

CANTON OUT AT TRISTAR

The shake up continued at Sony Pictures when Mark Canton, chairman of the Columbia TriStar Motion Picture companies, resigned. Rumors ran rampant that he would be replaced by William Morris Agency head Arnold Rifkin, and Rifkin jetted to New York to meet with Sony heads Alan Levine and Sony Corp. president Nobuyuki Idei, but things didn't go his way, so Rifkin immediately signed a long-term agreement at William Morris, where he represents the likes of Sylvester Stallone, Whoopi Goldberg, Geena Davis, Charlie Sheen and Joe Eszterhas.

There were rumors that Canton was angered by the way Levine handled his exit, but he was probably happy with his final paycheck. With two years left on his contract, insiders predicted Canton would get at least $10-12 million for walking away.

TIME WARNER-TBS FINAL

The Time Warner-TBS merger finally arrived. But of course, it didn't come without controversy. On the day final approval came from the Federal Trade Commission (by a 3-2 vote) for the merger, both companies issued an internal memo that acknowledged there would be layoffs and cutbacks in "overlap" areas. The first casualty was Turner Entertainment group president Scott Sassa, who resigned. Most of the cutbacks were to come from TBS units.

TBS chairman Ted Turner was made vice chairman of the new company, and was placed in charge of all cable programming including HBO. Speculation continued that the new merged company would sell off TBS' New Line Cinema. The sale of Castle Rock (also a TBS entity) has also continued to be the subject of much speculation. Turner was said to be balking at selling the profitable New Line, but New Line chairman Robert Shaye was said to not be keen on reporting to Warner Bros. co-chairmen Bob Daly and Terry Semel. So Time Warner retained the Wall Street firm Furman Selz to advise it on strategic alternatives that would allow Shaye a certain independence while still allowing TW to retain value in the company.

WARNER BROS.' FRIEDMAN IN FOR PARAMOUNT'S LONDON

Barry London resigned as vice chairman of the Motion Picture Group at Paramount Pictures making him the highest-ranking executive to leave Paramount since Viacom took over the studio in 1994. London, who celebrated his 25th anniversary with the company in 1996, entered into an exclusive production deal with the studio.

Initially, many thought Paramount would have a difficult time finding a successor to London as his position encompassed distribution, marketing, video, pay TV and feature acquisitions on a world-wide basis and few candidates would have the experience for the job. So it was a surprise when Paramount quickly hired marketing executive Robert Friedman, a 26 year veteran of Warner Bros., to take over the vice chairmanship.

SUMMER BOXOFFICE RESULTS

Though the summer of 1996 couldn't top 1994's record-breaking summer take of $2.20 billion, it did parallel 1995, with an estimated take of $2.17 billion marking a tie for both years as the second best summers ever for North American theatres. Buena Vista was the summer's clear winner, taking in almost $474 million, or 22.9 percent of the summer market.

Five films passed the $100 million mark during the summer, an equal number to 1995. Two of those films—"Independence Day" and "Twister"— took in over $200 million, a feat no film accomplished in the summer of '95. But there were fewer films that found the $50 to $90 million range. Only "The Cable Guy" ($60.2 million), "Dragonheart" ($51.4 million) and "Courage Under Fire" ($55 million) made the grade, compared to nine 1995 titles.

OCTOBER

SONY TO LEVINE: SAYONARA

In a widely anticipated move, Sony Pictures Entertainment president Alan J. Levine resigned from his post to be replaced by John Calley, a veteran studio executive and the head of United Artists at the time he agreed to take over for Levine. The departure of Levine, who had been Sony Pics' prez since 1994, had been rumored for some time in the wake of the studio's dismal 1996 boxoffice performance. Prior to Levine's exit, Sony's displeasure with its topmost film production executives had resulted in a number of upper-level firings and resignations. Levine's resignation in some ways marked the end of the first Sony era at Columbia TriStar, since Levine first came to the studio in 1989 at the behest of Peter Guber and Jon Peters, Sony's original Hollywood management team.

GLOBAL B.O.: WE'RE IN THE MONEY

Baskerville Communications, a California and London based market research group, predicted that worldwide theatrical boxoffice would jump some 47.3 percent over 1995 levels in the next seven years. The predicted boon will come as a result of the screening boom currently underway overseas, where exhibition infrastructure is in a far more underdeveloped state than in the U.S.

FALL B.O.: "FIRST WIVES" NAB BIG SETTLEMENT

Fueled by the blockbuster success of Disney's mid-wife crisis revenge comedy "The First Wives Club," the pre-holiday fall play period looked good. Released September 20 to grab $19 million in its first weekend, "Wives" struck a big chord with fall moviegoers, racking up three successive number one boxoffice performances before falling to number three over the three-day Columbus Day holiday.

NOVEMBER

DORAN & MANCUSO: RE-UNITED

MGM/UA chairman and CEO Frank Mancuso continued to put his stamp on the studio's executive roster with the hiring of Lindsay Doran to replace John Calley as president of United Artists. Doran's producing resume includes the hits "Dead Again" and "The Firm." at Mirage, as well as work during her days as a Paramount executive on such titles as "Pretty in Pink," "Planes, Trains & Automobiles" and "Ghost." In 1996, Doran received a Golden Globe award for producing the Emma Thompson-starring "Sense and Sensibility," which later won an Oscar for best adapted screenplay.

DREAMWORKS' RUDE AWAKENINGS

The announced plans for the building of a new, state-of-the-art studio production facility at Playa Vista, Calif. by the DreamWorks SKG "dream team" were reported to be on the verge of radical alteration, including a possible relocation of the facility owing to a combination of factors, such as growing unrest among development company Maguire Thomas Partners and DreamWorks' outside strategic partners, and slowdowns brought about by environmentalist protests and legal actions. It was revealed that such high-profile participants in the original Playa Vista plan as IBM and James Cameron's Digital Domain effects house may have already opted not to take space in Playa Vista. At issue were a variety of scheduling and financial uncertainties, including rental pricing for space on the property; the date of availability for rental space; and the restructuring of debt incurred on the Playa Vista site back in the late 1980s and early 1990s, before DreamWorks became involved with developing the location.

NEW LINE VS. BOTTOM LINE

1996 proved a troublesome year for New Line Cinema, with the company's worst-ever financial performance and continuing uncertainty over ownership issues related to Ted Turner's alliance with Time Warner. Leading the list of New Line's budget-fueled 1996 boxoffice failures was director Renny Harlin's Geena Davis-starring action pic "The Long Kiss Goodnight," which cost almost $100 million to produce and market, and grossed less than $35 million domestically. Other pricey studio misses in '96 included "The Island of Dr. Moreau," which grossed less than $30 million on a $50 million production budget, and Walter Hill's "Last Man Standing," for which Bruce Willis was paid a reported $16 million to star in a film that took in $18 million at the U.S. boxoffice.

TURKEY-DAY B.O. SEES SPOTS

The eighth film in the franchise, Paramount's "Star Trek: First Contact" set a series record and took first place over the weekend of November 23, 1996 with an estimated $30.5 million at the boxoffice. Over Thanksgiving, Buena Vista's live-action recreation of the 1961 cartoon "101 Dalmatians" broke the $43 million 1989 record set by Universal's "Back to the Future II" with a gross of $46 million in five days. On the art-house front, Fine Line's "Shine" dominated over Thanksgiving, taking in $156,673, followed by Miramax's "Swingers" at $86,928. But a boxoffice plunge one week later (led by the disappointing opening of the Stallone disaster flick "Daylight" which grabbed a measly $10 million on over 2,000 screens) left the ultimate status of the holiday play period in doubt.

INTERNATIONAL BLOC BUSTERS

Mega-budget U.S. product continued to find extremely lucrative favor with overseas audiences in 1996, making for what U.S. distribution execs were terming an amazing international year. As it did in the U.S., "Independence Day" set the global pace, invading moviehouses to the tune of some US$366 million in overseas receipts during its first 12 weeks of international release. "Mission: Impossible" was closing on the equivalent of US$250 million after 17 weeks; "Twister" had churned up US$226.8 million after 14 weeks; "The Rock" was rock-solid at US$185 million after 16 weeks; and "Eraser," the Arnold Schwarzenegger action hit, had US$132 million stamped indelibly on its ledgers during 11 weeks of play. The growing importance of the international market was demonstrated by the fact that virtually every one of the above named blockbusters had already outperformed its 1996 U.S. domestic gross via overseas bookings by November, with cash registers still ringing for each film worldwide.

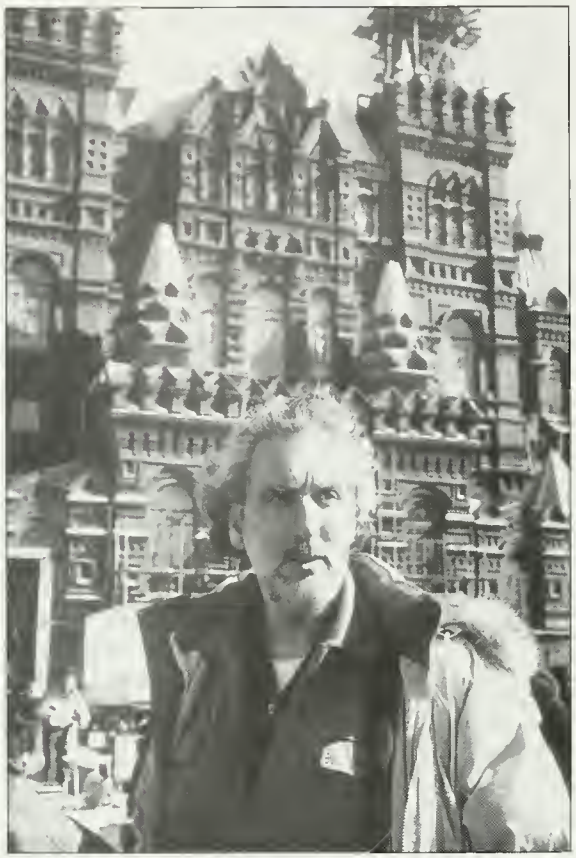
DECEMBER

DISNEY REVS UP

While many of the studios did well in their third quarter (which ended Sept. 30, 1996), the Walt Disney Co. surprised the Wall Street execs who had predicted the company would increase revenues up to 50 percent. When the reports were totaled, Disney had raised revenues 68 percent, bringing net profit to $354 million, up $133 million from last year. The growth was due in large part to Disney's film and television production arms, which increased 31 percent in operating income, helped by the domestic and international success of movies such as "The Rock," "Phenomenon" and "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." From 1994 to 1995, Disney was the only company to gross $1 billion in a year from U.S. and Canadian boxoffices. In 1995, Disney beat their 1994 $1 billion record by a day. In 1996, Disney beat their 1995 record by five weeks.

"KUNDUN" CONUNDRUM

Despite smooth national planning, Disney ran into expansion problems in China because of the turmoil over Martin Scorsese's "Kundun," a film about the fourteenth Dalai Lama, Tenzingyatso. "Kundun" takes a sympathetic view of Tibet's struggle for independence and of the Dalai Lama, who was exiled in 1951. Officials at the China Film Bureau professed their strong opposition to the making of the film, believing that it would exalt the Dalai Lama and consequently disrupt national affairs. Chinese officials have threatened that if Disney releases the film, the government could destroy the company's chances of developing a theme park in China.



DISNEY: OVITZ AND OUT

Fourteen months after Michael Ovitz rocked Hollywood by leaving CAA, the agency he co-founded, to become president of the Walt Disney Co., the superagent-turned-studio topper stunned industry onlookers again by stepping down from his post. The move was reportedly a mutual decision between Ovitz and Disney chairman and CEO Michael Eisner. Insiders blamed a poorly-defined job description, causing Ovitz to infringe upon other executives' territory. No immediate plans to fill the position were announced. Ovitz divulged no plans, but he won't be on line at the unemployment office: Under his settlement with Disney, his cash pay-off was $38.9 million plus some 3 million stock options valued at $31 million at current prices—a buyout that had some Disney stockholders seething. Not bad for a little over 400 days' work. And that's the year that was.

"SAINT" PHILLIP

Director Phillip Noyce Journeys Into Adventure With "The Saint"

By Bridget Byrne

Director Phillip Noyce bundled against the Moscow cold on the set of Paramount's March release "The Saint."

It was terribly easy." That's the judgment of director Phillip Noyce about the experience of filming Paramount's long-awaited "The Saint" in the Russian capital of Moscow. "In any former totalitarian state it is, if you know the right people," says Noyce, whose "Patriot Games" and "Clear and Present Danger" also took him to exotic climes.

"If you want to shoot a complicated scene in a major intersection in the middle of New York, the abuse is going to start flowing in your direction in moments from the people inconvenienced, but in Russia you can have everything come to a stop for hours." That proved fortunate, as one mammoth scene involved massing thousands of extras in Red Square. Noyce's production travels also took him throughout England, from the soundstages at Pinewood and locations at Oxford colleges to the city of London, where buildings stood in for surviving Czarist structures.

Noyce's itinerant nature comes clear in his recent conversations with BOXOFFICE. A few days before Christmas, he's traveling the M4 between Oxford and London, where he's been doing post-production work. A few days after Christmas, Noyce has already moved half a world, returning to the discussion as he drives down La Cienega Boulevard in Los Angeles.

Noyce recalls that, as a child growing up in New South Wales, he enjoyed the stories of Simon Templar, the dashing adventurer better known as The Saint. Created by novelist Leslie Charteris, The Saint has taken several guises over the years in movies and TV, and Noyce finds many Templar characteristics appealing: his devil-may-care demeanor; his Robin Hood attitude toward law-breaking; his independence; his tendency to use brain over brawn to cleverly outwit the bad guys; and his journeys to foreign locales.

Noyce feels he can relate to the nature of an international character like The Saint, Americanized though the character now is in the hands of star Val Kilmer. Noyce has homes in Los Angeles and Sydney and a rented house in London but, like The Saint, he goes where the job is. "I'm like him, not really living anywhere but hotels, not knowing quite where I am, who I am, always having to catch a plane," Noyce says, laughing.

The Saint" is set in a future so close that Noyce describes it as "tomorrow." The story establishes how Templar becomes "The Saint," embroils him in a world where law and order is breaking down, and thrusts him into a love affair. Kilmer (who in a highly publicized move exited his role as the second Batman to become The Saint) is ideal to play Simon Templar, Noyce says.

"We needed a leading man who is also a true actor—because he's not playing just one character, but a master of disguise. He has to appear to be 13 different people with 13 different accents and 13 different body languages. He's seen, for example, as a South African, a German and an Australian, as well as having to be totally convincing when disguised as his opponent—a Russian industrialist who is his nemesis."

Elizabeth Shue—Oscar-nominated for "Leaving Las Vegas"—plays the scientist who steals Templar's heart. "She has great intelligence and strength and is convincing as a nuclear physicist in a way many other actresses wouldn't have been," Noyce says. "Essentially our story is a romance that's at the heart of the enormous [personal] journey Templar takes from selfish to selfless. You have to want the man and woman to be together, so chemistry is very important. Luckily for us, they formed a very close relationship, which shows onscreen. Because they were playing out a great romance, they put themselves in situations that were pregnant with possibilities, and the camera captures that."

Noyce's success with political thrillers has established him as a director comfortable with films that have a global flavor, and he feels his outsider's viewpoint is a help in bringing perspective to both the American character and the nature of America's place in the world. His next project will be a version of Graham Greene's "The Quiet American," featuring a cast that includes Sean Connery. Noyce also hopes to return soon to his Down Under roots with "Butcher's Creek," a film about the conflict between European settlers and the Aborigines.

Now 46, and a self-described "discombobulated presence on a set" (the Aussie lad matured into a 6'5" 250-pound man), Noyce maintains an enthusiasm for his work wherever it takes him. Despite his career success, he still voices surprise that, as he puts it, "it happened at all" to an Australian who grew up in a country that then had no indigenous film industry. "No child back home would really think to say, 'I want to be a movie director,' because there was no such animal," Noyce says. Yet he became one of cinema's most cosmopolitan talents, and that, he says, is "a gift, a privilege. Not a right but a wonderful, wonderful gift."

"I'm like [the Saint], not really living anywhere but hotels, not knowing quite where I am."

"The Saint." Starring Val Kilmer and Elizabeth Shue. Directed by Phillip Noyce. Written by Wesley Strick and Jonathan Hensleigh. Produced by David Brown, Robert Evans, William MacDonald and Mace Neufeld. A Paramount release. Adventure. Opens March 28.

A "WIDE" RANGE

Actress Dana Delany Ventures Into Religion With "Wide Awake"

by Bridget Byrne

Dana Delany stars in the Miramax dramatic comedy "Wide Awake," slated for early summer release.

Dana Delany isn't a mother, but that doesn't mean she can't play one convincingly—even though most of her movie admirers probably don't think about her that way. In "Wide Awake," Delany is a "rational, conservative doctor," mother of a 10-year-old boy who, coping with the death of his grandfather, embarks on a search for God.

The Miramax release, tentatively slated for early summer, is helmed by sophomore director M. Night Shyamalan and also stars Denis Leary as the boy's father, Robert Loggia as the grandfather and Rosie O'Donnell as a nun.

Her portion of filming occurred in Philadelphia, where she traveled almost immediately after spending four months in Canada on "Fly Away Home," the film about orphaned geese being taught to migrate. "I enjoyed that film, but I felt I was the distaff interest in it. 'Wide Awake' gave me something at the other end of that spectrum," Delany says over a glass of juice in a cafe near her Venice, Calif. home. It's a place she often comes after her morning yoga class, where she can drink coffee and do The New York Times crossword puzzle.

She was impressed with the performance of newcomer Joseph Cross, who plays her young son. "We got lucky. He was delightful. He was still at the age when he believed in make-believe—he hadn't reached the point where young actors tend to turn self-conscious. I had a crying scene to do in reaction to the death of my father, his grandfather.

"When he saw my tears, he asked me, 'How do you do that?' I said, 'You just believe in what you are doing.' Later he had a scene with the priest, and he's there with tears streaming down his face, obviously not fake ones. When the shot was over he jumped up and down and started cheering, 'I did it, I did it!'" Delany recounts, with almost motherly pride.

She says she felt comfortable from her first scene with Shyamalan, despite his youth. "He is very self confident, low key, calm and willing to admit when he doesn't know something," she says, explaining that she likes to work with directors who believe in "mistakes and the unexpected." She recalls that in "Wide Awake," during a scene in which Joseph asks his mother about God, she replied "She is..." rather than "He is...." The director let it ride—but, she believes, the nontraditional response might have been changed since.

There is a still-waters-run-deep quality to Delany. Her outer appearance is neat, cultured, groomed, her blue/gray eyes enhancing the clear skin of her delicate face. But in conversation she gives sign of, perhaps not wildness, but an inner freedom. She's 40 and has never married—a situation, she laughingly implies, men find disturbing. And she's not taken any sort of traditional Hollywood path toward capitalizing on her pretty looks. "I'm not really comfortable with glamor. I like to play strong characters and to take chances," she says, explaining that her acting style is not that of "a performer" and noting that TV usually provides more challenging roles for women than do feature films.

"I'm not really comfortable with glamor. I like to play strong characters and to take chances."

She first found fame in the critically acclaimed series "China Beach," a show that had the qualities she sees in the best dramas: "a moral viewpoint and a way of educating people and affecting lives." She still gets messages on her website (set up for her by a fan) expressing the comfort the show provided to war veterans. But, after she played the birth control pioneer Margaret Sanger in a made-for-cable movie, taking her an ideology away from her Irish-Catholic nurse of "China Beach," she also got letters from people saying they would never watch anything she did again.

Raised in Stamford, Conn., Delany wanted to be an actress from the age of three. As a child, she loved musicals and Doris Day movies, which perhaps goes some way to explaining her neatly packaged sexiness. She took an actress' traditional route: After graduating from Wesleyan University, she moved to New York to work in the theatre. She eventually relocated to Hollywood for the West Coast production of Nicholas Kazan's play "Bloodmoon," in which she'd won praise off-Broadway.

"Girlfriend roles" in series like "Moonlighting" and "Magnum, P.I." helped her career along, but they were never the challenges that she really wanted to undertake. In movies, she's certainly tried to find more unusual fare; sometimes she's succeeded, as in 1992's "Light Sleeper," the Paul Schrader film about the upscale New York drug scene, and sometimes she hasn't, as with her (albeit intriguing) turn as a dominatrix in the Garry Marshall comedy "Exit to Eden."

"It didn't work. What was in Anne Rice's book didn't make it to the screen, but I never regret trying something," Delany says philosophically. With that, she heads home to read another week's offering of scripts, hoping to find something off-kilter, void of cliche and free of convention.

"Wide Awake." Starring Denis Leary, Dana Delany, Robert Loggia and Joseph Cross. Directed and written by M. Night Shyamalan. Produced by Cary Woods and Cathy Konrad. A Miramax release. Drama/comedy. Opens in early summer.

"VALLEY" GIRL

Krista Griffin keeps "Rocky Horror" and alternative cinema alive at Arizona's Valley Art

By Melissa Morrison

Owner Krista Griffin is the theatre's only full-time employee.

Its original Art Deco architecture makes the 57-year-old Valley Art theatre stand out in boomtown Tempe, Ariz., like an oldster at the Junior Prom. There aren't many theatres like it left in the state—multiscreen modernism makes more sense in one of the fastest-growing regions of the country.

But the Valley Art's two-story, neon-glowing tower on the desert landscape is a fitting symbol for what goes on inside the theatre, which is the only place in the Phoenix area where Arizonans can see things like political documentaries, short-film festivals, local cinema students' projects, Mexican vampire thrillers, Japanese animation and French directors' latest installments in the book of love. "We definitely show films nobody can see elsewhere," says the Valley Art's owner—and projectionist and popcorn seller—Krista Griffin.

By now, there are certainly more profitable uses for the building at 507 S. Mill Avenue. In recent years, as Tempe completed its transformation from a sleepy college town to busy urban center, the Valley Art has found itself surrounded by a Hooters franchise, cappuccino bars and the kind of chain restaurants that serve $5 margaritas. In the 11 years Griffin has owned the theatre, she says it hasn't made a profit. But, if money were the Valley Art's sole reason for being, it would have been shut down years ago. "Since I've had it, it's been a $1 theatre and an art theatre, and it's a lot more fun being an art theatre," she says. "It has a purpose and a value in the community. We show Chinese films, we get the Chinese community—they all know each other and talk Chinese to each other. Same thing with gay and lesbian films. It's fun. You don't just get a movie here, it's a whole funky vibe."

Griffin took over the Valley Art in 1986, culminating a career in Arizona's exhibition industry that began when she got a job selling popcorn at age 16. She eventually managed five theatres for the Harkins chain, Arizona's largest exhibitor. In 1983, she bought her own moviehouse, the University Theatres in Tempe, which she converted from two to three screens and refashioned into the region's first $1 cinema. She sold that theatre in 1982, leaving her with the Valley Art.

As the Phoenix area's only full-time art-house, scheduling is a matter of instinct versus opportunity. "We watch what other big cities play and then try to figure out what the market for them is here, which is a really big guess because we don't have a cultured and sophisticated audience yet," Griffin says. "And we don't have a loyal audience that will come no matter what we show. But we have cultivated that audience enough that they'll sometimes take a gamble on something unfamiliar."

In addition to BOXOFFICE, Griffin studies New York's Village Voice newspaper for film tips, and her Northern California-based buyer closely watches the San Francisco and L.A. markets. Griffin says a lot of her choices depend on what the chains pass over.

Though the Valley Art has a built-in audience pool of students from Arizona State University, located a few blocks away, Griffin says the theatre routinely draws people from a 40-mile radius, depending on the type of film. It's also not unusual for the Valley Art's one-of-a-kind program to attract people from the cities of Flagstaff and Tucson.

The 386-seat moviehouse was built in 1940 by Harry L. Nace Sr. and Dwight "Red" Harkins, the founder of the Harkins chain, and named the College Theatre. It was renamed the Valley Art in 1961 by different owners and went through a stint in the '60s as a porn house. In the late '70s, the building was also bought by Parallax Theatre Systems, now Landmark. (For more history, check the Valley Art's Website at http://members.aol.com/valleyart1/index.html.)

"You don't just get a movie here, it's a whole funky vibe."

Not much has changed technologically at the Valley Art since then. It still operates with its original projector, a Brenkert. That company is now out of business, so, when parts are needed, Griffin buys them used. The auditorium has stereo sound, but not Dolby. Griffin estimates the newest equipment is a '70s-era Cretors popcorn machine. Outside, a stand-alone ticket booth, trimmed in turquoise and pink, sits sentry beneath a neon backlit marquee. A plaque in the lobby honors the late Bill Greig, the Valley Art's projectionist from 1940 to 1985: "Through his dedication, skill and knowledge of the cinema, Bill raised the trade of the projectionist to an art form."

"The Rocky Horror Picture Show" is a perennial favorite for the midnight crowd at the Valley Art.

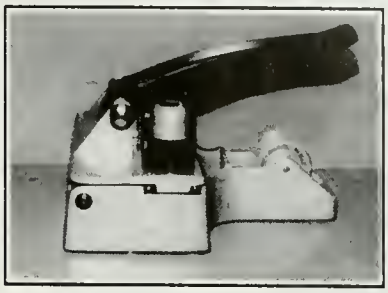
Like the films it highlights, the Valley Art has hosted an equally varied roster of art events. Local Indian tribes have blessed the building during ceremonies that include traditional dancing and chants. The stage has also been the site of concerts by folkies Joan Baez (whom Griffin says opted for less money to perform there rather than at a newer concert hall) and Janis Ian, as well as alternative-rock goddess Tori Amos. Griffin has also lured legendary DD-movie director Russ Meyer to introduce "Faster Pussycat! Kill! Kill!" and actor Bud Cort to do likewise for "Harold and Maude." ("He called me every day for months after that," Griffin says.)

The theatre has the distinction of hosting the region's biggest screenings and one of the longest running programs of "The Rocky Horror Picture Show" in the Southwest, a tradition Griffin began 11 years ago at the University Theatres. The Saturday midnight screenings have evolved into live-theatre spectacles performed by a dozen costumed fanatics who draw lipstick Vs on the foreheads of unsuspecting RH "virgins," and whose comebacks to the screen action drown out the soundtrack.

Not that such programs pay big bucks. "I'm doing the struggling artist thing," Griffin says. Ticket prices are lower than the market average: $5.50 for evenings and $3 for matinees and weekends. Griffin, who hasn't collected a salary since June 7, recently earned an elementary-education degree so she can support herself by working as a substitute first-grade teacher. Griffin is the theatre's only full-time employee (she's assisted by a handful of part-timers), which sometimes results in patrons being drafted into service.



"I'll grab somebody out of the line and say, 'Come here, come here. I'll give you a free Pepsi if you come behind the counter and tell people, "She'll be right back,"'" she laughs. Despite the lack of monetary rewards, the Valley Art offers enough alternative incentives to keep Griffin hanging in there. "I love it here. I come here, I hang out, I do my homework here—It's my own little space."

The Valley Art
507 S. Mill Avenue
Tempe, AZ 85281
(602) 829-6668
Owner: Krista Griffin

Earliest Movie Memory:
"Mary Poppins," 1964
Favorite Concession Item:
Popcorn with real butter
Favorite BOXOFFICE Feature:
Showmandiser
Favorite Vacation Spot:
"I have no vacation spot because I have no vacations."
Advice to Other Independents:
"If they have any ideas they should give me a call."

ONLY $199.95

A new conception in 35 mm splicers that must be seen to be believed.

- Top quality
- Inexpensive price
- All metal — no plastic
- Wholesale to the public

EQUIPMENT, ETC.
P. O. Box 1194
Snellville, GA 30278
Phone–(770) 979-3456
Fax–(770) 979-0919
Ans. Mach. 24 Hrs. A Day

Response No. 443

quality spare parts

Spare parts for 35 & 35/70 mm Westar, Century, Westrex, Cinecita, Monee, Cinemex, Simplex, Brenkert, Motiograph, and many other projectors, soundheads and sound systems.

Finest quality, attractively priced, dealer discounts, fast service. Write for our list. Dealer inquires invited

Westar precision machine parts exclusively distributed by International Cinema Equipment Company, Inc

international cinema equipment company inc.
100 N.E. 39th Street, Miami, FL 33137-3632
Ph: (305) 573-7339, Fax (305) 573-8101

Response No. 15

EXHIBITION BRIEFINGS

UATC'S RESTRUCTURING PLAN

United Artists Theatre Circuit Inc. refuted reports that the company was putting itself up for sale, and instead announced a corporate restructuring plan to reduce general and administrative expenses by 15 to 20 percent, which should save about $6 million annually. This plan involves the consolidation of several administrative positions in the purchasing, marketing and sales departments—and the layoffs of 50-75 corporate employees, reportedly including senior marketing VP Bill Quigley. "While these types of restructurings are never easy because of the loss of jobs, it was very important that we structure ourselves more efficiently so we can provide the necessary resources and focus in the corporate support areas which are most important to the long-term success of our core business," said Kurt Hall, executive vice president and CFO of UATC, in a prepared statement. "The key to our future success is to keep our business plan simple and to focus on two overall goals: increasing our operating cash flow and net earnings and reducing our debt." This restructuring comes only a month after UATC's president and CEO Stewart Blair resigned; at press time, his position still had not been filled.

CINEPLEX INCREASES OFFER TO PROJECTIONISTS

Now in its fourth month, the lock-out of Cineplex projectionists continues, though both the circuit and the projectionists' union, Local 173, are striving to come to an agreement. Cineplex wants to make cutbacks, on the grounds that in recent years, automated technology has made projectionists' jobs much easier, and the position no longer warrants as high a pay scale. The current average salary for a projectionist ranges between C$30,000 to C$40,000 (US$20,000 to US$27,000). Cineplex had initially wanted to cut these wages by half, but after negotiations has reduced its wage cut proposal to 30-35 percent, which would mean a new salary range of C$25,500 to C$30,000 (US$17,000 to US$20,000). Cineplex also wants to eliminate 33 of 73 projectionists' jobs, which the union agrees to, provided the severance package is fair. But while Cineplex is willing to pay severance for the years that the projectionists have worked specifically for the company, the union wants compensation based on the total years that the projectionists have worked overall.

IMAX WINS TECHNICAL OSCAR

Toronto-based but American-owned Imax Corp. has won an Oscar for scientific and technical achievement. Imax was recognized by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for its innovations, including large format filming and exhibition. The company, which reported record earnings last year, will be honored on March 1 at a special ceremony in Beverly Hills. An estimated 500 million people worldwide have seen an Imax movie since the company was incorporated in 1970.

SHOWMANDISER PROMOTION OF THE MONTH

How much is that doggy in the front seat? Look closely and you'll 'spot' a real live dalmatian naively snuggling up to a Cruella cut-out. Not only did Harold Christman, manager of the Chakeres Wilmington Plaza Cinemas Five in Wilmington, Ohio, decorate his theatre with floor and window displays to promote Disney's "101 Dalmations," he had a drawing in which patrons 18 years or older could win this adorable pup! The cuddly canine was given a good home, and Christman's promotion was a howling success.

AUDIENCES TAKEN BY STORM WITH DTS "LOST WORLD" TRAILER

Digital Theater Systems (DTS), Universal Pictures and Amblin Entertainment joined forces to create a special limited release presentation of the trailer for "The Lost World," the highly-anticipated sequel to the 1993 blockbuster "Jurassic Park." A spectacular light and sound display simulates a torrential thunder-and-lightning storm so convincing that disclaimers have been posted in theatres warning patrons of the "intense" nature of the teaser. The effects are achieved by a modified DTS unit that activates six strategically-placed strobe lights. The timing for the lights is encoded into the trailer's print, which is synched to the DTS CD-ROM system.

In a related item, DTS, whose sound system was launched four years ago with the release of Universal and Amblin's "Jurassic Park," posted a record number of unit installations in 1996. Last year, DTS shipped a total of 2,539 units, which is nearly a 20 percent increase over 1995's figures. DTS's installations worldwide now number over 8,200.

MARCUS EXPANDS INTO MICHIGAN

Marcus Theatres Corp. will build a 14-plex in the northeast Detroit suburb of Utica—the circuit's first theatre in Michigan. "Utica offers our company a unique opportunity," says Bruce J. Olson, president of Marcus. "It is a rapidly-growing area of Detroit with a large population base, yet it lacks a state-of-the-art theatre to attract moviegoers. Our first Michigan theatre will feature all of the newest innovations, creating a first-class moviegoing experience." The 60,000-square-foot cinema will seat 3,300, and the site may grow to 20 screens in the future. An early fall opening is projected.

MUVICO'S POMPANO AND CIRCUMSTANCE

Muvico Theatres Inc. has signed an agreement to build an all-stadium seating 18-plex at the site of their present 6-plex in Pompano, Florida. Scheduled to open this fall, the theatre will seat 3,200, with each auditorium ranging from 100 to 300 seats. It will have superior viewing sightlines, digital sound systems, wall-to-wall curved screens, gourmet concessions, love seats and specialty designed seats created especially for Muvico.

CLEARVIEW BUYS 13 NJ SCREENS

Clearview Cinema Group Inc., headquartered in Madison, N.J., has acquired 13 screens in three locations from Livingston, N.J.-based Magic Cinemas LLC. The purchase of the Tenafly Cinema 4, the Bergenfield Cinema 5, and the Closter Cinema 4 brings Clearview's total screen count to 60 in 16 locations. "A total of at least 100 screens by the end of 1997 is our objective," says Clearview president and CEO A. Dale Mayo.

REGAL ROCKS PLYMOUTH WITH NEW 10-PLEX

Plymouth Township of Pennsylvania is the site of Regal's latest build, a 10-plex with giant wall-to-wall screens; Dolby surround sound; DTS Digital, Dolby Digital and SDDS; stadium-style seating in selected auditoriums; love seats with cupholder armrests; computerized ticketing stations with 3-day advance ticketing; a continuous loop lobby projection screen featuring coming attractions; and a video game room. Also included is Regal's trademark Cafe Del Moro, which serves fresh-baked goods and other specialty concessions.

NATIONAL AMUSEMENTS' "CREATURE" FEATURE

National Amusements and Universal Pictures teamed up to support local zoos across the nation with free screenings of the menagerie-themed comedy "Fierce Creatures" for zoo employees, sponsors and patrons. "National Amusements and Universal Pictures are proud to present these free screenings which will enable the zoos to offer a special thanks to the individuals and groups that have continually shown their support throughout the year," says Shari Redstone, executive vice president of National Amusements.

PRYSMTECH PACTS WITH KERASOTES

Kerasotes Theatres has selected Roswell, Ga.-based PrysmTech LLC as the circuit's provider of theatre management and concession point-of-sale systems. Kerasotes will be the first chain to install PrysmTech's newest product for concessions, ConcLyte, a low-cost point-of-sale solution with a key-touchpad, up to 77 product keys, and nine different payment keys. In addition to Kerasotes, PrysmTech has deals with exhibitors Sony, Cobb, Crown, Muvico, Regal and Cinamerica.

ON THE MOVE

Jack Loeks Theatres Inc. has promoted Steve Forsythe from general manager of Studio 28 in Grand Rapids, Mich., to the corporate-level position of general manager of Jack Loeks Theatres Inc. Forsythe will oversee the operations and human resource functions of the 11 theatres currently in the company's circuit...Elizabeth Figge has joined Dolby Laboratories as Sales Manager, Cinema Products. Figge will be responsible for supporting exhibitors, Dolby's cinema product dealers, and film distributors both regionally and nationally. Before joining Dolby, Figge was North American Sales Manager for Sony Cinema Products...Ballantyne of Omaha Inc., a manufacturer and marketer of motion picture projection systems and specialty entertainment lighting equipment, has promoted Ray Boegner to senior vice president. Boegner was previously Ballantyne's marketing vice president for cinema products...David Tomber has been appointed sales manager of entertainment venues for Multiplex Company Inc., a manufacturer of beverage dispensing and water treatment equipment for the food service and exhibition industries. Tomber is a member of the board of directors and education chairman of the National Association of Concessionaires, and was director of concessions and ancillary marketing for Wehrenberg Theatres Inc. prior to joining Multiplex.

Q&A: LAURA ZISKIN: FROM "PRETTY WOMAN" TO FOX 2000 HEAD

Laura Ziskin, president of Fox 2000 Pictures, saw her company's first release, "Courage Under Fire," pull $60 million. It's hardly the first success for this one-time USC film school student and game show writer; early in her career, she joined Jon Peters' production company and then ran Sally Fields' Fogwood Films; later, she executive produced Buena Vista's "Pretty Woman." This past Christmas, Fox 2000's sophomore effort, "One Fine Day," opened to reasonable business, and Ziskin awaits her high-profile "Volcano," pushed to a tentative spring date to avoid Universal's "Dante's Peak." In the meantime, she's overseen "Inventing the Abbotts," which was slated for a February 28 bow.

BOXOFFICE: What makes a Fox 2000 project a Fox 2000 project?

LAURA ZISKIN: Our mandate—and our desire—is to make commercial movies. Those to me in this market are the proverbial movies that open on Friday night. Beyond that, what all our movies share is that they're character-driven movies. They are of any genre—"Courage Under Fire" was a drama, "One Fine Day" was a romantic comedy, "Valcano" is a disaster movie—but they're all driven as much by characters as by concept.

BOXOFFICE: It's easy to distinguish between the fare of, say, Fox Searchlight and Fox. But how is Fox 2000 different from Fox?

ZISKIN: I don't think we're different. We're additive. What it does is allow the company to have multiple points of view, to have more than one group of people creating product. I think the fact that I'm a woman influences my life and influences my taste. Women are clearly a big audience for movies, and certainly there's a value in having women in the decision-making process. But I want to be careful how I say this, because I don't think I'm making women's movies.

BOXOFFICE: Character-driven movies sometimes require a little percolation time for their audience to find them, and yet Fox 2000 movies are to be Friday-night movies. How do you design in enough boxoffice appeal for weekend one so you can have weekends two, three and four?

ZISKIN: One always still wants to have an idea. That doesn't necessarily mean a high-concept idea, but an idea or theme that the public can grab onto. The other philosophy I bring into the division is that I like to work with movie stars. I like to create material that attracts movie stars. So that certainly helps us. You must have character, you must have concept—hopefully we have it all. I would say we try to do the impossible: We're trying to make really good movies that make money! (laughs) My dream, my fantasy, is: good movies that make money. For them and for us.

BOXOFFICE: In the past few years, the majors had been ramping up production. For example, Disney and Fox added divisions. But now Disney is dismantling, Paramount is cutting back, Warner released only nine movies in a six-month span last year. Fox, though, is going ahead with its four separate conduits. What is your take on all that?

ZISKIN: If we succeed, we'll continue that way (laughs) and if we fail we won't.

BOXOFFICE: Do you think that production cutbacks at other studios could benefit Fox's full-tilt slate?

ZISKIN: I think we're in great shape. The fact that we have diversity gives us real depth. It's like a baseball team, where you have depth in the dugout.

BOXOFFICE: Also in recent years, with more studio movies, more exhibitors have been building megaplexes to play them. Suddenly, the pipeline starts slowing. Where are all the movies going to come from?

ZISKIN: I don't think there'll be a huge quantitative drop, but it may be just enough so that movies will play longer, and that attendance and grosses will stay the same. So some movies that might have dropped out after two weekends might play twice as long.

BOXOFFICE: Isn't that an advantage for character-driven movies?

ZISKIN: Yes, absolutely. That the potential of a movie to find an audience can be taken away is a sore subject for me. It's a [boxoffice] contest every weekend, and if you don't win the contest then the public doesn't know you exist. We hurt the depth and breadth of movies by squeezing [attention] into just the top three. But, look, I'm a moviemaker, so I want us to make lots of movies.

BOXOFFICE: And how many are you planning on making a year?

ZISKIN: As many good ones as I can find.—Kim Williamson

NATIONAL NEWS

1996 FINAL: ANOTHER RECORD!

As the fifth consecutive year of improved boxoffice, 1996 was the biggest year in film history with domestic grosses topping out at $5.76 billion (on 159 studio films released last year), a figure up 7.9 percent over last year. The sixth biggest domestic film of all time, "Independence Day, took in a stratospheric $306.2 million and laid claim as the third all-time biggest global film with a worldwide take of $746 million. Despite the disappointing summer due to Olympic fever, 1996 saw 12 films shoot past the $100 million mark, a big jump from last year's seven films that made the cut that tops the former high of 11 in 1994. There were an estimated 1.265 million tickets sold domestically (up 3.5 percent over 1995).

Buena Vista and Warner Bros. took first and second place on the market share slots for the third year running. In the top spot, Buena Vista took 20.8% of the market with $1.2 billion gross on 38 films (24 wide releases) giving them an average return of $42.2 million per picture (up 18.5 percent over 1995). Warner Bros., with a little help from "Twister," ended the year with 15.7% of the market share, but topped Disney on a per-title basis with a $44.8 million average per film.

Paramount's performance improved 35.5 percent over 1995 taking in 12.6 percent of the market share with 24 films (15 wide releases). Fox found forth place even though they released only 14 movies (less than any other studio). They received the highest average return per film: $56.4 million, thanks to "ID4." Sony, which released 41 titles (26 wide releases), ranked fifth in the market share and failed to have a single film reach $100 million. Universal fell off 27.7 percent from last year with only one major hit on their slate, "The Nutty Professor." MGM/UA ranked seventh and the tumultuous New Line ranked eighth despite a last quarter hit with "Michael." 1996 saw a big rise in New Line's budgets, up 70 percent to an average of $27.6 million.

According to the Motion Picture Association of America, members spent an average of $36.4 million to produce a film and $17.7 million to market one in 1996. Certain marketing executives disagree, believing the normal advertising expense for a wide release film to really be between $25-$30 million.

ALL EYES ON OCTOBER

Paramount and Universal are just two of the numerous companies eyeing a deal with the successful independent distributor October Films. Universal doesn't seem twice shy at hooking up with another specialized "arthouse" company after selling off their 50% stake in Gramercy Pictures last year—a deal which had never paid off for the studio. October is having a banner year with "Secrets and Lies" and "Breaking the Waves" and has taken over where Mirimax left off when it was acquired by the Walt Disney Co., a merger that helped lead the hip trend for studios to have their own specialized arthouse arm. 20th Century Fox created their own division in house, Fox Searchlight. Paramount has made noises about starting their own classics division, but also has been checking out existing companies, including possibly bringing over the Sony Classics group whose contract with Sony is up in February. And October, which has a strong slate for 1997 including the intriguing David Lynch film, "Lost Highway," which premiered at Sundance, is a real contender. The current investor group of the seven-year old distribution company says its not interested in selling and any deal would be far off, but some say it would take new and more powerful backing to move October to the next stage where it could compete with Mirimax, considered the lord of all arthouse distributors.

EISNER AND OVITZ GRAB DISNEY DOLLARS

In a series of revelations unlikely to temper the shareholder criticism that has been leveled at the Walt Disney Co. since speculation began about the severance offered to recently departed Disney president Michael Ovitz, the Walt Disney Co. revealed details about chairman and CEO Michael Eisner's recently completed executive compensation package, as well as the terms of Ovitz's exit.

Eisner's new deal freezes his annual salary at $750,000 for the next decade—a frugal pay scale given the scope of Eisner's responsibilities at Disney. The big money, though, will come when Eisner excercises the whopping 8 million stock share options the contract awarded him—currently valued at $195 million, but capable of yielding a great deal more if Disney's robust recent performance continues into the next decade.

Ovitz, meanwhile, was bought off for a cool $38.9 million—a more than reasonable pay-off considering his tenure as president of Disney lasted just 14 months. But Ovitz's golden parachute was even more valuable, granting him some 3 million stock options valued at at least $31 million at current prices, but could be worth more if Disney stock accrues value through 2002, when Ovitz must excercise his options. Estimates of the potential yield to Ovitz from excercise of the options alone run up to and beyond the $100 million mark.

At press time, there were two known shareholder lawsuits filed against Disney in connection with Ovitz's severance. Each suit charges Disney's officers and directors with dereliction of duty in agreeing to the Ovitz severance package.

IT'S A BIRD! IT'S A PLANE! IT'S BURGER KING!

In an attempt to get in a preemptive strike for Summer 1998, Warner Bros is in talks with Burger King about sealing a first-look promotional development deal for "Superman Reborn" a year and a half before it's release. Warner Bros. hopes "Reborn" will hail the return of their "Superman" series, but without a director or an approved script ("Clerks" Kevin Smith is doing a rewrite), isn't finding the company to sell Superman cups and meal-deal toys a bit premature? Not for the intense battles heating up over the lucrative promotional deals. Last year the Walt Disney Co. took the No. 1 fast-food restaurant out of the game when they signed an exclusive 10-year promotional partnership with McDonalds, leaving the other studios to scramble over the No. 2 fast-food chain, Burger King, which signed on to Universal's "Lost World" for the summer, leaving Warner Bros. with a far less lucrative deal with Taco Bell for their "Batman and Robin." Warner Bros. hoped to get Burger King signed on for their upcoming animation film, "Quest for Camelot," but the chain decided to go with Fox's animated "Anastasia."

Promotional tie-ins are becoming increasingly important as they can mean millions to a picture. Example: When Disney's upcoming live-action comedy. "George of the Jungle" became an approved McDonald's promotion, the budget rocketed to $55 million (from $28 million) and gained state-of-the-art CGI effects to become one of Disney's "event" films of the summer.

UNIVERSAL TO EXPAND UNIVERSE

Universal Studios, Inc. faced county and city planners in Los Angeles in January to explain and defend its 25 year master plan for expansion of the Universal Studios property. The hearings with city planners, supporters and opponents of the plan covered effects of increased traffic and noise pollution the Universal project would have on the surrounding area. Universal's plans include transforming the studio lot, the expansion of the tourist-haven City Walk and a new family theme park. The studio hopes to create a destination resort with five or six hotels, entertainment and restaurant venues on the scale of Disneyland, Disneyworld or even its own Universal Studios, Florida. Opponents to the plan simply don't want a Disneyland in their backyard, but supporters say the plan will bring an economic boon to the area, creating 13,000 new jobs and adding millions to city and county tax revenues.

DGA SELECTS FIRST TIMERS

First time's the charm for the 1996 Director's Guild of America nominees for feature films. Not since the 1950s have all the chosen directors been first time nominees. They are: Joel Coen for "Fargo," Cameron Crowe for "Jerry Maguire," Scott Hicks for "Shine," Mike Leigh for "Secrets and Lies" and Anthony Minghella for "The English Patient." The winner will be announced on March 8. Notable omissions from the list, which has historically been a fairly accurate barometer for the Oscar, include Milos Forman (who won the Best Director Golden Globe) for "The People vs. Larry Flynt" and Alan Parker for "Evita" (which won the Golden Globe for Best Picture Musical or Comedy).

Only four times since its inception in 1949 has the DGA Awardee not gone on to win the Oscar for best director. Last year was the fourth exception when Ron Howard won the DGA Award for "Apollo 13", but failed to even get an Oscar nomination and the Oscar went to Mel Gibson for "Braveheart." Two of the virgin DGA nominees aren't even members of the DGA (Hicks and Leigh) and Coen only joined recently. All the contenders except Hicks have some form of writing credit on their films, while all but "Jerry Maguire" are independent films that come from outside the studio system.

BOXOFFICE GOOD, BLOCKBUSTER BAD

Though Paramount Pictures was looking great in the final frame of 1996, other sectors of Viacom, Inc. ate up the communications giant's profitability and then some. Viacom wrote off $100 million offset against their fourth-quarter profits (between $38-$52 million) in a one-time charge to cover costs of closing 50 of their Blockbuster Music stores. Viacom will also use some of the write-off to cover the cost of moving Blockbuster headquarters from Ft. Lauderdale, Fl. to Dallas, Tx. Blockbuster Music continues to lose money as a whole and even the Blockbuster video chain has had disappointing growth. After the fourth quarter reports came out, Viacom stock stumbled downward. Blockbuster contributes about one-third of Viacom's total cash flow. The losses were offset by MTV Networks, Spelling Entertainment and Paramount Pictures, which ended 1996 with three surefire hits: "The First Wives Club," "Star Trek: First Contact" and "Beavis and Butthead Do America."

OSCAR'S GOLDEN GLOBETROTTERS

The Golden Globe Awards, long viewed by Oscar handicappers as one of the most prominent indicators of possible Academy nominees and winners, were announced January 19 in Los Angeles. In other Oscar-related news, Saul Zaentz, producer of "The English Patient" as well as such prestigious Oscar-winners as "One Flew Over the Cukoo's Nest" and "Amadeus," was named the 33rd recipient of the coveted Irving G. Thalberg Memorial Award. The Thalberg Award, which will be presented as part of the Oscar ceremony on March 24, is given out periodically to film producers whose "bodies of work reflect a consistently high quality of...production," according to Academy by-laws.

A complete list of this year's film-related Golden Globe Awardees follows.

Best Motion Picture—Drama
"The English Patient."
Best Motion Picture—Musical or Comedy
"Evita."
Best Actor—Drama
Geoffrey Rush, "Shine."
Best Actress—Drama
Brenda Blethyn, "Secrets and Lies."
Best Actor—Musical or Comedy
Tom Cruise, "Jerry Maguire."
Best Actress—Musical or Comedy
Madonna, "Evita."
Best Foreign-Language Film
"Kolya" (Czech Republic).
Best Supporting Actor
Edward Norton, "Primal Fear."
Best Supporting Actress
Lauren Bacall, "The Mirror Has Two Faces."
Best Director
Milos Forman, "The People vs. Larry Flynt."
Best Screenplay
Scott Alexander & Larry Karaszewski, "The People vs. Larry Flynt."
Best Original Score
Gabriel Yared, "The English Patient."
Best Original Song
"You Must Love Me," from Evita; music by Andrew Lloyd Webber, lyrics by Tim Rice.

READY THEATRE SYSTEMS
SOFTWARE FOR TICKETING, CONCESSIONS & COMPLETE INVENTORY CONTROL
800 676-9303 616 463-8458
Response No. 130

HURLEY SCREEN
SUPERGLO
A durable pearlescent, smooth surface offers maximum reflectivity & light distribution.
SILVERGLO
A smooth, aluminized surface offering the highest reflectivity for special applications such as 3D.
MW-16
A heavy guage matte white surface offering excellent light distribution, image clarity, and color rendition.
Screen Framing • All Types Available
FAX # (410) 838-8079
Automatiket
Theatre Equipment Association
AUTOMATED HIGH SPEED U/L APPROVED TICKETING EQUIPMENT
Factory Service, the only authorized manufacturer and repair center.
AUTOMATICKET
A Division of Cemcorp
HURLEY SCREEN CORP.
A Subsidiary of Cemcorp
110 Industry Lane - P.O. Box 296
Forest Hill, MD 21050
410-838-0036 • 410-879-3022 • 410-879-6757 • 410-836-9333
Response No. 57

CINETECH INC
Projection
Planning
Equipment
Sound
Seating
Construction
Upgrading
Cinetech
Corporate Center
225 W. Howard Street
Stowe, PA 19464
800-432-4847
Fax 610-323-1664
email infomagic@AOL.com
www.cinetech-infomagic.com
SLIDE SHOW
GRAPHICS * TRIVIA
* INSTALLATION
* Call our InfoMagic Dept.
and ask for Brian Walters
or Bruce Fitzsimmons
Response No. 159

INTERNATIONAL NEWS BRIEFS

EUROVIEWS

European News Notes by Melissa Morrison

ENGLISH LANGUAGE CINEMA PLAN TO COMPETE WITH HOLLYWOOD

LONDON—Hollywood is sort of the King Kong to Europe's bananas, chewing up the monster's share of local audiences, generally leaving few leftovers to feed domestic productions. With that in mind, the United Kingdom and Ireland are among five countries taking the strength-in-numbers approach to countering Hollywood's domination of local cinemas by banding together to make their own joint productions. Canada, New Zealand, and Australia are the other members of the newly formed English-Language Cinema Plan (ELCP). The five countries (which hope to become six with the inclusion of South Africa) will pool their respective funds and talent to create films that rival American ones for audiences. Simon Perry, the Briton who conceived the plan, said member countries have only themselves to blame for allowing Hollywood to gain dominance in countries whose natives are English speakers. The ELCP will dedicate $500,000 for the first two years of its intended five-year life span, with an eye toward developing eight to 12 movies annually. The resulting films promise to have distinct cultural identities rather than those diluted by the participation of more than one country, Perry said. The member countries' representatives are: British Screen Finance (of which Perry is the executive director), the Irish Film Board, Telefilm Canada, the New Zealand Film Commission, and the Australian Film Finance Corp.

KEEPING UP WITH THE MULTIPLEXES

BERLIN—A five-year study by a German film agency has concluded that the multiplex boom is forcing older theatres to adapt or face annihilation. The German Federal Film Board found that the influx of multiplexes, which now account for 15 percent of the marketplace, has reduced the number of old-style cinemas within range of those multiplexes by 10 percent over the 1989-1995 period. The study also discovered that theatres in the same region as newly built multiplexes suffered a 20 percent decline in audiences in 1995.

However, older theatres that have managed to find niches, such as art-houses and cinemas that plan special events and film festivals, along with those that have renovated to remain technologically and architecturally exciting, stand the best chances of survival in any country, exhibitors say. Good thing, too, because the German multiplex boom shows no sign of slowing: 18 are currently under construction with another 54 in the planning stages. Exhibitors say the increase in screens has also had another effect: The more screens in a neighborhood, the more movies residents see. It's an effect they say that's beneficial to all theatres.

RAY OF HOPE

BUDAPEST—In December, post-communist filmmaking received a much-needed boost when the Hungarian film "Bolshe Vita" was awarded the first-ever Satyajit Ray Award, named for the director of "Panther Panchali," in London. "Vita" director Ibolya Fekete, 45, was honored for his drama set in Central Europe when the region was undergoing the transition from communism to democracy.

The Satyajit Ray Foundation launched the award to recognize new directors' films that reflect the legendary Indian film director's values and artistry. "Vita" is Fekete's first film and a triumph for Central European filmmaking, which is struggling in the wake of the same period of flux Fekete documents in his movie. For instance, government subsidies for film have been slashed as local economies adjust to the market system and domestic films are outgunned by Hollywood imports in terms of budgets, marketing and star power. The award also signals that artists in the countries of the former East bloc are finally able to document artistically the profound changes wrought by the demise of the Soviet system.

NO VIOLENCE, PLEASE, WE'RE BRITISH

LONDON—The British government, whose heritage secretary has been embroiled in a prominent campaign against David Cronenberg's sex-and-violence soaked flick "Crash," has stepped up its campaign against unsavory films by criticizing Hollywood for violent fare. The British Board of Film Classification filed a government report attacking the American film industry for exploiting violence in films. The report was directed at video releases and named superstars such as Arnold Schwarzenegger, Sylvester Stallone and Steven Seagal as perpetrators. James Ferman, director the board, urged Hollywood to voluntarily reduce screen violence, saying British censorship was helpless against the American industry's superior economic strength and Hollywood's domination of British boxoffice. The board also declined to strengthen its own censorship standards, saying the responsibility lies with the Americans.

The film classification board censors video releases. Since 1994, it has cut violent acts out of 369 videos and banned 14 from domestic release. The board's report echoes comments by National Heritage secretary Virginia Bottomley. Earlier last year, West End theatres agreed not to screen the controversial "Crash," inspired by Bottomley's well-publicized comments against the film's scenes of violence, most of which involve automobile accidents.

FELIX MAKING WAVES

BERLIN—Europe's answer to the Oscar lauded Danish director Lars von Trier's Scotland-set film "Breaking the Waves" as European Film of the Year and its British star Emily Watson as European Actress of the Year. The European Film Academy's ninth Felix awards ceremony in December attracted stars such as Ian McKellen (European Actor of the Year for "Richard III"), Ben Kingsley (who accepted the Lifetime Achievement Award on behalf of Alec Guiness), and Johnny Depp (awarded the first Screen International Five Continents Award for Jim Jarmusch's "Dead Man").

The academy has tried to broaden its appeal recently by expanding its membership and publicizing its awards show, including hosting the event in English—"Crying Game" producer and academy chairman Nik Powell did the honors. Felixes also went to Ireland's Terry George for "Some Mother's Son" (the Young European Film award); to Poland's Jerzy Sladkowski and Stanislaw Krzeminski (the Prix Arte for the pair's documentaries); and to "Prisoner of the Mountain" scribes Arif Alev, Sergei Bodrov and Boris Giller (the Screenwriter of the Year Award).

The academy originally was intended to be an elite group of filmmakers. However, lack of money and recognition prompted a makeover, including opening up competition to American films with the Five Continents Award. The next step: In 1997, Powell plans to privatize the Felixes. Could Rob Lowe singing show tunes be far behind?

Q&A: CROATIAN EXILE LORDAN ZAFRANOVIC

Lordan Zafranovic was born Feb. 11, 1944, on the island of Solta in Croatia and grew up in what was then Yugoslavia. In 1991, he fled Zagreb, smuggling out with him his documentary "Testament," which he was then editing. Zafranovic left behind his life's work: 13 features and 55 short films and documentaries, among them the Oscar-nominated "Occupation in 26 Images," made in 1978 and the crown jewel in an award-studded career. Currently in self-imposed exile in Prague, Zafranovic is working on his next film, "Balkan Island," based on the 1993 book by Vidosav Stevanovic. His campaign to get his films released from the Croatian state archives continues.

BOXOFFICE: Why have your films been embargoed?

LORDAN ZAFRANOVIC: Since I'm a filmmaker, I thought my job is to actually discover and reveal the truth. The people of Croatia, after 1943, went to the Partisans and Allies, but part of the Croatian people unfortunately went to help Hitler. They were his collaborators. Croatia was a satellite country [run by Croatian fascists called the Ustashe]—they made camps, where they killed Serbs, Jews and Gypsies. I want to show what people really did, so they can come clean and go on with their lives. But with this Croatian government in 1991, the Ustashe life came back to Croatia. Of course this government did not like ["Testament"] because it's actually a picture of them. Only five or six [of my films] talk about the Ustashe, but they won't let any of them out. The other films are about everyday life, about normal people. Even the amateur films from 1961 are banned, which means it's not a question of films, it's a question of name.

BOXOFFICE: What are you doing to get your films back?

ZAFRANOVIC: I wrote a few letters to [Croatian President Franjo] Mr. Tudjman, but nothing's successful so far. There were several protests. Fifty directors wrote directly to Mr. Tudjman. This year at the Karlovy Vary festival there was also a protest. Sixty or 70 people signed, including several Oscar winners. It was sent to the Helsinki Board of Human Rights in Croatia, but... nothing. It's very bad for me, because I have to show my films to producers in America, and there is nothing I can show.

BOXOFFICE: The Jadran film archive claimed your films have deteriorated too much to transport out of the country.

ZAFRANOVIC: It's pure lies. Those were new copies. They cannot say the films are banned, that's why they say this. It's the old communist system... The thing is, the people who won't release the films are ex-producers, friends, people who worked with me on these films, and they won't let these films out. Because they're scared. They're there and I'm here.

BOXOFFICE: What makes you think your films haven't been destroyed?

ZAFRANOVIC: I simply cannot believe something like that. That would be murder...

BOXOFFICE: Your situation highlights the potential power a country's national film archive has over films of significance made in that country. What has your experience taught you about the role of national film archives?

ZAFRANOVIC: The rules vary from country to country. And in a country like Croatia, there are no rules. It's not just embarrassing for Croatia, it's embarrassing for the whole of Europe. A thing like this case probably does not exist anywhere else in the world, except maybe China or Cuba. There's nothing that [protects] authors' rights. ■

CONTACT MELISSA MORRISON IN CARE OF THE PRAGUE POST AT: NA PORICI 12, 115 30 PRAGUE 1, CZECH REPUBLIC
email: tomelis@bohem-net.cz

Manufacturing in the U.S.

CINEMECCANICA U.S.

8753 Lion Street
Rancho Cucamonga, CA 91730

Tel: (909) 481-5842
Fax: (909) 481-5845

Response No. 103

THE BEST!

Since 1941, excellent presentations have been guaranteed by proper planning and engineering by Hadden. Your theatre and audience deserve us. . . and so do your investors.

HADDEN
THEATRE SUPPLY COMPANY
10201 Bunsen Way
Louisville, KY 40299
(502) 499-0050
(502) 499-0052 FAX:

Louis Bornwasser, Owner

Design-Consultation-Sales

Response No. 40

GO FEST

BOXOFFICE criss-crosses North America to cover five film fests

★★★★★ OUTSTANDING
★★★★ VERY GOOD
★★★ GOOD ★★ FAIR
★ POOR
(no stars) BOMB

MONTREAL

DIFFERENT FOR GIRLS ★★

Starring Steven Mackintosh, Rupert Graves and Saskia Reeves. Directed by Richard Spence. Written by Tony Marchant. Produced by John Chapman. A First Look release. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 97 min. Won the Grand Prix of the Americas for Best Film at the Montreal fest. Opens June 1997.

Steven Mackintosh is excellent as Kim, nee Karl, a transsexual whose orderly life is upset when she meets Paul, an old schoolmate and protector ("Intimate Relations'" Rupert Graves) whom she's always fancied. But "Different for Girls" doesn't know how to handle Mackintosh's character; its potentially fascinating story arc of Kim's path through conservative society is never properly developed.

The film is also contrived; having Paul, a charming but aimless slob, display a sexual interest in the proper, anal-to-a-fault Kim is not believable. Neither is a situation that sees Paul arrested and Kim debating whether to testify for him—and risk everyone learning of her private life. The shaky relationship between Kim and her sister ("Butterfly Kiss'" Saskia Reeves), who has problems of her own, is another non-starter. Bland and conventional, despite the sex-change angle, "Different for Girls" is not different enough.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

CRIME TIME ★1/2

Starring Stephen Baldwin, Pete Postlethwaite and Sadie Frost. Directed by George Sluizer. Written by Brendan Somers. Produced by David Pupkewitz. A Trimark release. Drama. Rated R for violence, sexuality and language. Running time: 118 min.

In a near-future England, TV recreations of crimes are all the rage. But what happens when a murderer ("Dragonheart's" Pete Postlethwaite) begins to identify with the actor ("Threesome's" Stephen Baldwin) who plays him and, worse, carries out his killings based on their chances of being dramatized on the tube?

The cinematic juxtaposition of TV and its influence on "reality" isn't fresh; it's popped up in everything from "Deathwatch" to "The Running Man" to "To Die For." But "Crime Time" adds nothing new to the lexicon of media analysis. Its premises, that anyone can kill and that the line between citizen and killer is a thin one, are offered as revelation when, in fact, "Crime Time" is just a bargain basement rehash of the truly compelling relationship between Hannibal Lecter and Clarice Starling in "The Silence of the Lambs."

It also stretches credulity right from the start, when Baldwin's actor gets a gig as the murderer of the week on a TV series called "Crime Time." Baldwin's impersonation of a talented actor isn't at all convincing on either level, as the real thing or as the character he's playing. Then there's Baldwin's thespian girlfriend ("A Pyromaniac's Love Story's" Sadie Frost), who is consistently cast as his victim in the show's scenarios; how low is its budget, anyway? Director George Sluizer, who bitterly (and rightfully) complained that Hollywood compromised the ending of his "The Vanishing" remake, has by himself made a movie nearly as ridiculous.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

THREE LIVES AND ONLY ONE DEATH ★★1/2

Starring Marcello Mastroianni and Anna Galiena. Directed by Raoul Ruiz. Written by Raoul Ruiz and Pascal Bonitzer. Produced by Paulo Branco. A New Yorker release. Comedy. French-language; English subtitles. Unrated. Running time: 123 min.

A man returns to his wife after a 20-year absence. A rich professor lives as a tramp. A businessman discovers that the family he has invented for business reasons is planning to visit. All three parts are played by the late Marcello Mastroianni with playful charm; he also portrays a butler on an estate that is unexpectedly inherited by an impoverished young couple (Marcello's daughter Chiara Mastroianni and Melvil Poupaud). Eventually, all of Marcello's characters turn out to be the same man.

Mastroianni is supported by a top cast that includes Marisa Paredes ("The Flower of My Secret") as the wife with the missing husband, and Anna Galiena ("The Hairdresser's Husband") as a sexy callgirl revealed to be a business executive. In the imaginative screenplay, characters continually acquire new identities, and the cast makes "Three Lives and Only One Death" enjoyable. But, because the characters calmly accept every outrageous event (even an ax to the head), the film fatally lacks tension and believability.—Ed Scheid

FEST REVIEWS

Ayn Rand: A Sense of Life R-33
Brassed Off R-39
Childhood's End R-32
Crime Time R-30
The Darien Gap R-31
Different for Girls R-30
Farewell My Darling R-32
Forgotten Silver R-32
Gabbeh R-33
Hamsun R-32
Hits! R-33
Holy Week R-31
Irma Vep R-33
La Rencontre R-34
Lilian's Story R-33
Love! Valour! Compassion! R-31
Not Fourteen Again R-31
The Nymph R-32
The Phantom Lover R-33
Pretty Village, Pretty Flame R-32
Riot R-34
Saint Clara R-31
A Self Made Hero R-34
Three Lives and Only One Death . R-30

FEST/DAY AND DATE

The Quiet Room R-34

REVIEWS

Adrenalin: Fear the Rush R-40
Beverly Hills Ninja R-38
Blood and Wine R-35
Dadetown R-40
Death by Design R-40
Fierce Creatures R-36
Fire on the Mountain R-36
Freeway R-40
Good Luck R-35
Jackie Chan's First Strike R-38
The Line King R-39
Mandela R-35
Meet Wally Sparks R-36
Metro R-37
Mondo R-40
Mon Homme R-35
Paris Was a Woman R-40
Prefontaine R-36
The Relic R-37
Sleepover R-40
Suite 16 R-40
Tromeo and Juliet R-39
Turbulence R-38

FLASHBACK REVIEW

The Saint Strikes Back (1939) ... R-37

SPECIAL FORMATS REVIEWS

The Great American West R-38
Survival Island R-38

FESTIVAL REVIEWS

SAINT CLARA ★1/2

Starring Lucy Dubinchek, Halil Eohev, Johnny Peterson and Maya Meron. Directed and written by Ari Fulman and Ori Sivan. Produced by Marek Rozenbaum and Yuri Sabag. A Kino release. SF. Hebrew-language; English subtitles. Unrated. Running time: 85 min.

In what could be the first Israeli post-apocalyptic film, co-creators Ari Fulman and Ori Sivan have burdened "Saint Clara," adapted from a Yelena and Pavel Kohout novel, with one too many contrived subplots, suffocating an interesting premise.

Set in 1999 yet looking very "Mad Max"-ish, this oddball teen angst treatise and magic realism wannabe presents an assortment of seventh graders attending dreary Golda Meir School. When an entire class scores perfectly on a math test, the authorities discover that a Russian immigrant girl named Clara (Lucy Dubinchek) has astonishing psychic powers that allow her to predict the correct answers.

Beyond that, the tale is cluttered with rebellion, friendship, love, nuclear disaster, parents who seem certifiably insane, and a good three dozen other elements. In terms of casting, the kids outshine the rather bizarre adult players, most of whom appear to be drugged and/or inappropriately seductive with young people.—Susan Green

THE DARIEN GAP ★★★1/2

Starring Lyn Vaus and Sandi Carroll. Directed and written by Brad Anderson. Produced by Brad Anderson and Jim Taylor. A Northern Arts release. Drama. Unrated. Running time: 90 min.

With a cinema verite feel, "The Darien Gap" profiles a restless young man (Lyn Vaus, as himself) who dreams of shooting video footage of the legendary giant sloth in Patagonia. On a deeper level, this Boston-bred independent film by London Film School grad Brad Anderson is a cautionary Generation-X tale: Children of divorce could be unable to connect with each other or develop a sense of their own futures.

Lyn tries to bond romantically with Polly (Sandi Carroll), an aspiring fashion designer, but the giant sloth calls. Lyn keeps a stash of unopened letters from the father who disappeared from his life two decades earlier. Family home movies show the happy face that once masked dysfunction. Although a bumpy ride, the film manages to be touching and occasionally quite funny, with a soundtrack of fabulous, albeit abbreviated, songs by some of Beantown's best underground bands.—Susan Green

NOT FOURTEEN AGAIN ★★1/2

Directed and written by Gillian Armstrong. Produced by Jenny Day and Gillian Armstrong. No distributor set. Documentary. Not yet rated. Running time: 108 min.

In 1976, Australian director Gillian Armstrong ("Little Women") began a series of films following the lives of three young Aussie girls. "Smokes and Lollies" profiled them at age 14, "Fourteen's Good, Eighteen's Better" arrived four years later and "Bingo, Bridesmaids and Braces" came in 1988, when the three were 26. "Not Fourteen Again" is the latest installment of the series that examines Kerry, Diana and Josie, now 34 and with children of their own, two of whom are 14-year-old girls. Fortuitously, that fact allows Armstrong to repeat to her subjects' daughters some of the same questions she'd asked before.

By duplicating much of the format of Michael Apted's fine "Up" series of documentaries, Armstrong forces comparisons. Unfortunately, she doesn't benefit by them. "Not Fourteen Again" is more diffuse than Apted's films. Though Apted deals with a dozen subjects, he does a better job of delineating them than does Armstrong, who can't seem to make her three subjects stand out from one another.

Some of "Not Fourteen Again" is substantial. Conversations with the new generation of girls is compelling because they seem less preoccupied with staying within defined gender roles. At film's end, Armstrong suggests she will return in a few years for another go-round with her women. Despite this film's flaws, that's a welcome prospect.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

HOLY WEEK ★★

Starring Beata Fundalej, Wojciech Malajkat and Magdalena Warzecha. Directed and written by Andrzej Wajda. Produced by Lew Rywin. No distributor set. Drama. Polish-language; English subtitles. Not yet rated. Running time: 100 min.

Much as "Mississippi Burning" reduced African-Americans to extras in their own history, "Holy Week"—based on a short story by Jerzy Andrzejewski—slights the Jewish battle to survive the 1943 destruction of the Warsaw Ghetto in favor of a

SUNDANCE REVIEW

LOVE! VALOUR! COMPASSION! ★★★1/2

Starring Jason Alexander, John Glover and John Benjamin Hickey. Directed by Joe Mantello. Written by Terrence McNally. Produced by Doug Chapin and Barry Krost. A Fine Line release. Drama/comedy. Rated R for graphic nudity, some sexuality and strong language. Running time: 115 min.

What initially seems to be the latest in a growing trend of gay-themed cinema, "Love! Valour! Compassion!" actually reaches mainstream appeal by showing how the human heart—regardless of race, color or sexual preference—must challenge itself in finding new ways to stay true and connected in the complicated '90s. In this adaptation of Terrence McNally's Tony-winning play, eight gay male friends rendezvous at a sprawling Victorian home on a private lake over three summer holiday weekends, where they fall in love and fall from grace, hurt and forgive, celebrate strengths and chastise weaknesses. They form an assortment of hilarious and inspiring permutations on contemporary relationships and even don tutus for a good cause.

Fine Line's "Love! Valour! Compassion," which bowed at Sundance, opens May 16 NY/LA/SF.

Jon Mantello, who directed the stage version, makes his film directing debut, and the result has the look and feel of a low-budget movie with its use of a single location—lush country grounds on a remote estate—which effectively creates intimacy without ever stifling. There's no need for more than the one setting, because the film's power comes from the actors, most of whom were in the original New York cast. Included in that ensemble is John Glover, who won a Tony for his ingenious double role as the polar opposite twins John and James Jeckyll. The only "Hollywood" addition is Jason Alexander, who delivers a superb turn as the flamboyant Buzz, "love child of Judy Garland and Liberace."

An unneeded flash-forward (with voiceover) near the end breaks the mood and flow, but the players override the flaw. The octet succeeds in conveying a touching, often funny, and at times heartbreaking story that celebrates the fragility of life, love and the human spirit.—Zorianna Kit tediously revisionist examination of Polish attitudes toward the Jews during that time.

The historical reality is that the Jewish inhabitants of the Ghetto were pretty much on their own when they decided to fight back against the Nazis, but writer/director Andrzej Wajda falsely balances the equation, with each "good" Pole being matched by a "bad" one. And his only major Jewish character, Irena (Beata Fundalej), who hides out at a Christian ex-boyfriend's house, is there only so the Poles can agonize about what to do as the Ghetto burns.

Wajda doesn't even utilize the inherently dramatic Warsaw setting; most of the film inexplicably takes place in the country. Dramatically slack and morally questionable, "Holy Week" fails to do justice to its important subject.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

PRETTY VILLAGE, PRETTY FLAME ★★★

Starring Dragan Bjelogrlic, Nikola Kojo and Velimir Bata Zivojinovic. Directed by Srdjan Dragojevic. Written by Srdjan Dragojevic, Vanja Bulic and Nikola Pejakovic. Produced by Goran Bjelogrlic and Dragan Bjelogrlic. No distributor set. Drama. Serbian-language; English subtitles. Not yet rated. Running time: 128 min.

The long-running, bloody Bosnian conflict is the backdrop for this forceful anti-war drama, which opens and closes with newsreel footage of politicians dedicating monuments to friendship among Yugoslavia's various factions. In each case, the dignitary cutting the ribbon cuts himself instead. That gives an idea of the tone of this cleverly named film, which largely is set in an abandoned tunnel in which a group of Serbs are besieged by Muslim soldiers.

But the movie opens in a hospital ward where the tunnel survivors try to keep their old hatreds alive. It also flashes backward to the pre-war relationship between a Serb named Milan (Dragan Bjelogric) and a Muslim named Halil (Nikola Pejakovic) who later become bitter enemies. With some scenes worthy of Vonnegut at his most hallucinatory, "Pretty Village, Pretty Flame" barrels its way forward, almost forcing the audience to pay attention. It's somewhat cliched and a little more pro-Serb than necessary, but it packs a genuine punch.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

CHILDHOOD'S END ★★★

Starring Cameron Foord and Heather Gottlieb. Directed and written by Jeff Lipsky. Produced by Jason Kliot and Joana Vicente. No distributor set. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 115 min.

An impressive debut from Jeff Lipsky, founder of October Films turned filmmaker, "Childhood's End" has more in common with frank, uncompromising European cinema than with its softer American model. Following a group of Minneapolis teenagers, all on the cusp of adult responsibilities and challenges, "Childhood's End" sets out to paint a dark but still optimistic portrait of contemporary American youth.

It's loosely plotted, picking up and dropping its characters in turn, but it never feels underwritten or sloppy. The film concentrates on two main strands: the relationship between Greg (Sam Trammell), a hotshot young photo editor, and Evelyn (Cameron Foord), a forthright older woman; and the budding friendship between Evelyn's cynical daughter Denise (Colleen Werthmann) and the painfully shy Rebecca (Heather Gottlieb). "Childhood's End" is a strongly presented, sexually explicit drama, strikingly well acted and often startling in its intensity. Some pretentious, overblown literary dialogue aside, it marks Lipsky as a talent to watch.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

THE NYMPH ★

Starring Stefania Sandrelli, Raoul Bova and Lucia Cara. Directed by Lina Wertmuller. Written by Ugo Pirro and Lina Wertmuller. Produced by Fulvio Lucisano. No distributor set. Drama. Italian-language; English subtitles. Not yet rated. Running time: 111 min.

A tedious variation on Bernardo Bertolucci's "Stealing Beauty," "The Nymph" is set in the less than pastoral town of Nofi, circa World War II. Miluzza (Lucia Cara) is a budding teenager, lusted after by half the men in her village, including the local priest; yet she remains oblivious. She just wants to enjoy her life, but fate and misfortune dictate otherwise.

In "Stealing Beauty," the heroine wanted to lose her virginity; in "The Nymph," it's taken from her. Otherwise, both films are vapid. The difference between them is that Wertmuller doesn't have Bertolucci's poetic eye. "The Nymph," based on a Demenico Rea novel, fails to come to life, despite the vibrant presence of Stefania Sandrelli as Miluzza's promiscuous mother. Its ostensible critique of small-town attitudes and prejudices is superficial, a pretense to meaning.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

FORGOTTEN SILVER ★★★1/2

Directed and written by Peter Jackson and Costa Botes. Produced by Sue Rogers. No distributor set. Mockumentary. Not yet rated. Running time: 52 min.

New Zealand film pioneer Colin McKenzie receives his due from two countrymen in this documentary, which unearths his "lost" 1917 silent "Salome" and shines a light on a remarkable career that saw McKenzie use both sound and color in motion pictures years before Hollywood did. The only problem is that McKenzie never existed, a "fact" that allows co-directors/co-scripters Peter Jackson ("The Frighteners") and Costa Botes to spoof the craze for discovering obscure films and restoring the reputation of neglected filmmakers.

With the usual experts dutifully trotted out to pay homage to McKenzie, including film historian Leonard Maltin and Miramax head Harvey Weinstein, "Forgotten Silver" is an uncanny, deadpan take on the typical hagiography.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

HAMSUN ★★★1/2

Starring Max Von Sydow and Ghita Norby. Directed by Jan Troell. Written by Per Olov Enquist. Produced by Erik Crone. No distributor set. Drama. Norwegian- and German-language; English subtitles. Not yet rated. Running time: 160 min.

The story of Norwegian writer Knut Hamsun—a 1920 Nobel Prize winner who betrayed his country by siding with the Nazis after they occupied Norway—has been powerfully and vividly brought to the screen by Swedish director Jan Troell ("The Emigrants"). Based on a book by Thorkild Hansen, "Hamsun" spans the last 17 years in the author's life, beginning in 1935 and encompassing his perpetually rocky marriage, his estrangement from his children, his lack of self-worth after years of writer's block, and his attempt to rewin his countrymen's good graces after WWII.

Hamsun's is not an easily understood persona, and Max Von Sydow's fluid performance never allows an easy reaction toward him. His Hamsun is compelling—an elderly cold soul whose stubborn integrity prompts admiration even as his myopia provokes horror. Troell's intimate epic suggests that Hamsun's anti-British fervor and nationalistic wish to see Norway prominent in the new Europe blinded him to German anti-Semitism and the occupation's viciousness. That might be a questionable interpretation, but in the film it's convincing. As Hamsun's bitter, even more pro-German wife, Ghita Norby gives a shaded performance. Richly atmospheric, "Hamsun" sags in the middle and short-shrifts the writer's relations with his children, but mostly it does justice to an unusual man and his turbulent life.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

FAREWELL MY DARLING ★★

Starring Sung Choi, Jung Sook Moon and Sung Duk Kwon. Directed and written by Chul-Soo Park. Produced by Youngman Kim. No distributor set. Drama. Korean-language; English subtitles. Not yet rated. Running time: 116 min. Won a Special Grand Prix of the Jury at Montreal.

When the patriarch of a large, extended Korean clan dies suddenly in a bicycle accident, his kin from far and near arrive for a few days of mourning, burial preparation and the funeral. It's a drawn-out process that exposes rifts and resentments among various family members.

If that plot sounds a lot like Juzo Itami's skillful and delicate 1984 black comedy "The Funeral," it's because "Farewell My Darling" is virtually the same story, complete with the obligatory relative who wants to make sure proper custom is followed. The problem with "Farewell My Darling" is that it coarsens what was wonderful about Itami's film. Its characterizations are one-dimensional—audiences never learn anything about the relatives during the two hours of screen time—and Park's direction is crass. He moves the camera crazily but to little end; the sensitivity and tact needed remain absent.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

FESTIVAL REVIEWS

PITTSBURGH

THE PHANTOM LOVER ★★★1/2

Starring Leslie Cheung, Wu Chien-lien, Huang Lei and Liu Lin. Directed by Ronny Yu. Written by Roy Szeto, Raymond Wong and Ronny Yu. Produced by Michael Ng, Raymond Wong and Leslie Cheung. No distributor set. Drama. Mandarin-language; English subtitles. Not yet rated. Running time: 100 min. Screened at Pittsburgh's 3 Rivers fest.

In 1930s China, a theatrical troupe arrives to perform in a dilapidated theatre that had burned down 10 years before. Director/co-writer Ronny Yu, shooting these scenes in black-and-white, emphasizes the decay of the theatre and the shadows of the mysterious backstage area. Flashbacks shot in color tell the fire's cause. The ornate structure was built by Song Deeping ("Farewell My Concubine's" Leslie Cheung), a popular star who sings as a musical Romeo to enraptured females and angry older men. His offstage love ("Eat Drink Man Woman's" Wu Chien-lien) has been promised to a corrupt politician's son. In revenge for her rejection of the arranged suitor, the theatre is torched. Song is presumed dead; his lover goes mad. In reality, Song's face was disfigured by the flames, and he has hidden in the ruins.

The theatrical troupe's opening performance, which satirizes communist propaganda, is a disaster. In desperation, the lead decides their next performance will be Song's musical version of "Romeo and Juliet." There are other parallels: The rejected suitor is now a cultural official who's attracted to the new star's girlfriend.

The flashback's bright colors (especially the reds) accentuate the passion of the romance from the past. Lush images and opulent stage design make an appropriate setting for the intense emotions of Song's love story. Cheung is charismatic as the onstage Romeo, the offstage lover and the disfigured phantom, who proves far more benign than the one haunting Paris' Opera. Wu and the other actors create vivid portraits without exaggerating their characters' emotions. Director Yu has made a film that's both enjoyable and absorbing as the love stories of past and present intersect.—Ed Scheid

HITS! ★★★

Starring Jeff Monahan, James Marshall, Martin Sheen and Alanna Ubach. Directed by William R. Greenblatt. Written by Jeff Monahan. Produced by William R. Greenblatt and Martha D. Humphreys. No distributor set. Comedy. Not yet rated. Running time: 83 min. Screened at Pittsburgh's 3 Rivers fest.

Dommy ("Twin Peaks'" James Marshall) and Mickey (Jeff Monahan, who also scripts) are assigned by a crime boss (Martin Sheen, in an interesting change-of-pace role) to follow a man and retrieve a briefcase he's stolen. Mickey has been recruited only becuase his brother, who had worked for the mob, is unavailable. Mickey is disheveled, with uncombed long hair; partner Dommy is slick and tries to act cool, but he's actually as inexperienced as Mickey.

Marshall and Monahan have a good chemistry as their characters unexpectedly bond because of the time the duo is forced to spend together. But the main strength of "Hits!" is Monahan's talent for writing quirky and amusing dialogue that cleverly defines Mickey and Dommy. Their comic banter holds the film together and, combined with the appealing performances of the leads, makes the two mismatched characters a likable pair.—Ed Scheid

TELLURIDE

IRMA VEP ★★1/2

Starring Maggie Cheung and Jean-Pierre Leaud. Directed and written by Olivier Assayas. Produced by Georges Benayoun. A Zeitgeist release. Comedy. French-language; English subtitles. Unrated. Running time: 98 min. Opens in April.

A has-been French director (played by Jean-Pierre Leaud) hires Hong Kong action star Maggie Cheung (playing herself) to star as a jewel thief in a remake of a silent classic serial, "Les Vampires," which he plans to shoot as a silent also. The director is ridiculed by the crew as he loses control. Meanwhile, Cheung is having her own problems: She doesn't speak the crew's French, and she must deal with the advances of a lesbian costume designer (Nathalie Richard).

"Irma Vep" is much lighter than the emotional studies that were writer/director Olivier Assayas' previous works. The most interesting element of this film is an initial culture clash between the Asian actress and French intellectuals. Assayas' screenplay makes clever satirical observations on the French film industry, but the characters and situations are superficially developed, particularly when Cheung attempts to get into character by trying to steal jewels from a woman's hotel room. Overall, this look behind the scenes at French filmmaking suffers in comparison with a classic like Truffaut's "Day for Night" (which also starred Leaud).—Ed Scheid

GABBEH ★★★

Starring Shaghayegh Djodat and Hossein Moharami. Directed and written by Mohsen Makhmalbaf. Produced by Khalil Daroudtchi and Khalil Mahmoudl. A New Yorker release. Drama. Iranian-language; English subtitles. Not yet rated. Running time: 75 min. Opens in May.

Among the nomadic peoples of Iran, a gabbeh is a handwoven carpet with patterns inspired by tribal life. As this film opens, an old woman is washing her gabbeh in a river; a young woman named Gabbeh (Shaghayegh Djodat), dressed in the deep blue of the carpet, appears and talks about her life, which is told in the fabric's patterns: Her father forbids her to marry the man she loves; as she travels with the tribe, her lover follows at a distance on horseback.

"Gabbeh" combines a fable with a documentary-like look at nomadic life. Unlike the black robes depicted in Iranian films set in urban areas, the tribespeople here wear bright costumes. The film is likewise full of vividly colorful images of the world the nomads encounter. "Life is color," says one character; a man's hand changes colors as he points to the sky and flowers. Director/writer/editor Mohsen Makhmalbaf weaves together different threads into an unusual and intriguing film.—Ed Scheid

LILIAN'S STORY ★★★★

Starring Ruth Cracknell and Toni Collette. Directed by Jerzy Domaradzki. Written by Steve Wright. Produced by Marian Macgowan. No distributor set. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 96 min.

"Lilian's Story," with a script based on a novel by Kate Grenville that itself was inspired by actual events, is about the tenacity to survive. Lilian (Ruth Cracknell) is released after spending 40 years in a mental institution. Adapting to her new surroundings is difficult; her great joy is in speaking Shakespeare's verse, so she recites the Bard on the street to support the family she forms with other outcasts. Lilian gradually remembers the incidents with her stern father ("Strictly Ballroom's" Barry Otto) that led to her incarceration.

Cracknell is outstanding, showing a wide range of emotions as Lilian expresses herself through her "Sir William." In flashbacks, the young Lilian ("Muriel's Weddings'" Toni Collette) has a youthful optimism that is eventually destroyed. Jerzy Domaradzki, a Polish director working in Australia, brings a sense of discovery to this absorbing film as Lilian finds herself in a world very different from what she remembered. As in Kieslowski's "Blue" and "The Double Life of Veronique," the cinematography of Slawomir Idziak focuses on subtle feelings found in the expressions of a woman's face.—Ed Scheid

AYN RAND: A SENSE OF LIFE ★★★1/2

Narrated by Sharon Gless. Directed, written and produced by Michael Paxton. An A.G. Media production; no distributor set. Documentary. Not yet rated. Running time: 121 min.

"Ayn Rand: A Sense of Life" provides viewers with an enriching historical perspective of the life and times of Ayn Rand, the best-selling author of "The Fountainhead" and "Atlas Shrugged." In this vivid film, writer/director/producer Michael Paxton has studiously assembled a montage of Rand's life, loves and work via stock footage, rare photos, taped interviews, film clips, and even rare footage of her testimony before the House Un-American Activities Committee. Despite the fact that Paxton never met the author, his film breathes life into the woman, commonly regarded as one of the most controversial and provocative writers of this century.

FESTIVAL REVIEWS

"Ayn Rand" is a joyous movie, although its subject matter at times is dark. Through the use of music, live and still shots with Rand and interviews with some of her closest friends, Paxton successfully brings to life a complex woman whose philosophy of objectivism (an atheistic worldview in which human beings are responsible for their own happiness and fate) was both her greatest asset and worst curse.

In Rand's novels, it is the human spirit that is always fighting to prevail against a backdrop of repression. Likewise, in Rand's life, that theme often repeats itself, as Paxton portrays Rand's undying strength of character as the film's dominant theme. In so doing, Paxton makes "Ayn Rand: A Sense of Life" a testament to the woman. In explaining the person behind the great novels, the film conveys her sense of life and establishes Rand as one of the greatest visionaries of her time.—Pat Kramer

LA RENCONTRE ★★

Directed/written by Alain Cavalier. Produced by Francoise Widhoff. Artistic License release. Drama. French-language; English subtitles. Unrated. Running time: 75 min.

Part of Telluride's tribute to Alain Cavalier, this film displayed the unusual progression of the writer/director's cinematic career. He began with films that starred luminaries like Catherine Deneuve (he called his collaboration with her "my last makeup job") but his approach evolved into the minimalist style of "Therese."

Shooting in Hi-8 video ("La Rencontre" was filmed while being projected on a video monitor), Cavalier uses objects and conversations to tell the story of a relationship. Eventually, the objects acquire emotional connections, as when a dead father's last pair of shoes is described. The photography, also by Cavalier, is impeccable. But "La Rencontre" would have made a better short film; at the current 75 minutes, the accumulation of minute detail becomes monotonous, and the dialogue is unable to make the unseen speakers interesting.—Ed Scheid

A SELF MADE HERO ★★★★

Starring Mathieu Kassovitz, Anouk Grinberg, Sandrine Kiberlain and Jean-Louis Trintignant. Directed by Jacques Audlard. Written by Alain Le Henry and Jacques Audlard. Produced by Patrick Godeau. No distributor set. Comedy/drama. French-language; English subtitles. Not yet rated. Running time: 105 min.

"The best lives are invented" is a significant quote from this very inventive film about deception and avoiding the truth of the past. "A Self Made Hero" ("Un Heros Tres Discret"), directed and co-written by Jacques Audlard, won the best screenplay award at Cannes in an earlier screening last year; based on a novel by Jean-Francois Denlau, the script takes clever turns and captures many amusing details.

Albert, a boy in a French town post-Great War, has his first exposure to lies when he discovers his dead father, whom his mother reveres as a battle hero, was a drunk who died in a bar. Albert learns to hide what is true. Grown, Albert ("La Haine's" Mathieu Kassovitz) pretends to have been a Resistance agent, even romancing a seductive Resistance fighter (Anouk Grinberg).

Audlard ingeniously adds a documentary-like structure by having a current-day Albert ("Red's" Jean-Louis Trintignant) along with contemporaries and scholars periodically comment on his past. Kassovitz, who received a Cannes best director nod for "La Haine," is always likable as the supposed hero who gains confidence as his fabrications are believed, and the supporting cast is excellent.—Ed Scheid

RIOT ★★★1/2

Starring Dante Basco, Luke Perry and Mario Van Peebles. Directed by Galen Yuen, Alex Munoz, Richard DiLello and David C. Johnson. Written by Galen Yuen, Joe Vasquez, Richard DiLello and David C. Johnson. Executive produced by Harry Winer, Judith A. Polone and Fred Fuchs. A Showtime production; no distributor set. Dramatic vignettes. Not yet rated. Running time: 96 min.

"Riot," for which the Showtime network hopes to find a domestic distributor before airing it on pay TV, shows the 1992 Los Angeles civil disturbances from ethnic perspectives. Each of four vignettes is engrossing; each filmmaker is of the same ethnic group as his characters, lending the film an authenticity as it portrays the viewpoint of different communities. But what makes "Riot" especially powerful is that the stories intersect to emphasize the end result of these racial divisions: Euphoric Hispanics loot a Chinese family's store; a policeman tries to stop the thieving as a black mother's son tries to flee his area. Throughout, the fine ensemble shows the emotional consequences of the destruction.—Ed Scheid

FT. LAUDERDALE: DAY & DATE: 3/21

THE QUIET ROOM ★★★

Starring Chloe Ferguson, Celine O'Leary, Paul Blackwell and Phoebe Ferguson. Directed and written by Ralf de Heer. Produced by Ralf de Heer and Giuseppe Pedersoli. A Fine Line release. Drama. Rated PG for language and thematic elements involving a child affected by domestic discord. Running time: 98 min. Screened at the Fort Lauderdale fest.

A child's-eye-view of a family coming unglued, "The Quiet Room" is an absorbing tale with a few imperfections, chiefly that Dutch-born Australian director Ralf de Heer falls short in his attempt to effectively provide the perspective of a young girl who stops speaking because her parents cannot stop their fighting.

Fine Line's "The Quiet Room," which screened at Ft. Lauderdale, bows 3/21 NY and expands 4/18.

An unnamed, moon-faced seven-year-old (Chloe Ferguson) recalls how much better things were when she was just three (a toddler played by real-life sibling Phoebe Ferguson). "Me when I was then," as she puts it in ongoing voiceover, lived with Mother (Celine O'Leary) and Father (Paul Blackwell) in a happy home seen through flashbacks.

Now, as the couple bickers in increasingly angry cycles, their silent daughter enacts clever subterfuges calculated to pull them back together. Failing that, she retreats to her bedroom to draw pointedly symbolic pictures that the adults are too distracted to understand. All she wants is to move to the country, get a puppy and make the dysfunction go away.

A sad portrait of people in pain, the film has several crucial elements that don't work well. The child is too wise and world-weary to be fully believable, and her folks are far too generic. When things are proceeding smoothly, they're giddy; when matters are going poorly, the dimensions of their anguish seem quite predictable.

On the plus side, de Heer and cinematographer Tony Clark offer some memorably visual moments when the child stages an all-Barbie wedding party, when she attempts to hatch an unfertilized egg under a desk lamp, and when she rather gruesomely mimics Mother while the older woman is applying her makeup.

As divorce looms, the distraught girl ups the ante. Thankfully, "The Quiet Room" ends on a hopeful, though not necessarily feel-good, note.—Susan Green

BOXOFFICE REVIEWS

March 1997

★★★★★ OUTSTANDING
★★★★ VERY GOOD
★★★ GOOD ★★ FAIR
★ POOR
(no stars) BOMB

GOOD LUCK ★★1/2

Starring Gregory Hines, Vincent D'Onofrio and Max Gail. Directed by Richard LaBrie. Written by Bob Comfort. Produced by Richard Hahn, Shirley Hahn and Andrej Kamarowski. An East West release. Comedy. Rated R for some sex-related language (rating being appealed to CARA board). Running time: 98 min. Opens 3/7 eight markets, 4/4 natl.

If good intentions could be broadcast directly onto the screen, "Good Luck" would win an Oscar. It's easy to admire much about this small-scale, character-driven production. The first release from East West Partners Films, the new home of former October Films head Jeff Lipsky, tells the story of a paraplegic (Gregory Hines) who wants adventure and a chance to change society's image of the disabled. He enlists the help of a bitter, suicidal ex-pro football star ("The Whole Wide World's" Vincent D'Onofrio) who lost his sight during a game in a freak accident. After convincing him that with trust their disabilities cancel out, the pair set out on a standard movie-style roadtrip through the Pacific Northwest. The aim: competing in a whitewater raft race.

Hines and D'Onofrio do excellent work, making their characters' disabilities believable, and several sequences achieve "Good Luck's" entertaining goal. Unfortunately, director Richard LaBrie is unable to ride out some rough passages in the script by Bob Comfort ("Dogfight"), so "Good Luck" is swamped before its boys reach the river.

Sometimes the filmmakers draw the audience in completely, yet other times not a single onscreen line or action rings true. Guy-talk banter that's keen and funny in one scene is awkward and obvious in the next. Eventually, this rollercoaster ride between finely observed detail and dreadful cliche, between thought-provoking insights and feel-good-movie lies, makes moviegoers pray for just enough good luck for the movie to be over.—Alex Albanese

MON HOMME ★★★

Starring Anouk Grinberg and Gerard Lanvin. Directed and written by Bertrand Blier. Produced by Les Films Alain Sarde-Plateau a Studio Images 2. An Artificial Eye release. Drama. French-language; English subtitles. Unrated. Running time: 98 min. Opens 3/7 NY, April natl.

In this 1995 French-language film, a prostitute named Marie (Anouk Grinberg) is so uniquely good at her work she's hardly interested in the money; she breathes men's sexual pleasure. If she has a need, it's to find "my man"—the man she can love above all others, and who will love her even as she loves all others. She finds him, she thinks, in a filthy homeless man named Jeannot (Gerard Lanvin); when, after she takes him in for a meal and then her bed, and he proves himself the equal of her in amours, she names him her pimp, to whom she will devote her life.

To this point, "Mon Homme" carries a sexual electricity. As Jeannot tries to accustom himself to being a man of wealth and leisure, the film grows comic. When Jeannot begins straying and is finally found out—thanks to Jeannot's arrest by gendarmes—by a crushed Marie, "Mon Homme" switches to drama. In the film's last swerve, ahead to Jeannot's release from prison, it becomes a morality fable. Art-house audiences able to stroll "Mon Homme's" weaving road will leave the theatre feeling satisfied, but not as consummately as if the film's first focus, Marie, had been their companion to the climax.—Kim Williamson

MANDELA ★1/2

Directed by Jo Menell and Angus Gibson. Produced by Jonathan Demme, Edward Saxon and Jo Menell. An Island release. Documentary. Unrated. Run time: 119 min.

Making a brilliant documentary often brings out the worst in filmmakers. They must push their subjects past the boiling point to challenge the preconceived notions of their subject, or go soft and lay in danger of generating either mediocre product or, as with "Mandela," creating propaganda.

This surface exploration of the turbulent life of South African President Nelson Mandela uses old news footage and current-day interviews to piece together Mandela's past, from his days as a lawyer and cofounder of the ANC Youth League to his rise to power, 27-year imprisonment, and 1994 election as president.

It's what's missing from "Mandela" that's the problem. The filmmakers avoid political discussions of any kind, refusing to question anything. There are no opposing viewpoints here, and none of Mandela's enemies are interviewed. There's not even a historian to put it all into objective perspective. Even as the filmmakers glorify Mandela to God-like status, they pretend not to. They show him, for example, in the bathroom shaving, as if proximity equals intimacy. This scene is meant to portray Mandela as an average man, but it actually reveals nothing of his true character—just like the movie.—Lea Russo

BLOOD & WINE ★★★

Starring Jack Nicholson, Stephen Dorff, Jennifer Lopez, Michael Caine and Judy Davis. Directed by Bob Rafelson. Written by Nick Villiers and Alison Cross. Produced by Jeremy Thomas. A Fox Searchlight release. Thriller. Rated R for violence and language. Running time: 100 min.

Based on a story by co-scripter Nick Villiers and director Bob Rafelson, "Blood & Wine" weaves together temptation, a stressed marriage, paranoia and murder; at its core is a failing wine merchant (Jack Nicholson) looking to make a big score. To make his dream a reality, he enlists the help of his sexy Latin mistress ("Selena's" Jennifer Lopez) and his safe-cracking partner-in-crime, Victor (Michael Caine). The bounty's worth: $1 million. Meanwhile, Alex tries to deal with his hanging-by-a-thread relationship with his stepson ("Reckless'" Stephen Dorff) and must get his wife (Judy Davis) to accept that their marriage has lost its spark.

In this fifth collaboration between Rafelson and Le Jack, the director benefits from a powerhouse duo in Nicholson and Caine. It's like watching two cats fight for the same mouse, because both characters are corrupted to the bone. In a few spots, the plot lags, leaving the caliber of onscreen talent to plug the dike; also helping keep audience interest is that the characters' lives undergo drastic changes after the story's setpiece, a jewelry heist. The screenplay by Villiers and Alison Cross ignores the norm in favor of a product that will surprise, shock and please. "Blood & Wine" is a thriller with a satisfactory amount of action that culminates with a violent reconciliation.—Dwayne E. Leslie

REVIEWS

MEET WALLY SPARKS ★1/2

Starring Rodney Dangerfield, Burt Reynolds and David Ogden Stiers. Directed by Peter Baldwin. Written by Rodney Dangerfield and Harry Basil. Produced by Leslie Greif. A Trimark release. Comedy. Rated R for continuous crude sexual humor and some nudity. Running time: 107 min.

This film is so raunchy that a five-minute scene is built around one extended (ahem) penis joke. "Meet Wally Sparks" also gives new meaning to the word "cheap" when there are no less than three scenes where the comedic climax is that someone is fallen on by a fat person.

The old court jester of comedy himself, Rodney Dangerfield, does his usual brand of schtick as shock-talk show host Wally Sparks. With advertisers outraged, Sparks must clean up his act, so he crashes a grand party at the Georgia governor's mansion in an effort to get an exclusive interview with the stuck-up but politically correct official ("Mighty Aphrodite's" David Ogden Stiers). After a freak accident involving a drunken horse, Sparks winds up staying at the mansion. Of course, chaos ensues.

Stiers adds a touch of class to an eclectic band of players, with kudos going to Debi Mazur ("Trees Lounge"), Burt Reynolds, and a wayward squirrel. The script is such a mixed bag of cheap shots, sincerely funny bits and elaborate set-ups for ludicrous payoffs that the film never maintains forward momentum. The amazing thing is that Dangerfield, at 75, is more than occasionally funny; his patter might be familiar, but he performs it with dogged determination. Unfortunately, the jokes that hit are punctuated by ones so awkward and awful as to be the ultimate undoing of the entire film. As Dangerfield himself says near the end, "It's lonely at the top, when there's no one on the bottom." Indeed.—Susan Lambert

FIRE ON THE MOUNTAIN ★★★★

Directed and produced by Beth Gage and George Gage. Written by Beth Gage. A First Run release. Documentary. Unrated. Running time: 72 min.

This fascinating account of the formation of the only American infantry division ever trained for mountain and winter warfare combines rousing adventure, heartfelt emotion and extraordinary archival footage. Activated in 1941, the 10th Mountain Division was the brainchild of National Ski Patrol founder Charles "Minnie" Dole, who believed the United States would soon enter the war then raging in Europe and need troops trained in cold-weather activities—skiing, rock climbing and avalanche safety.

Thanks to a camera-handy division member, plentiful footage exists of the unit's training and of its February 1945 assault on Italy's Riva Ridge. Single file, the troops of the 10th scaled the ridge—2,300 feet of almost vertical shale covered with two feet of snow—to take the surprised foe prisoner.

A dozen surviving unit members reminisce about their experiences. Wisely, director/producers Beth and George Gage also explore the impact the men have had on America's outdoor life since World War II; one founded Vail, another introduced jogging to America, a third became the first executive director of the Sierra Club, and a fourth designed running shoes—and named his company Nike.—Jean Oppenheimer

PREFONTAINE ★★1/2

Starring Jared Leto, R. Lee Ermey, Ed O'Neill, Amy Locane and Lindsay Crouse. Directed by Steve James. Written by Steve James and Eugene Corr. Produced by Irby Smith, Jon Lutz, Mark Doonan and Peter Gilbert. A Buena Vista release. Drama. Rated PG-13 for brief strong language. Running time: 106 min.

With two-thirds of the "Hoop Dreams" team behind it—co-writer/director Steve James and co-producer/cinematographer Peter Gilbert—"Prefontaine" comes off a bit like two-thirds of "Hoop Dreams," both in length and execution, proving its makers somewhat less capable at recreating real-life sports drama than at capturing it.

A rough-and-tumble account of the life of mercurial long-distance runner Steve Prefontaine (Jared Leto), whose obsessive and winning ways captivated America until his untimely automobile death in 1975, this Hollywood Pictures effort is a cinematic curiosity, blending conventional narrative filmmaking with faux documentary interviews and actual archival footage of the real "Pre" in action. The net effect of this ambitious approach is uneven, producing rousing race sequences on the one hand, while needlessly fragmenting what could have been a cohesive narrative on the other.

Fortunately, the events of Prefontaine's life—the 1972 Munich Olympics in particular—are sufficiently compelling on their own; not only do these scenes overcome the film's dramatic inadequacies, at times they even recall portions of "Rocky" and "Chariots of Fire." In the lead, Leto is able to seize on these moments to convincingly capture Prefontaine's egotistical, enigmatic, obsessive, charismatic personality even when the script fails to do so.—Wade Major

FIERCE CREATURES ★★★

Starring John Cleese, Jamie Lee Curtis, Kevin Kline and Michael Palin. Directed by Robert Young and Fred Schepisi. Written by John Cleese and Iain Johnstone. Produced by Michael Shamberg and John Cleese. A Universal release. Comedy. Rated PG-13 for sexual innuendo and language. Running time: 93 min.

Funny, if not quite as perfectly formed funny as the starring cast's previous collaboration, "A Fish Called Wanda," "Fierce Creatures" is laugh, giggle and chuckle provoking. The film contains all that should be hoped for in a farce: men caught with their pants down; good-looking, smart women; and enough pointed satire about issues that matter to give true bite to the jokes.

PREVIOUSLY REVIEWED FEB./MARCH RELEASES

In light of our continuing commitment to bring you reviews as early as possible, we now provide a reader guide to upcoming releases we've already critiqued. The alphabetical list below notes the issue of BOXOFFICE in which the review appeared, gives its star rating, and provides updated distributor and release date information.

"Champange Safari" ★★★: First Run, 2/21; see March 1996.
"Citizen Ruth" ★★★★: Miramax, 2/21 exp; see Nov. 1996.
"Crash" ★★: Fine Line, 3/21; see July 1996.
"Daytrippers" ★★★1/2: CFP, 2/21 NY, 3/7 exp; see Aug. 1996.
"Drunks" ★1/2: Northern Arts, 3/14 NY; see Dec. 1996.
"The Eighth Day" ★★1/2: Gramercy, 2/21 NY/LA; see July 1996.
"Female Perversions" ★★: October, 3/28; see Nov. 1996.
"Flipping" ★★: Dove, undated Feb.; see Nov. 1996.
"Hard 8" ★★★★: Goldwyn, 2/28 ltd; see Aug. 1996.
"Hotel de Love" ★★★★: Live, 2/14 excl; see Nov. 1996.
"Jerusalem" ★★: First Look, 2/14; see Feb. 1997.
"Kama Sutra" ★★: Trimark, 2/28 NY/LA, 3/7 exp; see Jan. 1997.
"Lost Highway" ★★★★: October, 2/21 ltd, 2/28 exp; see Feb. 1997.
"Love and Other Catastrophes" ★★★: Fox Searchlight, 3/28; Aug. 1996.
"Margaret's Museum" ★★: CFP, 2/21 NY/LA/Chi; see Nov. 1995.
"Marvin's Room" ★★★: Miramax, 2/21 exp; see Feb. 1997.
"Prisoner of the Mountains" ★★★★: Orion Classics, 2/7 exp; Feb. 1997.
"The Sadness of Sex" ★★: Tara, 2/14 L.A., March natl; Feb. 1997.
"Salut Cousin!" ★★★1/2: Seventh Art, Feb. undated; see Dec. 1996.
"Scream of Stone" ★: Roxie, Feb. undated; see Aug. 1996.
"Screwed" ★★★: Cinema Village, Feb. exp; see Feb. 1997.
"Sling Blade" ★★★1/2: Miramax, 2/21 exp; see Nov. 1996.
"The Substance of Fire" ★★: Miramax, 2/7 exp; see Nov. 1996.
"SubUrbia" ★★: Sony Classics, 2/7 NY; see Jan. 1997.
"Unhook the Stars" ★★★: Miramax, 2/14 exp; see Dec. 1996.
"The Van" ★★: Fox Searchlight, 3/14; see Aug. 1996.
"When We Were Kings" ★★★1/2: Gramercy, 2/14 ltd; see Feb. 1997.
"Without Air" ★★1/2: Phaedra, Mar. undated; see Aug. 1996.

REVIEWS

The struggles of a little zoo to stay true to its animals in the face of a takeover works as an apt example of corporate downsizing and its ugly consequences. The stars all fit naturally into their roles, especially Kevin Kline doing double duty as a vulgar Australian tycoon and his inane son. John Cleese, as a rigid chap who is essentially a good egg, and Michael Palin, as a verbally dexterous know-it-all, do variations on the types that made them famous; Jamie Lee Curtis, as a glamorous executive whose ambitions wilt amid the mammals, manages to be foil, decoration, catalyst and emotional core with consummate ease.

The real animals are appealing and merited more screen time, though it's a shame animatronics were needed here and there. A crucial, emotion-altering scene with Curtis and a gorilla is undercut by this technology, despite the best efforts of both actress and "animal." This use of special effects in the movie, though probably unavoidable, also undercuts a good joke in the Cleese/Iain Johnstone script about their use in the restructuring of the zoo into a theme park.

The script is more a collection of slap-happy scenes than a seamless whole, and the work of two directors probably didn't help in this area. (Fred Schepisi came in after some negative preview testing to reshoot sequences for which Robert Young wasn't available.) But, despite the various bumps, jerks and missteps in the whole, the point really is that Cleese in bed with one unusual animal is always worth a laugh, and this time he's on the wrong side of the blanket with five.—Bridget Byrne

FLASHBACK: MARCH 10, 1939
What BOXOFFICE said about...

THE SAINT STRIKES BACK

[Though Louis Hayward originated the role, it was George Sanders who for a generation of moviegoers was Simon Templar. This month, Paramount releases a new film version of the story of the man known as The Saint (see our Phillip Noyce profile, p. 28). Now, it's a former Batman, Val Kilmer, who's taking the lead.]

Second in the series of mystery/detective thrillers, this maintains the standard of excellence set by the initialer and emerges as a well-knit chapter in the adventures of Leslie Charteris' popular modern Robin Hood, Simon Templar—otherwise known as The Saint. Its business-like construction should please average audiences and delight the adventure fans. Despite a major change in casting, which finds George Sanders taking over the characterization first essayed by Louis Hayward, the feature suffers not a whit, as Sanders' build, personality and mannerisms fill to perfection the popular conception of the devil-may-care desperado. This time, The Saint appears in San Francisco to aid Wendy Barrie in clearing her name and wiping out a band of thieves who had framed her father, the police commissioner. John Farrow directs; Jonathan Hale, Jerome Cowan, Neil Hamilton, Barry Fitzgerald and Gilbert Emery co-star.

EXPLOITIPS

Charteris' "Saint" novels are widely read by detective-story addicts. Tie in with bookstores and rental libraries on displays of them studded with stills from the picture. Give the marquee credits to Sanders and Barrie. Prepare a lobby display in which The Saint is the centerpiece surrounded by other fictional rascals—Bulldog Drummond, Raffles and the like. Prepare throwsheets as mimeographed "warnings" from The Saint to appear at your theatre on the date the picture opens.

CATCHLINES

Fiction's Famous Phantom...Who Laughed At The Law...But Did No Man An Injustice...Returns In The Thrill Special Of The Year.

The Saint...The Modern Robin Hood...Who Preys On Those Who Have More Than Their Just Share...And Gives To Others Who Have Less.

THE RELIC ★★1/2

Starring Penelope Ann Miller, Tom Sizemore and Linda Hunt. Directed by Peter Hyams. Written by Amy Holden Jones and John Raffo and Rick Jaffa & Amanda Silver. Produced by Gale Anne Hurd and Sam Mercer. A Paramount release. SF/thriller. Rated R for monster violence and gore, and for language. Running time: 109 min.

Despite some cliched dialogue, sloppy editing, unanswered questions and unfulfilled potential, "The Relic" is still a pretty good thriller, as it keeps tension and body counts coming. Penelope Ann Miller ("The Shadow") plays a sassy evolutionary biologist in a museum that's the scene of a grisly murder; Tom Sizemore ("Strange Days") is a sardonic, no-bull police lieutenant investigating the crime. Together, they discover that a shipment of artifacts from Brazil has brought a mythical monster into their midst. Interesting genetic postulations are put forth but not sufficiently developed.

Nevertheless, the film is successful in keeping the audience jumping. Within the creepy confines of a museum after hours, darkly lit mummies, dinosaurs and mannequins maintain a spooky mood, and the cheap but effective scare tactic of blaring loud chords of music at tense moments keeps anxiety high. The film's monster is well-rendered but nothing new; basically, it's the same assemblage of saliva-dripping jaws, reptilian tendrils and scaly flesh.

After nearly two hours of playing blood-sucking-beast-and-mouse, the ending is somewhat unsatisfying; a more dramatic climax involving a previously introduced carnivorous breed of insect was obvious but unused. But not-too-demanding fans of creature features should still be able to sink their teeth into the film.—Christine James

METRO ★★★

Starring Eddie Murphy, Michael Rapaport and Michael Wincott. Directed by Thomas Carter. Written by Randy Feldman. Produced by Roger Birnbaum. A Buena Vista release. Action. Rated R for strong violence and language. Running time: 117 min.

Managing to avoid Axel Foley redux despite starring once again as a smartass cop, Eddie Murphy is winsome in this formulaic but effective actioner. Inverting the wisecracking-to-serious ratios helps Murphy distinguish "Metro's" Scott Roper from "Beverly Hills Cop's" Foley, as did the actor's abstinence from slipping in his notorious chortle (except once). Roper is an expert hostage negotiator who's paired (to his predictable disgruntlement) with SWAT team sharpshooter Kevin McCall ("Beautiful Girls'" Michael Rapaport). Soon, however, Roper takes the worthy rookie under his wing and teaches him the tricks of the trade.

While sharing a laugh with the audience by poking fun at some thriller cliches, "Metro" is guilty of indulging in many as well. Particularly unabashed is a scene in which Korda endangers Roper's girlfriend (Carmen Ejogo) much in the same way that moustache-twirlers of yore once did after they tied women to logs and threatened them with buzzsaws. And the title is a little confusing; one would expect most of the action to take place in a subway, but "Metro" must instead refer to the gritty city in which it's set, though the atmosphere of the urban center is never really touched upon. Nevertheless, "Metro" does a good job in balancing harrowing action with comic relief, and the film's stars all give engaging performances.—Christine James

BEVERLY HILLS NINJA ★★

Starring Chris Farley, Nicolette Sheridan, Nathaniel Parker, Chris Rock and Robin Shou. Directed by Dennis Dugan. Written by Mark Feldberg & Mitch Klebanoff. A TriStar release. Comedy. Rated PG-13 for sex-related humor, martial arts violence and a humorous drug-related scene. Running time: 85 min.

Chris Farley is no Peter Sellers and, though he shares the late John Belushi's ability to make flab funny, Farley lacks that actor's repertoire of facial expressions. All Farley can muster is a goofy sweetness but, for many viewers, that may be enough.

"Beverly Hills Ninja" follows Farley from bumbling ninja to bumbling hero. That's not much of a character arc, and the plot is pure formula, with Farley pursuing beautiful Nicolette Sheridan and her evil boyfriend (Nathaniel Parker) from Japan to Beverly Hills. The actor falls down a lot and runs into things, which children will no doubt love. But adults might get a bit antsy waiting for the film's subtle high points, as when Farley accidentally trashes a sacred scroll, telling Sheridan that his ninja brothers "may have a second copy."

Robin Shou stands out as Farley's put-upon older brother. He has the dark deadpan and physical grace of a first-rate movie ninja. Chris Rock is wasted in a demeaning bellboy role, and Dennis Dugan's direction is adequate, but not much more. Yet there's at least one consolation: David Spade is not in the movie.—Rick Schultz

JACKIE CHAN'S FIRST STRIKE ★★★1/2

Starring Jackie Chan, Jackson Lou, Chen Chun Wu and Bill Tung. Directed by Stanley Tong. Written by Stanley Tong, Nick Tramontane, Greg Mellot and Elliot Tong. Produced by Barbie Tung. A New Line release. Action/comedy. Rated PG-13 for plentiful action/violence. Running time: 83 min.

With "Jackie Chan's First Strike," released in Asia last year as "Police Story 4" and issued here with additional music and a trim by New Line, director Stanley Tong and Chan have made their most accessible (i.e., Americanized) film to date. Though showing less of Chan's breathtaking ability than his fans are accustomed to, "First Strike" is a fast-paced actioner with spectacular stunts, a clear plotline and clever comedy.

Again the Hong Kong policeman, though this time compared to James Bond and called simply Jackie, Chan chases the mysterious Tsui (an effectively complex Jackson Lou) and a stolen nuclear warhead from the snows of the Ukraine to the balmy coast of Australia, allowing for stunt sequences with snowmobiles, helicopters, ocean high-rises and aquarium sharks, all skillfully lensed by cinematographer Jingle Ma (who shot "Rumble in the Bronx"). Sound is also well crafted, intensifying the impact.

Wardrobe contributes via fabulous neon colors (even helping keep the plot lucid). Distinctly Chinese motifs have survived: a white-uniformed army emerges from beneath snow, and hundreds of umbrellas open in a Chinatown sequence. There's even a John Woo moment: the salvation of good-hearted adversaries. Chan could use another Woo treatment—a slow-motion camera—so that hardcore fans could meditate on his magic.—Karen Achenbach

TURBULENCE ★1/2

Starring Ray Liotta and Lauren Holly. Directed by Robert Butler. Written by Jonathan Brett. Produced by Martin Ransohoff and David Valdes. An MGM release. Thriller. Rated R for terror, strong violence and language. Running time: 103 min.

The type of movie whose climax supplies the needed 90 seconds of exciting footage for a good trailer but that fails to fill the other 90 minutes to make a good film, "Turbulence" suffers a number of in-flight problems.

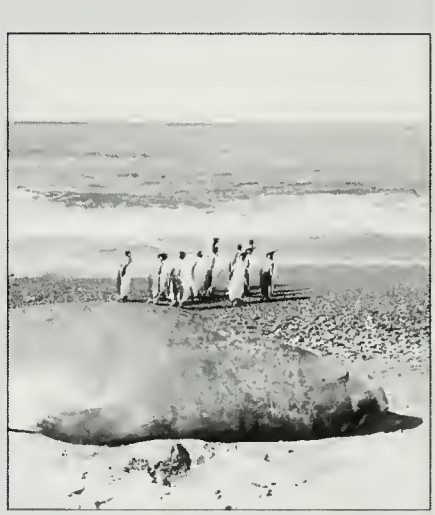
The key fault light flashing is logistical: Director Robert Butler and writer Jonathan Brett decide to eject plausibility in their attempt to fashion a mano-a-womano fracas 40,000 feet up in a 747. Although the jet takes off from New York, heading to Los Angeles on travel-heavy Christmas Eve, only a handful of passengers and crew are aboard. As soon as the plane ascends, half

SPECIAL FORMATS

THE GREAT AMERICAN WEST ★★★

Narrated by Jason Robards. Directed by Reed Smoot. Written by Richard Parkinson. Produced by Scott Swofford. A John Q. Hammons release. Documentary. Unrated. Running time: 41 min. Format: IMAX.

SURVIVAL ISLAND ★★★



Narrated and written by Sir David Attenborough. Directed by David Douglas. Produced by Christopher Parsons. An IMAX Corp. release. Documentary. Unrated. Running time: 40 min. Format: IMAX.

Two nature pictures hit the really big screen doing what IMAX movies do best—conveying hugeness—by providing the likes of a gargantuan grizzly chasing a crusty trapper in "The Great American West" and "Survival Island's" vast sea of landfaring penguins at an apparent arctic U.S. Festival.

"The Great American West" is quintessentially gorgeous, each shot the stuff of dream vacations—frozen lakes, khaki shrubbery surrounding chunks of red earth, frothy waves, limegreen valleys, yellowstone fountains. As eye candy, it's palpably delicious.

The story starts with Napoleon's sale of the Louisiana Territory to then-president Thomas Jefferson to fund the former's European campaigns. Next onscreen come Lewis and Clark on the first federally funded expedition; we then speed through history via the diaries and letters of real people: Chinese railroad workers, Utah-bound Mormons, a California miner.

A slightly "smaller" movie, "Survival Island" is like a good "National Geographic" or "Mutual of Omaha's Wild Kingdom" episode—but more cleverly written and meticulously shot. It shows the life cycle of multi-modal animals who swim or fly each spring to a frozen island in Antarctica called South Georgia to give birth to their offspring.

"Survival Island."

The appeal of this show is in the humanness of the animals, with a little help from a narrator who (for example) describes an albatross mating ritual as the equivalent of a high school dance. Here, the stars are the penguins. A pair walking down the beach seem so human in their overall plodding countenance that a question from one—like "now where did we leave our towels?"—would not seem out of place.

In a recent dual screening, the audience seemed to prefer the animal picture over the panorama. The latter, despite its vistas and costumes, has too broad a scope—covering an 87-year span of 15 states in less than 45 minutes—and sends one off with a vague sense of its message. However, the two do play well together and would make a nice double feature.—Ann Kwinn of the people are killed, and all but two of the rest are locked away. Those two are a serial killer, Ryan (Ray Liotta), and a flight attendant, Teri (Lauren Holly). The rest of the journey is a physical and psychological battle of wits—uninteresting because it's so one-sided—between Ryan and Teri; a secondary plot pits woman against nature as Teri must pilot the craft through a mammoth storm that causes major turbulences.

Various landing conflagrations, with a building being smashed and a parking tower destroyed, are but a mere piece of the film, and they're not persuasive; a 747 coming down would have caused even more carnage than occurs here. The filmmakers do manage to create some intensity, but their vision and the direction of the movie seem like they're booked on separate flights. Although Ryan does have some intriguing characteristics, in the end Liotta has again purchased the wrong ticket.—Dwayne E. Leslie

THE LINE KING: THE AL HIRSCHFELD STORY ★★1/2

Directed, written and produced by Susan W. Dryfoos. A Castle Hill release. Documentary. Unrated. Running time: 86 min.

With the few strokes of a pencil, caricaturist Al Hirschfeld can do in minutes what filmmakers, writers and painters spend months trying to create: He captures the essence of his subjects, rather than their likeness. It's too bad that Susan Dryfoos' documentary "The Line King: The Al Hirschfeld Story," though it covers a lot of ground, isn't quite as insightful.

Looking back over eight decades of Hirschfeld's work, "The Line King" views like a "who's who" of entertainers, displaying hundreds of vivid caricatures, from Charlie Chaplin and Marlene Dietrich to Katharine Hepburn, Joan Collins and Woody Allen. Among the parade of drawings, Hirschfeld reminisces about his early days in Paris, his marriage to European actress Dolly Haas and his work for The New York Times. Filmmaker Dryfoos also includes Hirschfeld's old home-movie footage and interviews with his former colleagues to help recreate days long gone.

Yet, because time is so compressed throughout the film, "The Line King" becomes a light dance over the past. Names, faces and eras whiz by, revealing only fleeting glimpses of personality. Dryfoos relies on Hirschfeld's work to carry the show but, although the drawings are fascinating, they're simply not enough to sustain a full-length feature film.—Lea Russo

TROMEO AND JULIET ★★

Starring Will Keenan, Jane Jensen and Lemmy. Directed by Lloyd Kaufman. Written by James Gunn and Lloyd Kaufman. Produced by Michael Herz and Lloyd Kaufman. A Troma Team release. Horror. Rated R. Running time: 107 min.

According to Troma Studios, this mini-budget film is its most important and ambitious project to date. The Tromatized version of "Romeo and Juliet" includes all the elements that made Shakespeare great: body piercing, kinky sex, and dismemberment. But that wasn't good enough for the creatively twisted minds at Troma, who added cybersex, gay and lesbian eroticism, cruelty to animals, incest, decapitations, head smashing, mutant inbreeding and car crashes, all meshed with sporadic language of the Bard. Who else but the Troma types could develop a dream sequence that combines popcorn, rats and pregnancy? To complement its mod alternative-rock soundtrack, this concoction is narrated by Lemmy of the metal band Motorhead.

In this telling, Juliet (Jane Jensen) is engaged to marry a sausage maker, even though she is a vegetarian. Tromeo (Will Keenan) meets her at a party, and it's love at first sight; the only problem is that they are the offspring of feuding families. That's about where the resemblance to the 1596 original ends; from there on until the eventual death scene (which has Juliet transformed into a beast), it's Troma time, thanks in part to a subplot that thoroughly contorts the main story's ending.

Troma films have a big cult following, and they're certainly not for everyone. "The Toxic Avenger" in 1985 was Troma's breakthrough, leading to two sequels and to hero Toxie becoming the company's mascot. It took four years for "Tromeo and Juliet" writer/director/producer Lloyd Kaufman (Troma's president) and co-scripter James Gunn to finalize this iambically demonic script. Already selected to screen at several film fests, "Tromeo and Juliet" is great for midnight showings for its target audience, from the opening moments right through to the fun-to-watch closing credits. Of course, that targeted audience might have trouble reading them all. Or just reading.—Dwayne E. Leslie

SUNDANCE REVIEW

BRASSED OFF ★★★1/2

Starring Pete Postlethwaite, Tara Fitzgerald, Ewan McGregor and Stephen Tompkinson. Directed and written by Mark Herman. Produced by Steve Abbott. A Miramax release. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 107 min.

Like the music it celebrates, "Brassed Off" is in-your-face yet sentimental, rousing yet sad, defiant but full of heart. Set in a Yorkshire village where the local coal workers are being made redundant, this movie uses the sound, fury and feeling of a colliery brass band as its weapon of war. Although Mark Herman's script occasionally sounds too calculatedly polemic, he has drawn from his excellent actors performances that expose—with humor and grief—the truth of the community's struggle to stay viable in the face of government indifference.

Miramax's "Brassed Off," which screened at Sundance, opens 4/25 NY/LA.

The dignity of the band leader ("Dragonheart's" Pete Postlethwaite) who has chonneled oll his possion into a sole obsession—that it's the music that really matters—sets the tone for the film, which (despite the blunt colloquial humor that marks its U.K. spot of the map) tackles the universal theme of the rights of man. And woman—for it is the return of a local lass mode good (who just happens to play the flugelhorn) who raises the testosterone and then the hackles of the bandsmen, setting the story in motion. Though her part is somewhat underwritten, Tara Fitzgerald ("Sirens") is fine as the young woman whose success has put her, unwillingly, on the wrong side of the conflict but never out of the heart of the young coalworker facing a bleak future, played—with more impact than the part provides—by Ewan McGregor ("Trainspotting").

Stephen Tompkinson as Danny's son, wrenched hardest by all the conflicts of emotion and circumstance, matches up impressively to a role that demands he appear tragic while wearing giant clown's feet. Among the supporting cast, Jim Carter, Philip Jackson and Melanie Hill bring real individuality to people who, quite literally, have the ground on which they stand, live, breathe and earn their daily bread taken out from under them.

The Grimethrope Colliery Brass Band stands in for the fictional Grimley band. Their music binds and boosts the story, helping to cover some cliches of plot and character and injecting the passion of an important message as this journey of survival wends its way from rehearsal hall to village green to hospital car park to city center and finally on to London's Albert Hall.—Bridget Byrne

REVIEWS IN BRIEF

MONDO ★★★1/2

Starring Ovidiu Balan, Pierette Fesch, Philippe Petit and Jerry Smith. Directed and written by Tony Gatlif. Produced by Michele Ray-Gavras. A Shadow release. Drama. French-language; English subtitles. Unrated. Running time: 77 min.

In this bittersweet tale, a beautiful young orphan (Ovidiu Balan) called Mondo wanders the streets of the French seaside village of Nice, searching for family, food and shelter. When the police at last capture him, the loss is felt by all who grew to eare about him and the sweet innocence he embodied.

Rich with beautiful imagery and emotionally stirring music, "Mondo"—based on the J.M.G. Le Clezio novel "Ed. Gallinard"—is a sparkling gem in a sea of tired, formulaic films, providing only the definition needed to keep its story intriguing.—Pat Kramer

DEATH BY DESIGN ★★★

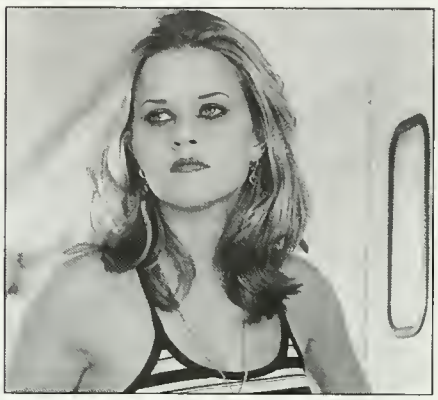
Directed and written by Peter Friedman and Jean-Francois Brunet. Produced by Peter Friedman and Emmanuel Laurent. A First Run release. Documentary. Unrated. Running time: 70 min.

Cellular biology might sound like a dry and intimidating topic, but this documentary brings the subject to life in an accessible, entertaining and educational format. Informative interviews with scientists from around the world are interspliced with fascinating close-ups (set to music) of the artistic choreography of eell movement, which are contrasted with stock footage of similar human activity. Some comparisons are a stretch, but most are insightful and occasionally almost profound.

There is humor in "Death By Design" (subtitled "Where Parallel Worlds Meet"), both from these filmic metaphors and from the scientists themselves, who are engaging and not the least bit stuffy. Although subtitles identifying the eells would have added to its instructional value, and the at-times repetitious 70 minutes could use a slight trim, "Death by Design" is nevertheless certainly worthwhile to anyone with a thirst for knowledge.—Christine James

DADETOWN ★★1/2

Starring Tom Nickenback and Ed Hubble. Directed by Russ Hexter. Written by Russ Hexter and John Housely. Produced by Jim Carden. A Castle Hill release. Drama. Unrated. Running time: 84 min.



A clever, amusing but protracted conceit, "Dadetown" attempts to use a faux documentary style to relate a dramatic small-town tale with light-hearted cynicism. In his first and last feature before his death at age 27, filmmaker Russ Hexter reveals a sharp, original, even iconoclastic sensibility.

In trying to delineate the tragic effects of provincialism, however, this uneasy mix of forced satire and credible melodrama tends to blunt his thesis. Still, using a talking-head interview format, Hexter makes a volatile statement on how eneroaching industrialism can cause inhuman competition and social disruption.—Dale Winogura

FREEWAY ★★★1/2

Starring Reese Witherspoon and Kiefer Sutherland. Directed and written by Matthew Bright. Produced by Brad Wyman and Chris Hanley. A Roxie release. Comedy. Rated R. Running time: 102 min.

This darkly comic justice-meting story of Vanessa ("Fear's" Reese Witherspoon), a beautiful but troubled youth who dishes out what's coming to sympathetic psychologist by day/deranged serial killer by night Bob Wolverton (Kiefer Sutherland), is a pretty funny take on a pretty twisted subject.

Reese Witherspoon in Roxie's "Freeway."

A wonderfully eclectic cast—Amanda Plummer as Vanessa's addict/prostitute mom, Dan Hedaya as a police detective and Brooke Shields as Bob's clueless wife—provides fine support, but the film is carried by Witherspoon's hilarious performance as the perky murderess.—Christine James

PARIS WAS A WOMAN ★★

Directed by Greta Schiller. Written by Andrea Weiss. Produced by Frances Berrigan, Greta Schiller and Andrea Weiss. A Zeitgeist release. Documentary. Unrated. Running time: 75 min.

"Paris Was a Woman" looks at the beguiling era between the world wars from the perspective of the many talented women who made the City of Light their own. Among those notables are bookstore keepers Sylvia Beach and Adrienne Monnier, artist Romaine Brooks and New Yorker Magazine luminary Janet Flanner.

Only those especially excited by the time will overlook the flat presentation; the film suffers from a scarcity of archival footage, instead trying to make do with still photos, maps and lengthy interviews with scholars. Although earnest and well-meant, "Paris Was a Woman" lacks the zest of its own subjects.—Cathy Thompson-Georges

SLEEPOVER ★

Starring Michael Albanese, Karl Giant and Ken Miles. Directed and written by John Sullivan. Produced by Jim McNally. An Artistic License release. Drama. Unrated. Running time: 88 min.

Mark ("Malcolm X's" Michael Albanese), Sean ("Party Girl's" Karl Giant) and Ken (Ken Miles) are teenage pals who tell their parents they'll be sleeping at a friend's house. The boys—each with a different background and different problems—plan to run the streets with hopes of finding girls. Of course, their plans go awry.

Despite a microscopic budget, the filmmakers manage to put their players in scenarios that showcase their talents and touch on real-life issues. However, the plot's events during the night in question are ordinary to the point of inciting audience boredom.—Dwayne E. Leslie

ADRENALIN: FEAR THE RUSH ★

Starring Christopher Lambert, Natasha Henstridge and Craig Davis. Directed and written by Albert Pyun. Produced by Tom Karnowski and Gary Schmoeller. A Legacy release. Action. Rated R for gruesome violence and gore, and for strong language. Running time: 75 min.

Stupidity reigns supreme in "Adrenalin: Fear the Rush," a gratuitous and simple-minded exploitation thriller that's as meaningless as its title. Bereft of suspense and terror elements, writer/director Albert Pyun makes sures that characters and sense don't get in the way of all the gory violence and unimaginative action. Even the cheesy production values are not amusing enough to qualify the film as camp.

The story: In a ravaged future Boston, a rookie cop ("Maximum Risk's" Natasha Henstridge) joins with an armed police unit (led by Christopher Lambert) to track down an insane cannibalistic killer. A plodding pace, ugly viewpoint and lackluster use of Panavision show Pyun hasn't learned mueh about moviemaking since his dreadful 1982 fantasy "The Sword and the Sorcerer."

The best thing about "Adrenalin"—which back in 1995 was on Miramax's schedule—is it's short, but such hackery seems long even at an hour-fifteen.—Dale Winogura

SUITE 16 ★★★1/2

Starring Pete Postlethwaite, Geraldine Pailhas and Antonie Kamerling. Directed by Dominique Deruddere. Written by Charles Higson and Lise Mayer. Produced by Paul Breuls and Frank Bak. A Filmopolis release. Thriller. Rated R. Running time: 98 min.

This sexually provocative film by director Dominique Deruddere ("Crazy Love," "Wait Until Spring Bandini") provides an interesting twist on passion, domination and control and the extent to which people will go to attain them. It stars Antonie Kamerling ("The Small Blonde Death") as a street hustler and Pete Postlethwaite ("Dragonheart") as an impotent invalid; the film pits youth and virility against wealth and intelligence as the older man uses the younger as a stand-in for sexual episodes.

"Suite 16" is drenched in passion, sometimes erotic, sometimes shocking. Riveting throughout its fast-moving storyline, and emblazoned with a bold, emotionally charged musical score by nouvelle composer Walter Hus, "Suite 16" is fresh, interesting and dangerously bad.—Pat Kramer

Boxoffice Magazine presents

MovieFone's Moviegoer Activity Report

For the Month of December 1996

MovieFone® (777-FILM®) and its sister service, MovieLink® Online, are now the single largest source of movie showtime information in the country, providing information to over 12 million moviegoers each month. The following information represents the most requested theatres and exhibitors on MovieFone.

Top 10 Exhibitors & Theatres

Most Requested Exhibitors

Rank	Exhibitor	Total Requests	Last Month's Rank
1	United Artists	649,772	1
2	Sony	599,753	2
3	Cineplex Odeon	587,737	4
4	AMC	531,250	3
5	General Cinema	346,363	5
6	Century	243,840	6
7	National Amusements	138,726	7
8	Cinemark	128,835	8
9	CinAmerica	117,670	9
10	Famous Players	107,266	13

Most Requested Theatres

Rank	Market	Theatre	Total Requests	Last Month's Rank
1	NY	Sony Lincoln Square	97,621	1
2	NY	CO Chelsea	45,672	4
3	LA	AMC Century 14	41,088	3
4	NY	CityCin Village East	37,007	9
5	BO	Sony Cheri	34,411	2
6	BO	Sony Assembly Square	26,002	11
7	NY	Sony Village 7	25,043	7
8	NY	Sony New York Twin	24,415	36
9	NY	Sony 84th St.Sixplex	23,580	5
10	PH	UA Cheltenham	23,518	8

Most Requested Theatres Per Screen

Total Requests	Rank	Theatre (# screens)	Total Requests	Last Month's Rank
New York	1	Sony New York Twin (2)	24,415	5
1,183,195	2	Sony Astor Place (1)	7,774	35
	3	Sony Lincoln Square (13)	97,621	10
Los Angeles	1	CO Showcase (7)	5,712	19
566,338	2	CinAm National (1)	5,284	18
	3	Pacific El Capitan (1)	4,446	N/A
Dallas	1	AMC Highland Pk Village (4)	9,108	3
493,001	2	AMC Forum (6)	12,491	2
	3	UA Cine (2)	3,688	38
San Francisco	1	Century Cinema 21 (1)	6,061	5
317,526	2	Century Century 21 (1)	5,107	4
	3	UA Coronet (1)	4,145	3
Philadelphia	1	UA Sameric (4)	16,947	1
258,791	2	Cinemagic 3 at Penn (3)	10,663	5
	3	UA Cheltenham (8)	23,518	3
Miami	1	Cobb Miami Lakes (10)	14,957	2
243,025	2	AMC Kendall T & C (10)	13,136	3
	3	Cobb Miller Square (8)	10,037	4
Boston	1	Sony Cheri (4)	34,411	1
240,961	2	NA Circle Cinema (7)	22,515	2
	3	Sony Nickelodeon (5)	15,970	4
Chicago	1	CO Biograph (3)	6,356	1
220,945	2	CO Watertower 1-4 (4)	7,214	23
	3	CO Lincoln Village 1-6 (6)	10,445	5
Toronto	1	Famous Uptown (3)	14,442	2
181,646	2	Famous Eglinton (1)	4,279	1
	3	Famous Hollywood (2)	5,757	7
Houston	1	CO River Oaks Plaza (12)	15,424	2
147,860	2	CO Spectrum (9)	10,422	1
	3	Landmk River Oaks (3)	3,254	7
Phoenix	1	Hark Cine Capri (1)	2,910	2
138,568	2	Hark Christown (5)	7,019	1
	3	Century Glendale D-I (9)	10,842	5
San Diego	1	CinAm Cinema 21 (1)	1,369	1
112,948	2	Landmk Cove (1)	748	22
	3	UA Horton (14)	8,704	4
Kansas City	1	Dksn Glenwood (4)	5,690	1
93,129	2	Dksn Cinema (6)	6,544	16
	3	Dksn Antioch (2)	2,103	12
Atlanta	1	UA Midtown Cinemas (8)	3,209	2
86,691	2	Roswell Cinema (10)	3,722	25
	3	AMC Phipps Plaza (14)	5,063	4
Seattle	1	CO Cinerama (1)	3,247	4
76,988	2	Landmk Guild 45th (2)	2,585	5
	3	Landmk Neptune (1)	989	3
Minneapolis	1	Mann Suburban World (1)	782	11
64,393	2	CO Edina (4)	2,525	4
	3	CO Skyway (6)	3,051	12
Cleveland	1	Regal Severance Movies (8)	5,952	3
63,276	2	GCC Ridge Park Square (8)	5,498	1
	3	Sony Cedar Theater (2)	1,353	2
Denver	1	UA Continental (1)	2,190	1
56,420	2	Landmk Esquire (2)	2,164	17
	3	AMC Colorado Plaza (6)	3,172	2
Las Vegas	1	Century Las Vegas D-I (6)	4,591	1
52,431	2	Century Cinedome 12 LV (12)	8,386	7
	3	Century Rancho (16)	10,160	3
Sacramento	1	Century Sacramento D-I (6)	8,580	4
44,280	2	Century Cinedome Sacr. (9)	10,228	3
	3	Century Century 21 (2)	1,599	1
Detroit	1	Star Lincoln Park (8)	2,952	2
40,972	2	Star Taylor (10)	3,042	1
	3	AMC Southland (4)	1,070	5
Washington, DC	1	CO Embassy (1)	796	2
27,174	2	CO Uptown (1)	581	1
	3	CO Cinema (1)	442	9
Tampa	1	Cobb University (4)	1,403	25
24,215	2	Muvico Palm Harbor (10)	2,679	5
	3	Carmike Main St. (6)	1,552	8
Orlando	1	Carmike Hoffner Centre (6)	1,350	1
21,078	2	Sand Lake (7)	1,577	4
	3	Regal UC Cinema (7)	1,513	2

Top 3 Actively* Requested Theatres:

1. CO Worldwide New York, NY
2. Sony Lincoln Sq. New York, NY
3. CO Chelsea Cinemas New York, NY

*Caller specifically requested theatre

Key to Exhibitors

AMC	AMC Theatres, Inc.	CityCin	City Cinemas	General	General Theatres
Act III	Act III Theatres	CO	Cineplex Odeon Corp	Hark	Harkins Theatres
Blm	Blumenfeld Theatres	Cobb	Cobb Theatres	Hollywood	Hollywood Theatres
Carmike	Carmike Cinemas, Inc.	Dksn	Dickinson Theatres	Landmk	Landmark Theatre Corp
Century	Century Theatres	Famous	Famous Players	Mann MN	Mann Minneapolis
CinAm	CinAmerica Theatres, LP	GCC	General Cinema Theatres	Met	Metropolitan Theatres Corp.
Muvico	Muvico Theatres
Pacific	Pacific Theatres
Regal	Regal Cinemas
Sony	Sony Theatres
Star	Loeks-Star Theatres
SupSav	Super Saver Cinemas
UA	United Artists Theatre Circuit

777-FILM

BOXOFFICE

	December	January	February	MARCH (Current)
Buena Vista (818) 567-5000 (212) 593-8900	The Preacher's Wife, 12/13, Rom/Com, PG, 124 mins., Dolby SR, SR-D, SDDS, Flat. Denzel Washington, Whitney Houston, Gregory Hines. Dir: Penny Marshall. Evita, 12/25 NY,LA, 1/11/97 wide, Mus./Drama, 130 mins., PG-13, Dolby SR, SR-D, SDDS, Anamorphic. Madonna, Antonio Banderas, Jonathan Pryce. Dir: Alan Parker.	Metro, 1/17, Dra, R, 117 min., Dolby SR, SR-D, SDDS, Anamorphic. Eddie Murphy, Carmen Ejogo, Michael Rapaport. Dir: Thomas Carter. Prefontaine, 1/24 ltd, Dra, PG-13, 106 min, Dolby SR, SR-D, Flat. Jared Leto, Amy Locane, Ed O'Neill. Dir: Steve James. The Shadow Conspiracy, 1/31, Dra, R, 103 min., Dolby SR, SR-D, Anamorphic. Charlie Sheen, Linda Hamilton. Dir: George P. Cosmatos.	That Dam Cat, 2/14, Com, PG, 89 min., Dolby SR, SR-D, Flat. Christina Ricci, Doug E. Doug, Dyan Cannon Dir. Robert Spiers Grosse Pointe Blank, 2/21, Com, R, 106 min, Dolby SR, SR-D, SDDS, Flat. John Cusack, Minnie Driver, Dan Aykroyd, Joan Cusack. Dir: George Armitage.	Jungle2Jungle, 3/14, Com, PG, 105 min., Dolby SR, SR-D, SDDS, Flat. Tim Allen, Mar Short, Lolita Davidovtch, David Ogden Stier JoBeth Williams. Dir: John Pasquin.
Columbia (310) 280-8000 (212) 833-8500	Ghosts of Mississippi, 12/20 ltd, 1/3 exp., Dra. 123 min., PG-13, Dolby A, SR, SDDS, Flat. Alec Baldwin. Dir: Rob Reiner. Hamlet, 12/25 ltd, 1/24 exp. Dra, PG-13, Dolby A, 242 mins, Anamorphic. Dir/Star: Kenneth Branagh. Some Mother's Son, 12/26 ltd.,Dra, R, 112 min., Dolby SR, Flat. Helen Mirren, Fionnula Flanagan. Dir: Terry George.	People Vs. Larry Flynt, 12/27 ltd, 1/10 exp, Dra, R, 130 min. Dolby A, SR, SDDS, Anamorphic. Woody Harrelson, Courtney Love. Dir. Milos Forman.	Absolute Power, 2/14,Thr, R, 120 min., Dolby A &SR, SDDS. Anamorphic. Gene Hackman, Scott Glenn, Judy Davis. Dir/Star: Clint Eastwood. Fools Rush In, 2/14, Rom/Com, PG-13, 106 min., Dolby A, SR, SDDS, Flat. Matthew Perry, Salma Hayek. Dir: Andy Tennant. Booty Call, 2/26, Com, R, 77 min., DTS, SDDS, Flat. Jamie Foxx, Vivica Fox. Dir: Jeff Pollack	The Devil's Own, 3/26, Sus/Thr, Dolby A SR, SDDS, Anamorphic. Harrison Ford, Br Pitt, Margaret Colin, Treat Williams, Ruber Blades. Dir: Alan J. Pakula.
MGM/UA (310) 449-3000 (212) 708-0300		Turbulence, 1/31, Act/Dra, R, 103 min., DTS. Ray Liotta, Lauren Holly, Hector Elizondo Dir: Robert Butler.	Touch, Dra Tom Arnold, Bridget Fonda, Christopher Walken, Gina Gershon, Janeane Garofalo Dir: Paul Schrader.	Hoodlum(formerly Hoods), 3/28, Dra, R. Laurence Fishburne, Tim Roth, Andy Garc Vanessa Williams.Dir. Bill Duke.
Miramax (212) 941-3800 (213) 845-4200	Everyone Says I Love You, 12/6 ltd, 1/31 exp, Mus, R, 107 min., Dolby A, SR, Flat. Goldie Hawn, Drew Barrymore. Dir/Star: Woody Allen Marvin's Room, 12/18,1/31wide, R, Dolby SR, Flat, 93 min Meryl Streep, Diane Keaton, Leonardo DiCapno. Dir Jerry Zaks Scream, 12/20, Hor/Com, R, 104 min, Dolby SR, Anamorphic. Drew Barrymore, Courteney Cox, David Arquette. Dir: Wes Craven.	Citizen Ruth, 12/13 ltd, 1/10 exp, Com, R, Dolby SR, Flat, 102 min. Laura Dern, Swoosie Kurtz. Dir: Alexander Payne Albino Alligator, 12/13 ltd, 1/17 exp, Dra, R, Scope, 96 min. Dir: Kevin Spacey The Substance of Fire, 12/6 ltd, 1/10 exp, Dra, R, Dolby SR, Flat, 101 min. Sarah Jessica Parker. Dir: Daniel Sullivan. Kolya,1/24 NY, LA, Dra, R, 111 min., Dolby A, Flat Zdenek Szerak Dir: Jan Szerak.	Nightwatch (remake), 2/14, Dra. Nick Nolte, Ewan McGregor, Patricia Arquette, Josh Brolin. Dir. Ole Bornedal. Cosi, 2/21NY, LA. Toni Collette, Barry Otto, Ben Mendlesohn. Dir Mark Joffe. Fist of Legend, 2/28, Act/Adv. Jet Li. Dir: Gordon Chan.	Rhyme & Reason, 3/14, Doc. Features Ic Salt N Peppa. Dir: Peter Spirer. Wide Awake, 3/14, PG. Dana Delany, Der Leary. Dir: M. Night Shyamalan. Mimic, 3/19, SF, Mira Sorvino, Josh Broli Charles Dutton. Dir: Guillermo del Toro. Chasing Amy, 3/28 NY, LA, Rom/Com. Be Affleck, Joey Lauren Adams. Dir: Kevin Sr
New Line (310) 854-5811 (212) 649-4900	Michael, 12/25, Rom/Com,PG. SR, SR-D, SDDS, Flat. John Travolta, Andie MacDowell, William Hurt. Dir: Nora Ephron. In Love and War, 12/25 ltd, 1/24/97 wide, Rom/Dra, PG-13. SR, SR-D, SDDS, Anamorphic. Sandra Bullock, Chris D'Donnell. Dir: Richard Attenborough.	Jackie Chan's First Strike 1/10, Act, PG-13. SR, SR-D, SDDS, Anamporphic. Jackie Chan, Jackson Lou Dir. Samo Hung	Love Jones, 2/26, Rom/Com, R. SR, SR-D, SDDS, Flat. Larenz Tate, Nia Long. Dir: Theodore Witcher. Dangerous Ground, 2/14, Act/Dra., R, SR, SDDS, Flat. Elizabeth Hurley, Ice Cube, Ving Rhames. Dir: Darrell James Roodt
Paramount (213) 956-5000 (212) 373-7000	Beavis and Butt-Head Do America 12/20, Ani, PG-13, 80 min. Voices. Mike Judge. Dir: Mike Judge. The Evening Star, 12/25 ltd, Dra, PG-13, 129 min. Shirley MacLaine, Bill Paxton, Juliette Lewis, Ben Johnson. Dir Robert Harling.	Mother, 12/25 ltd, 1/10, 1/24 exp, Com, PG-13, 103 min. Rob Morrow, Debbie Reynolds, Lisa Kudrow. Dir/Star: Albert Brooks. The Relic, 1/17, Thr, R. Penelope Ann Miller, Tom Sizemore, Linda Hunt. Dir Peter Hyams.	Beautician and the Beast, 2/14, Com. Fran Drescher, Timothy Dalton, Michael Learner, Phyllis Newman. Dir: Ken Kwapis.	Howard Stern's Private Parts, 3/14, Com, Howard Stern, Robin Quivers, Fred Norris, M McCormack. Dir: Betty Thomas. The Saint, 3/28, Act/Adv Val Kilmer, Elisabeth Shue. Dir: Phillip Noyce Night Falls on Manhattan, NY, LA, Dra. And Garcia, Richard Dreyfuss, Lena Olin, Ian Holm. Dir: Sidney Lumet.
TriStar (310) 280-8000 (212) 833-8500	Jerry Maguire, 12/13, Com/Dra, R, 138 min., Dolby A & SR, SDDS. Flat. Tom Cruise, Cuba Gooding Jr., Kelly Preston, Renee Zellweger. Dir: Cameron Crow	Beverly Hills Ninja, 1/17, Com, PG-13, 90 mins., Flat, Dolby A & SR, SDDS. Chris Farley, Nicolette Sheridan. Dir Dennis Dugan.	The Pest, 2/7, Com, PG-13, 88 min., Dolby A, SR, SDDS, Flat John Leguizamo, Jeffery Jones, Edoardo Ballerini. Dir Paul Miller. Donnie Brasco, 2/28, Dra, 122min, Dolby A, SR, SDDS, Flat. Johnny Depp, Al Pacino, Anne Heche, Michael Madsen. Dir. Mike Newell.
20th Century Fox (310) 369-1000 (212) 556-2400	The Crucible, 12/13, 12/20 exp, 1/1 wide, Dra, PG-13, 123 min, Flat, Dolby SR & SR-D Daniel Day-Lewis, Winona Ryder, Joan Allen. Dir: Nicholas Hytner One Fine Day, 12/20, Rom/Com, PG, 108 min, Flat, Dolby SR & SR-D. Michelle Pfeiffer, George Clooney, Mae Whitman, Alex Linz. Dir. Michael Hottman	Star Wars Special Edition (1977 reissue), 1/31, SF, PG, ~125 min., Dolby SR & SRD, SDDS, DTS, Anamorphic. Harrison Ford, Mark Hamill, Carrie Fisher, Alec Guiness, Peter Cushing. Dir. George Lucas.	The Empire Strikes Back Special Edition (1980 reissue), 2/21, SF, PG, Dobly SR & SRD, SDDS, DTS, Anamorphic. Harrison Ford, Mark Hamill, Carrie Fisher, Billy Dee Williams.Dir: Irvin Kershner Inventing the Abbots, 2/28, Dra, R, Dolby SR, SDDS, Anamorphic. Liv Tyler, Joaquin Phoenix, Billy Crudup, Jennifer Connelly Dir: Pat O'Conner.	Return of the Jedi Special Edition (1983 sue), 3/7, SF, PG, Dobly SR & SRD, SDDS DTS, Anamorphic. Harrison Ford, Mark Hamill, Carrie Fisher, Billy Dee Williams. Dir: Richard Marquand. Turbo: A Power Rangers Adventure, 3/21 Adv, Dolby SR, Flat. Jason David Frank, S Cardenas, Catherine Sutherland Dir: David Winning.
Universal (818) 777-1000 (212) 759-7500	Daylight, 12/6, Act, PG-13, 115 min. Dolby SR, DTS. Sylvester Stallone, Amy Brenneman, Viggo Mortensen. Dir. Rob Cohen	Fierce Creatures, 1/24, Com, PG-13, 98 min, Anamorphic, Dolby SR, DTS. Kevin Kline, Jamie Lee Curtis, John Cleese, Michael Palin. Dir: Robert Young	Dante's Peak, 2/7, Act/Adv Pierce Brosnan, Linda Hamilton. Dir. Roger Donaldson	Liar Liar, 3/21, Com, Dolby SR, DTS. Jim Carrey, Maura Tierney, Cary Elwes, John Lovitz, Swoosie Kurtz, Jennifer Tilly. Dir. Tom Shadyac.
Warner Bros. (818) 954-6000 (212) 484-8000	Mars Attacks!, 12/13, SF/Com,PG-13, 105 min. SDDS, Anamorphic. Jack Nicholson, Pierce Brosnan, Glenn Close. Dir: Tim Burton. My Fellow Americans, 12/20, Com, PG-13, 101 min. SDDS, Flat. Jack Lemmon, James Garner, Lauren Bacall. Dir Peter Segal. Indiscretion(formerly The Honest Courtesan), 12/20 ltd. Catherine McCormack, Moira Kelly, Rufus Sewell. Dir Marshall Herskovitz.		Vegas Vacation, 2/14, Com, PG Chevy Chase, Beverly D'Angelo, Randy Quaid. Dir: Stephen Kessler. Rosewood, 2/21, Dra. Jon Voight, Ving Rhames, Michael Rooker, Ester Rolle. Dir: John Singleton.	Leo Tolstoy's Anna Karenina, 3/7 ltd, Dra, So Marceau, Mia Kirschner, Dir.. Bernard Rose. Selena 3/21, Dra. Jennifer Lopez, Edward James Olmos Dir. Gregory Nava. Cats Don't Dance, 3/28, Ani. Voices: Scott Bakula, Kathy Najimy. Dir: Mark Dindal. 187, Dra Samuel L. Jackson, John Heard, Kelly Rowan. Dir: Kevin Reynolds.

FEATURE CHART — MARCH 1997

April	May	Forthcoming
The Sixth Man, 4/4, Com. Marlon Wayans, Kadeem Hardison, David Paymer. Dir: Randall Miller. Romy and Michelle's High School Reunion, 4/18, Com. Mira Sorvino, Lisa Kudrow, Janeane Garofalo, Elaine Hendrix. Dir: David Mirkin.		ConAir, 6/6, Act/Adv. Scope. Nicolas Cage, John Malkovich. Dir: Simon West. Hercules,6/27, Ani. Voices: James Woods, Danny DeVito. Dirs: Ron Clements, John Musker. George of the Jungle, July, Live Act. Brendan Fraser, Leslie Mann. Dir: Sam Weisman. Gone Fishin', Aug, Com, PG. Joe Pesci, Danny Glover. Dir: Christopher Cain. Nothing to Lose, Summer, Com. Martin Lawrence, Tim Robbins. Dir. Steve Dedekerk. Deep Rising, Act/Thr. Treat Williams. Dir: Stephen Sommers. In Pursuit of Honor (formerlyG.I. Jane, Navy Cross), Act.. Demi Moore, Viggo Mortensen. Dir. Ridley Scott. Playing God, Dra. Timothy Hutton. Dir: Andy Wilson. Rocket Man (formerly Space Cadet), Harland Williams. The Absentminded Professor, Com. Robin Williams. An Alan Smithee Film (working title), Com. Sylvester Stallone, Whoopie Goldberg, Jackie Chan.	Buena Vista (818) 567-5000 (212) 593-8900
Double Team (formerly The Colony), 4/4, Act, SDDS, Jean-Claude VanDamme, Dennis Rodman, Mickey Rourke. Dir. Tsui Hark. Anaconda, 4/18, Adv, Dolby A, SR, SDDS. Jon Voight, Jennifer Lopez, Ice Cube, Eric Stoltz, Kari Wuhrer. Dir: Luis Llosa.	The Fifth Element, 5/9. Bruce Willis, Gary Oldman, Ian Holm. Dir. Luc Besson.	Men in Black, 7/2, SF, Dolby A, SR, SDDS. Tommy Lee Jones, Will Smith, Linda Fiorentino, Rip Torn. Dir: Barry Sonnenfeld. AFD (formerly Air Force One), 7/25, Act, SDDS. Harrison Ford, Gary Oldman, Glenn Close. Dir: Wolfgang Peterson. Excess Baggage, Aug, Act/Adv, Dolby A, SR, SDDS. Alicia Silverstone, Benicio del Toro, Christopher Walken. Dir: Marco Brambilla Buddy, Fall, Com. Rene Russo, Robbie Coltrane, Paul Reubens. Dir. Caroline Thompson. Gattaca (formerly The Eighth Day), Fall, SF. Ethan Hawke, Uma Thurman, Jude Law. Dir: Andrew Niccol.	Columbia (310) 280-8000 (212) 833-8500
		All Along the Watchtower, Dra. All the Pretty Horses, Dra. Dir: Mike Nichols. Bond 18, 11/20. Pierce Brosnan. The Day After Tomorrow. Sus. The Fantasticks. Mus/Com, PG, 108 min. Joel Grey, Joe McIntyre. Dir. Michael Ritchie. Fireworks, Dra. Dir: Mark Rydell. Killer's Kiss, Act/Thr. Linda Fiorentino. Kiss Me Deadly, Thr. Dir. Michael Mann. Sixteen Pleasures. Dir: Michael Apted. Supernova, SF/Thr. Dir. Joe Nimziki. To Brave Every Danger, Dra. Warriors of Virtue. Angus MacFadyen, Mario Yedidia, Marley Shelton. Dir. Ronny Yu. Wild Card. Dir: Robert Altman. The Fortune Cookie, Com, Bette Midler, Candice Bergen. Dir.. John Amiel.	MGM/UA (310) 449-3000 (212) 708-0300
Sonatine, 4/4 NY, LA. Dir/Star: Takeshi Kitano. Talk of Angels, 4/18, Dra, PG-13, 97 min., Dolby SR. Polly Walker, Vincent Perez. Dir: Nick Hamm. Office Killer, 4/23 NY, LA. Molly Ringwald, Jeanne Tripplehorn. Dir: Cindy Sherman. Brassed Off, 4/25 NY LA, Dra, Dolby SR, Flat. Pete Postlethwaite, Tara Fitzgerald, Ewan McGregor. Dir: Mark Herman.	Children of the Revolution, 5/1, Com, 102 min. Judy Davis, Sam Neill. Dir: Peter Duncan. Operation Condor (Hong Kong), 5/2, Act/Adv. Dir/Star: Jackie Chan. Temptress Moon,5/2 Dra. Gong Li, Leslie Cheung. Dir: Chen Kaige. Mouth to Mouth (Spain), 5/16, Com, R, Dolby SRD, Scope, 110 min. Javier Bardem, Maria Barranco. Dir: Manuel Gomez Pereira.	Shall We Dance, 6/6, Com. Love Serenade, 6/20. Miranda Otto. Dir: Shirley Barrett. B. Monkey,7/18, Dra. Jared Harris, Rupert Everett. Dir: Michael Radford Copland, 8/1, Dra. Sylvester Stallone, Robert DeNiro. Dir: James Mangold. Wings of a Dove, 8/15, Dra. Helena Bonham Carter, Linus Roache. Dir: Ian Softley. An American Werewolf in Paris, 8/29, Hor/Com. Julie Delpy, Tom Everett Scott. Dir: Anthony Waller. She's DeLovely, 9/12, Dra. Sean Penn, Robin Wright, John Travolta, Gena Rowlands. Dir: Nick Cassavetes. Dogwater, Rom/Com. David Schwimmer, Lara Flynn Boyle. Dir: David Schwimmer. A Midsummer's Night Dream. Alex Jennings, Barry Lynch. Dir: Adrian Noble. Sarajevo, Dra. Woody Harrelson, Marisa Tomei. Dir: Michael Winterbottom. Wishful Thinking, Fall. Jennifer Beals, James LeGros.	Miramax (212) 941-3800 (213) 845-4200
Austin Powers: International Man of Mystery, 4/4, Com. Mike Meyers, Elizabeth Hurley, Mimi Rogers, Michael York. Dir: Jay Roach. B.A.P.s, 4/16, Com, R. SR, SR-D, SDDS, Rat. Halle Berry, Martin Landau, Ian Richardson. Dir: Robert Townsend.	Trial and Error, 5/2, Com, PG-13. Anamorphic. Michael Richards, Jeff Daniels, Rip Torn, Charlize Theron. Dir: Jonathan Lynn. Most Wanted (formerly America's Most Wanted), Act/Com. Keenan Ivory Wayans, Jon Voight, Jill Hennessy, Eric Roberts. Dir: David Hogan.	Boogie Nights, 7/11, Com/Dra. Mark Wahlberg, Julianne Moore. Dir: Paul Thomas Anderson. Money Talks, 7/4, Act/Com. Charlie Sheen, Chris Tucker, Heather Locklear. Dir. Brett Ratner. Mortal Kombat II: Annihilation, 8/1, Act. Spawn, 8/22, SF. Michael Jai White, John Leguizamo, D.B. Sweeney. Dir: Mark Dippe. One Night (formerly One Night Stand), Dra. 9/97, SR, SR-D, SDDS. Flat. Wesley Snipes, Nastassija Kinski, Robert Downey Jr. Dir: Mike Figgis. Woo, 9/97. Jada Pinkett, Tommy Davidson, Isaac Hayes. Dir: Daisy Von Scherler Mayer. Dark City, Fall, Thr. William Hurt. Dir: Alex Proyas. Overnight Delivery, Rom/Com. Jason Bloom. The Women. Summer '98, Com. Julia Roberts, Meg Ryan. Dir. James Brooks.	New Line (310) 854-5811 (212) 649-4900
'Til There Was You, 4/4, Rom/Com. Jeanne Tripplehorn, Jennifer Aniston, Dylan McDermott, Sara Jessica Parker. Dir: Scott Winant. Kiss the Girls, 4/25, Sus. Morgan Freeman, Ashley Judd, Richard Timothy Jones, Cary Elwes. Dir: Gary Fleder.	The Flood, 5/16, Act. Christian Slater, Morgan Freeman, Minnie Driver, Randy Quaid. Dir: Mikael Salomon.	In and Out, 6/13, Com. Kevin Kline, Tom Selleck, Joan Cusack, Debbie Reynolds. Dir: Frank Oz. Titanic, 7/4, Rom/Adv. Bill Paxton, Kate Winslet, Leonardo DiCaprio. Dir: James Cameron. Face Off, 7/18, Act. John Travolta, Nicolas Cage. Dir: John Woo. The Truman Show, 8/8, Dra. Jim Carrey, Dennis Hopper. Dir: Peter Weir. Event Horizen, 8/22. Laurence Fishburne, Kathleen Quinlin. Dir: Paul Anderson. The Magic Hour, 9/19. Paul Newman, Susan Sarandon, Gene Hackman, Stockard Channing. Dir: Robert Benton. Going West in America, Fall, Thr. Dennis Quaid, Danny Glover. Dir: Jeb Stuart. Illumination (formerly One Golden Afternoon), Dra. Peter O'Toole. Dir. Charles Sturridge. Prince Valiant, Act/Adv. Stephen Moyer. Dir: Anthony Hickox. Rainmaker, Dra. Laurence Fishburne, Claire Danes, Mickey Rourke. Dir: Francis Ford Coppola.	Paramount (213) 956-5000 (212) 373-7000
		My Best Friend's Wedding, 6/27, Rom/Com. Julia Roberts, Dermot Mulroney, Cameron Diaz. Dir: P.J. Hogan. Desperate Measures, 8/8, Act. Michael Keaton, Andy Garcia. Dir: Barbet Schroeder. Starship Troopers, 11/7, SF, SDDS. Neil Patrick Harris, Denise Richards. Dir: Paul Verhoeven. Kilronen, Thr, SDDS. Jonathan Schaech, Jessica Lange, Gwyneth Paltrow. Dir: Jonathan Darby. Old Friends, Dra. Jack Nicholson, Helen Hunt, Greg Kinnear. Dir: James Brooks. Peter Pan, Adv. Dir: John Hughes. Seven Years in Tibet, Dra. Brad Pitt. Dir: Jean-Jacques Annaud Stinkers, Com. B.D. Wong, Bronson Pinchot. Dir: Barnet Kellman.	TriStar (310) 280-8000 (212) 833-8500
Picture Perfect, 4/4, Rom/Com, Dolby SR, Flat. Jennifer Aniston, Kevin Bacon, Olympia Dukakis, Jay Mohr. Dir: Glenn Gordon Caron		Speed II: Cruise Control,7/21, Act. Sandra Bullock, Jason Patric, Willem Dafoe. Dir: Jan De Bont. Home Alone 3, 7/11, Alex D.Linz. Dir. Raja Gosnell. Alien Resurrection, 8/1. Sigourney Weaver, Winona Ryder. Dir: Jean-Pierre Jeunet. Volcano, Sum, Act/Adv, Dolby SR, SRD, SDDS, DTS, Flat. Tommy Lee Jones, Anne Heche. Dir: Mick Jackson. Out to Sea, Sum, Com. Walter Matthau, Jack Lemmon. Dir. Martha Coolidge. Anastasia, Ani. Dirs: Don Bluth, Gary Goldman. Bookworm, Fall, Act./Thr. Anthony Hopkins, Alec Baldwin. Dir: Lee Tamahori. Firestorm, Fall, Act./Adv. Howie Long, Suzy Amis, Scott Glen. Dir.: Dean Semler. Great Expectations, Fall, Dra. Robert De Niro, Gwyneth Paltrow, Ethan Hawke. Dir: Alfonso Cuaron. A Life Less Ordinary, Dra. Cameron Diaz, Holly Hunter. Dir: Danny Boyle. Untitled Bulworth, Act/Dir: Warren Beatty. Halle Berry, Paul Sorvino.	20th Century Fox (310) 369-1000 (212) 556-2400
That Old Feeling, 4/4, Com, Dolby SR, DTS. Bette Midler, Dennis Farina, Danny Nucci. Dir: Carl Reiner. McHale's Navy, Com, Dolby SR, DTS. Tom Arnold, David Alan Grier, Dean Stockwell, Tim Curry. Dir. Bryan Spicer.	The Lost World, 5/23, Adv, Dolby SR, DTS. Jeff Goldblum, Julianne Moore, Vince Vaughn, Pete Postlthewaite. Dir: Steven Spielberg	Leave it to Beaver, 8/1, Com. Janine Turner, Christopher McDonald. Dir: Andy Cadiff. Kull the Conqueror, 8/29, Adv. Kevin Sorbo, Tia Carrere. Dir: John Nicolella. The Fairy Godmother,Com. Mara Wilson, Martin Short, Kathleen Turner. Dir. Michael Ritchie Reach the Rock, Dra. Bill Sadler, Karen Sillas. Dir: Bill Ryan Untitled Jackal Project, Thr. Bruce Willis, Richard Gere, Sidney Poitier. Dir: Michael Canton-Jones. Virus, Thr. Jamie Lee Curtis, Donald Sutherland. Dir: John Bruno.	Universal (818) 777-1000 (212) 759-7500
Murder at 1600, 4/11, Thr. Wesley Snipes, Diane Lane, David Benzali, Dennis Miller. Dir: Dwight H. Little. Addicted to Love, 4/18, Rom/Com. Meg Ryan, Matthew Brodenck. Dir: Griffin Dunne. L.A. Confidential, 4/25, Dra. Kevin Spacey, Kim Basinger, Danny DeVito, Russell Crowe. Dir: Curtis Hanson	Father's Day, 5/9, Com. Robin Williams, Billy Crystal, Natassja Kinski, Julia Louis-Dreyfuss. Dir: Ivan Reitman.	Batman and Robin, 6/20, Act/Adv. George Clooney. Dir. Joel Schumacher. Contact, 7/11. Jodie Foster, Matthew McConaughey. Dir: Robert Zemeckis. Conspiracy Theory, 7/25. Mel Gibson, Julia Roberts. Dir: Richard Donner. Edwards and Hunt, July, Com. Chris Farley. Dir: Christopher Guest. Wild America, July, Adv. PG. Jonathan Taylor Thomas. Dir: Bill Dear. Free Willy 3, 8/1, Fam/Adv. Jason James Richter. Dir: Sam Pillsbury. Devil's Advocate, Aug. Al Pacino. Dir: Taylor Hackford. Steel, Aug, Act/Adv, Shaquille O'Neal. Dir: Kenneth Johnson. Mad City, Dra. John Travolta, Dustin Hoffman. Dir: Constantin Costa-Gravas. Incognito, Thr, Jason Patric. Dir: John Badham. Watch That Man, 7/97. Bill Murray. Dir: Jon Amiel. Fire Down Below, Act. Steven Segal. Pre, Dra. Billy Crudup. Dir: Robert Towne. Home Fries, Com. Drew Barrymore. Dir: Dean Parisot	Warner Bros. (818) 954-6000 (212) 484-8000

BOXOFFICE Independent Feature Chart MARCH1997

FEBRUARY

Artificial Eye
212-255-1922

Le Samourai (French), 103 min. Dir: Jean-Pierre Melville. 2/28 ltd.

Artistic License
212-265-9119

Troublesome Creek, Doc, 88 min. Dirs: Jeanne Jordan and Steve Ascher. 2/7 LA.

CFP
212-995-9662

Margaret's Museum (Canada), Dra, R, 118 min. Helena Bonham Carter. Dir: Mort Ransen. 2/7
The Daytrippers, Com, NR, 90 min. Parker Posey, Stanley Tucci. Dir: Greg Mottola. 2/21

Cinema Parallel
410-442-1752

Satan Tango, Dra, NR, 450 min. Dir. Bela Tarr.

Cinema Village Features
212-431-5119

Screwed, 85 min. Dir: Alexander Crawford. Feb exp.

Dove
310-786-1600

Flipping, Thr, R, 110 min. Keith David. Dir: Gene Mitchell. 2/21

First Look
310-855-1199

Jerusalem (Sweden), PG-13, 166 min. Olympia Dukakis, Max Von Sydow. Dir: Bille August. 2/14

First Run
212-243-0600

Boyfriends (England). Dirs: Neil Hunter and Tom Hunsinger. 2/14
Champagne Safari, Doc. 2/21

Fox Searchlight
310-369-4402

Blood and Wine, Dra, R, 100 min. Jack Nicholson. Dir: Bob Rafelson. 2/14
Smilla's Sense of Snow, Thr. Julia Ormond. Dir: Billie August. 2/21

Goldwyn
310-284-9273

Hard Eight (formerly Sydney), Dra, R, 101 min. Dir: Paul Thomas Anderson. 2/28

Gramercy
310-777-1960

When We Were Kings, Doc, 90 min. Dir: Leon Gast. 2/14
The Eighth Day (France), Dra, 108 min. Dir: Jaco Van Dormael. 2/21

Greycat
702-737-0670

Parallel Sons, Rom/Dra, R, 93 min. Dir: John C. Young. NY
I Was a Jewish Sex Worker, Doc, NR, 74 min. Dir: Phillip B. Roth.

Live
818-778-3174

Hotel De Love, Rom/Com, R, 96 min. Aden Young, Simon Bossell. Dir: Craig Rosenberg. 2/7 LA, 2/14 exp

New Yorker Films
212-247-6110

A Mongolian Tale (China), Dra, NR, 100 min. Dir: Xie Fei. 2/14

Northern Arts
413-268-9301

Drunks, Dra, R, 88 min. Richard Lewis, Faye Dunaway. Dir: Peter Cohn.

October
212-539-4000

Lost Highway, Dra/Thr, R, 95 min. Bill Pullman, Patricia Arquette. Dir: David Lynch. 2/21

Roxie Releasing
415-431-3611

Cobra Verde (Germany), Dra, NR, 110 min. Klaus Kinski. Dir: Werner Herzog.
Scream of Stone (Germany), Adv, NR, 96 min.Dir: Werner Herzog.

Sony Classics
212-833-8851

SubUrbia, Com/Dra, 118 min. Jayce Bartok, Arnie Carey, Parker Posey. Dir: Richard Linklater. 2/7

Strand Releasing
310-395-5002

The Graduate (1967 reissue), Com/Dra, R, 105 min. Dustin Hoffman. Dir: Mike Nichols. 2/14
Message to Love, Doc, NR, 126 min.12/25 NY, 2/21 LA

Tara Releasing
415-454-5838

The Sadness of Sex, Com, NR, 86 min.Dir: Rupert Wainwright.

Theafilm
213-368-1778

A Chorus of Disapproval (1989 UK reissue), Com. Jeremy Irons, Anthony Hopkins. Dir: Michael Wimer.

MARCH

Artificial Eye

Mon Homme (France), Com/Dra, 98 min. Anouk Grinberg, Gerard Lanvin. Dir: Bertrand Blier. 3/7 NY

Artistic License

Sleepover, Dra, 88 min. Michael Albanese, Karl Giant. Dir: John Sullivan. 3/10 NY

East West Film Partners
212-594-3334

Good Luck, 98 min, Gregory Hines, Vincent D'Onofrio, Max Gail. Dir: Richard LaBrie. 3/7 ltd, 3/27 exp

Fine Line
212-649-4800

The Quiet Room, Dra, PG, 93 min. Chloe Ferguson, Celine O'Leary. Dir: Rolf de Heer. 3/21NY, 4/18 exp.
Crash, Dra, NC-17, 100 min. Holly Hunter, James Spader, Dir: David Cronenberg. 3/21

First Look

The Designated Mourner. Dra/Com. Mike Nichols, Miranda Richardson. Dir: David Hare.
A Brother's Kiss, Dra, Nick Chinlund, Michael Raynor. Dir: Seth Zvi Rosenfeld.

First Run

The Watermelon Woman, Com, 85 min. Guinevere Turner. Act/Dir: Cheyrl Dunye.

Fox Searchlight

Love and Other Catastrophes (Australia), Com, 79 min. Frances O'Connor, Alice Garner. Dir: Emma Kate Croghan. 3/28

Gramercy

Commandments, Dra. Courteney Cox, Aidan Quinn. Dir: Daniel Taplitz.

Live

Gentlemen Don't Eat Poets, Dra, R, 98 min. Sting, Theresa Russell. Dir: John Paul Davidson.
Dead Men Can't Dance, Act/Dra, 101 min. Michael Biehn. Dir: Steven Anderson. 3/7

Northern Arts

Hearts and Minds, Thr, R, 105 min. Danny Keogh, Patrick Shai. Dir: Ralph Ziman. 3/14
Gray's Anatomy, Com, NR, 80 min. Spalding Gray. Dir: Steven Soderbergh. 3/19

October

Female Perversions, Dra, R, 114 min. Tilda Swinton, Amy Madigan, Karen Sillas. Dir: Susan Streitfeld. 3/28

Orion
310-282-2948

Independence, Dra. Dean Cain, Drew Barrymore. Dir: Tamra Davis. 3/7
City of Industry, Dra. Timothy Hutton. Dir: John Irvin.

Phaedra Cinema
310-319-5346

Sudden Manhattan, Rom/Com, 85 min. Louise Lasser. Dir/Star: Adrienne Shelly. 3/7
Without Air, Dra, 88 min. Lauri Crook. Dir: Neil Abramson.

Seventh Art
213-845-1455

Salut Cousin (French Algeria), Com, 95 min. Gad Elmaleh, Mess Hattou. Dir: Merzak Allouache.

Sony Classics

Broken English, Dra, 91 min. Dir: Gregor Nicholas.

Strand

Boys Life 2, (shorts compilation), Com/Dra, 90 min. Dir: Four directors. 3/7

Tara Releasing

Mushrooms (Australia), Com, 93 min. Dir: Alan Madden.

Trimark
310-314-3040

Kama Sutra, Dra, 114 min. Sarita Choudhury. Dir: Mira Nair.
Underworld, Thr. Denis Leary, Joe Mantegna. Dir: Roger Christian.

APRIL

Cinema Village Features

Fetishes, Doc. Dir: Nick Broomfield.

CFP

Hollow Reed, Dra, 106 min. Martin Donovan, Ian Hart. Dir: Angela Pope. 4/18

Fine Line

Pink Flamingos, (1972 reissue), Divine. Dir: John Waters. 4/11
Roseanna's Grave, Com, PG-13, 99 min. Jean Reno, Mercedes Ruehl. Dir: Paul Weiland. 4/18
All Over Me, Dra, R, 90 min. Alison Folland. Dir: Alex Sichel. 4/25

Fox Searchlight

Paradise Road, Dra. Glenn Close, Frances McDormand. Dir: Bruce Beresford.

Goldwyn

Kissed, Dra, 80 min. Molly Parker, Peter Outerbridge. Dir: Lynne Stopkewich. 4/11

Live

The Winner, Thr. Rebecca de Mornay, Vincent D'Onofrio. Dir: Alex Cox.

New Yorker Films

Flamenco, Doc, 100 min. Dir: Carlos Saura. 4/4

Northern Arts

Schizopolis, Com, 99 min. Steven Soderbergh, Betsy Brantley. Dir: Steven Soderbergh.

October

Traveller, Crime/Dra. Bill Paxton, Mark Wahlberg. Dir: Jack Green.

Orion

Eight Heads in a Duffle Bag, Com/Dra, R. Joe Pesci, Carol Kane. Dir: Tom Schulman. 4/25

Phaedra Cinema

The Next Step, Dra, 90 min. Rick Negron. Dir: Christian Faber

Rhino Films
310-474-4778

Plump Fiction, Com, 85 min. Julie Brown, Sandra Bernhard. Dir: Bob Koherr.

BOXOFFICE Independent Feature Chart MARCH 1997

Shadow Distribution
207-872-5111

Mondo (French), Dra, 87 min. Philippe Petit. Dir: Tony Gatliff

Sony Classics

The Myth of Fingerprints, Dra. Noah Wyle. Dir: B. Freundlich.

Strand

Late Bloomers, Rom/Dra, 104 min. Dir: Julia and Gretchen Dyer.

Triumph
310-280-8059

Bliss, Rom/Dra. Terence Stamp, Craig Sheffer. Dir: Lance Young. 4/4

Zeitgeist
212-274-1989

Irma Vep (France), Com, NR, 98 min. Maggie Cheung. Dir: Olivier Assayas.

MAY

Artificial Eye

Le Bonheur Dans Lepres (France), Com, 102 min. Michel Serrault. Dir: Etienne Chatiliez. 5/16 NY

CFP

Guantanamera, Com, NR, 124 min. Dirs: Thomas Gutierrez Alea and Juan Carlos Tabio Rey. 5/16

Fine Line

Love Letter (Japan), Dra, 116 min. Dir: Shunji Iwai. 5/2 NY, 5/23 LA
Gummo. Dra. Chloe Sevigny. Dir: Harmony Korine. 5/16
Love! Valor! Compassion! Dra. Jason Alexander, John Glover. Dir: Joe Mantello. 5/16

First Run

Brothers in Trouble, Dra, 102 min. Dir: Udayan Prasad. 5/14

Fox Searchlight

Intimate Relations, Dra, 102 min. Julie Walters, Rupert Graves. Dir: Philip Goodhew. 5/9 ltd.

Goldwyn

Paperback Romance (formerly Lucky Break), Rom/Com. Anthony LaPaglia. Dir: Ben Lewin.

New Yorker Films

La Promesse, Dra, NR, 93 min. Dirs: Jean-Pierre Gardenne, Luc Gardenne. 5/23

Milestone Film & Video
212-865-7449

Woman in the Dunes (Japan, 1964 reissue), 72 min. Dir: Hiroshi Teshigahara.
Antonio Gaudi (Japan, 1985 rerelease), Dir: Hiroshi Teshigahara

Strand

Contempt (1963 reissue), Dra/Com, 103 min. Brigitte Bardot. Dir: Jean-Luc Godard.
Timothy Leary's Dead, Doc, 80 min. Dir: Paul Davids.

Triumph

Truth or Consequences, Sus, Kevin Pollack. Dir/Star: Kiefer Sutherland. 5/2
Masterminds, 5/30

JUNE

CFP

The Pillow Book, Dra, 126 min. Vivian Wu, Ewan McGregor. Dir: Peter Greenaway. 6/6

Fine Line

Winter Guest. Emma Thompson. Dir: Alan Rickman. 6/18

First Look

Different For Girls, Rom/Com. Rupert Graves. Dir: Richard Spence.

Kino Intl.
212-629-6880

M (1931 German re-issue), Dra. Peter Lorre. Dir: Fritz Lang. 6/27

New Yorker Films

Deep Crimson, Dra, NR, 114 min. Dir: Arturo Ripstein. 6/20
Gabbeh, Dra, 75 min. Dir: Mohsen Makhmalbas

Orion

Ulee's Gold, Dra. Peter Fonda. Dir: Victor Nunez.

Strand

The Tit and the Moon, Com, 92 min. Dir: Bigas Lunas.
La Sentinelle.(France), Thr, 144 min. Emmanuel Salinger. Dir: Arnaud Desplechin.

FORTHCOMING

Arrow
212-258-2200

Breathing Room, Rom/Com, 90 min. Dan Futterman. Dir: John Sherman. 11/8

Cabin Fever
203-622-3449

The Elevator, Com. Martin Landau, Martin Sheen.
The Secret Agent Club, Act. Hulk Hogan, Barry Bostwick.
Skeletons, Hor. Dir: Ken Russell.

CFP

Bandwagon, Com/Mus, NR, 103 min. Kevin Corrigna, Lee Holmes. Dir: John Schultz. 4/18

Cinema Parallel

To Have (Or Not), Dra, NR, 93 min. Dir. Laetitia Masson.

Dove

Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy, Com/SF, 92 min. Dir: Neil Davies.
Inside the Goldmine, Thr, 92 min. Josh Evans, Alicia Tully Jensen. Dir: Josh Evans.

Dreamworks SKG
818-733-7000

El Dorado: City of Gold, Ani. Dir: Will Finn.
Mousehunt, Com/Ani. Nathan Lane, Lee Evans. Dir: Gore Virbinsky.
The Peacemaker, Act/Adv. George Clooney, Nicole Kidman. Dir: Mimi Leder. Fall.
The Prince of Egypt, Ani.
Amistad, (formerly Mutiny) His/Dra, Dir: Steven Spielberg.
Blue Vision, Dir: Neil Jordan.

Fine Line

nowhere, James Duval, Traci Lords. Dir: Gregg Araki. 8/22
Head Above Water, Dra/Com, PG-13, 92 min. Harvey Keitel, Cameron Diaz. Dir: Jim Wilson.
The Tears of Julian Po. Christian Slater, Robin Tunney.

First Look

This is the Sea, Rom/Dra. Richard Harris, Gabriel Byrne. Dir: Mary McGuckian. Sum
Slaves to the Underground, Dra, 92 min. Marisa Ryan, Jason Bortz. Dir: Kristine Peterson. Sum Mrs. Dalloway, Dra. Vanessa Redgrave. Dir: Marleen Gorris.

First Run

Hamsun. Max Von Sydow. Dir: Jan Troell
Six O'Clock News. Dir: Ross McElwee.
Project Grizzly. Dir: Peter Lynch.

Fox Searchlight

Ice Storm, Dra. Kevin Kline, Joan Allen, Sigourney Weaver. Dir: Ang Lee. Fall.
Cousin Bette, Dra. Jessica Lange, Elisabeth Shue, Bob Hoskins. Dir: Des McAnuff. Fall.

Goldwyn

Napolean, Ani, G, 82 min. Voices: Adam Wylie, Bronson Pinchot. 8/97
The Big Red. Oct
Rough Magic, Rom/Adv, 104 min. Bridget Fonda, Russell Crowe. Dir: Clare Peploe.

Gramercy

Twin Town, Com/Thr. Rhys Ifans, Llyr Evans. Dir: Kevin Allen. 7/97
How To Be a Player, Com. Bill Belamy. Dir: Lionel Martin. 8/97
The Matchmaker, Com. Jeanene Garafalo. Dir: Mark Joffe. 9/97
Dr. Bean, Com. Rowan Atkinson.
The Big Lebowski. Jeff Bridges, John Goodman, Steve Buscemi. Dirs: Joel and Ethan Coen. 11/97

Kit Parker
800-538-5838

Day For Night (1973 French reissue), Dra, PG, 120 min. Dir: Francois Truffaut.
Death in Venice (1971 Italian reissue), Dra, PG, 130 min. Dirk Bogarde. Dir: Luchino Visconti.

Live

No Way Home, Dra. Tim Roth. Dir: Buddy Gioviazzo. 9/97
Critical Care, Dra/Thr. James Spader, Albert Brooks. Dir: Sydney Lumet. 10/97
Boys Night Out, Thr. Christopher Walken, Sean Patrick Flannery. Dir: Peter O'Fallow. 11/97
Wishmaster, Hor. Dir: Robert Kurtzman.

Movieworld Ent.
510-244-5590

The Killing Kind, Dra. Kirk Harris.
The Lost Woman, SF, Jennifer Rubin.

New Yorker Films

Forever Mozart, Dra, NR, 84 min. Madeleine Assas. Dir: Jean-Luc Godard.

October

Kicked in the Head. Linda Fiorentino, Lili Taylor.
Career Girls, Dra. Catrin Cartlidge. Dir: Mike Lee.

Orion

This World, Then the Fireworks, Dra. Billy Zane, Gina Gershon. Dir: Michael Oblowitz. Sum
Gang Related, Dra, R. Tupac Shakur, Jim Belushi. Dir: Jim Kous. 9/10
The Locust, Dra. Kate Capshaw, Ashley Judd. Dir: John Patrick Kelley. 9/97
Sugar Daddy, Dra. 11/97

Rhino Films

Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas, Dra. Johnny Depp. Dir: Alex Cox.

Shadow Distribution

La Petite Apocalypse (French), Com/Dra, 110 min. Pierre Arditi. Dir: Costa-Gavras.

Sony Classics

Call Me Victor (France), Com, PG, 100 min. Jeanne Moreau. Dir: Guy Jacques.

Strand

Nights of Cabiria (1957 Italian reissue), Dra, 110 min. Giulietta Masina. Dir: Federico Fellini. 8/97
Self-Made Hero (France). Fall
Full Speed, Dra. Dir: Gael Murel.

Trimark
310-314-3040

Warrior of Waverly Street, SF. Dir: Manny Coto. Spring
Nothing Personal, Dra, R. John Lynch. Dir: Thaddeus O'Sullivan.
Ripe, Dra. Dir: Mo Ogrodnik.
Sprung, Com., Dir/Star: Rusty Cundieff. Spring
Eve's Bayou, Dra. Samuel L. Jackson, Lynn Whitfield. Dir: Kasi Lemmons. Fall
Chairman of the Board, Com. Carrot Top. Fall

Triumph

Smart Alec, Act/Com. Patrick Stewart, Vincent Kartheiser, Brenda Fricker. Dir: Roger Christian. Spr/97
The Assignment (formerly Jackal). Act. Aidan Quinn, Ben Kingsley. Dir: Christian Duguay. 9/97

THE BOXOFFICE HOME RELEASE CHART

BOXOFFICE

MARCH 1997

HOME VIDEO RELEASE DATE	TITLE	BOXOFFICE GROSS	SCREENS	THEATRICAL RELEASE	THEATRICAL/VIDEO DISTRIBUTOR
March 4	Courage Under Fire	$59,000,000	2,001	July 12	Fox
March 4	Hunchback of Notre Dame	$100,200,000	2,835	June 21	Buena Vista/Walt Disney
March 4	That Thing You Do!	$25,700,000+	1,887	October 4	Fox
March 11	Harriet the Spy	$26,600,000	1,876	July 10	Paramount
March 11	Maximum Risk	$14,100,000	2,358	September 13	Columbia/Columbia TriStar
March 18	American Buffalo	$600,000	73	September 13	Goldwyn/Evergreen
March 18	Basquiat	$3,000,000	109	August 9	Buena Vista/Miramax
March 18	First Wives Club	$105,000,000+	2,406	September 20	Paramount
March 18	The Long Kiss Goodnight	$33,300,000+	2,404	October 11	New Line
March 18	Supercop	$16,300,000	1,469	July 26	Buena Vista/Miramax
March 18	Walking and Talking	$1,300,000	60	July 17	Buena Vista/Miramax
March 25	Flirting With Disaster	$14,700,000	969	March 8	Buena Vista/Miramax
April 22	Set It Off	$34,900,000+	1,016	November 6	New Line
April	The Associate	$12,600,000+	1,781	October 25	Buena Vista/Hollywood
April	Big Night	$11,500,000+	366	September 20	MGM/UA
April	Boogie	$3,800,000	262	October 4	Gramercy/PolyGram
April	Bulletproof	$21,200,000	2,242	September 6	MCA/Universal
April	The Chamber	$14,300,000	2,032	October 11	MCA/Universal

April 22	Set It Off	$24,000,000+	1,775	October 25	New Line
April	The Associate	$12,600,000+	1,781	October 25	Buena Vista/Hollywood
April	Big Night	$11,500,000+	366	September 20	MGM/UA
April	Bound	$3,800,000	262	October 4	Gramercy/PolyGram
April	Bulletproof	$21,200,000	2,242	September 6	MCA/Universal
April	The Chamber	$14,300,000	2,032	October 11	MCA/Universal
April	Emma	$22,000,000	585	August 2	Buena Vista/Miramax
April	Extreme Measures	$17,300,000	2,298	September 27	Columbia/Columbia TriStar
April	Get On the Bus	$5,700,000	1,207	October 16	Columbia/Columbia TriStar
April	The Glimmer Man	$20,300,000	2,236	October 4	Warner Bros.
April	Lone Star	$12,100,000	189	June 21	Sony Classics
April	Looking For Richard	$1,300,000	81	October 11	Fox
April	Michael Collins	$10,800,000	878	October 11	Warner Bros.
April	Rich Man's Wife	$8,500,000	1009	September 13	Buena Vista/Hollywood
April	Sleepers	$52,400,000	2,080	October 18	Warner Bros.
April	Space Jam	$86,000,000+	2,650	November 15	Warner Bros.
May	D3: The Mighty Ducks	$22,700,000+	2,060	October 4	Buena Vista/Walt Disney
May	Ghost and the Darkness	$37,700,000	2,202	October 11	Paramount
May	High School High	$20,900,000+	2,146	October 25	Fox
May	Mars Attacks!	$35,500,000+	1,955	December 13	Warner Bros.
May	The Mirror Has Two Faces	$40,800,000+	2,489	November 15	TriStar/Columbia TriStar
May	Ransom	$130,700,000+	2,768	November 8	Buena Vista/Touchstone
May	Romeo + Juliet	$45,300,000	1,276	November 1	Fox
May	Stephen King's Thinner	$14,800,000	2,009	October 25	Paramount
May	To Gillian on Her 37th Birthday	$4,100,000	5	October 18	Triumph
June	101 Dalmatians	$126,100,000+	2,901	November 27	Buena Vista/Walt Disney
June	Michael	$63,700,000+	2,141	December 25	New Line
June	The Preacher's Wife	$42,100,000+	2,048	December 13	Buena Vista/Hollywood

Compiled by BOXOFFICE MAGAZINE. Numbers for Boxoffice Gross represent total domestic boxoffice grosses to the nearest $100,000; + signs indicate that films remain in theatrical release. Number of Screens indicates the maximum number of screens in widest, simultaneous release. Entries in the Theatrical/Video Distributor column list two names when the video releasing company is different from (or releases through a subsidiary different from) the theatrical distributor. Exact day-and-date specific entries for Home Video Release are confirmed; in all other cases, the month indicated for a release is forecast by the editors of BOXOFFICE. BOXOFFICE is not liable for errors or omissions in the chart.

ADVERTISER INDEX

Automaticket/Hurley Screen	35
Cargill Foods	C-3
Cinema Supply Co.	56
Cinemeccanica U.S.	37
Cinetech, Inc.	35
Coca-Cola Co.	8, 9
Dolby Labs	C-2
Electronic Creations Inc.	57
Equipment, Etc.	31
Hadden Theatre Supply	37
International Cinema Equipment	31
Maroevich, O'Shea & Coghlan	57
Moviefone Inc.	21
National Cinema Service	15
National Cinema Supply Co.	12
Ready Theatre Systems	35
Sensible Cinema Software	57
Smart Theatre Systems	13, C-4

complete line of . . .
Concession, Snack Bar and Janitorial Supplies
plus Projection and theatre equipment also parts
For The Best In Service . . . Give Us a Call
CINEMA SUPPLY COMPANY, INC.
P.O. BOX 148, MILLERSBURG, PA. 17061
TELEPHONE: (717) 692-4744 1-800-437-5505
Response No. 96

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

RATES: $1.00 per word, minimum $25, $15 extra for box number assignment. Send copy with check to BOXOFFICE, P.O. Box 25485, Chicago, IL 60625, at least 60 days prior to publication.
BOX NUMBER ADS: Reply to ads with box numbers by writing to BOXOFFICE, P.O. Box 25485, Chicago, IL 60625; put ad box number on letter and in lower-left corner of your envelope. Please use # 10 envelopes or smaller for your replies.

HELP WANTED

AUDIO/VIDEO/FILM TECHNICIAN OR TRAINEE: Film service and electronics company seeks experienced, versatile technician for fast-paced environment. Must be a team player and well-organized, with excellent people and follow-through skills. Electronic experience a plus. Please fax cover letter and resume to: (212) 586-5069.

Expanding national circuit is looking for experienced multiplex managers and assistant managers. Immediate opportunities in the Northeast, South-Central and West Coast regions. Send resume/references and salary requirements to: Silver Cinemas Inc., c/o Ron Reid, 17103 Preston Rd., Suite 190, LB 120, Dallas, Texas 75248.

LET THE GOVERNMENT FINANCE your new or existing small business. Grants/loans to $500,000. Free recorded message: (707) 448-0201. (RN7)

Manager and Management Trainee positions are available. We are people-oriented and believe that excellent customer service and state-of-the-art technology are the keys to success in the movie theatre/swap meet industry. We offer a wide variety of benefits, competitive salaries and opportunities for professional growth. Join our team as we expand in California, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico, Utah and beyond. If you are looking for growth and opportunity, have the ability to prepare, monitor and achieve budgetary goals, and have the enthusiasm and the ability to manage/motivate people, now is the time to let us hear from you! Theatre/Swap or other management experience required and some college helpful. Send your resume and salary requirements to Century Theatres and Swaps, Attn: Human Resources—Job Code MGR1096, 150 Golden Gate Ave., San Francisco, CA 94102. No faxes or phone calls please.

MANAGERS AND ASSISTANT MANAGERS. For our new theatres in metropolitan Chicago and throughout Michigan, Indiana and Illinois. Candidates should have experience in multiplex theatres, retail or the fast food industry. While a college degree is preferred, it is not necessary. We offer competitive salaries, concession commissions, quarterly bonus programs and opportunities for advancement. Our benefits include BCBS with dental, optical and prescription coverage, paid vactions, paid holidays, and 401K plan. We will pay moving expenses to relocate managers. No phone calls please, but send your resume, references and salary requirements in confidence to: William T. McMannis, Goodrich Quality Theatres Inc., 4417 Broadmoor SE, Kentwood, MI 49512.

NATIONAL AMUSEMENTS INC. is looking for experienced managers and manager trainees for positions throughout the circuit. Must be willing to relocate. Solid growth potential. Good benefits and salary package. Please mail resume to: Operations Department, National Amusements Inc., P.O. Box 9126, Dedham, MA 02027-9126.

Plitt Amusement Co. of WA is in need of a few good multiplex managers who are well-acquainted with projection and concession merchandising. If you would like to live and work in the beautiful Northwest, send your resume and salary history to: Sam Plitt, c/o Plitt Amusement Co., P.O. Box 2339, Oak Harbor, WA 98277.

Regal Cinemas Inc. has opportunities available for experienced multiplex managers and assistant managers in the southern and eastern areas of the country. Individuals must be self-starters and possess the leadership qualities needed to thrive within an aggressively expanding circuit. Salary commensurate with experience plus concession commission and benefits. Replies held in strictest confidence. Send resume and references to: Regal Cinemas, 7132 Commercial Park Drive, Knoxville, TN 37918, Attention: Jan Frazee.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE

ACOUSTIC SOUND PANELS & CUSTOM WALL DRAPERIES available in flameproofed colors and fabrics, artistic or plain. CINEMA CONSULTANTS & SERVICES INTERNATIONAL INC., P.O. Box 9672, Pittsburgh, PA 15226. Phone (412) 343-3900; Fax (412) 343-2992.

BURLAP WALL COVERING DRAPES: $2.05 per yard, flame retardant. Quantity discounts. Nurse & Co., Millbury Rd., Oxford, MA 01540 (508) 832-4295.

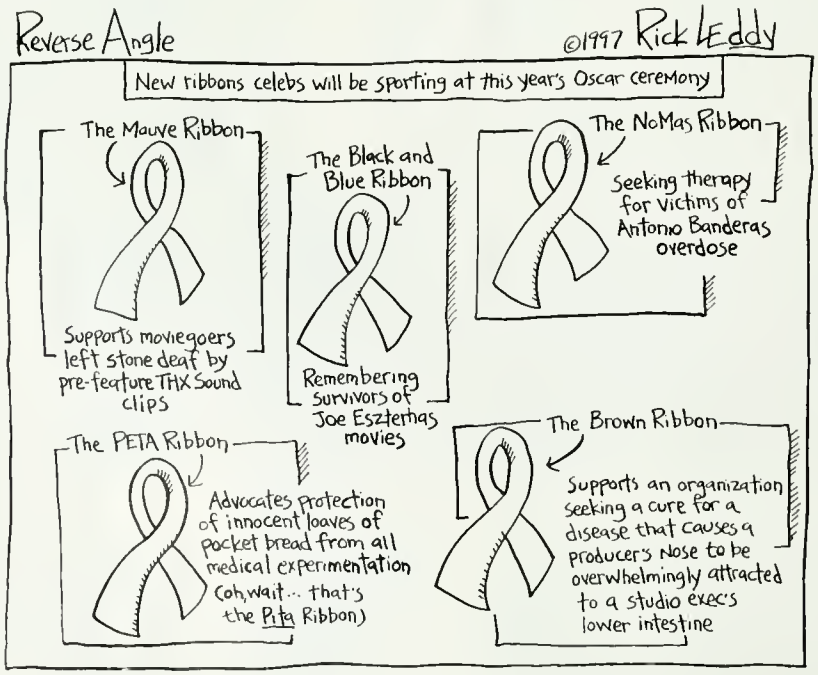
COMPLETE THEATRE EQUIPMENT: (New, Used or Rebuilt) Century SA, R#, RCA 9030, 1040, 1050 Platters: 2 and 5 Tier, Xenon Systems 1000-4000 Watt, Sound Systems mono and stereo, automations, ticket machines, curtain motors, electric rewinds, lenses, large screen video projectors. Plenty of used chairs. PROFESSIONAL SERVICE AND INSTALLATION AVAILABLE DOLBY CERTIFIED. Call Bill Younger, Cinema Equipment, Inc., 1375 N.W. 97th Ave., Suite 14, Miami, FL 33172. Phone (305) 594-0570. Fax (305) 592-6970. 1-800-848-8886.

CUPHOLDER ARMREST. "State of the art." Call Cy Young Industries Inc. 800-729-2610.

MICRO-FM™ STEREO RADIO Sound Systems for Drive-In Theatres. Meets FCC part 15. Static free. Available soon: low cost Micro-FM-jr. For the hearing impaired. Call or write: AUDIO VISUAL SYSTEMS & ENG., 320 St. Louis Ave., Woonsocket, RI 02895. Phone (401) 767-2080; Fax (401) 767-2081.

OPTICAL SERVICES! CUSTOM OPTICAL OR GLASS NEEDS? Need anti-reflective porthole glass? We can help! Call ULTRAFLAT, 20306 Sherman Way, Winnetka, CA 91306, (818) 884-0184 http://www.cris.com/~Ultrallt

PATRON TRAY. Fits into cupholder armrest. Call Cy Young Industries Inc. at 800-729-2610.



Rebuilt Century SA & R3 projector/soundhead $4250. Simplex XL $4450. Xenon lamps, platters, many lenses, excellent line of other used projection and sound equipment. TANKERSLY ENTERPRISES, P.O. Box 2039, Denver, CO 80201. Phone (303) 298-8077; fax (303) 296-4080.

PURCHASE THE MOST WIDELY USED COMPUTERIZED ticketing and concession systems for as low as $139 per month. Complete systems start at $2,340. Includes free technical support, installation, and warranty. System Operating Solutions. Call (800) 434-3098.

TABLET TRAYS. Fits into all cupholder armrests. Used in multi-purpose theatres, bingo, etc. Call Cy Young Industries Inc. at 800-729-2610.

TELEPHONE ANSWERING EQUIPMENT. All major brands of reliable, heavy-duty tape announcers and digital announcers are available at discounted prices. Please call Jim at Answering Machine Specialty, (800) 222-7773.

TICKET MACHINES: 5-unit oldest style (one motor drives all), good for parts. AW-2 parts: dual motors; 52" platter-discs; modules; trees with roller/arms. Submit offer for used items.

Also center feed-out assemblies, new and used for Super-Platter. WE REBUILD INTERMITTENTS: REPAIR/EXCHANGE AVAILABLE! Cinema Equipment Sales, (714) 470-0298, fax (714) 470-0835.

Two Holmes projectors on stands with 50-amp lamps, also 3 spares and Mazda lamps. 3 Super Simplex. RCA tube amplifiers. 2 Simplex sound heads. Wanted 3000-watt lamp with single-phase power supply, also platters. Contact Harold Owen. Box 223, Seymour, MO 65746, or phone (417) 935-2232.

USED PROJECTION EQUIPMENT: Replacement equipment, single or multi booths available. Please call if you are purchasing or selling. CINEMA CONSULTANTS & SERVICES INTERNATIONAL INC., P.O. Box 9672, Pittsburgh, PA 15226. Phone (412) 343-3900, Fax (412) 343-2992.

USED PROJECTION/SOUND EQUIPMENT. Century SA—2 pcs @ $2,000 each; Cinemeccanica V8R—2 pcs @ $3,500 each; Simplex XL-ST gates—2 pcs @ $2,000 each. Ship anywhere. Phone (818) 444-7090; fax (818) 444-6863.

EQUIPMENT WANTED

THEATRE EQUIPMENT WANTED: Theatre equipment from Florida; Atlanta, Georgia; and Virginia Indoor and twins and drive-in area that closed. Interested in buying the used equipment or re-opening theatre. Send information about drive-in theatres. Will the man that contacted me about theatre in Alberta, Canada please re-contact me (lost your phone number) at. James LaLonde, 190 Defender Ave., Lake City, FL 32055.

VINTAGE TUBE TYPE AMPS, woofers, drivers, horns, parts, from Western Electric, Westrex, Altec, Jensen, JBL, EV, Tannoy, McIntosh, Marantz. Phone David at (818) 441-3942. P.O. Box 80371, San Marino, CA 91118-8371.

WANTED DEAD OR ALIVE: We will purchase Century projectors or soundheads, new or old, complete or incomplete, for cash. Also interested in XL and SH-1000. Call (502) 499-0050. Fax (502) 499-0052, Hadden Theatre Supply Co., attn. Louis.

We will buy or trade for used/new equipment on any projector/soundhead/platter/lamphouse/console/speakers/lens and concession equipment. We can remove or pick up anywhere in the U.S. or overseas. Call us at (303) 298-8077 or fax (303) 296-4080. Tankersley Enterprises, P.O. Box 2039, Denver, CO 80201.

WE BUY TICKETING AND CONCESSION SYSTEMS! CALL (360) 805-9396.

THEATRES FOR SALE/LEASE

COUNT YOUR MONEY ON THE BEACH!! Award-winning Florida Gulf Coast theatre now for sale. Serving an affluent, year-round, niche market, theatre has virtually no competition. An area landmark for over 50 years, located on valuable beach area property, theatre is a mix of classic architecture and backstage modernization. Call or fax now for fact sheet. Ask for Ms. Cruz at (813) 360-6697, or fax (813) 360-5154.

LEWISBURG, WEST VIRGINIA—470-seat, single-screen, plus balcony dining, three apartments, two business spaces and small restaurant included. Located in historic mountain town. $375,000. Call Frank Hardy, Path Finders Real Estate. Phone (304) 645-2000; Fax (304) 645-2272.

PRICE REDUCED! NY RESORT AREA ART DECO MOVIE THEATRE. Continuous operation since 1938. Seasonal operation could be expanded. Rehabbed 1985. Modern equipment. Seats 315. Two retail spaces, currently rented. Ideal for owner/operator seeking supplemental income. $155,000. Owner financing. Call (518) 624-4812.

THEATRES WANTED

Indoor/Drive-In theatre wanted to purchase/lease in Ohio or adjacent states. P.O. Box 771092, Lakewood, OH 44107.

Several of our clients are seeking to buy or lease multi-screen theatres in the eastern U.S. Call toll free: Theatre Confections Inc., (888) 271-0858.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

NEED PARTNER/INVESTOR. Best location—movie theatre owner. Call (510) 674-9623.

DRIVE-IN CONSTRUCTION

DRIVE-IN SCREEN TOWERS Since 1945 Selby Products, Inc., P.O. Box 267, Richfield, Ohio 44286 (216) 659-6631, 800-647-6224.

SCREEN TOWERS INTERNATIONAL New, used, transplanted, complete tower service. Box 399, Rogers, TX 76569. Phone: 800-642-3591.

THEATRE SEATING

"ALL AMERICAN SEATING" by the EXPERTS! Used seats of quality. Various makes, American Bodiform and Stellars from $12.50 to $32.50. Irwins from $12.50 to $30.00. Heywood & Massey rockers from $25.00. Full rebuilding available. New Hussey chairs from $70.00. All types theatre projection and sound equipment. New and used. We ship and install all makes. Try us! We sell no Junk! TANKERSLEY ENTERPRISES P.O. BOX 2039, 2100 Stout Street, Denver, CO 80201 Phone: 303-298-8077 Fax: 303-296-4080.

ALLSTATE SEATING is a company that is specializing in refurbishing, complete painting, molded foam, tailor-made seat covers, installations, removals. Please call for pricing and spare parts for all types of theatre seating. Boston, MA. Phone (617) 268-2221, FAX (617) 268-7011.

"BOOSTER B. SAURUS" Child booster seats. Call Cy Young Industries Inc. at 800-729-2610.

ON-SITE UPHOLSTERY and replacement covers. Parts available for many chairs. Our "Bakers Dozen" gives you 13 covers for the cost of 12. Nationwide service. Free samples made up. Call Complete Industries for pricing (800) 252-6837.

SEAT AND BACK COVERS: Most fabrics in stock. Molded cushions. Cy Young Industries Inc., 800-729-2610.

SEATS CLEANED on site, $1.56-$2.36 per seat (coast to coast). Call (800) 879-2311, 24 hours, for brochure and information. The Carpet Cleaner, P.O. Box 154, Osceola, MO 64776.

USED AUDITORIUM CHAIRS: Choose from a large selection of different makes and models and colors, American Stellars and Irwin Citations competitively priced, shipped and installed. ACOUSTIC SOUND PANELS AND CUSTOM WALL DRAPERIES available in flameproofed colors and fabrics, artistic or plain. CINEMA CONSULTANTS & SERVICES INTERNATIONAL, Inc. P.O. Box 9672, Pittsburgh, PA. 15226. Phone (412) 343-3900, Fax (412) 343-2992.

USED SEATS FOR SALE: 400+ American Highback Desk Rockers. Good condition, blue and red in color. Located in Hot Springs and Harrison, Arkansas. Purchaser responsible for transporting Asking $45 per seat. Call Craig Hyerdall at (501) 624-1700.

SERVICES

ALTEC, JBL, E.V. SPEAKER RECONING: Factory authorized service, fast turnaround. We stock diaphragms for popular theatre drivers. Cardinal Sound & Motion Picture Systems Inc. Dealer inquiries welcome. (301) 595-8811.

FRONT END INSTALLATION with frames, motors and masking tracks. Call Cy Young Industries Inc. 800-729-2610.

SOUND/DRAPING FABRICS IN STOCK. All new selection of fabrics. Installation on brackets available, or sewn in pleated drapes. Call Cy Young Industries Inc., 800-729-2610.

SOUNDFOLDS & CURTAINS cleaned and fireproofed on site $.20-$.40 per hung sq. ft. (coast to coast). Call (800) 879-2311, 24 hours, for brochure and information. The Carpet Cleaner, P.O. Box 154, Osceola, MO 64776.

ULTRAFLAT. REFLECTORS: Why buy new when you can have it restored? "Hopeless" cases restored to brightness. Call your dealer or ULTRAFLAT, 20306 Sherman Way, Winnetka, CA 91306. (818) 884-0184. http://www.cns.com~Ultraflt

WE REPAIR AND SUPPORT the most widely used ticketing and concession systems. Our prices are approximately 50% less than our competitors. Our customers include 30% of the top 50 circuits and many independents. Ask about our thermal printer service. System Operating Solutions. (800) 434-3098.

"WHILE THE THEATRE SLEEPS" On-site reupholstery Top fabrics, molded seat cushions and "State of the Art" Cy Young cupholders. Call Cy Young Industries Inc., 800-729-2610.

MISCELLANEOUS

8 to 35MM EDUCATIONAL, Adult, Exploitation—all subjects. Features, shorts. Buy/sell any size collection. Archives, Box 10672, Oakland, CA 94610. Phone/fax 510-268-0811.

MOVIE POSTERS WANTED: HIGHEST PRICES PAID FOR LOBBY CARDS, 1-, 3- AND 6-SHEETS, WINDOW CARDS, BANNERS, GLASS SLIDES. Dwight Cleveland, P.O. Box 10922, Chicago, IL 60610-0922. (312) 525-9152 or fax (312) 525-2969.

Sensible Cinema Software®

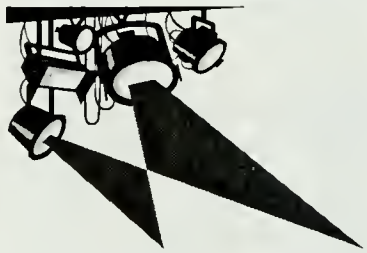
Ticketing System $399

Free Demo Disk • (615) 790-7797 • Internet ↓

http://www.nashville.com/scs/scs.html

Response No. 135

Box Office '97



Ticketing & More...

Windows '95 Based Microsoft Access Database
Concession Sales & Inventory
State of the Art - Reliable
18 Years Experience
Custom Development
Satisfaction Guaranteed

Electronic Creations, Inc.

Ph (619) 480-1002 Fax (619) 480-6830

Response No. 203

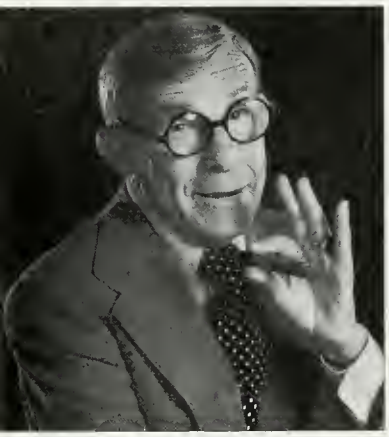
ENTERTAINMENT INSURANCE

FOR

THEATRES
•
CONCESSIONAIRES
•
PRODUCERS

MAROEVICH O'SHEA & COGHLAN
INSURANCE BROKERS
425 MARKET STREET, 10TH FLOOR
SAN FRANCISCO, CA 94105

(800)951-0600
(415)957-0600
FAX(415)957-0577
HTTP://WWW.MAROEVICH.COM

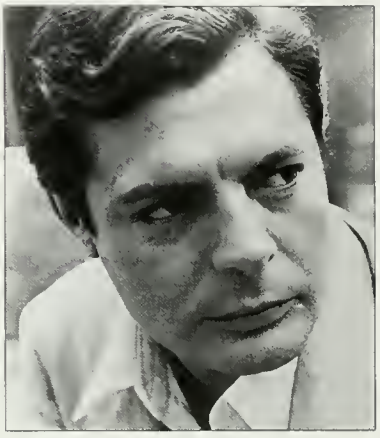


Response No. 70

MOVIE POSTERS WANTED! I pay top dollar for vintage material. John Hazelton, 235 Horton Highway, Mineola, NY 11501. Call toll-free 1-800-CAGNEY4.

MOVIE POSTERS WANTED: No collection too large or too small! Immediate cash payments! Top prices for vintage material! Call toll free: 1-800-213-8431.

ULTRACLEAN!! REFLECTOR SCALE REMOVER. This will remove tutt scaling on xenon reflectors. $24.95 plus $4.50 S/H. ULTRAFLAT, 20306 Sherman Way, Winnetka, CA 91306. (818) 884-0184 http://www.cris.com~Ultraflt



The Big Picture

We lost some of the greats in 1996—or rather, some much-loved screen immortals graduated to the next level. Since our Boxoffice Barometer is dedicated to looking back at the year just passed, we thought we'd use this space to commemorate a few fallen comrades: (Clockwise from upper left:) George Burns, comic genius; Gene Kelly, hoofer extraordinaire; Claudette Colbert, showing her good side; Greer Garson, the epitome of English pluck; Ben Johnson, cowboy's cowboy; Juliet Prowse, can-can girl; Dorothy Lamour, queen of the sarong. (Center:) The indescribable greatness that was Marcello Mastroianni.

In as few words as possible: gone, but not forgotten. Their achievements live, but we'll miss them anyhow.—Ray Greene

OUR POPCORN'S READY FOR AN OIL CHANGE.

Introducing PopWise® popping oil the only oil that gives you more nutritionally attractive popcorn plus incredible flavor and aroma appeal and excellent performance PopWise has all the qualities you need to satisfy your customers, increase popcorn sales and boost your bottom line.

Nutritional Appeal

- Less than 10% saturated fat
- Not hydrogenated
- Zero cholesterol

Customer Appeal

- Classic theater popcorn flavo
- Excellent buttery aroma

Performance Appeal

- Easy to handle
- Keeps kettle cleaner longer
- Extends popcorn holding tim
- Safer operation
- Pump line won't clog

ISN'T IT TIME YOU GOT WISE?
Contact your distributor or call 1-800-328-3534 for more information.

POPWISE®
POPPING OIL
WE'RE MAKING POPCORN GOOD AGAIN!®

A CARGILL FOODS produc

Response No. 52

©1995 Cargill, In

OVER FEATURED

under priced!

A New Companion to the THX approved Panastereo CSP4235 cinema stere

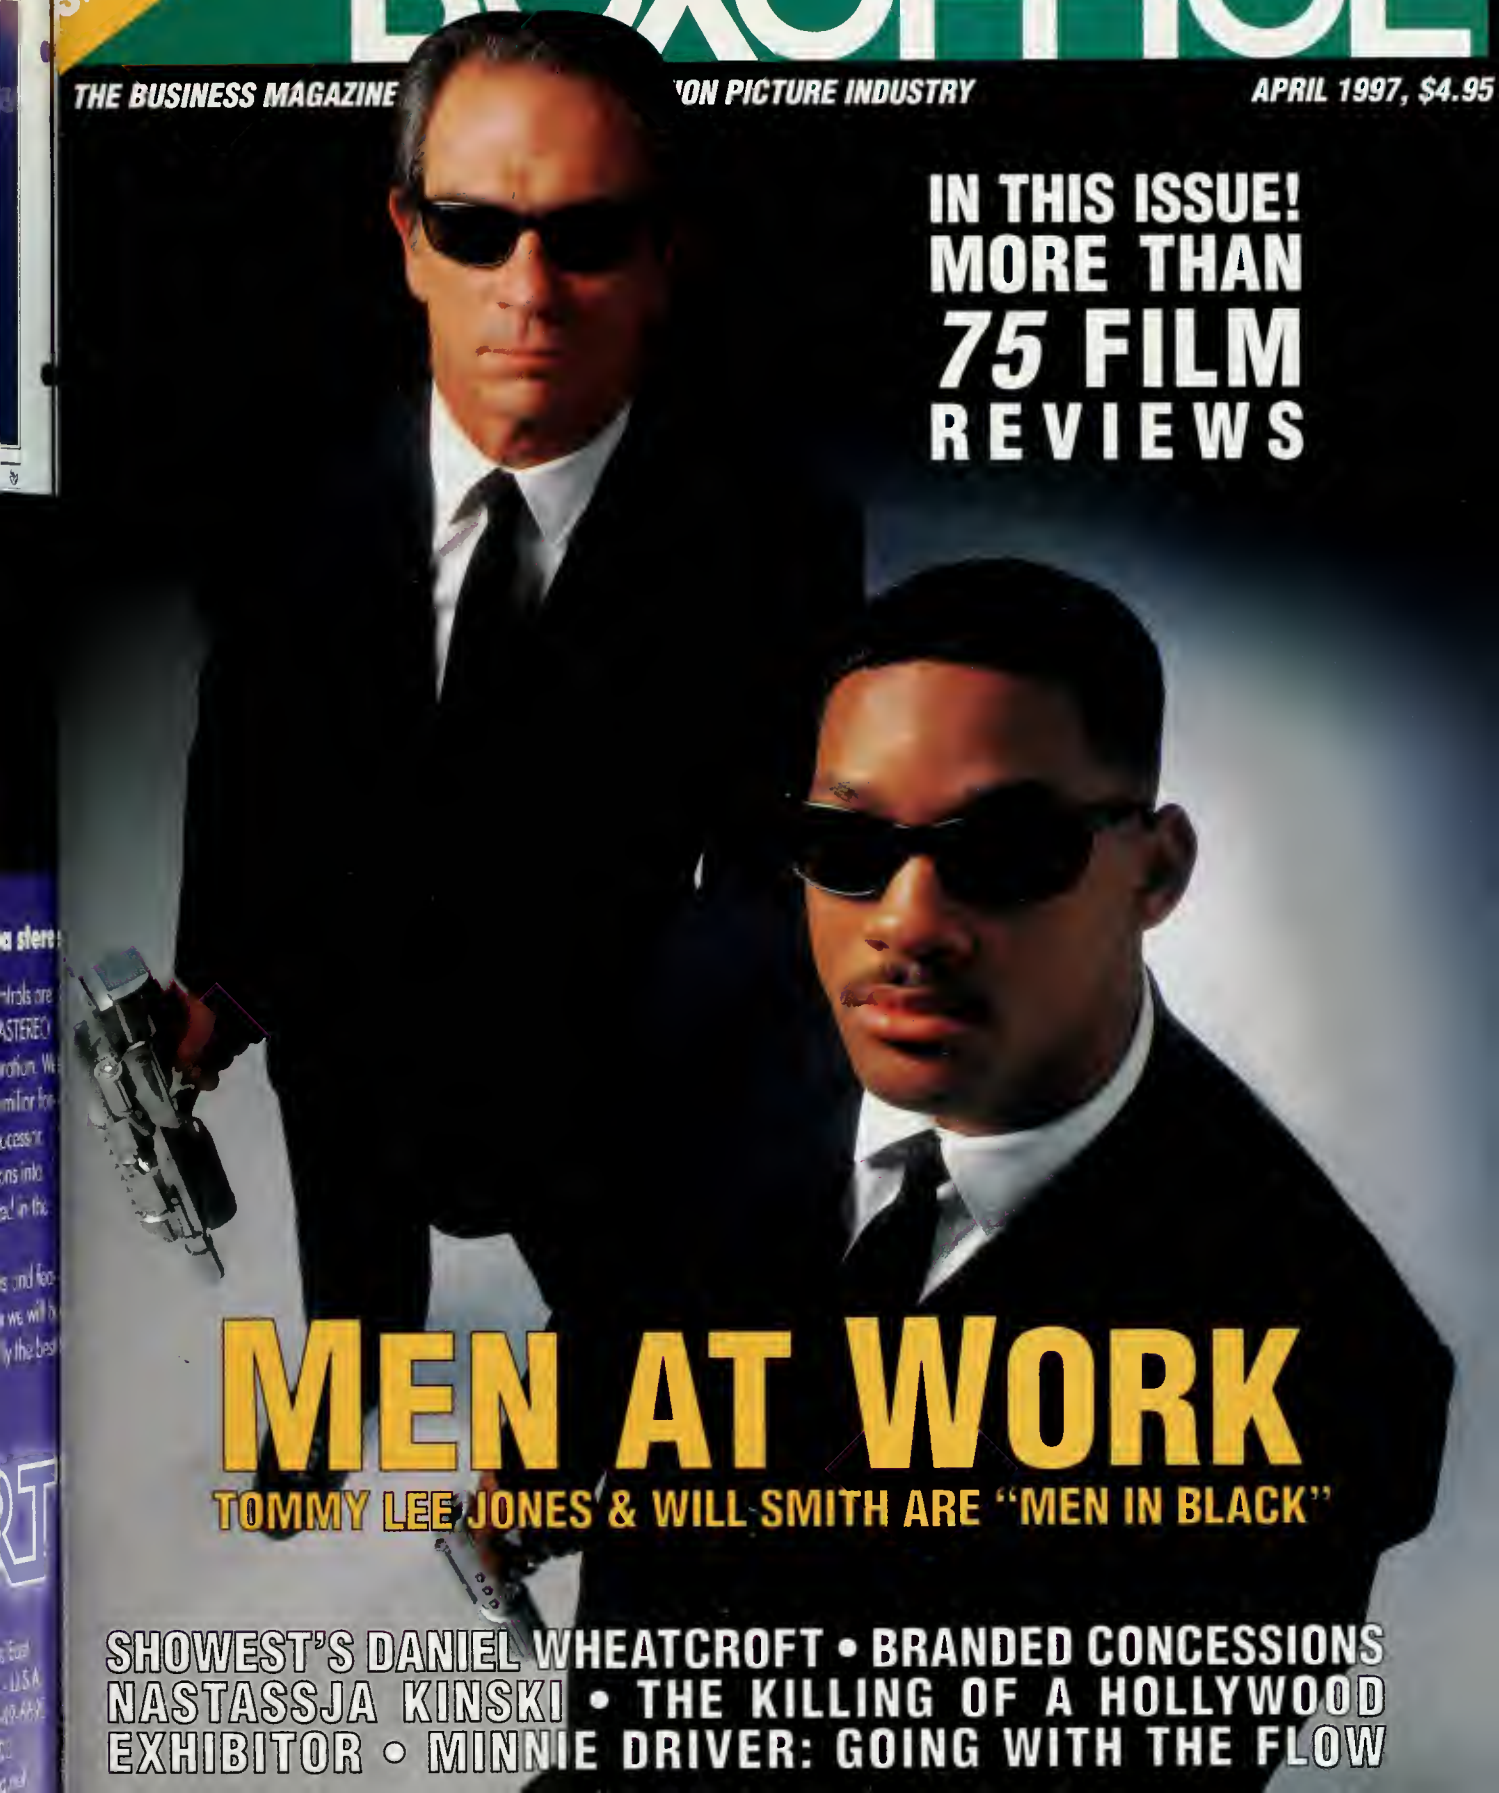
Our new CSP1200 is identically the same circuitry as our standard model, but all operator controls are built into the front panel of the main frame. To be honest, many who heard and saw the PANASTEREO loved the performance, sound quality and features but did not care for the remote panel operation. W think the digital remote operation is a great idea, but some of our customers suggested the familiar for mat used by all our competitors. We are proud to introduce a new version of this premium processor. However, you will have to pay a little less for the new model! By combining the control functions into main product there are some parts and manufacturing cost savings. These savings are reflected in the lower cost of the CSP1200.

If your dealer has not told you how the PANASTEREO can beat the performance, specifications and fea tures of any analog processor manufactured by Dolby Laboratories, Inc.(or anyone else), then we will b pleased to give you all the details. Look for the new CSP1200 in cinema owners who want only the bes

THE NEW PANASTEREO CSP1200 IS NOW OUT . . . PERFORMING.

SMART

5945 Peachtree Corners East
Norcross, Georgia 30071 - U.S.A.
(800) 45 SMART or (770) 449-6698
FAX: (770) 449-6728
email: smart@america.net



Response No. 267

SHOWEST 1997

BOXOFFICE®

THE BUSINESS MAGAZINE ...ON PICTURE INDUSTRY

APRIL 1997, $4.95

IN THIS ISSUE! MORE THAN 75 FILM REVIEWS

MEN AT WORK

TOMMY LEE JONES & WILL SMITH ARE "MEN IN BLACK"

SHOWEST'S DANIEL WHEATCROFT • BRANDED CONCESSIONS
NASTASSJA KINSKI • THE KILLING OF A HOLLYWOOD EXHIBITOR • MINNIE DRIVER: GOING WITH THE FLOW

The Christie Quality Control symbol is your assurance of superior design, manufacturing and reliability.

Buying a projector or film handling system doesn't guarantee it will perform perfectly the first time you flip the switch. Unless, of course, it's a Christie. Because every Christie component and system must meet the most stringent quality control standards in the industry — from design to manufacturing to assembly.

And before any unit leaves our door, it is thoroughly tested to ensure that it will perform the first time, and every time, day in and day out. Our quality control goals are "zero defects" and "100% reliability".

Whether it's testing performance parameters on projectors or calibrations on optics, we know how critical it is to have your projection equipment arrive trouble free. It's a commitment that involves every one of our employees, and it's the reason Christie projection equipment is the best in the business.

CHRISTIE®

We Make Film Come Alive

10550 Camden Drive, Cypress, CA 90630 • (714) 236-8610

Response No. 3

Junior & Dot Together At Last!

Two Concession Classics - Junior Mints® and Mason Dots® - are appearing together at theatres around the country. Dots' super assortment of five fruit flavors and Junior Mints' creamy combination of cool mint and dark milk chocolate have been the choice of movie goer's for years. Make sure your concession features the double selling power of these two favorites - Junior and Dot together at last!

Contact your local Tootsie Roll Distributor Representative for complete order information.

Tootsie Roll Industries, Inc.
7401 S. Cicero Avenue • Chicago, IL 60629

© Copyright, 1994

Response No. 100

OPENING CREDITS

When your office is in Hollywood, Calif. the way the BOXOFFICE editorial staff's is, you can't turn a corner on the street without overhearing some piece of news, gossip or disinformation about what's going on in the film biz. So and so's career is in trouble. Such and such is poised to become a breakout star. Blankety-blank Pictures is going to remake "Your Favorite Movie Classic Here." The list goes on and on.

One oft-discussed hot button topic we have strong opinions on is film preservation. As a magazine that's been around for 77 years, BOXOFFICE has observed, recorded and participated in the history of movies since before there was sound, and you'd better believe we're four-square in favor of taking care of the priceless legacy of images that over a century of film has bequeathed to us. Fortunately, some very powerful and prominent figures—Steven Spielberg, Martin Scorsese, George Lucas, and on and on—have made the preservation issue (as well as related issues of artists' rights) something of an industry cause celebre, and while there's still a great deal to be done, their efforts have gone a long way toward yielding a desirable result.

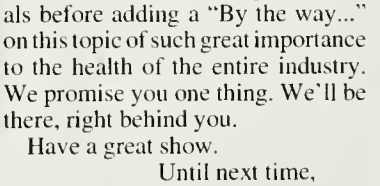
All this leads us to wonder why it is that magazines like BOXOFFICE and organizations like the National Association of Theatre Owners are such lonely voices when it comes to the issue of protecting the moviegoing experience for films that are as fresh as this morning's coffee. You're in the exhibition biz or something related to it, so you probably already know what we're talking about: the video release window, which seems to get shorter and shorter with each passing summer.

NATO president Bill Kartozian has gone on record as saying that if exhibition is to remain healthy, a minimum six-month window of exclusivity has to be afforded movie theatres for the showing of theatrical films. To us, it's just common sense to say that Mr. Kartozian is more than right. We might even go so far as to suggest a two-month extension of that six-month window for blockbusters like "Independence Day," to make absolutely sure the second-run houses get a fair crack at the bigger titles.

The "video release window" is nothing more nor less than an issue of film preservation for movies that are being made now. The net result of getting those cassettes to market in less and less time is to implant an idea in the minds of the audience that if they ignore a movie when it's being played on the big screen the way it was meant to be seen, they can pick it up on the cheap in a "reformatted for your TV screen" edition after just a few weeks. The shortening of the video release window doesn't just cheat exhibitors. It cheats moviegoers, filmmakers and everyone involved with every step in the process.

It seems like a no-brainer to expect that the same leading figures on the film production side who stand united against the panning and scanning of widescreen film prints and the slashing of original running times to fit TV ad schedules would get behind the concept of a six month exhibition window. After all, what are people like Spielberg, Lucas and Scorsese fighting to preserve when they stand up for film preservation? The sanctity of the motion-picture art form, its right to be showcased with all the aesthetic intentions of the people who make each movie intact. So why would these very talented directors want to sit still for a situation that encourages the majority of potential moviegoers to see contemporary films—including the titles they themselves produce and direct—on a cathode tube for which aspect ratio must be severely altered, contrast range must be brutally compressed, and image size on even the biggest home screen can be only a tiny fraction of the artistic canvas the living light of projected film paints on.

It seems like a no-brainer to expect that the same leading figures on the film production side who stand united against the panning and scanning of widescreen film prints and the slashing of original running times to fit TV ad schedules would get behind a six month exhibition window.



To us, these arguments are self-evident, which is why we're so puzzled that the exhibition industry is still waiting for even one prominent filmmaker or production executive to publicly champion the six-month release window's cause. A cynic might point to the analogy we draw between preserving the films of the past and preserving the moviegoing experience of the present and say something like, "It's easy to stand up for preserving old movies when you have nothing personal at stake in them. But don't forget, the Spielbergs and Lucases of the world are not just filmmakers, they're contemporary producers! Practically corporations! If conventional wisdom says you maximize profits by shortening the video release window, asking them to stand up for the six month window is like asking them to choose between their pocketbooks and their art!" Which is exactly what we're trying to do, if the choice has to be that stark.

One of the great things about the ShoWest convention, for which this issue has been created, is that it brings together people from all aspects of the film industry in a common recognition of exhibition's unparalleled importance to film. Actors, directors, studio execs and circuit chieftains rub elbows with single-screen entrepreneurs as creative equals, and everybody's a star. It's an event not to be missed, and one in which magical things can happen.

So, if anyone reading this should find him or herself standing at a ShoWest event next to Steven Spielberg or Michael Eisner or Ted Turner or Rupert Murdoch, you might want to say something nice, supportive and friendly about our common interests as film professionals before adding a "By the way..." on this topic of such great importance to the health of the entire industry. We promise you one thing. We'll be there, right behind you.

Have a great show.

Until next time,

Ray Greene
Editor-in-Chief
BOXOFFICE

At Proctor Companies, we've been maximizing theatre profits with outstanding concession design, construction and supply for over 25 years. IF YOU'RE NOT DEALING WITH US, YOU'RE DEALING WITH SECOND BEST.

PROCTOR COMPANIES

TEL: 303-973-8989 FAX: 303-973-8884 EMAIL: proctorco@aol.com

© Proctor Companies

APRIL 1997, VOL. 133 NO. 4

BOXOFFICE

THE BUSINESS MAGAZINE OF THE GLOBAL MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

UNQUOTE: When people come to ShoWest, they're re-energized. This is the community that makes all the decisions about whether someone becomes a big star, or whether a movie succeeds, or whether an audience comes into the theatre.—SHOWEST PRESIDENT DANIEL WHEATCROFT

4 COMMENTARY: THE VIDEO RELEASE WINDOW
Film preservation has enlisted high-level support across the movie spectrum. So where's the support for preserving the movie experience of the here and now? By Ray Greene

26 COVER STORY: IN THE BLACK
Superstar Tommy Lee Jones teams with Will Smith in the extraterrestrial comedy-thriller "Men In Black." By Ray Greene PLUS: "MEN IN BLACK" creator Lowell Cunningham's comic relief.

32 COVER EXTRA: A FEW GOOD MEN
Behind the scenes for the making of "Men In Black." By Lea Russo

36 SHOWEST EXTRA: MR. PRESIDENT
BOXOFFICE talks to new ShoWest president Daniel Wheatcroft on the eve of ShoWest 1997, exhibition's show of shows. By Kim Williamson PLUS: Introducing the "MARQUEE," Exhibition's answer to Oscar.

Space Case? See ShoWest Intro, pg. 65

A Few Good "MEN," pg. 26

40 SHOWEST EXTRA: AT A THEATRE NEAR YOU...
A pictorial celebration of ShoWest's first-ever promotional trailer.

42 SNEAK PREVIEW: IN THE DRIVER'S SEAT
English actress Minnie Driver gets ready to sink or swim in Paramount's "The Flood." By Christine James

44 SNEAK PREVIEW: "DAY" TRIPPER
Nastassja Kinski sidesteps drama for comedy opposite Robin Williams and Billy Crystal in "Father's Day." By Bridget Byrne

48 SNEAK PREVIEW: "SPRUNG" FEVER
"Fear of a Black Hat" auteur Rusty Cundieff tackles the perils of modern relationships in "Sprung." By Sean O'Neil

50 SHOWEST EXTRA: BOXOFFICE GIVES AWAY THOUSANDS AT SHOWEST!
BOXOFFICE to give away over $8,000 in theatre equipment at ShoWest! The skinny on our 1997 Trade Show Prizes. BOXOFFICE Booth: 406

52 INDIE EXHIBITION SHOWCASE: TALK OF THE "TOWN"
Carole and David Trepeck prove you can go home again—especially if you decide to rebuild your hometown's theatre! By Susan Lambert

58 SHOWEST 1997: J. WAYNE ANDERSON, SERVICE MAN
ShoWest '97 B.V. Sturdivant Awardee J. Wayne Anderson of R/C Theatres on his career in exhibition. By Pat Kramer

60 SHOWEST 1997: BRUCE PROCTOR, MAKING A STAND
Career concessions professional Bruce Proctor of Proctor Co. takes home the NAC's Bert Nathan Memorial Award. By Pat Kramer

62 SHOWEST 1997: JOHN GREINER, FRONT AND CENTER
AMC's John Greiner explains the program that earned him ShoWest's 1997 Customer Service Award: the 411 Front Pad. By Wade Major

64 SHOWEST 1997: ANN CRAFT, FIGHTING ON IN INDIANA
Ann Craft of the Theatre Owners of Indiana sees virtue rewarded with the 1997 Ida Schreiber Award. By Pat Kramer

DEPARTMENTS

Letters to the Editor	8
Hollywood Updates	12
Hollywood Report	14
Trailers	16
SUMMER NEW PRODUCTS	162
Review Digest	203
National News	204
Moviegoer Activity Chart	205
Exhibition Briefings	206
International News: Europe	208
International News: Canada	210
Studio Feature Chart	212
Independent Feature Chart	214
Home Release Chart	216
Classifieds	218
Advertiser Index	218
The Big Picture	220

BOXOFFICE (ISSN 0006-8527). Published monthly by RLD Communications, Inc., 203 N. Wabash Ave., Suite 800, Chicago, IL 60601. Subscriptions: $30 per year. Canada and Mexico: $40; airmail: $80. Overseas subscriptions (all airmail): $80. Periodical postage paid at Chicago, IL, and additional mailing offices. Postmaster: Send address changes to Boxoffice, 725 South Wells St., 4th Floor, Chicago, IL 60607.

© Copyright 1997 RLD Communications, Inc. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or part without permission is prohibited.

FEST REVIEWS (beginning on pg. 176)

Arresting Gena 181
Bad Boy Bubby 193
Bandwagon 188
Beyond Silence 187
The Boy From Mercury 185
Brilliant Lies 185
The Bruce 194
The Brylcreem Boys 192
Cannes Man 190
Chasing Amy 176
Clockwatchers 183
Commandments 184
Deacon Brodie 194
Deep Crimson 196
The Destiny of Marty Fine 195
Dogs 190
Dying to Go Home 193
Eight Days a Week 184
Fall 184
Fast, Cheap & Out of Control 181
Fetishes 196
The Full Monty 178
Going All the Way 179
Gray's Anatomy 196
Guantanamera 188
Hollow Reed 189
The House of Yes 180
Hurricane 179
illtown 197
In the Company of Men 181
Irish Whiskey 186
Kids Return 194
King of Masks 186
Krzysztof Kieslowski: I'm So-So 191
The Leading Man 197
L'Eleve 195
Libertarias 195
Lilies 180
Loose Women 191
Love Always 191
Lulu 195
Marian 197
Menno's Mind 191
Message to Love 185
Milk and Money 185
Mojave Moon 189
A Mongolian Tale 185
The Myth of Fingerprints 178
Nenette et Boni 197
Nerolio 193
Night Orchid 191
Power 182
Pudding Chomeur 195
River Street 194
Roseanna's Grave 191
Santa Fe 182
A Saturday on Earth 192
Schizopolis 196
Shiloh 185
The Size of Watermelons 184
Slaves to the Underground 181
Sleeping Man 195
The Sun, the Moon and the Stars 189
Sweet Angel Mine 194
Talk to Me 190
This Is the Sea 180
To Have and to Hold 187
To Speak the Unspeakable 195
Trojan Eddie 197
Ulee's Gold 176
Underworld 188
Visiting Desire 196
Wind in the Willows 189
Women 196

Plus 21 more reviews in our regular section (pg. 198)!

65 SPECIAL SECTION: THE 1997 SHOWEST INTRO (PG. 65-126)

SW-6 AN OPEN LETTER TO ALL SHOWEST DELEGATES by Daniel Wheatcroft, President, ShoWest

SW-8 WE GO GLOBAL by William F. Kartozian, President, NATO

SW-10 TO JOIN OR NOT TO JOIN, THAT IS THE QUESTION by Mary Ann Grasso, Vice President and Executive Director, NATO

SW-12 NOW, MORE THAN EVER! by David R. Scoco, President, NAC

SW-14 TWO DECADES OF PROGRESS by Ioan Allen, President, ITEA

SW-16 BARRIE LAWSON LOEKS, SONY SUPERSTAR by Christine James

SW-22 SONY THEATRES' LINCOLN SQUARE FLAGSHIP by Pat Kramer

SW-23 BOXOFFICE/MovieFone MOVIEGOER ACTIVITY CHART: 1996 TOTALS

SW-26 SUMMER HEAT 1997: Previewing Summer's Coming Attractions

SW-34 ShoWest 1997 Schedule of Events

SW-35 ShoWest 1997 Trade Show Floor Plan

SW-36 ShoWest 1997 Trade Show Booth List

SW-46 SPECIAL SOUND REPORT: IF THEY KNEW WHAT YOU WERE MISSING, PART ONE by John F. Allen

SW-50 BOXOFFICE's TENTH ANNUAL MISCELLANEOUS FILM AWARDS

The killing of a Hollywood exhibitor, pg. 150

127 SPECIAL REPORT: BRANDED CONCESSIONS
Is the movie concessions biz big enough for standard concessions items and Pizza Hut? A special BOXOFFICE report. By R. B. Whitter

132 EXHIBITION EXTRA: THE MOVIE PALACE GUARD
Is the single-screen movie palace dead? Not in Tinseltown, home to the most splendid moviehouse architecture on earth. By Jon Alon Walz

140 1997 FALL/WINTER BLUE RIBBON BALLOT
VOTE TODAY for the BEST, WORST AND MOST POPULAR films!

142 MOVERS AND SHAKERS: AMC'S PHILIP SINGLETON
There's a new man at the top of the corporate roster at AMC, the circuit that invented the multiplex. By Christine James

146 FROM WHERE I SIT: PROJECTION'S SEVEN DEADLY SINS
Tips for tip-top projection from an industry pro. By Sean Lohan

150 SPECIAL REPORT: THE KILLING OF A SILENT MOVIE MAN
Hollywood mourns exhibitor Laurence Austin, a local fixture and the proprietor of "the last all-silent moviehouse" in America. By Jon Silberg and Ray Greene PLUS: Remembering Laurence Austin

156 TECHNOLOGY: THE SECOND COMING OF VIDEO PROJECTION SYSTEMS
Has video projection come of age? By Susan Lambert

158 EXHIBITION EXTRA: A DRIVING PASSION
A young documentarian recounts his struggle to pay tribute to an exhibition original: the Drive-In Moviehouse. By Jon Bokenkamp

198 ADDITIONAL APRIL REVIEWS
Includes "The Beautician and the Beast," "Broken English," "A Brother's Kiss," "Cosi," "Dangerous Ground," "Dante's Peak," "Donnie Brasco," "Fools Rush In," "The Pest," "Rosewood," "Shadow Conspiracy" and "Zeus and Roxanne," plus Special Format, Flashback and Briefs reviews

206 1997 OSCAR BALLOT
A handy guide to this year's Academy nominees.

LETTERS

Jim Carrey was paid too much. John Travolta will fall again. Barbra Streisand over-hyped.
J. Specauza, art critic

Family movie of the holiday season: "Jingle all the Way." What great fun for all ages!! Schwarzenegger, Sinbad and Hartman were hilarious!
Robert Douvier, Main Street Theatre, Sauk Centre, Minn.

Neve Campbell did an excellent job in "Scream" and "The Craft." I think she is one of the top three promising female boxoffice attractions of the year.
Angelina M. Cistone, SoCal Cinemas, Laguna Hills, Calif.

Glenn Close as Cruella de Vil was perfect casting! Best comic portrayal since Jack Nicholson as The Joker.
Leslie Bracy, Malco Theatres, Roger, Ark.

First choice Male Star: Goeffrey Rush in "Shine."
George Udel, G2 Services, Balto, Md.

A rather below-average year, imploded with a whimper, very little innovativeness.
Avinashk Rangra, Rangra Theatres, Alpine, Texas

Travolta definitely out-does his competition with the excellent job in "Michael." Claire Danes and Natalie Portman are even better than their adult rivals.
Ken Own, RCCL, Miami, Fla.

I know "Barb Wire" was a bad "B" movie, but Ms. Lee has acting talent and will get better roles. After all, "Showgirls" didn't kill off Elizabeth Berkley.
Tim Rogers, Carmike, Butte, Mont.

Lauren Bacall is the best. She needs to do more films. I don't see George Clooney being on "E.R." for long—he's good in "One Fine Day."
Edwin Rosche, Regal, Rock Hill, S.C.

"The English Patient" was the best movie in 40 years!
Jim Nagle, Sony Theatres, Cleveland, Ohio

I don't know why everyone was so down on "The Cable Guy." It was Jim Carrey's finest film since "The Mask." "Trainspotting" lived up to the hype and more. "Mystery Science Theatre 3000" and "Dead Man" were two of the finest films I've ever seen and were sadly underexposed.
Ira Brooker, Star Cinema, Sparta, Wis.

Great new faces in superb independent releases! How refreshing! Thanks.
Raven Earlygrow, Arena Theatres, Pt. Arena, Calif.

1996 was good for Fox and Warner Bros. Disney's last good animated flick was "The Lion King." They need a new outlook in that department. George Clooney was the loser in 1996 due to attitude alone. Disney, no more live action rip-offs of classics and no more sequels!
Charles B., Metroplex Videotaping, Fort Worth, Texas

Natalie Portman is hot!
Dustin Wilson, Just Videos, Richmond, N.Y.

Best star: Val Kilmer. Most underrated, poorly marketed excellent picture was "Ghost in the Darkness" Most oversold poor pictures: Jim Carrey's.
Dennis, Empire Theatre, Wofford Heights, Calif.

THE GOOD, THE BAD AND THE UGLY:
What BOXOFFICE Readers Have to Say About BOXOFFICE

We dish it out regularly. Here's proof we can take it. Reader opinions on what we're doing right and what we're doing wrong are always welcome.

After attending ShowEast in Atlantic City, BOXOFFICE is still the best magazine available. Be reading ya in '97.
Patty Gentry, Silver Screen Cinema 8, Va Beach, Va.

BOXOFFICE is a great magazine.
R. C. Leon, Premiere NYC, N.Y.

Your reviews are horrible. They have no taste, no resemblance to reality and are the opposite of what people want.
Dennis, Empire Theatre, Wofford Heights, Calif.

Our company has been receiving this magazine for at least 40 years. We get it at all the subsidiary theatres and main office. Personally, I used articles to write my term paper on cinematography. Thank you!
Angela Cordes, Capital 4 Theatres, Jefferson City, Mo.

More pictures, more info, less ads.
Ken Own, RCCL, Miami, Fla.

Fine magazine. Wish it could go every two weeks.
Charles Sims, Jr., State Twin Theatre, Gainesville, Texas

The best movie-related magazine I've seen.
Ira Brooker, Star Cinema, Sparta, Wis.

BOXOFFICE has come of age, is timely in the reviews sections, readable.
Avinashk Rangra, Rangra Theatres, Alpine, Texas

BOXOFFICE is a really good magazine and I enjoy reading it.
Jamie L. Gilbert, Bad Axe Theatre, Bad Axe, Mich.

I look forward to reading it every month to find out what new movies are coming out.
Susan Keffaber, Eagles Theatre Syndicate Theatres, Wabash, Ind.

BOXOFFICE? Super, super, super!
Kimberly Luna, Super Saver Cinemas, Pomona, Calif.

Great work!
D. Curun, Baseline, Century City, CA

Great. Keep all the info coming. Much success.
D. Blalock, Georgia Theatre, Covington, GA

Your magazine covers everything anyone could want to read about the movies. Keep up the good work.
Edward Ortiz, General Cinema Rancho 6, Colton, Calif.

Best magazine of the '90's. Keep up the good work!!!
Edwin Rosche, Regla, Rock Hill, S.C.

Please put in address and phone numbers for ALL distributors at least once a year.
George Udel, G2 Services, Balto, Md.
[We do. Every September in our annual BUYERS DIRECTORY.—Ed.]

It's getting better with every issue. Indispensable.
Rand Thornsley, Film Gallery, Anchorage, Alaska

As a second-run theatre, I'd like to see BOXOFFICE publish dates when movies will open to second run.
Tony Ratcliff, Emerald Theatres and Entertainment, Madison, Ind.

Your editor's remark about Hitler a couple of months ago in his story from Amsterdam was way off. Besides that, great magazine!
L. P., Santa Monica, Calif.
[In the story in question, Editor-in-Chief Ray Greene referred to himself as "Der Fuerher" for humorous effect. No offense was meant, and he extends his apologies to anyone who agreed with the letter-writer that a line was crossed.]

Best in reporting.
Ronald Riege, Ronar Inc, Harrison, N.Y.

I enjoy BOXOFFICE MAGAZINE, because of the new and old theatres that it has stories about. Also movies reviews and releasing information.
Scott Tanoory, Hoyts Sangertown 9, New Hartford, N.Y.

The mag is the authority and keeps on improving. You are the bible for exhibitors. Good luck and keep it up in '97.
Phil Herman, N.Y., N.Y.

Do a feature on the greatest star of all: Bette Davis.
J. Specauza, Worcester, Mass.

A fine magazine.
Tim Daubenspeck, Mustang, Oklahoma

Theafilm Congratulates All 1997 ShoWest Award Winners

A CHORUS OF DISAPPROVAL

STARRING JEREMY IRONS AND ANTHONY HOPKINS
PRODUCED AND DIRECTED BY MICHAEL WINNER
OPENING NATIONWIDE SPRING 1997

DIRTY WEEKEND

STARRING LIA WILLIAMS, DAVID MCCALLUM,
SYLVIA SYMS AND IAN RICHARDSON
PRODUCED AND DIRECTED BY MICHAEL WINNER
OPENING SPRING 1997

James Dean
RACE WITH DESTINY

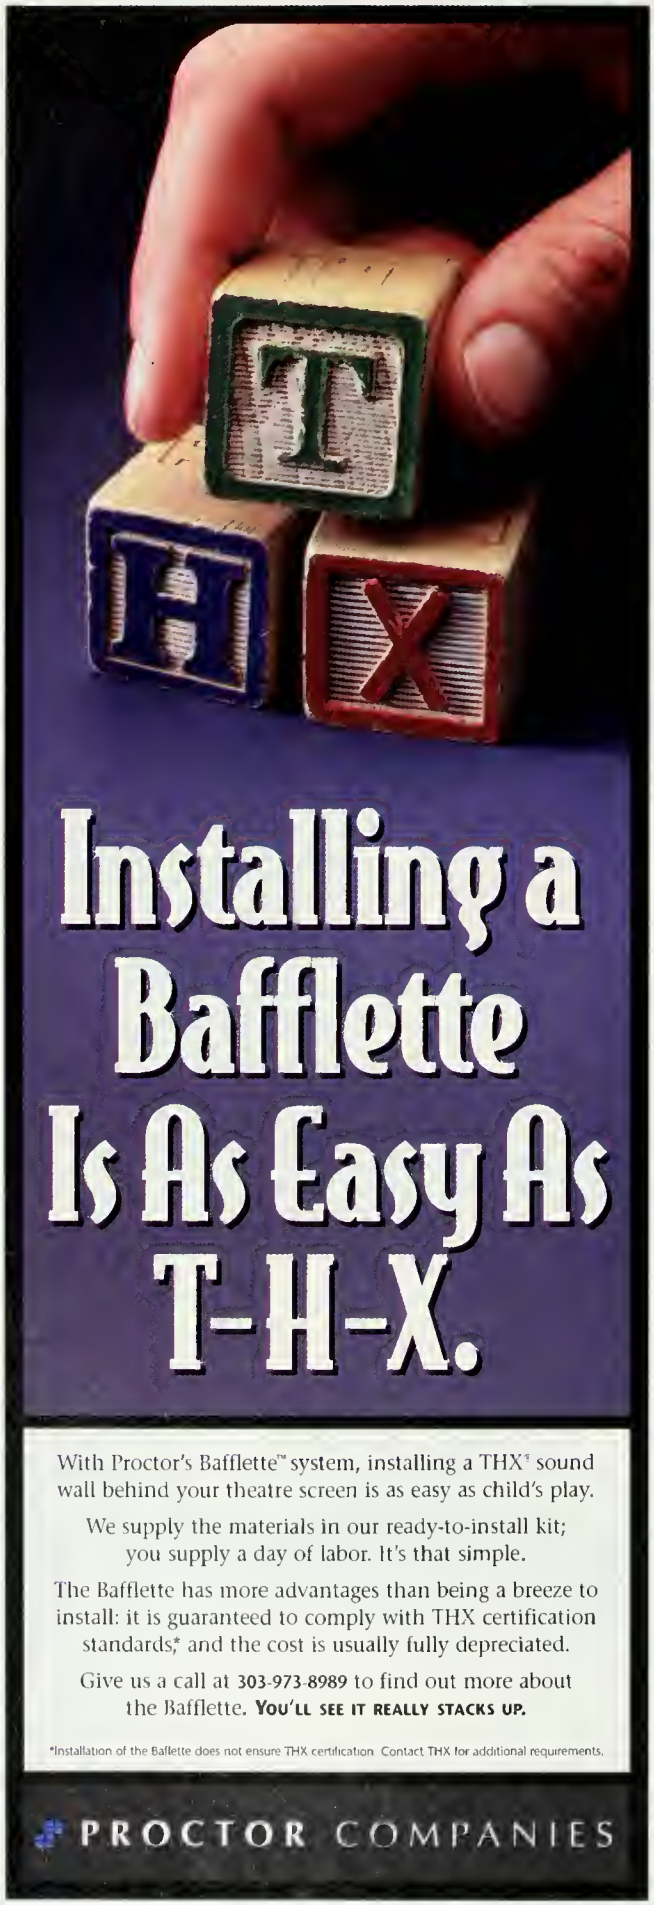
STARRING CASPER VAN DIEN, CARRIE MITCHUM,
ROBERT MITCHUM AND DIANE LADD
PRODUCED AND DIRECTED BY MARDI RUSTAM
OPENING NATIONWIDE FALL 1997

MADAM, the GRASS IS HIGH

DIRECTED BY DELBERT MANN
WRITTEN AND PRODUCED BY DENNIS H. CHRISTEN
PRINCIPAL PHOTOGRAPHY BEGINS MAY 1997
OPENING WINTER 1998

CONTACT

DENISE BATTAGLIA
EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT
DISTRIBUTION & MARKETING



STEVE CARDUCCI
VICE PRESIDENT MARKETING

3807 WILSHIRE BOULEVARD · SUITE 1140
LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA 90010
TELEPHONE: 213/368-1775
FACSIMILE: 213/389-6889

Theafilm
DISTRIBUTION NETWORK

1997 Theafilm

CREDITS NOT CONTRACTUAL

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR (CONT'D)

The ads for "ID4" were very well done. "Ransom" was my favorite of the year. Mel Gibson is such a wonderful actor and Ron Howard's directing was excellent.
Susan Keffaber, Eagles Theatre Syndicate Theatres, Wabash, Ind.

"Shine" is excellent. Great.
Ronald Riege, Ronar Inc., Harrison, N.Y.

It was a great year for indies and art movies. They are developing a strong following and are gaining ground on the big boxoffice movies.
Phil Herman, New York, N.Y.

Why do movie ads use critics quotes from small papers that don't matter?
Keith Altomare, Bilton Theatre, Lincoln City, Ore.

I am very fond of Kate Winslet. I loved her in "Sense and Sensibility." I also feel she needs more exposure. She is not only an extremely talented actress, but an absolute knockout as well.
Tim Daubenspeck, Mustang, Okla.

'96 was a pretty good year for movies. I noticed that the "F" word is finally starting to be used less often. Three cheers to Hollywood for that (Hip, Hip Hooray...)
Patty Gentry, Silver Screen Cinema 8, Va Beach, Va.

Wish studios would release more trailers and promo items to smaller theatres.
Charles Sims, Jr., State Twin Theatre, Gainesville, Texas

Once again, Mel Gibson and Sean Connery, after great films of 1995, explode with "The Rock" and "Ransom", two of my top films of 1996.
Scott Tanoory, Hoyts Sangertown 9, New Hartford, N.Y.

I met John Travolta earlier this year while managing a theatre in Texas. He came in to see a movie while he was filming "Michael." He was very courteous to everyone. He took pictures and signed autographs. His films are awesome and so is he off the screen. That's a good actor!
Angela Cordes, Capital 4 Theatres, Jefferson City, Mo.

I picked Eddie Murphy for his characterizations and humor brought to the "Nutty Professor"—a film which would have bombed without Eddie's talents.
R. C. Leon, Premiere New York, N.Y.

The IMAX title "Special Effects" was the best Hollywood film of 1996. Almost all of the best films of the year were foreign or independently made outside of the Hollywood studio system.
Wendeslaus Schulz, Star Theatre, Bay St Louis, Miss.

Tom Hanks is still the most popular actor, but his one movie this year was not a top attraction.
Dale Haag, Cooper Theatres, Hays, Kan.

Please, please, please, no more Jim Carrey movies! More, more, more John Leguizamo and Tom Cruise—Very, very fine actors.
Kimberly Luna, Super Saver Cinemas, Pomona, Calif.

That Ellen DeGeneres film "Mr. Wrong" was among the worst movies I've ever had the displeasure to sit through. I'm just glad that I didn't pay to see it!
Brian Smyczynski, Dollar Cinema, Houston, Texas

Love us, hate us, but TALK TO US! Send your letter to:

BOXOFFICE MAGAZINE
6640 Sunset Blvd. Suite 100
Hollywood, Ca. 90028

FAX: 213-465-5049
e-mail: boxoff@earthlink.net

© Proctor Companies THX is a registered trademark of Lucasfilm LTD

Response No. 206

THIS YEAR, JUDGE US BY THE COMPANY WE KEEP.

(ALL 1997 RELEASES FROM WARNER BROS., UNIVERSAL AND MGM/UA.)

This is in addition to our excellent line-up of films from 20th Century Fox, Paramount and a host of independents. After all, with over 8,707 installations, DTS is the leading supplier of crisp, clear digital sound that audiences, exhibitors and filmmakers prefer. Just listen to effects driven movies like Batman and Robin, Volcano, the Star Wars trilogy and The Lost World: Jurassic Park. With so many great films available in DTS, isn't it time you join our company?

DIGITAL® dts SOUND

LISTEN. AND BE AMAZED.

31336 Via Colinas #101 Westlake Village CA 91362 (818)706-3525 (800)959-4109
European Office: 51-55, rue Gustave Huberti 1030 Brussels, Belgium Phone: 32 2 245-9622
Visit our Website http://www.dtstech.com

Response No. 467

HOLLYWOOD UPDATES

Warner Bros. pushed back the release date for their debut animation effort, "The Quest for Camelot" from November of this year to summer of 1998 in order to give their production team more time to complete the film. Warner Bros. hopes that giving plenty of warning for the move will allow them to keep all the major merchandising agreements in place. The toy license with Kenner is expected to remain intact, but it's the promotional tie-in with Wendy's fast food restaurant that may not survive the move. Major delays were accrued on the fairy tale project about a strong-willed girl and a handsome young man who are on a quest to save King Arthur's kingdom from the clutches of the evil Baron Ruber, because Warner Bros. had to pull key animators off the project in order to get "Space Jam" out to theatres in time. "Quest" features the voices of Christopher Reeve, Jane Seymour, Gary Oldman and Don Rickles.

Robin Williams won't be tilting windmills anytime soon now that the high-profile, big-budget project "Don Quixote" has stalled yet again. The story of the legendary figure, from a script by Waldo Salt, was set to start filming this spring in Spain starring Williams and John Cleese with director Fred Schepisi at the helm. The project lost its financing when Phoenix Pictures pulled out, apparently due to the high $60+ million budget. The project is being produced by Steven Haft, Quincy Jones and David Salzman. This latest development marks the eighth time this version of "Quixote" has been thwarted on the way to the bigscreen. Previously the project was supposed to go with Williams and Sean Connery and before that the cast combination was Richard Burton and Buddy Hackett.

Sony Pictures Classics co-presidents Michael Barker, Tom Bernard and Marcie Bloom decided to renew with Sony Pictures Entertainment for another five years, despite rumors that they would leave to start Paramount's specialized distribution division. Their new deal with Sony gives the executives more money with which to acquire and co-finance films worldwide and demonstrates Sony's renewed commitment under John Calley to exploit the arthouse market. Calley said he was impressed with the division's ability to market specialty films with international appeal. The New York-based division remained untouched by the upheavals that marked Sony in the last few years. It distributed several Oscar-winning films, including "Indochine," "Burnt By the Sun," "Belle Epoque" and 1995's best documentary "Anne Frank Remembered." 1992's "Howard's End" grossed over $75 million worldwide and Sony Pictures Classics scored two hits last year with John Sayle's "Lone Star" (still in release) and the Sundance pick-up "Welcome to the Dollhouse." Along with three films at this year's Sundance festival, Sony Pictures Classics recently acquired "A Chef in Love" by Nana Djordjadze from the Republic of Georgia.

Frank Darabont, who made his directorial debut with "The Shawshank Redemption," which he adapted from a Stephen King novella, has signed a two-picture deal with Castle Rock Entertainment. The first project, "The Green Mile," is also based on a Stephen King work. Darabont will adapt and direct the story, from King's "Night Shift" collection, about a mentally challenged inmate on Death Row and his relationships with his guards. The second project for Darabont to direct is "The Bijou," a romantic comedy set against the 1950s blacklist. Currently Darabont is finishing a re-write on Steven Spielberg's "Saving Private Ryan" for Tom Hanks to star and is adapting a Robert McCammon novel, "Mine." The busy writer/director also just set up a time-travel detective story, "Stitch in Time" with Joel Silver at Warner Bros.

Legendary director Stanley Kubrick will receive the prestigious D. W. Griffith Award on March 8th at the 49th annual Directors Guild of America awards. Kubrick is currently in production on "Eyes Wide Shut" starring Tom Cruise and Nicole Kidman and will not attend the awards, but will send a film or video clip for his acceptance. DGA president Gene Reynolds made note of Kubricks' "unique, audacious, highly inventive and visual style" on films such as "2001: A Space Odyssey," "Dr. Strangelove," "A Clockwork Orange," "The Shining" and "Full Metal Jacket." Past D. W. Grifitth awardees include Orson Welles, David Lean, John Ford, Alfred Hitchcock, Akira Kurosawa and last year's winner, Woody Allen.

Live Entertainment, which made its domestic theatrical distribution debut with the Australian comedy, "Hotel de Love," recently added key players to its distribution team. Steve Rothenberg, senior VP of theatrical domestic distribution, brought in a number of distribution veterans from MGM/UA, Orion and Savoy Pictures. Live's regional sales staff includes western division sales manager David Spitz (formerly the branch manager for MGM/UA); western district sales manager Larry McCourt (former manager of western sales for Gramercy); southern district sales manager Terry Graham (formerly the Southern regional sales manager for Orion); eastern division sales manager John Gruenberg (formerly VP of eastern/mid-central division of Savoy) and central division sales manager Frank Patterson (formerly the eastern/mid-central district sales manager for Savoy). Other members of the new team include Brad Hartig as director of national accounts receivable, Dan Johnson as director of distributor operations and Mike Polydroros as director of exhibitor relations and print control. Everest Entertainment will handle Canadian distribution for Live. Orion distributed five Live pictures last year, including "The Arrival," "Trees Lounge" and "Phat Beach." Live will distribute seven films in 1997, including "Critical Care," starring James Spader and Kyra Sedgwick, and "Gentlemen Don't Eat Poets" starring Theresa Russell and Sting.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF
Ray Greene

MANAGING EDITOR
Kim Williamson

SENIOR EDITOR
Christine James

ASSOCIATE EDITOR
Susan Lambert

EDITORIAL ASSISTANT
Linda Andrade

CONTRIBUTING WRITERS
Alex Albanese
John Allen
George T. Chronis
Pat Kramer
Ann Kwinn
Wade Major
Joseph McBride
Jean Oppenheimer
Lea Russo
Shlomo Schwartzberg
R.B. Whitter

EUROPEAN CORRESPONDENT
Melissa Morrison
e-mail: tomelis@bohem-net.cz

BOXOFFICE ONLINE WEBSITE ADDRESS:
http://www.boxoff.com
email: boxoff@earthlink.net
Online service provided by Marlin Software

FOUNDER
Ben Shlyen

PUBLISHER
Bob Dietmeier (773) 338-7007

NATIONAL ADVERTISING DIRECTOR
Robert M. Vale (213) 465-1186

ADVERTISING CONSULTANT
Morris Schlozman (816) 942-5877

EAST COAST ADVERTISING REP.
Mitchell J. Hall (212) 877-6667

WEST COAST ADVERTISING REP.
Gwen Campbell (310) 820-8846

BUSINESS MANAGER
Dan Johnson (773) 338-7007

CIRCULATION DIRECTOR
Chuck Taylor (312) 922-9326

OFFICES
Editorial and Publishing Headquarters:
6640 Sunset Blvd., Suite 100, Hollywood, CA 90028-7159 (213) 465-1186, FAX: (213) 465-5049
Corporate: Mailing Address: P.O. Box 25485, Chicago, IL 60625 (773) 338-7007

The Audit Bureau

Circulation Inquiries:
BOXOFFICE Data Center
725 S. Wells St., 4th Floor
Chicago, IL 60607
(312) 922-9326
FAX: (312) 922-7209

At ShoWest '97, Dolby will present some very impressive numbers.
806 Films.
8050 Screens.
DOLBY
DIGITAL
The only digital format used on all the films nominated for Best Achievement in Sound.
Numbers as of March 1st, 199

HOLLYWOOD REPORT

BILLY CRYSTAL

In Session With "Analyze"

GARY OLDMAN

"Space" Case

TONI COLLETTE

Joins "Gang"

"A FINE AND PRIVATE PLACE" John Avildsen ("8 Seconds") will direct Richard Dreyfuss ("Mr. Holland's Opus") in this fantasy romance about a man who tries to avoid the real world by living in a cemetery. There, he meets two ghosts, and helps them to fall in love. (Distribution is to be set)

"ANALYZE THIS" In this comedy, a psychiatrist (Billy Crystal, "Father's Day") must help a domineering mob boss (Robert De Niro, "Sleepers") overcome his psychological problems. Richard Loncraine ("Richard III") helms. (Warner)

"FLASHBACKS" Director Penelope Spheeris ("Wayne's World") will tune in, turn on and drop into this biopic of '60s counterculture icon and LSD guru Timothy Leary. Randall Johnson, who co-wrote "The Doors" with Oliver Stone, is writing a script based on Leary's autobiography. (Distribution is to be set)

"FOR THE LOVE OF THE GAME" Kevin Costner found moderate success with the golf-themed "Tin Cup," but did better with baseball in "Field of Dreams." In "For the Love of the Game," he'll return to the all-American passtime, playing a has-been pitcher who, during a game, flashes back on his career, trying to figure what went wrong. While he reminisces, he manages to pitch a perfect game. The film's based on the novel by Michael Shaara and is scripted by Dana Stevens. (Universal)

"PRICE BELOW RUBIES" Renee Zellweger ("Jerry Maguire") will star in this Boaz Yakin ("Fresh")-directed drama about a Hasidic Jewish woman who feels stifled by her family and community, and goes against her religious scholar husband when she takes a job in the jewelry district. She soon falls in love with a talented Puerto Rican artist. Christopher Eccleston ("Jude") also stars. (Miramax)

"SLIDING DOORS" This comedy-drama about modern relationships will star Gwyneth Paltrow (who last year charmed audiences in "Emma," a comedy-drama about Victorian relationships). "Sliding Doors" will center on the choices people make and the possibilities of what would happen had different decisions been made. Peter Howitt scripts and will make his directorial debut. (Distribution is to be set)

"LOST IN SPACE" Gary Oldman ("The Fifth Element") is set to star as the selfish, bumbling Dr. Smith in this bigscreen adaption of the '60s sci-fi TV show about a futuristic family travelling the cosmos in their spaceship, trying to get back to Earth. William Hurt ("Michael") plays patriarch John Robinson, with Mimi Rogers ("The Mirror Has Two Faces") as wife Maureen, "Swingers'" Heather Graham as daughter Judy, Lacey Chabert of TV's "Party of Five" as daughter Penny, and newcomer Jack Johnson as son Will. Stephen Hopkins ("The Ghost and the Darkness") will helm; Akiva Goldsman ("Batman and Robin") scripts. (New Line)

"UMP" Sylvester Stallone ("Daylight") is in negotiations to star in this black comedy, to be directed by Frank Oz ("Indian in the Cupboard.") Based on a novel by Jim Cohen, the project is about a hit man who's called Ump because he adheres to a strict set of rules. After knocking off two mob bosses, he hides out in New Jersey and proceeds to straighten out the town. (MGM)

UNTITLED ANDY KAUFMAN BIOPIC Director Milos Forman and scripters Scott Alexander and Larry Karaszewski, the team behind "The People Vs. Larry Flynt," will next bring to the screen the life story of another eccentric figure, the late comedian Andy Kaufman. Kaufman, who died of lung cancer in 1984, was best known for his role as mild-mannered mechanic Latka Gravas on TV's "Taxi." He was also notorious for his outrageous and bizarre stand-up routines and talk show appearances. No star has been attached to play the lead as yet. (Universal)

"POPCORN" Joel Schumacher ("Batman and Robin") will direct this satire of Hollywood, which is based on British comic Ben Elton's best-selling book of the same name. Elton stars as a director with a cult following who grapples with his responsibility to society. (Warner)

"THE JAMES GANG" John Hannah ("Four Weddings and a Funeral"), Toni Collette ("Cosi") and newcomer Helen McCrory will star in this dark comedy about a mother who is forced by a desperate situation to go on a crime spree and then flee with her children. She is pursued by a sympathetic female detective who's a mother as well. (Distribution is to be set)

"FORMULA ONE" Ridley Scott ("Navy Cross") is in talks to direct Antonio Banderas ("Evita") in this actioner about Brazilian race-car driver Ayrton Senna, who was killed in an accident at the 1994 Monte Carlo Grand Prix. (New Line)

"THE BEE" Action star Jackie Chan ("First Strike") is in talks to take the lead in this comedy about an architect and the mayhem that ensues when he tries to develop a farmland—as told from the point of view of the bee that harasses him. John Hughes wrote the script and produces. (Buena Vista)

"ANTS" Hollywood must be bugging out: Here's another film told from a pest's perspective. Woody Allen is the voice of a disgruntled ant trying to escape the drudgery of the totalitarian insect world. (DreamWorks)

"FREAK THE MIGHTY" Sharon Stone will star in this drama about the mother of a boy genius who has a degenerative disease and stops growing at the age of six. Peter Chelsom ("Funny Bones") directs. (Miramax)

"U.S. MARSHALS" In this sequel to "The Fugitive," Tommy Lee Jones reprises his role as the relentless Sam Gerard, who leads a team of marshals in pursuit of a cunningly evasive fugitive on the run ("Murder at 1600's" Wesley Snipes). (Warner)

ET CETERA: Michelle Yeoh, aka Michelle Khan ("Supercop"), takes the coveted Bond Woman role in UA's still untitled Bond 18, opposite Pierce Brosnan as 007 and Jonathan Pryce ("Evita") as the villainous leader of a media empire...Matthew McConaughey ("A Time to Kill") is in talks to star with Danny Glover in Steven Spielberg's "Amistad," to be released by DreamWorks...John Malkovich, Jeremy Irons and Gerard Depardieu will play Musketeers Athos, Aramis and Porthos, respectively, and Gabriel Byrne takes on the role of D'Artagnan in UA's adaptation of the Alexandre Dumas classic "The Man in the Iron Mask," which stars Leonardo Di Caprio in the dual lead role...Billy Bob Thornton and Bill Paxton will star in Paramount's John Boorman-directed "A Simple Plan," a thriller about two brothers who discover a huge sum of dirty money.

Your Popcorn's Ready For An Oil Change

Introducing PopWise® popping oi the only oil that gives you more nutritionally attractive popcorn
plus incredible flavor and aroma* appeal and excellent performance
PopWise has all the qualities you need to satisfy your customers, increase popcorn sales and boos your bottom line.

Nutritional Appeal

- Less than 10% saturated fat
- Not hydrogenated
- Zero cholesterol

Customer Appeal

- Classic theater popcorn flavo
- Excellent buttery aroma

Performance Appeal

- Easy to handle
- Keeps kettle cleaner longer
- Extends popcorn holding tim
- Safer operation
- Pump line won't clog

Isn't It Time You Got Wise?
Contact your distributor or call 1-800-328-3534 for more information.

POPWISE®
POPPING OIL
We're Making Popcorn Good Again!®

A CARGILL FOODS produc

Response No. 52

©1995 Cargill, In

MAY TRAILERS

Apres now le deluge: the summer flicks are about to pour forth

Cinema's summer flood begins early this year, aptly with Paramount's "The Flood" (see photo below) on May 2. It represents the people-in-peril action fare that often dominates the season, and it and Columbia's sci-fi flick "Fifth Element" are likely to rule the roost for May's first half. (As will its compatriots later in the month, Warner boards an upstream comedy canoe with May 9's "Father's Day.")

That landscape changes drastically come May 23, and the meteor strike that will transform the cinema climate overnight is Steven Spielberg's highly anticipated "The Lost World" sequel to "Jurassic Park," wading in (well, more like stomping in) via Universal. Not willing to do battle on the dinosaurs' turf, the other studios for the month's second half offer only comedy counterprogramming with the likes of Buena Vista's "Nothing to Lose" and Fox's Matthau/Lemmon re-pairer "Out to Sea."

Despite this month's big-ticket competition, the independents are still sailing forth. As in April, chief among them are Miramax ("Operation Condor," "Children of the Revolution," "Temptress Moon") and Fine Line ("Letters of Love," "Love! Valour! Compassion!")

Of course, all this is only the beginning of the deluge, with the big-sequel likes of "Batman and Robin," "Speed 2" and "Alien Resurrection" along with such high-profile new fare as "Hercules," "Titanic" and "Men In Black" set to come ashore during summer proper. (See our Summer Heat section in the ShoWest Intro, bound into this issue.)

Who will reign on the plains of summer? One thing is certain: There are paddlers aplenty.

MAY 2

The Flood

This disaster/crime thriller follows a Midwestern sheriff ("ID4's" Randy Quaid) who must evacuate the residents of a small town when torrential rains threaten to flood the area. Meanwhile, an armored car breaks down and the driver ("Broken Arrow's" Christian Slater) is stranded and soon surrounded not only by thigh-high waters but by gunmen. Morgan Freeman ("Seven") and Minnie Driver ("Sleepers") co-star. Mikael Salomon ("A Far Off Place") directs; Graham Yost ("Speed") scripts; Mark Gordon ("Speed"), Gary Levinsohn ("The Real McCoy") and Ian Bryce ("Speed") produce. See our Sneak Preview in this issue. (Paramount, 5/2)

Exploitips: Watching surface water swirl by isn't quite the thrill of watching a whole tornado tear through, and the low-key setting is more Mayberry than Manhattan, so repeat business will depend more on plot and character than did last May's "Twister." But weekend #1 is a virtual lock with mainstream moviegoers; have a bit of Wall Drug promotion fun and offer ticketbuyers free water.

Warriors of Virtue

Ronny Yu ("The Phantom Lover") directs this action fantasy about a teenage boy ("Jack's" Mario Yedidia) who seeks outside acceptance. One day, he's transported to the land of Tao, where humans and animal-like Warmbloods live among balance and harmony. There, he learns the five virtues from five Warmblood warriors: righteousness, benevolence, integrity, wisdom and loyalty. With that knowledge, he must help them fight the terrible Komodo ("Braveheart's" Angus MacFayden), who wants to rob Tao of its energy. Marley Shelton ("Nixon") and Chao-Li Chi ("The Joy Luck Club") co-star. Michael Vickerman scripts; the Law Brothers produce for their IJL Creations. (MGM, 5/2)

Exploitips: Expect "Warriors of Virtue," with its kangaroo-like creatures, earnest themes and PG rating, to attract children and young teens; "Operation Condor" will pull the older action audiences. Expect primary business on weekend matinees.

Austin Powers: International Man of Mystery

"Wayne's World's" Mike Myers plays a Swinging Sixties secret agent frozen in 1967 and now thawed out to match wits with his archrival, Dr. Evil; meanwhile, he must come to terms with his outdated sexuality. The cast also includes Elizabeth Hurley ("Dangerous Ground") as his sultry sidekick and Michael York, Rob Lowe, Mimi Rogers, Christian Slater, Tom Arnold and Carrie Fisher. Jay Roach directs; Myers scripts, and he produces with Suzanne and Jennifer Todd and Demi Moore for Moore's Moving Pictures. (New Line, 5/2)

Exploitips: However underappreciated, Myers' "So I Married an Axe Murderer"—Myers' only non-"Wayne" star turn—was an underwhelming performer for Tristar in 1993, and his "Wayne's World" sequel, though it did well, was also four years ago. Still, Myers remains a name quantity, and his supporting cast will garner audience attention. Boost media awareness by holding an opening-night worst-dressed contest for moviegoers who come attired in '60s duds.

Truth or Consequences, N.M.

Actor Kiefer Sutherland directs this thriller about a small-time criminal named Raymond ("Palookaville's" Vincent Gallo) and the love of his life, Addy (Kim Dickens). When Raymond exits prison, he and Addy plan to make enough money to live happily ever after via a drug heist they'll pull with a couple of crooks (Sutherland and "Forrest Gump's" Mykelti Williamson). But the job is a botch; left with two hostages (Grace Phillips and Kevin Pollak), Raymond and Addy are still determined to make their dream come true, but a gangster (Martin Sheen) is on their trail. Rod Steiger co-stars. Brad Mirman ("Body of Evidence") scripts; J. Paul Higgins, Kevin Messick ("Surviving the Game") and Hilary Wayne ("Blank Check") produce. (Triumph, 5/2)

Exploitips: The R rating here, for violence, sex and language, spells out the demo—male action—so highlight the guns and gal. As with "Paris, Texas," the film's title is that of a real town, so try this catchline: "Love and larceny along the Rio Grande."

Letters of Love

Still missing her dead fiance Itsuki Fujii after two years, the meek Hiroko Watanabe (Miho Nakayama) on a whim writes him a letter and mails it to his old address. Surprisingly, Hiroko receives a reply, but from a young woman (also Miho Nakayama) who not only shares Itsuki's name

SDDS Sony Dynamic Digital Sound™

YOU CAN ALWAYS LISTEN TO A MOVIE AT HOME...

BUT FOR THE TOTAL EXPERIENCE - GO TO AN SDDS™ CINEMA!

Competing cinema digital sound systems, also available for the home, are only 5.1 channels.

SDDS is designed exclusively for the cinema, with a distinctive difference: 8 channels!

DEFINING THE DIGITAL FUTURE.™

SONY

SONY CINEMA PRODUCTS CORPORATION:
10202 West Washington Blvd., Culver City, CA 90232, U.S.A. Tel: 310 280 5777 Fax: 310 280 2024

© 1997 Sony Cinema Products Corporation. All rights reserved. SDDS, Sony Dynamic Digital Sound and SR-D are trademarks of Sony.

Processor No. 415

Operation Condor

Asian action hero Jackie Chan ("Jackie Chan's First Strike") not only stars but directs and co-writes this film about a man hired to find hidden gold buried by German soldiers during World War II. As his search takes him from the South China Sea to European capitols to the Sahara Desert, a legion of criminals are hot on his heels. Carol Cheng, Eva Cobo De Garcia and Ikeda Shoko co-star. Edward Tang ("Rumble in the Bronx") co-scripts; Leonard Ho ("Supercop") produces. (Miramax, 5/2 wide)

Exploitips: "First Strike" made $13 million in its first three weeks stateside; "Supercop" made $15 million; "Rumble in the Bronx" made $30 million. To increase that level of boxoffice, position this as an exotic Chan take on "Raiders of the Lost Ark." Emphasize Chan's directing and co-scripting roles to lend this film event status for the already converted.

but who was his classmate and, as it's gradually revealed as the two women trade letters, much more. Etsushi Toyokaya and Katsuyuki Shinohara co-star. Video and TV director Shunji Iwai makes his feature directing/writing debut; Jiro Komaki, Tomoki Ikeda and Mashiiko Nagasawa produce the Japanese-language film. (Fine Line, 5/2 NY, 5/23 LA)

Exploitips: In a four-star review, our Toronto fest reviewer calls this "lovely and delicate.... 'Love Letter' [as it was then called] goes beyond moving drama to deeper concerns of memory, love, loss and an indefinable mystery.... Dreamlike and haunting." That type of copy has art-house written all over it. In the weeks leading up to the run, specialized exhibitors might offer discounts for moviegoers willing to share their real-life love letters; posted with IDs removed, those letters would make a powerful lobby draw.

Sprung

After their best friends Clyde ("Poetic Justice's" Joe Torry) and Adina (Paula Jai Parker) abandon them at a party, Montel ("Fear of a Black Hat's" Rusty Cundieff) and Brandy ("House Party's" Tisha Campbell) fall in love. When the happy couple decide to move in together, their purported pals attempt to sabotage the lovebirds' move. Cundieff (who also helmed "Tales From the Hood") directs and co-scripts this comedy, and he produces with Trimark's Darin Scott. See our Sneak Preview in this issue. (Trimark, 5/2)

Exploitips: In the "House Party"/"Friday" tradition, "Sprung" is likely to have the most spring at the urban boxoffice. Aside from the indirect competition provided by "The Flood," "Sprung" will have that dependable demo to itself on opening weekend.

Children of the Revolution

A "black Red comedy" set in 1989 Australia, "Children of the Revolution" opens as Joe Welch (Richard Roxbough) puts the country in an uproar by immobilizing the government. But there's a history to his story. Back in 1949, Joe's mother (Judy Davis) was a radical who revered Josef Stalin (F. Murray Abraham). Invited to meet her hero, she returns pregnant, marries another man ("Shine's" Geoffrey Rush) and vows to raise her son as a revolutionary. But her little Joe has other ideas. Sam Neill co-stars. Peter Duncan directs and scripts; Tristram Miall ("Strictly Ballroom") produces. (Miramax, 5/1 NY/LA)

Exploitips: Down Under comedies tend to do well on the specialized circuit Up Here, in good part because there's no language barrier. Although the Davis name is an art-house favorite, the attention paid "Shine" will make the Rush credit equally valuable.

MAY 9

Father's Day

Based on a 1984 French film, "Father's Day" follows the adventures of two men ("The Birdcage's" Robin Williams and "City Slickers'" Billy Crystal) who have been tricked into looking for an old girlfriend's runaway child because she's made each of them believe that he is the father. Julia Louis-Dreyfus ("National Lampoon's Christmas Vacation") and Nastassja Kinski ("Faraway, So Close!") co-star. Ivan Reitman ("Junior") directs, and he produces this Northern Lights/Silver Pictures effort with Joel Silver; Babaloo Mandel and Lowell Ganz (who've provided Crystal with the likes of "City Slickers," "Mr. Saturday Night" and "Forget Paris") script. See our Sneak Preview in this issue. (Warner, 5/9)

Exploitips: With "Father's Day" boasting the Williams/Crystal teaming and its everybody-loves-comedy genre as its key selling points, Warner has no other studio competition willing to brook the date aside from Columbia. Expect "Fifth Element" to pull decidedly male, and this to pull most everyone else, among them the distaff and date-night demos. Because the real Father's Day isn't far off (June 15), proactive exhibitors can profit by staging a contest honoring dads.

Temptress Moon

Told he's going to be a student, a boy named Zhongliang is sent to live with the rich Pang family on their country estate. Once there, however, he is forced to become a servant. Years later, the grown and bitter Zhongliang (Leslie Cheung) moves to decadent Shanghai, where he's taken in by a crime family. He becomes a blackmailing gigolo, and soon his assignment becomes to seduce the heir (Gong Li) to the Pang fortune. Chen Kaige ("Yellow Earth") directs and scripts; Hsu Feng (who produced his "Farewell My Concubine") produces. (Miramax, 5/9 NY/LA)

Exploitips: "Temptress Moon" was banned in China, which will draw select stateside attention. Although the most cinema-savvy among them will recall that "Temptress Moon" received a cool reception at Cannes last year, art-house auds are familiar with and respond to the names and work of Chen Kaige and Gong Li, so those two are the sells.

Intimate Relations

A black comedy based on a true story from 1950s England, "Intimate Relations" follows the seemingly peaceful family life of Marjorie ("Sister My Sister's" Julie Walters), a lonely wife and mother who seduces a young man ("The Madness of King George's" Rupert Graves). The situation becomes complicated when Marjorie's husband ("Intersection's" Matthew Walker) and 14-year-old daughter ("Jane Eyre's" Laura Sadler) learn of her secret affair. Philip Goodhew directs and scripts; Angela Hart, Lisa Hope and Handmade head Jon Slan produce. (Fox Searchlight, 5/9 ltd)

Exploitips: Our Seattle fest reviewer gave this "dark and relentlessly bleak film" two stars, saying the characters were so unsympathetic audiences might wish for "a swift end to all of them" and calling the plot "utterly

Put The Dream Team On Your Team!

Wake-up your tired old chocolate peanuts and raisins with the freshness and quality of Planters and Sun•Maid... Then watch your sales take off and your profits soar.

Planters and Sun•Maid mean top quality in your candy case. And with industry leading prices, rebates and merchandising support, this Dream Team should be on your team!

So to get the Dream Team working for you, just call our "Box Office" for free samples and details!

PROMOTION IN MOTION INC. / Ferrara Pan

AMERICA'S FAVORITE CANDIES℠

The Promotion In Motion Companies, Inc., 3 Reuten Drive, Closter, NJ 07624 USA
Tel: 201-784-5800 Fax: 201-784 1010

Response No. 56

©The Promotion In Motion Companies, Inc., Closter, NJ 07624 All Rights Reserved.

Fifth Element

In a future that's nonapocalyptic, a New York City cab driver is surprised to find himself fighting on the good side in a war between good and the ultimate evil. Bruce Willis ("12 Monkeys"), Gary Oldman ("Immortal Beloved"), Ian Holm ("The Madness of King George") and Milla Jovovich ("Dazed and Confused") star. Luc Besson, director of "La Femme Nikita" and "The Professional," helms this science-fiction fantasy; Besson co-scripts with Robert Mark Kamen ("The Fugitive"); Patrice Ledoux (Besson's "The Big Blue") produces. (Columbia, 5/9)

Exploitips: Given Willis' presence, even with the nonapocalyptic factor "Fifth Element" is likely to recall "12 Monkeys," which isn't to the bad: That Terry Gilliam film made almost $60 million domestic after its late '95 release. Expect audiences that saw "The Flood" a week ago to turn out here, along with the SF demo that might be called the "Star Wars Special Edition" crowd on the look for something new. While the Willis moniker and film genre are drawing mainstream fans, highlight the Besson credit to also pull in his art-house supporters.

predictable" ("all that's missing is a red flag marked 'foreshadowing'"). However, she cites Walters' and Graves' work as commendable, and the R-rated subject matter and scenario ("blackmail, twisted sexual mores, and unrequited love") boast a salable salaciousness for specialized moviegoers.

MAY 16

Shall We Dance

In this comic love story, a group of ordinary Japanese people experience the extraordinary when they begin to take ballroom dance lessons. Koji Yasuyo, Tamiyo Kusakari, Naoto Takenaka, Eriko Watanabe and Akira Emoto star. Masayuki Suo ("Sumo Do, Sumo Don't," which won Japan's equivalent of the best picture Academy Award in 1992) directs and scripts; Shoji Masui and Yuji Ogata produce. (Miramax, 5/16 NY/LA)

Exploitips: This is specialized fare, likely to attract the same type of folks who attended Miramax's "Small Wonders" this past October, and it should pull Asian-film devotees. Tie-ins with local dance studios and dance clubs could expand the take.

Love! Valour! Compassion!

Joe Mantello directs the film version of Terrence McNally's Tony winner about eight gay friends who gather in a country house over three summer weekends. Jason Alexander ("Dustin Checks In") joins the original ensemble. McNally adapts; Doug Chapin and Barry Crost (who partnered on "What's Love Got to Do With It") produce. (Fine Line, 5/16 ltd)

Exploitips: Expect heavy select-site attendance from gay audiences and art-house support in large cities. Although Alexander is well known among mainstream audiences for his small-tube turns on "Seinfeld," that's less likely to pull crossover interest than is the Tony credit. As with Roxie's "The Last Time I Committed Suicide," good Sundance reviews can be exploited here.

Gummo

Harmony Korine (who scripted "Kids") directs and scripts another tale of bored and rebellious youth, this time focusing on two teens, Solomon and Tummler, who wile away their days in the nowhere town of Xenia, Ohio. Chloe Sevigny (also "Kids," "Trees Lounge"), Max Perlich ("Rush"), Nick Sutton, Jacob Reynolds and Linda Manz star. Cary Woods (also "Kids") produces. (Fine Line, 5/16)

Exploitips: The "Kids" connection is the key sell here. Position this as a Kids 2 to overcome the cartoony name.

Guantanamera

Set in current-day Cuba, this Spanish-language film follows the chance encounters between the passengers of a truck and the mourners in a funeral car as they travel from town to town. The seductive Mariano drives the truck with his good friend Ramon, while the funeral car holds Gina, Mariano's lost love, and her husband. Carlos Cruz, Mirtha Ibbara and Salvador Wood star. The late Tomas Gutierrez Alea and Juan Carlos Tabio Rey (who paired for "Strawberry and Chocolate") direct, and they script with Eliseo A. Garcia Marruz; Gerardo Herrero and Camilo Vives executive produce the 1995 Cuban project for UGC. (CFP, 5/16)

Exploitips: Making a reference to "Strawberry and Chocolate," which generated a decent art-house till ($2 million) for Miramax after a Jan. '95 release, will attract attention from the foreign-language set. CFP originally had this slated for 1/24.

La Promesse

Fifteen-year-old Igor (Jeremie Renier) lives a life of corruption taught to him by the father he reveres. He steals money from customers at the local garage and believes his father is right in hiring illegal immigrants. When his father inadvertently commits murder, however, Igor's conscience forces him to honor the promise he made to a dead man. Olivier Gourmet co-stars. Jean-Pierre Dardenne and Luc Dardenne direct and script this French-language film. (New Yorker, 5/16 NY)

Exploitips: Expect the usual Francophile audiences at the art-house turnstile. Attract their attention by focusing on the brother creators through a catchline like "In the tradition of the Tavianis come the brothers Dardenne with 'La Promesse.'"

Happiness

In this 1995 French-language film ("Le Bonheur Est Dans Le Pre"), an unhappy man uses a case of mistaken identity in order to escape his miserable family life and begin a new existence. Corporate greed, sexual entanglements and country romance figure into the comic mix. Michel Serrault ("Nelly and Monsieur Arnaud") and Eddy Mitchell star. Etienne Chatiliez directs. (Artificial Eye, 5/16 NY)

Exploitips: Since launching a stateside operation last year, Artificial Eye has built a commendable French-language slate (including Claude Sautet's "Nelly and Monsieur Arnaud," Eric Rohmer's "Rendezvous in Paris" and Bertrand Blier's "Mon Homme"). This is likely to ring in similar art-house numbers.

We'll $how You The Money!

No-one can show you the money like we can, because the biggest profit opportunities in the industry today, start with a call to us! From box packs to peg packs and kids packs to bulk packs... We can help move your per capitas and concession marketing with brands that sell, at bigger margins and with support you can really sink your teeth into!

We're unique, fresh and your springboard to bigger profits. It's made us one of the confection industry's fastest leading growth companies over the past five years and it can put your business on the fast track too!

So, if you want to see the money,
call us for free samples and to schedule a business review.
We'll show you how a little change can lead to a lot of money!

PROMOTION IN MOTION INC. / Ferrara Pan

MOVING AT THE SPEED OF CANDY℠

The Promotion In Motion Companies, Inc., 3 Reuten Drive, Closter, NJ 07624 USA
Tel: (201) 784-5800 Fax: (201) 784-1010

Response No. 192

©The Promotion In Motion Companies, Inc., Closter, NJ 07624 All Rights Reserved

THE LOST WORLD: JURASSIC PARK

This sequel to the 1993 blockbuster again follows the adventures of mathematician Dr. Ian Malcolm (Jeff Goldblum, more lately of "ID4") after his shocking realization that not everything was destroyed in the dinosaur disaster four years ago. Julianne Moore ("Nine Months"), Vince Vaughn ("Swingers"), Arliss Howard ("Johns"), Richard Schiff, Pete Postlethwaite ("Dragonheart") and Peter Stormare ("Fargo") and Vanessa Lee Chester ("Harriet the Spy") star. Steven Spielberg directs; David Koepp ("Jurassic Park") scripts; Gerald R. Molen and Colin Wilson produce for Amblin. (Universal, 5/23)

Exploitips: This will be a tough sell—you'll have to open for business. The most valuable other Exploitips will be to have plenty of tickets on hand and perhaps retrofit your ticketing machinery with a cooling system so the system doesn't melt down. Most of the original's key cast members—Sam Neill, Laura Dern, Joseph Mazzello and Ariana Richards—don't return, but "Jurassic Park" was never about the people anyway. As long as the dinos are there, audiences will be. Expect a very fast start (the original made about $50 million on its first weekend), but will "The Lost World" top its predecessor's eventual $357 million domestic? Consider this one to be like an atom bomb: Close is good enough.

MAY 23

Nothing to Lose

In this comedy written and directed by Steve Oedekerk ("The Nutty Professor"), Tim Robbins ("The Player") stars as Nick Beam, an advertising exec who realizes his whole life is a lie. When a carjacker ("Bad Boys'" Martin Lawrence) attempts to rob him at a traffic light, Nick takes him hostage—but it's not long before the two develop a friendship. John C. McGinley ("Hard Eight"), Giancarlo Esposito ("Fresh") and Kelly Preston ("Addicted to Love") co-star. Martin Bregman and Michael S. Bregman (who partnered for "Gold Diggers: The Secret of Bear Mountain") produce with Dan Jinks for Touchstone. (Buena Vista, 5/23)

Exploitips: Its casting to attract both suburban and urban audiences is of secondary importance; the comedy genre is the key element that will allow "Nothing to Lose" to counterprogram the weekend's leviathan, "The Lost World." Maximize revenue from those looking for something other than dinosaurs by emphasizing the Oedekerk lineage.

Boogie Nights

In this comedy, a group of filmmakers try to revamp the adult entertainment industry. Spanning the '70s and '80s, "Boogie Nights" follows the ups-and-downs of the players. The acting ensemble includes Mark Wahlberg ("Fear"), Julianne Moore (also in "The Lost World"), Burt Reynolds ("Striptease"), Don Cheadle ("Devil in a Blue Dress"), William H. Macy ("Fargo"), Heather Graham ("Swingers") and John C. Reilly (also in "Nothing to Lose"). Paul Thomas Anderson ("Hard Eight") directs, scripts and produces. (New Line, 5/23 NY/LA/SF/Tor/Chi, 6/13 wide)

Exploitips: With Disney's "Nothing to Lose" as its real competition (given that "The Lost World" rules the 5/23 world), New Line was wise to put this out in only the heaviest moviegoing cities, which could support two same-genre, similar-demos releases. Expect "Boogie Nights" to pull the younger comedy crowd.

MAY 30

Out to Sea

In this romantic comedy, the Grumpy Old Men make mischief on the high seas: A rogue (Walter Matthau) persuades his brother-in-law (Jack Lemmon) to be a dance instructor on a cruise liner so they can meet women and con money from them. Elaine Stritch, Dyan Cannon and Gloria DeHaven co-star. Martha Coolidge ("Three Wishes") directs; Robert Jacobs scripts; John Davis and David T. Friendly (who paired on "Daylight") produce. (Fox, 5/30)

Exploitips: Neither "My Fellow Americans" nor "I'm Not Rappaport" swept the movie world away during the holidays, so what the public might want from Matthau and Lemmon is them together again. Which this delivers, so that's the sell.

Masterminds

After being expelled from the Shady Glen School by the principal ("A Time to Kill's" Brenda Fricker), 14-year-old Ozzie ("Alaska's" Vincent Kartheiser) decides to play one more practical joke. But, when he ventures into the school basement to do the deed, he learns the security guard ("Star Trek: First Contact's" Patrick Stewart) has taken all the students hostage. That leaves just Ozzie and his penchant for pranks to lead the kids to triumph. Roger Christian ("The Sender") directs; Floyd Byars ("Mindwalk"), Alex Siskin and Chris Black script; Byars produces with Robert Dudelson. (Triumph, 5/30)

Exploitips: Even on weekend #2, no distributor cares to go against "The Lost World" except with comedy. "Masterminds" could be effective counterprogramming for the early-teen set, so emphasize Kartheiser's presence and the start-of-freedom date. Catchline: "School's out, but the students are being held hostage. Only one boy can save the summer."

MAY UNDATED

Paperback Romance

In this romantic comedy (aka "Lucky Break"), a writer of erotica ("Two If By Sea's" Gia Carides) lets her tales take her where she thinks her crippled leg would never allow her. When she breaks her leg, however, she has the perfect "disguise," claiming it was a skiing accident. Freed from her inhibitions, she goes after the man of her dreams—a handsome but engaged jeweler ("Trees Lounge's" Anthony LaPaglia). Comic catastrophe follows. Rebecca Gibney co-stars. Ben Lewin ("The Favor, the Watch and the Very Big Fish") directs and scripts; Bob Weis ("Heartbreakers") produces. (Goldwyn, May)

Exploitips: The name change is a wise one, as those who read paperback romances are often female—the very demo for this. Try a catchline like "She wrote tales of love and lust until she began to live one herself."

Tetsuo II: Body Hammer

In this surreal thriller, a mutant skinhead and a businessman who mutates into a half-metal fighting machine do battle. Japanese filmmaker Shinya Tsukamoto ("Tetsuo: The Ironman") helms the sequel. (Manga)

Exploitips: Two-year-old Manga, the Island-owned distributor that had success with last year's "Ghost in the Shell" and followed with this March's "Mandela," returns to Japanese action territory. Expect similar numbers and demos as with "Ghost in the Shell."

Timothy Leary's Dead

Filmmakers Paul Davids and Todd Easton Mills chronicle the life of psychedelic guru Timothy Leary, mainly focusing on his death and the last year of his life. Featuring music from the Moody Blues, this documentary includes archival footage and interviews with Dr. Richard Alpert, Ralph Motzner, Zach

ORC

WHEN YOU NEED THE

BEST

AND THE BRIGHTEST

THERE'S ONLY

ONE SOURCE

ORC

ORC Lighting Products is one of the world's largest manufacturers of specialty discharge lamps and a recognized innovator of sophisticated illumination systems.

ORC Lighting Products
A BEC Group Company
1300 Optical Drive, Azusa, CA 91702
Tel: (818) 969-3344 In US: (800) 755-LAMP
Fax: (818) 969-2260
E-mail: ORCLIGHT@aol.com

Response No. 99

Leary, Vicki Marshall and Michael Bowen. Davids and Mills produce. (Strand, May)

Exploitips: Expect twentysomethings who want to know what the '60s were about and fortysomethings who wish they could remember them. For specialized houses who consider double bills, "Timothy Leary's Dead" might make a match with a tale of the '50s, "The Last Time I Committed Suicide."

The Last Time I Committed Suicide

Based on a Beats-era letter from pal Neal Cassady to writer Jack Kerouac, this Kushner-Locke/Tapestry production stars Thomas Jane and Keanu Reeves along with Tom Bower, Adrien Brody ("King of the Hill"), John Doe ("Roadside Prophets"), Claire Forlani ("Basquiat") and Marg Helgenberger ("Species"). Stephen Kay ("Intimate Power") directs and scripts; Edward Bates and Louise Rosner produce. (Roxie, May platform)

Exploitips: Like K-L's "Freeway" acquired at Sundance by the expanding Roxie, this "artsploitation" effort boasts a name cast but will interest only the specialized demo. A cross-promo with a bookstore that's heavy on Kerouac would reach that literate audience.

Contempt

Jean-Luc Godard's 1963 French/Italian production spoofs the international moviemaking business. While filming a version of "The Odyssey," a screenwriter (Michel Piccoli) tries to maintain his integrity while dealing with a sleazy producer (Jack Palance).

LATE MOVIE MOVES INTO APRIL/SPRING...

Reach the Rock

In this dramatic comedy, a young man named Robin (newcomer Alessandro Nivola) over the course of one hot summer night goes to extreme measures to outwit two policemen ("Solo's" William Sadler and Bruce Norris) and win back a beautiful young woman (Brooke Langton of TV's "Melrose Place"). William Ryan (associate producer on "Dennis the Menace") directs; comicmeister John Hughes scripts, and he produces with Ricardo Mestres ("101 Dalmatians"). (Universal, spring)

Exploitips: The catchline "From the makers of '101 Dalmations'" could broaden the pull, but expect males and date-nighters to dominate. So try "1 hot night + 1 beautiful girl – 2 policemen = 1 young man on the run."

187

In this dramatic thriller, an inner-city high school teacher is attacked by a student who he'd given a failing grade. When a year later he returns to his profession as a substitute, the teacher finds he's recovered on the outside but has changed on the inside. Samuel L. Jackson ("A Time to Kill"), Kelly Rowan ("Candyman: Farewell to the Flesh") and John Heard ("My Fellow Americans") star. Kevin Reynolds ("Waterworld") directs; Scott Yagemann scripts; Bruce Davey ("Leo Tolstoy's Anna Karenina") and Steve McEveety ("The Man Without a Face") produce for Mel Gibson's Icon Prods. (Warner, 4/25)

Exploitips: Reynolds' work ("Rapa Nui" is another example) is message prone, damaging the drama, and given the plot setup that remains a worry here. But Jackson has a way of cutting through dross in his performances, so his credit and that of the "Braveheart"-making Ican are the sells.

Rough Magic

In this romantic adventure, Bridget Fonda and Russell Crowe star in a tale (adapted from "Miss Shumway Waves a Wand" by James Hadley Chase) involving magic, mysticism and Mexico. Jim Broadbent, D.W. Moffet and Paul Rodriguez co-star. Clare Peploe ("High Season") directs, and Peploe also scripts with Robert Mundy ("Chattanooga Choo Choo") and William Brookfield; Laurie Parker ("Even Cowgirls Get the Blues") and Declan Baldwin ("The Dark Half") produce for UGC/Recorded Picture in association with Martin Scorsese; Goldwyn handles the stateside release for Rysher. (Goldwyn, spring)

Exploitips: Bookstore tie-ins are worth a try, but the Fonda/Crowe pairing is even more promising and should be empha- sized to attract date-nighters looking for something off the studio mainstream path.

Volcano

L.A.—having suffered through riot, trial, earthquake and fire—now faces new trouble as the city goes vesuvial. Tommy Lee Jones ("Men in Black"), Anne Heche ("Walking and Talking"), Gaby Hoffmann ("Now and Then"), Don Cheadle ("Boogie Nights") and John Corbett star. Mick Jackson ("L.A. Story") directs; Billy Ray ("Color of Night"), Barbara Benedek ("Sabrina") and Jerome Armstrong script; Neal Moritz ("Juice") and Andrew Z. Davis ("Lost Angels") produce. (Fox, April)

Exploitips: Pompeii and circumstance: Universal's "Dante's Peak" beat this Fox 2000 effort to theatres, but this inferno epic still has the big-canvas narrative advantage. ("Dante's Peak" was set in the rural outback.) So emphasize the L.A. hook—that it's disaster hitting L.A., not that the disoster is a volcano.

Keys to Tulsa

In this thriller, the black-sheep son of a wealthy Tulsa family grudgingly returns to the existence he left behind and the ties that still bind. His life worsens when he's blackmailed by the husband of his former sweetheart. Revenge becomes his only chance for redemption. Eric Stoltz, James Spader, Mary Tyler Moore, Joanna Going and Cameron Diaz star. Leslie Greif (producer of "Heaven's Prisoners") directs, and he produces with Harley Peyton, who adapts a Brian Fair Berkey novel. (Gramercy, 4/11 ltd)

Exploitips: The cast is an impressive one likely to bring in the twentysomething audience that would be most interested in a prodigal-son story. Although "Heaven's Prisoners" was not an audience hit, it fared decently with critics, so citing that Greif credit (over his more recent "Meet Wally Sparks") could drow reviewer attention.

A Chorus of Disapproval

Its legal problems resolved, this 1988 British film (which barely received a U.S. release a decade ago) arrives stateside. In the adaptation of Alan Ayckbourn's play, a shy widower moves to a seaside town; there, he becomes involved with an amateur troupe in which amour runs amuck. Jeremy Irons, Anthony Hopkins, Prunella Scales ("Freddie as F.R.O.7") and Patsy Kensit ("Angels & Insects") star. Michael Winner ("Appointment With Death") directs and scripts. (Theafilm)

Exploitips: "A Chorus of Disapproval" has long been on the video shelves, but the Irons/Hopkins teaming could win a second look from specialized audiences. Given its plot, the film could draw older audiences looking for an option to the usual multiplex offerings. (Also: See our Nov. '94 Theafilm article.)

Fritz Lang, the director of "M," plays himself. Brigitte Bardot and Giorgia Moll co-star. Joseph E. Levine produces. (Strand, May)

Exploitips: Expect response in the largest specialized markets to the Godard name.

Woman in the Dunes

Hiroshi Teshighara's 1964 Oscar-nom Japanese film, "Woman in the Dunes" follows a sand-beetle entomologist (Eiji Okada) who seeks shelter with a widow (Kyoko Kishida). Her hut is at a pit's bottom, which continually fills with sand. In order to survive, the trapped man must constantly shovel; before long, his hatred changes to passion. (Milestone, May) Exploitips: Emphasize the film's exotic nature and its 33rd anniversary to draw specialized Japanophiles. Expect interest from only the largest art-house markets.

Antonio Gaudi

This 1985 Japanese film, like "Woman in the Dunes" directed by Hiroshi Teshighara, explores the life of early 20th century architect Antonio Gaudi. Influenced by the architecture of the Spanish Middle Ages, Gaudi transforms the buildings of Barcelona, with the Temple of Sagrada Familia his crowning achievement. (Milestone, May) Exploitips: Although newer than "Woman in the Dunes," this will be a tougher sell—it lacks the Oscar-nom panache, and architecture is less compelling than romance to most. Art-house exhibitors would be wisest to program "Woman in the Dunes" first to interest unfamiliar moviegoers with Teshighara's work.

Cover

SPACE

Tough as Texas, Tommy Lee Jones Takes on the Alien Nation in the Sci-Fi Comedy "Men In Black"

INT. - "TEX'S" RESTAURANT - SAN ANTONIO - DAY
A rainy morning in February, 1997. Tex's is typical of chain restaurants in the modern American south—a not entirely successful amalgamation of the authentic (real saddles and branding irons hung on rough-hewn walls) and the ersatz (plastic signage molded to look like weathered wood; piped-in music that's supposed to be country but sounds more like Foreigner).

ON A DARKENED BOOTH
Absolutely the last booth in absolutely the last row in the room. A surprisingly remote space given how public the location is—the one niche where a man might attempt a murder and get away with it, as long as he was quick and quiet in the way he did the job.

IN THE BOOTH - TWO MEN are seated facing each other. There is an EERIE INTENSITY to the FIRST MAN, and his face looks somehow familiar. He leans forward, speaking quietly but with utter conviction, his words striking terror into the SECOND MAN'S heart --

FIRST MAN: (slight drawl) What I liked about our outlook was the chance to do some thinking... Thinking about the definition of 'alien.' What's an alien, what isn't. What is a morally correct alien. Are you an alien? Am I? Those are good questions for us to ask ourselves in America here every day. Was your mother an alien? Was your grand-dad an alien? Somebody was at some point.

The SECOND MAN nods uncertainly, as if unsure about whether or not he's being put on. The FIRST MAN continues:

FIRST MAN
Our enemies are within. They look like us. The alien is in you...

THE CAMERA drifts slowly down to the tabletop, across a half-finished country-style breakfast and an untouched plate of toast, coming to rest on A TAPE RECORDER, which CHURNS noiselessly in the grey LIGHT...

Actually, Tommy Lee Jones may or may not believe in aliens. But it makes sense for him to talk about them on this rainy morning in this hotel restaurant in his hometown of San Antonio, Texas, because one thing Jones surely does believe in is movies about aliens—and he has since he was a kid. Along with childhood interests in John Wayne, Gene Autry and Johnny Mack Brown, this son of Texas who grew up to be both a film star and the owner and operator of two functioning cattle ranches is perfectly capable of waxing nostalgic about his "science fiction period." "On Friday," Jones says, in his lilting Texas twang, "I'd go see the movie about the space ship that crashed, and the fuel leaked out on an ant-bed and all the ants became the size of boxcars. And then on Saturday, it would be all the crabs on the island that became giants. And there'd always be these big, big guys who looked like hot water heaters coming out of these saucers, with little rayguns and little flashing lights on top of them. I went to see every one of them."

> "People like to believe that there's some darker force and greater authority with an unknown objective, controlling things. There's comfort in that for those people who feel out of control in their own lives."

Jones' early passion for B-movie sci-fi has born unexpected fruit with "Men In Black" (aka "MIB"), the upcoming film in which Jones plays a top-secret government agent who hunts space invaders for a living. "It's very important for these characters to be cool," says Jones, "and for the audience to like them for being cool. I just hope they're cool enough. You can't be too cool in this movie."

Think action. Think comedy. Think "Ghostbusters" with a dash of "Pulp Fiction" and a spoonful of "Independence Day" thrown in. Then add "ID4" break-out artist Will Smith as Jones' co-star, "Get Shorty"/"Addams Family" auteur Barry Sonnenfeld as "MIB's" director, and Steven Spielberg as the film's executive producer, and start thinking blockbuster. Columbia Pictures certainly does: It spent a small fortune to advertise "MIB" to the largest TV audience of the year during the Super Bowl—even though the Super Bowl occurred some six months before "MIB's" scheduled July 2 release.

If "MIB" is the kind of boxoffice draw which beleaguered Columbia parent Sony Pictures so clearly hopes it will be, it will be just the latest Jones-starring commercial juggernaut in an impressive string. In 1993's "The Fugitive," he upstaged Harrison Ford's unjustly accused man on the run with his detailed and startling portrayal of Sam Gerard, the federal marshal trying to catch him—a role that won Jones a Best Supporting Actor Oscar, despite the fact that "The Fugitive" was the kind of movie-movie the Academy rarely takes note of. Under Andrew Davis' astute direction, Jones transcended what even he says was iffy material by, among other things, personally authoring two of his most memorable moments: Gerard's utterly frank reply of "I don't care" when Ford tells him he didn't kill his wife; and the moment when he snaps at sidekick Joe Pantoliano after a manhunt ends violently, shouting "I don't bargain!" So strong was Jones' performance that, when the studio started casting around for a sequel idea, the unavailability of Harrison Ford and the ridiculous prospect of the same man being unjustly accused twice was never an issue: "U.S. Marshals," in which Jones reprises Gerard for editor-turned-director Stuart Baird and puts him on the trail of a different fugitive, goes into production this spring.

As the demented Two-Face in 1995's "Batman Forever," Jones gave the "Batman" franchise its most virile villain since Jack Nicholson's Joker. His performance as an unscrupulous prosecutor in 1994's "The Client," meanwhile, gave life and dimension to everyone's worst fears about amoral attorneys—and the O.J. trial hadn't even happened yet.

Few actors with the depth and complexity of Tommy Lee Jones have ever had their talents so perfectly embodied by the way they look. The weird and often exciting duality Jones brings to his characterizations—not just to big, grandstanding acting challenges like playing Ty Cobb in the underrated sports bio "Cobb" but even to the cookie-cutter Hollywood character parts he used to specialize in before becoming a bigtime star—is etched in Jones' facial features: He is either ruggedly handsome in the classically American

COWBOY

by RAY GREENE

Spencer Tracy mode or worthy of playing a real-life Dick Tracy villain named Forehead, depending on the quality of the light.

His weathered features have been compared not infrequently to those of Humphrey Bogart, a movie star and actor's actor who, like Tommy Lee, had a long apprenticeship making lesser talents look good before reaching the pinnacle of his profession. Publicity stills bear out the fact that Jones has a certain Bogey-esque quality in repose, but Jones is rarely, if ever, in repose. This is particularly true of him onscreen, where his best characterizations often seem to be caught in the grip of dark compulsions and subterranean energies they themselves only dimly understand. He is a Bogart, perhaps, in the scale of his talent, but with the raw, muscular gregariousness of a Jimmy Cagney coiled around his actor's heart.

STRAIGHT "MEN": Jones and Will Smith take lessons in deadpan comedy from Sonnenfeld.

By a strange twist of fate, on the very same February Friday on which this conversation is taking place, a $100 million volcanic disaster movie named "Dante's Peak" is slated to open. As the star of "Volcano," a rival project with a similar premise and an equally enormous budget which was originally supposed to come out at roughly the same time, Jones could be expected to have more than a passing interest in that fact. Jones does, after all, have a track record as a ferocious competitor: He was an outstanding football player during his college days at Harvard (where his roommate was a future vice president by the name of Al Gore, with whom he is still friends and of whom he rarely speaks to the press) and he is an avid polo player today, dedicated to the continuation of what he refers to as his "athletic life."

The "Volcano"/"Dante's Peak" contest has kept Hollywood insiders entertained for the better part of a year, with the entire film industry following the multi-million-dollar race for earliest release date as if it were the greatest spectator event since the days of the Roman Coliseum. But despite the fact that "Volcano" will now be the second of the two to make it to market, Jones disavows any interest in "Dante's Peak," and seems plainly annoyed with the idea of a competition. "On the playing fields, I'm competitive," Jones says slowly. "But I don't work in distribution—or at least I did not have anything to do with distribution or production on 'Volcano.' The idea of competing with another movie was somebody else's job. Mine was acting. In all good humor and good spirits, those are the facts of life."

Jones is much more comfortable talking up "Men In Black"—a project that has taken nearly five years to come together. "They offered me a job," says Jones. "And I thought it was just a terrific idea. Much of that time, I've stood right with it."

Based on an obscure cult comic book series by Lowell Cunningham (see sidebar), "MIB" takes as its jumping-off point an actual piece of UFO. mythology which could have come straight from "The X Files." Thanks to films like "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" and "nonfiction" books from "Chariots of the Gods" to "Communion," the bulbous heads and large, pupil-less eyes which UFO. "abductees" have attributed to their captors have become so ubiquitous that they are even the subject of a humorous and highly-popular T-shirt line, which parodies everything from Calvin Klein ads to celebrity portraits. Far less well-known but equally entrenched in UFO lore are the shadowy "men in black" who are said to visit abductees, sometimes repeatedly, after they have returned to their previous lives.

Cunningham's comics used the known "facts" about the "men in black" to create a kind of pan-galactic version of the Immigration and Naturalization Services, whose responsibility it is to keep the extraterrestrial invaders under control. Jones describes the MIB forces this way: "A group of special agents who wear black suits and dark sunglasses, and have access to technology from all over the universe to make you forget anything they want to simply by zapping you with one of their brain neuralizers. They have these enormous ray guns on the top of their cars. They drive 1962 Ford LTDs that can zoom at 200 miles an hour upside down in the Lincoln Tunnel. They're just so cool—and nobody knows they're there!"

The hypnosis-inducing "neuralizers" are how MIB agents keep the multitudes of earthlings who witness extraterrestrial activity believing that the saucer that just flew in over the cornfield was actually a weather balloon, or Saint Elmo's fire, or swamp gas. The whole premise is a kind of burlesque of populist paranoia, but it's a burlesque with roots in actual American space lore. Part of the cleverness of Cunningham's original conceit is that, if you accept the fantastic technical prowess he posits, it's just possible that his variation on the "men in black" mythos could be true.

It's an interesting irony that Jones, whose 1990s career renaissance really got started when he began to team up regularly with Oliver Stone, finds himself in "MIB" doing a sort of parody of the "government conspiracy" movie. In Stone's "JFK"—the first of three movies (the others were "Natural Born Killers" and "Heaven and Earth") on which Jones and Stone worked together—Jones nabbed a Golden Globe nomination for his depiction of Clay Shaw, a real-life figure who Stone (and one-time New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison, on whose investigation "JFK" was based) proposed as the central figure of the alleged conspiracy that killed J.F.K.

The fey, aristocratic and openly homosexual Shaw was a breakthrough role for Jones, allowing him to remind Hollywood of what a superb actor he is by playing a character well off what was then considered to be Jones' established "type." But "JFK" was also as controversial a film as has been made in the past decade, and one of the many tactics used by those who sought to discredit it was to liken Stone's political speculations to exactly the kinds of "fringe" conspiracy theories about space invaders and government cover-ups that "Men In Black" draws upon. "People like to believe in conspiracy," Jones says, "that there's some darker force and greater authority with an unknown objective, controlling things. There's comfort in that for those people who feel out of control in their own lives. I don't know how healthy it is, but I thought 'JFK' was a pretty healthy movie. Oliver called it 'alternate mythology,' the idea being that the greatest fiction was the Warren Commission Report. It makes far more sense to believe every line of 'JFK' than it does to believe one line of the Warren Commission."

Perhaps out of respect for his friend Stone's achievement, Jones resists seeing any parallels between plot elements in "JFK" and those of "MIB." "People have always got to believe in conspiracies," he says. "'JFK' is not the first dramatic event structured around conspiracies. What about 'Julius Caesar?' It's an old way of structuring a story. The idea, of course, [with 'Men In Black'] is mostly not to deal with conspiracy, but to be just cool as hell! That's really more important than being part of a conspiracy."

Though Cunningham's original comic books have no more humor in them than the

AN AMP IS AN AMP IS AN AMP...

unless, it's Hafler® PROFESSIONAL amplification for cinema

"A few years ago I attended the ITEA Seminar Series in Los Angeles where we were taken on a tour of a production facility. So I looked behind the screen to see how they do it and what do I find, Hafler! That clinched it for me."

"I work with companies that insist upon the highest standard of presentation. To achieve that I've found that there are three pieces of equipment that must be top quality; lenses, speakers and amplifiers. You can't cut corners with any three. Particularly now with the large digital theatres that are being built."

"I'm not an audio engineer, what I know comes from thirty years of experience. There are a few theatres out there that I would just as soon forget. In the last eighteen months I've used over a thousand Hafler amplifiers in new theatres and retrofits, analog and digital. When the sound is correct you know it. When you have a good thing, you keep it."

Jon Karell

Hafler When You Want to Impress!

MADE IN THE USA

HAFLER PROFESSIONAL, A DIVISION OF ROCKFORD CORPORATION • TEMPE, ARIZONA 85281 USA
1-800-366-1619 • INTERNATIONAL FAX 602-967-8132 • IN CANADA, CONTACT CABLE TEK 604-942-1001 • http://www.rockfordcorp.com

©1996 Rockford Corporation

average "Lethal Weapon" movie (the lead characters banter, but are generally serious about everything else), the makers of "Men In Black" opted for a much more directly comedic approach in bringing the "MIB" premise to the screen. "It's an actorly movie, 'Men In Black,' and it also is full of special effects. What's different for me is that it's driven by humor—something I don't get a chance to address very often. And I was in very good company with Will Smith and Barry Sonnenfeld—two very sophisticated people when it comes to humor."

Humor was the element of the project that fascinated Jones, who, despite broad comedic turns in both "Natural Born Killers" and "Batman Forever," is convinced he has no sense of humor. "I had to be pretty much led by the hand through a lot of these scenes by Barry," he says. "I really don't know much about comedy, and often don't really understand what's funny and what is not. Irony I have a pretty good grasp of, but not humor."

Sonnenfeld's judgement was validated even by the limited audience of technicians and crew members on the set. "I would often feel as if I achieved a scene or a moment or a line reading, and Barry would say, 'That's great, we have that version. Now let's do the "G-Man" version.' He would make things straighter. That was a direction that he often used, 'Do it a little flatter.' And I wouldn't really understand what the hell he was talking about, but I would try it, and look up and find the crew laughing—for reasons that I did not understand." It was only later, when Jones saw some of the cut footage, that he spotted the method in Sonnenfeld's madness. "He was encouraging me to relax and to quit trying to be funny, so that the humor could express itself, rather than being forced at the audience. You can't be funny by trying to be funny."

INT. - "TEX'S" RESTAURANT

ANGLE - ON THE BOOTH

as a YOUNG, FRECKLE-FACED WAITRESS with braces on her teeth clears away dishes, lays out the check. She has noticed that one of the men at this particular table is famous, and she is flush with excitement, although the object of her sidelong glances doesn't seem to notice. It's a wonder something doesn't get spilled.

FIRST MAN: The important thing for this movie is to be cool, and it's no deeper, broader nor more profound than that. To be cool by being scary and funny at the same time. That's all there is to it. If we accomplished that, then it'll be a success.

He reaches out, shaking the Second Man's hand.

FIRST MAN: I've enjoyed your company. Take care.

The First Man stands, strolling off as we...

FADE TO BLACK

MAN AMONG "MEN"

Meet "Men In Black" Creator Lowell Cunningham

Just about everything about Lowell Cunningham is down-to-earth. Everything except his imagination, that is. Unassuming and genteel, Cunningham is precisely what one would expect of a Tennessee gentleman. But not of the creator of the far-out "Men in Black" comic book. On the eve of the movie adaptation based on his work, Cunningham spoke to BOXOFFICE:

BOXOFFICE: Could you talk about the urban legends that started this whole idea?

LOWELL CUNNINGHAM: The general folklore of the Men in Black is that they're not very personable. They may even be robots or aliens. They look odd, they act odd and they may even be threatening. My characters are a little more protective. They can be threatening if they need to be, but their function is mostly to protect people, whereas in the UFO folklore they're there to hush things up.

BOXOFFICE: When did you hear of them and how did your concept come together as a result?

CUNNINGHAM: About a decade ago, I was driving with a friend when we saw this big car. And he commented that it looked like the car the "Men in Black" would drive. Now, I had never heard of the Men in Black with regard to the UFO legends prior to this, but when he told me about it I started to put an idea together for a television project. But I decided I wanted to stay away from the typical UFO material because I didn't want to be bogged down into some pre-established folklore. So I made up the characters and the background to make them distinctive as opposed to faceless zombie-like characters, which they are in most UFO tales.

From there I realized it would be hard to break into television. But I knew people who had gotten into the comics industry. So I showed the proposal around for a couple of years until I finally hooked up with Malibu Comics and I had a contract with them within a week. Then we published the miniseries and it did well enough that we did another one. Ironically, the series was out of print when the studios expressed interest in it.

BOXOFFICE: It seems to ride the alien invasion wave on the one hand, yet on the other it's a bit of a "noir" detective approach. Why did you go this route?

CUNNINGHAM: I had the basic concept and I wanted to find a way to present it so it would be accessible and let me do the weird stories I wanted to do, but still not be too far removed so that the average audience wouldn't be able to follow it. I also wanted any production or comic book company to see it as something the audience would understand. I don't want to say I went to a buddy format, but that's what it boils down to.

BOXOFFICE: You obviously love both science fiction and detective stories.

CUNNINGHAM: I would tend to say I was more a science fiction reader, although when I was in high school I was an avid reader of detective stories as well, particularly Ellery Queen. Also when I was in high school there was a big UFO craze. But it was almost a decade later when I heard the stories of the Men in Black that I was able to turn it into a story like this.

BOXOFFICE: Did you ever research any of the traditional UFO stories?

CUNNINGHAM: I deliberately stayed away from researching the supposedly "true accounts" because I wanted this to be something I could claim as coming from my own mind. The legend of the Men in Black has been out there for 50 years or more, depending on which version you listen to. I should also point out that only a couple of my six issues had aliens. I decided early on that UFOs all the time wasn't the best way to go. So I had supernatural creatures, artificial creatures and things like that.

BOXOFFICE: Which sounds a little like "The X Files." Do you feel like maybe they were equally inspired by your work?

CUNNINGHAM: Not really. I can see some similarities, but I think they can be explained by them using the same logic I did. Plus, we both have "The Night Stalker" TV series to point to as an inspiration. "The X Files" is like Kolchak meets "The FBI" whereas mine is like Kolchak meets The Man From U.N.C.L.E." There's a tongue-in-cheek approach with "The Man From U.N.C.L.E." that I tried to do as much as possible throughout the series. And I believe that comes across even more in the movie.

BOXOFFICE: What are your own personal feelings about UFOs?

CUNNINGHAM: I believe in the possibility of extraterrestrials, but I don't necessarily believe that they've been here. I'm taking sort of a pragmatic approach. I can't deny the possibility, but I can't accept the facts.—Wade Major

FOR YEARS, OUR PROJECTION LIGHTING HAS MADE MOVIES ENJOYABLE FOR EVERYONE.

(PROVIDED THEY'RE NOT STUCK IN THE WRONG SEAT.)

EEEH-GAAD! Here's a scary picture. Imagine the theater industry without OSRAM Xenon lamps from OSRAM SYLVANIA. Since inventing this technology over 40 years ago for theaters, no lighting company has done more to ensure their success. Today, we offer the widest range of Xenon lamps with such features as high arc stability, unsurpassed reliability, long life, and constant color properties through lamp life. And in the future, we'll continue to provide innovative, superior Xenon lamps. Call 1-800-LIGHTBULB for information. Or visit our Web site at www.sylvania.com.

XENON, A STAR FOR OVER 40 YEARS.

OSRAM SYLVANIA

A FEW GOOD MEN

BEHIND THE SCENES WITH THE CREATORS OF "MEN IN BLACK"

by Lea Russo

KICKING E.T.'S BUTT: Will Smith and Tommy Lee Jones show Washington how to deal with illegal aliens in "Men In Black."

From the outside, Men In Black (MIB) Headquarters looks like any other gray, square building in lower Manhattan. But after you travel past the giant ventilation covers, into a dingy elevator, and through a bland corridor, another world emerges. Aliens of all shapes, colors, and sizes mingle with humans in this vast, high-ceiling sea of chrome. Part airport, space-shuttle control room, and police station, MIB Headquarters looks like a real-life rendering of a Dr. Seuss fantasy. Yet as tangible as this room is to its inhabitants, it doesn't exist to the outside world—literally or figuratively.

In fact, MIB Headquarters is a beautifully designed set in Amblin Entertainment/Columbia Pictures science-fiction adventure comedy, "Men In Black." In the movie, it's the heart of a top-secret government agency in charge of alien immigration, unofficially devised to keep the streets clean from cosmic riff-raff.

"I thought of the MIB Headquarters not so much as a headquarters, but as a terminal or Ellis Island for aliens designed in the 1960s," says production designer Bo Welch ("Batman Forever"), discussing his inspiration for the set. "At that time, we had a space program and an optimistic view of space travel and the world in general. Flying saucers were part of the [1964] World's Fair architecture."

Into Welch's wonderland step two black-clad, sunglass-wearing MIB agents ("Batman Forever's" Tommy Lee Jones and "ID4's" Will Smith), stripped of their identity, street clothes, and even their fingerprints. Their mission: to stop a terrorist extraterrestrial from causing an intergalactic disaster.

Husband and wife producer team Walter Parkes and Laurie MacDonald ("Twister"), also the co-heads of DreamWorks' motion picture division, first learned of "Men In Black" from Lowell Cunningham's Malibu comic book.

"What we liked about the comic book was that it kind of posited the idea that there were these 1500 or so aliens living among us that needed to be policed," says Parkes. "Since no one [from an alien world] chose to live on Earth, it attracts low-life scum from around the universe, and that's why you need guys like the Men In Black to shake them up. One of the writers on this, Ed Solomon, described Earth as kind of like Barstow, which is a place to stop for gas on the way to Yosemite, but otherwise has no inherent value."

After buying the rights to "Men In Black" back in 1992, Parkes and MacDonald began the tough process of developing a script. "The comic book gave us a great title and an alluring concept," Parkes and MacDonald told BOXOFFICE in a joint written statement. "But there were no characterizations, nor any hint of a story that could be expanded to a feature film. This is a problem with most graphic novels as source material: they are structured to roll out over many issues, and gradually establish characters and storylines."

Around the same time, Parkes and MacDonald began the search for a director and immediately sent the script to Barry Sonnenfeld ("The Addams Family"), who at the time was developing "Get Shorty" with Jersey Films.

"We chose Barry after assessing his work and the particular challenges of 'Men In Black,'" say Parkes and MacDonald. "Tonally, the movie tries to hit a very specific target. It is comedic, but the comedy is played straight. It is stylized, but it takes place in the real world. It's science fiction, but the story owes much to tough police melodramas like 'French Connection.' There are very few directors who could balance these disparate elements, and do so with real visual flair."

As an esteemed cinematographer on such movies as "Raising Arizona," "Three O'Clock High," and "Misery"—to name just a few—Sonnenfeld indeed has a strong, refreshing style. But he says he was drawn to the project for its script.

"I felt that it was quirky and I could find a way to make it a little different," recalls Sonnenfeld. "I don't know if aliens exist or not, but I do truly believe we don't have a clue about what's really going on."

EQUIPMENT FOR MOTION PICTURE THEATERS AND STUDIOS

JSX-1000A
STEREO PROCESSOR

- Superior Academy Award® winning design
- THX approved - One of only two manufacturers of THX approved analog processors
- The finest analog stereo processor on the market today
- Modular construction for easy service and installation
- 6-Channel system completely compatible with all digital systems
- New features include:
 - Parametric equalizer for smoother sub-woofer response
 - New surround equalizer offers improved surround control
 - Superior channel separation and stereo imaging

USL, Inc
Quality Cinema Products

...n of ULTRA★STEREO® Labs, Inc. • 18730 Oxnard Street, Suite 214, Tarzana, California 91356 • PHONE: (818) 609-7405 • FAX: (818) 609-740...

Response No. 2

TAKE ME TO YOUR LEADER: An otherworldy space vehicle makes a difficult landing on the set of "Men In Black."

Judging from the resurgence of science fiction, Sonnenfeld is not alone. From "The X Files" and "3rd Rock From the Sun" to "ID4" and "Mars Attacks!," aliens are the hot trend in Hollywood. "I think there's a lot of science fiction stories because the year 2000 is coming up," Sonnenfeld explains. "Suddenly, the future is now. The other reason is that as the U.S. gets more and more politically correct, it's hard to pick bad guys that don't disturb some organization or group. You can pretty much feel fine about getting rid of aliens."

Eliminating aliens may be easier than creating them. In "MIB," there's an inch-high critter that lives inside a human brain, a couple of foot-high, pink wormy-looking creatures that work in MIB headquarters (and who, naturally, steal office supplies), a bug that resides inside the skin of a rotting human carcass, and Mikey, a humongous purplish beast who kind of resembles a rabid Barney with scales and flippers. The only thing these space monsters have in common visually is their combination of menace and/or humorousness.

"The hardest thing to figure out in the beginning was what the tone of the film was," says legendary makeup effects guru Rick Baker. "When you read the script, it can be taken a couple of different ways. So we did a lot of drawings. But there wasn't any one kind of concept for the look of the aliens."

For Sonnenfeld, designing believable creatures posed several problems. "I'm always amused when people say 'There can't be life on Mars, there's no oxygen,'" he says. "Well, that's just like a totally tunnelvisioned concept that, for life, you need water and oxygen. But how do you create aliens that don't look like our idea of aliens, meaning creatures with two eyes, a nose, a mouth, two arms and two legs?

"On the other hand, Rick would design aliens that didn't have human characteristics, and I'd say, 'Without eyes, how do we know where this thing is looking? Without a mouth, how do we know it's talking?' You're in this strange situation where you're trying to create totally unique and unusual aliens, who still look familiar enough that the audience knows anger or sadness."

Once the creature designs were approved, Baker teamed with the effects wizards at Industrial Light & Magic to bring the aliens to life using a complex combination of animatronics, computer imaging, and makeup.

> "Without eyes, how do we know where this thing is looking? You're in this strange situation where you're trying to create totally unique and unusual aliens who still look familiar to the audience ."

"We started with a drawing," Baker says. "Then we'd do a small scale model. That scale model was then scanned at a laser scanning place that would record the information in a way that could be used as a computer model. When we finished the life-size version of the rubber suit, ILM would come out and photograph the paints we had put on it, so they could map that onto the computer model."

Sonnenfeld then had to make sure the computer animated creatures gave acceptable performances. "It's a creature, but it's still a character in the movie," says Sonnenfeld. "So you have to teach animators comedy. They're great, but they're computer guys. What they think funny is, 'Hey, did you hear that, we got 12 megabytes of RAM, ha ha ha.'"

While his aliens could be troublesome at times, Sonnenfeld thoroughly enjoyed working with Will Smith and Tommy Lee Jones. "Will is incredibly funny, nice, and charming," he says, "and Tommy is incredibly intimidating but incredibly bright and not arbitrary. We would start a shooting day with a rehearsal without the crew. Tommy would say, without fail, 'The words suck, the writer didn't know what he was doing, what he meant, why this scene exists at all. It's overwritten and it doesn't make sense and it's not funny, but hey, I'm getting too much money to complain. So tell me where to stand, what to say, and I'm there for you.'"

Steven Spielberg, who serves as executive producer on "Men In Black," also helped influence the story. "Steven had great ideas not only in preproduction," Sonnenfeld remarks, "but I would show him stuff in post, and he would say, 'You know, would it be funny if you got an additional shot of Will looking through the window?' I'd say, 'You know what? I don't know, but I'll shoot it because...' Well shit, it's Steven Spielberg. I don't think it's funny, but what the hell. I did it, cut it in, and it was hilarious."

"Men In Black" is scheduled for a July release, but the fun doesn't stop there. Parkes and MacDonald are developing an animated children's series based on the film that will incorporate more alien characters. There's also the Galoob toy line, featuring Men In Black and alien dolls.

For now, though, Sonnenfeld is content with putting visions of aliens in his viewers' heads. "My hope is that when you leave the movie theater, you'll see who's waiting in line for the next show—if there is anyone waiting in line for the next show—and you'll sort of elbow your friend and say, 'Look at that guy. Tell me he's not a Regick.'"

"Men in Black." Starring Tommy Lee Jones, Will Smith and Linda Fiorentino. Directed by Barry Sonnenfeld. Screenplay by Ed Solomon, based on the comic book series by Lowell Cunningham. Produced by Walter F. Parkes and Laurie MacDonald. Executive producer: Steven Spielberg. A Columbia Pictures release. Opens July 2.

CinemAcoustics
Our CA-CP600™ Cinema Processor is a full-featured

CinemAcoustics™

CA-CP600™

FINALLY, A COMPLETE CINEMA PROCESSOR.

Our CA-CP600™ Cinema Processor is a full-featured, digitally-based processor, supplying the signal processing and monitoring requirements for today's motion-picture theatre. Comprised of the CA-DP300™ Digital Processor and the CA-M300™ Monitor/Controller, the CA-CP600 is full-featured out of the box, supporting direct digital 5.1 audio from formats such as DTS™, two 5.1 analog inputs, matrixed stereo optical sound, as well as two stereo non-sync channels. The CA-CP600™ also includes booth monitor, exciter lamp supply, and solar cell preamp. And just to make your installation easy, the cables are on us.

THE ONE SINGLE SOURCE.

YOUR SOURCE

PEAVEY®

Response No. 84

SHOW MAN

Daniel Wheatcroft Takes the Reins of ShoWest With One Goal: To Make the Film Industry's Best Business Show Even Better

by Kim Williamson

"It's going great." That's the way Daniel Wheatcroft, in his first year as president of ShoWest, describes the inside-the-whirlwind role he's taken on as the head of the movie business' biggest annual gathering. "All of the planning that has taken place since last year, when I went as a registrant myself, is coming together."

But it's been a formidable period for Wheatcroft, who for a dozen years has attended the show and so knows it intimately. Now its chief strategist, Wheatcroft wants to aim the convention toward the millennium by, paradoxically, returning ShoWest to its original focus. "I think I've brought a perspective of what I feel ShoWest could be in the future, and that is a place to bring together all the sides of the motion picture business: the creative experience, the distribution experience and the exhibition experience.

"The original intent 22 years ago was to create a forum for distribution and exhibition, to have an exchange of ideas and a flow of information. As things grow, sometimes those perspectives get a little out of skew—strictly due to growing pains, nothing else. One of the major things I focused on when I came aboard was to ask myself, 'What is the intent of this convention?' When you bring all the sides of moviemaking together, there's a potential for education, and I think at this year's convention the registrants will see we've tried to take it back to that original purpose."

As Wheatcroft sees it, ShoWest after two decades of growth had become such a success that some registrants were beginning to feel it had grown too large for its own good. But Wheatcroft, who spent a number of years at Universal overseeing 170 premieres and so well understands the importance of perception in Hollywood, contests that evaluation. "There is a misconception out there that ShoWest has grown over the past few years," he says. "As a matter of fact, ShoWest made a bold move last year—and I think a correct one—and actually reduced the number of people in the main [events] room to make it a better presentation for everyone.

"We've made a concerted effort to cap the registration. We could sell more and more and more—after all, we sell out in one month. But we agonized over this: Where do we take this convention? I decided that I would not come in here and say, 'Okay, let's become a giant convention. Let's just throw out a registration for anybody who wants to come. Even if they've just taken Film 101 in high school, they are now a legitimate member of our community.'" Clearly, Wheatcroft insists, that is not the intention of the gathering. "The focus of ShoWest is to bring the community together—and that community is those people who are working in it."

BOXOFFICE
SPECIAL REPORT:
SHOWEST
1997

Accordingly, Wheatcroft has chosen to make both significant and smaller changes to the way ShoWest runs, as detailed in his "Open Letter to All ShoWest Delegates" (see BOXOFFICE's ShoWest Intro, page SW-6). The first difference is that the keynote speech—this year by MGM Inc. chairman and CEO Frank Mancuso—has been moved to Monday evening, along with the ShoWester of the Year Award presentation, which in 1997 goes to Sony/Loews Theatres' Barrie Lawson Loeks (see our Intro cover story). It's a sure signal of how important that first international day has become. "I don't see this as one side of the ocean or the other. We're drawing closer," Wheatcroft says when asked about ShoWest's recent doubling of overseas registrants. "And, although the rest of the days focus on domestic distribution, the international community certainly gains the benefit of the entire convention."

A second essential change is that the ShoWest Awards will be cablecast live on TNT, this time from the MGM Grand Garden (see sidebar, this page). Third, improvements have been made to the trade show's Pavilion facilities. And fourth, mirroring Wheatcroft's belief that personal interaction and communication are what give ShoWest value for the industry, the large-scale seminars of the past have been replaced in part by small workshops.

"The perspective I bring is all about the unity I spoke of—to bring all the sides of the motion picture industry together. By putting workshops in—and by limiting the number in those workshops, breaking down the seminars into smaller groups, allowing people to sign up for whatever topic they might like—it creates more of a dynamic, where the heads of our industry can speak more about where we're progressing, rather than having people sit in on a seminar where questions are unsystematic and answers have to be restricted. We've tried to break down those barriers."

This year, each workshop will hold from 100 to 150 attendees. Because some workshops will run simultaneously, a one-page roundup of each workshop's discussions will be available after ShoWest.

Another avenue by which Wheatcroft hopes ShoWest can foster a freer flow of information is by allowing the studio sponsors to retool the big midday and evening gatherings that had been called lunches and dinners. "We're giving the studios more of a free forum to create within their own events," Wheatcroft says. "And we've changed those names from lunches and dinners to 'events,' because the [entertainment] world is changing, and from a studio standpoint they need to have the same creative freedom as they do in other things they market. They need the freedom to make their best presentation to exhibition and the rest of the worldwide entertainment community."

In recent years, industry watchers had commented on the steep rise in studio costs associated with putting on a ShoWest event; MGM decided last year to hold its own function in New York, and Paramount also did not sponsor an event at the 1996 show. Noting that Paramount has returned for 1997, Wheatcroft says, "It goes to the question of, 'What is ShoWest?' ShoWest is really the business of what we do. I think refocusing attention on that subject is why studios are interested in being here.

"This is the one place you can come and talk to the world community about your product. You can do things [like MGM's New York gathering], but you're speaking only to one audience, you're speaking only

THE MARQUEE AWARD

EXHIBITION'S ANSWER TO OSCAR

For 22 years, ShoWest has been a closed convention," says Daniel Wheatcroft, freshman president of ShoWest. With year 23, all that is changing. ShoWest is coming out of its closet with its final-night awards show.

"We've transformed the television show, the ShoWest Awards, into a live television show, which is not only a very bold effort but also a very difficult one. There are restrictions on what we can show [live], because we all work in a business where we show each other a rough cut or a work in assembly, but we want the public to see the finished product in its pristine and beautiful state.

"Yet [with the live show] we have the chance to say to the world, and to this convention: 'Here's who we are, here's what we do, and here's what's coming up for the year.' So the television show is our way to be able to channel some of the information that has been so valuably put together in the past, and condense that, along with our traditional awards, into a show that lets the public know about future product.

"It's a value to exhibition, because it promotes moviegoing. It's a value to the studios, because it allows them the opportunity to show what they already are to the exhibition community to the rest of the world. And it's a value to the consumer, because it provides advance information. You know, we're in the unique position on that final night to satisfy the needs of all of us in the entertainment industry. With the live show, we now have the ability to promote to the consumer, or the viewer at this stage, the idea not to choose one film over another, but to choose to spend their entertainment dollar at the movies."

To further give the TV show event status, ShoWest this year is unveiling its new Marquee award design. Developed over 11 months, the Marquee is a gold-plated human figure holding aloft a crystal torch; the base is gold and steel. Surrounding the figure is a brushed-steel S that resembles film spooling from a reel. "Unlike any other film award, the ShoWest Award is given for past achievement, current success and future potential," Wheatcroft says. The torch is meant to symbolize the light that projects images onto screens today; the burnished-steel S is reminiscent of film with a look forward to the digital age; and the upreaching of the human figure represents a striving for excellence. "I felt that it was necessary, when you make a quantum leap like this [going live], to create a look—to standardize a look. The award has changed over the years in different ways and shapes. What we've created, we feel, is a significant look to the award—it's now one that will endure over time."

Attendees will notice other alterations to the night's event—other than the move to the MGM Grand Garden. "The overall look of the show will change in the presentation. We're an entertainment business, so it would not be constructive for us, as distributors and exhibitors, to present something on television that wasn't entertaining. So we changed the format so it could be truly an entertainment show. We now have Sinbad as our host—it's a live show, and so it's necessary to have someone who does live TV well. We will have surround sound. We are creating, as much as we can inside the site, a theatrical experience.

"And so the focus of the show is the screen. What is driving our change of format is the desire to make this show unique, in that this award show is not a look backward. This show is 75 percent a look forward, 25 percent a look back. The awards are for what has been done and what will come, but everything else in the show is to talk about what we do in our community, to tell people what motion pictures are coming out."

There will also be a newfound element of suspense to this year's presentation. Unlike the night's other awards, the recipients of which are announced in advance of the show, the name of the film which receives the inaugural Favorite Movie of the Year Award will be up in the air. "I think it will be a lot of fun," Wheatcroft says, to find out which among "Independence Day," "Twister," "Mission: Impossible," "The Rock" and "The Nutty Professor" emerges victorious. "People have said that the outcome could be very obvious—but don't bet on that. I don't think there's any guarantee. Who knows what can happen?

"We now as exhibitors have our award show," Wheatcroft says, summing up. "The Academy has theirs, the Emmy has theirs, and we have ours."

Wheatcroft at an editing bay, viewing a working version of the first-ever ShoWest trailer. Commemorative images from the ShoWest trailer appear in this issue in a special section on page 40.

to whoever is in that room. At ShoWest, you are speaking to the world. You speak to the worldwide press, you speak to worldwide exhibition, you speak to worldwide distribution, and now with the ShoWest Awards show you speak to a worldwide consumer base. There is no other place that you could go, as an exhibitor, a studio or a marketer, to position yourself in all those different ways, for all those different audiences, in one place at one time. I truly think ShoWest is the one place to go. There isn't anything else like it."

On the trade show side, Wheatcroft had to develop solutions to concerns often made audible at last year's show, most centering around the move of the trade floor outside of the hotel to Bally's backlot. "The trade show in my estimation is running quite well," Wheatcroft says, "and what we want to do is take something that is running quite well and make sure that the experience and the benefits to the registrants and the trade fair exhibitors are maximized. Last year's move into the Pavilion was a very bold move, and I think it worked. Now, there were concerns that were brought up, and I think we've addressed them." Key among them, Wheatcroft says, were the most basic needs: "How do you get there? How many telephones are there? How many restrooms are there?" His response was to reorient most of the walk to the Pavilion back inside the hotel, to add a business office area at the entrance and to double the number of restroom facilities.

But, given the added space that the Pavilion setting provides fair exhibitors (it allows almost 70 more companies to display their wares), he felt there was little need to alter the essential ShoWest trade fair experience itself. "When I go to a trade fair, what I always want to see is: Is it easy to get in? Does the exhibitor in the trade fair have enough space to present their products? Does the person walking by have enough time to stand back, look at what the booth is and then choose to stay a little longer? When I went into the Pavilion last year, I spent more time in there than I ever have [at a show] because it was fun. I looked around and thought that the ceiling height was great, the light inside was great, and the area to move around in was great."

> "At ShoWest, you are speaking to the world. There isn't anything else like it."

One worry that Wheatcroft does have about the trade fair has to do with simple geography: Attendees must go down a level to reach the Pavilion. "We feel that the experience of going to the trade fair should be as focused and as unique as any other event at ShoWest," he says. "So it is not a stepchild, it is not a second cousin. The trade fair is extremely important to me. I don't want anyone to get the impression, just because they're going downstairs to the Pavilion, that means in any way that's what ShoWest believes about the value of the trade fair. Because it isn't. [The location] is simply a function of space."

Perhaps the ultimate question is, Why come to ShoWest? Wheatcroft is ready with an answer. "When people come to ShoWest, they're re-energized. This is really the community that makes all the decisions, about whether someone becomes a big star, or whether a movie succeeds, or whether an audience comes into a theatre."

If Wheatcroft sounds excited about what ShoWest has been and what it can become, it's because he is. As an example of what makes ShoWest essential, he recounts an experience from last year's show, when he stood next to Jeff Goldblum (who he'd met at Universal while working on "Jurassic Park") and they watched the reel of debut footage Fox had brought of "Independence Day" for its packed-house luncheon event. "It really could have been [any movie]—I'm picking 'ID4' only because it's a good example of what happens.

"And what happens in that room is magic. The stars saw for the first time their work on the screen, the exhibitors saw for the first time that work on the screen, the distributors watched their work being displayed to people—there was an interaction that happened in the room that happens nowhere else in the world. And the reaction you get you can get nowhere else. Three thousand people in that room at one time, all focusing on the very same thing. That moment in time—that shared 'what's this picture going to be like for us?' moment. That is invaluable at ShoWest, because nowhere else can that happen.

"This," Wheatcroft says, "is where it happens."

The Very Best!

Pick your favorite specification...lowest distortion, highest headroom for digital soundtracks, most dynamic range...the new CSP1200 beats all others, including the more expensive CP-500!

The PANASTEREO has been getting rave reviews all around the world for the finest craftsmanship, superior design, and many valuable features not found on competitive products. Features like (3) 6-channel digital inputs, AV input with full decoding for video player sound or magnetic print masters (with or without noise reduction), full remote control option, dual surround time delay, and many other special attributes.

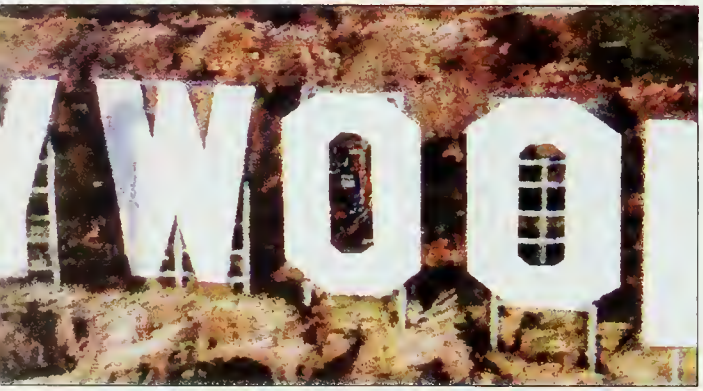
Customers report the PANASTEREO has the purest sound and best stereo field they have ever heard. Please ask for our 4-page brochure and get the whole story.

. . . and the new CSP1200 is approved for installation in THX auditoriums.

Please visit our Internet site for the latest product information and for the features and specifications of the new CSP1200. The address - http://www.smartdev.com

SMART

5945 Peachtree Corners East
Norcross, Georgia 30071
(800) 45-SMART or (770) 449-6698
FAX: (770) 449-6728
e-mail: smart@america.net



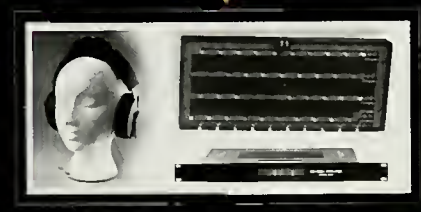
Response No. 35

AT A THEATRE NEAR YOU...

An EXCLUSIVE Souvenir Portfolio of Images From ShoWest's First-Ever Promotional Trailer

In honor of the history-making theatrical trailer created by ShoWest to get the word out about ShoWest 1997, BOXOFFICE, with ShoWest's kind permission, presents this selection of stills commemorating exhibition's first-ever direct promotion to moviegoers of exhibition's show of shows. Like the organizers of ShoWest, we salute this fresh demonstration of the power exhibition wields when it stands united.

GET CONNECTED WITH THE ODYSSEY FAMILY OF PRODUCTS



The 3.5" Monitor (6 & 8 Channel)

The Digital Interface Kit

Fiber Optic Display Panel System

Infrared Sound System

Your next widget is our next project

Making the right connections in the theatre industry is what Odyssey does best. We have custom created designs for theatres like the first rear wall infrared system for the hearing impaired, or the popular Digital Interface Kit introduced in 1994, the only 3.5" booth monitor, and a fiber optic status panel system. We have, or will create the solution to keep your theatre connected and operating efficiently.

However, even with the best products on the market we realize you need a customer service team that is responsive and alert to your theatres' unique equipment needs.

For more information on Odyssey's full line of products, or to consult with our engineers on your individual needs call:
770-448-4873.

ODYSSEY

PRODUCTS

770-448-4873

Fax 770-453-9626

5644 Baldwin Court / Norcross, Georgia 30071

Engineering and Shipping / 5845 Oakbrook Pkwy., Suite G / Norcross, GA 30093 / 770-825-0243 Fax 770-825-0245

IN THE DRIVER'S SEAT

"Circle of Friends" Star Minnie Driver Revs Up With a "Flood" of Interesting Roles

She came to fame in America as Benny, the somewhat insecure but spirited, individualistic heroine in the 1995 coming-of-age romance-drama "Circle of Friends." Given the media attention to her physical transformation from the plump Maeve Binchy protagonist back to her slim, statuesque self, Minnie Driver, who has temporarily relocated from her homeland of England to Los Angeles while filming several projects, has some strong feelings about Hollywood attitudes and the industry's fixation on looks.

"Apparently in Hollywood, the aesthetic is meant to take the limelight," says Driver (while semi-ironically munching on a typically Southern California health breakfast of scrambled egg whites and melon that might betray a figure-watching regime). "You're meant to be this kind of ideal. And if you're anything less than perfect, they're going to point it out. It's hard, because you're sort of like, 'Well, what does that mean, [a reporter] sitting there saying I've got a jaw as square as a window frame and I'm not classically pretty? What does that say about me other than what I'm not?'

"It still bothers me when people start saying, 'You're kind of like the plain Jane who made good.' It's like, well, thanks!"

She doesn't exactly have to worry about Tinseltown's obsession with beauty: Having long ago shed the extra 30 pounds she gained for her star-making "Circle" turn, the 5'10" Driver is luminous in person, with huge golden-brown eyes, long dark curls, and a flawless pale complexion. But positive or negative, she's fed up with comments on her looks. "It doesn't say how big my laughter is, how big my heart is, how bright my brain is, or whatever it is we find interesting in other people," she remarks. "If it were as simple as the way you look, then all the beautiful people would be fantastically happy and living on an island somewhere being fantastically beautiful. It doesn't work like that."

"It's hard not to become glib, especially in an action film. Often I'd think, 'If this person was really in this situation, would they honestly be this light-hearted about stuff?'"

Besides which, Driver has no choice but to look decidedly non-glamorous, in fact, antithetically glamorous, in her next film: Paramount's action-thriller "The Flood" will have her drenched in torrential waters for the majority of the movie, and it's hard to keep your make-up and hair looking "just so" under those conditions.

In "The Flood," Driver plays a woman who's passionate about her job restoring a church. So passionate, in fact, that when a major flood hits, she disobeys citywide evacuation orders to stay with her edifice. "And then the flood hits, and basically the entire place is destroyed," says Driver. "Because she stays to look after her church, she's one of the only people left in town. She gets caught in the crossfire of the unfolding dark story that is taking place between mercenary Americans." Driver's character teams up with Tom (Christian Slater), an armored car driver whose $3 million bank shipment has been commandeered by a group of armed criminals (whose leader is played by Morgan Freeman). "They look out for each other, just try and get through it. He saves my life, I save his life. We basically try and muddle through this 19-hour period and stay alive."

What is with this recent resurgence of the disaster film genre? "I think it's clearly economic," Driver observes pragmatically. "Those movies last year made an enormous amount of money. And now everybody is going after that. But the difference with this film is it's a suspense thriller. There is a lot of action in it, [but] it's an incredibly fascinating story. It's kind of that idea of human nature against Mother Nature, and it's a good one, because which is ultimately more devastating?"

Driver does acknowledge that the conventions of moviemaking don't always inter-

By Christine James

sect with reality. "It's hard not to become glib, especially in an action film. Often I'd think, 'If this person was really in this situation, would they honestly be this light-hearted about stuff?' It's a balance you've got to think about. Try to maintain some sort of truth, even though it's completely a kind of unreal, surreal set-up."

The drawback of starring in a disaster movie is that "it's a f—ing disaster, that's what it is!" she laughs. "The hardest thing is keeping good humor when you're physically uncomfortable. You're irritable if you're damp or cold and you're filming in the middle of the night. That's why I take my hat off to Christian Slater. He was indomitably good-humored. He always was—as was pretty much the whole crew. And they suffered more. [Christian and I] could get out of the [floodwater simulation] tank. They couldn't. They were in it."

Minnie Driver and Christian Slater in Paramount's "The Flood."

Driver calculates she was wet about "85 percent of the day." "We could get out [of the tank], but the thing is that if you got out and changed out of your wet clothes, it would only be for like 15 minutes in between set-ups. But it's worth it," she adds with emphatic conviction. "You suddenly start buying dry time. 'Okay, it's gonna freeze getting out, and I'm going to have to quickly rip all my clothes off and try to get warm. And then I'm going to have to put other clothes on and get back in and get wet again.' So you just start making deals with yourself. You know, ridiculous deals. Your mind starts working in a funny way. It's like, 'If I do this, then I'll go and eat some candy,'" she laughs. "Like that'll be my reward. So then you end up looking like the side of a house."

Driver, who enjoys writing as a creative outlet, says that her psychological mindframe during the shoot was captured in both content and format in her diary. "My journal entries were disconnected rhetoric throughout 'The Flood,'" she says. "Just pages of bizarre prose. Also filled with filthy expletives. Some days I'd write two sentences. And other days I'd written a dissertation on what it is to be wet. It depends. It doesn't take the form of 'Today I got up. I went to Craft Service and I had a breakfast burrito.' It's more like [melodramatically:] 'Today. [Weary, burdened pause]. The water was wetter than usual.'"

This project is only the latest in a "flood" of interesting roles Driver's had since "Circle of Friends": a tone-deaf Russian honky-tonk singer in "GoldenEye"; Brad Pitt's girlfriend in Barry Levinson's all-star drama "Sleepers" (which also places her one degree from the subject of the popular movie trivia game "Six Degrees Of Kevin Bacon"—"I'm in the center circle. Right on!"); Stanley Tucci's long-suffering amour in "Big Night"; and John Cusack's love interest in "Grosse Pointe Blank."

"[Sometimes you want] the sense of solidarity [of a smaller, independent film], where you're all in it up to your eyeballs. You're totally immersed in the whole process, and that's what I love. And sometimes you want it big. I'm glad to have the opportunity to do both."

Driver is considering three scripts in particular that have come her way that she's really liked. "And I can't do all of them, which is a real problem. It's like men and buses. They don't come along, they don't come along, and then like 10 come along at once. It's always the way. Feast or famine."

"My journal entries were disconnected rhetoric throughout 'The Flood.' Pages of bizarre prose. Some days I'd write a dissertation on what it is to be wet. 'Today...the water was wetter than usual.'"

Right now, Driver's very excited about her next project, in which she joins the Disney mythos, voicing Jane in the animated version of "Tarzan," due out in June of 1998. "I'm loving doing this job!" she gushes. "To be English, to be a hoity-toity little madam, to improvise in my voice, in my tongue, with my humor, and them loving it, and them asking me to do more, it is just so much fun. Heaven. I'm absolutely loving it. It's incredible, the posterity—to be animated by Disney, to be the voice of something forever! It's just incredible!"

So will Jane resemble her voice counterpart? "This is the thing, it's very funny," begins Driver with a smile. "They started out with pictures of [model] Christy Turlington on the wall. Which bothered me slightly. She's fantastically beautiful, but I was kind of like, 'Come on.' But they start out with ideas, and then it changed—it's a constantly evolving process. They video you when you're doing it, they see how your face works. They let the voice that comes out dictate a little bit. It all becomes clearer, you know. I'm psyched. I'm so psyched to be in it."

Despite her numerous recent high-profile projects, Driver is still fairly anonymous stateside. "If you go somewhere where there's press, there's a publicist who's telling them, 'Okay, this is Minnie Driver,' so they all start shouting your name. [But] it's not like I go into a restaurant and they'll give me the best table in the house and be falling all over me," she says. "People might vaguely recognize me—they just don't quite know why.

"It's funny," she continues, "because you're trying to build a career—rather that trying to attain superstardom, you want to be around longer than the premiere of the movie. I feel unbelievably lucky. And it was luck. It was luck that I walked into a casting director's office and ["Big Night's"] Stanley Tucci and Campbell Scott were sitting there—and I wasn't coming to meet them. It was luck that I had an hour instead of half an hour lunch break so I could go meet ["Sleepers'"] Barry Levinson on the one day that he was in town. It was luck that he didn't know that I was English—he'd seen a tape of me, and he thought I was American. All those things are luck—for me, fate. And that they've been successful in that they've been wonderful films I hope is a mark that I have good counsel, and I was encouraged to read enough to recognize when there was a good story put in front of me."

All indications are that luck, fate and talent will work in combination to put Minnie Driver at the top of the industry, including all the elite restaurant lists, inciting Hollywood maitre d's into a silver-polishing frenzy in the very near future.

"The Flood." Starring Christian Slater, Minnie Driver, Morgan Freeman and Randy Quaid. Directed by Mikael Salomon. Written by Graham Yost. Produced by Mark Gordon, Gary Levinsohn and Ian Bryce. A Paramount release. Action-thriller. Opens May 2.

"DAY" TRIPPER

After A Career Focusing On Dramatic Films, Nastassja Kinski Goes For The Laughs In The Warner Bros. Comedy "Father's Day"

By Bridget Byrne

Robin made me laugh so much that the director [Ivan Reitman] got terribly mad. Then, when I felt myself bursting with laughter and knew I mustn't, he gave me this one little thing, this help that actors of that caliber can offer, which made me able to string along, to hang in and not disappear through the floor."

Nastassja Kinski is talking about working with Robin Williams on the set of Warner Bros.' "Father's Day," a comedy about (apparent) parentage that opens wide May 9. But keeping a straight face proved doubly difficult for Kinski, because her other co-star is comedian Billy Crystal. "Basically the whole set was in stitches most of the time because of Robin, and also Billy," she says.

Kinski says she felt blessed to be surrounded by so much laughter during the making of the movie, because too much of the time the world is not a happy enough place. "Sometimes when I haven't laughed, I realize how much I miss it. When you laugh a lot, you feel it with your whole body and mind. They say if you laugh enough it prevents being ill, and I think that may be true," she says.

The Berlin-born Kinski, who became a working actress as a teenager, shot to fame when she was only 19, thanks to her turn as the tragic heroine of "Tess," Roman Polanski's 1979 interpretation of Thomas Hardy's gloomy "Tess of the D'Urbervilles."

Still bearing a beauty a contemporary teenager could envy (she does commercials for L'Oreal), Kinski is now the mother of three: a 12-year-old boy, Aljosha, and two girls, 11-year-old Sonja and four-year-old Kenya. She's spent the morning before her conversation with BOXOFFICE like many another mother does, making sure her children got off to school on time. She arrives for the conversation at a Beverly Hills patisserie with a sincere apology for being a little late, though she admits she's often tardy. Kinski also laughingly apologizes at one point for talking too much, but she is open and emotional in a way that's markedly different from the American-style angst of some stateside actresses.

Kinski emphasizes that her "need to take care of my family" is and always will be her first priority, but she's happy to be back working after some time out of the Hollywood limelight. After "Father's Day," she'll next be seen in New Line's "One Night," directed by Mike Figgis ("Leaving Las Vegas"), which is tentatively slated for late September. She also appears in an independent film, "Somebody Is Waiting," in which she and Gabriel Byrne play the parents of five children.

The hazel-eyed and hazel-haired actress seems more interested in talking about facts than feelings, evincing a reluctance to discuss plot and character in too much detail, because she believes movies should hold surprises for the audience. In "Father's Day," Kinski plays a mother whose teenage son goes missing; in order to find him, she resorts to implying separately to two former boyfriends that each needs to help find "his son." The resulting comedy and confusion stems from the two "maybe" fathers crossing paths during their efforts to find the boy.

Kinski stars with Robin Williams in the Ivan Reitman comedy "Father's Day."

Kinski says she was "super nervous" auditioning for the role. Once she had the part,

INTRODUCING . . .

THE ONLY 4" DEEP ADA COMPLIANT POSTER CASE AVAILABLE WITH ALL THE OPTIONS.

DAY GLOW

THIN IS IN!

ONLY 4" DEEP

SCROLLING POSTERS

NEON

CHASELIGHT

FX OPTICS

OUR 2001 FINE LINE SERIES IS NOW ADA COMPLIANT AT ONLY 4" DEEP AND STILL INCLUDES THE ONLY FREE TWO-YEAR PARTS OR ON-SITE WARRANTY* IN THE INDUSTRY. THERE IS NO OPTION WHEN IT COMES TO QUALITY.

Schult INDUSTRIES, INC.

ALL SCHULT PRODUCTS CAN BE MANUFACTURED TO INTERNATIONAL SPECIFICATIONS.

* CALL 1-800-783-8998 FOR DETAILS

however, both Williams (who plays an artistic poet) and Crystal (a lawyer) proved to be "generous and loving to work with," she says. "The speed of their minds is incredible, and I wasn't on top of it all the time. I was sometimes a little behind getting the joke and, with a director who is very fast and witty too, I was intimidated, but in a good way." Kinski adds that relating to the character of a mother who would do anything to find her son was the easiest aspect of the role.

In "One Night," she stars with Wesley Snipes and Robert Downey Jr. in a story about the havoc a brief encounter causes five people. An admirer of the rawness of "Leaving Las Vegas," Kinski says she found Figgis to be "very much a musician, and you know what musicians are like." She smiles; the musician Quincy Jones is the father of her younger daughter. She says the film is about "coming to terms" and "bringing everyone to the truth"—about "how not to waste time not being honest."

Though she's the daughter of a famed actor—Klaus Kinski, star of such films as "Aguirre: The Wrath of God" and "Nosferatu"—Kinski wasn't raised in the business, because her father wasn't around much when she was little. "I grew up with my mom, and the only thing I really knew about acting because of my father was that it took you away from home, made you busy and not available." But then German filmmaker Wim Wenders cast her in the second of his road movies, "Wrong Move" (released in 1975 as "Wrong Movement"), and her life changed.

"It was a blessing for many reasons, because it brought me out of what was not good in my life into a life full of possibilities, and it helped my mom and I financially," Kinski says. But the 37-year-old actress also acknowledges the pressures that fall on those to whom fame comes early. "I took success for granted at first, but it's hard to hold up to expectations, and I couldn't always hold up," Kinski says. Sometimes it was the projects that didn't hold up: Paul Schrader's "Cat People" remake in 1982, Francis Ford Coppola's "One From the Heart" the same year, 1985's "Revolution."

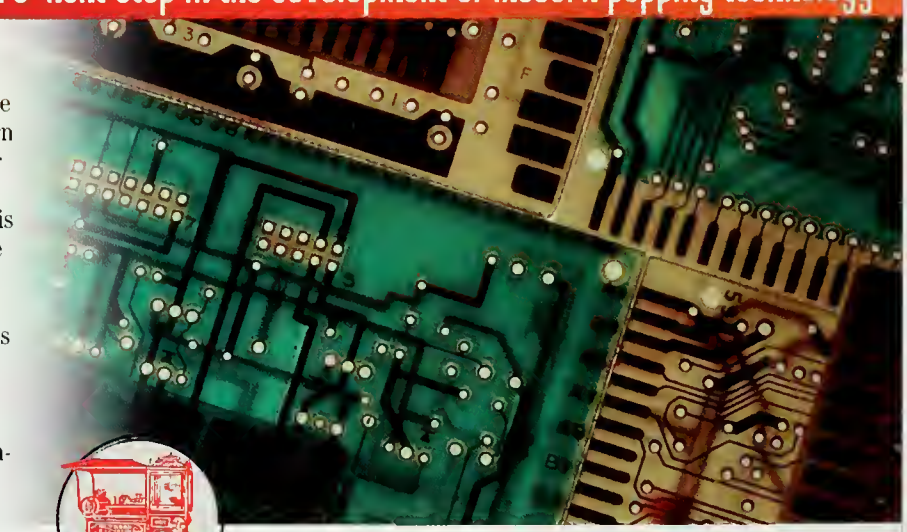
Kinski stars with Wesley Snipes in New Line's "One Night."

"My children caught a glimpse of ["Cat People"] on TV once and exclaimed, 'You were completely nude!' I found myself explaining, 'Well, as a cat, wouldn't you expect me to be nude?'" Kinski laughs, noting she hasn't appeared in many films her kids can watch yet.

But Kinski has made winning choices, including reteamings with Wenders: 1984's "Paris, Texas" and his 1993 film about heavenly creatures on earth, "Faraway, So Close!" And she remains hopeful about the quality of her recent acting choices. "I need to work, because I really want to be able to get better, because I feel a need to do justice to the fact that people believed in me when I was 12. So I'm happy to do a role, however small, as long as I find some truth in it.

"The years went by so fast and, even though I've had children, which makes me feel I've lived a long time, I feel I didn't really grow up. I kind of felt I was standing still for a while, and I don't want that. I feel I want to grow up.... I want to fulfill the desire I have to do things that are beautiful and meaningful.

"I'm so grateful for what happened when I was young, and I must never forget. I remind myself of that," Kinski says, and for a brief moment she almost slips back into her "Faraway, So Close!" character. "It was like an angel came."



"Father's Day." Starring Robin Williams, Billy Crystal and Nastassja Kinski. Directed by Ivan Reitman. Written by Babaloo Mandel and Lowell Ganz. Produced by Ivan Reitman and Joel Silver. Comedy. A Warner Bros. release. Opens May 9.

The Logic Option

Cretors' next step in the development of modern popping technology

Cretors is proud to announce the introduction of the micro-processor control system called "Logic" for the Diplomat and President model poppers. The heart of this new control system is a micro-processor that is programmed to simplify machine operation. With one touch of the START button on the membrane switch panel, the operator can turn on the kettle heat; dispense one charge of popping oil into the kettle, turn on the agitator motor, and the forced air exhaust system all at the same time. Independent control of these functions is still possible, but rarely needed with the automation provided by Logic's microprocessor control.

Logic does more...If the operator fails to continue the popping process and leaves the kettle heat on, the microprocessor will turn the heat off and shut down the machine. Logic also controls the oil pump and provides the operator with the ability to adjust the amount of oil that is delivered to the kettle. In addition Logic also controls and maintains the pump heat. Automate operation, reduce cost and maintenance, save time and money with Cretors' Logic Option.

EST'D 1885
CRETORS®

C.CRETORS AND CO.
3243 N. CALIFORNIA AVE. CHICAGO, IL 60618
312-588-1690 • 1-800-228-1885 • FAX 312-588-2171
E-MAIL CRETORS@aol.com • WEB PAGE www.cretors.com

Logic... Another original idea from the people who invented the popcorn machine.

People who know how to increase per caps know the importance of in-theatre promotions.

That's why they know...

Promotional Management Group

We have realized at least a 25% increase in sales of plastic drink cups and popcorn tubs by selling Movie Graphic Collectable™ promotional products offered by Promotional Management Group.

Wally Helton
Vice President of Concession Operations
Mann Theatres

PMG continues to increase our profits with Movie Graphic Collectable™ buckets and kiddie combo trays. These huge profit generators have increased our per caps considerably.

Stuart Pollock
Executive Director of Business Development and Concessions
Famous Players

The Kids Tray has been a significant part of our concession operations. The quality of the base tray and it's graphics appeal are important to both AMC and our customer.

John Sherley
Director, Food Marketing
AMC Theatres

Promotional Management group is the film industry leader in providing in-theatre promotional products to theatres worldwide! As one of the top marketing manufacturers in the country, PMG's MOVIE GRAPHIC COLLECTABLES™ can boost your popcorn and soft drink sales for many releases to come.

So talk to us and we are sure we can turn 1997 into a BLOCKBUSTER OF A YEAR!

PMG
PROMOTIONAL MANAGEMENT GROUP

PROMOTIONAL MANAGEMENT GROUP
5700 Broadmoor · Suite 912 · Mission · Kansas · 66202 · Tel 913-831-7644 · Fax 913-831-7577

"SPRUNG" FEVER

Triple-threat Rusty Cundieff directs, scripts and stars in his third film, Trimark's "Sprung"

by Sean O'Neill

Life has a way of dealing out nice little ironies, and some of the most enjoyable come from people with completely inappropriate names. Actor Brad Pitt, for example, rides high in Hollywood. And show business hyphenate Rusty Cundieff has become a well-oiled moviemaking machine.

Since the 1992 release of his debut feature, Goldwyn's farcical "rapumentary" "Fear of a Black Hat," Cundieff has kept his creative wheels turning. He followed with a brief stint on Michael Moore's deliciously cynical but short-lived "TV Nation" series, and then Cundieff resurfaced with his sophomore cinematic effort, the Savoy horror anthology "Tales From the Hood," whose gross doubled its modest budget.

Now Cundieff is ready to unleash "Sprung," a romantic comedy that's his funniest and most accomplished work. "Sprung" tells the story of two sets of best friends: ambitious law clerk Brandy ("House Party's" Tisha Campbell) and avaricious golddigger Adina (Paula Jai Parker), and aspiring photographer Montel (Cundieff) and his buddy Clyde ("Poetic Justice's" Joe Torry), a fast-food franchise manager who fancies himself the consummate player.

The two pairs of pals intersect at a party. After Adina and Clyde spend an evening of mutually deluded passion, they realize they detest each other (as opposites attract, likes repel). Montel and Brandy, in the meantime, progress past an initial animosity and begin to fall in love. As their romance blossoms, though, their best friends—feeling threatened—reluctantly join forces to break up the couple. Comic catastrophe follows.

The story might sound generic, but it's ultimately saved by Cundieff's wit, his penchant for the outrageous, inspired sight gags and, most of all, his generosity and evenhandedness as a writer. His characters are archetypes rather than stereotypes, and they all have their reasons. They're given time to display a variety of sides, and in the end they come off as real flesh-and-blood human beings, even as their attributes are stretched for comic effect.

Rusty Cundieff on the set of "Sprung."

Though Cundieff is on a creative roll, his success is the result of years spent in the entertainment trenches. Fresh out of the University of Southern California in the early 1980s, he gravitated toward standup comedy, following the lead of personal heroes like Richard Pryor, George Carlin and Flip Wilson. After drifting into bit parts on sitcoms like "Benson," plus a year-long stint on the soap opera "Days of Our Lives," Cundieff formed a partnership with producer Darin Scott ("Menace II Society," "To Sleep With Anger"). They decided to set their sights on bringing the black audience a new brand of African-American filmmaking—a diverse, far-reaching and inclusive approach that didn't center on gangland escapades.

"Some black directors enjoy doing that whole violent gang thing," Cundieff says, by way of explaining his genre hopping. "And there's nothing wrong with that. It's the equivalent of Scorsese doing 'Mean Streets,' 'GoodFellas' and 'Casino.' I like telling stories from the black experience, but the last thing you want is to become known as a black director who does only one kind of movie.

"I'm interested in a wide variety of things, and I make sure to see a broad range of films," Cundieff says. "Most directors want to stretch out and try different things, but they never get the chance. Hollywood pigeonholes you, and I understand that.

"But, probably because I've written most of what I've done so far, I've been allowed more freedom than most directors get, and I can kind of bounce around from project to project."

While "Fear of a Black Hat" (an African-American "This Is Spinal Tap") and "Tales From the Hood" (a "Creepshow" of color) were pure exercises in imagination, "Sprung"—with its subplot of people feeling cut off when their best friends fall in love—hews closer to the bone than Cundieff's previous projects.

The film is pure fiction, he insists. Yet Cundieff admits that some real-life experiences might have made their way into the narrative. "I used to date this girl, and then Darin started hanging out with her sister," Cundieff recalls. "They never really dated, but they became close. Of course, I broke up with my girl, and now she hates me, and her sister does too. Then the sister starts dancing on tour with Janet Jackson, and who gets invited to the show? Not me. Darin got to go to the concert, and I was like, 'Man, you never would have gotten those backstage passes to meet Janet if it wasn't for me!'"

Like the old song (and Cundieff's new movie) says, Love hurts. But chances are that Cundieff will get over it. After all, like another song says, Cundieff's future is shining so bright he's gotta wear shades.

"Sprung." Starring Tisha Campbell, Paula Jai Parker, Rusty Cundieff and Joe Torry. Directed by Rusty Cundieff. Written by Darin Scott and Rusty Cundieff. Produced by Darin Scott. Romantic comedy. A Trimark release. Opens May 2.

Change and update all of your interior signs from your ticketing software....

or a laptop.... or a personal computer, electronically, with a boxoffice smartSIGN™ from Signature Electronic Signs, Inc.

Directory Displays, Mini-Marquees, Box Office Titles, Showtimes, Auditorium Numbers, Sold Out, No Passes and Now Seating options.

Signature ELECTRONIC SIGNS INC.
21 Hercules drive, Colchester, VT 05446
800.545.7976 fax 802.655.6551

Available to the Motion Picture Exhibitor industry through Schult Design and Display, the industry leader since 1976.

Response No. 180

DAILY DRAWING TO BE HELD BY BOXOFFICE AT SHOWEST!

Thousands of Dollars Worth of Cinema Sound Equipment to Be GIVEN AWAY at Trade Show!

Sometimes the best thing about big conventions is all the free stuff you get. You know. Fifteen kinds of key chains. Stuff in vacuum-sealed packages that are impossible to open, but which leak in your suitcase anyway. Candy. T-Shirts. Tote Bags. Mugs.

BOXOFFICE has covered SHOWEST since its inception, so we know what we're talking about. Our collection of "Judge Dredd" memorabilia is the finest in the western world. There's not a single coffee cup in our offices that doesn't have the logo of a major studio embossed on it. And as for our "Free Willy" beach towels... But who has time to go to the beach?

We love the goodies we get at SHOWEST. That's why this year we're doing something big. Something bold. Something that won't fit in your suitcase. If you're a prize winner, we think you won't mind.

Because—drumroll please—this year, BOXOFFICE MAGAZINE is GIVING AWAY thousands of dollars worth of high-class, state-of-the-art theatre sound equipment. Giving it away! To someone just like you! For free!

There's no catch. But there are a few rules.

Here's how it works:

1. Stop by our friendly BOXOFFICE Booth (#406) on the Trade Show Floor.
2. Leave your business card, with your room number and the name of your hotel written on the back.
3. There will be a daily drawing on each day of the Trade Show. You need not be present to win. In the event that we are unable to reach you before the close of the show, another prize-winner may be selected.
4. There's no need to be a BOXOFFICE subscriber to enter (but if you aren't, shame on you).
5. YOU ABSOLUTELY MUST BE A THEATRICAL EXHIBITION PROFESSIONAL TO ENTER THIS CONTEST.

Please, please, PLEASE, only one entry per theatrical exhibition professional, and you can win only once (so last year's winners are inelgible). Again, there's no need to be present to win—we will contact you at the show. (But if you're not there, you will miss seeing the disappointed and jealous faces of your exhibition peers!).

ShoWest Trade Show Day One: Tuesday, March 4

Prize: QSC MX 1500a AMPLIFIER

DAY 1 DRAWING WILL BE HELD

AT THE BOXOFFICE BOOTH (#406)

at 6:00 P.M. SHARP!

Throw away that old Vitaphone equipment you inherited from your Aunt Tillie! Get ready for the year 2000 and beyond! Because today's winner will receive a brand new model MX 1500a amplifier from QSC Audio, and it just doesn't get better than that.

More than just a power amplifier manufacturer, QSC Audio is now a systems supplier offering the greatest range of advanced sound system alternatives available today. Commitment to the whole system is what makes the MX 1500a amplifier the right addition to any theatre sound system. MXa amps are a perfect upgrade path for the high power requirements of digital audio and, at 350 watts of power per channel, the 1500a is the most popular of the Series. THX approved and suitable for screen channel, surround and subwoofer applications, the MX 1500a will fill your theatre with awesome sound!

Specs: MX 1500a Stereo amplifier; 400W @ 8 ohms, 600W @ 4 ohms; fan cooling 2 sp. 1 kHz, 0.1% THD. Prize value: $1125.00.

ShoWest Trade Show Day Two: Wednesday, March 5
Prize: The SMART CITI-TELL DIGITAL MESSAGE SERVER

OUR DAY 2 DRAWING WILL BE HELD AT

THE BOXOFFICE BOOTH (#406) at 5:30 P.M. SHARP!

A unique new product that handles stored phone messages, the SMART Citi-Tell digital message server replaces telephone cassette answering devices with high-quality digital recordings! The product is designed like a voice-mail system where callers use menu options to go directly to information about the movie performance they are interested in attending. Information is delivered to your patrons more quickly, and more incoming traffic can be handled with existing phone lines. The Citi-Tell is an on-premises message server that can be configured to handle a large multiplex or several multiplexes in a small city. The system may be expanded to 40 lines of incoming traffic. Even a power failure will not erase or destroy the message recordings. Customized messages can be loaded remotely from around the nation. Several recording service companies can change your messages overnight using professional voices for the best image of your company. Give audience A-plus service with the SMART CITI-TELL!

Printed literature on the SMART Citi-Tell Digital Message Server will be available at the show. Prize value: $1250.00.

ShoWest Trade Show Day Three: Thursday, March 6
GRAND PRIZE: COMPLETE DTS SOUND SYSTEM

DAY 3 DRAWING HELD AT BOXOFFICE BOOTH

(#406) AT 11:00 A.M. SHARP!

In just a few short years, digital sound has transformed the acoustic environment of moviegoing as we know it. The lush orchestrations of Hollywood scores, the bone-crunching effects of exhilarating action films, and even the tender conversations of two people in love—all can now be rendered with a clarity so real, the audience feels like it's actually there.

If you saw "Jurassic Park" and thought that the next step taken by that huge, monstrous, roaring dinosaur was going to land on you, chances are you were hearing the pristine, amazingly realistic sound of a DTS system. Now, just in time for Steven Spielberg's "Jurassic Park" sequel "The Lost World," your theatre can enter the digital age with its very own DTS sound system, bringing state-of-the-art, premier quality discrete channel digital sound to the movies you show. DTS is the ONLY digital sound format in which "The Lost World" will be released, and digital audio means boxoffice dollars!

Your audiences can hear the sound exactly as the moviemaker and sound designer intended, because the DTS system delivers an exact copy of the studio master recordings. Already a legend within the industry, the DTS system is a proven attraction for all moviegoers, and especially for the more discriminating members of your audience—the connoisseurs, who want the very best in their theatre presentations. The kind of customer you want in your theatre is the kind of customer who goes out of his or her way to find the finest moviegoing experience.

Operation of the DTS system is automatic, fail safe and compatible with all existing cinema processors. Because DTS prints have a conventional stereo-optical track as well as DTS timecode, a single inventory of prints works for all theatres. Installation and operation are simple and foolproof: in the event of a rare technical problem, DTS automatically defaults to the stereo-optical track.

The DTS system gives you ultimate sound performance. With the "Jurassic Park" sequel ready to invade your market, this system could have those Jurassic age creatures stomping through your theatre the next time 'round! Don't let the digital revolution leave you behind! Stop by the BOXOFFICE booth at ShoWest and enter for your chance at a free DTS system today!

Specs: 6 channel configuration. Frequency response: L, C, R, LS, RS: 20Hz to 20kHz; sub: 20 Hz to 80 Hz. Holds 3 CD-ROMS for up to 5 hours play time. 96dB dynamic range, all channels. Prize value: $6,350.00

TALK OF THE "TOWN"

Carole and David Trepeck prove that you can go home again—particularly if you revitalize your hometown cinema into a state-of-the-art eight-plex

by Susan Lambert

Carole Ilitch Trepeck and David Trepeck say restoring their hometown Birmingham Theatre was a labor of love.

Carole Ilitch Trepeck and David Trepeck always loved the movies, but they never thought they'd be running a theatre, much less the successful eight-screen palace that their New Birmingham Theatre has become less than a year since the grand re-opening of the long-shuttered 1926 movie house in May of 1996. There were two significant events that led David and Carole to the Birmingham Theatre. The first was they each grew up in the suburbs of Detroit, Michigan, next door to Birmingham, a town of 50,000 located 25 miles north of the famed auto industry city. They met as high school friends and sometime later things changed, Carole laughs, "We always say 'When Harry Met Sally' is our story." But the second contributing factor to becoming theatre owners came when the couple left their hometown. Just after they were married, Carole and David temporarily relocated to Dallas, Texas where Carole finished law school and David built a practice facility and headquarters for the Dallas Stars Hockey Club. So how did a lawyer and a general contractor end up running a movie theatre and what does any of it have to do with Texas?

While in Dallas, the young couple fed their personal love of movies with frequent visits to the local Highland Park Village AMC Theatre. They also befriended one Bill Herting, a man with 20 years experience in the movie business. These two factors came into play when, upon their return to Michigan, Carole and David found the old Birmingham movie house [which had been converted to a legitimate theatre in the '80s] was shuttered and dark. "This is our hometown and our heart was crushed when we saw that the Birmingham Theatre was closed," explains Carole. "It was just so sad to us. It's in the center of town and with the close of the theatre, the town was really dead." But then, inspired by their time in Dallas, they said to themselves, "It's a sign. We saw so many wonderful things in Dallas. Here we've been frequenting this Highland

JARCO
INDUSTRIES INC.

STATE OF THE ART
Concessions

98 Park Avenue • P.O. Box 159 • Babylon, NY, USA 11702-0159
Phone: 1-516-422-9000 • Fax 1-516-422-9005

The New Birmingham Theatre lights up the local downtown area with a replica of its historic 1926 marquee.

Park Village that we love so much—we can do that right here." David adds, "I called Bill [Herting] and talked to him about the Detroit market and the movie business in general and he said, 'Gosh, it sounds great. Let me come up and take a look.'" He liked what he saw and soon Bill was on board as a minority partner when Carole and David jumped into the deep end of exhibition with both feet. David admits,"There's no question there was a learning curve that was very steep." Carole says that Bill's exhibition experience made it possible to face the challenge. She adds the three of them make a good team."We all have such different qualities that complement each other."

The New Birmingham Theatre sports eight large-screen cinemas, ranging from 70 seats to 450 seats, and includes the latest in theatre-going amenities: DTS, Dolby Digital, THX and Ultra Stereo sound, stadium seating and love seats scattered in every auditorium. The largest theatre includes a balcony, one of the many special features which David says gives people an opportunity to enjoy movies the way they were originally designed to be experienced. "This is an event. It's downtown. It's an urban setting. We have art deco decor. We have a lot of attention to detail." David and Carole want people to feel the environment adds to the entertainment value. David says,"It's inviting. It's not just somewhere in the middle of a mall and you're in for two hours and you're out and you don't care. We think that movie-going is an event and there should always be something for everyone."

That "something for everyone" extends to the theatre's unique concessions which have been a favorite draw among the patrons. They offer Lone Star gourmet coffees, Little Caesar's Pizza and Twist and Shout Pretzels, which Carole asserts"are not like your typical frozen-to-heated pretzels. They are fresh, gourmet pretzels made next door." The Birmingham also serves up goodies from a nationally known locally-based company called Gayle's Chocolates.

The Birmingham's movie selection is equally eclectic; the theatre plays both Hollywood fare and art-house specialties, which Carole says keeps it exciting. "That was a potential challenge and something that a lot of people were skeptical about—'You can't play both. You shouldn't play both.'—And it's been, knock on wood, very successful playing both. I think the city that we're in demands both. People really demand diversity here, as it's a very diverse city." David agrees, noting "we seem to be able to play everything from studio features and G-rated films all the way through the heavy art, and we've done relatively well with everything."

It was that particular ability that got some distributors to pay attention to the little independent that could."We opened 'She's the One,' one of the first projects out by Fox Searchlight, and we were number one in the market," recalls David. "The response to that was a big eye-popper for a lot of the studios. It caught a lot of people's attention and was kind of a feather in our cap as well."

Carole says that attention from the studios is a great benefit. "You know, when you're new and independent you've got to prove to them that you can play and we can definitely play. We've been drawing great crowds. It's been better than we could have ever expected."

Carole cites opening night as the highlight of her exhibition career because it was "seeing a final product from a vision to a reality." David says for him it's the successful fruition of an idea—that people would love to go to the movies in Birmingham and it was something that was missing—despite the doubters. "Now we're open and, so far, we've been successful. People are coming out. They love the theatre and it seems to have been a catalyst and spark plug for the downtown area. So that's a nice feeling." David says nearby merchants and restaurant are claiming a 40 to 50 percent increase in sales since the reopening of the cinema. The theatre has revitalized the community, which has been thrilled to support their local cinema. But Carole says they're not resting on their laurels."I don't want to take anything for granted. We're still learning. We're still the new kids on the block. And we're little kids—we're independent."

David sees a laundry list of reasons to stay independent, "from what you're able to play to guest service to employee relations to giving back to the community. We can't say for sure because we've never been part of a circuit, but

CFS
RENTEC

Innovation Is Our Mission

The motion picture industry's most innovative, technologically advanced systems manufacturer.

See Us At SHOWEST Trade Booth # 310-311

CINEMA FILM SYSTEMS

Corporate Offices & Factory
779 North Benson Avenue · Upland, CA 91786, USA
Phone: (909) 931-9318 · Fax: (909) 949-8815

Midwest / International Sales
3840 South Helena · Aurora, CO 80013, USA
Phone: (303) 699-7477 · Fax: (303) 680-6071

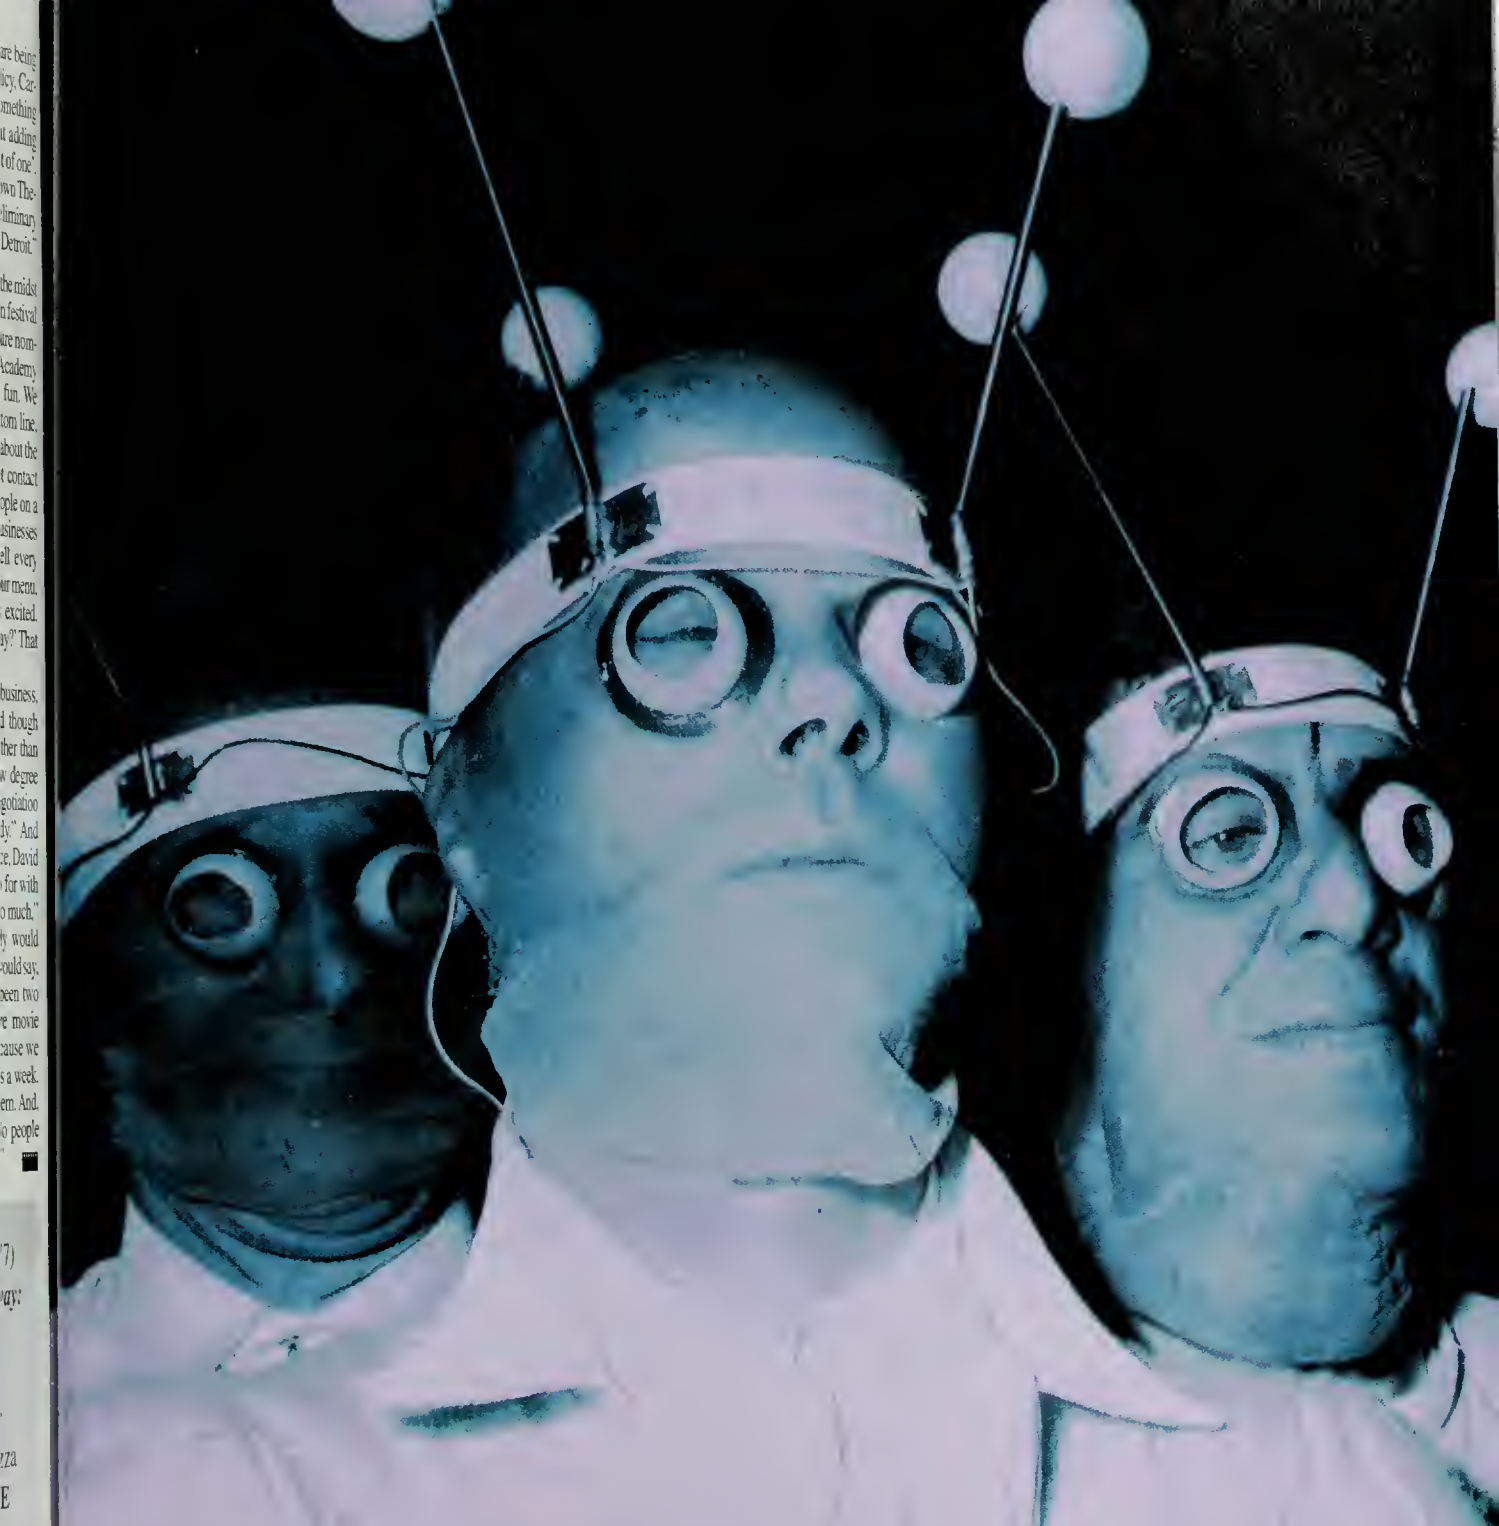
Response No. 274

The largest auditorium of the Birmingham includes a balcony and the occasional loveseat.

our partner has and he points out several things, like, 'If you were part of a circuit, you're mandated to play this feature even though it might not work at your place, or you have to run this special or your ticket prices have to be so much.' I say there are many advantages to independence."

Carole adds that the ability to be completely unique will keep independent theatres competitive."That is the one advantage that will keep them very, very viable." She and David find ways to offer specialty services whenever possible,"whether it's gourmet coffees or tickets by phone or valet parking or a website (www.uptowntheatres.com) These are all things that we have, and we just won't stop. We really won't stop trying to be different, or trying to be unique and I think that is vital for all independents."

David says it takes constant effort from them and their 80 part-time and full-time employees to maintain the quality standard and level of service they demand for their theatre. David explains,"We want to be the industry leader in guest service and we strive for that. On a day-to-day basis, that is probably one of the biggest challenges—to maintain that level and to keep people coming back and to keep them happy. Make sure that our standards are being met." With that kind of company policy, Carole and David could be at the start of something big. They are, in fact, thinking about adding another theatre to their current 'circuit of one', under the parent company name Uptown Theatres. David says,"We are in the preliminary stages of looking to expand in metro Detroit."



Currently, the Birmingham is in the midst of a "Best of the Academy" film festival that highlights all the best picture nominees and culminates in a huge Academy Awards night gala. Carole adds,"It's fun. We try to have fun. I guess that's the bottom line, right?" David says his favorite thing about the movie business is twofold: "You get contact with just a tremendous amount of people on a daily basis and it's one of the only businesses where you get a new product to sell every week. You're constantly changing your menu, so to speak. And people are always excited. 'Oh, what do you have opening Friday?' That makes it very rewarding."

Carole, who grew up in a family business, loves running one of her own. And though she's now focusing on exhibition rather than jurisprudence, she does find that law degree quite useful. "Whether it's a lease negotiation or whatever, it really comes in handy." And what they lack in exhibition experience, David and Carole have more than made up for with their passion. "We love the movies so much," says Carole. "Every time somebody would hear about us getting involved, they would say, 'You know what, it couldn't have been two better people because you guys are movie nuts.' People would laugh at us because we go to the movies probably four times a week. We go all the time. We just live for them. And, of course, we imitate every line. So people thought it was just such a perfect fit."

The New Birmingham Theatre
Uptown Theatres
355 South Woodward, Ste 200
Birmingham, MI 48009
(810) 647-5678
Owners: Carole Ilitch Trepeck, David Trepeck, Bill Herting

Earliest Movie Memory:
Carole: "The Strongest Man in the World" (1975). I just thought was so great to be independent at what, 11 or 12 or whatever we were. To go to the movies was so fun—such freedom.

David: "Star Wars" (1977)
Favorite Vacation Getaway:
David: Aspen
Carole: Telluride
Favorite Concession:
Both: Little Caesar's Pizza
Favorite* BOXOFFICE *Feature:
Carole: David likes the Trailers.
David: The Independent Showcase is obviously close to our hearts. It's a great honor to be considered.
Advice to other Independents:
Both: Keep things unique and give a choice of product.

Finding the ultimate movie experience is a lot easier than it used to be.

From 3-D glasses to Aroma-Vision, filmgoers have tried just about everything in their search for the ultimate movie rush. But now ACT III Theatres has opened more than 200 THX auditoriums, with 200 more on the way. So if anyone in the industry says "take me to your leader," our answer is, that's us.

ACT III

www.act3theatres.com

THX

SERVICE MAN

R/C Theatres President and CEO J. Wayne Anderson Follows in the Footsteps of B.V. 'Sturdy' Sturdivant

by Pat Kramer

President and chief operating officer of R/C Theatre Management Corporation J. Wayne Anderson is this year's winner of ShoWest's B.V. Sturdivant Award. Presented each year to an individual for his or her extraordinary service to and on behalf of the exhibition industry, the Sturdivant honor is going to Anderson for his work in exhibition on both the state and national levels.

As head of the 150-screen R/C Theatres chain where he's worked for over 25 years, Anderson last year received NATO's Gold Medal of Exhibition Award. Now serving his 10th year on NATO's board of directors, Anderson has certainly been one of its most active representatives: He is the founder and chairman of the newly-formed NATO Blue Ribbon Committee; he's served as chairman and co-chair of the Technical Advancement Committee, as well as the chairman of the Codes Task Force Committee; he's a member of the food and building code committees; and he co-authored the NATO ADA Handbook. Through his extensive efforts, he has helped raise technical standards for the entire industry.

Key to that process has been Anderson's work in bringing polyester film into wider usage in America and pushing to have film distributed on 6,000 foot reels. "For about the past 20 years, I've put a lot of time into trying to get our film distributed on 6,000 foot reels. With a 'big thanks' to D. Barry Reardon [president of Warner Bros. Distribution] and people like him, I think it's really going to come into being. We should see film going out in April or May on 6,000 foot reels delivered to the theatres. That's a big accomplishment."

In the case of bringing polyester film into wider use here in America, Anderson journeyed to Europe as chairman of NATO's Technical Committee, along with vice chairman Larry Jacobson of AMC, and studied the use of polyester film. What he discovered is revolutionizing the industry. "We feel it decreases potential breakdowns, it's stronger, it seems to scratch less, it provides better presentations and the film itself is much, much longer." As a result of Anderson's efforts, 80 to 85 percent of the film stock used in distribution prints is now on polyester film.

Commenting on the work he's done on behalf of improving technology, Anderson credits all those on NATO's technical committee in helping emphasize the importance of quality sound and projection. "In the old days, they put a whole lot more emphasis on the marble and chandeliers, the glitz and the glamour. Now, you have glitz and glamour, obviously, but there's more emphasis being put on the projection and the quality of sound on the screen than before."

To remain competitive in this industry, Anderson believes theatre owners must continue to build the best theatres featuring the latest technology, something he says is not so easy to do. "It's very difficult to do today because the big circuits are building better theatres. I give everybody credit for building better theatres today.

"Those that don't build the best, the latest in technology, will not be in business for long in the 21st century," he notes. "The best theatres are going to survive and the ones that are not as good will go by the wayside."

Regarding his years of service to NATO, Anderson expresses his dedication and love for exhibition, saying "Many people feel that I've put a lot of volunteer time in to do things for the good of our industry. I just love the industry—I want it to be strong and I want it to stay forever and ever. And we have to give it a lot for it to be strong. If it's strong, everybody benefits."

On being chosen to receive the B.V. Sturdivant Award, Anderson says he couldn't be more honored. He recalls some advice his father gave him: "When you do a job, do it to the best of your ability and try to exceed even beyond that. Because just doing the job, that's what you're getting paid to do, and you should not expect anything for it. But if you excel and do more than is expected, and you continue to do your best, somebody's going to recognize it and you will be rewarded in life with great things. And this award certainly seems to be one.

"I honestly couldn't be more overwhelmed to be given an award named after B. V. Sturdivant. I know there's a lot of other prestigious awards out there. But 'Sturdy' Sturdivant put more into the industry than he took out and that to me is a great, great man." He adds, "I'm trying to follow in 'Sturdy' Sturdivant's footsteps; I hope I can put more into the industry than I take out."

BOXOFFICE
SPECIAL REPORT:
SHOWEST
1997

Steve never realized how much he liked Swedish Fish... until he took them to the movies.

THE SOFT CHEWY CANDY WITH FLAVOR THAT LASTS FROM HEAD TO TAIL.

AICP
American International Concession Products, Corp.
PO Box 379, Malverne, NY 11565
(516) 420•1868 Fax (516) 420•4042

jaret international inc.

Response No. 15

G - RATED

© 1997 Jaret International Inc.

MAKING A STAND

Bruce Proctor Receives NAC'S Bert Nathan Memorial Award

by Pat Kramer

For demonstrating a positive leadership direction, contributing significantly to the development and professionalism of the concessions industry, and making honorable accomplishments adding to the longevity of the industry, the National Association of Concessionaires has chosen Bruce Proctor, president of Proctor Companies, as the recipient of the 1997 Bert Nathan Memorial Award. The award is named after the late Bert Nathan, a past president of the NAC and a leader in the industry.

An active member of the NAC Board of Directors since his election as a director in 1989, Proctor was named chairman of the NAC's marketing/membership committee in 1994. Under his direction, the committee produced a high-tech promotional video, spotlighting NAC's benefits and promoting the concession industry. The video went on to win the 1996 Gold Circle Award, sponsored annually by the American Society of Association Executives, for the best in association publishing and public relations work. In addition to his leading role with the NAC, Proctor has been active in the International Theatre Equipment Association.

Acknowledging his receipt of the Bert Nathan Award, Bruce Proctor states, "I feel flattered to be included among such an elite group of individuals. I admire and respect those who have been previously recognized," adding "Bert Nathan was indeed a good friend of the family."

Bruce Proctor comes from a family dedicated to improving and enhancing the exhibition industry through the creation of innovative concession counters and quality equipment. Having joined his father's business 25 years ago, Proctor worked his way up through all phases of the company's operations, including counter installation, the design of concession stand layouts and the running of company operations. Since Proctor was named president in 1986, revenues have doubled.

Proctor attributes this success to Proctor Co.'s innovative concession stand designs. "My company builds the best-looking money printing press in the business," he jokes, alluding to the money well-organized concession stands help exhibitors generate. Says Proctor, "We build very efficient concession stands and also dress them up and make them look very attractive. They crank out revenues like crazy!"

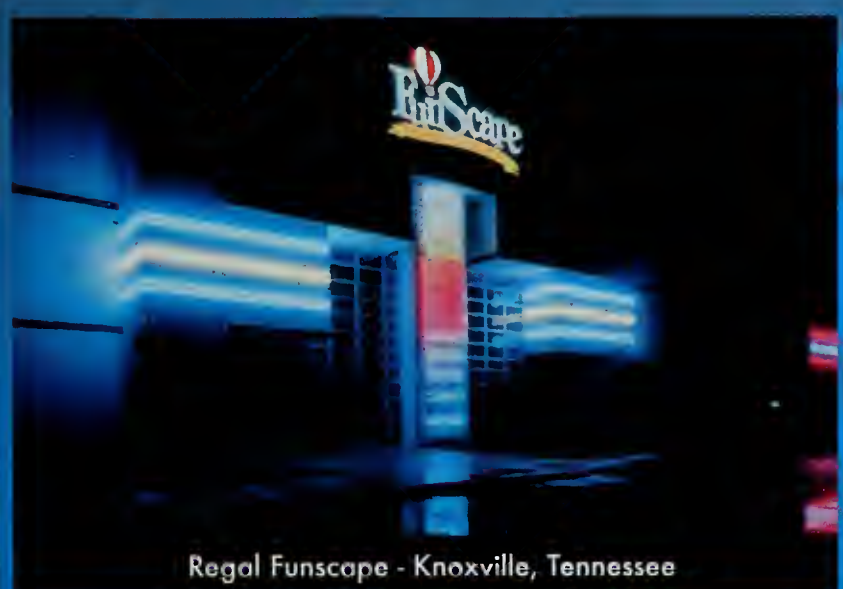
BOXOFFICE
SPECIAL REPORT:
SHOWEST
1997

Proctor Co.'s current claim to fame is the state-of-the-art concession stand it built for General Cinemas' Shoppers World complex in Framingham, Mass., which is among the most successful theatre concession operations in the United States. Featuring an expanded menu and a custom-designed concession stand over 120 feet long, the complex incorporates a "pass-through" design borrowed from fast-food chains. Consisting of three separate bars—one for food preparation, a second for storing pre-boxed popcorn, pre-poured drinks, hot foods and other concession foods, and the third for displaying concession tools and candy—the Proctor design offers faster accessibility and thus better service to patrons.

Commenting on the innovations his company has brought to the concessions industry, Proctor states, "We've built a solid reputation for providing innovative revenue-generating concession stands where a pass-through design is incorporated to accommodate an expanded menu—that's the latest, greatest thing in my business. When you have expanded menus to attract more people and you have large venue complexes, you have to turn up the heat and do it faster. [Our design is] faster, and that's what makes Framingham so successful."

To stay on top of changing trends, Proctor says he is constantly doing research, exploring other food service venues to find applicable ideas for an evolving industry. "I'll tour stadiums and look at food courts—it's a drag to go out for a quick bite to eat with me. We're constantly working on the ergonomics of food court design: how can we serve customers quicker? It really becomes a mathematical game. If there are too many people in line, the people in the back of the line tend to lose interest. We have to make transactions happen faster."

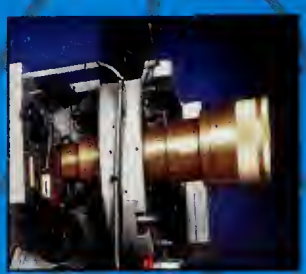
Paying tribute to Proctor's accomplishments, NAC president David R. Scoco says, "His family legacy of service to the industry, commitment to customer service and willingness to embrace technological advances in the design and programming of concessions facilities are just three indications of his worthiness to receive this coveted award. Since accepting my appointment to serve as chairman of the marketing/membership committee, Bruce's contributions are significant, yielding a new and improved approach to the promotion of our association."



Bruce Proctor joins previous recipients Bill Chaplain, Norman Chesler, Evan Gordon and Jack Leonard, among many others, in receiving the Bert Nathan Award.

Cine U.K. - Stevanage, England

AMC Grand - Dallas, Texas



Regal Funscape - Knoxville, Tennessee

STRONG

WE'RE KEEPING THE THEATRE INDUSTRY STRONG® AROUND THE WORLD

For generations, Strong is the name that theatre owner's around the World have turned to for projection room equipment.
No matter where you want to go, Strong International will help you get there

- Simplex® and Century® Projectors
- Isco Optic® Lenses
- Automation
- Lamphouses
- Platters
- Special Venue Projectors

4350 McKinley Street · Omaha, Ne 68124
· 402/453-4444 · www.strang-cinema.com

©1997 Strang Internationl is a Divisian af Ballantyne of Omaha, Inc

BALLANTYN

FRONT & CENTER

John Greiner's Better Idea Nabs 1997 Customer Service Award

by Wade Major

In the "Information Age," there's nothing more frustrating than insufficient information, and nowhere has there been a more dire need for information than the current and ongoing expansion of multiplexes. With larger complexes now showing upwards of 20 different films, many patrons have begun to find convenience supplanted by confusion, overwhelmed by too many choices and too little guidance.

But there is light at the end of the tunnel, and plenty of it according to John Greiner, West Division Training Manager for AMC Theatres. "What we do is to take a highly-trained employee on with strong people skills and given them the tools to proactively help patrons as they approach the theatre. This is mainly done during high-volume periods where they're able to intercept customers before they have questions. Or, if they have questions, they're able to find this person because they are highly visible."

Greiner's innovative "411 Front Pad Person" program, originally implemented at AMC's Burbank 28 complex, has already earned him widespread accolades, including ShoWest '97's coveted Customer Service Award. The idea is elegantly simple: informed employees are made available near a larger complex's admissions area to help customers decide on what film they'd like to see.

The industry hosannas are appreciated, but Greiner's greatest satisfaction still comes from the reaction of customers and patrons, many of whom have written letters in praise of the Front Pad Person program, named for the one-hundred square foot "Front Pad" area immediately adjacent to most AMC multiplex boxoffices. "The response from the public was overwhelming," says Greiner. "We found we were not only meeting the customers' expectations, we were exceeding them. We were making it much more convenient for them, taking a little bit of the hassle out of the experience. Our patrons are now at a point where they look for this person if there's a lot of activity."

Greiner is quick to point out, however, that the Front Pad Person is more than just a theatre employee with a showtime schedule. "They have brochures with synopses of the movies, showtimes, maps for parking, restaurant information, locations of ATMs, directions to the freeways, information on our MovieWatcher program, information on when movies are available for seating, release dates of coming attractions and sometimes even detailed information on stars, directors and the credits of films. Most importantly, they're in communication with theatre operations to facilitate crowd control, so they know if a film is sold out, whether seats are available for a given film and when a customer can next see it. When it gets extremely busy, like it did for 'Independence Day,' we provide two people and a manager as well as a mobile concession stand."

BOXOFFICE

SPECIAL REPORT:

SHOWEST 1997

Key to maintaining such a high level of service is AMC's specialized training, wherein staff members with exemplary communications and customer service skills are identified and recruited for a series of customer service seminars. "We teach things like how to handle customers, how to turn negative experiences into positive ones," says Greiner. "But a lot of it comes from experience, just getting used to the operation. We just give them the tools to answer virtually every question a customer can come up with."

An unexpected bonus, adds Greiner, has been the enormous effect the program has had on staff morale. "They want to do it. It's a fun job. Staff members are always trying to be trained into getting that position. And they're very excited when they're scheduled for it. It's fast-paced, they get to deal with a lot of people, to move around and be where the action is. Most importantly, they feel like they're in charge of something. And that's very rewarding for them."

While the program has been in effect since late 1995, it wasn't until summer of 1996 that the release of such blockbusters as "Twister," "Mission: Impossible" and "Independence Day" finally put it to the test, which it passed with flying colors. Greiner, however, refuses to take all the credit, citing cooperation with neighboring merchants and local government as equally essential components.

"The City of Burbank has gone to great lengths to create an entertainment district," says Greiner, "and AMC is a part of that. We have three complexes in Burbank. There's so much more than just the moviegoing experience to this area. Burbank provides shopping, nightlife, restaurants, with movie theatres in the heart of that. A lot of merchants have bounced back promotions, and meetings in our mall have produced an excellent rapport with other businesses in the area. And the City of Burbank is very cooperative as far as merchant meetings and developing a sense of community with merchants and the entertainment district. It's very easy in Burbank."

But will the Burbank experience serve as a model for the rest of the country? Greiner thinks it can, and judging by the applause his idea has generated even among his competitors, he may be right. "I'd like to roll it out to the entire company," he says. It would be nice if we had an established program like this at every AMC. It is currently in a lot of theatres and every one is unique, but I think it could be incorporated by the whole company."

PARAMOUNT PICTURES CONGRATULATES
SHOWEST
AND THE 1997 INDUSTRY AWARD WINNERS
BARRIE LAWSON LOEKS
Robert W. Selig ShoWester of the Year
J. WAYNE ANDERSON
B. V. Sturdivant Award
ANN CRAFT
Ida Schreiber Award
BRUCE PROCTOR
NAC's Bert Nathan Memorial Award
JOHN GREINER
ShoWester Customer Service Award
Paramount
A VIACOM COMPANY

HONING HER CRAFT

Theatre Owners of Indiana's Ann Craft Wins Ida Schreiber Honor for Philanthropic Contributions to the Industry

by Pat Kramer

Ann L. Craft, whose involvement with the Theatre Owners of Indiana has spanned 50 years, serving as general manager and corporate secretary among other titles, is this year's recipient of ShoWest's distinguished Ida Schreiber Award. The Schreiber Award honors women who have made significant philanthropic and/or humanitarian contributions to their communities. Serving as a NATO board member and on the board of Variety Club of Indiana, Ann Craft has been invaluable to the industry—and Indiana.

As a registered lobbyist, Craft has bolstered the efforts of the Theatre Owners of Indiana for the past 30 years, representing them on all important issues including legislation, public relations and all types of business codes, rules and regulations. For instance, Craft was instrumental in writing Indiana's obscenity statutes to reflect the language of Supreme Court rulings so that Indiana theatres would not be harassed by unconstitutionally harsh laws. "Indiana has no admissions taxes, no censorship and no sales tax on tickets or film rentals," says Craft. She adds, "Indiana was the 17th state to pass anti-blind bidding legislation in the late '70s." Thanks to Craft's lobbying, "trade screenings are now regularly held in Indianapolis."

She has also represented theatre owners in defeating a proposed requirement that would have forced those operating motion picture projectors to be licensed by the state. Another coup for Craft was getting legislation passed in the early '70s that abolished daylight savings time in the eastern time zone of the state. Says Craft, "Drive-in theatres and other exhibitors were noticing a drop in admissions during the two years we were on daylight savings time." Since that time, Craft has lobbied each year to maintain that status. Additionally, Kentucky theatre owners have also benefitted from her work in the form of tax relief legislation.

As an executive officer with the Theatre Owners of Indiana, Craft has handled all the association's corporate matters, developing a possible business climate for owners and operators of Indiana's motion picture theatres.

BOXOFFICE
SPECIAL REPORT:
SHOWEST
1997

Craft has also been active in bringing the state's filmmakers recognition, helping create an annual film directory for the State of Indiana, which includes all the information of interest in the exhibition industry. She's also been involved with the Indiana Division of Film Development since its inception, serving as event coordinator for the highly-lauded world premiere of "Hoosiers." (Released in 1986, the film stars Gene Hackman as a small-town high school basketball coach and is based on the true story of a team in Milan, Indiana that won the state title). Craft also sits on the advisory board of the Heartland Film Festival.

For her multifaced efforts in the state of Indiana, Craft has received several prestigious awards including the Governor's Award for Sagamore of the Wabash, the highest honor in the state; and Kentucky's honorary title as a Kentucky Colonel for her association work. From the Indiana Academy of Family Physicians, she has earned a certificate of commendation while the Indiana Society of Association Executives awarded Craft the President's Award in 1989 and the Association Executive of the Year in 1990. Continuing to make contributions whenever she can, Craft regularly speaks to students at Purdue University, sharing her insight on women in business and legislation at college seminars.

Despite her many accomplishments, Craft is humble about winning ShoWest's Ida Schreiber Award. "It's an honor I never would have thought would come my way. I'm thrilled beyond belief that it would be awarded to me. In this industry, it's pretty much the highest honor I could get."

Having worked in the exhibition industry for 50 years now, Craft says of her longevity, "I think this industry, like no other that I'm aware of, is one you either like or you don't. And if you like it, it hooks you—it's what you want to do. Everything else pales in comparison. Branches of it are very demanding, you work strange and different hours and it can be extremely frustrating. But it's one of the most active and exciting of all industries." To that she adds, "The award is the icing on the cake—it's something very special. It sort of tells me that someplace, somewhere, the way I chose to do [my job] must have been right and helpful."

SONY TAKES MANHATTAN

BOXOFFICE®

THE BUSINESS MAGAZINE OF THE GLOBAL MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

SHOWEST 1997

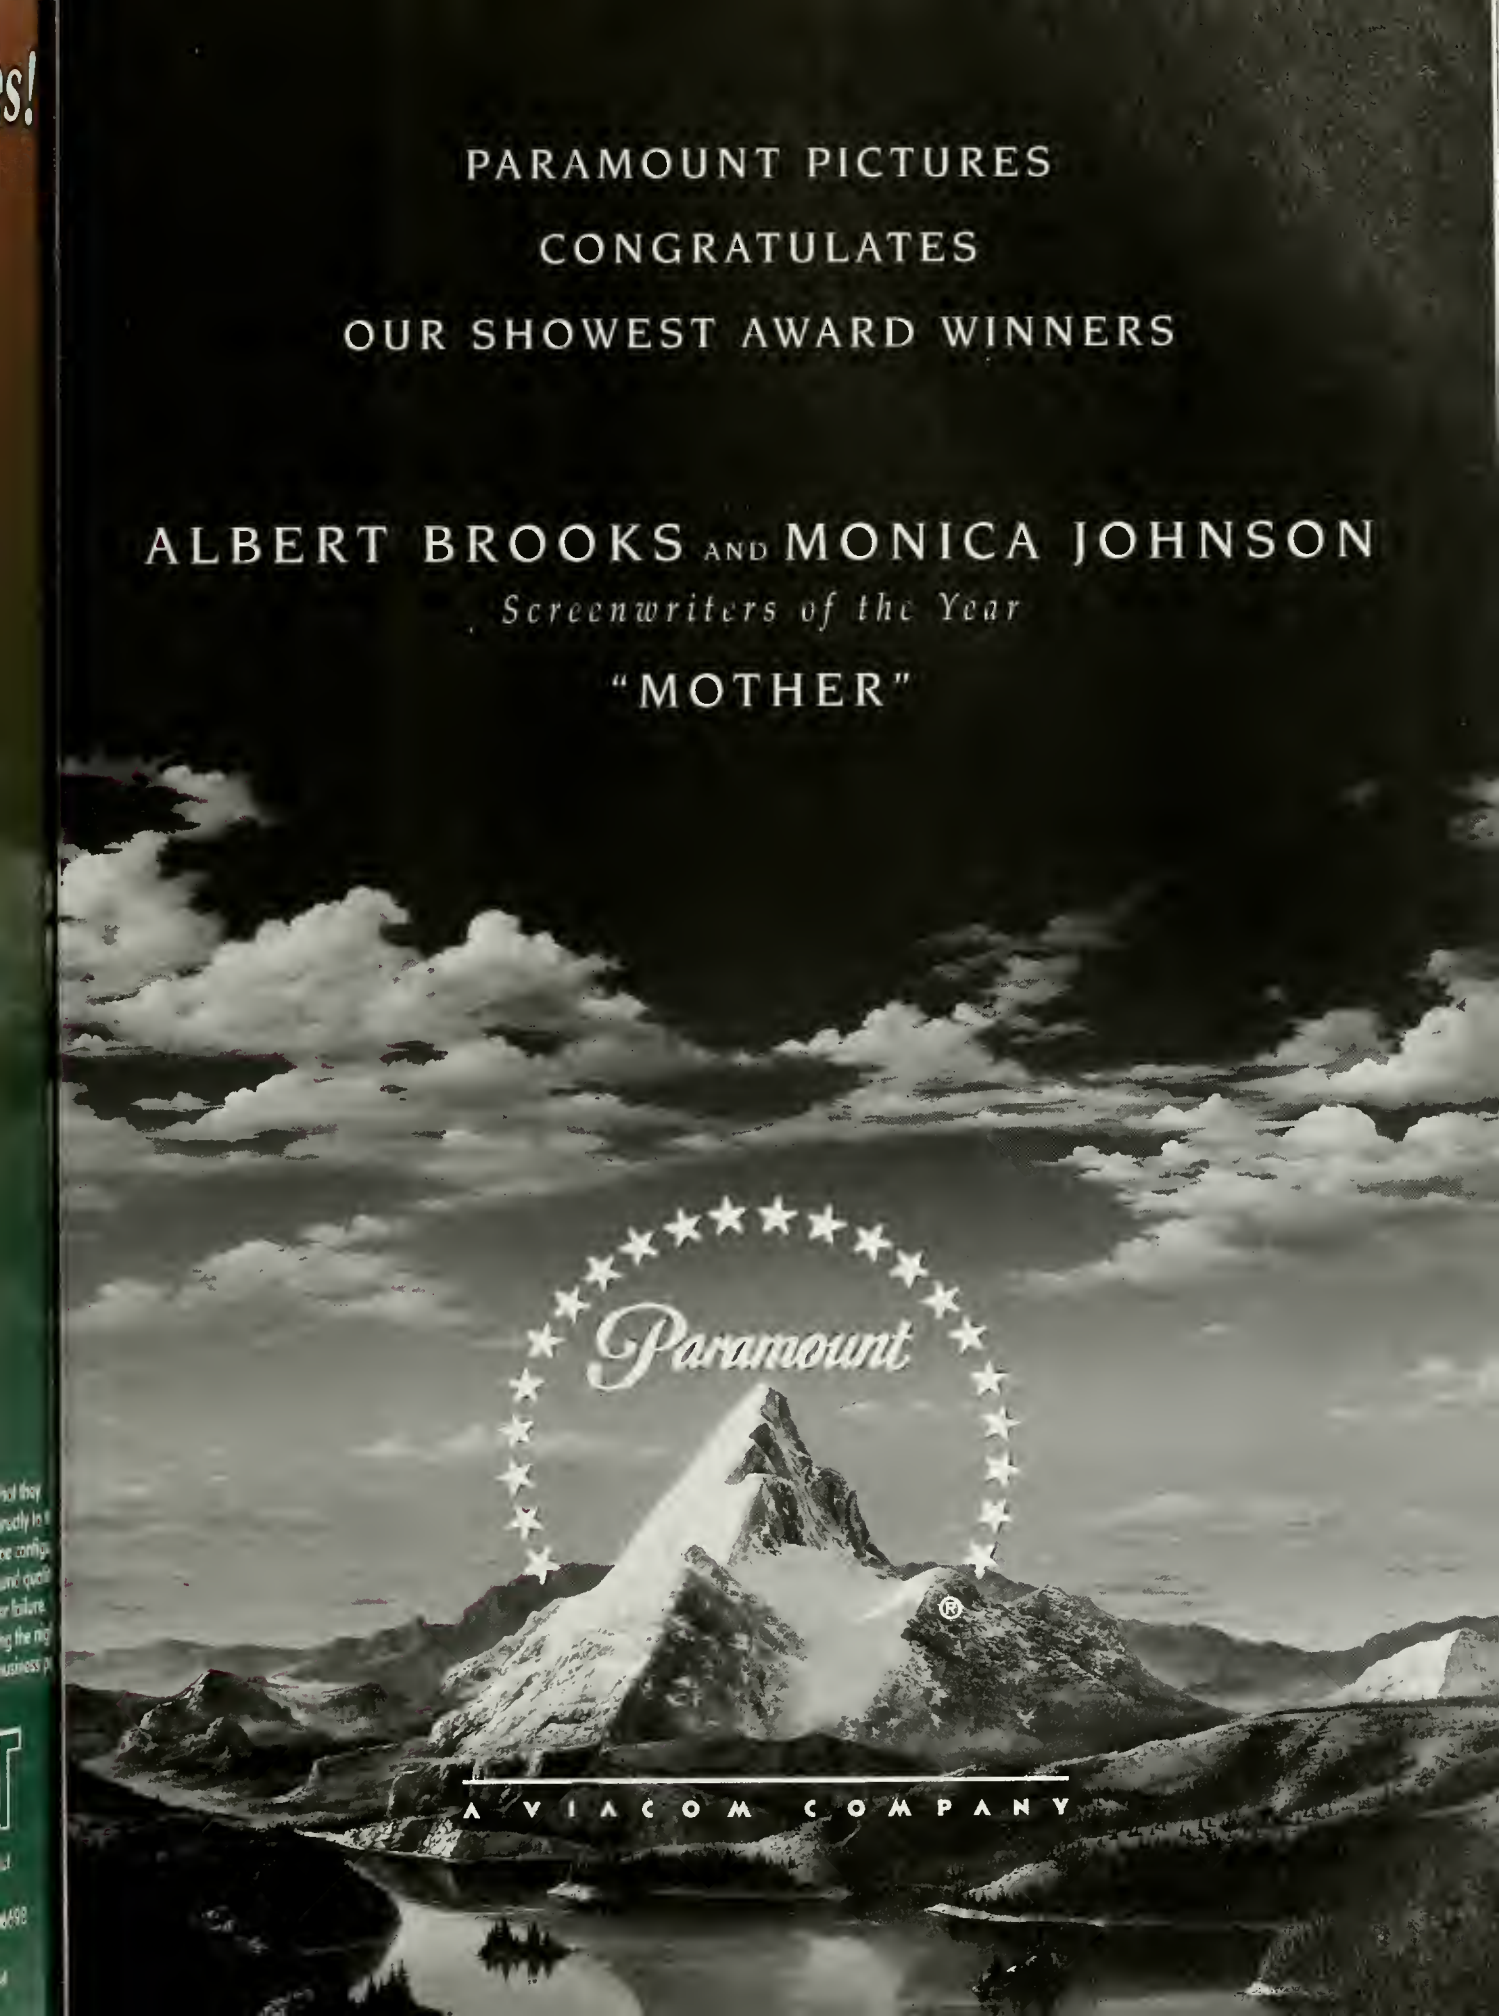
68 SUMMER FILMS PREVIEWED

BARRIE LAWSON LOEKS
SHOWEST SUPERSTAR

1997 SHOWEST INTRO
A SPECIAL SUPPLEMENT

INTRODUCTORY ESSAYS · EVENTS SCHEDULE
TRADE SHOW BOOTH LIST & FLOOR PLAN

High Speed Phone Messages!



When patrons call your cinema for show times do they have to listen to 5 minutes of messages until they find what they want? The new Citi-Tell digital message server works like a voice mail box system that allows the caller to go directly to th information they need. Fast calls, with more throughput, for the same number of phone lines. The Citi-Tell can be configu for a single cinema or handle several of your multiplexes in the same city with only one machine. The digital sound quality excellent and the non-volitile FLASH memory means the message will not be erased or destroyed during a power failure. Y can even change each mailbox by remote control, or hire a professional announcer to load new messages during the nigh This unique product will be shown at the ShoWest convention this year. Please let us demonstrate this exciting business pr uct. We can tell you about the tons of other features.

The Citi-Tell on-premises system can be expanded to 40 incoming phone lines for a small city where you have multiple multiplexes. The digital recording quality presents a quality image of your company to callers.

SMART

5945 Peachtree Corners East
Norcross, Georgia 30071
(800) 45-SMART or (770) 449-6698
FAX: (770) 449-6728
e-mail: smart@america.net

Response No. 35

PARAMOUNT PICTURES
CONGRATULATES
OUR SHOWEST AWARD WINNERS
ALBERT BROOKS AND MONICA JOHNSON
Screenwriters of the Year
"MOTHER"
Paramount
A VIACOM COMPANY

Warner Bros.

Congratulates All The Nato/ShoWest Award Winners

For 1997

Industry Awards

B. V. Sturdivant Award

J. Wayne Anderson

Ida Schreiber Award

Ann L. Craft

Robert W. Selig ShoWester Of The Year

Barrie Loeks

Customer Service Award

John Greiner

Star Awards

Actor Of The Year

Denzel Washington

Actress Of The Year

Winona Ryder

Director Of The Year

Joel Schumacher

Producer Of The Year

Arnon Milchan

Screenwriter Of The Year

Albert Brooks & Monica Johnson

Supporting Actress

Elizabeth Hurley

Supporting Actor

Cuba Gooding, Jr.

Young Star Of The Year

Alex Linz

Female Star Of Tomorrow

Claire Danes

Male Star Of Tomorrow

Howie Long

Humanitarian Award

Arnold Schwarzenegger

International Box Office Achievement Award

Will Smith

©1997 Warner Bros. All Rights Reserved

Dear Joel...

FALLING DOWN

THE CLIENT

A TIME TO KILL

Three of our most exciting films all brought to life by one great director.

Congratulations
on being named
DIRECTOR OF THE YEAR
at
SHOWEST '97

From Arnon and All Your Friends at New Regency

© 1997 Regency Films. All Rights Reserved.

CONGRATULATIONS TO THE 1997 SHOWEST AWARD RECIPIENTS:

DENZEL WASHINGTON
Actor of the Year

WINONA RYDER
Actress of the Year

JOEL SCHUMACHER
Director of the Year

ARNON MILCHAN
Producer of the Year

CUBA GOODING, JR.
Supporting Actor of the Year

ELIZABETH HURLEY
Supporting Actress of the Year

HOWIE LONG
Male Star of Tomorrow

CLAIRE DANES
Female Star of Tomorrow

WILL SMITH
International Box Office Achievement (Actor)

ALEX LINZ
Young Star of the Year

ALBERT BROOKS
MONICA JOHNSON
Screenwriter of the Year

BARRIE LAWSON LOEKS
Robert W. Selig Nato/ShoWester of the Year

Humanitarian of the Year
ARNOLD SCHWARZENEGGER
The man with the biggest heart in the world.

©1997 TWENTIETH CENTURY FOX. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

SONY PICTURES ENTERTAINMENT
WARMLY SALUTES

BARRIE LAWSON LOEKS
ROBERT W. SELIG SHOWESTER OF THE YEAR

AND PROUDLY CONGRATULATES
1997 SHOWEST AWARD WINNERS

J. WAYNE ANDERSON
B.V. STURDIVANT AWARD

ANN CRAFT
IDA SCHRIEIBER AWARD

JOHN GREINER
CUSTOMER SERVICE AWARD

Sony Pictures Entertainment Proudly Congratulates Its 1997 ShoWest Award Winners

Arnon Milchan
Producer Of The Year

Denzel Washington
Actor Of The Year

Winona Ryder
Actress Of The Year

Albert Brooks/ Monica Johnson
Screenwriters Of The Year

Joel Schumacher
Director Of The Year

Arnold Schwarzenegger
ShoWest Humanitarian Award

Barrie Lawson Loeks

Robert W. Selig ShoWester of the Year

J. Wayne Anderson

B. V. Sturdivant Award

Ann Craft

Ida Schreiber Award

John Greiner

Customer Service Award

National Film Service deeply appreciates all that you have done for the exhibition industry.
Congratulations!

NFS

■ NATIONAL FILM SERVICE ■

Your Partner In Distribution

1-800-664-4NFS

Customer service, emergency support, technical advice
24-hours a day, 7 days a week

CONGRATULATIONS
SHOWEST WINNERS.

BARRIE LAWSON LOEKS
ROBERT W. SELIG SHOWESTER OF THE YEAR

J.WAYNE ANDERSON
B.V. STURDIVANT AWARD

ANN CRAFT
IDA SCHREIBER AWARD

JOHN GREINER
CUSTOMER SERVICE AWARD

ARNON MILCHAN
PRODUCER OF THE YEAR

JOEL SCHUMACHER
DIRECTOR OF THE YEAR

DENZEL WASHINGTON
ACTOR OF THE YEAR

WINONA RYDER
ACTRESS OF THE YEAR

ALBERT BROOKS & MONICA JOHNSON
SCREENWRITERS OF THE YEAR

LOEWS THEATRES

SONY THEATRES

Love • Laugh • Live
STAR THEATRES
Larger than Life

MAGIC JOHNSON THEATRES

CONGRATULATIONS TO THE 1997 SHOWEST HONOREES

BARRIE LAWSON LOEKS
ROBERT W. SELIG NATO/SHOWESTER OF THE YEAR AWARD

BRUCE PROCTOR
BERT NATHAN MEMORIAL AWARD

J. WAYNE ANDERSON
B.V. STURDIVANT AWARD

ANN CRAFT
IDA SCHREIBER AWARD

JOHN GREINER
NATO/SHOWEST CUSTOMER SERVICE AWARD

NSS

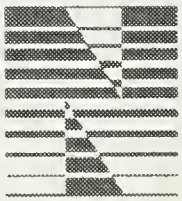
NATIONAL SCREEN SERVICE

MANN THEATRES CONGRATULATES
THIS YEAR'S SHOWEST HONOREES!
Barrie Lawson Loeks
ROBERT W. SELIG
SHOWESTER OF THE YEAR
J. WAYNE ANDERSON
B.V. STURDIVANT AWARD
Bruce Proctor
BERT NATHAN MEMORIAL AWARD
John Greiner
CUSTOMER SERVICE AWARD
Ann Craft
IDA SCHREIBER AWARD
MANN
THEATRES

Congratulations

Barrie Lawson Loeks

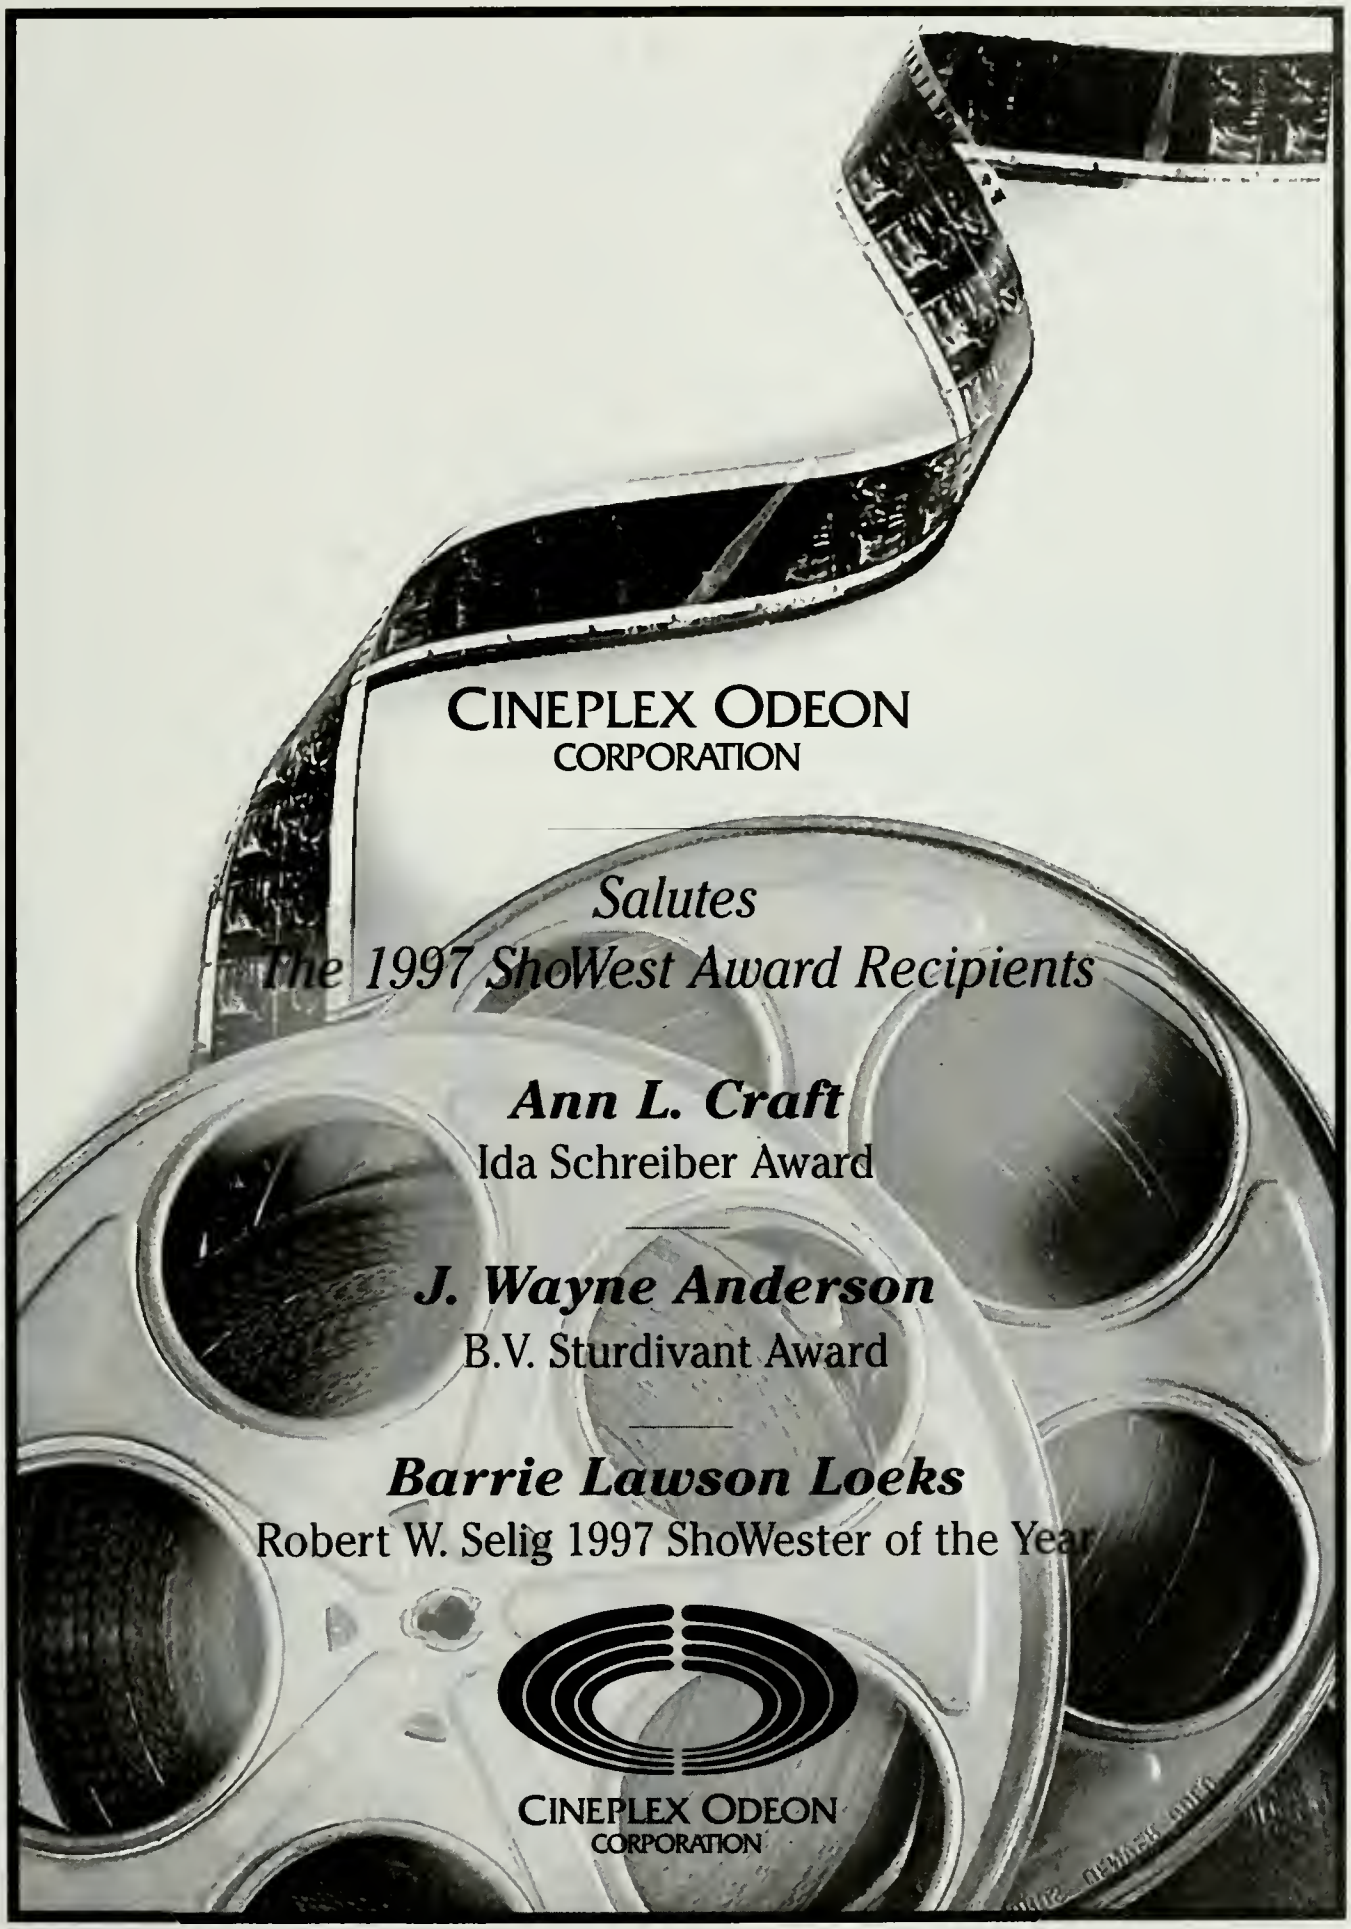
Robert W. Selig



ShoWester of the Year

J. Wayne Anderson

B. V. Sturdivant



Ann Craft

Ida Schreiber Award

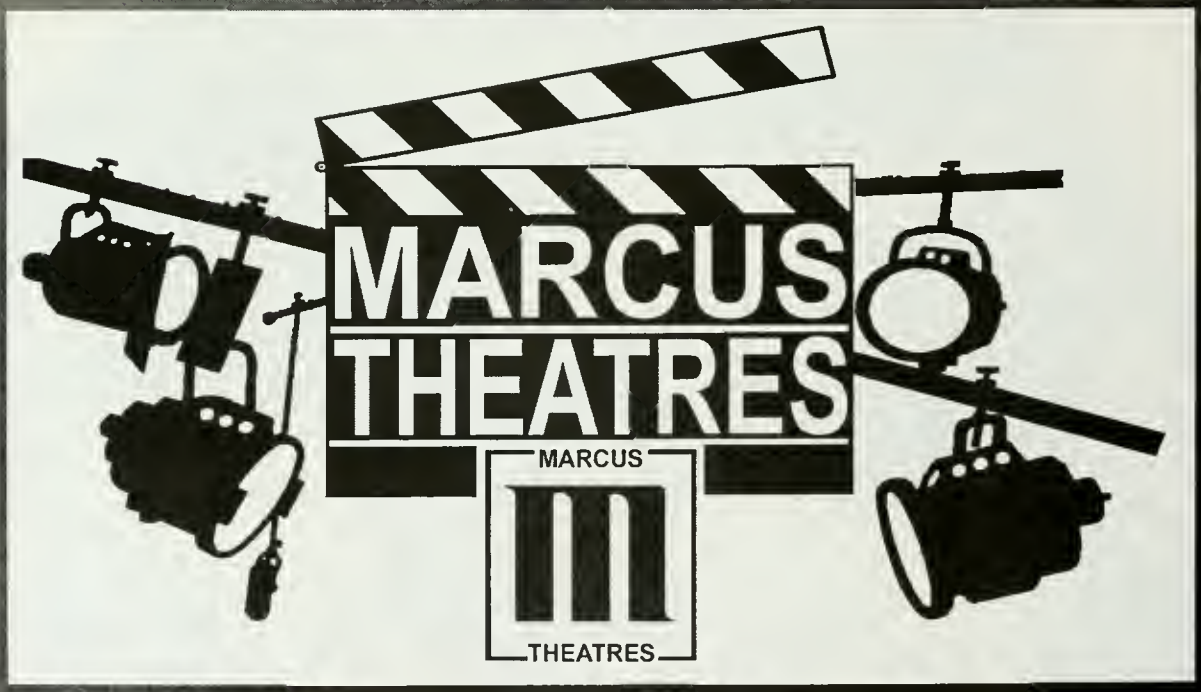
National Amusements Inc.

200 Elm Street, Dedham MA 02026

CINEPLEX ODEON
CORPORATION
Salutes
The 1997 ShoWest Award Recipients
Ann L. Craft
Ida Schreiber Award
J. Wayne Anderson
B.V. Sturdivant Award
Barrie Lawson Loeks
Robert W. Selig 1997 ShoWester of the Year
CINEPLEX ODEON
CORPORATION

CONGRATULATIONS

BARRIE LAWSON LOEKS



Robert W. Selig ShoWester of the Year

ANN CRAFT

Ida Schreiber Award

J. WAYNE ANDERSON

B.V. Sturdivant Award

From Your Friends

BEN MARCUS
STEVE MARCUS
BRUCE OLSON
MIKE KOMINSKY

CONGRATULATIONS

•

BARRIE LAWSON LOEKS

ROBERT W. SELIG

SHOWESTER OF THE YEAR

•

FROM YOUR FRIENDS

AT UNIVERSAL

© UNIVERSAL STUDIOS

ShoWest 1997
Congratulations to all the 1997
Award
Winners!
UNITED ARTISTS
Theatres

THE REVOLUTION IS HERE...

ACCESS THE FUTURE ON THE WORLD WIDE WEB

http://www.boxoff.com

SINCE JUNE 1994, EXHIBITION'S ORIGINAL HOME ON THE WORLD WIDE WEB. UPDATED THREE TIMES A WEEK WITH THE LATEST NEWS, REVIEWS AND WEEKEND GROSSES.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF
Ray Greene

MANAGING EDITOR
Kim Williamson

SENIOR EDITOR
Christine James

ASSOCIATE EDITOR
Susan Lambert

CONTRIBUTING WRITERS
Alex Albanese
John Allen
George T. Chronis
Pat Kramer
Ann Kwinn
Wade Major
Joseph McBride
Jean Oppenheimer
Shlomo Schwartzberg
R. B. Whitter

FOUNDER
Ben Shlyen

PUBLISHER
Bob Dietmeier (773) 338-7007

NATIONAL ADVERTISING DIRECTOR
Robert M. Vale (213) 465-1186

ADVERTISING ASSISTANT
Linda Andrade

ADVERTISING CONSULTANT
Morris Schlozman (816) 942-5877

EAST COAST ADVERTISING REP.
Mitchell J. Hall (212) 877-6667

WEST COAST ADVERTISING REP.
Gwen Campbell (310) 820-8846

BUSINESS MANAGER
Dan Johnson (773) 338-7007

CIRCULATION DIRECTOR
Chuck Taylor (312) 922-9326

OFFICES

Editorial and Publishing Headquarters:
6640 Sunset Blvd., Suite 100, Hollywood, CA 90028-7159 (213) 465-1186, FAX: (213) 465-5049

Corporate: Mailing Address: P.O. Box 25485, Chicago, IL 60625 (773) 338-7007

The Audit Bureau

Circulation Inquiries:
BOXOFFICE Data Center
725 S. Wells St., 4th Floor
Chicago, IL 60607
(312) 922-9326
FAX: (312) 922-7209

BOXOFFICE

1997 ShoWest Intro: A Special Supplement

BOXOFFICE MAGAZINE, April 1997, Part II:
The 1997 ShoWest Intro

FEATURES

SW-6 An Open Letter to All ShoWest Delegates
by Daniel Wheatcroft, President, ShoWest

SW-8 We Go Global
by William F. Kartozian, President, NATO

SW-10 To Join or Not to Join, That Is the Question
by Mary Ann Grasso, Vice President and Executive Director, NATO

SW-12 Now, More Than Ever!
by David R. Scoco, President, NAC

SW-14 Two Decades of Sound Progress
by Ioan Allen, President, ITEA

SW-16 COVER: Barrie Lawson Loeks, Sony Superwoman
by Christine James

SW-22 COVER: Sony Theatres' Flagship at Lincoln Square
by Pat Kramer

SW-23 BOXOFFICE/MovieFone Moviegoer Activity Chart: The Most Requested Theatres of 1996

SW-26 SUMMER HEAT: Comprehensive, In-Depth Previews of This Summer's Coming Attractions

SW-34 ShoWest 1997 Schedule of Events

SW-35 ShoWest 1997 Trade Show Floor Plan

SW-36 ShoWest 1997 Trade Show Booth List

SW-46 SPECIAL SOUND REPORT: If They Knew What You Were Missing, Part One by John F. Allen

SW-50 BOXOFFICE's Tenth Annual Miscellaneous Film Awards

SEGA

DAYTONA USA LIMITED EDITION

UNTHROTTLED POWER

ADD SOME ACTION TO YOUR MOVIES!

THE #1 SMASH HIT IS BACK IN A NEW STATE-OF-THE-ART SINGLE PLAYER CABINET!

LINKABLE TO ALL DAYTONA USA UNITS FOR UP TO 8 PLAYER COMPETITION!

ga GameWorks L.L.C. • 255 Shoreline Dr., Suite 400 • Redwood City, CA 94065 • phone (415) 802-3100 • fax (415) 802-3120

An Open Letter to All ShoWest Delegates

by Daniel Wheatcroft
President
ShoWest

ShoWest began 23 years ago as a forum for the motion picture industry to display its upcoming product. Now, as the only international gathering devoted exclusively to the movie business, it attracts the most powerful people in filmmaking: the exhibitors, directors, producers, studio executives and the stars responsible for creating and distributing the most successful motion pictures in the world.

ShoWest is the only place where studios, along with their featured talent, market their upcoming product in unique, customized, exclusive presentations. During the convention, the entertainment and business world focus their attention on ShoWest to decide which product and celebrities will emerge to win the year's boxoffice race.

The convention is a convention of "firsts." Not only do major studios use ShoWest to unveil previews of their films, ShoWest's panels and workshops deal with issues important to the business of showbusiness. The wraps on new theatre technologies and inventions are also removed for the first time at ShoWest's trade show.

SHOWEST®
MARCH 3-6
1997

What's New at ShoWest '97...

• The keynote speech has been moved! The keynote speech for ShoWest in 1997 will be on Monday, March 3 at 6 p.m. The keynote address will be given by Frank Mancuso, chairman and CEO of MGM.

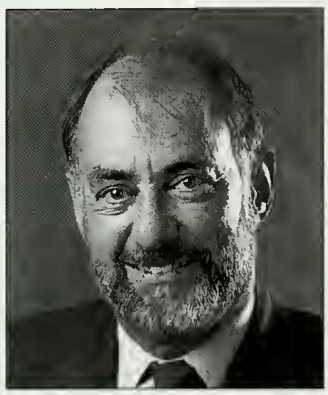
Also on Monday will be the presentation of the ShoWester of the Year Award, exhibition's biggest honor, to Sony Theatres' Barrie Lawson Loeks—don't miss it!

• The ShoWest Awards will be broadcast live this year. Coca-Cola will again host the awards to be telecast on TNT, this time from the MGM Grand Garden. It will be an exciting new format, and every delegate will have a great seat for the telecast.

• The Awards will feature a new award for Favorite Movie of the Year. Movie patrons from all over the U.S. will have had a chance to vote on their favorite movie of the year from February 7 through March 5. The winner will be announced on the telecast March 6.

• The trade show will be held in the Pavilion on Bally's backlot again. We have made a few improvements. We've added more space, added booths and changed the entry point. Instead of entering the pavilion by way of the parking lot, delegates will enter by the pool and tennis court area of Bally's. This shortens the walk significantly!

• One of the most exciting opportunities this year is the change in the seminars and workshops. While in the past seminars have been a question and answer session with a moderator, under the new format each panel will offer industry leaders a forum to deliver a 4-6 minute presentation. This will allow speakers to develop and deliver concise, meaningful information to delegates as part of an overall panel addressing a predefined topic. After the panel is completed, delegates will have an opportunity to attend workshop sessions in smaller groups of 75 to 100. These workshops, facilitated by industry leaders, will expand on the panel topics, offering an environment for open discussion and an exchange of information. The smaller size of the workshops allows for an interactive exchange of ideas.



The challenge for the producers of ShoWest is how to address the many different interests represented and to keep ShoWest the place to do the business of our business. We hope the changes we've made for 1997—some big, some small and all designed with you in mind—will make your trip to ShoWest productive, efficient and (of course) fun!

CONTACT YOUR AMERICAN LICORICE SUPPLIER OR CALL US AT 510-487-5500

We Go Global

by William F. Kartozian
President
National Association of Theatre Owners (NATO)

NATO and NATO's official convention, ShoWest, share an odd circumstance: their names are simultaneously edging deeper and deeper into the realm of misnomer.

ShoWest has long ago outgrown its roots as a mere West Coast convention; executives from every state in the nation now consider it a must-attend event and roughly one third of our delegates now hail from Europe, Asia, Latin America and other points outside the United States. Were it not for the considerable forces of tradition, sentiment and brand-name identification, the convention would now probably be universally identified as "ShoWorld."

Similarly, the "National" Association of Theatre Owners—which already counts numerous exhibitors abroad among its members—is itself taking on increasingly international dimensions.

Non-U.S. theatre owners who have long considered joining NATO will be interested to learn that the association has just expanded its services in the worldwide arena.

In addition to receiving complimentary copies of NATO's publications—among them the monthly NATO News, the annual Encyclopedia of Exhibition and the "America Goes to the Movies" hardback—NATO's international members will now receive "NATO International Passports," which provide introduction and entree into selected U.S. cinemas. U.S. theatre companies participating in the passport program will offer complete tours of their facilities while answering questions about American operations, customer service, concessions and equipment. As a bonus, international membership provides $50 discounts on registrations to both of exhibition's hottest events: ShoWest and ShowEast.

In the next few weeks, we plan to launch an open membership campaign asking exhibitors from around the world to join NATO. Once aboard, international members will discover the extraordinary benefits of being linked to fellow exhibitors and sharing both our collective know-how and the data from our investigations into moviegoer habits, new technology, disability accommodation, video release windows, and so on.

I have every confidence that theatre owners abroad will appreciate the same sense of value that our association's American members have long enjoyed. NATO, like ShoWest, is attaining its worldwide standing for a reason: long before it went global, it was the world's biggest and best.

SHOWEST®
MARCH 3-6
1997

Say Cheese!

with BAG-N-BOX

NACHO CHEESE SAUCE

60% SAVINGS over portion control cheese cups!

Locked in quality and freshness.

Dynamite taste, preferred by 9 out of 10 movie goers.

Consistent heating temperature.

UL® & NSF approved.

Manufacturers and Processors of High Quality Concession Supplies

GREAT WESTERN PRODUCTS COMPANY

30290 US Hwy 72, Hollywood, AL 35752 • Toll Free: 800-239-2143 FAX: 205-574-2116

Response No. 155

To Join or Not to Join.... That Is the Question

by Mary Ann Grasso
Vice President and Executive Director
National Association of Theatre Owners (NATO)

Why on earth should I join NATO?" "What do I need them for? They can't help me buy film. What good are they to me?" If you've ever asked these questions, you're right about one thing. NATO can't help you buy film. However, NATO is involved in issues that directly affect the entire industry. A good example is the work we are doing to preserve the "window" between theatrical and video release dates. There are a world of services we offer that are essential to the health and success of your theatre operation.

NATO is the only national trade association in the world for movie theatre owners. We exist to serve the business, legislative and technical interests of theatre owners in the United States and around the world. NATO facilitates Exhibition's ability to interact with our friends in Distribution on all matters of mutual interest and concern. In just the past few years alone, NATO, in concert with Distribution and the technical community, has assisted in the research, design and development of the 6000-foot reel, which is set to debut in April. We work closely with the MPAA and our state and regional units on legislative issues, including film rental and amusement taxes and First Amendment matters. We continue to work with the Department of Justice regarding the Americans with Disabilities Act. And though we couldn't prevent the recent minimum wage increase, we were able to impact it to our best advantage.

Many theatre owners believe that NATO exists just for the "big guy." It just isn't so. Yes, most of the large circuits are part of the NATO family. But of the more than 16,000 screens we represent in the U.S., 93 percent belong to members with between one and 50 screens; two percent belong to members with between 50 and 100 screens; and 5 percent belong to NATO members with more than 100 screens.

Many of our services are specifically designed to serve the needs of the small independent operator. Some benefits of NATO membership: A $50 discount on each ShoWest and ShowEast registration; discounts on Health, Liability and Casualty Insurance; a complimentary subscription to NATO News, the official NATO newsletter; a complimentary copy of our annual Encyclopedia of Exhibition; a free handbook detailing your responsibilities in complying with the Americans with Disabilities Act; and public domain music for quality lobby and auditorium use, provided at cost in either CD or cassette formats—allowing theatre owners to avoid ASCAP or BMI fees.

We are also developing an eight-volume set of affordably priced employee training tapes on the following topics: Concessions; Ushering; Running the Boxoffice; Safety; ADA Compliance; and Preventing Sexual Harrassment.

SHOWEST®
MARCH 3-6
1997

To join NATO you must be a theatre owner. Your theatre must be open to the public on a "for profit" basis. We like our members to become involved, so don't be surprised if we ask you to consider volunteering for some of our NATO Committees, such as the Marketing Committee; the Committee on Theatre Operations; or the Independent Theatre Owners Committee. We want you to be a part of the organization.

We think we have the best members on earth, and we credit our success to all of them. We think you'll enjoy being part of such a vibrant, active group. In the coming months, NATO will launch a worldwide membership campaign inviting theatre owners around the world to join with us.

We hope when the invitation to join NATO comes across your desk that the answer will be "Yes!" Once you see what NATO membership can do for you, we're confident "to join or not to join?" won't be the question. The real question will be, "Why didn't I join sooner?"

Visibility

Tivoli introduces Lumitred II — superior illumination for theatre steps. Our new design offers innovative and economical installation and performance, with reliability available only from the industry leader.

- Uses incandescents, LEDs, or electroluminescence
- Defines edge from above and below
- Provides non-slip, high-grip tread surface
- Conforms to step angles from 75° to 90
- Available pre-cut and assembled or custom cut to your specifications tivoli®

TIVOLI INDUSTRIES, INC.
1513 E. Saint Gertrude Pl.
Santa Ana, CA 92705
Fax 714-957-1501

Aisle and Cove Lighting
Low-Voltage Track Lighting
Recessed Downlighting
Decorative Wall Sconces
Lighting/Surveillance Systems

Call for a catalog
1-800-854-3288

Now, More Than Ever!

by David Scoco
President
National Association of Concessionaires (NAC)

In this ever-changing, ever-fascinating world we live in, the need to examine and evaluate the relevance of our business judgements is ever-increasing. As managers, executives or investors, we need to know the potential return on each expenditure. The technology available today affords the opportunity to develop tracking and statistical tools limited only by the imagination of the person seeking information.

The environment in which we operate, with its inherent financial and competitive challenges, demands vigilance. Whether the item at issue is a 30 screen megaplex or a high-tech, star-laden blockbuster hopeful, success is never certain, and often unrealized. Now, more than ever, the hue and cry of management is "What have you done for me lately?" Contrasting results with forecasts—of construction costs, boxoffice receipts, concession per capita spending or revenue per screen—remains a primary focus of our industry.

The indispensable concept is still to develop systems that can be sustained over the long run. Posting consistently improved results is an essential (and difficult) goal to achieve. An integrated strategy, featuring a palpable corporate culture, adequate and well-directed resources, and enthusiastic, truly empowered employees, is necessary to even consider an elevated level of organizational quest.

This contemporary managerial landscape sounds rather bleak. Whether one's view is short or long term, day-to-day obligations require significant commitment and stamina. A comprehensive, strategic approach to business can be crowded out by events of the moment.

How then does the rich message of professional development presented by a non-profit industry association affect the sometimes cynical and cluttered consciousness of today's manager? Does membership in or service to such an organization fit the complex constructs of an active career? I respectfully submit that it does—Now, more than ever!

Pundits, professors and philosophers agree that the probability for success increases in proportion to the amount of knowledge possessed by the seeker. Although not their sole mission, many trade organizations would be pleased with a description that proclaims them clearinghouses of knowledge. Let's define "knowledge" as follows:

- Access to current industry data.
- Awareness of essential product and service providers.
- Professional development opportunities.
- Forums for peer interaction and affirmation.
- Timely receipt of industry news.
- Basic skill training materials.

These are the fundamental attributes offered by most industry organizations. Armed with this knowledge, the manager or senior executive has many of the requisite tools for accomplishing objectives. Add to this mix a potential competitive advantage over non-participants and the sense of community an association confers, and one's odds for success become dramatically more favorable.

The vicissitudes of professional life in the '90s must be considered when weighing the need for affiliation with such a group. In the face of a fiscally-oriented review, how would the membership and other event-based fees play out in an ROI or discounted cash flow IRR computation?

The results would yield a resounding, "Now, more than ever!" Collected funds are returned manyfold to all members via the services, publications and events presented by the association. Additional positive returns come from the expanded business opportunities and promotional activities resulting from member-designed programs.

On all counts, active participation in serious and earnest industry associations brings positive returns. The motion picture industry and its related trades are blessed with excellent organizations that target specific segments and users. The only way to reap the rewards is to join the action—Now, more than ever!

HPS-4000™
SOUND
First In Digital Stereo

THE REMARKABLE BREAKTHROUGH
HICH IS DIGITAL STEREO CAN ONLY BE PRECIATED IF IT CAN BE TRULY HEARD.

d i g i t a
POWER

THE HPS-4000™ IS THE ONLY
MOTION PICTURE SOUND SYSTEM WITH THE POWER DEMANDED
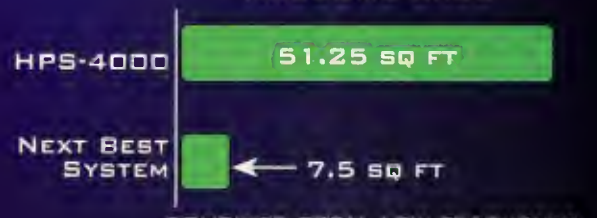
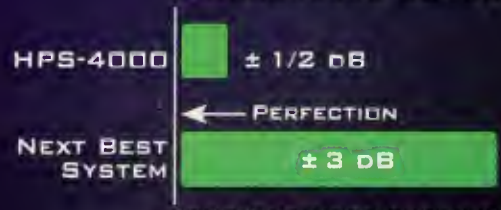
BY DIGITAL STEREO.



E FINEST LOUDSPEAKERS IN THIS INDUSTRY'S HISTORY
MADE BY HAND TO EXACTING SPECIFICATIONS

AWESOME
ACOUSTIC POWER



OUTPUT PER CHANNEL
500 WATTS 100 FOOT THEATER

AWESOME BASS

COMBINED TOTAL LOW FREQUENCY
RADIATING AREA — STAGE SPEAKERS

UNEXCELLED COVERAGE

COMPUTER-AIDED SURROUND DESIGNS ASSURE EVEN COVERAGE

HIGH PERFORMANCE STEREO™
64 BOWEN STREET • NEWTON, MA 02159 USA
TEL: (617) 244-1737 • FAX: (617) 244-4390

Response No. 181

Two Decades of Sound Progress

by Ioan Allen
President
International Theatre Equipment Association (ITEA)

In January, nearly 20 years after its premiere in May of 1977, "Star Wars" was rereleased. Along with "Close Encounters of the Third Kind"—another 1977 release—"Star Wars" focused attention on presentation quality in general, and on a new film sound format—35mm stereo optical—in particular.

This was not the first time, nor the last, that films of a certain genre set the pace technologically. In the 1950s, religious epics ("The Robe"), musicals ("Oklahoma!") and spectaculars ("Around the World in 80 Days") showcased the new widescreen formats with multichannel magnetic sound. More recently, films in the "Batman" and "Star Trek" series, "Jurassic Park," "Speed" and the like have been early adopters of multichannel digital sound.

Twenty Years Ago

To understand the impact that films like "Star Wars" had on presentation quality, consider what sound was like in the early 1970s. Stereo was available only by means of mag stripe, a costly process that had fallen into disuse at a time when attendance was in decline and theatres were closing at a rapid rate. Tripling the cost of a 35mm release print to accommodate four-track mag was such a luxury that no more than five percent of all releases were mixed in stereo, with only a handful of stereo prints struck. Moreover, due to high costs as well as the lack of prints, few theatres were maintaining their mag equipment.

Regardless of format, moreover, theatre playback quality left a lot to be desired. Speaker systems with passive crossovers frequently had a response hole in the critical 500 Hz region, and used high-frequency horns with a "honky" quality. Insufficient sound absorbent material behind the screen resulted in muddy dialogue. The wings offered with some loudspeakers to improve low-frequency response were often not installed or were removed (for firewood?), resulting in little response below 80 Hz. Power amps, too, were often inadequate, with many units still using tubes.

The Presentation Revolution

Then came the revolutionary Dolby Stereo optical soundtrack. While the first stereo optical title to make an impact was "A Star is Born" in December 1976, it was 1977's spectacular "big impact" films like "Star Wars" and "Close Encounters" that led both to many theatres equipping for the new format and to a skyrocketing audience awareness of its arrival. Just as important, the new format, being optical, incurred no cost premium to exhibitors.

As more "big" films like "Superman" and "Apocalypse Now" followed suit, more and more theatres became equipped for stereo optical sound, and audiences began to hear more and more theatrical features presented in stereo. True, the quality at first was often crude by today's standards. But a process of evolutionary improvement that continues to this day had been jump-started. Cinema processors with third-octave equalization helped standardize acoustic response and improve fidelity. SR, with its wider dynamic range, came along. Much better loudspeakers and power amplifiers, behind-screen damping, loudspeaker baffle walls, active crossovers, and increased attention to theatre acoustics have all helped to make today's audio experience far different from that of 20 years ago.

And then, of course, there's digital sound...

SHOWEST®
MARCH 3-6
1997

The More Things Change

In the early days of stereo optical, given the literal and figurative "noise" made by films like "Star Wars," the new format was said to be appropriate only for "big" films and sci-fi epics. Of what use was spectacular stereo sound with an intimate drama or love story?

This misperception of the new technology's full potential didn't last forever, however. Quieter films such as "Days of Heaven" began to show that stereo sound didn't have to be spectacular, it could be more involving and life-like. And what film couldn't benefit from that? So the time came when the majority of films of all kinds were being released in stereo.

We pay tribute to those filmmakers who are the first to pick up and use the new tools that we on the technical side of the business create. Whether you use them sensationally or subtly to increase the reality of your vision, you're doing what it takes to keep audiences coming back for more.

Today with digital sound we're in a similar situation. Some say that digital sound is all well and good for thunderous dinosaur footfalls and big explosions. But why bother for more intimate, smaller scaled films?

The answer, of course, is the same as it was nearly 20 years ago. What film couldn't benefit from more realistic sound? What director wouldn't like to involve the audience even more in what's happening on the screen? And so today, some four years after its introduction in the theatre, films such as "Shine" and "The English Patient" are showing how digital sound is better, not just more spectacular, and a valuable new artistic tool for any director.

So on the 20th anniversary of "Star Wars," we'd like to pay tribute to those filmmakers who are the first to pick up and use the new tools that we on the technical side of the business create. Whether you use them sensationally or subtly to increase the reality of your vision, you're doing what it takes to keep audiences coming back for more.

EVERYTHING YOUR THEATRE WILL EVER NEED*

*(We don't provide theatrical films or an audience)

FILM HANDLING: Platters, Rewind Tables, Guidance Hardware, Reels, Film Cleaners, Splicers, Footage Counters, Storage Cabinets

AUDITORIUM: Seating, Screens, Maskings, Wall Coverings, Aisle Lighting, Draperies, Acoustical Panels, Carpet PROJECTION BOOTH, Projectors & Sound Reproducers, Reverse Scan Analog Soundheads, Lamphouses & Power Supplies, Consoles, Xenon Bulbs, Lenses, Slide Projectors, Booth & Editing Supplies, Porthole Glass & Frame Assys.

SOUND: Speakers, Stereo Sound Systems, Digital Sound Systems, Custom Amplifers, Booth Monitors, CD Players, Sound Racks

TICKET BOOTH & LOBBY: Ticket Machines & Accessories, Box Office Microphones & Talk Thru Units, Cash Registers, Reader Boards, Crowd Control Ropes & Poles, Mini Marquees & Marquee Letters, Poster Cases, Display Frames, Special Signs

BUY/SELL USED EQUIPMENT: Projectors & Sound Reproducers, Lamphouses & Power Supplies, Stereo Sound Processors, Lenses, Platters, Reels, Ticket Machines

SPECIAL SERVICES: Consultation, Architectural, Design & Engineering Service For: • Theatres • Viewing Rooms • Auditoriums

Theatre Service & Supply
9582 Topanga Cyn. Blvd. Chatsworth, CA 91311
Phone: (818) 701-4475 • Fax: (818) 701-0394
E-Mail: TheatreSer@aol.com

Response No. 86

SONY SUPERSTAR

Sony Theatres Co-Chair Barrie Lawson Loeks Honored As ShoWester of the Year by Christine James

SINGIN' IN THE RAIN: Barrie Lawson Loeks, ShoWest '97's Robert W. Selig ShoWester awardee, 'pops' into Sony Theatres' flagship, the Lincoln Square.

Barrie Lawson Loeks may come from a background in law, but a twist of fate saw her join the ranks of exhibition, and now showmanship is in her blood. Recognized as 1997's Robert W. Selig ShoWester of the Year, an award that honors an individual who has demonstrated a career-long dedication to the exhibition industry and its causes, Loeks has earned her place in exhibition history in partnership with husband Jim by building the Michigan-based Loeks-Star theatre chain, then going on to co-chair Sony Theatres, the ninth largest circuit in North America, with her spouse. Loeks, who has been involved with the National Association of Theatre Owners for many years and is currently running its governmental affairs committee, feels "very honored" to be named ShoWester of the Year. "I'm very pleased to have been chosen by my peers and colleagues in exhibition and distribution. It's a real pleasure."

Loeks began a career in law after graduating Phi Beta Kappa and earning her doctorate of jurisprudence degree from the University of Michigan. She started out as an associate in the Grand Rapids, Mich. law firm of Warner, Norcross & Judd before joining Jack Loeks Theatres Inc. as a vice president and general counsel.

"I was practicing law, and my husband was in his family theatre business," Loeks recounts. "And he wanted to branch out and build new theatres and expand and build in new areas, but didn't have any support staff to do that. He talked me into taking a leave of absence from my law firm and work with him to handle all the legal and real estate and development work. I took a leave of absence in 1982—and I guess I'm still on it," she laughs. "We've had a lot of fun."

BOXOFFICE
SPECIAL REPORT:
SHOWEST
1997

While working every day with your mate sounds like it could be a strain on most marriages, "for us, it's great," says Loeks. "Most people think we're out of our minds. Because most people don't feel they would want to spend that much time with their spouses, I guess. I think if we were both very similar in our abilities and what we like to do, it could be a problem. It works well for us because we have very different talents, and we respect each other's talents. We each realize that the other is a lot better at certain things. I think that's what makes it work. And because of that, we're not competitive. You each want the other one to do well and no one is trying to steal anyone's thunder. So it really is wonderful."

Being the chairman of a major circuit while also running the smaller, 82-screen Loeks Star subsidiary has given Loeks a unique perspective on the exhibition industry. "I think I've seen it from all sides," she says. "We started up our company from nothing. We had the classic story where we sold stock to all of our friends and took a third mortgage on the house and literally had not enough money to complete our first theatre. And I had to quickly sell tickets. So we saw it from that perspective, and built that circuit, and then we did a joint venture with Columbia Pictures Entertainment, and built more theatres, and then ended up running a regional circuit, and then came here. So I really think I've seen pretty much the full gamut of exhibition."

Jim Loeks, Barrie Lawson Loeks and Big Bird team up in a Sony Theatres promotion for Sesame Street policy trailers.

The joint venture with Columbia Pictures was the beginning of the Loeks' partnership with Sony Theatres, then known as Loews Theatres. At that time, Columbia owned Loews, and Coca-Cola in turn owned Columbia.

What ended up as an alliance started out as a competition. "What happened is [Loews] was looking to enter the Detroit market [where we were already established]," recalls Loeks. "We had built a couple of theatres in Detroit and were negotiating deals for more. They came in and outbid us on those deals. And we were very unhappy! So we went to Coca-Cola, who owned the company, and complained bitterly that they were using all their soft drink profits that we were helping generate to compete against us. And they weren't quite sure what to do about it. Not that they were so worried about losing our Coke sales, because we would not exactly have made a dent in their earnings," she notes wryly. "But they wanted to work out some sort of accommodation." Standing up to the mega-corporation turned out to be a fortuitous move: negotiations led to the Loeks striking a partnership with the company's exhibition subsidiary. "What we worked out was a joint venture. We put our theatres and our sites in, and they put their sites and money in. And we kept all the operational rights to run it out of our company in Michigan. And it worked out great! We built a lot of theatres, and we had a lot of success.

"And while we were in the midst of doing all that, of doing all the building, Coca-Cola sold the company to Sony. So then we became partners with Sony. But we kept dealing with many of the same people in the organization, so it wasn't any kind of a major change for us. And we continued building theatres and we continued to have a lot of success until one day our friends at Sony said, 'You know, you really should come to New York and run Loews.' And I said 'Why would we want to do that? We're very happy!' Ultimately, it was just too intriguing a challenge, and we did decide to come to New York and run Loews and we've been here ever since."

> "I love the promotions, I love doing stunts. Your product changes not only every week but in several ways every week, and the only limit to what you can do with those products are limits of time and creativity."

As was reported in the December '96 issue of Boxoffice, Sony is incrementally restoring the Loews name to its theatre circuit arm. "Ultimately it will be all of the theatres," says Loeks. "Sony's new brand philosophy is that the Sony name really means consumer electronics, and that the other businesses they go in should develop or nurture their own brand names that will create their own value. And Loews was a very valuable brand and a great brand name, and we didn't particularly want to change it to begin with. So rather than try and create a new brand for theatres, we've elected to go back and use Loews, because we think there's still a tremendous amount of goodwill with that name. Although we're giving some signage companies an awful lot of work," she adds with a laugh. "Keeping the economy moving."

For Loeks, the key behind Sony's success is top-notch service in incomparable theatres, qualities she feels are the backbone of the circuit's prosperity. "We've always felt very passionate about service and facility, and that was really what distinguished us and was a large part of our success. We always believed in providing great service, paying our people more, the customer's always right, no lines, different products, and providing a very upscale facility.

"And that was very strange when we started doing this in 1982. People thought we were nuts. In the theatre business, the mantra was 'If you have it, they will come.' All that mattered was getting the film, and almost everyone who ran the major circuits at that time came out of film buying. Because then the issue was getting the film. And you had large clearances. So if you had a film and somebody wanted to see it, they had to come to your theatre, whether you were nice to them, whether the floors were sticky, whether it was gorgeous or not. And that created a mentality where people kept cutting costs and building cheaper theatres. We went through the '70s, where everyone was building what I call these chicken-coop theatres. They were awful. And no one seemed to care. And I thought that was terrible. So we felt very strongly about doing things differently, and that was rather revolutionary then."

It's thanks in part to pioneers like Loeks that the trend has swung in the opposite direction, with circuits making lavish theatres with top-of-the-line amenities a priority. The biggest change in the industry during Loeks' career in exhibition has been the theatre buildings themselves, she says. "Jim and I designed and built the world's first 12-screen theatre and the world's first 20-screen theatre; now, we're building 20- and 30-screen theatres as a matter of course." But industry-wide, there's still lots of room for improvement, Loeks believes. "Today, I still think our industry has a ways to go in terms of service and facility. The tide has certainly changed, and all of the major circuits are building some wonderful theatres. And everyone is at least talking about service. So the moviehouse that we're providing today—[Sony] and everyone else—is just a far, far, far better place to experience a movie than what was being provided in 1970. I mean, is it as good as what was being provided in 1940? Well yeah, in terms of comfort and sound it's a lot better, although there are some of the old palaces that I don't think we'll ever beat in terms of decor. But we're getting there. In our Lincoln Square Theatre here in Manhattan, we have a balcony and we have gilded elephants and chandeliers—the whole deal."

Loeks beams when discussing Sony Theatres' Lincoln Square [see story on page SW-22]. The cinema embodies the exhibition ideals she feels are integral to true showmanship. "[Sony Lincoln Square] is the most successful theatre in the world, bar none," she asserts. "It is obviously our pride and joy. And there are several secrets behind its success. One of course is it is one heck of a good location. We're on Broadway in Manhattan. There are an awful lot of people there! But there are a lot of theatres in great locations in Manhattan that don't do a third or a tenth of what we do at Lincoln Square. And the reason that Lincoln Square does so well is that it is, without any question by anyone, the nicest facility by far in the city. It's gorgeous. We've got the large rocking chair seats, which no one puts in Manhattan because everyone is so tight on space. We've got beautiful lobbies, we've got fabulous spaces, we've got great decor, we've got the ultimate projection and sound technology, and we provide service. We're crazy about service, about treating people right. We have a lot of staff, they're in tuxedos, the place is clean, it's well-run, well-maintained, the projection is perfect. And it's a better theatre. It's a better experience. I hate to lead with my chin, but it really is. We've built a palace. We've built a modern-day movie palace."

Sony Theatres is expanding their construction of 3-D IMAX theatres, like this one at Barrie Loeks' "pride and joy," the Lincoln Square in Manhattan.

"We're crazy about service, about treating people right. The staff are in tuxedos, the place is clean, it's well-run, the projection is perfect. It's a better experience. I hate to lead with my chin, but it really is."

Loeks says Sony's strategy is to build high-end theatres in major urban markets that can support ambitious projects in the vein of the Lincoln Square. "We want to build the most deluxe theatres with the most lavish lobbies and the best seats and the best sound. And we want to provide great service and amenities. And in order to do that the way we want to do it, you need a major market. We need a lot of people to support our theatres, at pretty good ticket prices. And so our focus is in New York, Boston, Chicago, San Francisco. Because that's where we can really justify and get a return on the kind of theatre we think we're really good at building. We're building large, all-stadium seating, very fancy high-end theatres."

The latest innovation Sony's experimenting with is putting kitchens in their theatres. "I just came from a tasting," says Loeks with an it's-a-dirty-job-but-someone's-got-to-do-it inflection. "We're putting out a lot of different food products, and we're always continuing to push the envelope in terms of other experiences."

Among those other experiences, Loeks cites expansion in the construction of 3-D IMAX theatres at Sony's cinemas. "We're always looking for what more we can add to the entertainment experience."

Loeks is also proud that Sony Theatres is on the leading edge of another emerging, increasingly popular component of exhibition: the entertainment center. "We're on the forefront of that too. In San Francisco, Sony Development, which is another group within Sony, is building a large urban entertainment center, about 400,000 square feet, which will include a Sony Theatre, 15 screens, all stadium, and a 3-D IMAX theatre that we'll run. But in addition to that, there's all kinds of other Sony technology, interactive activities, children's areas—it's an urban theme park, basically, of which the theatre will be a part. We're also in Detroit building a complex which involves a 20-screen theatre with 6,000 seats, and is heavily themed. We have an All-Star Sports cafe and a California Pizza Kitchen, and some other retailers and restaurants all attached to the theatre, all in a themed kind of Disneyworld-Hollywood environment."

Loeks' passion for her work is irrepressible. Her favorite aspect of the exhibition industry is "that we show people a good time. It's wonderful to be in a business of entertaining people and making people happy—not always happy," she corrects herself, "but they're having fun. They may be laughing or they may be crying, but they're enjoying themselves. And I feel really privileged to be in that situation. In so many businesses, the ultimate product is not that gratifying. And for us, the product is selling people entertainment and giving them a good time, providing them a good show and a great experience and a great place to have that experience. I love the promotions, I love doing stunts. It's just tremendous fun, and it gives you such a broad range of things you can do with the public, because your product changes not only every week but in several ways every week. So you have this entire range of products, and the only limit to what you can do with those products are limits of time and creativity. It's not like you're selling the same widget every day. There are very few businesses that offer as many opportunities for fun as this one."

The major challenge in modern exhibition, says Loeks, is "to provide a great product and a great service, 365 days a year. And having every employee—and we have over 5,000 of them—understand our philosophy, know their job, do it well, with a smile, with courtesy. We have to maintain the magic of the theatregoing experience."

RICOS®

ORIGINATORS OF NACHOS IN CONCESSIONS

NACHO CHEESE PORTION CUPS

TASTES GREAT HOT OR COLD

GREATLY IMPROVE!

- ☑ Profits
- ☑ Inventory Control
- ☑ Transaction Time
- ☑ Preparation Time
- ☑ Shelf Life

ELIMINATE!

- ☒ Waste
- ☒ Mixing
- ☒ Leftovers
- ☒ Shrinkage
- ☒ Clean-up
- ☒ Refrigeration

Just the right amount of zest to MAXIMIZE BEVERAGE SALES!

TEN to the PROS...

SALES UP 30%

UNITED ARTISTS

We firmly believe in the Portion Pack program, enjoying increased nacho sales of over 30%. They're easy to prepare and clean-up. Most of all, customers appreciate a fresh delicious serving of Ricos Nachos every time...

Maria Angles, UA Theaters
National Concessions

INCREASED STAFF PRODUCTIVITY!

amc
AMC ENTERTAINMENT INC

"Our customers enjoy a great taste and consistent quality from coast to coast... Our theatres realize increased staff productivity through ease of preparation and clean-up, as well as, a significant decrease in product waste."

John Sherley
Manager
Concession & Ancillary Revenue

CONSISTENT QUALITY

MANN

Eliminates waste, easy preparation, great customer acceptance, consistent quality...

Wally Helton
Executive Director of Concession Operations

EWARDING!!

Cobb Theatres

Our experience with the Ricos Portion Pack Nacho System has been very rewarding. We have inventory control on nachos - which we haven't had in the past. And we've virtually eliminated cheese on the seats

Lee DeFore, Cobb Theatres
Vice President Concessions

EASY & NEAT!!

HOYTS
Hoyts Cinemas Corporation

Thanks to Ricos new Portion Pack, We have now added nachos to our menu list. It's easier for our employees and much neater for the patrons

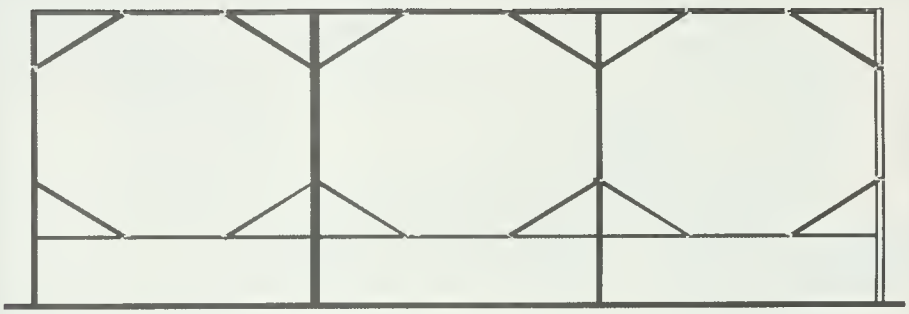
Dan Vieira, Hoyts Cinemas
Vice President/Operations

CIRCUIT WIDE

Metropolitan Theatres Corporation

Portion Pack gives us the control we are looking for throughout our circuit.

INVENTORY CONTR

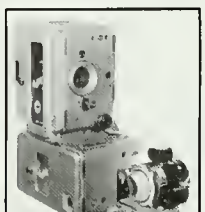


Deborah Clark, Metropolitan Theatres
Vice President/Generol Manager

Response No. 49

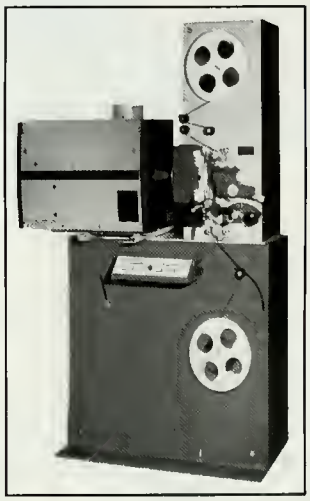
S MANUFACTURING CO., INC. 621 South Flores San Antonio, Tx. 78204 (210) 222-1415 Fax (210) 226-6455

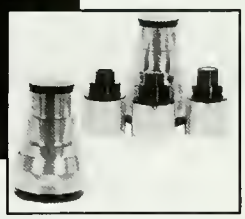
WESTAR SCREEN FRAMES



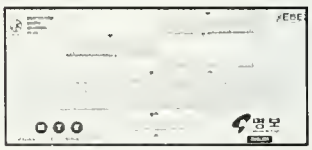
International Cinema Equipment Co. is pleased to announce that it has introduced a new line Steel Pre-fabricated Motion Picture Screen Frames. This new line of Frames is the latest addition to a growing list of products manufactured by the company for the Motion Picture & Theatre Industry. For prices, technical information and a free brochure call your theatre equipment dealer or, write, fax or e-mail us today. Quick delivery time is our speciality.

Other fine products we manufacture or distribute:



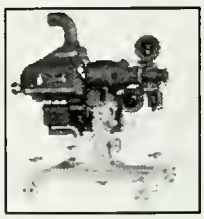


Westar ATAP/k 14 Automatic Projectors



Westar 35 & 35/70 mm Projectors

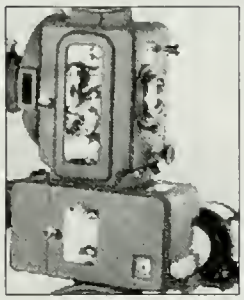
M.T.E. Studio Equipment



Lens, Screen, Lamp and Aspect Ratio Calculators

Westar HDMC Projection Lenses

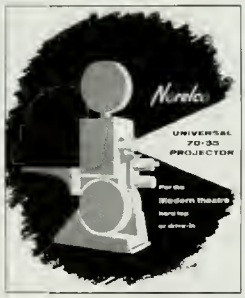
Process & Special Venue Projection



International Cinema Equipment Company Inc.

100 N.E. 39th Street □ Miami, Florida 33137 U.S.A. □ Phone 305 573-7339
Fax 305 573-8101 □ E-mail ICECO@aol.com □ Web Site http://www.iceco.com

ANNUAL NEW YEARS ANNIVERSARY SALE



We invite you to choose from the world's largest selection of New & Pre-Owned professional Cinema Equipment, Furnishings, and accesories. Why not let the world leader in Independent Cinema fit-outs quote your next project. You'll find our staff of fully qualified professionals ready to serve your requirements.

Installation, Service and Engineering are available.

Trade-Ins: We will gladly accept your old and unwanted Cinema Equipment and Fixtures in trade or will purchase them outright. Call Dara Reusch or Julio Urbay in our International Sales department for full details.

Habla Espanol

Sound System Promotional Specials

WESTAR Custom Stereo Optical Sound System consists of a DOLBY CP-500, Cat 700 Digital Reader, 5 QSC THX approved Amplifiers, Deluxe 6 channel Monitor, Steel Welded Rack. Pre-wired, pre tested.

Special Promotional Price..... $13.000.

Digital Options: Add your choice of Digital Stereo Signal Processors and Readers to the above system .

MORE ANNIVERSARY SOUND PROMOTIONS:

Dolby CP-65	$4,995.00
Dolby CP-45	$3,350.00
Sony SDDS / Reader	$9,250.00
DTS 6 / Reader	$5,300.00

Prices mentioned above are only valid when purchasing the complete Westar Stereo Custom System. Prices quoted for DOLBY equipment are for delivery & sale in the continental USA. Please consult with us for pricing on DOLBY outside the USA.

Rebuilt Professional 35mm & 35/70mm Systems

Westar 2001/2003 Projector & Optical Reproducer	$4,995.00
Westar ATAP W/ New Kelmar Auto Turret, Aperture changer & Controller	6,995.00
Century SA/R3E Projector & Sound Reproducer	4,995.00
Century TA/R3E Projector & Reproducer w/twin lens Auto Turret	6,995.00
Century JJ 35/70mm w/ Penthouse, Format Kit, water cooled	9,500.00
Simplex PR-1014/7310 (XL/5 Star) Projector & Sound Reproducer	5,700.00
Simplex PR-1050 Manual Twin lens Turret, with 5 star Reproducer	6,500.00
Simplex PR-1003/SH-1020 (XL/XL) Projector, Reproducer, Drive kit	5,995.00
Prevost P-93 Projector Reproducer, Auto Lens Turret & Aperture Changer	4,995.00
Cinemeccanica V-4 Projector Reproducer, manual Lens Turret – Reconditioned	3,000.00
Cinemeccanica V-5 Projector Reproducer, manual Lens Turret	4,850.00
Cinemeccanica V-8 Projector Reproducer, manual Lens Turret	5,995.00
Cinemeccanica V-8 Projector Reproducer, 35/70mm, penthouseTurret	8,995.00
Kinoton/Phillips FP-20 System with twin Lens Auto Turret	7,950.00
Kinoton/Phillips FP-20 System standard lens holder	6,250.00
Kinoton/Phillips DP-75 35/70mm systems with Auto Turret	12,000.00
KinotonPhillips DP-75 35mm system with single lens mount	8,995.00
Phillips DP-70 Todd-AO 35/70mm system single lens mount	7,500.00
Bauer U-4 system includes Auto Turret, 2000W lamphouse, more	7,450.00
Meopta System as above	6,500.00
Zeiss/Prevost P-70/ Favorit 35/70mm Manual Turret, pedestal more (used)	4,500.00
EIKI EX 9100 16mm professional 2000W Xenon system low hours	10,000.00
ELMO- LX-2200 16mm profesisonal system 2000W lamphouse more	10,000.00
DOLBY CP-45 Stereo Processor	2,900.00
DOLBY CP-50 Stereo Processor	1,900.00
DOLBY CP-55 Stereo Processor	3,000.00
DOLBY CP-100 Stereo Processor	1,500.00
DOLBY CP-200 Stereo Processor	5,000.00
DOLBY CAT 280 SR Card	450.00
DOLBY CAT 364 Noise Reduction Module	699.00
DOLBY CAT 365 Noise Reduction Module	1200.00
DOLBY SRA-5 SR Adapter unit	500.00
SMART SR-1 SR Adapter unit	250.00
SMART MOD II Stereo Processor with remote	1,500.00
CROWN D.C. 150 Power Amps	385.00
QSC THX Approved 1400 Power Amps	600.00

LENS SUPER SPECIALS–ALL NEW!

ISCO MC 65 Magnecom, Brand New	$650.00
ISCO ULTRA STAR HD 45 mm Brand New	$695.00
ISCO ULTRA STAR HD 50 mm Brand New	$695.00
ISCO Ultra 125mm	$600.00
ISCO Ultra 130mm	$550.00
ISCO ultra 135mm	$500.00
ISCO Ultra 140mm	$500.00
SANKOR Mini Anamorphic w / ISCO Ring Adapter	$595.00
WESTAR HD/MC lenses 50-85mm	$495.00

A THOUSAND OTHER LENSES IN STOCK FROM $100.00

International Cinema Equipment Company, Inc.

100 N.E. 39th Street, Miami, FL 33137 USA
Phone 305-573-7339 • Fax 305-573-8101
E-mail ICECO@aol.com • Web Site http://www.iceco.com

Response No. 15

HIP TO BE SQUARE

How Sony's Lincoln Square Conquered Manhattan by Pat Kramer

BOXOFFICE

SPECIAL REPORT:

SHOWEST 1997

Synergy is a popular buzzword in the cross-platformed, cross-marketed and laterally integrated industry that filmed entertainment in the 1990s has become. For that reason, we at BOXOFFICE were particularly gratified when ShoWest 1997 announced its intention to name Sony Theatres co-chairman Barrie Lawson Loeks as its 1997 Robert W. Selig ShoWester of the Year—perhaps the highest official honor that exhibition has to bestow.

As with each of the major exhibitor-related ShoWest awards, when the annual ShoWester of the Year is announced, the result in our offices is usually a mad if enthusiastic scramble to ensure we do editorial justice to the year's honoree. Such rapid response time proved unnecessary this time, because a beautiful form of synergy was at work: BOXOFFICE had already scheduled a major interview with Ms. Loeks to celebrate the fact that the 1996 data totals compiled for the recently-introduced BOXOFFICE/MOVIEFONE MOVIEGOER ACTIVITY CHART had indicated that the Sony Theatres Lincoln Square complex was the number one choice of over 57 million surveyed North American audience members as the place to see a first run feature film [see chart opposite].

As one of the most popular theatres ever constructed, the Lincoln Square is of course no stranger to the pages of BOXOFFICE. A 1995 BOXOFFICE cover was dedicated to one of the first major in-depth profiles ever published about its ambitious design. But a success story like Sony's at the Lincoln Square deserves follow-up, which is why this go-round, we decided to focus on the strategies and personalities Sony has so successfully deployed to capture the heart of Manhattan.

We can think of no finer tribute to Ms. Loeks and to everyone else in the Sony Theatres family than to celebrate the stratospheric real-world success of a flagship theatre located in one of the most competetive movie marketplaces in the world. So to Barrie Loeks, to Lincoln Square manager Arthur Murtha and to all the other men and women responsible for this great exhibition success story, the most heartfelt congratulations from all of us at BOXOFFICE. Your efforts embody the very finest that modern exhibition has to offer.

—Ray Greene, Editor-in-Chief, BOXOFFICE

If you want to know the secret for success in the exhibition industry, a good place to start would be Sony Theatres' Lincoln Square complex, recently named 1996's "Most Requested Theatre" in North America by the BOXOFFICE/MovieFone Moviegoer Activity Survey. Despite ticket prices of $8.50 (average for a first-run moviehouse in Manhattan), people flock to this plush, luxuriant megaplex, where they know they will have a great experience.

Boxoffice Magazine presents

MovieFone's Moviegoer Activity Report

Year End Edition - 1996

MovieFone® (777-FILM®) and its sister service, MovieLink® Online, are now the single largest source of movie showtime information in the country, providing information to over 57 million moviegoers each year. The following information represents the most requested theatres and exhibitors on MovieFone.

Top 10 Exhibitors & Theatres

Most Requested Exhibitors

Rank	Exhibitor	Total Requests
1	United Artists	8,835,307
2	Cineplex Odeon	7,643,032
3	Sony	7,170,371
4	AMC	7,111,317
5	General Cinema	4,526,495
6	Century	2,693,111
7	Cinemark	1,844,577
8	Mann	1,793,895
9	National Amusements	1,689,998
10	Edwards	1,343,263

Most Requested Theatres

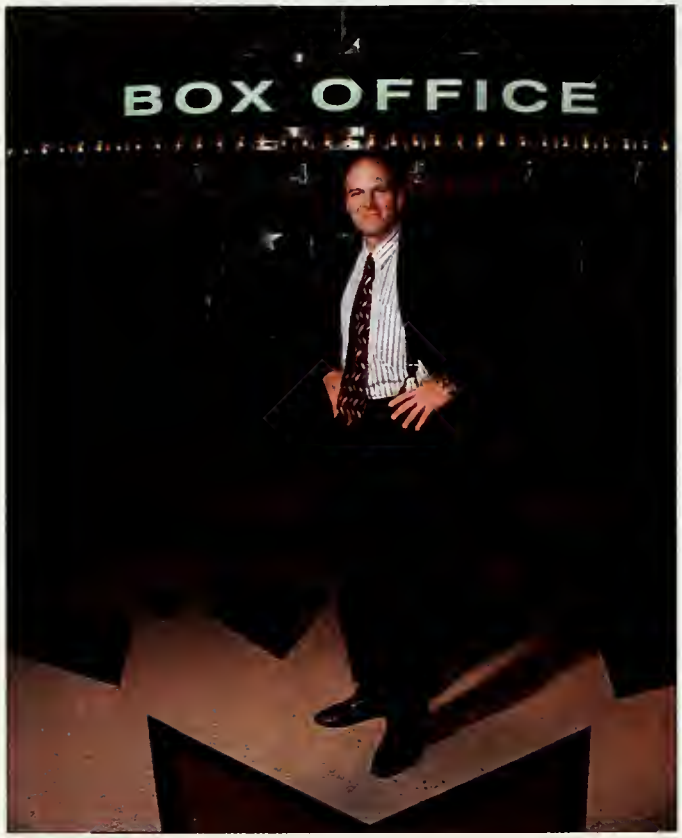
Rank	Market	Theatre	Total Requests
1	NY	Sony Lincoln Square	788,871
2	LA	AMC Century 14	490,906
3	NY	CO Chelsea	450,571
4	BO	Sony Cheri	382,702
5	NY	Sony Orpheum	356,613
6	NY	CO Worldwide	333,890
7	NY	Sony Village 7	332,963
8	DA	AMC The Grand	313,084
9	BO	Sony Assembly Square	310,402
10	PH	UA Riverview	309,589

Most Requested Theatres Per Screen

Total Requests	Rank	Theatre (# screens)	Total Requests
New York	1	CO Beekman (1)	139,959
14,996,000	2	CO Ziegfeld (1)	119,363
	3	CO 34th St. East (1)	72,945
Los Angeles	1	CinAm National (1)	67,429
7,728,706	2	CinAm Village (1)	62,628
	3	GCC Avco (3)	131,051
Dallas	1	AMC Highland Pk Village (4)	93,259
6,836,244	2	AMC Forum (6)	139,458
	3	UA United Artist 8 (8)	170,293
San Francisco	1	UA Coronet (1)	84,598
3,993,057	2	Blm Regency I (1)	49,212
	3	Blm Regency II (1)	48,567
Miami	1	Cobb Miami Lakes (10)	212,725
3,632,342	2	AMC Kendall (9)	185,879
	3	GCC Riviera (4)	78,673
Philadelphia	1	UA Sameric (4)	226,794
3,573,200	2	Cinemagic 3 at Penn (3)	119,147
	3	UA Cheltenham (8)	301,546
Boston	1	Sony Cheri (4)	382,702
3,006,728	2	Sony Nickelodeon (5)	171,033
	3	NA Circle Cinema (7)	229,562
Chicago	1	Village North (1)	28,448
2,831,664	2	CO Biograph (3)	65,609
	3	Sony Webster Place (8)	91,668
Houston	1	CO Spectrum (9)	146,449
2,029,358	2	CO River Oaks Plaza (12)	185,527
	3	CO Sharpstown Center (8)	91,668
Phoenix	1	Hark Cine Capri (1)	29,960
1,698,439	2	Hark Christown (5)	60,332
	3	UA Christown Mall (6)	69,537
Toronto	1	Famous Eglinton (1)	29,882
1,641,238	2	Famous Uptown (3)	88,646
	3	Famous Plaza (2)	36,292
San Diego	1	CinAm Cinema 21 (1)	19,102
1,578,779	2	Pacific Cinerama (6)	56,897
	3	Pacific Clairemont Twin (2)	18,474

Total Requests	Rank	Theatre (# screens)	Total Requests
Kansas City	1	Dksn Glenwood (4)	58,463
1,166,823	2	Dksn Antioch (2)	23,545
	3	Dksn Olathe Landing (8)	91,454
Atlanta	1	UA Tara Cinema (4)	22,096
1,121,292	2	AMC Galleria (8)	43,891
	3	Carmike Southlake (6)	31,794
Seattle	1	CO Cinerama (1)	16,757
979,538	2	Landmk Neptune (1)	14,681
	3	CO Northgate (1)	12,550
Cleveland	1	General Southgate (3)	33,916
847,928	2	GCC Ridge Park Square (8)	72,559
	3	GCC Parmatown (5)	41,034
Minneapolis	1	Landmk Uptown (1)	8,275
823,491	2	CO Edina (4)	23,779
	3	CO Knollwood (4)	22,149
Denver	1	UA Continental (1)	11,496
665,372	2	AMC Colorado Plaza (6)	33,270
	3	Landmk Esquire (2)	10,562
Sacramento	1	Century Century 21 (2)	25,746
589,487	2	Century Sacramento D-I (6)	62,439
	3	Century Cinedome Sacr. (9)	91,357
Las Vegas	1	Century Las Vegas 6 D-I (6)	39,783
546,184	2	Century Cinedome 12 LV (12)	77,368
	3	Century Rancho (16)	100,609
Detroit	1	Star Lincoln Park (8)	35,133
530,695	2	Star Taylor (10)	43,363
	3	AMC Southland (4)	14,705
Washington, DC	1	CO Uptown (1)	9,737
394,438	2	CO Cinema (1)	5,971
	3	CO Embassy (1)	5,505
Tampa	1	Cobb University (4)	14,153
321,525	2	Muvico Palm Harbor (10)	33,155
	3	Cobb Northdale Court (6)	18,930
Orlando	1	Carmike Hoffner Centre (6)	15,524
290,885	2	Regal UC Cinema (7)	17,476
	3	Carmike University (8)	18,431

Top 3 Actively* Requested Theatres:



1. CO Worldwide New York, NY
2. AMC The Grand Dallas, TX
3. Sony Lincoln Sq. New York, NY

*Caller specifically requested theatre

Key to Exhibitors

AMC	AMC Theatres, Inc.	CityCin	City Cinemas	General	General Theatres	Muvico	Muvico Theatres
Act III	Act III Theatres	CO	Cineplex Odeon Corp	Hark	Harkins Theatres	Pacific	Pacific Theatres
Blm	Blumenfeld Theatres	Cobb	Cobb Theatres	Hollywood	Hollywood Theatres	Regal	Regal Cinemas
Carmike	Carmike Cinemas, Inc.	Dksn	Dickinson Theatres	Landmk	Landmark Theatre Corp.	Sony	Sony Theatres
Century	Century Theatres	Famous	Famous Players	Mann MN	Mann Minneapolis	Star	Loeks-Star Theatres
CinAm	CinAmerica Theatres, LP	GCC	General Cinema Theatres	Met	Metropolitan Theatres Corp	SupSav	Super Sever Cinemas
						UA	United Artists Theatre Circuit

Located on Manhattan's Upper West side on Broadway at 68th Street, this large-scale exhibition complex is an architectural and technological showpiece. Opened in November 1994, Lincoln Square features one of the world's largest 3-D IMAX Theatres, with an 80' x 100' screen and seating for 600. Lincoln's 12 conventional auditoriums provide plush, oversize rocking-chair seating for a total audience of 3,600, giving movie patrons the ultimate in comfort. From Lincoln Square's art deco interior to each themed theatre's state-of-the-art projection and SDDS sound equipment, Lincoln Square provides a moviegoing event like no other.

Theatre manager Arthur Murtha promoting his favorite magazine in the lobby of the Sony Theatres Lincoln Square in Manhattan.

Theatre manager Arthur Murtha refers to Lincoln Square as "awe-inspiring, luxurious and the ultimate show-palace. When Sony built Lincoln Square their intention was to create the most fantastic theatre, visually, in Manhattan—or for that matter, anywhere in the country—coupled with fantastic guest service. I think the people of New York have responded to this and have really become enamored with this theatre. This is their first choice for seeing a movie."

With Lincoln Square presently running at full capacity, Sony co-chairperson Barrie Loeks says they plan to add three more screens this year. "We're selling out all our seats by 7 or 8 p.m. on Saturday," Loeks says, "to the point where there's nothing left. On the one hand, we like that because it's great that we're doing that kind of business, but people ought to be able to walk in and get a seat to something. So we're doing everything in our power to get more auditoriums and more seats there."

To Murtha, part of Lincoln Square's achievement results from the way it embodies the attitudes of the city it calls home. "In this city," he says, "people have a fondness for things that just reach out and grab you. It's a city that just likes to have the very best."

Murtha came to Lincoln Square last September after opening and running Cineplex Odeon's megaplex in Universal City, Calif.—like Lincoln Square, one of the country's busiest venues. When offered the position of manager at Sony's flagship theatre, Murtha says several things impressed him, including Sony's emphasis on guest service and the way Sony treats its staff. "Everybody has the opportunity to contribute something to the company," says Murtha.

Lincoln Square's success began almost from day one. Sony vice president of advertising and publicity Marc Pascucci remembers opening day's star-studded party for 2,300 and the media attention that followed: "We did a lot of publicity tours, a lot of pre-screenings. The theatre got so much attention that everyone in Manhattan and the Tri-state area [New York, New Jersey and Connecticut] knew about it. Word of mouth has carried us through and it's built from there. Word of mouth among New Yorkers is that it's the best place to see a movie in the city, not just as a neighborhood theatre but as a destination theatre for all of Manhattan."

To keep the momentum up, Lincoln Square continues to offer spectacular promotional events at the theatre complex. Among last year's highlights, Pascucci lists last April's Kids' Film Festival, which premiered "James and the Giant Peach" and featured other family titles. The festival was held in conjunction with the non-profit organization Hollywood for Children. Another promotion featured a tie-in with Revlon for Hollywood makeup—with free makeovers for moviegoers. At Halloween-time, a kids' costume contest was held for the opening of "L5: First City in Space" at the IMAX. Ending the year with some sizzle, moviegoers were treated to a display of tango dancing for the grand opening of "Evita." Says Pascucci, "The theatre is always the focal point of attention. We're truly charmed in that way."

Central to the theatre's popularity is its booking policy, which pays careful attention to audience preferences and viewing habits. While the theatre's demographics draw heavily on an upscale clientele, Murtha says Lincoln Square attracts people from all over the metro area. As a result, films shown in Lincoln Square's theatres are diverse in nature, and booking policies are demonstrably adaptable.

When the complex first opened, Sony officials had designated three smaller theatres for art-house films. However, discovering that their clientele was as likely to buy tickets for specialized films as for standard, commercial fare, the booking policy was adjusted accordingly. Presently, all 12 theatres are used equally for both commercial and specialized films.

Overall, Lincoln Square tends to do extremely well with whatever they book. For the opening weekend of "Mars Attacks!," Murtha says they had the highest gross in the nation. Two new boxoffice records were set in late December: On December 28, Lincoln Square set a new high for "Single Day Revenues and Attendance" with $200,000 in sales and 17,000 tickets sold. That week (Dec.27—Jan. 2, 1997) also set a new record for "Single Week's Boxoffice Sales and Attendance" with over $1 million in revenue and 120,000 tickets sold. Contributing to Christmas week's success were the premieres of "The People vs. Larry Flynt" and "Evita," the latter of which was exclusive to the Lincoln Square for the entire east coast on Christmas Day.

As an incentive for repeat business, a "combo discount program" is offered at the boxoffice with significant discounts on the purchase of two IMAX features or an IMAX feature with a standard 35mm presentation. Lincoln Square also offers a "Passport Program" to groups and employee organizations, with discounts provided on movie tickets to all participants.

> "In this city, people have a fondness for things that just reach out and grab you. It's a city that just likes to have the very best."
> —Arthur Murtha

While special promotions help bring in new customers, Lincoln Square keeps a close eye on customer satisfaction by participating in a "Mystery Shopper" evaluation. "Mystery Shoppers," Pascucci explains, "are theatre-goers who visit the theatres on a regular basis and grade us on a variety of subjects." This analysis includes length of concession and boxoffice lines, whether ushers are friendly when greeting people, and how clean the bathrooms are kept.

Interestingly, Pascucci says Sony's "Mystery Shoppers" actually pay to participate: "It's a package deal, where they get four tickets plus concession coupons. It's our primary source for information on how we're doing, and the theatre ranks very high."

Another indication of Lincoln Square's popularity is its celebrity clientele. Actors Al Pacino, Tom Cruise, Nicole Kidman and Barbra Streisand have all made recent appearances at Lincoln Square. To accommodate their requests for privacy, Murtha says special efforts are made by guest services to see that their famous clients are well-taken care of and not bothered.

Murtha recalls Streisand's visit for the premiere of "The Mirror Has Two Faces." "Ms. Streisand didn't want to come through the lobby area so we brought her up through our employee entrance to the Loews Theatre, where we had roped off seats for her in the back of the auditorium. Toward the end of the presentation, we went back to the projection room and spent about 25 minutes talking about the presentation. At the end of the film, we watched as the audience stayed until the end of the credits and clapped. She was just so tickled when she left here!"

Whether patrons are celebrities or not, Murtha says guest service ranks high on Lincoln Square's agenda. "We try to hire some of the most friendly people out there that really have a desire to meet the needs and expectations of our guests and really work together to make Lincoln the unique place it is to see a movie." Within that framework is Sony's "three-minute" promise, designed to ensure that lines are fast-moving at all times. If a patron waits at the boxoffice or concession stand longer than three minutes, they receive a free Coke. Murtha notes, "I think what we're trying to do here is to help people become fully immersed in the cinema-going experience by offering a great atmosphere and dependable employees and then programming real good movies."

On Dec. 28, Lincoln Square set a record for single day revenues and attendance with $200,000 in sales and 17,000 tickets sold. That week also set a record for single week's sales and attendance with grosses over $1,000,000 on 120,000 tickets sold.

Overall, when asked what sets Lincoln Square apart from the rest, Murtha offers his own formula for success: "Every day I work, I try to imagine what's going on in my building from my guests' perspective. How are they seeing it? How do they feel when they walk into our building? We have to tailor our operation to make sure that everybody who walks into this building enjoys themselves. To complement that you need to have a really well-organized staff and a great team of managers who are committed to reaching those guest service levels, maintaining the building at its absolute best condition, and who really care about the presentation of what we're putting on the screen."

In summing up his experience at Lincoln Square Murtha says that "running a megaplex is something new to our industry. It's a completely different animal from running the six [screen complexes] or the eights or tens. When you're talking about a building that serves well over two million people a year, you're talking a tremendous amount of volume and your operation has to adjust to that. Running a megaplex is all about teamwork and a philosophy of taking 150 staff members, plus a team of approximately 15 managers, and keeping everybody going in the same direction, while running the very best theatre possible."

For a full-length profile of Sony co-chair and 1997 Robert W. Selig ShoWester of the Year award winner Barrie Loeks, please consult page SW-16 elsewhere in Boxoffice's ShoWest Intro. Photos for this story by Marco Lorenzetti and Bob Zucker.

Response No. 9

SUMMER HEAT

It's a jungle out there. Here's a 68-title guide to Hollywood's leviathans and littler beasts doing battle this summer.

Steven Spielberg's "Jurassic Park" sequel, "The Lost World," is sure to jumpstart moviedom's summer—one week before the season has officially begun. Along with that Universal 5/23 opener, the month of May has Columbia's "The Fifth Element" and Warner's "Father's Day" (both 5/9) and Paramount's "The Flood" (5/16)—a sign of things to come.

And come they will this summer, with 68 studio and independent releases ready to advance through the movie theatre thicketry. Unlike last summer, 1997's hothouse boasts a number of high-profile sequels, five from just two studios. Fox has "Speed 2: Cruise Control," "Home Alone 3" and "Alien Resurrection"; Warner has "Batman & Robin" and "Free Willy 3." With that kind of tentpoling, the June-July-August slate can be expected to resist sags.

And, reversing their late winter absence, under the summer skies the stars are coming out in full force, sometimes in twos: Mel Gibson and Julia Roberts pair in Warner's "Conspiracy Theory"; Sigourney Weaver and Winona Ryder partner in Fox's "Alien Resurrection"; Walter Matthau and Jack Lemmon reteam in Fox's "Out to Sea"; John Travolta and Nicolas Cage change identities in Paramount's "Face/Off"; Al Pacino and Keanu Reeves star in Warner's "The Devil's Advocate"; and Tommy Lee Jones and Will Smith are Columbia's "Men in Black." Looks like Hollywood will be shining on right to the harvest moon.

JUNE

Batman & Robin

The Gotham City streets are in danger once again, so long as the sinister Mr. Freeze (Arnold Schwarzenegger) and menacing seductress Poison Ivy ("Beautiful Girls'" Uma Thurman) run free. It's up to Batman ("One Fine Day's" George Clooney), Robin (Chris O'Donnell) and Batgirl ("Clueless'" Alicia Silverstone) to destroy these villains. The fourth film in the "Batman" series co-stars John Glover and Elle Macpherson. Joel Schumacher, who did #3, again directs; Akiva Goldsman scripts; Peter Macgregor-Scott produces. (Warner, 6/20)

My Best Friend's Wedding

In this romantic comedy, best friends Julianne (Julia Roberts, also in this summer's "Conspiracy Theory") and Michael ("Bad Girls'" Dermot Mulroney) plan to get married by the age of 28 if they haven't found someone special. As the time draws near, Michael is about to marry someone else—until the unimaginable happens. Cameron Diaz ("She's the One"), Rupert Everett ("Cemetery Man") and Philip Bosco ("Milk Money") co-star. Aussie P.J. Hogan ("Muriel's Wedding") directs; Ronald Bass ("The Joy Luck Club") scripts, and he produces with Jerry Zucker ("A Walk in the Clouds"). (TriStar, 6/27)

Con Air

In this Touchstone actioner, Nicolas Cage ("The Rock") plays Cameron Poe, a paroled convict who becomes the middleman between life and death when a prison transport plane is hijacked. Poe hops aboard a flight carrying a group of deadly criminals being taken to a super-maximum security facility. Yet when Cyrus "The Virus" Grissom (John Malkovich) hatches a plan, only Poe and U.S. Marshal Vince Larkin ("Grosse Point Blank's" John Cusack) can possibly save the plane from crashing and the lifers from killing. Simon West directs; Scott Rosenberg ("Things to Do in Denver When You're Dead") scripts; action octaner Jerry Bruckheimer produces. Expect Disney to position this as this summer's "The Rock." (Buena Vista, 6/6)

Boogie Nights

In the sleazy underworld of adult entertainment, a group of filmmakers try to revamp the industry. Spanning the '70s and '80s, "Boogie Nights" follows the ups and downs of the players, including an optimistic producer who attempts to turn porn into art. Mark Wahlberg ("Fear"), Julianne Moore ("Safe"), Burt Reynolds ("Striptease"), Don Cheadle ("Devil in a Blue Dress"), William H. Macy ("Fargo"), Heather Graham ("Drugstore Cowboy") and John C. Reilly ("Hard 8") star in this dark comedy. Sophomore helmer Paul Thomas Anderson (also "Hard 8") directs, scripts and produces. (New Line, 6/13 wide after 5/23 ltd rollout)

In and Out

On the night before his wedding, a well-liked English teacher ("Fierce Creatures'"Kevin Kline) faces turmoil when his sexuality is questioned. Joan Cusack, Matt Dillon, Debbie Reynolds, the late Wilford Brimley, Bob Newhart and Tom Selleck co-star. Frank Oz ("The Indian in the Cupboard") directs; Paul Rudnick ("Jeffrey") scripts; Scott Rudin ("The First Wives Club") produces. (Paramount, 6/13)

Love Serenade

Residents of the tiny town of Sunray in rural Australia, unwedded twentysomething sisters Vicki-Ann and Dimitry Hurley feel that life is passing them by in this black comedy (which won Cannes' Camera d'Or for best first film). That's until Ken Sherry, ex-drivetime king of Brisbane radio, arrives to run the local station. Abandoning all sibling loyalty, the sisters launch a comically contentious battle to win his heart's affections. Mirando Otto, Rebecca Frith and George Shevtsov star. Shirley Barrett directs and scripts; Jan Chapman (Oscar winner "The Piano") produces. (Miramax, 6/20 NY/LA)

Different for Girls

When childhood best friends Paul and Karl meet 20 years later, there's only one problem: Karl is now Kim. Paul doesn't recognize his old pal, but he's certainly attracted to her. Kim eventually reveals her true identity, but Paul is unforgiving and decides to wreck her life. A romantic comedy, "Different for Girls" received the Montreal fest's Grand Prix of the Americas award for best film. Rupert Graves ("Intimate Relations"), Steven Mackintosh ("London Kills Me") and Saskia

Reeves ("Butterfly Kiss") star. Richard Spence directs; Tony Marchant scripts; John Chapman produces. (First Look, June)

Kicked in the Head

A down-and-out man falls for a stewardess. Kevin Corrigan ("Rhythm Thief"), Linda Fiorentino ("Unforgettable"), Michael Rapaport (also in "Cop-Land"), James Woods ("Ghosts of Mississippi") and Lili Taylor ("I Shot Andy Warhol") star with Olek Krupa, Burt Young and John Ventimiglia. Matthew Harrison (also "Rhythm Thief") directs, and he scripts along with Corrigan; Barbara DeFina produces and Martin Scorsese executive produces. (October Films, June)

Talk of Angels

A sort of gender-bender variant on Ken Loach's "Land and Freedom," this PG-13 drama tells the story of a young Irish woman who arrives in Spain on the eve of the country's civil war. Polly Walker ("Restoration"), Vincent Perez ("The Crow: City of Angels"), Frances McDormand ("Fargo") and Franco Nero star for director Nick Hamm; Ann Guedes and Frank McGuinness script; Patrick Cassavetti produces. (Miramax, June)

Gabbeh

This Iranian-language drama follows a small nomadic tribe that continues to handweave Gabbeh (Persian carpets with patterns inspired by tribal life), even though the demand for them is declining. As an old women washes one of the carpets, a young woman named Gabbeh tells a story of forbidden love. "Gabbeh" stars Abbas Sayah, Shaghayegh Djodat and Hossein Moharami. Mohsen Makhmalbaf directs and scripts; Khalil Daroudtchi and Khalil Mahmoudl produce. (New Yorker, June NY excl)

The Pillow Book

In this drama (which mixes Japanese, Mandarin, Cantonese and English languages), a young girl named Nagiko Kiohara loved the traditional birthday messages her father (Hideko Yoshido) wrote on her face. Grown into adulthood but abused by her arranged husband (Ken Mitsuishi), Nagiko (Vivian Wu) leaves him to search for a man ("Trainspotting's" Ewan McGregor) that she can trust to continue the birthday greetings. In the process, Nagiko discovers her own love of writing. Yoshi Oida co-stars. Peter Greenaway ("The Cook, the Thief, the Wife and Her Lover") directs and scripts; Kees Kasander produces. (CFP, 6/6)

HERCULES

Writer/directors John Musker and Ron Clements, the makers of "Aladdin" and "The Little Mermaid," return with this animated comedy/adventure about the son of Zeus. Half-man, half-god, and raised on Earth, Herc learns that Hades, the god of the Underworld, wants to destroy him in order to rule Mt. Olympus after Zeus. To prove his mettle and return to his father, Herc must prove himself to be a hero, defeating the challenges thrown at him by Hades. Danny DeVito, Tate Donovan, Susan Egan, Matt Frewer, Bobcat Goldthwait, Paul Shaffer, Rip Torn, Lillias White, James Woods and Charlton Heston provide the voices. Musker and Clements produce with Alice Dewey. (Disney, 6/27)

M

In this reissue of Fritz Lang's 1931 German drama, Peter Lorre stars as a psychopath who murders a child and is brought to justice by Berlin's organized criminal element. "M" co-stars Otto Wernicke, Ellen Widmann, Inge Landgut and Gustav Grundgens. Thea Von Harbou, Paul Falkenberg, Adolf Jansen and Karl Vash script the Nero Film production. (Kino, 6/27)

The Tit and the Moon

Tete (Biel Duran) is a small Catalonian boy who has a sibling problem surfacing: He feels neglected when his newborn brother is breastfed by his mother. After seeing the naked breast of a French ballerina ("Becoming Collette's" Mathilda May), he becomes fixated on that female body part. Gerard Damon co-stars. Bigas Luna ("Jamon Jamon") directs, and he scripts with Cuca Canals; A.V. Gomez produces the Spanish-language comedy. (Strand, June)

JULY

Men in Black

This science-fiction adventure comedy is based on Lowell Cunningham's Marvel comics of the same title. The Men in Black—K ("The Client's" Tommy Lee Jones) and J ("Independence Day's" Will Smith)—are top-secret government agents who handle immigration for alien beings on Earth. When they stumble on an alien terrorist plan that could destroy the planet, the Men in Black must catch the evildoers. Linda Fiorentino (also in "Kicked in the Head") co-stars. Barry Sonnenfeld ("Get Shorty") directs; Ed Solomon (who helped write both of the "Bill and Ted's..." adventures) scripts; and the "Twister" team, Walter Parkes and Laurie MacDonald, produce for Steven Spielberg's Amblin. See our April cover story. (Columbia, 7/2)

Speed 2: Cruise Control

Director/producer Jan De Bont returns for this sequel to "Speed," which trades in a runaway bus for an oceangoing vessel. Annie (Sandra Bullock, reprising her role) and her new boyfriend Alex ("Sleepers'" Jason Patric, taking over for Keanu Reeves) decide to take a leisurely luxury cruise in the Caribbean. But, to their peril, they discover there's nothing leisurely about this trip once a criminal mastermind takes over and heads them full speed toward doom. Randall McCormick, Jeff Nathanson, Kevin Peterka and Greg Chabot script. (Fox, 7/2)

Face/Off

In this action thriller directed by John Woo ("Broken Arrow"), an FBI agent and a terrorist trade identities. John Travolta (in a second Woo teaming), Nicolas Cage (also in "Con Air"), Joan Allen ("The Crucible") and Alessandro Nivola star. Michael Werb and Michael Colleary script; David Permut ("Surviving the Game"), longtime Woo associate Terence Chang, Christopher Godsick and Barrie Osborne ("China Moon") produce. (Paramount, 7/2)

Home Alone 3

Alex D. Linz ("One Fine Day") replaces Macaulay Culkin in this Fox Family Films effort as the stranded lad who must rely on his wits to protect himself while the grownups are away. This time, the eight-year-old has a nasty case of the chicken pox and must defend the neighborhood from a prowling band of international criminals. Kevin Kilner co-stars. Longtime film editor Raja Gosnell ("Mrs. Doubtfire") turns director; series originator John Hughes scripts; Hughes produces with former Hollywood Pictures head Ricardo Mestres ("101 Dalmatians"). (Fox, 7/11)

Money Talks

In the chaos of a prison break, a small-time con artist ("Friday's" Chris Tucker) is wrongly blamed for the killing of police officers. Suddenly notorious, he must escape the clutches of the vengeful masses, relying only on the help of an annoying reporter ("The Shadow Conspiracy's" Charlie Sheen). Brett Ratner directs; "Toy Story" co-writers Joel Cohen and Alec Sokolow script this action comedy with Vince McKewin; Walter Coblenz ("The Babe") produces. (New Line, 7/18)

Titanic

In this joint-studio production (Paramount has domestic distribution rights, Fox has foreign), writer/director James Cameron ("True Lies") recreates the fatal 1912 voyage of the maiden liner Titanic. Using historical and fictional characters, the film follows the onboard romance between an aristocrat ("Sense & Sensibility's" Kate Winslet) and a steerage passenger (Leonardo DiCaprio of "Baz Luhrmann's Romeo & Juliet"). Billy Zane ("The Phantom"), Kathy Bates ("Dolores Claiborne"), Frances Fisher ("Female Perversions"), Bernard Hill, Jonathan Hyde, Danny Nucci, David Warner and Bill Paxton ("Twister") co-star. Cameron and Jon Landau produce. (Paramount, 7/2)

George of the Jungle

Based on the '60s cartoon hero, this Disney film follows the adventures of George ("Mrs. Winterbourne's" Brendan Fraser) as he gives up the comfort of modern civilization and the love of a beautiful woman (Leslie Mann) in order to save his animal friends from evil poachers in the jungle. Thomas Hayden Church co-stars in this adventure comedy. Sam Weisman ("The Mighty Ducks II") directs; Dana Olsen (who wrote Fraser's "Encino Man") scripts; David Hoberman, Jordan Kerner, and Jon Avnet ("Fried Green Tomatoes") produce. (Buena Vista, 7/18)

Edwards & Hunt: The First American Road Trip

Set in the 1800s, this comedy follows a band of misfits as they compete with Lewis and Clark to explore the West. When the team sets out, they face all the potential disasters the American wilderness offers. Chris Farley ("Tommy Boy"), Matthew Perry ("Fools Rush In"), Eugene Levy ("Waiting for Guffman"), Bokeem Woodbine ("Jason's Lyric"), Lisa B. and recent Sundance honoree Parker Posey ("The House of Yes") co-star. Christopher Guest ("Waiting for Guffman") directs; Boyd Hale, Mark Nutter and Thomas R. Wolfe script; Denise Di Novi ("James and the Giant Peach") produces. (Warner, July)

The Borrowers

A clan of very little people—four inches tall—named the Clocks live in happy coexistence with a normal human household—until, that is, an evil lawyer threatens the happiness of all. John Goodman stars in this adaptation of the children's books by Mary Norton. "The Borrowers" would mark the first stateside theatrical release by Polygram, which has long planned to launch an American distribution operation. (Polygram, July)

Conspiracy Theory

When a paranoid taxi driver finds out his conspiracy fantasy is true, the real problems begin. But the genre mix is non-"Ransom"-like: action/adventure/romantic comedy. Mel Gibson, Julia Roberts (also in "My Best Friend's Wedding") and Patrick Stewart ("Star Trek: First Contact") star. Richard Donner (who helmed Gibson's "Lethal Weapon" series) directs; Brian Helgeland ("L.A. Confidential," also from Warner later this year) scripts; in a change of pace from his usual action fare, Joel Silver (also the "Lethal Weapon" series) produces. (Warner, 7/25)

Wings of the Dove

When Kate (Helena Bonham Carter of "Margaret's Museum") falls in love with a common journalist (Linus Roache), she must decide whether to take her expected place in society or marry the man she loves. Their affair remains discreet until the arrival of a young American heiress ("Spitfire Grill's" Alison Elliot), who bears a tragic secret of her own. Iain Softley ("Hackers") directs; Hossein Amini, who adapted Thomas Hardy's "Jude the Obscure" for Gramercy's "Jude," here adapts Henry James' turn-of-the-century romance; David Parfitt ("Mary Shelley's Frankenstein") and Stephen Evans ("Much Ado About Nothing") produce. (Miramax, July)

Wild America

Set in 1967 and based on the true adventures of the wildlife documentarians Mark, Marty and Marshall Stouffer, "Wild America" follows the brothers as they travel across country with their

CONTACT

Based on the late Carl Sagan's novel, "Contact" stars Jodie Foster as an astronomer who discovers radio signals transmitted from outer space. As countries around the world try to decode the message, she hopes to be the single spokesperson for Earth, a position many desire. Matthew McConaughey ("A Time to Kill"), James Woods ("Ghosts of Mississippi"), Tom Skerritt, Angela Bassett ("Strange Days"), John Hurt ("Michael"), David Morse ("The Crossing Guard"), Rob Lowe and William Fichtner ("Albino Alligator") co-star. Robert Zemeckis ("Forrest Gump") directs; Michael Goldenberg ("Bed of Roses") scripts; Steve Starkey (also "Forrest Gump") produces. (Warner, 7/11) camera, meeting ferocious animals and interesting characters along the way. Jonathan Taylor Thomas ("Tom and Huck"), Devon Sawa, Scott Bairstow, Jamey Sheridan ("A Stranger Among Us") and Frances Fisher (also in July's "Titanic") star. William Dear ("Angels in the Outfield") directs; David Michael Wieger scripts; Morgan Creek head James G. Robinson produces with Irby Smith and Mark Stouffer. (Warner, July)

Twin Town

In Swansea, South Wales, roofing contractor Bryn Cartwright (William Thomas) tries to avoid paying compensation to his worker Fatty Lewis (Huw Ceredig), a handyman who fell off a ladder on the job. But Fatty is an unlikely victim—he has wicked twin sons (Rhys Ifans and LLyr Evans), who are ready to exact revenge in this black comedy. Debut director Kevin Allen also co-scripts with Paul Durden; Peter McAleese produces; Andrew MacDonald and Danny Boyle, the makers of "Shallow Grave" and "Trainspotting," executive produce. (Gramercy, July)

B. Monkey

B (Italian starlet Asia Argento, of "Queen Margot"), a wild young beauty, becomes the object of passion of a romantic schoolteacher ("I Shot Andy Warhol's" Jared Harris). With him, B hopes, she can escape the decadent world of drugs in which she's caught with the violent Bruno ("Michael Collins'" Jonathan Rhys Meyers). Rupert Everett (also in "My Best Friend's Wedding") co-stars. Michael Radford ("The Postman") directs; Andrew Davies adapts his novel with Michael Thomas; Stephen Woolley (also "Michael Collins") and Colin Vaines produce. (Miramax, 7/18)

Air Force One

In this action/thriller aka "AFO," the President of the United States (Harrison Ford) has a policy of refusing to negotiate with terrorists. When the First Lady and his child are on a plane that is hijacked by Russian neo-nationalists, the President must decide whether to stand his ground. Glenn Close ("101 Dalmatians") and Gary Oldman ("Murder in the First") also star. Wolfgang Petersen ("In the Line of Fire") directs; Andrew Marlowe scripts; Petersen produces with Armyan Bernstein ("Princess Caraboo"), Gail Katz and Jon Shestack for Beacon. (Columbia, 7/25)

AUGUST

The Devil's Advocate

Offered a job at an influential New York law office by the lead partner (Al Pacino), a young district attorney (Keanu Reeves) finds himself being enticed by power and money. As he fights for his integrity, his associates reveal themselves to be supernaturally (or infernally) enhanced if humanely challenged. Charlize Theron ("2 Days in the Valley"), Judith Ivey ("There Goes the Neighborhood"), Craig T. Nelson ("I'm Not Rappaport"), Ruben Santiago-Hudson and Jeffrey Jones co-star. Taylor Hackford ("Dolores Claiborne") directs; Jonathan Lemkin ("Demolition Man") and Tony Gilroy ("The Cutting Edge") script; New Regency head Arnon Milchan produces with Arnold Kopelson and Anne Kopelson. (Warner, August)

Alien Resurrection

Sigourney Weaver returns to battle the alien creatures as a changed woman after a bizarre experiment resurrects her. Ripley (Weaver) teams with a band of smugglers to once again destroy the beasts. This fourth installment in the series also stars Winona Ryder; Ron Perlman ("Romeo Is Bleeding"), Dominique Pinon, Gary Doudan and Dan Hedaya ("Joe Versus the Volcano") head the supporting cast. Jean-Pierre Jeunet ("The City of Lost Children") directs; Joss Whedon ("Toy Story") scripts; David Giler ("The Fugitive"), Walter Hill ("Last Man Standing"), Gordon Carroll ("Alien^3") and Bill Badalato ("Tall Tale") produce. (Fox, August)

Kull the Conqueror

Based on Robert E. Howard's '30s pulp fiction hero, "Kull the Conqueror" follows the adventures of a slave soldier (Kevin Sorbo of TV's "Hercules: The Legendary Journeys") who becomes king. When he loses his throne, he must find a magical weapon to help him regain his title, his people's freedom, and his lover. Tia Carrere ("True Lies"), Thomas Ian Griffith ("Excessive Force"), Karina Lombard ("Legends of the Fall"), Litefoot ("The Indian in the Cupboard") and Harvey Fierstein ("Independence Day") co-star in this fantasy adventure. John Nicollela ("The Fan", 1981) directs; Charles Edward Pogue ("Dragonheart") and Don Mancini (the "Child's Play" series) script; Raffaella De Laurentiis (also "Dragonheart") produces. (Universal, 8/29)

Excess Baggage

In this action/adventure, Alicia Silverstone (also in "Batman & Robin") is a lonely rich girl who plans her own kidnapping. She involves an unwitting car thief ("The Usual Suspects'" Benicio del Toro), but her scheme gets out of control and she finds herself on the run from an ex-CIA assassin (Christopher Walken). Harry Connick Jr. ("Copycat"), Jack Thompson ("The Sum of Us") and Nicholas Turturro ("Mac") co-star. Marco Brambilla ("Demolition Man") directs; Max Adams, Dick Clement ("The Commitments") and Ian LaFrenais script; Silverstone produces with former A&M Films exec Bill Borden and Carolyn Kessler. (Columbia, 8/15; could move into July)

Leave It to Beaver

The Cleaver family is back and living in the '90s. Based on the classic TV show, this comedy features the same wholesome characters: Ward ("Happy Gilmore's" Christopher McDonald), June ("Cliffhanger's" Janine Turner), Wally (Erik Von Detten) and the Beaver (newcomer Cameron Finley). Andy Cadiff (TV's "Home Improvement") directs; Brian Levant ("Jingle All the Way") and Lon Diamond script; Levant produces with Robert Simonds (also "Happy Gilmore"). (Universal, 8/1)

Gone Fishin'

After winning a trip to the Florida Everglades, fishing friends Gus (Danny Glover) and Joe (Joe Pesci) anticipate reeling in the catch of their dreams. All that changes when a con artist (Nick Brimble) steals their car to pursue a treasure buried in the swamp and when Rita (Rosanna Arquette) and Angie ("A Thin Line Between Love and Hate's" Lynn Whitfield) come onto the scene. Christopher Cain ("The Next Karate Kid") directs this Hollywood Pictures effort, which was held from summer 1996; Jill Mazursky Cody and Jeffrey Abrams (the duo who wrote "Taking Care of Business") script; Caravan's Roger Birnbaum and Julie Bergman Sender produce. (Buena Vista, 8/8)

Trial and Error

Charlie Tuttle ("Fly Away Home's" Jeff Daniels) has an important court date, one that could destroy or promote his career. Too bad he's a mess from the bachelor party he attended the night before. Luckily, his best friend ("Unstrung Heroes'" Michael Richards), an actor by profession, decides to take on his role of attorney. Rip Torn ("Defending Your Life") and Charlize Theron (also in "The Devil's Advocate") co-star. Jonathan Lynn ("My Cousin Vinny") directs; Sara Bernstein and Gregory Bernstein script; Gary Ross (writer of "Big") produces. (New Line, 8/29)

Great Expectations

In this contemporary updating of the Charles Dickens classic, a young fisherman becomes an artist and moves from Florida to New York for his first gallery opening. He must face troubles of the heart and soul when he discovers that the young woman he's long loved from afar will never love him, and that his career success has been funded by an escaped convict he aided in years past. Ethan Hawke ("Before Sunrise"), Gwyneth Paltrow ("Emma"), Robert De Niro, Anne Bancroft and Chris Cooper ("Lone Star") star. Alfonso Cuaron ("The Little Princess") directs; Mitch Glazer ("Three of Hearts") scripts; Art Linson ("Heat") produces. (Fox, August)

Steel

When a top-secret weapon he designed for the military falls into the hands of a street gang, metal specialist John Henry Irons forges a mission to stop the hoods—especially given that a worldwide crime organization has been eyeing the goods. Irons creates an armor suit and an alter ego perhaps even the brigands can't break. L.A. Lakers center Shaquille O'Neal ("Kazaam"), Judd Nelson ("New Jack City"), Annabeth Gish ("The Last Supper"), Richard Roundtree, Irma P. Hall and Ray J. Norwood star. Kenneth Johnson ("Short Circuit II") directs and scripts; music maven Quincy Jones produces with David Salzman and Joel Simon ("Hard to Kill"). (Warner, August)

Mortal Kombat II: Annihilation

This action/thriller sequel picks up where the original left off, as brave men and women attempt to overthrow a maniacal warlord planning to rule the Earth. Original stars Christopher Lambert, Robin Shou and Talisa Soto return with Deron McBee, Irina Pantaeva and Lynn Red Williams. John Leonetti ("Child's Play 3") directs; Brent V. Friedman ("Hellbound") and Bryce Zable script; Larry Kasanoff produces. (New Line, 8/1)

Desperate Measures

After finding a bone marrow donor for his sick son, police officer Frank Connor ("Hero's" Andy Garcia) gets more than he bargained for in this suspense thriller: The donor turns out to be a dangerously vicious murderer ("Multiplicity's" Michael Keaton, in a change-of-pace role) who plans to use the hospital setting to escape. Connor must both protect and contain the killer. Barbet Schroeder ("Single White Female") directs; David Klass, Henry Bean ("Internal Affairs") and Neal Jimenez ("Anaconda") script; Schroeder produces with Susan Hoffman (also "Single White Female"), Lee Rich and Gary Foster ("Tin Cup"). (TriStar, 8/8)

The Truman Show

Jim Carrey stars as Truman Burbank, a man whose every moment has been filmed by hidden cameras for a documentary soap opera. But, surrounded by actors who play his friends and family, Truman doesn't know of his superstardom—or even that he's on TV. When he learns the truth, he decides to escape the 24-hour surveillance. Dennis Hopper and Laura Linney ("Primal Fear") co-star. Peter Weir ("Fearless") directs; Andrew M. Niccol ("Gattaca") scripts, and he produces with Scott Rudin ("In and Out"). (Paramount, August/summer)

Spawn

Six years after his murder, government agent Al Simmons (Michael Jai White) returns to Earth as Spawn, a man with supernatural powers. Though he longs to avenge his own death, Spawn must choose between revenge or saving his loved ones from the menacing Violator ("The Pest's" John Leguizamo). Mark Dippe directs this adaptation of Todd McFarlane's comic book; Clint Goldman and Steve Williams produce. (New Line, 8/22)

The Full Monty

An unemployed steel worker, Gaz ("Trainspotting's" Robert Carlyle) has a crazy idea when the Chippendale dancers come to town: He decides to start his own dance team of steelworkers, including his best friend, a former foreman, an oldtimer, a handyman and a security guard with a death wish. Pretty soon, they're taking it all off. Mark Addy, William Snape, Steve Huison, Tom

Event Horizon

In 2046, a rescue team travels through the solar system, searching for a prototype of a spaceship that's been missing for seven years. What they find is a shocking secret. This science-fiction thriller stars Laurence Fishburne ("Othello"), Sam Neill ("Jurassic Park"), Kathleen Quinlan ("Apollo 13") and Joely Richardson ("101 Dalmatians"). Paul Anderson ("Mortal Kombat") directs; Philip Eisner scripts; Lawrence Gordon (who made the "Die Hard" series), Lloyd Levin ("The Rocketeer") and Jeremy Bolt produce. (Paramount, August/summer)

Wilkinson, Paul Barber and Hugo Speer co-star in this comedy. Peter Cattaneo directs; Simon Beaufoy scripts; Uberto Pasolini ("Palookaville") produces. (Fox Searchlight, August)

Mrs. Dalloway

In this adaptation of the Virginia Woolf novel, an older British woman in 1920s London recalls a summer day spent in the country in 1890, when she was beautiful and much courted. Three decades later, a key suitor from that day arrives, and subsequent events intertwine her fate with that of a tragic young man—a young man she will never meet. Vanessa Redgrave and Natascha McElhone ("Surviving Picasso") star with Rupert Graves ("Damage") and Michael Kitchen. Marleen Gorris, who directed the Oscar-winning "Antonia's Line" (also a First Look release), directs; actress-turned-writer Eileen Atkins ("The Dresser") scripts; Lisa Katselas Pare and Stephen Bayly ("The Diamond's Edge") produce. (First Look, August)

nowhere

Gregg Araki ("The Doom Generation") writes and directs this film about a day in the lives of a

COPLAND

A hearing-impaired sheriff (Sylvester Stallone) keeps the peace in a small New Jersey burg in which a number of New York police officers live. When a criminal investigation points toward his town, the sheriff must decide whether to protect the NYPD officers he idolizes or uphold the law. Harvey Keitel, Ray Liotta, Robert De Niro, Peter Berg ("The Last Seduction"), Janeane Garofalo ("The Truth About Cats and Dogs"), Michael Rapaport ("Metro") and Annabella Sciorra ("The Funeral") co-star. James Mangold ("Heavy") directs and scripts; Cary Woods ("Citizen Ruth") produces. (Miramax, 8/1)

Gold Medal...the most profitable poppers & funfood equipment

Improving the way the world makes funfood.

The Astro-Pop 20 delivers perfectly popped corn every time and is just one of the top quality theatre poppers available from Gold Medal. Sleek stainless steel designs and illuminated headers attract customers' attention and provide decades of dependable service!

High volume concession stands need a high capacity floor model warmer! Provides fast heat-up and even "holding" temperatures from top to bottom!

Gold Medal's newest hot dog cart has a stainless steel cabinet and long life expectency. Stainless steel bun warmer and sneeze guard are available.

Display your pizza and pretzels with Gold Medal's Combo Pizza/Pretzel humidified cabinet. Ultra small space required.

Call, write or fax today for our theatre popper brochure!
CALL TOLL FREE 1-800-543-0862
FAX TOLL FREE 1-800-542-1496

See us at ShoWest Booths #617-618, #701-702

GOLD MEDAL® PRODUCTS CO.
35 World Headquarters Bldg., 2001 Dalton Ave., Cincinnati, OH 45214
(513) 381-1313 • Fax (513) 381-1570 E-Mail: goldme19@eos.net

Response No. 14

group of wild L.A. teenagers: Handjob is doing drug deals, Montgomery fights a sexually harassing alien, and Dark dreams of an erotic fantasyland. James Duval (also "The Doom Generation"), Heather Graham ("Six Degrees of Separation"), Beverly D'Angelo ("Vegas Vacation"), former XXX actress Traci Lords ("Cry-Baby"), Shannen Doherty ("Mallrats"), John Ritter ("Slingblade"), Christopher Knight and Eve Plumb (TV's "Brady Bunch") star. Andrea Sperling and Nicole Arbib produce. (Fine Line, 8/22 ltd)

Full Speed

"Full Speed" explores the impetuousness and mortality of youth in a story about a young man named Samir who, after his best friend Rick dies, is overwhelmed by guilt and closes off from the world. Meanwhile, another group of friends—Quentin, Julie and Jimmy—is enjoying their youth. When Samir meets Quentin, all of their relationships change forever. Elodie Bouchez, Stephane Rideau, Pascal Servo, Meziane Bardadi, Romain Auger, Salim Kechiouche and Mohammed Dib star in this foreign-langauge film. Gael Morel directs and co-scripts; Laurent Benegui produces. (Strand, August)

How to Be a Player

A romeo (Bill Bellamy, best known from the cable show "MTV Jams") has his many-dalliances-at-once life disrupted by, of all things, the anthropology project of his sister ("B.A.P.s' "Natalie Desselle). Pierre Edwards co-stars. Lionel C. Martin directs; Troy Beyer scripts; Mark Burg, Todd Baker, Preston Holmes, Stan Lathan and Russell Simmons produce. (Gramercy, August)

An American Werewolf in Paris

In this sequel to the 1981 horror hit "An American Werewolf in London," the setting moves to the City of Light and the lead cast becomes Julie Delpy ("Before Sunrise"), Tom Everett Scott ("That Thing You Do!") and Julie Bowen. Anthony Waller (who helmed Sony Classics' "Mute Witness") directs and scripts; Richard Claus produces. (Miramax, 8/29 tent.)

SUMMER

Out to Sea

This romantic comedy follows the "Grumpy Old Men" duo of Walter Matthau and Jack Lemmon as they make mischief on the seas. A rogue (Matthau) persuades his brother-in-law (Lemmon) to be a dance instructor on a cruise liner so they can scheme to meet women and con money from them. Elaine Stritch, Dyan Cannon and Gloria DeHaven co-star. Martha Coolidge ("Three Wishes") directs; Robert Jacobs scripts; John Davis and David T. Friendly produce. (Fox, summer)

Free Willy 3

Willy the whale finds himself in high-seas trouble again. This time, an illegal whaling operation threatens the lives of the orca and his pod. Luckily, Willy's friend Jesse (Jason James Richter, reprising his role), now a 17-year-old whale tracker on a research vessel, teams with the 10-year-old son of the illegal whaler to attempt to save his friend. August Schellenberg and Annie Corley again co-star. Sam Pillsbury ("Starlight Hotel") directs; John Mattson ("Milk Money") scripts; Jennie Lew Tugend again produces. (Warner, summer)

A Simple Wish

Little Anabel Greening ("Matilda's" Mara Wilson) knows her father ("Michael's" Robert Pastorelli) longs to become a Broadway actor. Wanting to help him, Anabel wishes for a fairy godmother—but she gets Murray ("Mars Attacks!'s" Martin Short), the only male spellcaster and not a very good one at that. Then an evil fairy godmother (Kathleen Turner) arrives with a plan to rule the world's wishes. Michael Ritchie ("Cool Runnings") directs; Jeff Rothberg ("Hiding Out") scripts; Sid Sheinberg produces with sons Bill and Jon Sheinberg for their Bubble Factory. (Universal, summer/fall)

Ulee's Gold

Peter Fonda ("John Carpenter's Escape From L.A.") stars as Ulee Jackson, a bookkeeper who lives a quiet life with his two granddaughters in the Florida Panhandle. His wife deceased, his son Jimmy in jail, and his daughter-in-law Helen disappeared, Ulee wants only a peaceful existence. But soon Helen is in danger, and Ulee must rally to bring her home. Patricia Richardson (TV's "Home Improvement"), Christine Dunford, Jessica Biel, Vanessa Zima, Steven Flynn and J. Kenneth Campbell co-star. "Ulee's Gold" is directed, written and produced by Victor Nunez (the acclaimed "Ruby in Paradise"). (Orion, summer)

Napolean

This live-action film about a golden retriever puppy is set in the Australian wilderness, where Napolean (voiced by Adam Wylie) is carried when he proves too curious for his own good and he slips into a hot-air balloon. There, he befriends a parrot named Birdo (Bronson Pinchot), who helps guide him in the right direction. Debra Mooney, David Ogden Stiers, Wendy Makkena, Joan Rivers, Barry Humphries and Blythe Danner provide other voices. Mario Andreacchio directs, co-scripts and produces; Mark Saltzman and producer Michael Bourchier also help in scripting. (Goldwyn, summer)

This Is the Sea

In this Northern Ireland variation on the Romeo and Juliet theme, Hazel Stokes is a teenage daughter of a Protestant farmer and Malachy McAliskey is a Catholic young man in Belfast; when they meet, it's love among the ruins, as they are swept away by passions despite lingering animosity between their peoples. Richard Harris ("The Field"), Gabriel Bryne ("Into the West"), John Lynch ("Nothing Personal"), Samantha Morton and Marc O'Shea star. Mary McGuckian directs and scripts; Michael Garland produces. (First Look, summer)

Woman in the Dunes

Hiroshi Teshigahara's 1964 Oscar-nominated Japanese film is re-released with new prints. "Woman in the Dunes" follows an entomologist (Eiji Okada) who studies sand beetles. When he needs shelter, the villagers take him to the home of a widow (Kyoko Kishida). Her hut stands at the bottom of a pit, which continually fills with sand. In order to survive, the trapped man must constantly shovel while relying on the widow for food and drink. Before long, his hatred changes to passion. (Milestone, summer)

Antonio Gaudi

This 1985 Japanese film, like "Woman in the Dunes" directed by Hiroshi Teshigahara, explores the life of early 20th century architect Antonio Gaudi. Influenced by the architecture of the Spanish Middle Ages, Gaudi transforms the buildings of Barcelona, with the Temple of Sagrada Familia his crowning achievement. (Milestone, summer)

Slaves to the Underground

The story of three hipsters caught in a painful love triangle, "Slaves to the Underground" begins with musician Shelly, after being raped, dropping her writer boyfriend Jimmy and taking up with Suzy, the lead singer of an all-girl band named No Exits. Just as the girls are on the verge of success, Jimmy and Shelly rekindle their love affair, infuriating a possessive Suzy, who throws Shelly out of the band and her house. Marisa Ryan, Molly Gross and Jason Bortz star. Kristine Peterson (assistant director on "The Search for Signs of Intelligent Life") directs, and she produces with Raquel Caballes and scripter Bill Cody. (First Look, summer)

Deep Crimson

Directed by Mexican filmmaker Arturo Ripstein ("The Queen of the Night"), "Deep Crimson" follows the tragic life of Coral, a lonely mother well past her prime. When she meets handsome Nicolas, she knows he's a ruthless philanderer but leaves her children to be with him anyway and help him profit by seducing and robbing women. Regina Orozco, Daniel Gimenez Cacho, Marisa Paredes ("High Heels"), Julieta Egurrola, Patricia Reyes Espindola and Rosa Furman star. Paz Alicia Garciadiego scripts; Miguel Necoeches and Pablo Barbachano produce. (New Yorker, summer)

A Smile Like Yours

In this romantic comedy, a young married couple—he a construction contractor ("Dear God's" Greg Kinnear), she an aromatherapist ("Turbulence's" Lauren Holly)—are struggling to have a baby and juggle their careers. Meanwhile, a beautiful architect (Jill Hennessy) and a wealthy tycoon (Christopher McDonald, also in "Leave It to Beaver") bring outside pressures to the duo's happy marriage. Joan Cusack (also in "In and Out") and Jay Thomas co-star. Rysher CEO Keith Samples makes his directing debut, and he scripts with Kevin Meyer; David Kirkpatrick ("The Evening Star") and Tony Amatullo produce. (Paramount, summer)

Douglas Adams' Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy

Based on the cult sci-fi novel by Douglas Adams, this film tells the story of Arthur Dent (Adams), who is abducted from Earth—before it is destroyed—by his friend Ford. They then embark on an intergalactic journey that takes them on a host of off-kilter adventures through outer space. Neil Davies directs; Robin Barty-King produces. (Dove, summer)

Nights of Cabiria

In this reissue of Federico Fellini's 1957 Italian-language drama, Giulietta Masina, Francois Perier, Amedeo Nazzari, Franca Marzi and Dorian Gray star in a bittersweet story (which on Broadway and in Hollywood became the Bob Fosse musical "Sweet Charity") about a Roman prostitute who dreams of attaining respectability and romance. Fellini co-scripts with Ennio Flaiano and Tullio Pinelli; Dino De Laurentiis produces for Les Films Marceau; Nino Rota provides the film's score. (Strand, summer)

This World, Then the Fireworks

In yet another filmic adaptation of pulp fictioneer Jim Thompson's work, Billy Zane ("The Phantom"), Gina Gershon ("Bound"), Sheryl Lee ("Mother Night") and Rue McClanahan star in a story of murder, blackmail, drugs, sexual abuse, whoring, duplicity, incest, patricide and deceit in a crime movie that its director, Michael Oblowitz, describes as "film tres noir." Larry Gross adapts; Chris Hanley, Brad Wyman and Larry Gross produce. The film screened at the recent Sundance festival. (Orion, summer)

Inside the Goldmine

When Jordan and his friend Clyde become suspects in a murder case, they are forced to reevaluate their friendship— especially when Jordan must decide whether to ask his Hollywood producer father to bail them out. Writer/director Josh Evans ("The Doors") stars with Alan Marshall, Gary Chazan, Alicia Tully Jensen and Charlie Spradling; actor Adam Stern ("The Competition") produces. (Dove, summer)

La Sentinelle

Emmanuel Salinger stars in this 2 1/2-hour French-langauge thriller for director Arnaud Desplechin. (Strand, summer)

Forever Mozart

Cinematic iconoclast Jean-Luc Godard in this French-language feature ruminates on the relationship between art and politics and the role of the cinema as he weaves together four storylines: In each, an elderly director is attempting to cast and film a movie about recent events in Bosnia. Ingrid Rubio, Carlos Fuentes and Agata Lys star; Godard also scripts; Alain Sarde and Ruth Waldenburger produce. (New Yorker, summer)

For May movie releases, see our April issue's Trailers section.

SHOWEST 1997
BALLY'S LAS VEGAS HOTEL
LAS VEGAS, NEVADA • MARCH 3-6, 1997
TENTATIVE SCHEDULE OF EVENTS

MONDAY, MARCH 3

7:00 a.m.	Al Lapidus Variety Club Golf Classic	Angel Park
9:00 a.m.	Lapidus Variety Club Tennis Classic	Bally's Courts
10:30 a.m.	*International Industry Address	Pacific Ballroom (second floor, south tower)
11:00 a.m.	*International Panel	Pacific Ballroom (second floor, south tower)
12:30 p.m.	*International Delegates Luncheon. Host: Buena Vista Intl.	Celebrity Room (casino level)
2:30 p.m.	*International Panel	Pacific Ballroom (second floor, south tower)
4:00 p.m.	*International Reception. Host: Columbia TriStar Intl.	TBA
6:00 p.m.	Keynote Address: MGM Inc. chairman & CEO Frank Mancuso. Presentation of the Robert W. Selig ShoWester of the Year Award to Sony/Loews Theatres chairman Barrie Lawson Loeks	Celebrity Room (casino level)
7:00 p.m.	Welcoming Reception. Hosts: Eastman Kodak and Imax Corp.	TBA

By Invitation Only*

TUESDAY, MARCH 4

8:00 a.m.	Breakfast. Host: Nestle. Presentation of the B.V. Sturdivant Award to R/C Theatres president of operations J. Wayne Anderson; Customer Service Award to John Greiner, AMC; NAC Bert Nathan Memorial Award to Proctor Cos. president Bruce Proctor	Pacific Ballroom (second floor, south tower)
9:45 a.m.	Opening Ceremonies	Celebrity Room (casino level)
10:45 a.m.	Panel. Host: The Hollywood Reporter	Celebrity Room (casino level)
12:15 p.m.	Event. Host: Sony Pictures	Bally's Events Center
2:00 p.m.-7:00 p.m.	Trade Fair	Pavilion
3:30 p.m.	Panel Workshops. Host: The Hollywood Reporter	Las Vegas Rooms (third floor, south tower)
4:30 p.m.	The Hollywood Reporter Movie T.E.A.M. Awards	Las Vegas Rooms (third floor, south tower)
6:30 p.m.	Reception. Host: Trimark Pictures	Pacific Ballroom (second floor, south tower)
8:00 p.m.	Event. Host: 20th Century Fox	Bally's Hotel

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 5

8:00 a.m.	Breakfast. Host: Reynolds & Reynolds. Ida Schreiber Award to Ann Craft, secretary and general manager of the Theatre Owners of Indiana	Pacific Ballroom (second floor, south tower)
10:00 a.m.	Panel. Hosts: CFI and Variety	Celebrity Room (casino level)
12:15 p.m.	Event. Host: Warner Bros.	Bally's Events Center
2:00 p.m.-6:30 p.m.	Trade Fair	Pavilion
4:30 p.m.	Panel Workshops. Hosts: CFI and Variety	Las Vegas Rooms (third floor, south tower)
6:30 p.m.	Reception. Host: Pepsi-Cola Co.	Pacific Ballroom (second floor, south tower)
8:15 p.m.	Event. Host: Paramount Pictures	Bally's Events Center

THURSDAY, MARCH 6

8:00 a.m.-12 noon	Trade Fair	Pavilion
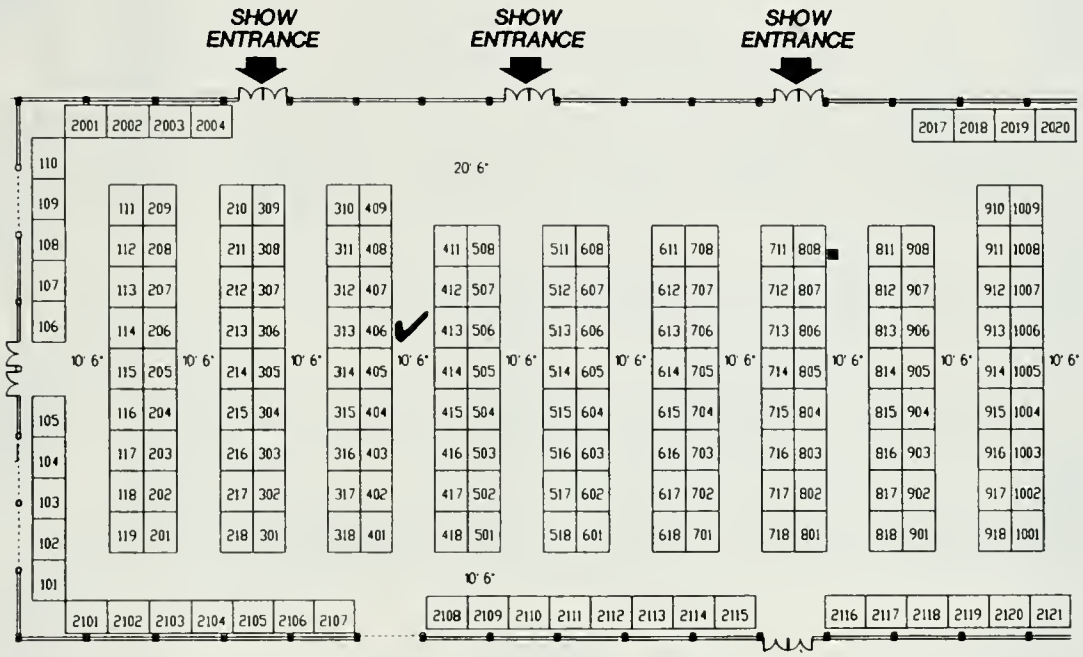
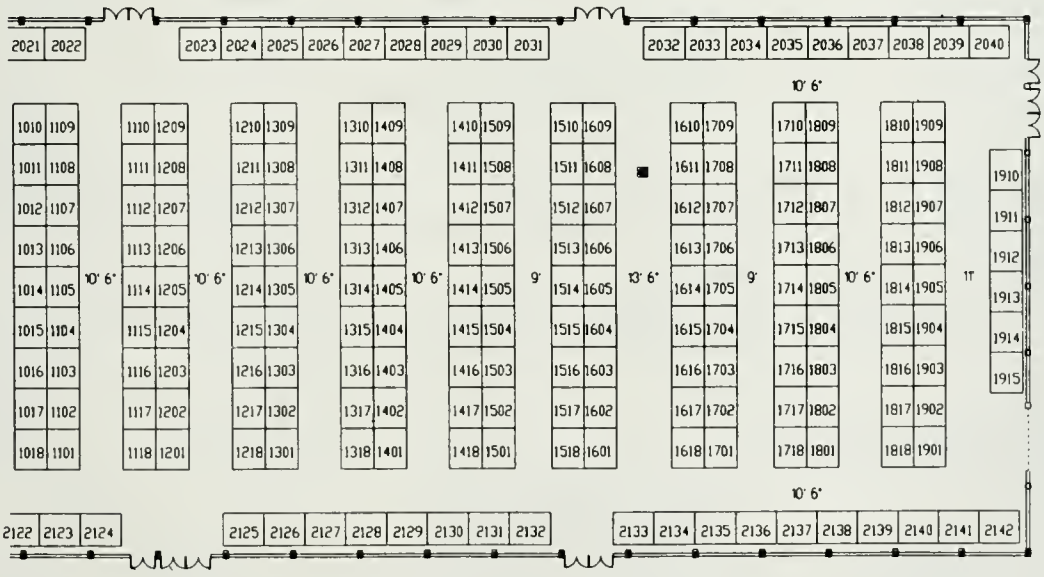
9:00 a.m.	Exhibitor Relations Open House	Pacific Ballroom (second floor, south tower)
12:15 p.m.	Event. Host: New Line Cinema	Bally's Events Center
3:00 p.m.	Specialized Market Reception	Skyview Rooms (26th floor, north tower)
6:00 p.m.	The ShoWest Awards (live telecast). Host: Sinbad	MGM Grand Garden
8:00 p.m.	Wrap Party. Host: The Coca-Cola Co.	MGM Grand Hotel

SHOWEST 1997
TRADE SHOW FLOOR PLAN



South End:

Tennis Courts



Bally's

COME VISIT WITH BOXOFFICE AT BOOTH # 406!

406 ✔

North End:

(Our Trade Show Booth List Begins On The Next Page)

SHOWEST 1997
TRADE SHOW BOOTH LIST

ACORTO.....1413-1414
1287 120th Ave. NE, Bellvue, WA 98005
206-453-2800 or fax 206-453-2167
Fully automatic espresso machines.

ADAMS & BROOKS 808
1915 S. Hoover St., Los Angeles, CA 90007
213-749-3226 or fax 213-746-7614
Candy: P-Nuttles, Cup-O-Gold, more.

AMERICAN CINEMA EQUIP. 1515
1959 NW Kearney
Portland, OR 97209
503-226-2737 or fax 503-525-1966
Point of sale boxoffice ticketing.

AMERICAN DESK 717-718/801-802
P.O. Box 6107, Temple, TX 76503
817-773-1776 or fax 817-773-3838
Fixed theatre seating, rockers and loungers.

AMERICAN INTL. CONCESSION 1105-1107
20 Dubon Ct, Farmingdale, NY 11735-1008
516-420-1868 or fax 516-593-4328
Sour Patch Kids, Bon Bons Ice Cream, syrups.

AMERICAN LICORICE CO. 913
P.O. Box 826, Union City, CA 94587
510-487-5500 or fax 510-487-2517
Licorice, multiple varieties.

AMPAC THEATRE CLEANING SERVICS 2027
P.O. Box 421, Monterrey, CA 93942
408-372-3728 or fax 408-373-3490
Janitorial services, screen/carpet cleaning.

ATLAS SPECIALTY LIGHTING 1914
7304 N. Florida Ave., Tampa, FL 33604
813-238-6481 or fax 813-238-6656
Xenon lamps, projection lamps.

AVASK, INC. 2141
75 West Forest Ave., Englewood, NY 07631
201-567-7300 or fax 201-569-6285
Feed safe automatic polyester film production.

BAG END 1907
22272 N. Pepper Rd. Unit D, Barrington, IL 60010
847-382-4550 or fax 847-382-4551

BAGCRAFT CORP. OF AMERICA 903
3900 W. 43rd St., Chicago, IL 60632
312-254-8000 or fax 312-254-8204
Stand-up popcorn bags, Honeycomb Foil bags for theatre concessions.

BANNER CANDY MFG. CORP. 715-716
700 Liberty Avenue, Brooklyn, NY 11208
718-647-4747 or fax 718-647-7192
Candy-coated and chocolate-covered products.

BASS INDUSTRIES INC. 2125
380 NE 67th St., Miami, FL 33138
305-751-2716 or fax 305-756-6165
Marquees, illuminated theatre signage.

BGW SYSTEMS 2024
13130 S. Yukon Ave., Hawthorne, CA 90251
310-973-8090 or fax 310-676-6713
Amplifiers, sub-woofers, computers.

BILMAR FOODS 1516
428 Springwood Drive, Roselle, IL 60172
630-980-1443 or fax 630-980-1441

BOCA SYSTEMS, INC 1406
1065 S. Rogers Circle, Boca Raton, FL 33487
561-998-9600 or fax 561-998-8813

BOSTON LIGHT & SOUND 1601-1603
124 Brighton Avenue, Boston, MA 02134
617-787-3131 or fax 617-787-4758
Projection and sound equipment, service and installation.

BOXOFFICE MAGAZINE 406
6640 Sunset Blvd., Suite 100, Hollywood, CA 90028
213-465-1186 or fax 213-465-5049
The business magazine of the global motion picture industry. Info on upcoming films, theatres, new products.

BOYD COFFEE CO. 101
19730 NE Sandy Blvd., Portland, OR 97230
503-666-4545 or fax 503-669-2223
Gourmet coffees and brewing equipment.

BRACH & BROCK CONFECTIONS 117/118
4120 Jersey Pike, Chattanoga, TN 37421
423-510-7223 or fax 423-510-7148
Turnkey loose candy program.

BREJTFUS.....2003/2004
401 S. Madison Dr., Tempe, AZ 85034
602-731-9899 or fax 602-731-9469
Acoustic panels, artistic sound panels.

C. CRETORS & CO. 707/708
3243 N. California Ave., Chicago, IL 60618
312-588-1690 or fax 312-588-2171
Popcorn poppers, supplies, accessories.

C.R. LAWRENCE 1805
P.O. Box 58923, Los Angeles, CA 90058-0923
213-588-1281 or fax 213-581-6522
Manufacture bullet-resistant windows, etc.

CADDY/MTS NW SOUND 2120-2122
7667 Cahill Rd., Minneapolis, MN 55439
800-845-0591 or fax 612-829-0166
Front or back mounted cupholders.

CALIFORNIA SEATING 2031
12455 Branford St. #16B, Arleta, CA 91331
818-890-SEAT or fax 818-581-0226
New and used chairs, reupholsteries, seat covers.

CAPSTONE PRODUCTS 1216
203 Flagship Drive, Lutz, FL 33549
813-948-2707 or fax 813-948-2907
Re-attatchable chair bases.

CARGILL INC. 203
P.O. Box 5693/Lake Office Minneapolis, MN 55440
612-742-2937 or fax 612-742-5503
PopWise popping and topping oil

THE CAWLEY CO. 1803
1544 N. 8th St., Manitowoc, WI 54221
800-822-9539 or fax 414-682-5520

CELESTIAL PRODUCTS 1206
14009 Dinard Ave., Santa Fe Springs, CA 90670
310-802-8811 or fax 310-802-2882
Decorative and aisle lighting products.

CHINA MIST TEA CO. 2127
14626-A N. 78th Way, Scottsdale, AZ 85260
800-242-8807 or fax 602-443-8384
Gourmet fresh-brewed iced tea systems.

CHRISTIE INC. 811-812/907-908
10550 Camden Dr., Cypress, CA 90630
714-236-8610 or fax 714-229-3185
Projectors, Xenon consoles, rewinds, bulbs.

CINEMA CONCEPTS THEATRE SERVICE ..111
2030 Powers Ferry Rd., Atlanta, GA 30339
770-956-7460 or fax 770-956-8358
Custom and generic pre-show trailers, slides.

CINEMA FILM SYSTEMS 310-311/407-409
791 N. Bensen Ave. #E, Upland, CA 91786
909-931-9318 or fax 909-949-8815
Projection accessories.

CINEMA SERVICES/LIGHTING 1705
407 Old County Road, Belmont, CA 94002
415-595-5496 or fax 415-595-5197
Theatre remodeling, seat installation, low-voltage lighting, etc.

CINEMA XENON 1517
7613 LeBerthon Street, Tujunga, CA 91042
818-352-6448 or fax 818-353-4091
Xenon arc lamps.

CINEMECCANICA US INC. 417-418/501-502
8753 Lion Street, Rancho Cucamonga, CA 91730
909-481-5842 or fax 909-481-5845
Projectors, lamphouses, sound, rectifiers.

COASTERS, INC. 1217-1218
198 E. Blythedale Avenue, Mill Valley, CA 94941
415-389-8322 or fax 415-389-5452
Theatre seat renovation.

COCA-COLA 411-416/503-508/511-516/603-608
P.O. Box 1734, Atlanta, GA 30301
404-676-8622 or fax 404-676-3605
Coke Classic, Diet Coke, Sprite, Hi-C, more.

COLGATE PALMOLIVE 2104
101 N. Summit St., Tenafly, NJ 07670
201-568-2330 or fax 201-568-0953
Ajax, Palmolive, Murphy's Oil, more.

COMPONENT ENGINEERING CO. 2029
3601 Gilman Ave. W., Seattle, WA 98199
206-284-9171 or fax 206-286-4462
Sound head conversions: SR*D Digital Sound. Cue detectors, more.

CREST AUDIO 2118
100 Eisenhower Dr., Paramus, NJ 07652
201-909-8700 or fax 201-909-8744
Professional power amplifiers, mixing consoles, digital control systems.

CY YOUNG INC. 1204-1205
1270 N. Winchester, Olathe, KS 66061
913-780-1776 or fax 913-780-0756
Cupholders, child boosters, patron trays, seat renovations.

DART CONTAINER CORP. 1415
500 Hogsback Rd., Mason, MI 48854
517-676-3800 or fax 517-676-3244
Cups, containers, bowls and food trays.

DAVID TYSON LIGHTING 115
P.O. Box 1932, Callahan, FL 32011
904-730-5119 or fax 904-730-5105
GE supplier for theatres.

DECOUSTICS.....108
65 Disco Rd., Etobicoke, Ont. M9W 1M2 CANADA
416-675-3983 or fax 416-675-5546
"Metallo" sound absorption materials.

NCS CORPORATION

WORLDWIDE CINEMA SUPPLY DEALER

THEATRE EXHIBITION EQUIPMENT

XENON BULBS

BOOTH SUPPLIES & LENSES

FILM PROJECTORS & PLATTER SYSTEMS

LAMPHOUSES & CONSOLES

SOUND SYSTEMS & COMPONENTS

SCREENS & FRAMES

AND MUCH MORE!

★ ONE STOP SHOPPING SOURCE

★ FACTORY DIRECT PRICING

★ TOLL FREE ORDERING

NEW! ★ MAJOR CREDIT CARDS ACCEPTED ★ NEW!

★ PROFESSIONAL SUPPORT TEAM

★ WORLDWIDE PRODUCT DISTRIBUTION

★ OUR GUARANTEE - 100% SATISFACTION

NCS 1926 70 YEARS 1996 CORPORATION

Cinema Exhibition Equipment
800-776-6271
Concession Equipment
800-733-7278

or your nearest NCS Sales Office

Cincinnati (513) 352-0606
Kansas City (913) 492-0966
Los Angeles (818) 367-1106
Tampa (813) 884-7909
Ridgefield, CT (203) 438-3405

Theatre Equipment Association

VISA MasterCard AMERICAN EXPRESS Cards

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF CONCESSIONAIRES NAC

Supplying the Entertainment Industry Since 1926

CONCESSION & LOBBY PRODUCTS

CUSTOM CONCESSION CASEWORK

LOBBY & BOX OFFICE FIXTURES

POPCORN & BEVERAGE EQUIPMENT

HOT DOG & NACHO EQUIPMENT

FREEZERS, REFRIGERATORS & ICE MACHINES

NEW & USED EQUIPMENT

AND MUCH MORE!

TRADE SHOW BOOTH LIST

DIGITAL THEATER SYSTEMS 315-318/401-404
31352 Via Colinas #101
Westlake Village, CA 91362
818-706-3525 or fax 818-706-1868
DTS digital sound systems for movie theatres.

DOLBY LABORATORIES ...1210-1212/1307-1309
100 Potrero Ave.
San Francisco, CA 94103
415-558-0200 or fax 415-863-1373
Dolby processors, noise reduction.

DR. PEPPER CO. 109-110
P.O. Box 665086, Dallas, TX 75265
214-360-7781 or fax 214-360-7789
Dr. Pepper, Diet Dr. Pepper beverages, syrups.

DURAFORM.....216
1435 S. Santa Fe Avenue, Compton, CA 90221
310-761-1640 or fax 310-761-1646
Fiberglass trash receptacles and benches.

DURKAN PATTERNED CARPET 1312-1313
405 Virgil Dr., Dalton, GA 30720
706-278-7037 or fax 706-279-8360
Custom commercial carpet.

E.M.C.I./KELLOGG'S.....2129
8112 South Farm Brook Way, Sandy, UT 84093
801-943-6490 or fax 801-943-6436
Kellogg's rice krispie treats.

EISENBERG SAUSAGE CO. 803
3531 N. Elston Ave., Chicago, IL 60618
312-588-2882 or fax 312-588-0810
Gourmet pure-beef franks.

ELECTRONICS CREATIONS, INC. 1908
1153 Inspiration Lane, Escondido, CA 92025
619-480-1002 or fax 619-480-6830
Theatre ticketing systems, concessions, more.

EPRAD INC. 1014
P.O. Box 73, Rossford, OH 43460
419-666-3266 or fax 419-666-6534
Automations: sound systems, light dimmers, etc.

FASHION SEAL/SHANE UNIF. 2140
10099 Seminole Blvd, P.O. Box 4002
Seminole, FL 34642
813-397-9611 or fax 813-393-0238

FAST-AD INC. 2019-A
220-224 S. Centre St., Santa Ana, CA 92703
714-835-9353 or fax 714-835-4805
Letters for theatre marquees and accessories.

FDC-TECHNOLOGIES.....1612-1613
601 Corporate Circle, Golden, CO 80401
303-384-1401 or fax 303-384-1419
Integrated boxoffice, concession and management systems.

FEDERAL SIGN COMPANY 1912-1913
13346 1st Avenue, NE, Seattle, WA 98125
206-361-6600 (ext.222) or fax 206-361-6500

FIBREOPTICS.....1910-1911
309 S. Cloverdale St., #D-2, Seattle, WA 98108
206-762-2922 or fax 206-762-3503
Custom fiberoptic signs and displays.

FIGUERAS INTL. SEATING 1808-1809
08186 Llica De Munt, Barcelona, SPAIN
34-3-841-4119 or fax 34-3-841-4017 or 6437

FILMACK STUDIOS 313
1327 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, IL 60605
312-427-3395 or fax 312-427-4866
Custom 35mm motion picture film trailers, slides.

FLAVOR WEAR 1909
28425 S. Cole Grade Rd., Valley Center, CA 92082
619-749-1332 or fax 619-749-6164
Manufacturer of high-quality uniforms, including new Showbiz line.

FOLZ VENDING COMPANY 2135-2136
3401 Lawson Blvd., Oceanside, NY 11572
800-699-8108 (ext 223) or fax 516-678-3644

G&S ACOUSTICS 2123
5901 Elizabeth Avenue, St. Louis, MO 63110-1992
314-781-1422 or fax 314-781-3836
Fabric covered acoustical wall panels.

GEMINI.....306
103 Mensing Way, Cannon Falls, MN 55009
507-263-3957 or fax 507-263-4887
Marquees, plastic letters, metal letters, tracks.

GLASSFORM.....1813
43 Saratoga, Batavia, IL 60510
800-995-8322 or fax 630-761-8859
Fiberglass trash receptacles and planters.

GLOBE TICKET & LABEL CO. 1707
3435 Empire Blvd. SW, Atlanta, GA 30354
404-762-9711 or fax 404-762-9260
Custom ticket printing and computer ticketing.

GODIVA CHOCOLATIER 1102-1103
c/o 24 E. 22nd St., New York, NY 10010
212-984-5914 or fax 212-980-3537
Gourmet coffees and delectable premium chocolates.

GOLD MEDAL PRODUCTS CO. 617-618/701-702
2001 Dalton Ave., Cincinnati, OH, 45214
513-381-1313 or fax 513-381-1570
Snack bar equipment and supplies.

GOLDBERG BROTHERS INC. 914
P.O. Box 17048, Denver, CO 80217
303-321-1099 or fax 303-388-0749
Projection booth supplies.

GREAT WESTERN PRODUCTS CO. 1617-1618
1898 Leland Dr. S.E., Marietta, GA 30067
770-952-4700 or fax 770-952-7749
Popcorn and nacho supplies, toppings.

HAFLER PROFESSIONAL 1416
546 S. Rockford Dr., Tempe, AZ 85281
800-366-1619 or fax 602-894-1528
Audio amplifiers.

THE HAAGEN-DAZS CO. 915
17043 E. Green Drive, City of Industry, CA 91745
818-964-5797 or fax 818-965-3889
Ice cream.

HARIBO OF AMERICA INC. 1213
1825 Woodlawn Dr. #204, Baltimore, MD 21207
800-638-2327 or fax 410-265-8898
Haribo Gold Bears, "the original gummy bears."

HENRY ARCHITECTS 2137
2125 Western Ave. #200, Seattle, WA 98121
206-448-6265 or fax 206-448-5856
Cinema architecture and interior design.

HERMAN GOELITZ CANDY CO. 1303
2400 N. Watney Way, Fairfield, CA 94533-6722
707-428-2800 or fax 707-428-0819
Jelly Belly jelly beans, 20 assorted flavors.

HERSHEY CHOCOLATE CO. 405
14 E. Chocolate Ave., Box 804
Hershey, PA 17033
717-534-4071 or fax 717-534-7694
Hershey's brand confectionary products.

HIGH PERFORMANCE STEREO 105
64 Bowen St., Newton Centre, MA 02159
617-244-1737 or fax 617-244-4390
Digital-ready HPS-4000 sound systems.

THE HOLLYWOOD REPORTER 2001
5055 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90036
213-525-2015 or fax 213-525-2372
Daily trade newspaper covering film, TV.

HUSSEY SEATING CO. 217-218/301-302
1 Dyer St., N. Berwick, ME 03906
207-676-2271 or fax 207-676-2222
Theatre seating.

ICEE USA 1411
5353 Downey Road, Vernon, CA 90058
213-581-0171 or fax 213-583-4732
Frozen carbonated beverages.

ICON SOFTWARE 2142-2142A
300 Port of Tacoma Rd., Tacoma, WA 98494
206-926-8075 or fax 206-926-8076
Computerized ticketing, concessions management and info systems.

IMPERIAL BONDWARE 713-714
75 Chestnut Ridge Rd.
Montvale, NJ 07645
201-573-6520 or fax 201-307-6125
Paper & plastic cups, containers, cartons.

INDEPENDENT MARKETING EDGE 202
827 Blackmore Place, Bozeman, MT 59715
406-587-1251 or fax 406-586-1571
Marketing newsletter/information service.

INTL. CINEMA EQUIPMENT CO. 1702-1703
100 NE 39th St., Miami, FL 33137
305-573-7339 or fax 305-573-8101
New, rebuilt and used theatre equipment.

IRWIN SEATING CO. 1110-1111/1208-1209
P.O. Box 2429, Grand Rapids, MI 49501
616-784-2621 or fax 616-784-5819
Quality seating for movie theatres.

J&J SNACK FOODS 1410
5353 Downey Rd., Vernon, CA 90058
213-581-0171 or fax 213-583-4732
Soft pretzels, churros, frozen desserts.

JBL PROFESSIONAL 2020-2022
8500 Balboa Blvd., Northridge, CA 91329
818-895-3426 or fax 818-830-1220
Surround loudspeaker systems, amplification.

JUST BORN CANDY 1513
1300 Stefko Blvd., Bethlehem, PA 118017
800-445-5787 or fax 610-867-9841
Hot Tamales and Mike & Ike assorted fruit candies.

KELMAR SYSTEMS INC. 1306
284 Broadway, Huntington Station, NY 11746
516-692-6131 or fax 516-421-1274
Automation systems, projector upgrades, more.

KINETICS.....1608-1609
6300 Irelan Place, Dublin, OH 43017
614-889-0480 or fax 614-889-0540
Acoustical wall and ceiling finishes.

KINETRONICS CORP.??
1778 Main Street, Sarasota, FL 34236
941-951-2432 or fax 941-955-5992

KINERONICS/M-SERVICE.....917
P.O. Box 450051, Alfter, D-53344, Germany
49-22-226-2105 or fax 49-22-226-5974

KINTEK, INC. 2124
P.O. Box 9143, 224 Calvary St.
Waltham, MA 02154
617-894-6111 or fax 617-647-4235
Audio products for movie theatres.

KNEISLEY ELECTRIC CO. 1018
P.O. Box 4692, Toledo, OH 43610
419-241-1219 or fax 419-241-9920
Lamphouses, power supplies and consoles.

LED AISLE LIGHTING

— TOTALLY MAINTENANCE FREE —

CUT ENERGY COSTS BY 97.5%

ELIMINATE LIGHT BULB REPLACEMENT

SLASH LABOR COSTS

INFINITE LIFE SPAN

PERMLIGHT SYSTEMS FOR NEW CONSTRUCTION

PERMLIGHT REPLACEMENT LENSES CONTAINING LEDS

REPLACEMENT LENSES FIT ALL CHANNELS

CUSTOM AND STANDARD LED SYSTEMS AVAILABLE

CALL PERMLIGHT TECHNOLOGY

Anaheim, California

(800) 286-4017

FAX: (714) 693-0236

SEE US AT SHOWEST BOOTH #113

Response No. 194

TRADE SHOW BOOTH LIST

KULLMAN INDUSTRIES 918
381 Blair Road, Avenel, NJ 07001
908-636-1500 or fax 908-636-1813

LANCER CORP. 312
235 W. Turbo, San Antonio, TX 78216
800-729-1500 or fax 210-344-8174
Post-mix drink systems and accessories.

LAVI INDUSTRIES 1605
27810 Ave. Hopkins, Valencia, CA 91355
805-257-7800 or fax 805-257-4938
Public guidance, crowd control stancions.

LAWRENCE METAL PRODUCTS 2116
P.O. Box 400-M, Bay Shore, NY 11706
516-666-0300 or fax 516-666-0336
Portable posts, ropes, railing, turnstiles, gates.

LEHIGH ELECTRIC PRODUCTS 2119
6265 Hamilton Blvd.
Allentown, PA 18106
215-395-3386 or fax 215-395-7735
Dimming systems for theatres.

LEN-D ENTERPRISES, INC. 102
P.O. Box 556, Wheatley Htgs., NY 11798
516-242-7241 or fax 516-243-4723
Splicing tape, splicers, port glass & projection lenses.

LENNOX INDUSTRIES 1708-1709
P.O. Box 799900, Dallas, TX 75379-9900
972-497-5076 or fax 972-497-5112
Energy-saving HVAC products and services.

LETICA CORP./MAUI CUP DIV. 1104
52585 Dequindre Rd.
Rochester, MI 48307
810-652-0557 or fax 810-608-2028
Hot and cold paper drinking cups.

LIGHTING & ELECTRONIC DESIGN 2026
1111 W Avenue, L-12 #B
Lancaster, CA 93534
800-700-5483 or fax 805-726-5488
Aisle lights, low-voltage decorative lighting, chandeliers.

LINDSEY-FAIRBANKS INC. 2025
1670 Maywood Ave., Upland, CA 91784
909-982-0467 or fax 909-982-7036
Dimmers.

LOU ANA FOODS INC. 119
P.O. Box 591, Opelousas, LA 70571
318-948-6561 or fax 318-942-3773
Popping and buttery topping oils.

LOWELL PRODUCTS 1606
3506 124th St., NE, Marysville, WA 98271
206-743-1330 or fax 206-745-3155

LUCASFILM THX 1301-1302
P.O. Box 2009, San Rafael, CA 94912
415-662-1942 or fax 415-662-1765
THX audio.

M&M/MARS 901-902
700 High St., Hackettstown, NJ 07840
908-850-2617 or fax 908-850-2734
M&Ms, Snickers, Milky Way, 3 Musketeers, Twix.

MACROVISION 1514
1341 Orleans Drive, Sunnyvale, CA 94089
408-743-8481 or fax 408-743-8610
Video projection theatres.

THE MARBLE COMPANY 106-107
P.O. Box 160080, Nashville, TN 37216
615-227-7772 or fax 615-228-1301
Booth supplies, automations, dimmers, sound.

MARCEL DESROCHERS INC. 2030
3500 Rachel St., East
Montreal, Quebec
H1W 1A6 CANADA
514-526-2686 or fax 514-526-3593
Cinema screens.

MARK IV CINEMA SYSTEMS 212-215
600 Cecil St., Buchanan, MI 49107
616-695-6831 or fax 616-695-1304
Motion picture loudspeakers and amplifiers.

MERIDIAN WORLDWIDE 2034
16842 Von Karman, Ste. 125
Irvine, CA 92715
714-724-5400 or fax 714-724-5424
Consolidation, transportation and warehousing worldwide.

MESBUR & SMITH ARCHITECTS 1814
148 Kenwood Ave., Toronto, Ont.
M6C 2S3 CANADA
416-656-5751 or fax 416-656-5615
Architects with expertise in cinema design.

METROPOLITAN CONCESSIONS 614-615
9950 Mission Mill Rd., Whittier, CA 90601
310-695-0541 or fax 310-695-6796
Snack bar equipment and supplies.

MHB DESIGN CORP., INT'L. 1712-1713
985 Parchment SE
Grand Rapids, MI 49546
616-942-1870 or fax 616-942-2057
Theatre design and planning of all components.

MILLIKEN CARPETS 1403-1404
201 Lukken Industrial Dr., West
La Grange, LA 30240
706-880-5359 or fax 706-880-5888

MOBILIARIO, SA 1314-1316
Calle del Sol #3, San Rafael de Champa,
Naucalpan, 53660 MEXICO
525-300-0620 or fax 525-300-2136

MODULAR HARDWARE 1501
8190 N. Brookshire Ct./BX 35398
Tucson, AZ 85740
602-744-4424 or fax 602-744-1449
Toilet partitions, washroom.

MOLOR PRODUCTS CO. 1716
1350-A Shore Rd., Naperville, IL 60563
630-416-6840 or fax 630-416-6966

MORRISON FARMS 112
RR#1, Box 50A, Clearwater, NE 68726
402-887-5335 or fax 402-887-4709
Popcorn, popping oil, equipment, supplies.

MOVIEAD CORPORATION 2126
3500 N. Andrews Ave.
Pompano Beach, FL 33064
954-784-6767 or fax 954-784-0700
Supply ad slicks, title art, concession mylars & translites.

MOVIEFONE.....1810-1812/1806-1807
335 Madison Ave., 27th Floor
New York, NY 10017
212-450-8042 or fax 212-450-8001
Call-in movie information service, advance ticket sales.

MULTIFOODS SPECIALTY DISTRIBUTION 1115
P.O. Box 173774, Denver, CO 80217-3774
303-338-6369 or fax 303-338-6370
Full-line concession supply distribution company.

MULTIMEDIA 2139
33300 Monier Circle, Ste. 150
Rancho Cordova, CA 95742
916-852-4220 or fax 916-852-8325

MULTIPLEX CO, INC. 2101-2103
250 Old Ballwin Road, St. Louis, MO 63021
314-256-7777 (ext.391) or fax 314-527-4313
Beverage dispensing equipment.

MVE 1207
2 Appletree Sq. #100 (8011 34th Ave., S.,
Bloomington, MN 55425
800-247-4446 or fax 602-749-0055
Bulk CO2 systems for beverage carbonation.

N.A.C. 1005
35 E. Wacker Dr. #1816, Chicago, IL 60601
312-236-3858 or fax 312-236-7809
Trade association for concession industry.

NABISCO/PLANTERS/LIFE SVR. 1510-1511
4 Gate Hall Drive, P.O. Box 312
Parsippany, NJ 07054
201-682-5029 or fax 201-682-5222
Convenience and single pack foods.

NADY SYSTEMS 2128
6701 Bay St., Emeryville, CA 94517
510-652-2411 or fax 510-652-5075
Assistive listening devices in both radio frequency and infrared.

NATIONAL CINEMA SERVICE 1407
1305 Distributors Row
Harahan, LA 70123
504-734-0707 or fax 504-734-0700
Theatre projection and sound service, parts and booth supplies.

NATIONAL ICEE CORP. 104
800 Dutch Square Blvd., Ste. 131
Columbia, SC 29210
803-772-6363 or fax 803-731-0597
Icee frozen carbonated drinks, Air Popt popcorn.

NATIONAL PUBLIC PHONE 1507
8200 East Pacific Place, #409
Denver, CO 80231
303-696-7000 or fax 303-745-0809

NATIONAL TICKET CO. 1305
P.O. Box 547, Shamokin, PA 17872
800-829-0829 or fax 800-829-0888
Tickets for admission systems, coupon books.

NATO 2023
4605 Lankersham Blvd. Ste #340
North Hollywood, CA 91602
818-506-1778 or fax 818-506-0269
National trade association for theatre owners.

NATURAL SOLUTIONS/ KILGORE CHEMICAL 2039-2040
P.O. Box 1399, Layton, UT 84041
801-479-9809 or fax 801-479-7534
Enviromentally conscious cleaning products.

NCS CORP. 813-816
99 Limestone Rd., Ridgefield, CT 06877
203-438-3405, or fax 203-438-3405
Technical equipment, concession stands, more.

NESTLE DAIRY 613
500 Valley Road, Wayne, NJ 07470
201-633-4900 or fax 201-633-1486
Bon Bons ice cream nuggets, more.

NESTLE FOOD CO. 611-612
500 Valley Road, Wayne, NJ 07470
201-633-4900 or fax 201-633-1486
Supplies, confection.

NET SOLUTIONS 103
318 Cedar, Pleasant Hill, MO 64080
816-540-4798 or fax 816-540-4790

KINTEK POWERED AND NON-POWERED SUBWOOFERS PROVIDE THE ULTIMATE PUNCH TO MEET THE CHALLENGE OF DIGITAL SOUND IN TODAY'S THEATRES

THX APPROVED KT-180DX

The new KT-180DX is non-powered, designed for the rigors of low frequency inherent in digital sound tracks.
Specification highlights:
2200 Watts continuous program power
2- 18" Drivers with a linear cone excursion of +/- 15.2mm
Axial sensitivity 24-100Hz: 95db @ 1 Watt @ 1 Meter Frequency response -3db @24 Hz
-10db @ 18 Hz
Tuning frequency 22 Hz
Dimensions: 50" H x 48" W x 26" D

THX APPROVED KT-90DX

The powered KT-90 DX, a field-proven workhorse of the industry, features dual 350 Watt amplifiers which include thermal and overtravel protection. The amplifiers are carefully matched to the characteristics of the speakers and cabinet.
Specification highlights:
700 Watts RMS continuous power
2- 15" Custom Drivers
Maximum S.P.L. 128db @ 27 Hz @ 1 Meter
Frequency response 24-400 Hz +/- 3db
1 Volt RMS for full output
Input 100K Ohms balanced via XLR-F conns.
Dimensions: 30" H x 47" W x 26" D

THX APPROVED KT-60DX

The powered KT-60DX, the smaller brother of the KT-90DX, employs a single 350 Watt amplifier (with the same thermal and overtravel protection) to drive a 15" speaker.
Specification highlights:
350 Watts RMS continuous power
Maximum S.P.L. 122db @ 27 Hz @ 1 Meter
Frequency response 24-100 Hz +/- 3db
1 Volt RMS for full output
Input 100K Ohms balanced via XLR-F conn.
Dimensions 26" H x 36" W x 16" D

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION ON THESE AND OTHER KINTEK PRODUCTS PLEASE CONTACT THE SALES DEPARTMENT:

KINTEK, INC.
P.O. BOX 9143
224 CALVARY STREET
WALTHAM, MA 02254-9143 USA
PH: 617/894-6111  FX: 617/647-4235

CINEMA CONSULTANTS
& SERVICES INTERNATIONAL INC.

THANK YOU!!

Due to your overwhelming response, we have expanded our phone system to better serve your needs.

Our new numbers are:

412-343•3900
FAX 412-343•2992

New & Used Equipment
- Projection • Sound • Parts
- Seatings • Xenon Bulbs
- Projector & Intermittent Rebuilding
- Concession Equipment
- Concession Counters
- Draperies • Low Voltage Lighting

For Your Convenience, We Accept Mastercard, Visa, American Express Discover

Home of "One Stop" Theatre Shopping
1250 Brookline Blvd.
P.O. Box 9672
Pittsburgh, PA 15226
412-343-3900
Fax 412-343-2992

Response No. 109

TRADE SHOW BOOTH LIST

NEUMADE PRODUCTS CORP./XETRON 207-209
10 Saddle Rd.
Cedar Knolls, NJ 07927
201-267-8200; fax 201-267-4903
Professional motion picture equipment.

NOVAR CONTROLS CORP. 1710-1711
24 Brown St.
Barberton, OH 44203
330-745-0074; fax 330-745-7401
Computerized heating/refridgeration modules, controllers.

ODELL'S.....805-806
P.O. Box 11336
Reno, NV 89510
800-635-0436; fax 702-323-6532
Popcorn topping, ODELL'S brand canola oil for popping.

ODYSSEY PRODUCTS INC. 1615-1616
5644 Baldwin Court
Norcross, GA 30071
770-448-4873; fax 770-453-9626
Infrared assistive equipment for theatres, support services and more.

OMEGA PATTERN WORKS 1815
1302 E. Walnut Avenue
Dalton, GA 30722-1446
800-241-4908 or fax 706-272-7617
Printed carpets for commercial use.

OMNITERM DATA TECHNOLOGY 2105-2107
2785 Skymark Ave., #11,
Mississauga Ont. L4W 4Y3
CANADA
905-629-4757 or fax 905-629-8590
Automated ticketing, concessions, teleticket, ATM, more.

OPTICAL RADIATION CORP. 711-712
1300 Optical Dr.
Azusa, CA 91702
818-969-3355; fax 818-969-2260
Manufacturers of a complete line of Xenon projection lamps.

OSCAR MAYER/KRAFT FOODS 1006
185 Technology Way
Irvine, CA 92718
714-453-3623; fax 714-453-3610
Hot dogs, pre-sliced meats.

OSRAM/SYLVANIA 817-818
100 Endicott St.,
Danvers, MA 01923
508-750-2702; fax 508-750-2089
Osram Xenon lamps.

PACER/C.A.T.S. 210-211/308-309
3731 Wilshire Blvd. #760
Los Angeles, CA 90010
213-388-7100; fax 213-388-8666
Computer boxoffice, concession, ticketing, accessories.

PACIFIC CONCESSIONS 1518
1250 Bayhill Dr. #301
San Bruno, CA 94066
415-871-8711 or fax 415-871-7480
Financing for remodeling, construction, etc.

PACKAGING CONCEPTS INC. 1417
4971 Fyler Ave., St. Louis, MO 63139
314-481-1155 or fax 314-481-6567
Leak-proof popcorn bags.

PARAMOUNT PICTURES 1915
5555 Melrose Avenue
Hollywood, CA 90038
213-956-8418 or fax 213-956-3429
Motion picture distributor.

PEAVEY/CINEMACOUSTICS 1502-1503
208 Rutherford Drive
Danville, CA 94526
818-225-8030 or fax 818-225-8029
Digitally-based cinema sound equip., speakers.

PEAVEY/CINEMACOUSTICS 1502-1503
711 A. Street, Meridian, MS 39301
601-483-5365 or fax 601-486-1278
Digitally-based cinema sound equip., speakers.

PELICAN PRODUCTIONS 1706
1953 Lakeshore Dr.
Muskegon, MI 49441
616-722-3012 or fax 616-722-3124
Producers of "Lobby Previews."

PEPSI.....910-912/1007-1009
Route 35, Somers, NY 10589-0904
914-767-7814 or fax 914-767-7558
Pepsi, Diet Pepsi, Mountain Dew.

PERMLIGHT TECHNOLOGY 113
4640 E. La Palma Ave.
Anaheim, CA 92807
714-693-7578 or fax 714-693-0236
LED isle lighting.

PHONIC EAR 1604
3880 Cypress Dr.
Petaluma, CA 94954-7600
800-277-0735 or fax 707-769-9624
FM & infrared hearing systems. ADA approved.

PIKE PRODUCTIONS, INC. 1506
11 Clarke Street, Box 300
Newport, RI 02840
401-846-8890 or fax 401-847-0070
Custom policy & announcement trailers.

PLOTKIN & ASSOCIATES 2038
5963 La Place Court/Airport Plaza,
#104, Carlsbad, CA 92008
619-603-8791 or fax 619-603-8570
Employee testing and training.

PMG 1418
5700 Braodmoor, Ste 912
Mission, KS 66202
913-831-7644 or fax 913-831-7577
Promotional popcorn containers.

TRADE SHOW BOOTH LIST

PPR ENTERPRISES 1607
1523-L W. Struck Ave.
Orange, CA 92667
714-771-7863 or fax 714-771-3277
Design, installation cabinets for theatres.

PRACTICAL AUTOMATION 2138
45 Woodmont Rd, Milford, CT 06460
203-882-5640; fax 203-882-5648
Specialty & custom printer hardware and software.

PROCTOR COMPANIES 704-706
10497 Centennial Rd.
Littleton, CO 80127
303-973-8989; fax 303-973-8884
Concession stands, acoustical, THX Bafflettes.

PROMOTION IN MOTION CO. 1015-1017
P.O. Box 558
Closter, NJ 07624
210-261-0034; fax 201-261-5630
Candy: Care bears, Lemonheads, Red Hots, etc.

PRYSMTECH, LLC 1817-1818/1901-1902
1000 Holcomb Woods Pkwy #316,
Roswell, GA 30076
770-518-7976; fax 770-587-0484
Theatre management systems.

QSC AUDIO PRODUCTS 314
1675 MacArthur Blvd.
Costa Mesa, CA 92626
714-957-7127 or fax 714-754-6174
Professional, THX approved power amplifiers.

QUALITY CONCESSIONS 1701
6081 Rickenbacker Rd.
Commerce, CA 90040
213-721-1900 or fax 213-721-6261
Concession supplies.

QUINETTE GALLAY INTL 2130-2132
15, rue de la Nouvelle France,
Montreuil, FRANCE
1-49-886-333 or fax 1-48-582-286
Seating for cinemas, theatres and auditoriums.

RDS DATA GROUP 1717-1718/1801-1802
P.O. Box 421
Simcoe, Ont.
N3Y 4L5 CANADA
519-428-2400; fax 519-428-0131
Theatre ticketing and concession systems.

RICOS PRODUCTS 616
621 S. Flores
San Antonio, TX 78204
800-880-1810 or fax 214-637-6739
The originators of concession nachos.

ROCK-TENN COMPANY 1101
P.O. Box 4098
Norcross, GA 30091
770-448-2193; fax 770-417-2357
Stock and custom folding cartons.

ROUNDUP FOOD EQUIPMENT 804
1025 West National Ave.
Addison, IL 60101
800-253-2991 or fax 708-543-0359
Grills, pizza stations, concession equipment.

SCHNEIDER OPTICS 307
285 Oser Ave.
Hauppauge, NY 11788
516-761-5000 or fax 516-761-5090
Custom projection lenses.

SCHULT DESIGN AND DISPLAY.....2110-2112
318 Cedar
Pleasant Hill, MO 64080
816-540-4798 or fax 816-540-4790
Theatre display cases, letters, signage.

SCREENVISION CINEMA NETWORK 116
597 5th Avenue, 7th FL., New York, NY 10017
212-752-5774 or fax 212-752-0086
Cinema advertising.

SEATING CONCEPTS 116-118/1201-1203
4901-600 Morena Blvd.
San Diego, CA 92117
619-581-5717 or fax 619-581-5725
Standard and custom seating.

SERVER PRODUCTS 204-205
P.O. Box 530
Menomonee Falls, WI 53052
800-558-8722 or fax 414-251-2688
Popcorn, nacho & grill equipment, more.

SMART DEVICES INC. 1310-1311
5945 Peachtree Corners East,
Norcross, GA 30071
770-449-6698 or fax 770-449-6728
Stereo processors, cinema sound components.

SMITH GROUP COMMUNICATIONS.....1512
614 SW 11th Ave. #405
Portland, OR 97205
503-224-1905 or fax 503-224-5548
State-of-the-art custom logo and policy trailers.

SONIC IMAGES 1215
203 Flagship Drive
Lutz, FL 33549
813-948-2707 or fax 813-948-2907
Custom cableing systems for theatres.

SONY CINEMA PRODS. 517-518/601-602
10202 West Washington Blvd.
Culver City, CA 90232
310-280-5777 or fax 310-280-2024
Sony digital playback readers and processors.

SOUNDFOLD INTL. 305
P.O. Box 292125
Kettering, OH 45429
513-293-2671 or fax 513-293-9542
Acoustical wall covering, speaker brackets.

THE BEST!

Know who you deal with personally! One phone call gets the owner of America's best equipped shop and design lab. IDEAS to save time, money and difficulties.

HADDEN
THEATRE SUPPLY COMPANY
10201 Bunsen Way
Louisville, KY 40299
(502) 499-0050
(502) 499-0052 FAX:

Louis Bornwasser, Owner

Design-Consultation-Sales

Response No. 40

In 1997 MUVICO Theaters will open a new 20 screen complex with an IMAX 3D PSE in Orlando, Florida. Currently we are recruiting a

MANAGING DIRECTOR

The successful candidate will play a major leadership role in the start-up effort and will assume full general management responsibility for the theater once it is open. As Managing Director your superb people skills mean that your staff will follow your lead in delivering an entertainment experience that embraces the finest in showmanship and hospitality.

The Managing Director must have a solid operations background in the theater industry, excellent verbal and written communication skills and are looking to put your career on a new trajectory in a young, dynamic environment. As Managing Director within an ever-expanding organization, travel and promotion opportunities make this a unique career option. If this challenge excites you please send your resume and salary expectations in confidence to:

Deane Hashemi
MUVICO THEATERS, INC.
3101 N. Federal Highway, 6th Floor
Fort Lauderdale, FL 33306
No telephone calls please.

TRADE SHOW BOOTH LIST

SOUTHFIELD/JG CLARK CO. 2108-2109
1171 W. Center St., Marion, OH 43302
614-387-6543 or fax 614-387-0012
Paper products, popcorn boxes, carry-out trays.

STAGE ACCOMPANY 1804
1811 N.W. Couch Street, #208
Portland, OR 97209
503-221-0322 or fax 503-221-0933
Complete sound systems.

STAR MANUFACTURING INT'L. 1704
10 Sunnen Drive
St. Louis, MO 63143
800-264-7827 or fax 800-264-6666
Hot dog cookers, popcorn/nacho equipment.

STEIN INDUSTRIES 1003-1004
22 Sprague Ave., Amityville, NY 11701
516-789-2222 or fax 516-789-8888
Display cases, concession stands, boxoffices, popcorn and nacho warmers.

STRONG INTL. 1010-1011/1108-1109
4350 McKinley St.
Omaha, NE 68112
402-453-4444 or fax 402-453-7238
Projection, Xenon, slide projection systems.

SUMMIT FOODS 1317-1318/1401-1402
P.O. Box 141, Dedham, MA 02027
617-830-0201 or fax 617-830-0205
Klondike movie bites, Naya water, more.

SUNMARK SPECIAL MARKETS 1408-1409
8155 New Hampshire Ave. St. Louis, MO 63123
314-832-7575 or fax 314-832-1754
Sweetarts, Spree, Fruit Runts and Grape Nerds.

SYSTEMS & PRODUCTS ENGINEERING CO. (SPECO).....2113-2115
709 N. Sixth St., Kansas City, MO 66101
913-321-3978 or fax 913-321-7439
Platter systems, light dimmers, film cleaner, cue detectors, interlock roller assy's, more.

T.K. ARCHITECTS 1508-1509
106 W. 11th, Ste 1900, Kansas City, MO 64105
816-842-7552 or fax 816-842-1302
Design and planning for new theatres.

TASTE OF NATURE 2117
400 S. Beverly Dr. #214, Beverly Hills, CA 90212
310-276-2927 or fax 310-278-9509
Healthy snacks supplier, plastic displays.

TECO 2101
1122 Industrial Dr., Matthews, NC 28105
704-847-4455 or fax 704-845-1709
Platters, film clamps, film retainers, splicers, more.

TEMPO INDUSTRIES INC. 1610-1611
2022-C S. Grand Ave., Santa Ana, CA 92705
714-641-0313 or fax 714-641-0944
Aisle lighting, wall graphics, more.

TERRY HINES & ASSOCIATES 2133
2550 Hollywood Way, #600, Burbank, CA 91505
818-562-9433 or fax 818-562-9476
Advertising agency.

THEATRE SERVICE CORP. 2017-2019
P.O. Box 835932, Richardson, TX 75083
214-690-0615 or fax 214-699-7355
Screen cleaning process. Chemicals, draperies.

THEATRE SYSTEMS INTL. 2035-2037
361 S. Frontage Road, #104
Burr Ridge, IL 60521
630-654-4392 or fax 630-654-4941

THEATRE & VIDEO PRODUCTS 1816
921 N.E. 79th Street
Miami, FL 33138
305-754-9136 or fax 305-759-0863

THEATRON DATA SYSTEMS 904-906
P.O. Box 4142, Seal Beach, CA 90740
310-434-9947 or fax 310-434-9948
Theatre computer systems and software.

TICKETPRO/OPTIMUM CINEMA 1916
870 Mercury Drive, S.E.
Lawrenceville, GA 30245
770-682-5485 or fax 770-682-8397
Computer software for entertainment industry.

TIVOLI LIGHTING INC. 1001-1002
1513 E. St. Gertrude Pl., Irvine, CA 92705
714-957-6101 or fax 714-957-1501
Specialty lighting products.

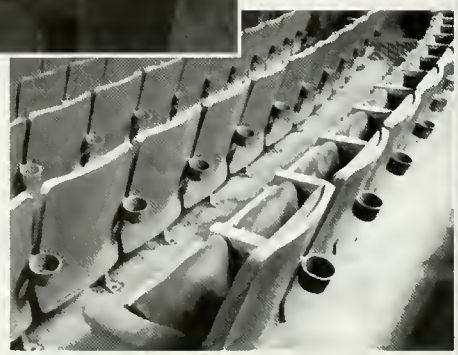
TODDY PRODUCTS 1905-1906
1206 Brooks St., Houston, TX 77009
713-225-2066 or fax 713-225-2066
Iced cappuccino, iced tea and chai concentrates.

TOOTSIE ROLL INDUSTRIES INC. ...304
7401 S. Cicero Ave., Chicago, IL 60629
312-838-3400 or fax 312-838-3564
Tootsie Rolls, Mason Dots and Junior Mints.

TRANS LUX CORP. 2032-2033
P.O. Box 5090, Norwalk, CT 06856-5090
203-853-4321 or fax 203-855-8636
Indoor/outdoor programmable signs.

Act III Theatres • Carmike Cinemas • Cinemarica Theatres • Cineplex Odeon • Cyrus Anedos Cinemas • Dickinson Theatres • Eastern Federal • Edwards Cinemas

• United Cinemas International • Virgin Cinemas • Wallace Theatres • Warner Brothers International



• Empire Theatres • Finnkino Oy Cinemas • First International Theatres • Harkins Theatres

As I went to sit in my seat
my hands held a drink cold & sweet,
but when I sat down
my face showed a frown,
cause my drink spilled all over my feet.

Since then I have been to a place
that provides me a neat little space,
where I can sit back
with my cup in a rack,
and relax with a smile on my face.

Jim Fischer

Are your patrons smiling?

Call, The Caddy Guys

1-800-845-0591

Caddy Products • 7667 Cahill Road • Minneapolis, MN 55439 • 612-828-0030 • Fax 612-829-0166

• Mann Theatres • Marcus Theatres • Metropolitan Theatres • National Amusements Pacific Theatres • Regal Cinemas • United Artists Theatre Circuit

Response No 421

TRADE SHOW BOOTH LIST

TRI MOTION DESIGN 1715
1050 Livorna Road
Alamo, CA 94507
310-449-9144 or fax 310-449-9145
Three-way sign displays.

TRICORP AMUSEMENTS 1405
5 Veronica Avenue
Somerset, NJ 90846-7767
908-846-7767 or fax 908-846-0622

TROLLI, INC. 1504-1505
7951 S.E. 6th St., Wellesey Corp.
Plaza, #300, Plantation, FL 33124
800-826-7258 or fax 954-476-6135
Gummi candies.

TROUT ASSOCIATES 1714
P. O. Box 7857, Hollywood, FL 33081
954-920-4500 or fax 954-921-9122

TROY SOUND WALL SYSTEMS 1903-1904
3420 S. Malt Avenue
Commerce, CA 90040
213-838-3676 or fax 213-838-3686
Sound-absorbing walls and ceilings.

ULTRA-STEREO LABS 1112-1114
18730 Oxnard St. #208
Tarzana, CA 91356
818-609-7405 or fax 818-609-7408
Stereo decoding equipment, booth monitors, hearing impaired systems.

ULTRATECH, INC. 2002
P.O. Box 436, Homestead, PA 15120
412-469-8324 or fax 412-469-9351
Full line theatre supply & service.

US AXMINSTER 2134
1856 Artistry Lane, Greenville, MS 38702
601-332-1581 (817-294-3729) or fax 601-332-1594

VISTA MANUFACTURING 807
FM 2449E, Box 428, Ponder, TX 76259
817-479-2787 or fax 817-479-8139
Aisle lighting.

VOGEL POPCORN CO. 703
7450 Metro Blvd., Edina, MN 55439
612-835-6900 or fax 612-832-3468
Grower, processor and distributor of premium quality popcorn.

WAGNER ZIP-CHANGE 201
3100 Hirsch St., Melrose Park, IL 60160
708-681-4100 or fax 708-681-4165
Marquee letters, backgrounds, accessories, custom colors/styles.

WEAVER POPCORN 1012-1013
P.O. Box 395, Van Buren, IN 46991
800-227-6159 or fax 317-934-4052
Bulk popcorn, Portion Pak popcorn.

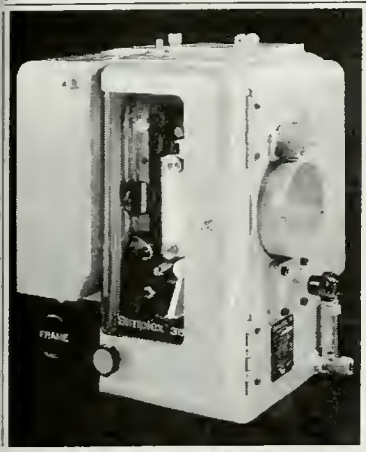
WELDON, WILLIAMS & LICK INC. ...303
P.O. Box 168, Ft. Smith, AR 72902
800-242-4995 or fax 501-783-7050
Tickets, computer forms, passes, admission books.

WESNIC 1412
6000 Bowdendale, Jacksonville, FL 32216
800-874-8558 or fax 904-733-3736
Furniture for theatres including chairs, benches, planters, etc.

WILLMING REAMS ANIMATION 206
325 East Ramsey Road
San Antonio, TX 78216
210-342-2141 or fax 210-342-1523
Policy trailers, concessions, computer and character animation.

WING ENTERPRISES 1304
P.O. Box 3100, Springville, UT 84663
801-489-3684 or fax 801-489-3685
Little Giant Ladder System & accessories.

WINPAK 2028
85 Laird Drive, Toronto, Ont. M4G 3T8 CANADA
416-421-1700 or fax 416-421-7957



WIRESMITH DISPLAYS 916
6 Shastsbury Lane, Brampton, Ont. L6T 3X7 CANADA
905-793-0909 or fax 905-793-0920
Manufacturer of point of sale merchandising carts.

WYANDOT, INC. 114
135 Wyandot Avenue, Marion, OH 43302
800-992-6368 or fax 614-382-5584
Corn chips, popcorn, nachos.

ZENITH SPECIALTY BAG CO. 1214
17625 E. Railroad St., Industry, CA 91748
818-912-2481 or fax 818-810-5136
Popcorn bags, grease resistant food wrap.

BOXOFFICE

See you on the Trade Show Floor!

CINEMA EQUIPMENT, Inc.

Theatrical and Motion Picture
Equipment Sales and Services
Systems Design
Interior Design
In-House Engineering and Designing Authorized Distributor of:
JBL, SDDS, QSC, DTS, Irwin, Smart, Dolby,
Peavey, Strong, Component Engineering
Worldwide Distribution
One Stop Shopping Source
Professional Support Team
We Have Everything You Need For Your Theater But The Movies!!

CINEMA EQUIPMENT

1375 N.W. 97th Avenue, Suite 12
Miami, Fl 33172
(305) 594-0570 - Fax (305) 592-6970
Email: Gyounger@ix.netcom.com

ITEA

Response No. 51

IF THEY KNEW WHAT YOU WERE MISSING: Part One

WHY TODAY'S MOTION PICTURE SOUND SYSTEMS FAIL TO MAKE THE GRADE AND WHY THEY CAN'T SOUND BETTER

By John F. Allen

Motion picture sound is critically important in setting the emotional atmosphere of a film. Sound alone is often the determining factor in an audience knowing if a scene is a comedy or tragedy. Obviously, the better a theatre's sound presentation, the better the film works. If sound is, as some insist, fully half the show, how can exhibitors best exploit its potential? Here, BOXOFFICE contributing writer John F. Allen begins a four-part series of articles exploring the current state of movie theatre sound and providing valuable guidance.

Motion picture soundtracks are recorded with painstaking detail. It's not unlike the composition and performance of a symphony, and some films have indeed sounded symphonic in their overall effect. For every film, hundreds, even thousands, of sounds are developed, performed, recorded, assembled and carefully mixed together over several labor-intensive weeks with one goal in mind: to create the believable illusion that everything the audience is listening to sounds natural and convincing.

Building sound effects is an art form all its own. We must believe that we are hearing the sound of "The Lost World's" dinosaurs even though no one ever has, and no recording of these extinct animals could possibly exist. The audience at "Titanic" must believe the sounds they're hearing are from a sinking ship, even though they've never heard such sounds.

Imagine what would happen if a motion picture was shown on a screen with certain areas blacked out—a dark square here, a dark oval there. Imagine the uproar that would ensue in the theatre if an audience was deprived of so much of a film. Yet this is precisely the current situation with the sound systems in the vast majority of today's theatres.

So much of the sound recorded on modern soundtracks never reaches the audience's ears that the situation can only be called a disgrace. What often is heard is either shrill, or so spoiled by colorations and distortion, that audiences could rightly say they had seen two different movies if they were able to see the same film in two theatres—one with a typical sound system and the other with a fully qualified sound system.

"Big" pictures can and do attract audiences to virtually any theatre, no matter the presentation quality or anything else. But such "blockbuster" opportunities to provide a first-class entertainment experience, and thus encourage irregular patrons to return to the theatre more often, are lost when they are treated to less than thrilling sound. Many customers will hear better sound in their cars going to and from poorly equipped theatres. This would be a serious problem even if millions of dollars in repeat business were not at stake—but of course they are.

In my travels, I have encountered too many theatres with poor and even deplorable sound.

Two-way, relatively inefficient loudspeakers are simply incapable of accurately reproducing contemporary sound.

This article marks the beginning of the most comprehensive series of pieces that I have written to date. These articles will attempt to describe in some detail the many complex elements that have contributed to the current "state of the art." Rather than biting the hand that feeds me, I am endeavoring to help it. Once the complete series has appeared, any reader with questions or comments is welcome to write to me care of BOXOFFICE.

WHAT IS BAD SOUND?

Perhaps at this point I should state what qualifies, or at least ought to qualify, as "bad sound." A sound system that allows audiences to understand a film's dialogue is certainly essential for them to understand the story, but it is hardly enough.

Any sound reproduction that is unnatural or colored in tone, or lacking in fullness or dynamic range, or unfaithful to the recording in any way, should not be regarded as acceptable. Those all-too-frequent presentations in which music or background sounds are too loud, too dull or altogether inaudible should not be regarded as acceptable. Phony, distorted and inadequate bass is prevalent in the industry. (Just think of all the subwoofers that have failed.) Finally, it must be understood that the typical "honky" dialogue sound so prominent in so many theatres for so many years is bad sound. Unless someone were to speak through a hose, a human voice simply doesn't sound that way.

When Dolby Stereo was introduced 20 years ago, theatre sound systems needed to be upgraded. Thousands of single-channel monophonic systems were indeed turned into four-channel stereo systems. But many exhibitors proceeded as though just adding speakers and amplifiers would be sufficient, and that's about all that was done.

Yet the dynamic range and inner detail afforded by Dolby Stereo was also greater than had been the case with mono optical soundtracks. This fact has been all but ignored by the exhibition industry. In my opinion, the result has been disastrous for the potential of film sound. Considering this industry's unflattering record in implementing Dolby Stereo, how well can one expect the changes required for the digital sound revolution to be carried out? What are the real problems that must be addressed for the full potential of digital sound to be realized?

THEATRE LOUDSPEAKERS

Let's begin by examining the most important as well as the weakest link in the entire audio chain: the speakers. With the widespread use of two-way, relatively inefficient loudspeakers, today's theatres (and even some dubbing stages) are simply incapable of accurately reproducing contemporary film sound, whether it is analog or digital. As typically installed, these speakers are just too small to do the job in a room the size of a theatre. (See Figure 1, right.) One need only hear a film in a theatre with a large and powerful enough sound system to grasp this fact.

And the difference can be shocking. The sad truth is that some of the speaker manufacturers have simply marketed their public address products to movie theatres—almost as an afterthought. At least one manufacturer publicly justified its strategy by noting that its two-way system exhibited a frequency response similar to the "older" theatre speakers of the 1940s and '50s—frankly, an amazing admission. On their part, exhibitors have often been unwilling to make the investment necessary for sound systems powerful enough to correctly handle stereo, let alone digital.

With few exceptions, today's theatres have not been equipped with speakers designed to be placed behind movie screens. (Surround speakers are a separate subject; more on them later.) This isn't to say that motion picture sound systems can't be built with such components. They can. But, because of their limited size, it requires more of them than anyone installs in theatres, or to my knowledge ever has.

In 1980, when I began writing for BOXOFFICE, I said that separate super-tweeters were required to overcome the effects of movie screens and to deliver the highest quality sound evenly throughout a theatre. Frankly, the call for such three-speaker systems was met with plenty of argument; however, it's interesting to note that at least two manufacturers are finally beginning to introduce three-way screen speakers.

My work with three-way systems (and later with four-way systems) was not born of whim or a desire to be different. There are several genuine weaknesses in the two-way speaker approach, particularly in the way they have been used in theatres. In typical two-way systems, all the high frequencies from 500 Hertz (Hz) on up are delivered by a single diaphragm of a compression driver. The weight of this diaphragm limits its high-frequency capability. In order to reproduce the highest frequencies, the diaphragm must be very light. Light or heavy as the case may be, the high-frequency output of all high-frequency compression drivers begins to fall off above approximately 2,000 Hz. Without some form of equalization, moviegoers couldn't hear any treble frequencies at all in loudspeakers using compression drivers.

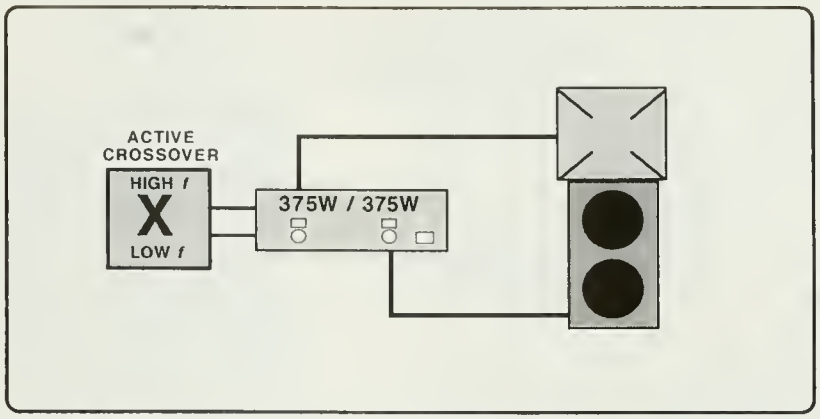

Figure 1: A typical two-way speaker scenario.

This natural high-frequency loss of the driver is made worse by the extra high-frequency losses caused by placement behind a screen. Measurements of the losses due to a movie screen vary with the speaker used, but it is never less than 2 decibels (dB) and has been reported by some to be significantly greater. Whatever the screen-loss factor, it must be added to the high-frequency equalization required to make the compression driver's diminishing output become the same at all frequencies, or "flat" as it arrives at the audience's ears. Done electrically, the amount of high-frequency boosting required to accomplish this can be as much as 15 to 16 dB at 16,000 Hz. Since each 3 dB is a full doubling of needed amplifier power, this becomes a very, very large amount of equalization—so large that it can stress the diaphragm, causing distortion, shrillness and sometimes outright failure of the compression driver.

If a system is designed to be acoustically self-equalized, the high-frequency boost is reduced to no more than 3 dB, eliminating driver stress. With the introduction of more three-way screen speakers, the sonic situation should improve somewhat, at least in new theatres. Unfortunately, the industry must now face the issue of the existing theatres.

WOOFERS

The bottom half of typical two-way theatre loudspeakers has evolved from rather large vented cabinet/limited bass horn combinations to much smaller and simpler vented direct radiator constructions. There is much debate about the use of these direct radiator woofers. Manufacturers love them because they are so simple to build: six pieces of plywood, two drivers, some fasteners and a connector. What could be easier? Nonetheless, I much prefer (with much support and precedence) fully horn-loaded woofer sections.

The differences between these speaker constructions, their sound quality, their power and the way they are usually employed are substantial. First, of course, is the matter of speaker efficiency and thus total output. A well-designed horn woofer is about 20 percent efficient; a direct radiator, 2 1/2 percent. This means the direct radiator will require 800 percent more amplifier power than the horn to play at the same loudness. Because both devices are limited by the power handling capacity of the drivers, and because drivers with the same capacity can be built and installed in either cabinet, the horn woofer's power output will always be eight times greater than the direct radiator when both are at maximum power.

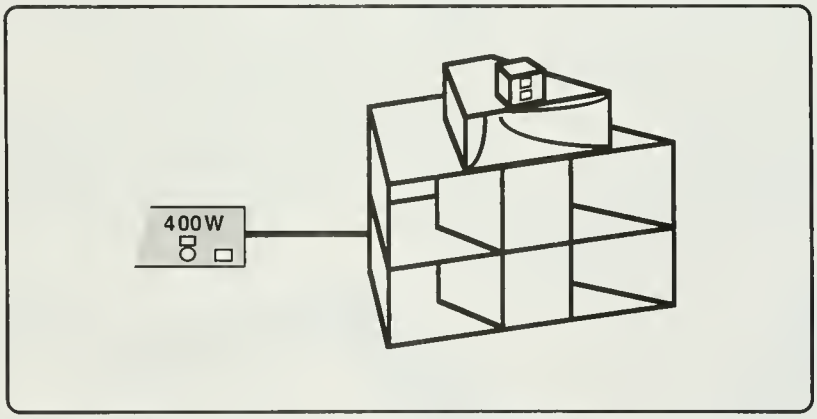

Figure 2: A typical horn-based speaker scenario.

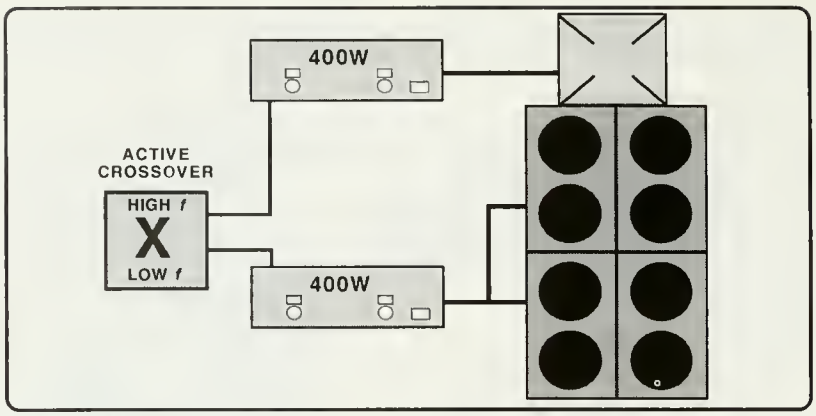

Figure 3: The effect of using four direct-radiator woofers for each current single unit.

Second is the issue of radiating area, an issue that's often ignored or sometimes even scoffed at. This can also be described as coupling area—the area of the loudspeaker that is coupled to, or acts on, the air in the room. Intuitively, we know this is very important; otherwise, a transistor radio with a two-inch speaker could sound like a symphony orchestra.

Speakers are nothing more than air pumps. If one imagines a piston sloshing alone up and down in a pond, and then imagines adding a cylinder around the piston, one can immediately conceive how the cylinder would make the piston a more effective pump. This is because the cylinder allows the piston to control more water with each stroke. The same holds true for loudspeakers.

The total radiating area of a direct-radiator loudspeaker is confined to the piston area of the moving paper cone(s). In a direct radiator theatre woofer with the usual complement of two 15-inch drivers, this area is about 1.6 square feet. In other words, if only one such cabinet is used per screen channel, two pieces of paper, each .8 square feet in area, is all that each channel will have flailing away at all the tens of thousands of cubic feet of air in the theatre. (Again, see Figure 1.) The same is true if the cabinet is built as a subwoofer. In fact, this is true no matter how large the cabinet is.

A fully horn-loaded woofer is a completely different approach. The horn is an acoustical transformer. Using a sort of leverage, if you will, the cones of the drivers do not act directly on the air in the room. Rather, they act on the air in the throat of the horn. As the sound waves travel down the path of the horn, the horn's cross-sectional area expands at a determined rate. Recalling the cylinder/piston analogy, one can see how the drivers of a horn control a considerably larger mass of air than does a direct radiator. It's this large mass that then acts on the air in the room. The radiating area of a horn-type woofer is the area of the mouth of the horn. This can be over 10 square feet per cabinet, or six times greater per pair of 15-inch drivers. (See Figure 2, p. SW-47.) This is a huge acoustic difference, and it's why the Sensurround systems were built with horn-loaded woofers.

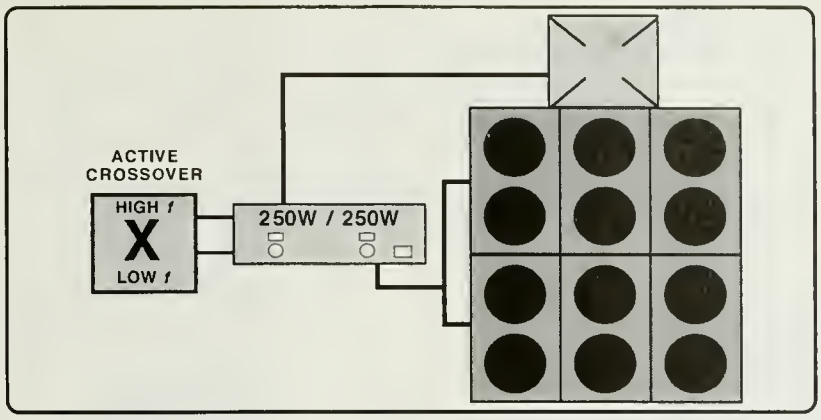
Another advantage with the well-designed horns is their reduction in non-harmonically related distortion products. This kind of distortion is generally referred to as modulation distortion or inter-modulation (IM) distortion.

NATIONAL CINEMA SERVICE
CORPORATION

(800) 726-2609

ITEA International Theatre Equipment Association

PROFESSIONAL SERVICES AND PRODUCTS
INCLUDING



INSTALLATION
AUDIO RACKING
THX RECERTIFICATIONS
TECHNICAL CONSULTING
24 HOUR ANSWERING SERVICE
VIDEO PROJECTION
INTERMITTENT REPAIR

EQUIPMENT
PROJECTION SERVICE*
SOUND SERVICE*
PARTS
BOOTH SUPPLIES
*Annual Contracts or Demand Service

XENON BULBS
SOUND SYSTEMS
CONCESSION EQUIPMENT
LOBBY FIXTURES
FRONT ENDS
LENSES
USED EQUIPMENT

P.O. Box 10799
New Orleans, Louisiana 70181

GOOD SIGHT, GOOD SOUND
THE KEY TO GREAT CONCESSIONS

MAXIMUM OUTPUT AT 50 FT / 16.5 M = 111 dB SPL

TOTAL LOW FREQUENCY RADIATING AREA = 9.6 SQ FT

Figure 4: The effect of using six direct-radiator woofers for each current single unit.

Although IM distortion is usually listed in the specifications and reviews for amplifiers as well as other electronic audio devices, it is virtually never mentioned by loudspeaker manufacturers. This is because loudspeakers produce such high amounts of this kind of distortion. A direct-radiator device will often exhibit 10 times the distortion that is produced by a horn playing at the same level. (This assertion is often and sometimes vehemently disputed; however, those who seem to dispute the loudest talk only about harmonically related distortion products—which, it turns out, are indeed roughly equivalent in both types of speaker systems. See "Total Distortion in Modern Theatre Woofer Systems" in the Oct. 1992 BOXOFFICE, p. 90.)

In my opinion, based on decades of experience, one of the most important reasons that motion picture sound systems cannot sound better than they do is a critical lack of low-frequency radiating area. Much of the inner detail and sense of spaciousness recorded in the soundtrack is effectively eliminated. Overtones and low-level bass sounds are stripped away; louder bass sounds lack punch, and they suffer from coloration, distortion and a phony quality. "Real bass" is replaced by the sound of two rather small and totally overwhelmed .8 square foot pieces of paper that are working much too hard.

This isn't meant to disparage such speaker systems, as these deficiencies aren't caused by the use of direct-radiator low-frequency cabinets. Rather, it is because there is not enough of them. When such cabinets are selected for use in theatres, there simply must be more of them, and at the current time there isn't.

A good rule of thumb for theatres more than 80 feet deep would be to use at least four double 15-inch direct-radiator woofers for every single unit now in use. Six woofer sections per channel would make a direct-radiator system equivalent to a horn-based system and result in a significant improvement in sound quality as well as reliability over what is possible with single cabinet installations. (See Figures 3 and 4.) Monophonic theatres could get by with a single direct radiator, but theatres equipped with digital or Dolby SR need much more. Another excellent rule about woofers: If you can lift them, they're too small.

© 1997 John F. Allen. All Rights Reserved.

John F. Allen is the founder and president of High Performance Stereo in Newton, Mass. He is also the inventor of the HPS-4000 cinema sound system and in 1984 was the first to bring digital sound to the cinema.

Part two will appear in the July 1997 issue. Its topics: surround speakers, subwoofers and amplifiers.

Oscar Schmoscar! From Out of the Spiritus Mundi Comes...

BOXOFFICE's TENTH ANNUAL MISCELLANEOUS FILM AWARDS!

The Great Leap Forward Award
To Asian action king Jackie Chan, for finally breaking into the American market after 15 years of trying with the successful 1996 U.S. release of his "Rumble in the Bronx."

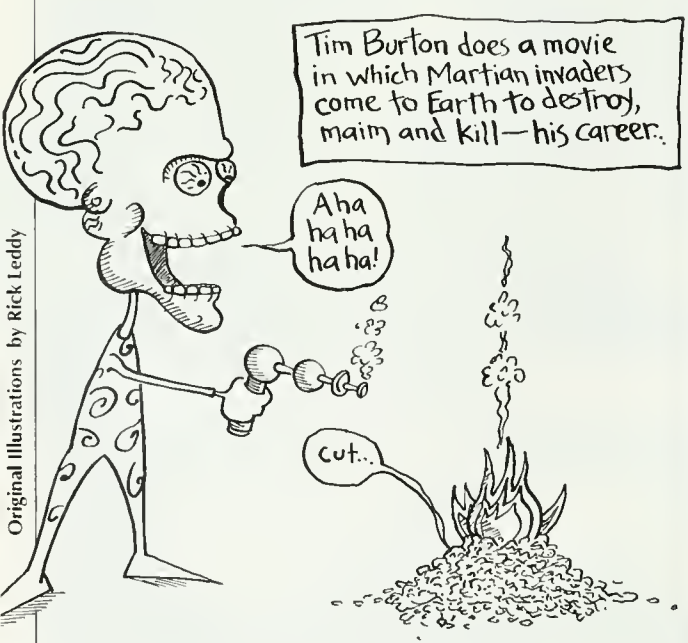
The What's in a Name? Award
To "Ed," "Emma," "Eddie," "Jerry Maguire," "Michael," "Michael Collins," "Sgt. Bilko," "Romeo + Juliet," "Jude," "Hamlet," "Jack," "Moll Flanders," "Mary Reilly," "Matilda," "Jack and Sarah" and "Citizen Ruth."

The Take a Number Award
To the films "101 Dalmatians," "One Fine Day," "Twelfth Night," "2 Days in the Valley," "Two if By Sea," "Two Much," "It Takes Two" and "Mystery Science Theatre 3000."

The Long in the Tooth Award
To the "old guy buddy comedy" cycle kicked off by the "Grumpy Old Men" flicks. Good to know there will still be room for "Lethal Weapon" sequels in the year 2020.

The Art Imitates Title Award
To "Mission: Impossible." Your mission, should you choose to accept it: to figure out exactly what was going on in a needlessly complicated plot.

Movies We'd Like To See, Pt. I
"The People vs. Larry Flintstone," a wacky comedy in which Bedrock's favorite quarry-worker gets caught in an ill-advised get rich quick scheme with black-sheep cousin Larry and inadvertently becomes involved in a print pornography racket. Hilarious Stone Age legal complications ensue. Starring Woody Harrelstone and Quartzney Love; Ann Margrock and Stoney Curtis take on career-reviving supporting cameos.



The Emission Impossible Award
To "The Nutty Professor," the highest 'grossing' film of all time to feature more than a dozen fart jokes. Honorable mention goes to "Beavis and Butt-head Do America," for reasons we refuse to describe in detail because we're just not that kind of magazine.

The Nice Job in "Primal Fear" But You Were Even Better on "The Honeymooners" Award To Edward Norton.

The Extraterrestrials Don't Do Windows Award
To "Independence Day," a film in which vicious and supposedly technologically advanced space invaders were defeated because their computer system was both Macintosh compatible and a mainframe design. Apparently these particular aliens haven't upgraded since 1985. Still, given the fact that Microsoft's Bill Gates already rules planet earth, it's good to know Apple can still find a market *some*where...

The Never Can Say Goodbye Award
To "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," the Disney animation epic that stayed in release for over 200 days as part of Disney's arduous but eventually successful strategy to keep its string of cel animation musicals which broke the $100 million mark at the boxoffice alive. In an era in which other studios seem hellbent on slashing the video release window to the bone, Disney is to be congratulated on the seriousness with which it still takes every potential theatre admissions dollar.

Original Illustrations by Rick Leddy

The Lost in Space Award
To Tim Burton's "Mars Attacks!," a hundred million dollars worth of star salaries and state-of-the-art digital imaging in search of a plot. Apparently the first thing the martians did when they invaded was to eradicate earth's ability to tell a story clearly...

The Bite the Hand that Feeds You Award
To Steven Spielberg, from a boxoffice standpoint the most successful filmmaker who has ever lived, for producing "Twister" through his Amblin Entertainment and then allowing that blockbuster to come out on videotape while it was still in the top 20 at the national boxoffice. The National Association of Theatre Owners says exhibition needs a six month window of exclusivity on movies to stay healthy. With only four months, 21 days between its May 10 theatrical debut and its October 1 appearance as a sell-through item in supermarkets and video stores throughout the U.S., "Twister" set a land speed record in 1996. After the billions his movies have grossed in moviehouses, if Spielberg doesn't owe it to exhibition to hold the line on the video release window, nobody does.

The Your 15 Minutes of Fame Are Up Award
To Divine Brown, porno actress, Japanese TV pitchperson, and one-time paid paramour of actor Hugh Grant, who was again picked up for prostitution (this time in Vegas) in 1996. The world yawned; what a difference a year makes.

The Twisted Tongue Award for Worst Execution of a Movie Accent
To Dennis Quaid for his be'knight'ed attempt to do British in "Dragonheart." Honorable mention goes to Al Pacino for his Jesse Jackson-ish cadences in a speech to a group of angry black voters as the mayor of New York in "City Hall."

Our 1996 Booby Prize
Goes to Pamela Anderson Lee for her "performance" in "Barb Wire." Honorable mention goes to Lisa Marie as Martian Girl in "Mars Attacks!" and to Mary "Better Late Than Never" Tyler Moore in "Flirting With Disaster."

The Nothing at Stake Award
To vampire brothel flick "Bordello of Blood." Correct us if we're wrong, but wasn't "From Dusk Till Dawn" a bad idea the first time?

The Knock on Wood Award
To Jonathan Taylor Thomas, who followed last year's failure "Tom and Huck" with this year's failure "The Adventures of Pinocchio." Repeat after us Jonathan: Macaulay Culkin.

1996's Most Revealing Star Moment
Demi Moore in "Striptease." What if they paid someone $12 million to take off her clothes and nobody came?

The Cruise Control Award
To Tom Terrific, who, with "Jerry Maguire," became the first star in movie history to see five films in a row gross more than $100 million at the boxoffice. While the rumors of his heroic offscreen deeds may have been somewhat exaggerated (a cloud of skepticism seems to be hovering around that burning yacht he supposedly saved), it's probable Cruise may also have saved a couple of lives in 1996 as well. All in all, one heck of a year.

EDIFICE, INC.

EDIFICE, INC.

EDIFICE, INC.

EDIFICE, INC.

NOW SHOWING AT OVER 500 SCREENS

DESIGN/ BUILD
GENERAL CONTRACTORS

THEATRE SPECIALISTS
704- 568- 5621

Response No. 243

The Not a Friend In the World Award
To Matt Leblanc, David Schwimmer and Jennifer Aniston, popular TV coffeehouse denizens by day, failed movie players by night; for the films "Ed," "The Pallbearer" and "She's the One," respectively. We can't help wondering if the Central Perk cafe serves a "flavor of the month..."

The 1996 Airball
Goes to two pro basketballers attempting the difficult transition from court to screen: Shaquille O'Neal, star of the beyond dreadful Disney kid flick "Kazaam," and Michael Jordan, who only seems to have done better in the unbelievably expensive "Space Jam" until you do the math. Don't quit your day jobs, fellas. Honorable mentions: "Celtic Pride" and "Eddie," which proved that the failure of audiences to embrace basketball comedy "The Air Up There" a few years back was no fluke.

The Maybe We're Just Getting Old Award
To BOXOFFICE MAGAZINE, for still not understanding how the "Beavis and Butt-head" movie could have made so much money.

The Eye of the Beholder Award
To Barbra Streisand, star, director, auteur behind "The Mirror Has Two Faces," a film about an ugly duckling becoming a swan which was universally derided for La Streisand's decision to play her "ugly" scenes in glamorous moviestar lighting and "drab" costuming worthy of Ingrid Bergman in her prime.

1996's Most Politically Correct Film Personality
Disney topper Michael Eisner, who cleaned up Disneyland's "Pirates of the Caribbean" ride so that the thieving, drunken murderous animatronic puppets who inhabit it no longer chase women. Presumably, this now makes them suitable role models for children.

1996's Most Politically Incorrect Film Personality
Kurt Russell who, as "Escape From L.A.'s" 21st-century Clint Eastwood sound-alike Snake Plissken, laid waste to the entire city of Los Angeles in part so he could locate a contranband pack of cigarettes.

The Not Entirely Up to Speed Award
To Keanu Reeves, for bowing out of the "Speed" franchise so he could pursue his real creative goals as frontman for his reputedly mediocre alternative rock band Dogstar. Kind of gives integrity a bad name, doesn't it?

The Apt Title Award, Pt. I
To "Mr. Wrong," the Ellen Degeneres star turn which in retrospect could have been named for the production executive who greenlit it.

The Three Strikes You're Out Award
To Tom Arnold for his three 1996 "comedies:" "Big Bully," "Carpool" and "The Stupids." There ought to be a law.

The Burst Bubble Award
To former MCA Inc. president and COO Sidney J. Sheinberg, a brilliant and visionary executive who, in the days when he was Lew Wasserman's right hand man at Universal, helped discover Steven Spielberg among many other accomplishments. Since departing MCA in the aftermath of the Bronfman family purchase, Sheinberg has produced two feature films: last summer's unsuccessful "Flipper" and this coming summer's, um, eagerly-awaited bigscreen version of "McHale's Navy" starring, aah, Tom Arnold. Maybe it's just a slump...

The Apt Title Award, Pt. II
To "Phenomenon," the film which, along with the similarly successful "Michael" at year's end, proved that John Travolta's appeal is a lot more broad-based than his work in "Pulp Fiction" and "Get Shorty" may have implied. Enough with the comeback stories; the man is unquestionably here to stay.

The Maybe Oedipus Had the Right Idea Award
To Ted Turner who, when cutbacks in his media empire were mandated by the Turner/Time Warner merger, allegedly fired his own son with the words, "You're toast."

The Black Flag Fumigation Award
To "Joe's Apartment." A movie about bugs. Disgusting bugs. Filmed in loving close-up. Gee, how did this one ever fail?

The Carrey-ed Away Award
To "Cable Guy" director Ben Stiller, who stated publicly that the last thing on earth he wanted to be was the first director of a Jim Carrey star vehicle that grossed less than $100 million.

The Didn't They Cover the First Amendment at Your Law School? Award
To John Grisham, for his very public pronouncements that the film "Natural Born Killers" should be subjected to legal action under existing consumer protection laws. Does that make Grisham's bestseller "The Firm" liable for all the bad courtroom melodrama moviegoers have been subjected to in the last few years?

Movies We'd Like to See, Pt. II
Dustin Hoffman and Jack Lemmon in "My Fellow American Buffaloes." Two buddy ex-presidents join forces against a nefarious sitting president. The twist is: they all swear a lot.

The Smorgas-Borg Award
To Alice Krige for her delicious performance as the Borg Queen, the android dominatrix at the hub of "Star Trek: First Contact." Quick. What's the Klingon phrase for "hubba hubba"?

The Least Apt Title Award
To "Unforgettable," the don't-blink-or-you'll-miss-it Ray Liotta suspense film directed by John ("The Last Seduction") Dahl, who should know better.

The Wigged Out Award
To Michelle Pfeiffer, for all those hairstyles in "Up Close and Personal."

The Apt Title Award, Pt. III
To "The Frighteners," for scaring away the audience. Good luck on "Spin City," Michael.

The "Comedy is Tragedy Plus Time" Award
To "Jingle All the Way," another underperforming comedy from Arnold Schwarzenegger. Turbo Man my eye; everybody knows the toy the kids wanted in '96 was "Tickle Me Elmo."

The Nuclear Family Award
To the Brady Bunch. Irradiate them before they sequelize again!

Movies We'd Like to See, Pt. III
"Rin Tin Tin Cup." Kevin Costner essays the role of a blind but raffish amateur golfer who, with the help of his seeing eye dog, makes it all the way to the U.S. Open golf tournament. In a unique twist, the woman he's crazy about is played by Kathy Najimy. Hey, the guy's blind, alright?

The I Fought the Law Award
To Robert Downey Jr. and Martin Lawrence, two performers who were in and out of trouble with the authorities for much of 1996.

The Too Close For Comfort Award
To Sony Pictures Entertainment, for its ill-advised decision to break with tradition by releasing its Jim Carrey comedy "The Cable Guy" to competing theatres in the same over-crowded markets. Yet another reason why this one failed to draw.

The Joke's On Them Award
To "Mystery Science Theatre 3000," a TV show making fun of horrible old movies, which made the leap to the big screen with a movie fully worthy of being screened on the original show. And PS: "This Island Earth" deserved better.

The Least Apt Title Award, Pt. II
To "Brain Candy." The comedy troupe that made it is called "The Kids in the Hall." They were probably trying to leave the theatre.

Worst Trend of the Year
Honest but speechifying attorneys a la "Ghost of Mississippi," "The Chamber" and "A Time to Kill." John Grisham, what hast thou wrought? And while we're on that subject...

The It's a Small World After All Award
To "Independence Day," a film which wiped out almost the entire planet earth only to discover that the seven people left all know each other!

The Number One With a Bullet Award
To Baz Luhrman, for his gun crazy rendering of Shakespeare's "Romeo + Juliet."

ODELL'S

We Pop and Top America's Popcorn

REAL BUTTER
America's Favorite Popcorn Topping

Premium 100% CANOLA OIL
★★ Now Available ★★
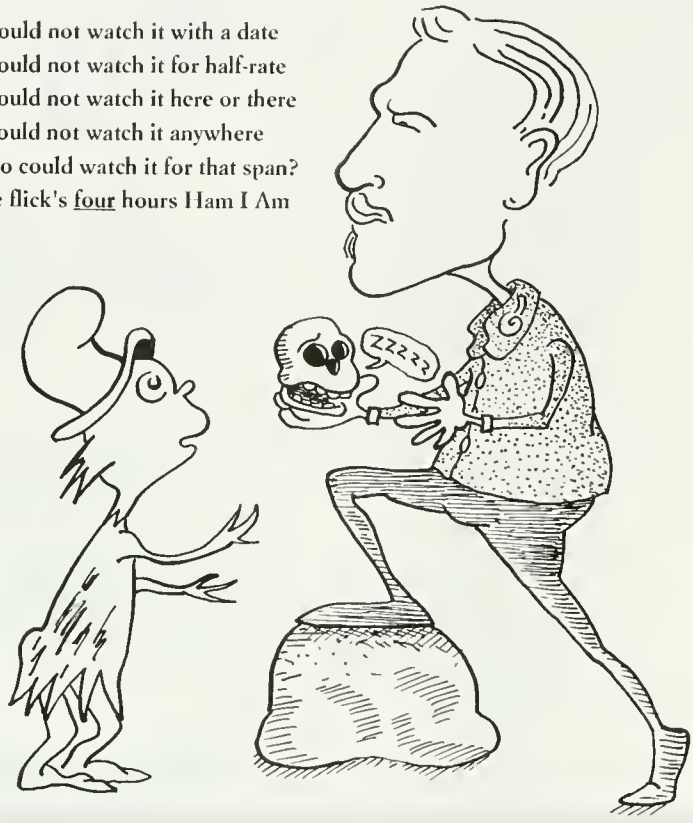
Non-Hydrogenated Popping Oil
No Trans-Fat

SUPUR-KIST TWO
Buttery Flavored Popcorn Topping



For Good Taste and Profits
Call Our 24 Hour Toll Free Number:
1-800-635-0436

Response No. 73

The Great White Hype Award
To Matthew McConaughey and Gwyneth Paltrow, two fine, attractive and talented young actors who got way too much press for way too few movies in 1996.

The Living Dahl Award
To "Matilda" and "James and the Giant Peach," two surprisingly dark, surprisingly intelligent children's films based on books by Roald Dahl.

I would not watch it with a date
I would not watch it for half-rate
I would not watch it here or there
I would not watch it anywhere
Who could watch it for that span?
The flick's four hours Ham I Am

Movies We'd Like to See, Part IV
"Green Eggs and Hamlet." Kenneth Branagh is the Melancholy Dane. The "vocal talents" of Boris Karloff are featured as Sam I Ambic. Seuss and Shakespeare: Two great poets that go great together.

The Going, Going Gone? Award
To Marlon Brando, indulging his passions for eccentric line readings and bizarre costume effects in "The Island of Dr. Moreau." Val Kilmer didn't do himself any favors by sleepwalking through this one, either. Honorable mention: Jack Nicholson who, with two roles in "Mars Attacks!" is twice as culpable as everyone else.

The "Un"-Sound Award
To Drew Barrymore, the only member of Woody Allen's determinedly unmusical cast in "Everybody Says I Love You" who had her songs voiced by someone else.

The Uneasy Rider Award
To "Escape From L.A.'s" Peter Fonda, for travestying the hippie persona that made him a star a quarter of a century ago in the mother of all biker movies. If Fonda's Captain America had behaved like his latter-day surfer dude, his killing at the end of "Easy Rider" would have been a justifiable homicide.

Comeback of the Year
Lauren Bacall, as welcome as the flowers in May in "My Fellow Americans" and "The Mirror Has Two Faces."

Don't Come Back of the Year
"Heaven's Gate" director Michael Cimino. Did anyone even notice he had a film called "Sunchaser" out in 1996?

The Least Apt Title Award, Pt. III
To the Charlie Sheen vs. the space monsters flick "The Arrival." Based on how quickly this one came and went, they should have called it "The Departure."

The Strike While the Iron is Hot Award
To John Travolta, for his tendency to appear in a movie a month ever since his career revived thanks to "Pulp Fiction."

The Actually, You Can Go Home Again But Only If You Live in Toontown Award
To Bugs Bunny, Daffy Duck, Porky Pig and Elmer Fudd, who, along with other Warner Bros. cartoon stars, saw some 600 of their pre-1948 adventures (sold to TV by Jack Warner for 10 cents on the dollar in 1948) re-united with the rest of the library of Warner theatrical cartoons as one little-noticed side-effect of the Time Warner/Turner merger.

The Luck of the Irish Award
To the Irish film industry, for continuing the string of interesting, politically charged historic dramas that have come off the island in recent years.

Movies We'd Like to See, Pt. V
"The Cutthroat Island of Dr. Moreau," in which evil scientist Marlon Brando combines genetic material gleaned from husband and wife team Renny Harlin and Geena Davis with a blank check and makes approximately $60 million and a company called Carolco Pictures disappear.

The That Thing You Overdo Award
To Tom Hanks, for playing the theme song from his directing debut about a sixties pop band again and again and again and again...

The Apt Title Award, Pt. IV
Jean-Claude Van Damme in "Sudden Death."

The 1996 Distinguished Service Award
To Quentin Tarantino, for not appearing as an actor in any commercially released movies for the last 10 months of 1996. There was that character turn on the Spielberg-directed CD-ROM "Steven Spielberg's Director's Chair," but we forgive Mr. Tarantino for it, since we still haven't figured out how to play the darn thing on our office computers.

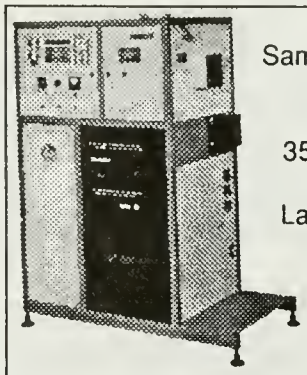
Most Overused Plot Device
Stolen computer discs containing the only known copies of incredibly important computer programs and/or documentation a la "Mission: Impossible," "Eraser" and "Fled." To bad guys everywhere, we offer this simple advice: Back up your data!

The Unkindest Cut of All Award
To Castle Rock, producer-distributor of Kenneth Branagh's four hour-long adaptation of "Hamlet." First it was heralded as the only movie "Hamlet" from which not one syllable of dialogue would be cut. Then Castle Rock revealed that Branagh was working on a two-and-a-half hour version for release in all U.S. markets that weren't New York and L.A. Then that plan was retracted, although the two-and-a-half hour cut apparently exists. To quote "Macbeth:" "Confusion now has made its masterpiece." Way to court those Academy Awards, guys.

The Out of Action Award
To Steven Seagal, Jean-Claude Van Damme and Sylvester Stallone, once high-flying action stars whose films failed miserably at the boxoffice in 1996. The '80s really are over, aren't they?

The Turning a Blind Eye Award
To the makers of "Star Trek: First Contact," for not explaining what happened to the visor ocularly impaired engineer Geordi LaForge wore throughout the run of all previous "Next Generation" titles.

Least Apt Title, Pt. IV
"Sleepers." Star-packed, very expensive and a major disappointment at the boxoffice: A sleeper this wasn't.



The My Life's in Turner-round Award
To Castle Rock and New Line, two companies that were doing just great until Ted Turner bought them a few years back. Both had their worst years ever in 1996, but things were looking up by year's end: with Turner doing everything but making the popcorn for the Time Warner family, it was obvious, even by year's end, that both companies were likely to find themselves in the hands of new ownership.

The Nasty As They Want to Be Award
To "The First Wives Club," which grossed $100 million plus by taking the male-bashing tendencies of flicks like "Waiting to Exhale" to their logical conclusion in a revenge-themed comedy of epic proportions. Honorable mention: the supernatural Generation X version of same known as "The Craft."

The Model Behavior Award
To Uma Thurman for "The Truth About Cats and Dogs" and "Beautiful Girls," two movies in which she played the epitome of idealized male desires. Lovely she is, but we prefer it when she acts.

The 1996 David Caruso Award for Worst Career Move
To Val Kilmer, for letting George Clooney take over as Batman in Warner's billion dollar film franchise in order to explore such sterling career opportunities as "The Ghost and the Darkness," "The Island of Dr. Moreau" and "The Saint."

The Same Old Grind Award
To "Fargo" and "Rumble in the Bronx," two wildly different movies in which human beings were fed into wood chippers. Yeouch!

Same unbeatable optics as the Xenex II

35.5" of std. rack space

Large access doors and panels

Clean and uncluttered interior for easy maintenance

THE NEW KNEISLEY CONSOLE

WHATEVER YOUR CHOICE, CONSOLE OR XENEX II, YOU WILL OBTAIN THE HIGHEST PICTURE QUALITY AVAILABLE.

Write or call for descriptive literature.

KNEISLEY ELECTRIC COMPANY

P O Box 4692
TOLEDO, OHIO 43610

(419) 241-1219 FAX (419) 241-9920

Response No. 41

COMPLETE AUDITORIUM INTERIORS

SOUNDFOLD®

NOT JUST ACOUSTICAL WALL COVERING SYSTEMS

NEW

SOUNDFOLD TRANSPARENT MASKING FABRIC

APPROVED FOR SOUND TRANSPARENT

EXCELLENT FOR SIDE MOVEABLES

FIRE RATED - 54" WIDE

NON SHRINK POLYESTER

SAMPLES SENT ON REQUEST

CALL:

SOUNDFOLD, INTERNATIONAL
THE INDUSTRY LEADER
PO BOX 292125, DAYTON OHIO 45429
1 800 782 8018

Response No. 45

NEW CONSTRUCTION

$50 PER SQUARE FOOT

Pre-engineered steel and masonry buildings on your site anywhere in the United States starting at $50 per sq. ft.

- Most jobs completed in 20 weeks or less
- Circuits, Independents, Newcomers
- 25 years theatre construction experience

RENOVATIONS, ADDITIONS, CONVERSIONS

"Now taking orders for 1997 openings"

1-800-272-2432

LARGO CONSTRUCTION INC.
555 STREET ROAD, BENSALEM, PA 19020
215-245-0300 • FAX 215-638-7933

Response No. 162

AMPAC®

THEATRE CLEANING SERVICES

THOROUGH, CONSISTENT JANITORIAL SERVICES

SEE US AT SHOWEST BOOTH #2027
FOR A FREE ESTIMATE

(408) 372-3728
P.O. BOX 421, MONTEREY, CA 93942

Response No. 24

The Stop Monkeying Around Award
To "Ed" and "Dunston Checks In," the finest movies about cute, troublemaking simians since Ronald Reagan appeared opposite a chimpanzee in "Bedtime for Bonzo." Which is less impressive than it sounds.

The Sophomore Slump Award
To Ed Burns, hot young actor-writer-director for "The Brothers McMullen," dead on arrival with "She's the One." But Burns may have rebounded already; rumor has it he'll star opposite Tom Hanks in Steven Spielberg's "Saving Private Ryan" in the not too distant future.

The What Took You So Long? Award
To "Evening Star" and "Escape From L.A.," sequels to movies that were more than 15 years old. Proof positive that there really is a "development hell."

Best Movie That Nobody Saw
"The Crucible."

Worst Movies That Everybody Saw
"Twister" and "The Rock."

The Try, Try Again Award
To Madonna. All jokes aside, her perseverance in pursuing the role of Evita Peron made her the subject of a lot of jibes over the years, including some in these pages. She did it; she pulled it off; our hats are off to her. Congratulations, Dita—you are now officially forgiven for "Body of Evidence."

The Apt Title Award, Pt. V
To "Thinner," a movie which, appropriately enough, was about unprecedented losses.

The Hole Wide World Award
To "Tin Cup" and "Happy Gilmore," two respectably performing features about a sport nobody is all that interested in.

The Apt Title Award, Pt. VI
"The Fan." Singular. Because there must have been one person somewhere who liked this movie...

The Do You Want Salt With that Scenery? Award
To Kenneth Branagh. Maybe they should have just called it "Ham."

The Apt Title Award, Pt. VIII
To "Fled," which is what everyone who stumbled onto this one did.

Chief Reason for Optimism in 1996
There was still no major film released starring Howard Stern.

Chief Reason for Pessimism in 1996
Howard Stern did, however, film his first movie in '96, playing himself in the feature version of his autobiography "Private Parts," which is slated for release this month. That makes this the last BOXOFFICE MISCELLANEOUS AWARDS where we'll be able to sign off by dissing Howard Stern. Ah well. There's always Tom Arnold...

How To Win Big in Las Vegas in Two Easy Steps

1. Stop by the BOXOFFICE booth (#406) at SHOWEST.

2. Leave your business card.

We're giving away THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS worth of FREE THEATRE EQUIPMENT at SHOWEST 1997.

Because let's face it. Knowledge isn't the only thing you can use.

KNOWLEDGE YOU CAN USE

The largest verified circulation of any publication in the world for theatrical exhibitors.

The longest continuous publication track record of any film-only publication of any kind.

The first film trade publication to become available online.

Who is it?
As if you didn't know.

BOXOFFICE
KNOWLEDGE YOU CAN USE

NOW SHOWING HOLLYWOOD PRODUCTION DIRECTOR
CAMER
FOUR FOR THE SHOW
YOU!
TANGY CANDY
SweeTARTS
"THE TASTE OF FUN"
FRUIT SHAPED
Runts
GRAPE NERDS
TINY TANGY CRUNCHY CANDY
Sprees
light and lively candy
Manufactured by Sunmark Inc.
The Nation's Leading Marketer of Non-Chocolate Confections
Contact Your Concession Supplier or Call: 1-800-225-9525 For More Information.

Response No. 191

APPETITE FOR CONSTRUCTION

Increasingly, theatres are building facilities for branded food stations. But what does this mean for the future of classic concessions?

by R.B.Whitter

One stop shopping. It gave us K-Mart, Wal-Mart, triple-decker gallerias and the Valley Girl. But one stop shopping isn't stopping at the cineplex door.

Very soon, overworked moms and dads may be loading up the kids, going out for a Little Caesar's Pizza Supreme (hold the anchovies), followed by a chucklefest with Jim Carrey, then possibly Dreyer's ice cream for dessert or a stout Godiva cappuccino for the old folks—and they will spend all of this disposable income in one place: your local, self-contained movie emporium.

Industry soothsayers are divided as to what effect this will have on classic concessions like popcorn, Raisinettes and frosty sodas. The boundaries are changing as brand-name treats and fast food chains nudge in alongside the trusty corn-popper, thriving between the Schwarzenegger standees and the video arcade.

"Theatres are looking to expand their menus in order to capture more patrons and increase their income per head," says Margie Mercer, director of marketing for Proctor Companies, the Colorado-based concessions equipment supplier. "Branded foods are popping up everywhere. Patrons are more likely to give it a try if they've tried that pretzel before or they've tried that cookie."

These expanded menus go hand-in-hand with the expansion of megaplex theatres and entertainment centers, which are increasingly evident in major urban markets nationwide. As one wary popcorn concessionaire put it: "Saturday night out at the movies ain't what it used to be." The nine-screen United Artist's Circle Center Theatres and Starport entertainment center in Indianapolis, with its Showscan Theatre, Sega City video arcade and Virtual World virtual reality games, is made complete with a three-tiered food court flush with Pretzelmaker, Mrs. Field's Cookies, Edy's Ice Cream and Sbarro's Pizza.

ENDANGERED SPECIES? Experts are divided on the impact branded foods will have on traditional concessions.

More than ever before, in these futuristic multi-movie palaces, concessions are still king—there's just lots more to choose from. However, don't expect to find such name-brand specialties in small town venues anytime soon. "You have to have bodies," quips Cathy Warning, director of concessions for the United Artists Theatre Circuit. "Bodies walking through the door so your spoilage and your food costs won't eat you alive. And the facility has to have a certain size—storage space, selling space, you have to have a large enough lobby." She emphasizes the importance of regional identification with a given product: in different markets, UA offers Pizzeria Uno or Little Caesar's by the slice and selected flavors of Dreyer's ice cream instead of East-coast favorites like Edy's.

At the Circle Center food court and similar UA branded concession venues, hot pizza, brownies and pretzels are prepared and cooked onsite by UA employees trained by fast food experts. Companies like Mrs. Fields either license or franchise to the theatre chain and provide full training. "You see them cooking, there's a lot of activity. We felt it was important that people see that it's being cooked and it's real food," Warning adds.

The name brand food retailers' presence is felt immediately upon entering the lobby. Familiar trademarks are promoted with large signage while menu boards draw the eye to photographs depicting tantalizing treats.

Proctor Companies has designed several high-profile stands for General Cinemas and United Artists, among others, drafting blueprints during initial construction or new renovation. Each stand is a custom-tailored array of provocative logos and products carefully chosen for each market. Proctor's Margie Mercer points out: "Obviously in some markets espresso is not going to go over as well as in others. Nachos are a natural in Southern California. It depends upon the nature of the audience." Cathy Warning concurs that demographics must be taken into account. "We used our in-house survey system to go to our customers and find out what types of food they wanted." She says UA first narrowed audience preferences, like soft yogurt, bottled waters, etc., then polled again for the most popular brand names.

Regal Cinemas' Chesapeake, Va. cinema and FunScape is the site of the chain's first experiment with branded foods. Pictured here are some of Regal's franchise partners: Pizza Hut, Arby's and Taco Bell.

Sometimes product and theatre placement require fine tuning. In the lobby of Manhattan's Sony Lincoln Square, Godiva coffees and chocolates were sold from a separate cart but were moved behind the concession counter after a trial run. The ebb and flow of patrons and waiting lines are of constant concern.

But what about soda pop, candies, and that sturdy classic, buttered popcorn? How are these golden oldies faring in the face of non-traditional competitors driven by instant name recognition?

"Long term, I think it's a threat to us," says Roy Johnston, marketing director for Cargill Vegetable Oils, manufacturer of PopWise Popcorn Oil. "We're competing for the same consumer dollar." Frank Haffer, concessions VP for Edwards Cinema, agrees. "Candy's going down," he asserts. "Any time you add more items, you have an incremental increase in sales, but also it takes away from others." (Some Edwards theatres sell regional edibles like Ray's Pizza and Seattle's Best Coffee, but Edwards Cinemas' current foray into the brand wars is purely on a trial basis, a financial experiment with only six months to a year of probation.)

"I think it's a little unfortunate that [theatre chains] have decided to expand their offering," says Michael Perrino, division business manager for Weaver Popcorn. "There's got to be a trade-off. I have to believe their profit margin is eroding a little bit."

"Everybody associates popcorn with movies. Popcorn sales are still very strong and it remains one of the highest profit items," assures Proctor's Margie Mercer. But according to UATC's Cathy Warning, "Some days there's a lot of [profit] cannibalization. If we do lose, it looks like it's in the popcorn."

> "Branded foods are popping up everywhere. Patrons are more likely to give it a try if they've tried* that pretzel before or they've tried that *cookie."
>
> —Margie Mercer, Proctor

Associates Warning and Mercer also split on the question of soft drink sales. Warning finds drink sales stable due to the pizza/pretzel thirst factor, yet Mercer sees a slight decline with the health-conscious rise of iced teas and bottled waters—a national sales downturn she observes in supermarkets and theatres alike. On the opposite end from the health nuts, for those who instead want more bang for their buck, gourmet coffees certainly offer a potent alternative to comparative caffeine lightweights like perennials Coke and Pepsi.

Over at the Seattle's Best offices, faithful retail-marketer Charlie Severn finds little evidence of conflict, calling gourmet coffee simply a new niche market. But the question remains, how many niches can one cine-port accommodate? Currently, each theatre operation is constantly tracking the fiscal interactions between the stalwart corn kernel and the designer yogurt or roasted bean.

Regal Cinemas is currently trying out branded foods in their three cinema/FunScape entertainment center complexes and has franchise agreements with Taco Bell, Pizza Hut, Arby's, Blimpies, and Dairy Queen/Orange Julius. They've found that traditional concession sales have stayed the same; at all three sites, says Rob Del Moro, Regal's VP of food service, "we saw no cannibalization of our normal concession operations." In fact, the Chesapeake, Va. location, the first in the Regal circuit to carry branded foods, had "the third highest concession per cap in our company" in 1996, and that's on top of branded food sales, according to Del Moro. "[And] our traditional concession stand is about 75 feet away from our food court.

"That's the major piece of information, because our fear, as well as probably our competitors', is that you begin to cannibalize

“ ★★★★ ”

ANOTHER
OUTSTANDING PERFORMANCE.

Every night Server Popcorn and Butter Dispensers receive rave reviews in top theatre chains across the country. Unmatched reliability—backed by an exclusive two-year-warranty—combined with superior performance has earned Server leading behind-the-counter-roles since 1948. To see just how well Server can perform for you, call 800-558-8722.

Server Products

©1996 Server Products, Inc.

Response No. 172

your highest-margin items, which are your popcorn and your soft-drinks and your candy, with additional food," Del Moro adds. "But by separating it like we did and having its own location and seating, we found that people are just adjusting their dining experience. Instead of eating somewhere else, people are actually eating dinner [in the food court], and then walking over to the theatre, and just spending their normal concession money as they would if they were eating dinner elsewhere."

Regal's decision to go with franchise name brand foods followed a telling experiment the circuit conducted between branded food service vs. non-branded. "We did a regular desert ice cream shop and compared that to one of our Dairy Queens, and we did a non-branded taco facility," says Del Moro. "And we discovered that the branded food substantially out-performed the non-branded food."

John Evans, sales VP for Gold Medal popcorn and concession equipment, is pragmatic about the future of the trendy brand-name bandwagon. "Wal-Mart is doing branding—they've got McDonald's running half their snack bars. Theatres are traditionally cautious. It may be [good for] some groups and your worst Freddy Krueger nightmare for other groups."

One wonders if Big Macs or Taco Bell Grandes will ever make it to the multiplex. Don't rip open your ketchup packets prematurely. Everyone agrees that theatre foods must meet a vital criterion—however savory the meal, each morsel must be convenient to eat in a darkened theatre seat. Multiply this dilemma by the thousands and you can imagine the clean-up involved after a capacity crowd heads for the exits. However, Regal's Del Moro says that when patrons do eat pizza and tacos in the theatre, "it's no messier than nachos. But we just don't have a lot of [people eating these items in the auditoriums]. We were prepared to address that and monitor that as we went along, but what we're finding is because we have seating for 140 people in the food court, people don't even try to bring it in, they take it to the tables and sit down and eat."

A Dreyer's ice cream and frozen yogurt dispenser at UATC's Greenwood Plaza in Englewood, Colo.

But there is also the emotional impact of such a change. Many folks consider that familiar buttery smell to be a sacred part of the moviegoing experience. Are they ready for grilled onions and guacamole?

Like it or not, the mix is changing—though not for everybody, and not everywhere. "Preparing popcorn and selling it, we've been doing for 70 years," Cathy Warning notes. "Preparing pizza and pretzels takes a lot more planning and preparation. I think [UA is] going to stay limited. Too many items and you start to have problems with lines—and that's the number one deterrent to people."

The logistics of maneuvering eager throngs of hungry Mel Gibson fans is sometimes staggering. But Margie Mercer finds that "they're capturing more people at the stands," offering more options for increasingly discriminating palates. Some nibble sweets, some count their cholesterol and, as always, most throw caution to the winds and indulge their cravings when they go out to the movies, a time-tested social event. Yet the consensus remains that for the most part, only the larger cities and film markets can support these high-pitched expenditures or provide room enough for their adequate display. And PopWise Popcorn marketer Roy Johnston would like us to remember one thing: "I don't know if there's another product in the world that anybody makes more true profit on than theatre popcorn. It's wonderful."

DIGITAL ALONE IS NOT ENOUGH.

THX®

VISIT OUR BOOTH #1301-1302 AND LEARN WHY.

CUSTOM THEATRE DESIGN · HIGHER EQUIPMENT PERFORMANCE · PROPER SOUND ISOLATION

THX IS A REGISTERED TRADEMARK OF LUCASFILM LTD.

Response No 9

BRIGHTEN YOUR IMAGE™

Have your theatre screens cleaned by the best!

THEATRE SERVICES CORPORATION

developers of the

"World's finest screen cleaning process"™

A REAL CROWD PLEASER!

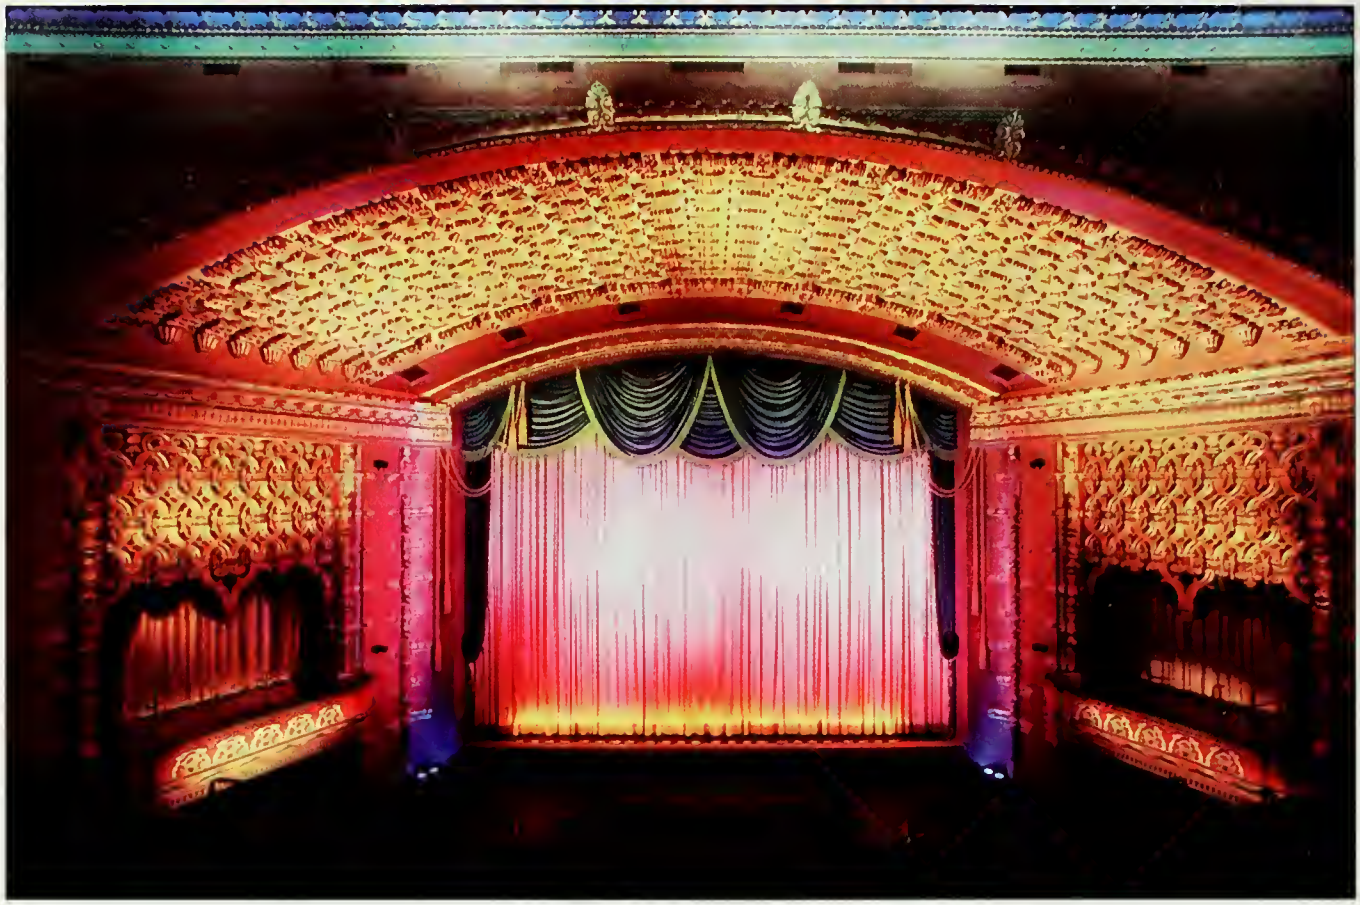
Screens aren't our only specialty. Let Theatre Services with our Screaming Eagle Textiles provide all your theatre needs – chemicals, drapery, carpet, acoustical wall carpet, seat fabrics, drapery fabrication and installation, seats, aisle lighting, screens, frames, motors and more.

Celebrating our 10th year of customer satisfaction!

Just one call does it all!

THEATRE SERVICES CORPORATION

Screaming Eagle Textiles™



OUR CARPET & DRAPERY COLLECTION

1-800-345-5898 1-800-545-0114

★ Fax: 972-699-7355 ★ Phone: 972-690-0615 ★

★ P.O. Box 835932 ★ Richardson, Texas 75083-5932 ★

ITEA International Theatre Equipment Association

PALACE GUARD

Tinseltown Exhibitors Ensure Resplendent Moviehouses of Old Still Live On by Jon Alon Walz

Across America and throughout the world, grander and ever more ambitious megaplexes continue to reshape the moviegoing experience. In many cases, their beautiful architecture recalls a vanished era, when ornate and luxuriant single-screen "movie palaces" set exhibition industry standards.

Most of the great palaces are gone now—victims of changing tastes and changing times. But through a combination of good luck, a temperate climate, and a fortuitous proximity to the major Hollywood production centers, Los Angeles is still home to numerous well-preserved classic "palaces"—many of which are still open to the architect, the theatre historian and the general public alike.

Downtown Los Angeles—to the locals, the phrase instantly conjures up visions of desolation, poverty, filth and barbarous crime—and not without cause. But this forgotten historic district in the nation's film capital also holds many extraordinary and unexpected treasures. Once a month, the Los Angeles Conservancy hosts a tour through the once-grand boulevards, alleyways and hidden doorways of downtown, transporting attendees into the magical world of L.A. entertainment circa 1920—a time when dying vaudeville houses were beginning to be retrofitted for film exhibition and ecstatic developers were dutifully constructing grand new buildings that celebrated through architecture the larger-than-life glamour and fantasy that movies embodied.

Lavish to exuberant extremes, but available to anyone with a quarter in his pocket and a couple hours to invest, an outing to the town movie palace became as regular in the America of the day as a trip to the market. In every community, these showpiece buildings became the virtual town center, drawing droves of entertainment-starved patrons who had, save for minimal radio programming, no other popular culture at their disposal.

The population of the U.S. was approximately 100 million throughout the '20s and into the early '30s. And weekly movie attendance stood at that same figure: 100 million. For the first time, "mass entertainment had burst upon the world," as Geoffrey Perrett puts it in his book America in the Twenties. During the palace building boom from 1921-1932, over 22,000 one-screen wonders were built across the country.

Inspirations for these buildings were two-fold. First and foremost, their mammoth size and sponsorship by rich developers allowed a group of fresh young architects and designers a chance to make grand, once-in-a-lifetime design statements on virtually unlimited budgets. Borrowing and stealing outright from French palaces, Egyptian burial tombs, Greek amphitheaters, Asian citadels, and European opera houses, such designers as S. Charles Lee, Thomas W. Lamb, John Eberson and the firm of Rapp & Rapp became industry legends as masters of their craft.

Secondly, the attitudes and wants of the marketplace demanded such large and important measures. Only one in 10 families owned a car, and while radio was available to the general public, its powers to entertain could not compare to the all-encompassing splendor of an evening at the cinema. No one wanted to sit at home anymore.

"Everywhere there was a thirsty curiosity about the lives of the rich," notes Ben Hall in his loving book The Best Remaining Seats. "Hollywood had already discovered this secret, and rags-to-riches was filmdom's bread and butter. As movies created their own glamorous climate, smart exhibitors sought to capitalize on it. And theatres...were growing in sophistication along with their audiences... and strove to keep pace with each new celluloid extravaganza."

During the palace building boom from 1921-1932, over 22,000 one-screen wonders were built across the country.

A wide, bustling street named "Broadway" is renowned as Los Angeles' first great movie district. Exhibitor Sid Grauman's first Los Angeles theatre, the Million Dollar, built in 1918, not only served as the anchor for the dozen or so theatres to follow up and down Broadway, but introduced to L.A. a grand showman who would change, direct and revolutionize the movie going experience of an entire nation.

The 2,345-seat Million Dollar became the first of six major movie palaces to open along the boulevard. (Today, the theatre, after having programmed Spanish films for years, has been restored for live entertainment use.)

In 1919, Grauman bought the 900-seat Rialto five blocks south of the Million Dollar, and set about converting and redesigning it to better suit his taste. Built in 1910 by J.M. Quinn, the Rialto, along with the neighboring 775-seat Cameo (also built in 1910), were designed specifically for the continuous exhibition of movies (rather than being converted vaudeville houses), and are considered to be the first as such in the city.

By 1921, the building boom was in full swing, and the big boys were finding their way west to L.A. Marcus Loew, a well-heeled New Yorker, came to town that year after trailblazing across the U.S., building immense theatres in cities near and far. He bought the southwest corner of Los Angeles' busiest downtown intersection, 7th and Broadway, and erected the 2,450-seat Loews State—then the city's largest cinema (still in operation today).

Grauman built his next theatre, the Egyptian, in L.A.'s booming suburb, Hollywood. Seating 1,800, the Egyptian had the distinction of being the first major motion picture theatre built outside of downtown. More significantly, the theatre provided the critical mass that would galvanize Hollywood into becoming the movie capital of the world.

The Douglas Fairbanks vehicle "Robin Hood" was premiered on the Egyptian's opening night, complete with Sid Grauman's sensational all-singing, all-dancing Prologue that was thematically programmed to complement the feature. The next day, Grauman was back at work, planning his final downtown theatre, the (now razed) 3,485-seat Metropolitan. Opening in 1923 one block west of Broadway, the Metropolitan not only took the seating capacity crown away from the Loews State, but became the largest single auditorium ever constructed in Los Angeles for the movies.

The years from 1923 through 1931 saw four spectacular palaces built downtown, the likes and quality of which are still unmatched today: the New Orpheum, the United Artists, the Los Angeles, and the Tower.

The beautiful New Orpheum on 9th and Broadway was the last Los Angeles home for the Orpheum Vaudeville circuit. It is still in use today as a movie theatre and as a popular location for television and film shoots, and contains one of the last fully operational Mighty Wurlitzer organs in the country. Scenes for recent episodes of "Seinfeld," as well as portions of the Tom Hanks movie "That Thing You Do!" and the upcoming Mel Gibson vehicle "Conspiracy Theory," were filmed in the Orpheum.

Around the same time, Charlie Chaplin, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and D.W. Griffith, tired of their handling by the "big studios" of the day, partnered up to form a new studio they dubbed United Artists. Their flagship theatre, the United Artists, on 9th and Broadway, opened in December of 1927 with a screening of "My Best Girl," Mary Pickford's first film for the studio. This overwhelming gothic cathedral was patterned by architect C. Howard Crane after several European churches Pickford fell in love with during her travels. While it no longer shows films, the theatre has been meticulously restored top to bottom by the University Cathedral, which hosts regular religious services inside. Interestingly, the former movie palace contains and displays the most extensive collection of bibles outside of the Vatican.

The downtown openings of the Tower Theatre and the Los Angeles Theatre, in 1927 and 1931 respectively, introduced

WESTWOOD PER'PLEX'ED

Southern California's popular college-town hub and home to a concentration of single-screen palaces faces the megaplex

Westwood Village, one of Los Angeles' most prestigious theatre zones, may soon be flooded with upwards of 25 new screens, if two competing multiplex projects come to fruition in this community on the border of the UCLA campus.

Over the objections of some community groups, Mann Theatres, a major land owner and theatre operator in the Village, is proposing to demolish an archaic four-plex as well as a small single-screen venue, the Regent, to make way for a 3,000 seat 12-plex. And the Arba Group, an L.A.-based land developer, is proposing a 14- to 15-plex about two blocks away that would anchor a large retail complex. No theatre chain is currently attached to the Arba project.

Currently, Westwood Village boasts six Mann-owned single screen theatres and one four-plex. On the outskirts of the Village, General Cinemas runs a four-plex, Pacific a single screen, and United Artists a three-plex.

As development in Westwood has been generally regulated by a "Specific Plan" since the 1930s, an amendment must be made to accommodate more theatre seats. But this is seen as more a formality than a problem. Nevertheless, concerns by residents of the Village about parking and gridlock continue to hinder many development proposals.

Several highly publicized shootings in the Village in the late '80s are blamed for turning this entertainment hot-spot into the virtual ghost-town it is today. Recent openings of a few upscale clothing stores and restaurants, including a large 24-hour deli, show the area may be on the upswing, but not in ways matching its decade-old heyday.

The construction of either project would create the largest multiplex built in Los Angeles in the '90s, and could jump-start the commercial prospects of the area. A continuing dialogue between area residents, Mann, Arba, and city councilman Michael Feuer, will determine the fate of these proposals. An environmental report commissioned by Feuer was expected at the end of February.

—Jon Alon Walz

architect S. Charles Lee and the first dedicated sound theatre to the city. The Tower opened with the exclusive L.A. run of the world's first sound feature, "The Jazz Singer." The picture played for a completely sold-out year in a 900-seat auditorium that won young hot-shot Lee much acclaim in his field.

The Los Angeles Theatre was an outlandish, costly architectural success for Lee and developer H.L. Gumbiner (who was also the owner of the Tower). Many consider it one of the of the most outstanding movie theatres ever built. Both the Los Angeles and the Tower still exist today as popular film production sites and special event locations.

Theatre construction downtown ended in 1932 with the opening of the (now-closed) 1,600-seat Roxie Theatre on Broadway. Hollywood at this point had virtually usurped downtown's grasp on the entertainment patron and dollar. In the years leading up to 1932, Hollywood Boulevard had slowly become the place in Los Angeles to see first-run movies. Every studio was now having glamorous, celebrity-laden premieres of their new films in Hollywood, shunning downtown altogether. The Hollywood Theatre (several storefronts west of the Egyptian) is considered to be the first movie theatre built in Hollywood. Dating back to 1911, this former nickelodeon remained in operation through the late '80s.

Many new theatres opened in Hollywood in the years following the dedication of Grauman's Egyptian, and several of the legitimate theatre venues also began showing movies on a part-time basis to capitalize on the appetites of the needy, demanding movie audiences. This theatre boom brought some remarkable edifices to Hollywood.

The odd and wonderful Vista Theatre, built in 1923 at the intersection of Sunset and Hollywood Boulevards, was said to have begun as a Spanish-styled theatre, but upon the opening of King Tut's Tomb in 1922, the owner decided, in mid-construction, to switch to an Egyptian theme. This one-of-a-kind landmark has the distinction of having premiered several movies made by iconoclast director Ed Wood, and is still showing first-run fare today.

By 1927, movie studio profitability was at an all-time high as movie attendance began striding toward 100 million paid admissions per week. Developers were building with furious haste. No theatre could be big enough or built quickly enough to satisfy. The '20s were roaring, and roaring loudly.

Sid Grauman was putting finishing touches on his most impressive theatre yet, the Chinese, slated to open on May 18, 1927 on Hollywood Boulevard. As the story goes, Grauman was rushing one day through the Chinese's construction site and accidentally stepped in a block of wet cement in the courtyard, leaving a distinct footprint. Always thinking like a showman, he got an idea: footprints...handprints...cement. And the rest, as they say, is history. On the night of the theatre's premiere, Norma Talmadge, star of the opening night feature, Cecil DeMille's "King of Kings," became the first celebrity to be immortalized in cement in the theatre's courtyard.

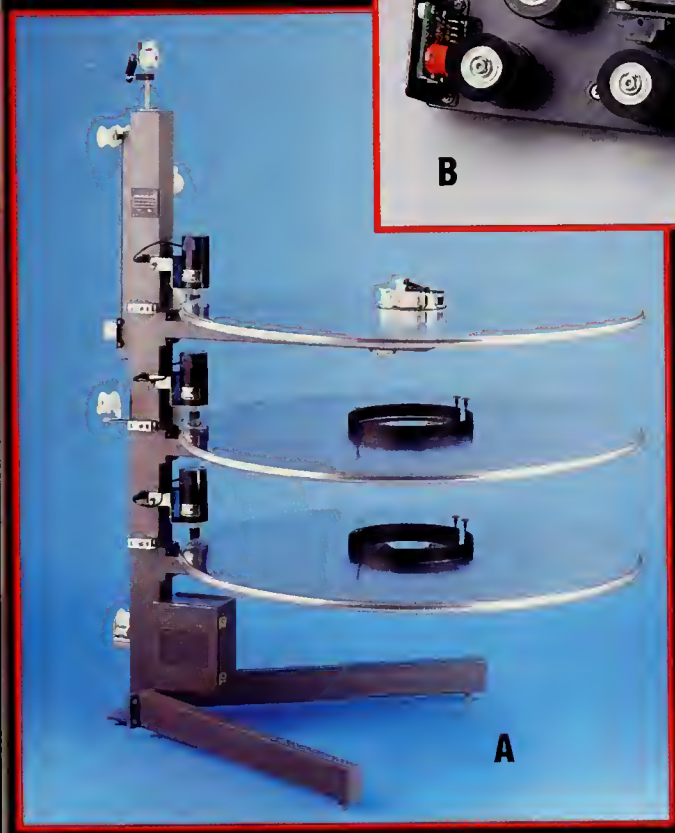
Hollywood's top tourist attraction, Mann's Chinese Theatre (then Grauman's), circa 1960.

The Chinese, which celebrates its 70th anniversary next month, is without a doubt one of the most revered and recognized pieces of architecture on the planet. It remains a popular host for film premieres and is the top tourist stop in Hollywood. Mann Theatres bought control of the Chinese in 1972, and added two smaller auditoriums to the complex in 1979.

Following the Chinese, the 2,800-seat, art-deco Hollywood Pantages Theatre joined the boulevard as home for Twentieth Century Fox's first-run movies and premieres. (This masterpiece theatre survives today as home to touring Broadway shows and concerts.)

But then, in 1929, the roar of the '20s died. The stock market suddenly crashed, leaving the nation in a downward spiral of economic distress that led to a 10-year Depression. In 1931 and 1932 the studios saw their first major losses ever, but quickly returned to modest profitability by mid-1933. However, the Depression killed off the nation's impulse to see a movie a week, and exhibitors were challenged for the first time to reach out and draw patrons into their theatres.

Still, these magical palaces of the movies were an oasis of escapism in a nation on the brink financial ruin. "As the crisis deepened in 1932, Walter Gifford, the head of President Hoover's Organization on Unemployment Relief, advocated the distribution of free movie tickets to the poor," writes Andrew Bergman in his book We're In The Money: Depression America and its Films. "According to Gifford, the movies were a necessity to be ranked just behind food and clothing."



A top architect like S. Charles Lee, who had designed six or seven theatres a year in 1930 and 1931, had no commissions in 1932, two in 1933, and one in 1934. By contrast, in 1936, a year that finally saw movie attendance rise for the first time in four years, Lee had over 20 new design jobs to contend with.

The end of the Depression saw the rise of Los Angeles' final destination theatre area: Westwood Village. Just across the street from the UCLA campus, Westwood was a master-planned shopping and entertainment area that went so far as to incorporate a stringently enforced Spanish-revival architectural code. S. Charles Lee's Fox-Westwood Village theatre opened in 1931, becoming the aesthetic cornerstone of Westwood Village. It was an 1,800-seat quasi-art-deco behemoth that, because of the times, was one of the least adorned new theatres of the year.

The Bruin Theatre, across the street from the Fox-Village, was completed in 1937 with 900 seats. In 1940, the Crest (recently refurbished by Pacific Theatres) opened just a block south of the Village, and in 1970 the National became the last single screen theatre to be built in Los Angeles. Today, the Fox (now called the Village), the Bruin, and the National, along with three single-screen theatres and a four-plex in Westwood, are all owned by Mann Theatres.

"We own several big single screen auditoriums that have very prestigious and rich legacies," notes Rich Given, executive director of advertising and marketing for Mann Theatres. "These theatres are still in favor for lavish industry events and premieres and, more importantly, are still in favor with moviegoers for event movies like the recently re-released 'Star Wars.' They are a vanishing breed definitely worth keeping viable."

21ST CENTURY CONTROL in the PROJECTION ROOM Today!

A

B

C

D

E

A – Switchless Platter System
Model # LP1003 & Model # LP1005

B – Electronic Fail Safe Cue Sensor
Model #'s: 30025-1 Single Cue • 30025-2 Dual Cue • 30025-3 Triple Cue

C – Film Cleaner Projector Mounting Bracket
Model # 40017

D – Film Cleaner
Model # 40012 (35MM) & Model # 40011 (35/70MM)

E – Professional Dimmer
Model # LD1010 with Remote (Pictured) Model # LD1000 without Remote

SPECO
Systems & Products Enginering Company

709 N 6th Street • Kansas City, KS 66101
1-800-633-5913 • FAX: (913) 321-7439

Response No. 44

Some of the major circuits have made an important commitment over the years to the preservation and restoration of many historically significant single-screen movie houses in the Los Angeles area. Working hand-in-hand with the Los Angeles Conservancy, a non-profit organization dedicated to the revitalization of the city's historic architecture, Disney and Pacific Theatres spent millions restoring the facade and the interior of Hollywood Boulevard's El Capitan Theatre (pictured on page 132). Built in 1926 as a legitimate theatre, it was remodeled into a movie theatre in 1942. Much of the extravagant East Indian detailing that had been plastered or painted over throughout the years has been meticulously restored to beyond-new condition.

"The El Capitan and the Crest are our flagship theatres, and we have put a tremendous amount of time into maintaining and restoring them," says Chan Wood, Pacific Theatres' executive vice president, head film buyer and director of marketing. "The El Capitan is the highest grossing single screen theatre in the country—one, because it is booked well, and a theatre is only as good as the product; and two, because the restoration has enhanced an already perfect moviegoing experience."

United Artists owned and operated the Egyptian for many years before its recent closure. It was purchased in 1993 as the permanent home for the American Cinematheque, an organization that currently programs specialty films in several venues around the city. The theatre was badly damaged by the 1994 Northridge earthquake, which, ironically, was a blessing in disguise. Three million dollars of the total $9 million restoration cost has come from an earthquake insurance bond the city of Los Angeles held on the property.

The Egyptian Theatre in 1925, during its heyday. The American Cinematheque is currently working with the Community Redevelopment Agency to restore the theatre, which was severely damaged in the 1994 Northridge earthquake.

According to Barbara Smith, director of the American Cinematheque, "We are doing our best to make the theatre look as it did in 1923. The forecourt will return to the opened-up way it looked before, which should be very spectacular, and the interior will be wonderful as well. We are ecstatic about reopening this theatre in the spring of 1998."

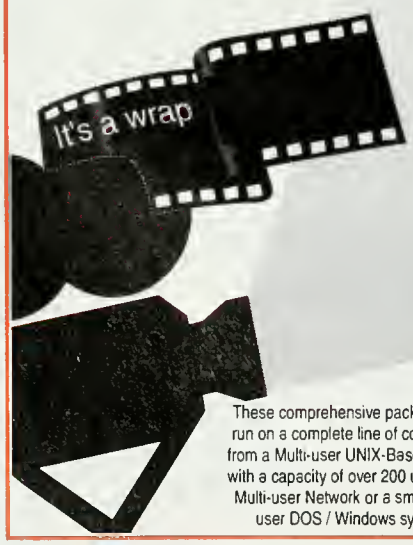
Landmark Theatres' dedication to keeping South Pasadena's historic Rialto a first-run art and foreign film venue has kept the wrecking ball away on more than one occasion. Twice in the '70s, master plans were drawn up by developers that, in one instance, would have converted the theatre into a shopping center, and in another, demolished it into parking lot. Built in 1925, the Rialto is possibly the oldest converted vaudeville house still in operation outside of downtown L.A.

In the '70s, Cineplex Odeon bought several neighborhood theatres in Hollywood. The

The TOTAL SOLUTION from McAllister Associates, Inc.

TMAS
Theatre Management & Accounting Systems

Customized to Fit Your Unique Needs



Online Interface to Your Automatic Ticketing and Concession Systems

Priced to Fit Your Budget

Easy to Use

THEATRE CHAIN SOFTWARE

- Booking and Film Remittance Including Interface to A/P and Advertising
- Box Office and Distribution Analysis - Distributors Reports Estimated Accrual
- Concession Sales Analysis and Yield Reporting - Inventory and History Compare
- Cooperative Advertising and Media Billing and Receivable Remittance Offsets
- General Accounting Systems - General Ledger, Accounts Payable, Payroll

These comprehensive packages will run on a complete line of computers, from a Multi-user UNIX-Based system with a capacity of over 200 users, to a Multi-user Network or a small single user DOS / Windows system.

McAllister Associates, Inc.
274 Main Street, Reading, MA, USA 01867-3611
Telephone: (617) 942-0700 FAX (617) 942-0240

Response No. 12

THANKS TO YOU

Willming Reams

CONTINUES TO BE THE LEADING PRODUCER OF POLICY AND PROMOTIONAL TRAILERS FOR EXHIBITION.

Willming Reams Animation, Inc.
325 East Ramsey Road
San Antonio, TX 78216
1-800-972-6468
210-342-2141 Fax 210-342-1523
e-mail: WRANIM8@aol.com
www.zdepth.com/reams

See us at ShoWest Booth 206

Gordon on La Brea Avenue has been renamed the Showcase after a wonderful restoration, and the Fairfax, which has been tri-plexed, still packs 'em in as a second-run venue.

Surprisingly, only a few major theatres built in Los Angeles during the boom years have been lost to the wrecking crews. Some, like the S. Charles Lee-designed La Reina in Sherman Oaks or the Studio City in Studio City, have been converted into retail establishments. Others like 1926's Cathay Circle or 1932's Fox-Florence have, unfortunately, been razed. But the majority of L.A. palaces still stand, while by contrast, fewer than half of the palaces built around the country remain.

Taking a leadership position in preservation and publicity efforts on behalf of the local historical movie palaces, the Los Angeles Conservancy is active in protecting threatened properties and testifying in court to their historic significance.

"Each time there is a theatre in question, we get involved," says Linda Dishman, executive director of the Los Angeles Conservancy. "Right now, three Broadway theatres, the Cameo, Arcade, and Roxie, are targeted for conversion into retail space. We are working with the developer to ensure that the conversion is done as sensitively as possible." This means keeping as much of the architecture of the non-operational theatres intact as possible.

Another way in which the Conservancy helps the cause is through a downtown film program that runs every June and draws over 10,000 people to the area, according to Dishman. "[The film program] not only brings business to the theatres, but it helps create new constituents for preservation and helps expose them to the historic downtown architecture that few know about."

"[In the '20s,] there was a thirsty curiosity about the lives of the rich. As movies created their own glamorous climate, smart exhibitors sought to capitalize on it. And theatres were growing in sophistication along with their audiences."

The biggest threat to the survival of the theatres downtown is lease expiration, as the properties' owners might be inclined to sell out history for the more lucrative return a mini-mall might provide. According to the Conservancy's Gordon Johnson, most of the downtown theatres were built to anchor a developers shopping area. Due to the high patron draw of theatres and the potential for spill into their stores, space for theatres was leased to the theatre owner at below-market rates for anywhere from 60 to 80 years. Many leases are up this decade. The State has one year left on its original lease; the Orpheum's is up in five years; and the lease on downtown's Palace, a beautiful vaudeville house that still exhibits first-run movies, expires this summer.

Their collective fate is still up in the air as the proverbial clock ticks on these amazing pieces of Americana. As such theatres as the El Capitan and the Crest have proven, well maintained, technologically advanced single screen theatres can be incredibly profitable for owners willing to make a commitment to the property.

The magic of the movie experience has not been lost on audiences, despite their acclamation to the neighborhood multiplex. Bosley Crowther, former critic for the New York Times observes, "The total effect of a motion picture is conditioned to a greater or lesser extent by the environment is which it is shown." And grand east-coast showman Samuel "Roxy" Rothafel believed that the movies shown in these palaces were, in most cases, secondary to the overall effect of the place.

The import of these environments are attested to as the top circuits strive to recapture their essence in modern megaplexes, designing their auditoriums in homage to the palaces of old. But it's good to know that present-day Los Angeles exhibitors care enough about their industry's history to preserve the real things—taking a heartfelt role as L.A.'s Palace Guard.

Creative Producers Of Quality

Theatre Film Trailers Now Using

Digital Picture And Sound Technology

"Trust A Company With Experience"

FILMACK STUDIOS

1327 S. Wabash Avenue Chicago, IL 60605-2574 U.S.A.

TEL 312-427-3395 FAX 312-427-4866

1-800-FILMACK (1-800-345-6225)

Featuring Scotchgard™ Film Protector Coating

— Exhibiting at SHOWEST - Booth #313 —

Response No. 61

A SIMPLE SOLUTION TO A LONG-IGNORED PROBLEM.

Introducing the TS9040-3W three-way stage system from Electro-Voice. The only stage system that provides uniform high-frequency coverage.

NOW EVERY SEAT IS A GOOD SEAT.

EVI AUDIO CINEMA SYSTEMS

See us at booth 212-215.

Response No. 154

BLUE RIBBON AWARDS

That's right, folks, it's time once again for Boxoffice's semi-annual Blue Ribbon Awards. The accompanying ballot is for your vote on the good, the bad and the most popular of a half-a-year's worth of movies. These awards, established in 1932, are voted directly by you and seek to recognize the aesthetic and commercial value of the following films, released during the fall and winter of 1996/1997. Voting covers three categories: the most popular film, the best film in terms of artistic success, and, conversely, the worst film of the period. Remember, every vote counts, so please mail your completed ballot NO LATER THAN APRIL 5!

The results of this Blue Ribbon Awards poll will be published in our June issue. The next round of voting will be held in October and will cover 1997's spring and summer releases. We have attempted to present as complete a list as possible of films released between SEPTEMBER 1, 1996 and MARCH 1, 1997. We have not included reissues of previously released movies. Remember that SOME OF YOUR FAVORITE FILMS MIGHT BE MISSING BECAUSE THEY WERE NOT RELEASED WITHIN THE TIME FRAME. There is space at the bottom of your ballot to write in any film missing from the list. So SEND YOUR BALLOT TODAY!

1. ABSOLUTE POWER
Clint Eastwood, Gene Hackman (Columbia)

2. ADRENALINE: FEAR THE RUSH
Christopher Lambert, Natasha Henstridge (Legacy)

3. ALBINO ALLIGATOR
Matt Dillon, Gary Sinise (Miramax)

4. AMERICAN BUFFALO
Dustin Hoffman (Goldwyn)

5. THE ASSOCIATE
Whoopi Goldberg (Buena Vista)

6. THE BEAUTICIAN AND THE BEAST
Fran Drescher, Timothy Dalton (Paramount)

7. BEAUTIFUL THING
Scott Neal (Sony Classics)

8. BEAVIS AND BUTT-HEAD DO AMERICA voices: Mike Judge (Paramount)

9. BEVERLY HILLS NINJA
Chris Farley (Sony)

10. BIG NIGHT
Stanley Tucci, Tony Shaloub (Goldwyn)

11. BITTER SUGAR
Miguel Gutierrez (First Look)

12. BLOOD AND WINE
Jack Nicholson (Fox Searchlight)

13. BOGUS
Whoopi Goldberg, Gerard Depardieu (Warner Bros.)

14. BOOTY CALL
Jamie Foxx, Vivica Fox (Columbia)

15. BOUND
Jennifer Tilly, Gina Gershon (Gramercy)

16. BREAKING THE WAVES
Emily Watson (October)

17. BULLETPROOF
Adam Sandler, Damon Wayans (Universal)

18. THE CHAMBER
Chris O'Donnell, Gene Hackman (Universal)

19. CITIZEN RUTH
Laura Dern (Miramax)

20. COSI
Toni Collette (Miramax)

21. THE CRUCIBLE
Winona Ryder, Daniel Day-Lewis (Fox)

22. D3: THE MIGHTY DUCKS
Emilio Estevez (Buena Vista)

23. DANGEROUS GROUND
Ice Cube, Elizabeth Hurley (New Line)

24. DANTE'S PEAK
Pierce Brosnan, Linda Hamilton (Universal)

25. DAYLIGHT
Sylvester Stallone (Universal)

26. THE DAYTRIPPERS
Parker Posey, Stanley Tucci (CFP)

27. DEAR GOD
Greg Kinnear, Laurie Metcalf (Paramount)

28. DONNIE BRASCO
Johnny Depp, Al Pacino (TriStar)

29. DRUNKS
Richard Lewis (Northern Arts)

30. THE EIGHTH DAY
Daniel Auteuil (Gramercy)

31. THE ENGLISH PATIENT
Ralph Fiennes (Miramax)

32. THE EVENING STAR
Shirley MacLaine (Paramount)

33. EVERYONE SAYS I LOVE YOU
Woody Allen, Goldie Hawn, Drew Barrymore (Miramax)

34. EVITA
Madonna, Antonio Banderas (Buena Vista)

35. EXTREME MEASURES
Hugh Grant, Gene Hackman (Columbia)

36. FARMER AND CHASE
Ben Gazzara, Lara Flynn Boyle (Arrow Releasing)

37. FEELING MINNESOTA
Keanu Reeves, Cameron Diaz (Fine Line)

38. FIERCE CREATURES
John Cleese, Kevin Kline (Universal)

39. THE FIRST WIVES CLUB
Goldie Hawn, Bette Midler, Diane Keaton (Paramount)

40. FIST OF LEGEND
Jet Li (Miramax)

41. FLIPPING
Gene Mitchell (Dove)

42. FOOLS RUSH IN
Matthew Perry, Salma Hayek (Columbia)

43. FLY AWAY HOME
Anna Paquin, Jeff Daniels (Columbia)

44. THE FUNERAL
Christopher Walken, Chris Penn (October)

45. GET ON THE BUS
Charles S. Dutton, Ossie Davis (Columbia)

46. THE GHOST AND THE DARKNESS
Michael Douglas, Val Kilmer (Paramount)

47. GHOSTS OF MISSISSIPPI
Alec Baldwin, Whoopi Goldberg (Columbia)

48. THE GLIMMER MAN
Steven Segal, Keenen Ivory Wayans (Warner Bros.)

49. GRACE OF MY HEART
Illeana Douglas (Gramercy)

50. THE GRASS HARP
Walter Matthau (New Line)

51. GRIDLOCK'D
Tupac Shakur, Tim Roth (Gramercy)

52. HAMLET
Kenneth Branagh (Columbia)

53. HARD EIGHT
Gwyneth Paltrow, Samuel L. Jackson (Goldwyn)

54. HIGH SCHOOL HIGH
Jon Lovitz, Nicolette Sheridan (TriStar)

55. HOTEL DE LOVE
Aden Young, Simon Bossell, Saffron Burrows (Live)

56. HYPE!
Soundgarden, Pearl Jam (CFP)

BLUE RIBBON AWARDS

57. INFINITY
Matthew Broderick, Patricia Arquette (First Look)
58. JACKIE CHAN'S FIRST STRIKE
Jackie Chan (New Line)
59. JERRY MAGUIRE
Tom Cruise, Cuba Gooding, Jr. (TriStar)
60. JERUSALEM
Maria Bonnevie (First Look)
61. JINGLE ALL THE WAY
Arnold Schwarzenegger, Sinbad (Fox)
62. JUDE
Kate Winslet (Gramercy)
63. KOLYA
Zdenek Szerak (Miramax)
64. LARGER THAN LIFE
Bill Murray, Janeane Garofalo (MGM/UA)
65. LAST MAN STANDING
Bruce Willis (New Line)
66. THE LEOPARD SON
(Discovery)
67. LES VOLEURS
Daniel Auteuil (Sony Classics)
68. THE LONG KISS GOODNIGHT
Geena Davis, Samuel L. Jackson (New Line)
69. LOOKING FOR RICHARD
Al Pacino (Fox)
70. LOSING CHASE
Helen Mirren, Kyra Sedgewick (CFP)
71. LOST HIGHWAY
Bill Pullman, Patricia Arquette (October)
72. MARGARET'S MUSEUM
Helena Bonham Carter (CFP)
73. MARS ATTACKS!
Pierce Brosnan, Jack Nicholson (Warner Bros.)
74. MARVIN'S ROOM
Meryl Streep, Diane Keaton (Miramax)
75. MAXIMUM RISK
Jean-Claude Van Damme (Columbia)
76. MEET WALLY SPARKS
Rodney Dangerfield (Trimark)
77. METRO
Eddie Murphy (Buena Vista)
78. MICHAEL
John Travolta (New Line)
79. MICHAEL COLLINS
Liam Neeson (Warner Bros.)
80. MICROCOSMOS
(Miramax)
81. THE MIRROR HAS TWO FACES
Barbra Streisand (TriStar)
82. MOTHER
Albert Brooks, Debbie Reynolds (Paramount)
83. MOTHER NIGHT
Nick Nolte (Fine Line)
84. MY FELLOW AMERICANS
Jack Lemmon, James Garner (Warner Bros.)
85. ONE FINE DAY
George Clooney, Michelle Pfeiffer (Fox)
86. 101 DALMATIANS
Glenn Close (Buena Vista)
87. PALOOKAVILLE
William Forsythe, Vincent Gallo (Goldwyn)
88. PARALLEL SONS
Gabriel Mick (Greycat)
89. THE PEOPLE VS. LARRY FLYNT
Woody Harrelson, Courtney Love (Columbia)
90. THE PEST
John Leguizamo (TriStar)
91. THE PORTRAIT OF A LADY
Nicole Kidman (Gramercy)
92. THE PREACHER'S WIFE
Denzel Washington, Whitney Houston (Buena Vista)
93. PREFONTAINE
Jared Leto (Buena Vista)
94. RANSOM
Mel Gibson, Rene Russo (Buena Vista)
95. THE RELIC
Penelope Ann Miller (Paramount)
96. THE RICH MAN'S WIFE
Halle Berry (Buena Vista)
97. RIDICULE
Fanny Ardant (Miramax)
98. ROMEO & JULIET
Leonardo DiCaprio, Claire Danes (Fox)
99. ROSEWOOD
Jon Voight, Ving Rhames (Warner Bros.)
100. SCREAM
Drew Barrymore, David Arquette (Miramax)
101. SECRETS AND LIES
Brenda Blethyn (October)
102. SET IT OFF
Jada Pinkett, Queen Latifah (New Line)
103. SHADOW CONSPIRACY
Charlie Sheen, Linda Hamilton (Buena Vista)
104. SHINE
Geoffrey Rush (Fine Line)
105. SLEEPERS
Brad Pitt, Kevin Bacon (Warner Bros.)
106. SMILLA'S SENSE OF SNOW
Julia Ormond, Gabriel Byrne (Fox Searchlight)
107. SOME MOTHER'S SON
Helen Mirren, Fionnula Flanagan (Columbia)
108. SPACE JAM
Michael Jordan (Warner Bros.)
109. STAR TREK: FIRST CONTACT
Patrick Stewart (Paramount)
110. STEPHEN KING'S THINNER
Robert John Burke, Joe Mantegna (Paramount)
111. SURBURBIA
Giovanni Ribisi (Sony Classics)
112. SURVIVING PICASSO
Anthony Hopkins (Warner Bros.)
113. SWINGERS
Jon Favreau (Miramax)
114. THAT DARN CAT
Christina Ricci (Buena Vista)
115. THAT THING YOU DO!
Tom Everett Scott (Fox)
116. TO GILLIAN ON HER 37TH BIRTHDAY
Peter Gallagher, Claire Danes (Triumph)
117. TOUCH
Bridget Fonda, Tom Arnold (MGM/UA)
118. TREES LOUNGE
Steve Buscemi, Daniel Baldwin (Orion Classics)
119. TROUBLESOME CREEK
(Artistic License)
120. TURBULENCE
Ray Liotta, Lauren Holly (MGM/UA)
121. TWELFTH NIGHT
Helena Bonham Carter (Fine Line)
122. 2 DAYS IN THE VALLEY
James Spader, Eric Stoltz (MGM/UA)
123. THE WHOLE WIDE WORLD
Renee Zellweger, Vincent D'Onofrio (Sony Classics)
124. VEGAS VACATION
Chevy Chase (Warner Bros.)
125. WHEN WE WERE KINGS
(Gramercy)
126. ZEUS AND ROXANNE
Steve Guttenberg (MGM/UA)

30-SOMETHING

The Leadership of Philip M. Singleton is Launched as AMC Opens the World's Largest Megaplex

by Christine James

As megaplexing has evolved from a trend to the industry baseline, American Multi-Cinema, Inc., the company that pioneered the multiplex, is continuing to push the envelope. In December of 1996, the circuit opened the world's largest theatre, a 30-screen behemoth in Ontario, Calif. And AMC's new president, Philip M. Singleton, plans to forge ahead with forays into national and worldwide megaplexing.

"We're trying to retool to have the most prominent circuit in the world," says Singleton—and that involves not only staggering size stats, but the top of the line in equipment, design and comfort.

Singleton's philosophy and strategy comes in part from the guidance of former AMC topper Stan Durwood. In January, Singleton took the reigns from Durwood, 76, who will remain at AMC as chairman and CEO while undergoing treatment for esophageal cancer. Singleton, who has been with AMC since 1974, says that "a great deal of the success that I enjoy I can really accredit to [Stan Durwood] and his tutelage. He has been my mentor and friend for the two decades that I've been in the business. He taught me to continue to keep my eye on the customer, because they're constantly telling you way in advance where they want to go, and you need to be there when they need you. That's probably the best advice he's ever given me."

Singleton is taking that advice, using the pinnacle of modern technology to satisfy the public's increasingly sophisticated tastes. All the quality, luxury and convenience that's part and parcel of the AMC megaplex is not only great for drumming up a loyal patronage, but also plays into another AMC strategy. "We want to be able to play all the product in the big megaplexes, [because] if the megaplexes are successful, they should warrant better film terms just by nature of the fact that they can deliver such high performance," Singleton explains. "We leverage that network to the advantage of negotiating with the different studios for a better film position."

> "A great deal of the success that I enjoy I can really accredit to Stan Durwood. He has been my mentor and friend for the two decades that I've been in the business."

To date, megaplexing has been well worth the significant investment costs, according to Singleton. "Just about every one that we have opened has been a smashing success," he says. "In most cases, they will out-perform the industry average on a particular film by as much as four or five times. The flexibility of being able to devote a lot of seats on the opening week of a film is one part of it, but I also think that just the way the customers are embracing and flocking to the megaplexes versus traditional theatres is a [major factor].

"It's a trite phrase, but we've trademarked it: the megaplex has changed the way that people see movies," he continues. "The technology that's brought to bear in terms of the auditorium environment, along with the fact that the creative community is putting more audio-visual information and flexibility on 35mm, creates an unparalleled visual experience in terms of film viewing. You couple with that the one-stop shopping and the large theatre that's designed to absorb a lot of people and reduce congestion, and it's a win-win for the customer."

AMC's Ontario Mills 30, the largest complex on the planet in terms of screen count, adds another chapter to the success story. "The Ontario Mills was really developed by the Mills Corporation," says Singleton. "In all the developments that I've looked at around the world, those guys in my opinion have the best handle on the future concept with regard to how entertainment is going to affect traditional retail. The entertainment component of the Mills Project, the 'Entertainment Highway,' [is comprised of] Planet Hollywood, the Wild Horse saloon, our big theatre, Sega Gameworks, multi-faceted restaurants, watering holes, sports bars, plus a huge non-

THANK YOU CINEMASTAR, FOR YOUR COMMITMENT TO QUALITY FILM PRESENTATION.

All Screens are THX-Certified:

Chula Vista Theatres 10, Chula Vista, California

Mission Grove Cinemas 14, Riverside, California

Mission Marketplace 8 Theatres, Oceanside, California

Perris 10 Cinemas, Perris, California

University Village 10, Riverside, California

THX is a registered trademark of Lucasfilm Ltd.

Congratulations!

Barrie Lawson Loeks
1997 Robert W. Selig
ShoWester of the Year Award

J. Wayne Anderson
1997 B. V. Sturdivant Award

John Greiner
1997 Customer Service Award

Bruce Proctor
1997 Burt Nathan Memorial Award

Ann Craft
1997 Ida Schreiber Award

REGAL CINEMAS®

7132 Commercial Park Drive Knoxville, TN 37918 (423) 922-1123 Fax: (423) 922-3188

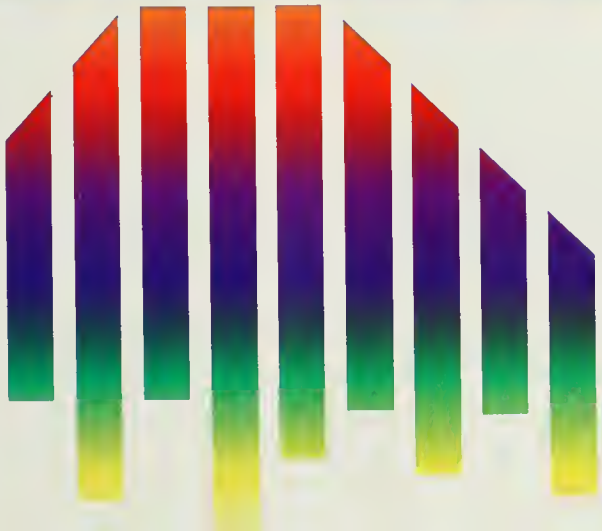
AMC's latest innovation: The Ontario Mills 30, the world's largest theatre.

traditional food court. I think that's what the customer's looking for—a multi-faceted entertainment-themed retail experience. And that's the wave of the future. That's going to make obsolete the traditional mall."

As well as making headlines for its ambitious entertainment themed surroundings and record-breaking size, the Ontario Mills 30 has received quite a bit of ink for being in the middle of a Battle of the Gargantuplexes: less than 700 feet away from AMC's 30 screens is a 24-screen Edwards complex. The viability of the megaplex itself is only just now proving itself in the face of industry-wide scrutiny —and the initial general lack of confidence in AMC's bold move was not lost on Singleton. "I can remember people calling us the Village Idiot for building a 24-screen theatre in Dallas in 1995," he recalls. "But that virtually turned the industry on its ear. They said that it was way too much in terms of screens, it'll never work, the customer won't like it, you'll never get it booked—and I think it was [one of] the highest-attended theatre[s] in North America last year." But while the megaplex is now becoming a widely-followed industry trend, the AMC/Edwards development raised many eyebrows—and questions. Most notably: Can 54 screens be sustained in such close proximity?

Not unexpectedly, Singleton see things from AMC's side, but offers a qualified "yes."

"I think it's something that we would not have liked to have happen, [but] I think everybody will be okay out there, because the Mills have created such a regional destination location, a project that draws from far away. So both theatres may do okay out there. But one theatre would have done wonderfully well.



"I have difficulty understanding the decision model for a competitor to come in after the fact and intentionally overscreen a zone once the initial exhibitor has come into play and has already committed to building their building," Singleton adds. "If the situation was reversed, AMC and most circuits that I know of would not come in after the fact and try to overscreen a zone like that."

"I can remember people calling us the Village Idiot for building a 24-screen theatre in Dallas in 1995. But that virtually turned the industry on its ear."

AMC is making the best of things, looking for innovative ways to draw customers. For the recent "Star Wars" re-release, the circuit hired costumed characters to stroll through the Ontario 30's courtyard, and the plan for all AMC theatres is to have themed promotions for as many films as possible, in the true spirit of showmanship. "What we're trying to bring into play is the concept of a versatile programming guide for the managing director of these complexes, where he can [organize a variety of different promotions]. We might try to get the local high school basketball team out there to have a scrimmage game with a local charity or something like that. And we're just trying to do all kinds of different Main Street Disneyland, Disney-esque-type activities in those promenade areas to make them very customer-friendly."

The customer is a recurring subject for Singleton, who puts a lot of value in what his patrons have to say. "Every time I go to the theatres, I talk to my customers," he says. "Our competitive advantage over the last 30 years has been innovation, and the only way that we can derive new concepts that better serve the customers is by talking to them. We're sensitive to [the fact that] the customer is constantly, constantly changing, and for us to compete for his entertainment dollar, we've got to be constantly changing right along with him."

EMBER
TEA

Turnkey Services Brought To You By Cal-Rand, Inc. and Taylor Technical

Are you building or remodeling a theatre, or upgrading sound and projection equipment in your existing theatre?

Take your vision of the perfect theatre from inception to completion.

From project development to a sit-down-and-watch-the-show reality, you now have the convenience of having all facets of construction, design purchase, finish out, fixture and equipment installation for a presentation ready, state-of-the-art theatre completed under a coordinated "turnkey" approach.

Our turnkey concept greatly simplifies and improves the total process for the exhibitor building one theatre, or for companies in expansion. Once the architectural, engineering, design and equipment packages are in place and the plans are complete, your company can confidently expand into other areas, states or even foreign countries.

We work with you to coordinate the general contractor, designers, architects, engineers, technical staff, and other vital professionals to ensure a high quality product that transforms a project into a program.

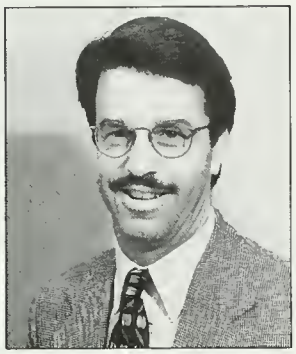
Technical expertise in projection, sound and engineering standards coupled with solid construction and architectural skills create excellence in the total presentation for commercial, residential and other applications.

Benefits

- Architectural/Engineering
- Front end and seating sales & installation
- Conceptual interior design services
- Concession, scullery, snack bar design & installation
- Concession equipment & products
- Projection & sound equipment design & installations
- Interior finishes and accessories
- HVAC
- Signage
- Service for equipment after completion
- Total one-stop shopping for all FF & E
- Service contracts available from project professionals for all installed equipment, from signs to seats to projectors to poppers
- Architecturally trained design staff.
- Problem solving, maintenance and care of all finish materials and accessories with a one call access to all sources.
- Cohesive project development and coordination throughout all phases of construction & installation.
- Non-duplication of design, architectural and engineering services.

Sources

ADC
Advanced Signing
Christie, Inc.
Component Engineering
Cornelius
Cretors
Crown International
Dolby Labs
Duraform
Electrovoice
Frankel & Associates
Goldberg Brothers
Hitachi
Hoshizaki America, Inc.
Isco
Irwin Seating Company
JBL Professional
J.M. Lynne
Kelmar
Lancer
Manitowac
Mulone & Son
Neumade/Xetron
QSC
San Jamar
Schneider
Schult Design & Display
Speco
Strong International
Trane
Ultra Stereo
Many Others



CAL-RAND, INC.

7502 Greenville Ave. Suite 400 · Dallas, Texas 75231
Phone (214) 369-1034 · Fax 369-1768

Response No. 127

"FROM WHERE I SIT..."

Our Forum For Readers Just Like You

BOOTH 101: PROJECTION'S SEVEN DEADLY SINS

by Sean Lohan

Almost everyone can recall a moviegoing experience being ruined by a dirty or scratched film; an annoying, wavering hair in the projection lens; or a soundtrack with so many "pops" and skips in it that the dialogue is almost unintelligible.

These common problems can occur at top-notch, first-run theatres during a film's opening days. As the film goes through its life cycle, these problems worsen to the point where many films are unsalvageable for second-run or foreign release. Some films must even have reels replaced within days of their release.

The two key elements in running a great booth are knowing how to treat film with respect and using equipment properly.

Fortunately, all of these problems can be virtually eliminated by proper film handling.

The two key elements in running a great booth are knowing how to treat film with respect and using equipment properly. These requirements have remained a constant, even though the projectionist's job has changed dramatically over the years.

Today, more than ever, projection booths are operated by managers with many responsibilities. The great volume of films—almost 500—that screened in the nation's 26,000-plus screens last year have made for a high-pressure, fast-paced environment inside the booth. Add to this the increase in projection booth automation, and the need for ongoing training in film-handling techniques is obvious.

I've developed a list, the Seven Deadly Sins of Film Handling, to help keep booth operators on their toes.

SIN #1: FAILURE TO I.D. FILM'S POSITION

When a film arrives from lab or depot, the first thing a booth operator must do is don his editing gloves. The second most important thing is to verify if a film has arrived "heads up" or "tails up."

A heads-up film is facing the right way, with the characters moving forward, the credits reading left to right, and so on. A tails-up film can be deceiving because the soundtrack might look the same, but the characters are upside down, or walking backward.

Never trust the leader, even though it may say "start." Look past the leader at the film itself. That is the only way you'll know if a film is facing the right way.

SIN #2: SPEEDY BUILD-UP MEANS OVERSIGHTS

Moving the film from reels on the build-up table to the platters is where most errors occur. The chief culprit here is speed. Run your film at 50 percent speed, with the film itself being guided gently between your thumb and forefinger from the build-up table to the platter. This way, you can feel for lab splices (splices that may break under pressure) and broken sprockets. In both cases, stop the film, re-splice the film using splicing tape, or remove broken sprockets by removing the frame and splicing film.

Check to see if the height-adjustment bar's rollers are level with the platter. The film should not be "bumping" against the platter's edge; this creates the cross-hatch diagonal lines across a film.

SIN #3: SHOE POLISH IS FOR SHOES

Believe it or not, some projectionists still use white shoe polish to mark where a reel change has occurred. True, these are easily seen markings, visible on the top of the reel as the platter spins. But shoe polish will eventually leak down onto the film, ruining the picture. Instead, use splicing tape with I.D. markings. A sharp eye can detect these even when the platter is spinning at top speed.

SIN #4: IMPROPER STORAGE OF HEADS AND TAILS

After head leaders and tail leaders are removed from a reel, they need to be spooled up, labeled with masking tape. Most projectionists use the "T" and "H" plus a number to indicate what reel the leader is from.

Lohan trains a projectionist at L.A.'s Magic Johnson Theatres.

Never, ever leave rolled-up film on a table, expecting to store it later. When a theatre is operational, the booth is dimly lit. This is the main way reels get mixed up.

SIN #5: IMPROPER THREADING THROUGH ROLLERS

The key about rollers: They should roll. Film should move freely through a roller, with just the sprocketed edges in contact with roller surfaces.

Haste is the main reason projectionists don't take the time to ensure film is actually inside the rollers. Many times an improperly threaded

If your theater management system gives you peace, serenity, and happiness, it must be from Mars.

If your theater management system uses the most reliable technology on Earth, it must be from MARS®. If your service calls get answered by a human being, your system must be from MARS. If you are able to close out your theater quickly each night, your system is definitely from MARS.

MARS is a system designed to run on off-the-shelf hardware while giving you the flexibility to handle all aspects of managing your theaters. From the box office to the concession stand, it allows managers to quickly perform functions so they can spend less time managing their system and more time managing their theater.

To learn more about MARS, visit booths #1810—1812 at ShoWest. Or call John Ventura at 212-450-8140.

MARS®
THEATER MANAGEMENT SYSTEMS

A division of MovieFone®, Inc.

BOOTHS #1810—1812

film will wriggle free, ending up with the roller's edge running right down the middle of the film.

Although these seven checkpoints make it seem simple, running a projection booth properly is a complex job. A balance between speed and standards must be achieved.

This error won't be discovered until the film is run again, but the damage is permanent.

SIN #6: LACK OF PROJECTION UPKEEP

Ninety-nine percent of projectionists never take the time to browse the manuals that come with the projection systems. This is a big mistake. At the very least, the tension should be checked on the belts, and rollers should be dusted and wiped down, especially after polyester film has been run (because it "sheds"). Also, gate tension should be checked regularly.

SIN #7: FAILURE TO PRE-SCREEN A FILM

The final check of a film to ensure a stellar onscreen presentation is to run the film through on the screen. This way, soundtracks can be checked and any remaining problems, such as mixed reels, will come to light. Not everyone has the time to do this but, if it's possible, such pre-screening is the only way a projectionist can be absolutely certain his work is done.

CONCLUSION

Although these seven checkpoints make it seem simple, running a projection booth properly is a complex job. A balance between speed and standards must be achieved.

The novice film handler should allow himself at least an hour for film build-up. Longtime projection booth operators will be able to build up a film in about 20 minutes. It is important that theatre management allow newcomers the time they need to acquaint themselves with film handling.

After all, the film is the reason people have come to the theatre. Its care and handling are no place to skimp. Booth training can give both new employees and longtime managers the extra tools and confidence they need to get a film onscreen in perfect shape. The goal, after all, is to have the end result—the film's presentation—go off without a hitch or complaint, the first time and every time.

Sean Lohan is Director, Theatre Services Division, National Film Service. NFS' recently launched Theatre Operational Training and Logistics program—aka "booth school"—gives everyday managers the tools they need to run a high-caliber projection booth without years of training. The program is offered both in a one- and two-day seminar formats, and it is offered to theatre circuits both in North America and overseas.

Established almost 50 years ago, NFS serves distributors and exhibitors from 33 distribution points throughout the United States. The leading company in the film shipping business, NFS is headquartered in Encino, Calif., and is a privately owned American corporation.

Industry professionals wishing to contribute From Where I Sit essays to BOXOFFICE should write us at 6640 Sunset Blvd., Suite 100, Hollywood CA 90028; fax us at (213) 465-5049; or send via E-mail to: boxoffice @earthlink.net. For essays we publish, we'll also need an author photo and a short biography.

CINEMA EQUIPMENT SALES

OF CALIFORNIA, INC.

WE'VE DONE IT FOR THEM . . .

-- MAJOR HOLLYWOOD STUDIOS
-- LEADING SPECIAL-EFFECTS & DIGITAL HOUSES
-- PRODUCTION-SUPPORT FACILITIES
-- FILM PROCESSING LABORATORIES

. . . WE CAN DO IT FOR YOU!

We're meeting the exacting projection and sound requirements of the companies producing the films! We have the experience and the ability to do your job RIGHT! We offer favorable selling-prices, technical support ability and installation / repair services. Call us if you want your job done BY PROFESSIONALS!

CARL WILLIAMS

23011 Moulton Pkwy. #I-5
Laguna Hills, Ca. 92653

MIKE SMITH

714-470-0298 / FAX: 714-470-0835 / http://www.cinema-equip.com

Response No. 237

FREE POSTCARDS
TAKE ONE
Coming Soon To Theatres Everywhere
FREE POSTCARDS
• Reach over 2.5 million movie-goers each month
• Available in over 100 theatres nationwide in key markets
• Guaranteed distribution of over 1 million postcards each month
"Advertising has always known where you live. Now it knows where you play."
-AdWeek, February 3, 1997
ADVERTISERS: PLEASE CALL PIK:NIK AT 213-665-2556
THEATRE OWNERS: PLEASE CALL GLOBAL CINEMA NETWORK AT 818-380-6130
Response No. 20

SILENCED

Death and Dreams at a Landmark Hollywood Moviehouse by Jon Silberg and Ray Greene

A PASSION FOR FILM: A candid photo of Silent Movie exhibitor Laurence Austin in front of the theatre he loved.

Just one day after the far more highly publicized slaying of Ennis Cosby, the Hollywood district of Los Angeles was rocked by the equally senseless murder of a moviehouse owner/operator who was something of a local institution.

For Laurence Austin, running Hollywood's "Silent Movie"—a theatre he claimed was the last commercially-operating silent moviehouse in the United States—was a true labor of love. Dedicated to the showing of films pre-dating the advent of synchronous sound, the Silent Movie was a kind of living, breathing movie museum—a refuge for the classic efforts of film pioneers, where audiences sat enthralled by the "electric shadows" of bygone performers whose names are still words to conjure with: Chaplin, Fairbanks, Keaton, Chaney, Pickford, Lloyd.

Out of a deep and abiding passion for silent film, Austin cobbled together weekly showings of silent shorts and features out of his own collection of film prints and those of other archivists who shared his dream. His films were presented the way they're supposed to be: in a 250 seat auditorium, projected on the big screen in front of paying customers, with live accompaniment from an organist to underscore each mood depicted, every nuance of the silent actor's art. A Silent Movie presentation was a film buff's dream; Mr. Austin often introduced the pictures he screened himself, and patrons received fact sheets on each title, which helped them to appreciate details of context, performance and production that might have eluded them otherwise.

Austin was no stranger to the staff of BOXOFFICE. His theatre was less than 10 minutes drive from our Hollywood office, and it was such an unavoidable city landmark that it was one of the first ideas that entered our heads when we were casting about for ways to celebrate the centennial of exhibition a few years back. As those of us who are still around remember it, our then-Associate Editor Jon Silberg pleaded to be the person to write that particular article out of a sense that Laurence Austin's story was something special. Jon even personally shot the photos that accompanied the piece, which we ran in November, 1994.

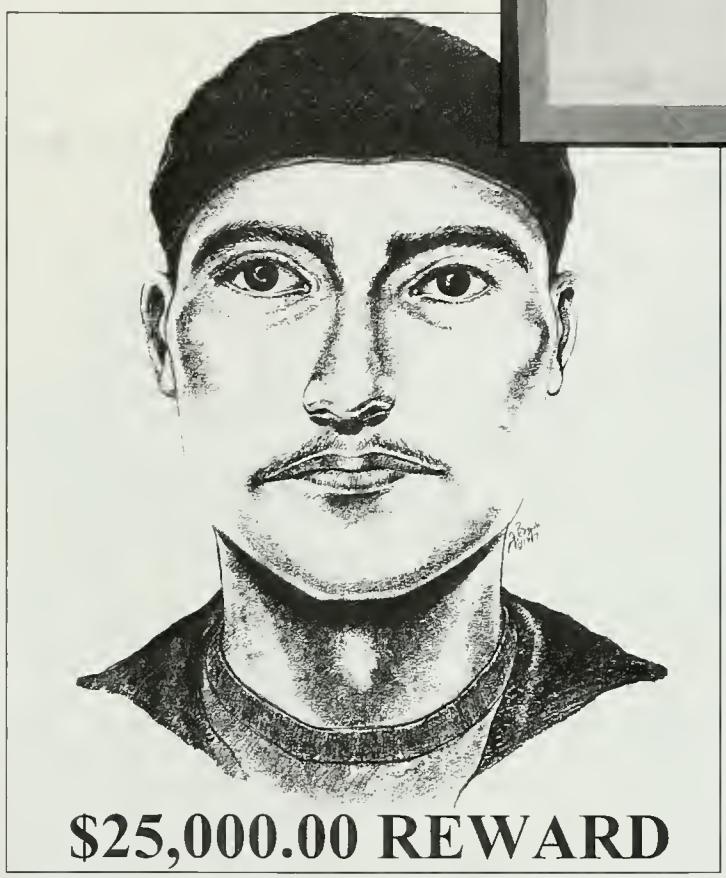
When news that Mr. Austin had been shot to death in a robbery arrived at our office, there was a deep and abiding sense of grief, even among those on our staff who had never seen a movie at his theatre. One of our writers told a BOXOFFICE editor that just knowing Austin was there, celebrating the continuum of the movie medium as an unselfish act of love, had always made her feel a little bit better about covering a business that at times seems to have cornered the market on cynicism and guile.

Remarkably, though not a Silent Movie habitue, Jon Silberg was present at Austin's theatre watching a screening of F.W. Mumau's "Sunrise" on the night Austin was killed. His eyewitness report:

Though I'd interviewed Laurence Austin some time ago for an article in BOXOFFICE, I hadn't made it down to his Silent Movie in Hollywood nearly as often as I'd have liked. The few times I had, the experience had been exhilarating. As much as possible, Austin presented programs of short subjects and features from the silent era as they were meant to be seen, at the right speed with live organ accompaniment.

'He showed everything, from Chaplin and Eisenstein classics to two-reelers with stars whose names would stump even the most devoted film buffs. Audiences at the Silent Movie were surprisingly young and seemed to be there for pure enjoyment, as opposed to seeing the films because they thought they "should."

'On the night of Friday, January 17, Austin came down front, introduced organist Dean



Mora and announced the program: a Felix the Cat cartoon, two short subjects and F.W. Murnau's "Sunrise." It was easy to detect a note of pride when he referred to his theater as "the only all-silent movie theatre in the world." He'd said this hundreds of times before to audiences. There was no way of knowing this time would be the last.

'The first shot sounded like a sound effect. Mora's organ is capable of a repertoire of effects—a whistle, a clock, a bell—and for a moment, the shot seemed like one of them. The second explosion was louder and clearly came from the back of the house. The blast that originated a few feet from my head sent me and everyone else to the floor, where we stayed for a few minutes, not knowing if a sick joke had been perpetrated or if a gang fight had strayed inside this unlikely venue.

'The projectionist screamed out from the lobby in distress and Mora made his way there to see what had happened. He returned, pale but composed, and announced that there had apparently been a robbery and Austin was dead. Good Samaritans who'd heard the shots from the street were now trying to help the teenage girl who had sold snacks and drinks in the lobby; she'd been shot in the chest close to her heart. Though in rough shape, ultimately, she would survive.

'Paramedics and police soon arrived and took statements from everyone in the audience. Afterward, the events slowly added up to this: A male Hispanic, age 18-24, lanky build, light, clear complexion, angular features, sat down in the rear of the auditorium, next to a woman who later recalled being made uncomfortable by his presence. After the shorts had been on for about 20 minutes, he rose and made his way to the lobby, where Austin always counted the night's receipts. He shot Austin in the head, took the money and shot the concession girl. He ran down the aisle, blasting away at the opposite wall and escaping via an emergency exit, outside of which a getaway car was waiting.

'The realization that someone would shoot an old man and a young girl for a few hundred dollars in receipts was palpably sickening more than frightening or sad. The fact that this act had almost inevitably ended forever the long run of "the only all-silent movie theatre in the world" was saddening and frustrating to say the least. Other art forms have their curators and librarians, but Austin had devoted years to preserving the heritage and history of movies in a way that very few others have. He'd presented his beloved silents in an alive atmosphere conducive to genuine entertainment rather than in the pedantic environment of a museum or classroom.

THE VILLAIN OF THE PIECE: (Above) Police sketch of Laurence Austin's killer.
ABOVE RIGHT: Detail from the facade of Austin's Silent Movie theatre.

"What still hurts is the realization that I was there when a person's passion for cinema and all he'd built as a result was instantly demolished in a blast of senseless gunfire."

'The bullet hole in the wall opposite my seat, about a foot over where my head had been, proved a frightening discovery. But it didn't hurt me. What still hurts is the realization that I was there when a person's passion for cinema and all he'd built as a result was instantly demolished in a blast of senseless gunfire. If there is any consolation at all, it's that at least some of us in the area are lucky enough to have benefitted from the results of Austin's devotion to "the only all-silent movie theatre in the world."'

At press time it was an open question whether or not Austin's killer would ever be found. The murder attracted a lot of attention locally, and the outpouring of affection, with scores of moviegoers leaving flowers on the sidewalk in front of Silent Movie for weeks after Austin's death, marked one of the few grace notes in an otherwise mournful dirge. A $25,000 reward has been put out, and representatives of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences among others have begun talking openly about keeping Laurence Austin's dream alive, either by reopening Silent Movie or finding another permanent home for the commercial display of the silent film's multi-leveled artistry.

The death of Laurence Austin marks the passing of an exhibition hero—the last commercial curator in Hollywood for an entire film epoch. We at BOXOFFICE decided immediately that we could not allow the event to go unnoticed in our pages. But we also felt that to speak of Laurence Austin only in terms of the sad and grotesque coda to his life would be to accept his killer's definition of its value—and we surely weren't about to do that.

On the pages that follow, we've reprinted for your reading pleasure our original tribute to Laurence Austin, Hollywood dreamer. Not a word has been cut. We encourage all Mr. Austin's fellow exhibitors to join us in celebrating the man for what he was and for what he achieved—a life in exhibition that was fulfilling, rewarding and, in its own way, dedicated to the greater good.—Ray Greene, Editor-in-Chief,* BOXOFFICE

Anyone with information about the death of Laurence Austin should contact Detective John Miller or Alan Hamilton at Hollywood Division Homicide, (213) 485-6410 or (213) 485-4302.

SILENCE IS GOLDEN

In the Heart of Hollywood, Laurence Austin's "Silent Movie" Keeps a Gilded Era Alive

by Jon Silberg

KEEPER OF THE FLAME: Exhibitor Laurence Austin stands before the facade of his Silent Movie theatre in Hollywood, Calif. on a typical business day.

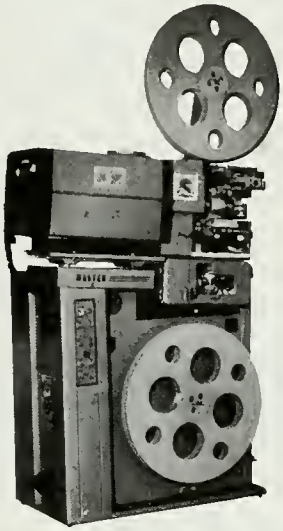
In the heart of Hollywood, where "Dances With Wolves" plays at the revival houses and most residents have no time for any movie that has fallen off the trade charts, the Silent Movie theatre on Fairfax Avenue keeps alive the golden oldies of the pre-talkie era and has not run a talking picture since its inception in the 1940s. Proprietor Laurence Austin keeps this 250-seat theatre running because of his love for the "true originals"—the great performers from the silent period—and as a continuation of the legacy of the theatre's founder, John Hampton. Along with his wife Dorothy, Hampton had owned and operated the Silent Movie six days a week until his death in 1990. Shortly after, Austin set to refurbishing and re-opening it, and Silent Movie has been sustaining itself ever since.

Austin has a personal connection to the period himself. His father, William Austin, was a silent film actor, and his mother Ethel was a seamstress for Cecil B. DeMille's productions throughout most of the director's illustrious career.

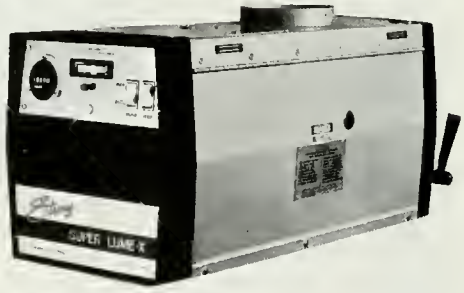
Growing up, Austin would hear remembrances of a nearly-forgotten period in American cinema from his parents, who were there as eyewitnesses. The period and its films are alive to him. "I've seen some of these silent pictures so many times, but there's always something new," says Austin. "Besides being a wonderful window to the past, they are still really very enjoyable."

Austin boasts an increasing clientele of "twenty- and thirty-somethings" who are discovering the genuine entertainment value of the films of Chaplin, Keaton, Griffith et al. Austin attributes some recent interest to such modern stars as Robert Downey Jr. for his work in "Chaplin" and Johnny Depp for his Keaton-esque stylings in "Benny and Joon."

"It brings people out to see the originals," says Austin, "and the silent screen stars were originals. Most of these people were very uneducated by today's standards and they didn't have anybody else to imitate," he adds, pointing out the enormous global impact created by Chaplin, Garbo, Valentino and their like. "To quote Mary Pickford, 'It's too bad silents didn't come out after sound, because acting in silents is a much more difficult art form.'"



Some stars have continued to linger in our collective unconscious as personas even if their work has not. But aside from showing Keaton and Chaplin, Austin's Silent Movie theatre has created interest in performers whose careers had been forgotten. "Charlie Chase was a lesser-known comic in the silent era. I showed a few of his comedies and nobody knew who he was, but they liked him," recalls Austin. "Now I can run a night of just Charlie Chase."



Perhaps the fact that these films are from such a far-off era is somewhat offset by the immediacy of a live organ accompanist. The addition of live performance was one of the few changes Austin made from the original program, which used phonograph records for music. Old-timers Bob Mitchell and Gaylord Carter, who played the organ way back when Lon Chaney's "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and Harold Lloyd's "The Fresh-

NEW AND USED THEATRE EQUIPMENT

CINEVISION CORPORATION brings you one of the largest selections of new, used and rebuilt theatre equipment in the country. With 24 years of experience this enables us to provide installations and service world-wide. All rebuilt equipment sales are backed by a full one-year warranty. Trade-ins of your surplus equipment are accepted.

PROJECTOR HEADS-35MM-USED
CENTURY C 70.6mm Lens Holder	$ 2,095.00
C ENTURY C 101.6mm Lens Holder	2,295.00
CENTURY SA	2,495.00
SIMPLEX 35 Late Model	2,700.00
BALLANTYNE PRO-35	2,095.00
CHRISTIE P-35	2,250.00
SOUNDHEADS-35MM-USED
CENTURY R-3/TR-3	$ 1,595.00
SIMPLEX 5-STAR	1,595.00
SIMPLEX SH-1000	1,095.00
SIMPLEX SH-1020	1,095.00
MOTIOGRAPH SH-7500	395.00
PROJECTORS AND SOUNDHEADS SOLD ONLY WITH COMPLETE BOOTH
PROJECTION SYSTEMS-USED
CINEMECCANICA V-4	$ 2,500.00
CINEMECCANICA V-8	4,395.00
CINEMECCANICA V-9	3,500.00
NORELCO FP-20	3,995.00
35/70MM PROJECTION-USED
CENTURY JJ-2	$ 6,500.00
CINEMECCANICA V-8	5,995.00
KINOTONE DP-75	4,995.00
NORELCO AA-II TODD-AO	3,750.00
XENON LAMPHOUSES-USED
CHRISTIE 500 Watt	$ 995.00
CHRISTIE 1000 Watt	1,895.00
CHRISTIE 2000 Watt	2,200.00
CINEMECCANICA ZENITH	1,795.00
ORC 1000 Built-in Power Supply	1,595.00
ORC 1600 W/Separate Supply	1,895.00
ORC 4000	2,495.00
STRONG X-16	1,595.00
STRONG SUPER LUMEX	2,995.00
XETRON XH-2000	2,395.00
~THE ABOVE LAMPHOUSES INCLUDE POWER SUPPLIES~
XENON CONSOLES-USED
CHRISTIE CH-10	$ 2,250.00
CHRISTIE CH-20	2,495.00
CHRISTIE CH-40	3,995.00
FILM SYSTEM 2000 WATT	2,395.00
PLATTER SYSTEMS-USED
BALCO 3-DECK	2,100.00
ORC CP-302 3-DECK	2,250.00
SPECO LP-270	2,250.00

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS-USED
MONO Sound Systems	from $	550.00
KELMAR AS7200 Sound System		795.00
NT.50 Sound System		495.00
SMART MOD II-B		2,495.00
DOLBY CP-50		2,695.00
DOLBY CP-65		C A L L
DTS-6 Digital Processors		C A L L
ALTEC A-7 Stage Speaker		595.00
ALTEC A-4 Stage Speaker		695.00
ORC Automation System		595.00
CINEVISION/CENTURY Manual Lens Turret		495.00
B&L CINEMASCOPE Lenses		375.00
MAGNACOM Attachments		350.00
IRWIN CITATION Chairs	from	25.00
AMERICAN M-35 Chairs	from	22.50

CINEVISION

C O R P O R A T I O N

3300 N.E. Expressway, Building 2A
Atlanta, Georgia 30341
(770) 455-8988
(770) 455-4066 fax

PARTS REBUILD EXCHANGES
We have an extensive inventory of parts in stock to fit most projectors. Dealer discounts available. We offer excellent repair and exchange services on projectors, intermittents, soundheads, etc. Export inquiries invited.

FADE TO BLACK: The death of Laurence Austin may mark the end of commercially available silent film in the movie capital.

man" first premiered, continue to play from time to time at the Silent Movie, as do younger performers such as Dean Mora, who learned the difficult craft from Carter. "It requires a very special skill," Austin points out. "You have to remember all kinds of music. It's only rarely that you have a prepared score that you can read from, and you've got to be quick enough to change the mood of what you're playing as the mood changes on the screen." Even with a couple of viewings to prepare, this is quite a feat. "You see why the audiences often stand up and cheer at the end. The emotional impact has been so great, and they're appreciative of the live accompaniment."

Austin claims many famous visitors to his theatre. Before starting "Chaplin," Robert Downey Jr. stopped in to catch some original Chaplin shorts with an audience and Johnny Depp visited to watch Keaton. Sadly, John Candy's reason for visiting, a Fatty Arbuckle biopic, likely died with the comic actor.

While many of the films originate from such libraries and collections as MGM, Turner Entertainment, the George Eastman House, Films Inc. and other archives, a large percentage of the films come from the library that was personally and painstakingly assembled by John and Dorothy Hampton.

Hampton originally moved to Hollywood from Oklahoma City, where he had worked in the MGM film exchange and at a company that manufactured movie posters. His intention was to build a theatre to preserve the silent films which had already disappeared from the public consciousness.

"He really deserves a vote of thanks for saving silent films," says Austin. "He was the first person I know of to ever really do it. By the 1940s nobody had any interest in silent films. Old hat. Swept under the carpet. So he really deserves credit for starting the revival."

Hampton personally duped a great many films from nitrate to safety film in the small projection booth/laboratory he'd created at the Silent Movie—an endeavor Austin feels may have cost Hampton his life. "The fumes from the nitrate film can kill you and there was a chemical he used to clean the prints which was finally outlawed because they realized how dangerous it was to breathe in those fumes."

Following Hampton's death, Austin set out to reopen the theatre. "I talked to Dorothy Hampton about it and her words were, 'Well, if you can do something with that old wreck over there, why, go to it!' It had run down over [the previous] 11 years, so we went to work with the help of friends and donations and so forth, and we re-opened on January 18, 1991 with DeMille's 'The King of Kings,' which was exactly what John Hampton had hoped during his illness to be able to do."

"It brings people out to see the originals, and the silent screen stars were originals. To quote Mary Pickford, 'It's too bad silents didn't come out after sound, because acting in silents is a much more difficult art form.'"

The projection equipment is all new. Some of the films do in fact have soundtracks. "'Sunrise,' for example [a classic by F.W. Murnau which received a special 1927 Oscar for 'artistic quality of production'], has a score and a soundtrack which people want rather than us running it silently with our own music," says Austin.

The Silent Movie theatre runs 16mm and 35mm (whichever type of print is accessible) and attempts to project the films as close to their intended speeds as possible. Until the advent of synchronous sound demanded the standardized speed of 24 frames per second, films ran at many different speeds, from 16 fps to 24 fps, which is why poorly transferred silent films often seem to run jerkily or at accelerated tempos. Austin's theatre does the best it can to preserve the real speed so that the images don't look sped up and the films actually last for their intended running times.

In addition to the new equipment, Austin added an outdoor patio for intermissions and put up 30-by-40 inch celebrity portraits. The theatre continues to support itself financially, though Austin is quick to point out its special circumstances. The Hamptons owned the land, the theatre and many of the prints outright, which certainly reduces overhead. "If someone wanted to start out right now showing silent films and they had to put up a building and so forth, they'd better be prepared not to make any money," Austin warns.

In addition to running the Silent Movie, Austin has also helped continue John Hampton's tradition of preserving the silents. While there is no more hazardous duping going on in the theatre's booth, Austin continues to build awareness for silent films worldwide. Recently, Austin and a Japanese-speaking UCLA professor flew 6,000 miles to show selected silents in Osaka. "We sold out six shows and helped develop an awareness of silent films in Japan."

The Silent Movie theatre continues to keep alive the films of Chaplin, Keaton, Valentino, Swanson, Pickford and their peers—works from a glorious and little-seen era—six nights a week. "Lord willing," says Austin, "I will continue for many years to come."

Reprinted from BOXOFFICE MAGAZINE, Vol. 130, No. 10, November 1994. All rights reserved.

Confused?

Don't be.

The Marble Company has provided the best value in booth supplies for more than 35 years.

Let us save you time and money by providing all of your booth needs.

- ★ SANKOR PROJECTOR LENSES
- ★ CT-35 SPLICERS
- ★ EXCITER LAMPS
- ★ LENS CLEANER, FILM LUBE & OILS
- ★ SPLICING AND CUE TAPES
- ★ MARBLE X-CEL® XENON BULBS
- ★ REFLECTORS
- ★ AND MUCH, MUCH MORE

MARBLE COMPANY
INCORPORATED

P. O. Box 160030 • Nashville, TN 37216 • 615-227-7772 • 800-759-5905 • FAX 615-227-7008

Response No. 296

Clear Field Of "Vision"

Macrovision's Video Theatres Revivify Exhibition in Small Towns Worldwide

by Susan Lambert

Video projection has come of age. A video of "True Lies" plays in a Maxi Movies theatre. Maxi Movies uses a square screen, but all other Macrovision theatres project the standard widescreen aspect ratio of film.

There's been a lot of talk about the coming exhibition revolution and the future of electronic cinema. Experts are trying to predict exactly which digital medium will replace film or how movies will be "beamed" directly to theatres by satellite. But while everyone else has been talking, there is one company that's been quietly, but effectively, doing. Macrovision Corporation, a 15-year-old company that holds all the patents for copy protecting home video, decided a few years ago that there was a market to be developed and began licensing a video projection encryption system called CineGuard. In August of 1995 the CineGuard program opened its first video theatre in Poland. Less than two years later it's expanded to over 26 cinemas worldwide—including six in Poland, 15 in South Africa, two in Ireland and three in the Philippines. Currently, five of the eight major Hollywood studios participate in their program along with local and independent distributors.

"I think it was somewhat prophetic that at the 100th anniversary of film we opened the first legitimate video cinema in the world," says Brian Dunn, Vice President of Business Development at CineGuard. "Given that it's a Super-VHS format, that may sound overblown. But as modest as it is, you're seeing the beginning of the second 100 years of cinema."

With the Macrovision cinemas, small cities that wouldn't normally be able to support a town cinema can now get second-run—or in some cases day and date releases—on major and independent movies. Many of the towns used to have a working cinema, but due to the intervention of home video, the rise of piracy, changing economics and, most importantly, the availability of studio prints, the theatres closed. According to Dunn, because film prints cost $1,500 a piece, studios are very careful about how much investment they can make relative to the marketplace. "In the United States, they'll make a very large print investment—'101 Dalmatians' comes out with 3,000 prints—and then move those prints through theatres over the course of a few months," explains Dunn. "In Poland [which has 700 cinemas] the average release is 30 prints. Mexico [with almost 1,500 screens], the average is somewhere between 60-125 prints depending on the title." By the time a print would finally reach a small town (sometimes six months later), not only would the prints be in terrible condition and a video release imminent, but in many cases, video stores would already have pirated copies of the film. Since studios aren't about to invest in more prints—it simply isn't cost effective—that's where Macrovision sees room to step in. At $40 per videotape, a distributor can manufacture 30-40 videotapes for the price of one film print. Dunn notes that based on the successful results of their first three theatres in Poland, "if there was a population of say, 25 video cinemas in Poland, those cinemas could increase the total first week boxoffice by as much as 30 percent. For a relatively small investment, the studios can service a significant group of theatres."

Dunn says many of their video exhibitors were former film exhibitors. "They know American movies and everybody wants to get back in the movie business." Macrovision's job is to overcome exhibitors' concerns about the availability of titles by building on its existing relationships with the studios and coordinating the bookings to help the distributors. Dunn explains that multiplexing, through which one phone call can book hundreds of screens, has spoiled distributors so that the prospect of dealing with hundreds of little independent cinemas is not attractive anymore. "What they like about CineGuard," says Dunn, "is that we're kind of tying these people together, sewing them in a nice, neat little package that is more cost effective and efficient for them to deal with."

Dunn insists that Macrovision isn't interested in running or controlling theatres—"We're technologists. We are really looking for people to take that responsibility"—they have had to take a very hands-on approach to get the project off the ground, referee distribution issues and prove to people it can be done.

"Each country is a different story. The first thing we have to do is go in and say, 'Will it work?'" In Asian countries like the Philippines there is a 30 percent entertainment tax on ticket sales, making it was difficult to find a working business model. Macrovision licensed CineGuard to a Filipino company, Viva Productions Inc., who was able to make a deal with local politicians on the entertainment tax. "And thank god the Philippines love to go to the movies, so just the overall high traffic volume was going to make up for what was otherwise a weak ticket price," adds Dunn. In South Africa, Macrovision faced an opposite problem: since apartheid resulted in absolutely no theatres being built in black districts, there was no cultural orientation for black people in South Africa to go to the movies. "It's not a tradition," explains Dunn, "but they have a decent ticket price." Maxi Movies—the Macrovision licensee in South Africa—had already established a video theatre toehold in the country prior to partnering with Macrovision. But with Macrovision's help, Maxi Movies will be able to access Hollywood product, and plans are in place to open 100 new CineGuard cinemas in Southern Africa over the next five years.

Currently, Macrovision has identified 20 international markets where a video cinema is viable. "We're taking the Cinema Paradisos that have closed down and re-opening them using new technology." And not just for Hollywood product. Dunn adds, "Our most successful movies in Poland have been Polish films."

Above: Like MaxiMovies in South Africa, Macrovision's video theatres reach audiences who would otherwise have little access to film theatres. Below: The Macrovision projection room is simple, compact and easy to use.

The key to getting the distributors on board was the CineGuard encryption system. "Everyone has agreed," says Dunn, "our standards of security are so high, we won't be a source of piracy." In fact, many companies and countries are looking to CineGuard as a way to take the wind out of the video pirates' sails. "In India, the local producers are very frustrated," explains Dunn. "They're tired of seeing video projectors being used to show pirated materials. They see CineGuard as a way to legitimize the video cinema industry."

And how does the system work? Macrovision's CineGuard decoder is integrated into Barco video projectors along with a line doubler and a security chassis that prevents any tampering with the system. Macrovision gets film masters from the distributors and transfers them to video using an encoder that adds the encryption to the tape, rendering the tape useless without the decoder. The tapes are sent overnight to theatres. When the encrypted tape is put into the VCR deck and the output signal uplinks to the video projector, the decoder inside the system unscrambles the sync signal to allow proper projection of the video.

It costs anywhere from $50,000 to $100,000 per screen for a video cinema, including renovation, projection and audio equipment—a cost, Dunn says, that is significantly lower than the $500,000 to $1 million dollars per screen for a typical modern multiplex. And, he adds, operating a video cinema is simpler and more economical than the traditional film theatre.

The hard part has been negotiating a usable release window for video. "They [distributors] don't want us to locate the video cinemas anywhere near the successful 35mm cinemas." And often, local politics prevail, but Dunn says Macrovision or the licensee has been able to negotiate a workable window. Maxi Movies actually created a new window, now called the "public video window" that comes three months after first-run release and three months before home video release.

Macrovision expects to have 100 screens licensed by the end of this year with a five to 10 year forecast of over 3,000 screens worldwide. Currently, Warner Bros., Fox and MGM/UA are the only Hollywood studios that aren't invovled. Dunn hopes they'll come around and adds, "For the studios that aren't participating, their reason are more market oriented—whether or not philosophically they agree with the use of video for theatrical purposes, or the program just is not big enough for them to spend the time—yet."

Dunn claims that people are amazed at the quality of presentation video projection can get. "It's a small screen, but we're talking about relatively small cinemas and it's a good cinema-going experience. I think distributors have recognized that it's appropriate for the situation it's addressing. We're not in there saying we want to open these theatres in Manhattan and Los Angeles where people are getting good 35mm prints of major Hollywood releases. We're saying where there are obvious distribution problems and prints are reaching those people are in very bad conditions, then we have a better solution."

Macrovision is optimistic but cautious about the future. "We believe electronic cinema is out there, but it's five to 10 years away before projection quality can possibly achieve what film quality can."

Dunn continues, "The issue with video projectors is they're not nearly as bright as film projectors. So Macrovision is working with Barco NV (a video projector manufacturer) and other companies experiment with new technologies for improving light output."

Macrovision hopes to create a standard with CineGuard and is ready to evolve from S-VHS when the time is right. "We already have digital products, so that's not really an issue. And our exhibitors are capable of showing encoded material, but they can just as easily put a satellite on the roof and take a satellite feed." Dunn says Macrovision currently restricts the use of the projector with a mechanism that will not permit the system to take a satellite feed during certain points of the day, because "we want these cinemas to behave like commercial cinemas." Which means not showing the boxing match when they should be showing movies.

Dunn says the towns that Macrovision serves deserve to see affordable movies in a high-quality environment. Which means clean, comfortable theatres with a good Dolby surround system. "Our first picture when we opened in Poland was 'Bad Boys.' Seventy-eight percent of our customers are under the age of 25 and they're no different from the American kids. Early in the film there's a 747 that flies overhead and those jet engines started in the back speakers and then ripped up the side speakers and then came through the left/center/right speakers through the screen and it lifted the kids out of their seats. Their reaction was, 'Man, cinema's come back to town.'"

And that, ladies and gentlemen, is what it's all about—whether on film, on super-VHS, on satellite or some yet-to-be-determined futuristic format.

A DRIVING PASSION

A Filmmaker Goes On The Road In Search Of His Drive-In Dreams

By Jon Bokenkamp

It was America before America was generic. It was buck night, triple features and two-bit love. It was that particular smell of the summer air, the fresh-cut grass, the dust. And popcorn...."

That's how 24-year-old film school graduate Jon Bokenkamp, who worked as a carpenter on "Renaissance Man" and assistant editor on "omaha: the movie," describes the experience of attending drive-in theatres when he was a boy in Kearney, Nebr. "As a kid, I always loved going to the drive-in—so much so that I spent a year and a half of my life making a documentary about those dinosaurs of theatrical distribution."

The resulting 20-day journey in an old Cadillac took Bokenkamp and a film crew through California, Utah, Colorado, Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Nebraska. The snake-like route followed a path plotted to cross the sites of drive-ins either still or recently operational, like the Best Western Movie Manor in Monte Vista, Colo., and the Skyview in Lamesa, Texas.

The resulting 45-minute film, a "drive-in memorial" that combines 16mm, BetaCam SP and Super-8 footage and melds the documentary and road-movie genres, is called "After Sunset: The Life and Times of the Drive-In Theatre." In tune with the movie product most commonly associated with drive-ins, which once numbered more than 5,000 but now are barely a sixth that, interviewees include horror director John Carpenter, legendary B-movie producer Sam Arkoff and John Bloom, who goes by the gonzo film critic guise of Joe Bob Briggs.

Bokenkamp, who describes himself as a "simple kid from small-town Nebraska who likes Coca-Cola, the road, dust—things that are just considered American," here describes his adventure for the readers of BOXOFFICE.

One recent summer, I tasted freedom—I graduated from college. With the remaining student loan money I had left in my checking account, I decided to embrace the road. I wanted to travel the West and tell the story of America's romance with the drive-in theatre. I wanted to document the drive-in and its people before they disappeared.

The Movie Manor in Monte Vista, Colo., is home to a movie motel for patrons wishing to watch the night's attractions from their own rooms.

"We found good news: People. When I say people, I mean 'mom-and-pop theatre owners,' who run [America's remaining] quaint little drive-in theatres."

Those gigantic outdoor theatres had always represented a simpler time to me. An America that wasn't so fragmented, perhaps an America that was a little more innocent. After all, I'd grown up in a decade when half of all parents were divorced, when baseball went on strike and apple pie was called "too fattening." I wanted to know where America had gone, to meet the people who built and patronized these open-air palaces but eventually had to watch most die. So I rented a camera and put together a small crew of film-school buddies. With these three good pals, $240 and a 1976 Caddie (which I purchased from a junkman who asked me to call him "The Wolfman"), we set out across the great American desert, vowing to use only drive-in theatres as our map.

So we left L.A. and traveled the highways. Bumpy, out-of-the-way highways. And we found good news: People.

When I say people, I mean "mom-and-pop theatre owners," who run quaint little drive-in theatres that tend not to be listed in any industry directory. People like George Kelloff, a true drive-in theatre buff who lives in Monte Vista, Colo. George is a soft-spoken man who now owns the Best Western Movie Manor, who had saved for eight years until he and his wife could afford to build his dream: "a movie motel where you can watch the movie from the comfort of your own room." There in Monte Vista, a produce town of 3,900 in Rio Grande County, patrons can lie in bed and watch the night's movie on a drive-in screen as it plays under the stars. In fact, George loves the theatre business so much that he and his wife live at the drive-in. "The wife and I built a small apartment there next to the snack bar," he told me, "so we can watch the movie at night."

Our room at the Movie Manor was called The Audrey Hepburn Room—every room is named after a star. The crew and I watched "Casper" and shared a pizza. The sound was piped right into our room.

Over the next few days, we covered a lot of road. Eventually, we pulled into the sleepy oil and agricultural town of Lamesa, Texas (pop. 11,800), where Sam and Carol Kirkland run the Skyview Drive-In. Sam has worked at the theatre (which he now owns) since he was 10 years old. Their drive-in is "plum famous" around Lamesa—less for the size of its screen (the largest in Texas) than its food. The Skyview boasts its own patented food item, the Chihuahua Sandwich.

According to Sam, "The Chihuahua is a real unique food item that we own here at the Skyview. It consists of two corn tortillas fried flat, with chili in it, some cabbage, onions—if

Dear Dan,

Dan Livak carries the Olympic Torch, 1996

May your torch stay lit for another 40 years.

Happy Birthday!

Mark Schulte
Doug Endicott
Tom Brand &
Janice Sinclaire
Alan Grossberg

Dan & Amy Tocchini
John Ellison Jr.
John Schweiger &
Candace Runnel
Kyle Conner

you want 'em—and our special pimento cheese. We top it off with jalapeno pepper and put it in a special Chihuahua sack." In 1995, the Chihuahua was named the best food item at the Texas State Fair. Ever watchful for ancillary revenue, the Kirklands have set things up so you don't even have to pay theatre admission if all you want is a Chihuahua. You can just pull up to the snack bar, get a Chihuahua and take it home with you.

The night we visited the Skyview was a warm June evening that saw the theatre's largest crowd in 15 years: 510 cars. The Skyview is far from dead. The community loves that theatre.

During our travels, we met drive-in owners and aficionados from all over the western U.S. Some fed us, some shared great stories of naked people and honking horns, and others were simply kind enough to let us camp there under the night sky.

Each day brought us to a new screen and a new story. In Springfield, a town of 1,700 located in a cattle-and-dairy corner of Colorado, Ruby Ross is a senior-citizen widow who still hauls the popcorn popper from her downtown hardtop to the Kar-Vu Drive-In as the outdoor season arrives. She owns both theatres but operates only one at a time—the hardtop in the winter and the no-top in the summer. When her drive-in is operating, it's the only movie theatre in all of Baca County. In the serene Sandhills of Nebraska, Gerald Bullard is a local businessman who opened a drive-in, aptly called the Sandhills Drive-In, on the prairie outside Alliance. He built the place himself.

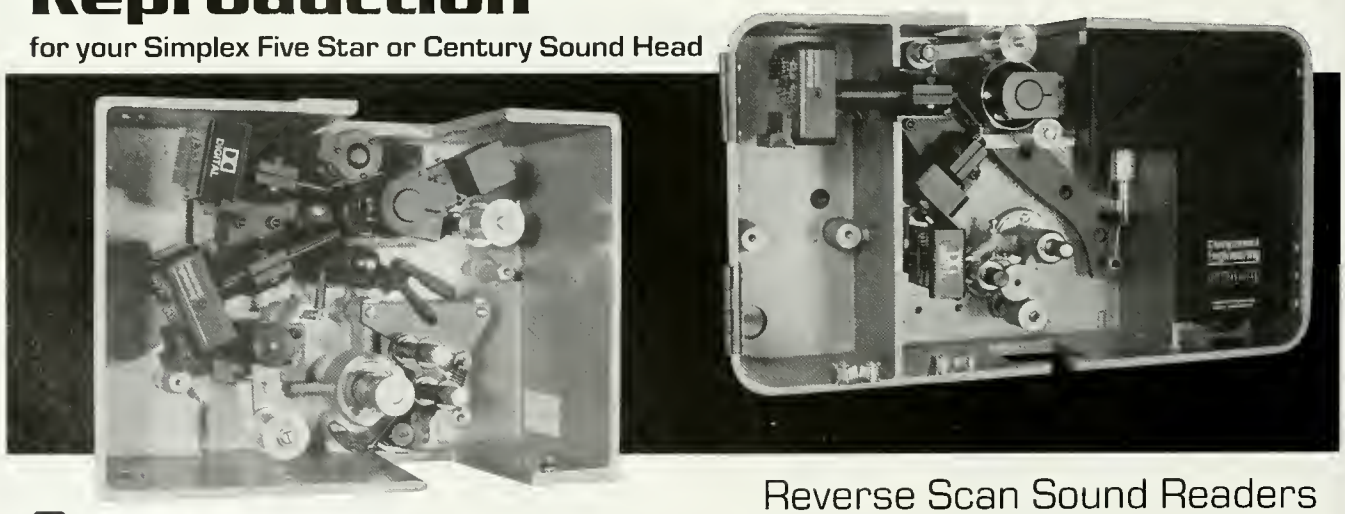
Then there's the Brazos Drive-In Theatre in Granbury, Texas. The Brazos is unique in that its screen faces west, forcing the movies to start a little later than most because the sun hits the screen directly—but the display of golden hues reflected off the tower make the wait worthwhile. Knowing the importance of the snack bar to the outdoor screen-scene experience, Jennifer Miller serves perhaps the best hamburger in West Texas. (Her secret is the mayonnaise.)

"The night we visited the Skyview was a warm June evening that saw the theatre's largest crowd in 15 years: 510 cars. The Skyview is far from dead. The community loves that theatre."

After three weeks of good stories and fried foods, our drive-in quest came to a close. We had traveled more than 4,200 miles in search of a simpler time, and it's true, too true: The drive-in as we once knew it is gone. Never again will the outdoor theatre thrive as an economic institution in American culture. If people continue to go, it will probably be to rekindle those wistful memories of innocence and summertime. They'll call it nostalgia.

If the marketeers could find a way to bottle the drive-in experience, I'm sure they would. It would probably be some type of an indoor-drive-in-ride with cute fiberglass cars and plastic mugs of root beer, all rather lifeless. But for those who find the time, for those who go out and travel the back roads, talk to the people and hear their stories, the drive-in theatre is alive.

But to experience it you have to go. Cancel your reservation at the local inn and stay at George Kelloff's Movie Manor for a night. Take your kids and let them play on the swingset at Ruby Ross' Kar-Vu Drive-In. Go to the Skyview and try the Chihuahua and then knock on the projection booth door and tell Sam Kirkland you came there just to see his theatre. You'll make his day.



And then, right there, standing in the drive-in, you'll remember it. You'll remember the way America used to be, that first date, the smell of perfume and Brylcreem, and the glow of the drive-in movie, where the showtime is always the same: after sunset.

Cable network sales of Bokenkamp's film are being handled by Janson Associates; phone (800) 9-JANSON. Single copies or bulk orders of videocassettes of "After Sunset" are available for $25 each from Moonshadow Entertainment, 475 E. Orange Grove Ave., Suite L, Burbank CA 91501. Phone: (818) 563-3086.

Information about "After Sunset" is also available on the Internet. The website address is http://www.driveintheater.com/aftersunset.

BOXOFFICE would also like to thank Mary Ann Grasso, the vice president of NATO, for bringing Mr. Bokenkamp's drive-in odyssey to our attention.

For superb
Analog & Dolby Digital® Reproduction
for your Simplex Five Star or Century Sound Head

Component Engineering

Reverse Scan Sound Readers using the Visible Light L.E.D.'s & Receptors developed by Dolby Laboratories

3601 Gilman Avenue West • Seattle, WA 98199 • 206.284.9171 • fax 206.286.4462

Response No. 150

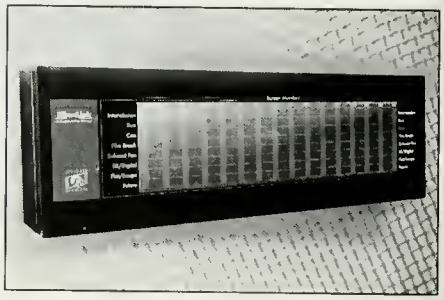
Show me the Money!

That's no problem at Charter Financial. That's what we're about - providing you with the money you need to compete successfully in the exhibition industry, like building new theatres, or purchasing equipment, furniture and fixtures. When it comes to exhibition financing, Charter is a proven star. So, why not call us today?

Ask for Henry Frommer or Jerry Rosen at 800-805-9999. Available for appointments during NATO ShoWest.

CHARTER FINANCIAL

Response No. 216



BOXOFFICE MAGAZINE

presents our

ShoWest 1997

NEW PRODUCTS BUYING GUIDE

New from Odyssey Products is the first booth status panel employing fiberoptic technology. The Fiberlink Status System is fully compatible with your existing automation, and eliminates electrical line noise and electromagnetic interference. The panel includes 16 screens, with eight bit status blocks per screen. Digital stereo intermission music, voice announcers and more can be added to the panel stations. For more information, write to Odyssey at 5644 Baldwin Court, Norcross, GA 30071, or call (770) 448-4873.

Response Number 301.

Many of the designs that make theatre lobbies and other areas look attractive and exciting also make them difficult to light; curves, coves, sharp angles and other non-standard elements simply won't accommodate stock lighting. Now Tivoli Industries has a number of ingenious flexible lighting systems to solve this problem. Their compact fluorescent 500, 600 and T8 Series; Incandescent Series; and FlexSystem lighting solutions offer a variety of options for your unusual designs. For more information, call Tivoli Industries at (714) 957-6101.
Response Number 302.

ORC Lighting Products has added the Integraded Seal Lamp to its line of light sources. These lamps are especially designed for the customer who prefers graded seals. Call (818) 969-3344 for more information.
Response Number 303.

Pacer/CATS has developed a state-of-the-art ticketing and concessions software suite. Their Total Information Management System should make training cashiers easier and mistakes less frequent; the system relies on an easily understood point-and-click interface. Help with training is also available. The systems are fully customizable and specifically designed for the theatre industry.

ShoWest 1997 New Products

Also from Pacer/CATS is a new automated customer service kiosk that reduces lines and offers customers a fun way to purchase tickets and concessions. An animated "usher" guides customers through the transaction with trailers of coming atttractions, show times and bookings, and customers can purchase advance tickets and concessions. This system is fully compatible with TeleTicket. Call Pacer/CATS at (303) 649-9818 or (800) 730-2287 for details.

Response Number 304.

If you've invested in THX sound technology for your theatre, there's now a humorous way to let the audience know what they're listening to. Lucasfilm THX, Skywalker Sound and Pixar Animation Studios have collaborated to produce an animated trailer to promote THX. Now, when the familiar logo appears on the screen, it suddenly breaks down and a whimsical animated character appears to fix it, demonstrating the theatre's sound capabilities in the process. If nothing else, a good laugh should put the audience in the mood to enjoy the movie that follows. Call (415) 662-1896 for information.

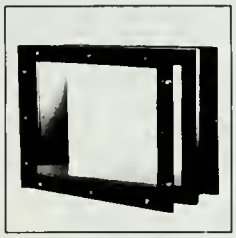
Response Number 305.

Looking for something to lend a little flair to your marquee? Notify passers-by of special events with large, multicolored banners from ASF. Printed with solvent-free, permanently bonded inks, the banners can be printed to your

GOLDBERG BROTHERS, INC.

"Celebrating our 100th anniversary"

Slide Projector Port



With Fully Adjustable Shelf

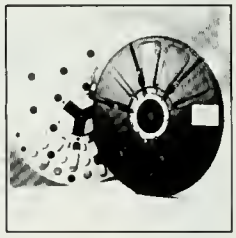
- Easily removable • 12" x 12" glass frame
- Adjustable shelf
- Non-skid surface prevents projector movement

Adjustable Film Clamps

• Quick and simple • Transfers up to 16,000 feet of film without breaking it down
• Sold in sets of three

Projection and View Port Glass Frame Sets

- 16" x 20" hinged glass frame
- Opens easily • White water float glass with anti-reflection coating



Surround Speaker Mounting Brackets

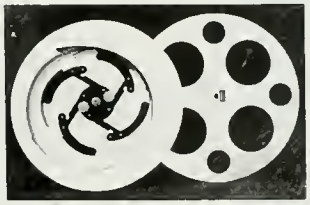
• Accommodates most popular surround speakers • Shock absorbers between the base plate and side pieces
• Adjustable for a wide range of speaker sizes.

Film Guidance Rollers

• For projectors or wallmount

Show Shipper ELR System

• 6,000 ft & 12,000 ft available



Ticket Box

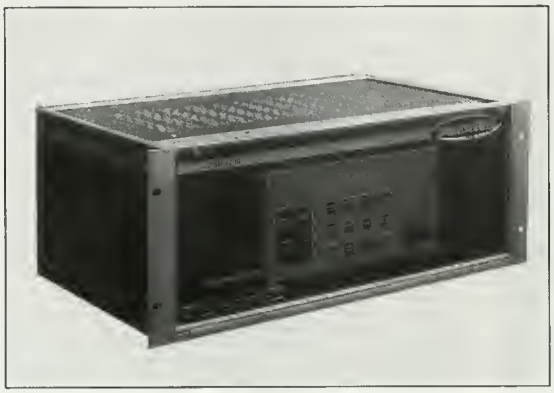
- Easily changeable schedule sheets
- Hinged schedule window w/access to flashlight compartment
- Lockable stub holding area
- Separate lockable lost and found area
- Clipboard holder in door

SEE US AT SHOWEST '97 BOOTH #914

Trailer Retrieval Reel

A QUICK & EASY way to handle the coming attractions that have been pulled out of the feature for tear down.

Office: (303) 321-1099 • Fax: (303) 388-0749
8000 East 40th Avenue, Denver, Colorado 80207



ShoWest 1997 New Products Guide

specifications on three standard sizes: 18" x 36", 30" x 60" and 30" x 84". A line of stock designs is also available. Call Venmark Intl. at (617) 237-5860.

Response Number 306.

Smart Theatre Systems has come out with a new model of the THX-approved CSP4235 PANSTEREO cinema stereo processor, which incorporates the functions and controls of the remote control unit into a more compact and efficient model. The control buttons are now built into the front panel of this rack-mounted product. The new model CSP1200 maintains all the features of the companion product, but now has a front panel LCD status display that provides more information to the operator. The performance and specifications of the CSP1200 are identical to the original processor, but carries a lower theatre net price.

Smart also recently released a Digital Signal Processing matrix designed to replace the analog matrix used in Dolby optical stereo processors. The digital system ensures accuracy and consistency in decoding 4-channel signals. The processor does not require modification or adjustment to use the new matrix.

The matrix also includes the SRS sound retrieval system, which can be activated by switch on the card. Call (800) 45-SMART or e-mail: smart@america.net.

Response Number 307.

QSC Audio Products is offering an addition to their PowerLight series. The PowerLight 2.0HV amplifier is optimized for maximum power at eight and four ohms. The amplifier uses QSC's PowerWave Switching Technology, and weighs only 18 pounds. QSC also announces that its USA 900 and USA 1310 amplifiers are now THX-approved for the cinema market. Additionally, the USA Series has recently been improved with new features: Included now are the Neutrik Combo connectors, providing both XLR and 1/4" TRS inputs, selectable input limiters to reduce clipping, variable low-frequency filters to protect speakers, and more power than before thanks to larger, improved power supplies. For more information, call (714) 754-6175 or e-mail info@qscaudio.com. http://www.qscaudio.com.

Response Number 308.

The Electro-Voice TS992-LX speakers are space-savers as well as THX sound systems. The behind-the-screen speakers reduce the screen to back wall distance by one third,

WALLACE THEATRES

THEATRE MANAGEMENT OPPORTUNITIES

RAPID ADVANCEMENT OPPORTUNITIES
AGGRESSIVE, EXPANSION-ORIENTED FUTURE

WALLACE THEATRE CORPORATION, A NATIONALLY RECOGNIZED REGIONAL THEATRE CIRCUIT, IS SEEKING OUTSTANDING THEATRE MANAGEMENT PROFESSIONALS (SINGLE-MULTIPLEX EXPERIENCE) TO JOIN OUR RAPIDLY GROWING ORGANIZATION.

PLEASE CONSIDER:

- OPPORTUNITIES ON THE WEST COAST, HAWAII AND INTERNATIONAL MARKETS
- RELOCATION REIMBURSEMENT
- EXCELLENT COMPENSATION AND BENEFIT PACKAGE
- POTENTIAL ADVANCEMENT TO SENIOR MANAGEMENT

IF YOU ARE A TEAM PLAYER, ENJOY WORKING WITH THE PUBLIC AND ARE SEEKING A CAREER AND A FUTURE IN THE MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITION INDUSTRY PLEASE CONTACT US:

BRETT J. HAVLIX
GENERAL MANAGER
WALLACE THEATRE CORPORATION
3375 KOAPAKA ST. SUITE 345
HONOLULU, HI 96819
808-836-6055
FAX 808-816-6077

WALLACE THEATRE CORPORATION IS AN EQUAL OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER

Response No. 289

ShoWest 1997 New Products Guide

allowing theatre owners to move the screen back and add an extra row of seats. The matte-black speakers will not reflect light back through the screen. Call (800) 234-6831 for more information.

Response Number 309.

The Dolby CP45 six-channel analog processor is not a new product, to be sure—theatres have been long been using Dolby. However, there is something different about this Dolby processor: the price has been reduced to $4,300, less than some non-Dolby processors. Call Dolby at (415) 558-0213 for more information.

Response Number 310.

Star Manufacturing International has two new concession products to keep profits steaming. The Model #4RW-P warmer has a 3 1/2 quart capacity and boasts portion-control dispensing of cheese, sauces and hot fudge. The machine's all-stainless steel construction should stand up to hard use and cleaning.

Also from Star is the Model #615F Star-Max 15 lb. Counter model gas fryer. This appliance matches other Star-Max machines in appearance and is also designed for ease of cleaning and durability. For safety, the thermostat includes a hi-limit. A set of twin-sized baskets is included. Call Star Manufacturing at (800) 264-7827.

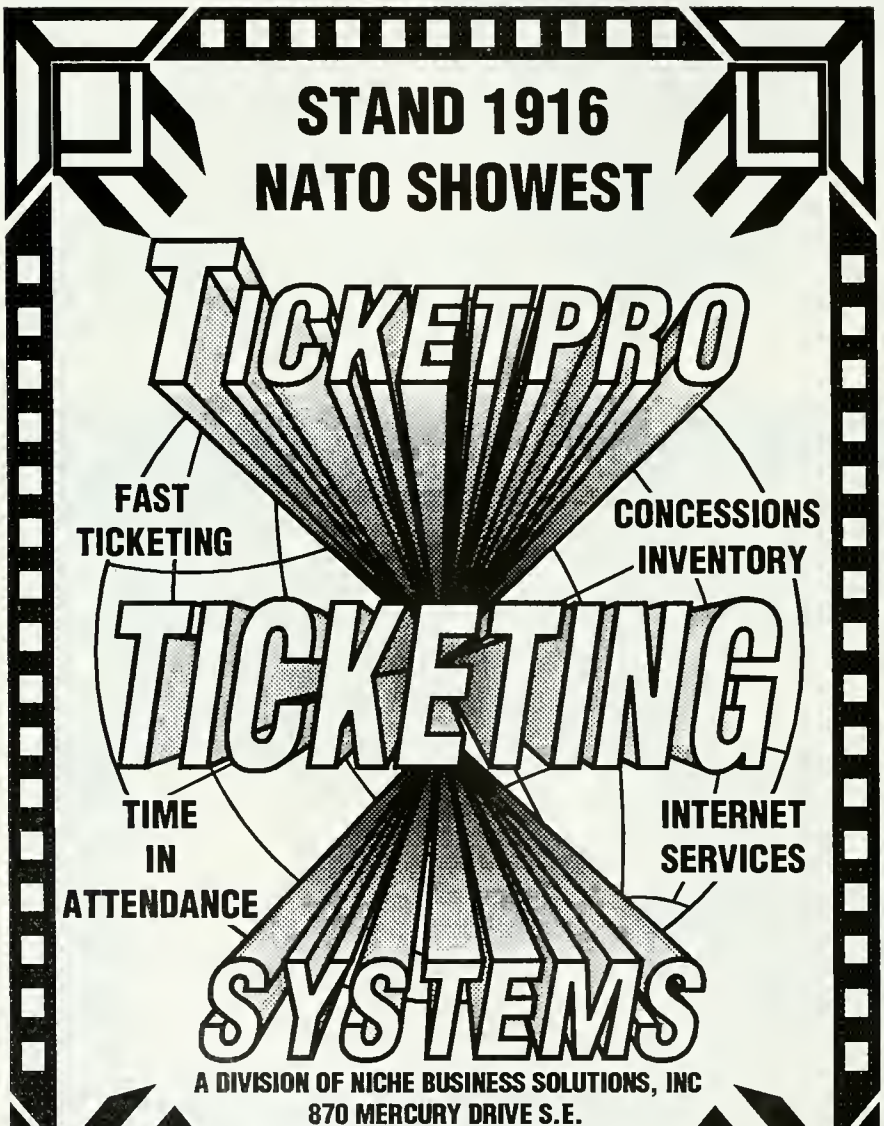
Response Number 311.

Now that you've invested in a state-of-the-art sound system, you want it to work at its best. To the rescue comes Audio Control Industrial with Iasys, a diagnostic electro-acoustic analyzer which can recommend where to set the crossover point, the crossover level, the limiter and the delay. Iasys uses fuzzy logic to perform its analysis, and includes a useful help button to suggest what to do next. Phone (206) 775-8461.

Response Number 312.

You can make all kinds of modifications in your theatre to accommodate the hearing impaired, but it won't do any good unless they know that assistance is available. A new trailer from Filmack Studios takes just

Response No. 209



ShoWest 1997 New Products Guide

twelve seconds to inform your patrons that they can pick up special listening devices at the concession stand. This is one message which should come through loud and clear. Call toll-free: (800) 345-6225.

Response Number 313.

The Tac-Fast carpet system from 3M offers a number of innovations. The carpet is designed not to unravel at the edges, meaning that it can be installed flush with tile, wood or linoleum without a tack-down bar. More impressively, the carpet is installed with a velcro-like system of hooks and loops; it isn't bonded directly to the floor surface, and can be removed for easy replacement when it becomes worn. This also makes it possible to combine different carpet types to create custom designs. Because liquid adhesives are not used, no offensive chemical odors are created and ventilation is not an issue. To learn more about Tac-Fast, call (800) 440-2965.

Response Number 314.

Response No. 240

Now your customers can get free postcards in your lobby. Pik:Nik Cinema Free Postcards, distributed in theatres in 50 major markets worldwide, will provide a selection of free, high-quality postcards for your customers to collect and mail. If you place advertising for your theatre on Pik:Nik cards, it will be seen not only at the displays, but by anyone who receives the cards by mail. Call Pik:Nik at (213) 665-2556 for details.

Response Number 315.

If you're looking for ways to spruce up your lobby, Lawrence Metal Products may have the answer. They offer two new metal planter designs: Model 62, which is polished brass with a lacquered finish and decorative handles, and Model 63, hammered brass with a lacquered finish, plus handles and feet. Both planters are 17" high, 16" in diameter and weigh 14 lbs. each. Call (516) 666-0300 or write to P.O. Box 400-M, 260 Spur Dr. S., Bay Shore, NY 11706.

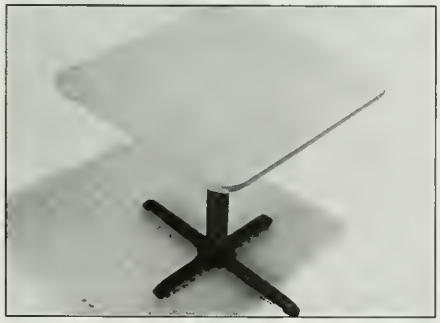
Response Number 316.

Yamaha Electronics Corporation is introducing two new subwoofers that produce low bass from relatively small cabinets. The YST-SW300 has been especially designed for use with Dolby Digital. The speaker offers extra-low end bass and can be used to broadcast movies or music. The YST-SW40 is

ShoWest 1997 New Products Guide



Yamaha's least expensive subwoofer; it incorporates magnetic shielding and Active Servo Technology. Additionally, a new 5-channel AV receiver from Yamaha, the RX-V990, replaces Yamaha's RX-V890 and retails for the same price, even though the new model adds capability for 5.1 channel sources, such as Dolby Digital. Five additional RCA jacks have been added and the new receiver also includes Yamaha's Cinema DSP processing. The machine will still handle traditional Dolby Surround Sound. It offers 10 different sound programs offering a variety of auditory environments. For details, call (212) 545-7424.

Response Number 317.

If you have an eating area in the lobby, The Swan Corporation is introducing seamless tabletops made of Swanstone for easy clean-up. The tabletops have dropped edges with chipboard inserts, and are available in the following sizes: 20" x 24", 24" x 42" and 30" x 30". The material is impervious to boiling water, high temperatures and normal abrasion. The color goes all the way through the table surface, so it cannot be worn away. For more information, call Swan at (314) 231-8148, or write: One City Centre, St. Louis, MO 63101.

Response Number 318.

Flavor Wear has a new line of clothing for your employees, incorporating whimsical, movie-oriented designs. Vests, ties, aprons and hats for concession staff, ushers, ticket booth attendants and managers are available in a design called "Showbiz," which will be premiered at ShoWest at Flavor Wear's booth, number 1909. For more information, call (619) 749-1332.

Response Number 319.

If you run trailers and previews before the show, Goldberg Brothers Inc. has an easy way to retrieve them from the projector. The Trailer Retrieval Reel slips inside the loops of unspooled film, and expands to lock it in place for easy transport to the rewind bench. Call (303) 321-1099 for more details, or write to Goldberg Brothers Inc., 8000 E. 40th Ave., Denver, CO 80207.

Response Number 320.

The Earth Communications Office has produced a new trailer to promote awareness of the importance of coral reefs. The two-minute public service announcement is narrated by actress Linda Hunt. For more information or to order the trailer, call (310) 571-3141.

Response Number 321.

Cinema Products International

CALL US NOW

For all your booth supplies and equipment including

- Sankor SS Lens
- Xenon Lamps
- Aisle Lighting
- Automations
- All Booth Supplies and More

Introducing:

LASER LENS

Narrow Slit Sound Lens with Integrated Solid State Laser Light Source

Call Today For Complete Details and Our Catalog

Response No. 170

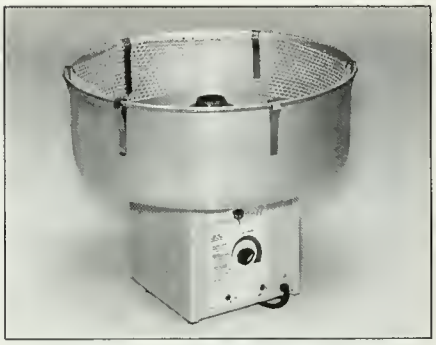
Cinema Products International

1015 5th Avenue North • Nashville, TN 37219 • 615-248-0771
FAX 615-248-2725 • Toll Free: 800-891-1031 • FAX 888-891-0554

Now Proudly Distributing

Tim Harvey Ticketing

ShoWest 1997 New Products Guide



If your counter space is at a premium but you still need a computer to run your point-of-sale operations, Indiana Cash Drawer may have the answer. Their MPC3412 microPC measures only 3"x4"x12", small enough to fit in the back of their SLD cash drawer, but includes four serial ports to support various peripherals plus a programmable Solid State Disk, data backup and floppy drive. The case is industrial-strength, to stand up to hard retail use. For information and to learn about a special introductory offer, contact ICD at (800) CASHDRW (227-4379), or visit ICD's website at http://www.icdpos.com.

Response Number 322.

Strong International is introducing two new automation control systems. The CNA-100 is the base-level version, while the CNA-200 offers the same features with the addition of backlit graphic readouts and new automation enhancements. The systems are modular and designed to be easy to troubleshoot, since they sport simplified wiring designs. Call (402) 390-2929.

Response Number 323.

Looking for a new taste treat to add to the concession stand? Gold Medal Products is offering the Floss Boss, an inexpensive "starter" cotton candy machine that allows you to test the profit potential of adding cotton candy to your line-up. The machine produces two servings per minute and requires counter space of 26" in diameter. Other cotton candy and "fun food" machines are also available. For details, call (800) 543-0862.

Response Number 324.

Server Products offers a line of nacho chip and cheese dispensers. The cheese warmer has an adjustable thermostat and water bath to keep cheese at the perfect temperature, and the chip servers have attractive flouresc-ent lighting. Call toll-free, (800) 558-8722, for more information.

Response Number 325.

So, You Thought You've Never Seen Or Heard Of Us Before?

Chuck Shoemaker and Don Wunderlich, of ULTRATECH, have been chosen by ShoWest to "Put On The Show" Since 1984.

We Work Our Magic Behind The Scenes!

Visit Us At ShoWest Booth #2002

ULTRATECH

PO Box 436
Homestead, PA 15120
Tel: (800) 647-4795
Fax: (412) 469-9351

PO Box 11717
Kansas City, MO 64138
Tel: (800) 869-4939
Fax: (816) 737-0571

Let The Professionals From ULTRATECH Take Care Of Your Sight, Sound And Auditorium Needs

ShoWest 1997 New Products Guide

Box Office Buddy cards can make vital film information easily available to your patrons and staff alike. The cards stand in acrylic holders and display film genres, show times, ratings, a synopsis and the list of director and stars. These cards make sure your staff is fully informed and cut down on time-consuming questions from customers. Available from Theatre Service Network, (630) 553-0588.

Response Number 326.

B.I.C. America is introducing a two-way in-ceiling speaker with a swivel-tweeter so that high-end can be positioned where desired. The speaker uses a neodium magnet to minimize space consumption. The tweeters can be installed without separate mounting brackets. Call (800) 348-6492 for details.

Response Number 327.

Make your concession stand more attractive and the food more appetizing in appearance with Hatco Corp.'s designer series of Glo-Ray Infrared Foodwarmers. These aluminum strip heaters are available in a number of colors, including white granite, gray granite, warm red, hunter green, navy blue and black. Models are available up to eight feet long, in widths from six inches to fifteen inches. Hatco is also offering the Flav-R-Savor Heated Display Cabinet model WSFT-1X to display wrapped food items on standard bun pans. The rack has four removable, adjustable shelves, and is available in black or clear finishes. The precise combination of heat and humidity within the cabinet keeps food fresh and appealing. The Flav-R-Savor sits on the countertop; it measures 32" wide by 32 3/4" high and 22 3/4" deep. Call (800) 558-0607.

Response Number 328.

Make sure consumers recognize your name, or make a little extra profit selling ad space to local businesses, with ASF's site furniture grouping. These benches, trash receptacles and banners feature colorful custom advertising graphics. It's easy to change the graphics periodically for a new ad or a different look, and all pieces are weather- and fade-resistant. Call (800) 378-3080 for further information.

Response Number 329.

INTRODUCING
A NEW ERA IN EXCELLENCE

OPTIMUM
CINEMA SYSTEMS (AUSTRALASIA) LTD
CINEMA SPECIALISTS IN DESIGN
EQUIPMENT SUPPLY AND INSTALLATION ENGINEERING
AUDIO AND ACOUSTICS
ALIGNMENTS
MAINTENANCE AND REPAIR
STRATEGIC PLANS & VENUE MARKETING

AUSTRALIA
P.O. BOX 160
ROUND CORNER
NSW 2158
TEL ++61 2 9651 4567
FAX ++61 2 9651 4623

OFFICIAL AUSTRALIA
STRONG INTERNATIONAL
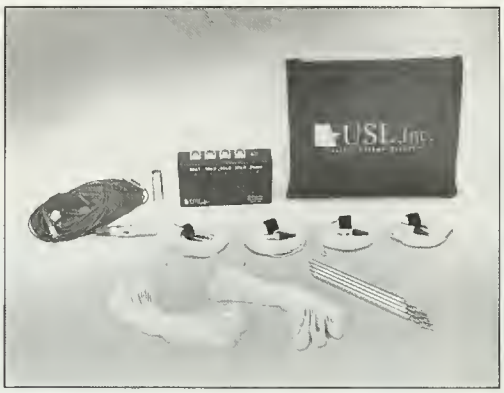
NEW ZEALAND DISTRIBUTOR

NEW ZEALAND
P.O. BOX 48-065
SILVERSTREAM
WELLINGTON 6430
TEL ++64 4 566 5845
FAX ++64 4 566 5846

SEE US AT STAND 1916 AT SHOWEST

Response No. 240



ShoWest 1997 New Products Guide

To discreetly keep an eye on customers and employees while providing site lighting at the same time, Tivoli Industries is introducing its new Paravision lighting system. These suspended, linear downlights also incorporate miniaturized video cameras. The cameras are only one-third inch in size and can be positioned immediately over a cash drawer or concession area without being intrusive in appearance. At the same time, low-voltage lighting is provided to the area. Also new from Tivoli, Lumitred glare-free illuminated step lights will help your patrons enter and leave your theatre safely. Energy-efficient 7-watt lamps inside a non-skid tread surface offer light without distracting glare. Call Tivoli at (714) 957-6101, for details.

Response Number 330.

Ultra-Stereo's MMP-10S Microphone Multiplexer is a portable, battery powered unit that can be used with almost any analyzer. Four omnidirectional, laboratory-quality microphones can be used singly or sequentially at an adjustable rate. Contact Ultra-Stereo at (818) 609-7405.

Response Number 331.

J&J Snack Foods introduces the Gourmet Pretzel Roll. These soft sourdough pretzel rolls are available in Bavarian and whole-wheat recipes, and are pre-sliced for sandwich fillings. Call (609) 665-9534.

Response Number 332.

Stein Industries Inc. offers their Counter Top Nacho Warmer to keep nachos hot and crisp. The machine includes a merchandising sign and factory-set thermostat. Call (516) 789-2222 for more information.

Response Number 333.

For a whole new dimension to the movie-going experience, Aura Virtual Sound adds the sensation of movement to film soundtracks. The system uses 25-watt electromagnetic transducers to cause seats to resonate when crashes, explosions or swelling music occur in the film. This allows you to run lower sound pressure levels, reducing sound leakage into other auditoriums, while still giving the audience the sensation of traditional bass. For information, call (310) 643-5300.

Response Number 334.

Promotional Management Group offers Movie Graphic Collectables to boost your concession sales. These cups, popcorn tubs and kids' trays feature graphic images from

The movie trailer company with inspiring ideas for theatre owners.
We entertain your patrons and work to make profits for you.

Whether near or far, far away...
we produce trailers in all formats with stereo surround... and distribute worldwide, on budget and on time!

PIKE PRODUCTIONS
The Newport Company with the Hollywood Connection

PHONE (401) 846-8890 ~ FAX (401) 847-0070
PO Box 300 ~ Newport, Rhode Island 02840 USA

Response No. 145

ShoWest 1997 New Products Guide

your current releases to encourage concession buys. Call (913) 831-7644 for details.

Response Number 335.

Three new trailers let your patrons know that you're offering them a Dolby sound experience. "Canyon" and "Egypt" showcase Dolby Digital sound, while "Temple" demonstrates Dolby SR Analog Audio. For details, call (415) 558-0200.

Response Number 336.

Promotion in Motion Inc., offers two new candies in its line of concession treats. Slice fruit candies come in six flavors, and Mighty Malts are malted milk balls. The company also handles Care Bear Gummi Bears, Red Hots, Lemonheads, Sun-Maid Milk Chocolate Raisins, and more. Call (201) 784-5800.

Response Number 337.

Increase your gift certificate sales with Pike Productions' new gift trailer. With full-color animation and a Dolby soundtrack, this trailer offers reasons for your patrons to buy gift certificates. Call (401) 846-8890 for more details.

Response Number 338.

If you use Peavey's Mediamatrix computer software, you can get a free upgrade from the company. Version 2.1 of the software includes many new features, including a Sub-Preset Event Scheduler, Runtime Hardware Failure Detection and much more. Call Peavey Architectural Acoustics at (601) 483-5376, or write: 711 A Street., Meridian, MS 39301.

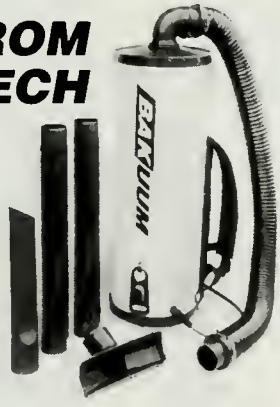
Response Number 339.

The newest addition to OSRAM's XBO Xenon Lamp Line is especially designed for new, bigger screens, with an extra-high 5000 watts. OSRAM is also introducing "Ceramic seal" technology to reduce the volume of the lamp and the amount of xenon filling, while still providing reliability. Initially, this technology will only be available in the 1600 through 3000 watt lamps. For details, contact Osram at (615) 661-5966.

Response Number 340.

If you're on-line or would like to be, Schult Industries offers Net Solutions, Inc., a full-service Internet Service Provider. Net Solutions can help with web design and hosting, e-mail and networking for your Linked Area Network. Call (816) 540-4798 or (of course) visit their web site at www.schult.com.

Response Number 341.



NEW! FROM MANUTECH

BAKUUM

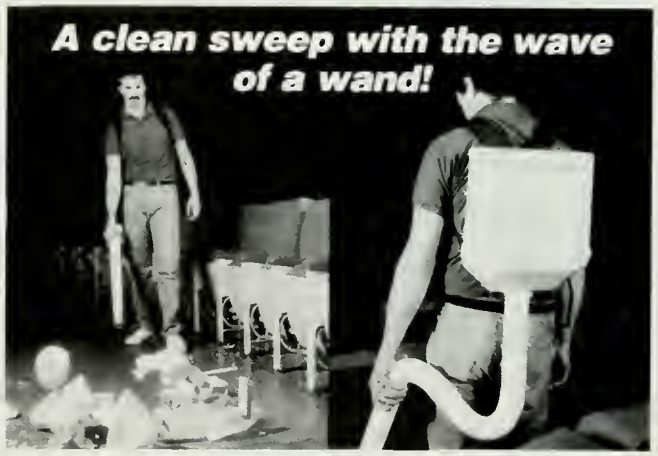
Electric

Backpack

Vacuum

BAKUUM™

ELECTRIC BACKPACK VACUUM



This lightweight, 2 stage motor, 2.3 horsepower electric backpack vacuum produces a high volume, high lift suction, capable of inhaling even large debris. Constructed of high impact polymers, it comes with 2 ½" hose and accessories, reuseable 2 ½ gallon cloth bag and quick release latches for easy emptying. See your theatre supply dealer or call us at (800)676-2569.

Manufactured by MANUTECH™

P.O. Box 51295 • Pacific Grove, CA 93950
(408) 655-8794
http://www.ssmedia.com/manutech/

Response No. 92

A clean sweep with the wave of a wand!

BLOWARD™

ELECTRIC BACKPACK BLO-CLEANER

This lightweight, twin motor, 3.4 horsepower electric backpack blower produces a concentrated blast of pressurized air from a unique jet-compression system, capable of moving even heavy objects. Constructed of durable, high impact ABS, it features low noise yield and comes with a full one year warranty. See your theatre supply dealer or call us at (800) 676-BLOW

Manufactured by MANUTECH™

P.O. Box 51295 • Pacific Grove, CA 93950
(408) 655-8794
http://www.ssmedia.com/manutech/

Response No. 92

CINETECH INC

Your Innovative Solution Provider

(800)432-4847

Cinema Equipment Clearinghouse

Call to add your name or Equipment to our Monthly Fax or E-mail List of Used and Rebuilt Equipment!

Rebuild it Right

As much or as little as you need. Repaint & Rebuild to New, or Clean it up and make it run! As Low As $500. per projector.

Parts Plus Five

All New Parts and Equipment Sold at Dealer Net Plus Five Percent When You Pay By Fax Check. Most Orders Shipped Same Day!

Cinetech, Inc.

Cinetech Corporate Center
225 W. Howard Street
Stowe, PA 19464

Phone (800) 432-4847
Fax (610) 323-1664
Email: CINETECH@AOL.com

Our Feature Presentation...

Save The Show

24 Hour Emergency Technical Support Hotline.

Before you cancel your show, Call Us For Help!

Call Today to get Setup!

Response No. 159

THEATRE SERVICE NETWORK, INC.

P.O. BOX 190
YORKVILLE, ILLINOIS 60560

OFFERING THE BEST VALUE IN FILM BUYING TODAY!
COMPARE OUR PRICES AND SERVICES!

Representing over 200 screens from coast to coast with one goal in mind:

To help independent exhibitors receive the benefits usually afforded the major circuits.

- Experienced Film Buying
- Computerized Film Payment System
- National Concession and Equipment Pricing
- Admit One℠ Newsletter and Release Schedule
- BoxOffice Buddy℠ Info Cards
- Market and Feasiblitiy Studies

BUILDING OR EXPANDING A THEATRE?
WE CAN BE OF SERVICE TO YOU AND YOUR OPERATION.

Phone (630) 553-0588 Fax (630) 553-0594

Response No. 429

ShoWest '97 New Products Guide

American Site Furniture is offering a new, free brochure of their line of benches, trash receptacles, banners and clocks. Write to 56 Winthrop St., Concord, Mass. 02181.

Response Number 342.

Proctor Companies is now offering a line of scales and label printers suitable for bulk candy sales in theatres. The PC-10, PC-20 and PC-30 scales have a stainless steel platform and metal base. There's a keypad for vendor use and LCD tower display so that customers can see their totals. They can be used in conjunction with the TLP-4 label printer, which provides net weight, unit price and total price information. Labels can be customized to various sizes. For additional information or a free catalogue, call (800) 221-3699.

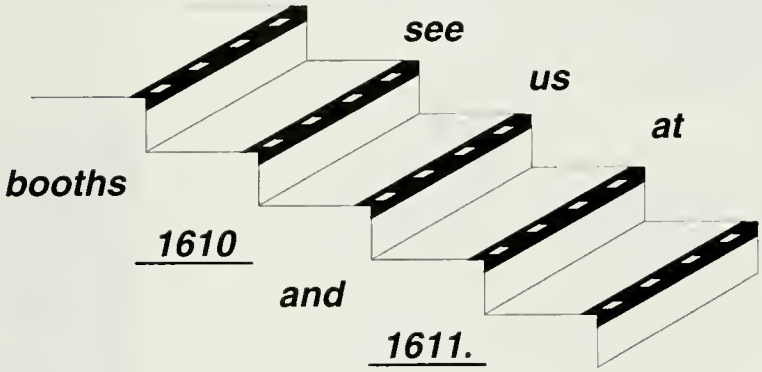
Response Number 343.

ShoWest '97 New Products Guide

Novar Controls are now available with optional access to Ethernet/TCPIP networks. Using the Windows environment, programming can be handled via telephone modem, Hayes modem, satellite, and fiber-optic communications. Programs include optimized start/stop, time-of-day scheduling, demand limiting, temperature reset, lead/lag and staged turn on, and much more. For details, call (216) 745-0074.

Response Number 344.

Maverick Marketing International, an ATM brokerage, offers its services to the theatres industry. Theatre owners can generate more revenues by installing an ATM and offering customers access to instant cash. It can generate more traffic, stimulate impulse buys and increase repeat business. Receipt advertising is also available. Buy or lease-to-own. All ATM programs include shipping, installation and training. Call Maverick at (800) 989-2828 for a free evaluation.



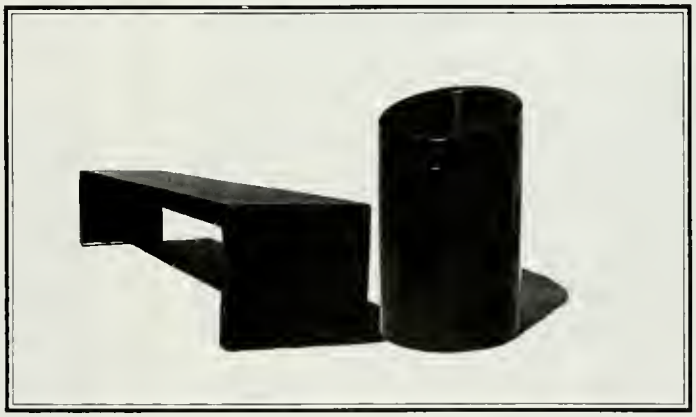
Response Number 345.

The all-new P4000 trans*nova DIABLO (Dynamically Invariant A-B Linear Operation) is Hafler Professional's latest in amplifier technology. The 200 watt-per-channel @ 8 ohm convection cooled unit features full LED display, gain controls and balanced inputs. A full five-year warranty is included. Call marketing director Rick Gentry at (602) 967-3545, or write to Hafler at: 546 S. Rockford Dr., Tempe, AZ 85281.

Response Number 346.

SHOWEST '97

For your Step and Aisle lighting needs,



TEMPO INDUSTRIES, INC.

2002-A So. Grand Ave.
Santa Ana, CA 92705
phone 714-662-4860
fax 714-641-0944

Response No. 106

Genuine

GLASSFORM®

Fiberglass Trash Receptacles and Bench Seating.

VISIT US IN BOOTH 1813

1-800-995-8322 or 1-800-842-1121

Response No. 62

Everything you need to lead the way.

Frames, Signs, Posts, Ropes and Accessories

Here in one book are hundreds of ideas and products in Brass, Chrome and Stainless for every type of crowd control requirement. In Theaters, Banks, Malls, Auditoriums, Museums, Arenas, Institutions, Offices, Restaurants, Bars, Hotels, Airports and more. All from Lawrence, the standard for quality and reliability since 1881.

For your free copy of this colorful 64 page catalog write or call your local dealer or contact us today.

LAWRENCE METAL PRODUCTS

P.O. Box 400-M, 260 Spur Drive South, Bay Shore, NY 11706 U.S.A.
1-800-666-0902 • Fax: 516-666-0335
Home page: http://www.lawrencemetal.com • Email: service@lawrencemetal.com

Response No. 215

TVP

THEATRE & VIDEO PRODUCTS

CINEMA SOUND SYSTEMS

CUSTOM AUDIO CABINETS

DIGITAL AND ANALOG
8-6-4-2 CHANNEL SYSTEMS

ALL MAJOR SOUND PROCESSORS
QSC AMPLIFIERS

220 VOLT SYSTEMS
ALSO AVAILABLE

LITERATURE ON REQUEST

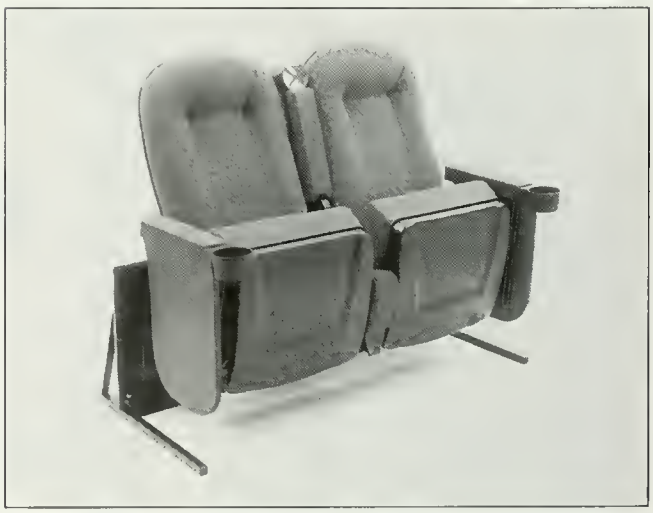
ITEA International Theatre Equipment Association

305-754-9136
305-759-0863 FAX

649 N.E. 79th ST.
MIAMI, FL 33138

RICHARD FOWLER JOHN GAMBLE

ShoWest 1997 New Products Guide



Increase movie-going excitement with a new Special-FX Policy Presentation from Willming Reams. Animated comets and spinning vortices promote the effects-laden films that are so popular at present. The trailer runs 45 seconds and includes welcoming titles and policy statements on crying babies, litter, smoking and talking, and informs patrons of the location of fire exits. Finally, the trailer introduces your feature presentation. The trailer can be customized with your logo, policies and concession-stand offerings. Call (800) 972-6468.

Response Number 347.

Irwin Seating Company has several new seating lines to meet your theatre design needs. The EuroChair Luxury Line adds style and flair to any auditorium and offers taller backs and wider seats for extra comfort. The chairs also feature flip-up cupholder armrests, and are available in 38" and 44" heights. The #28716 Ambassador Chair has been modified to incorporate a flip-up cupholder as well, allowing patrons to either define space between seats or create a love-seat for couples. The new Celebrity High Back is a taller version of Irwin's popular Celebrity rocker. Five inches have been added to the back height. Contact Irwin Seating Co., P.O. Box 2429, Grand Rapids, Michigan, 49501; Phone: (616) 784-2621; e-mail: dsales@irwin-seat.com.

Response Number 348.

Response No. 117

ShoWest 1997 New Products Guide

The MTS Group has been selected to distribute Gradus Lighting in the United States. Gradus Lighting offers LED step lighting with non-skid design. Both the top and front of the step are illuminated, and each light has its own resistor, increasing life expectancy. Gradus Lighting was founded in 1966 and has grown to become the largest UK manufacturer of stair and floor extrusions and lighting systems, and they have branch offices in London, Paris and Singapore. For more information, contact the MTS Group at (612) 829-0161.

Response Number 349.

Cine-Sign is the latest theatre product from Lighting Services, Inc. These "Exit" signs look completely standard, but only consume 1.35 watts of electricity—offering annual lighting costs per sign of about a dollar a year. The light level is variable so that the signs can be dimmed during performances to avoid annoying patrons, then brightened when it is time to leave. The signs use LED technology, meaning that there are no burnt-out bulbs to replace. For details, call Lighting Services, Inc. at (800) 225-0263.

Response Number 350.

FOR INCLUSION IN THE NEXT BOXOFFICE NEW PRODUCTS GUIDE, PLEASE SEND A BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF YOUR PRODUCT OR SERVICE AND A BLACK AND WHITE, PUBLICATION QUALITY PHOTO TO: NEW PRODUCTS DESK, BOXOFFICE MAGAZINE, 6640 SUNSET BLVD., HOLLYWOOD, CA 90028. FAX: 213-465-5049. BOXOFFICE CANNOT ACCEPT RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE RETURN OF NEW PRODUCTS MATERIALS.

It's getting

in the box office!

Thermal Stock For All Theatre Systems:

- ICON
- OMNITERM
- BOCA
- TICKET PRO
- B.E.A.T.
- MARS
- GATEWAY
- PACER/CATS
- MARBLE
- PRYSM
- THEATRON

Also available: Automatickets, Roll Tickets, Custom-printed Souvenir Invitation Tickets, Coupon Books and Gift Certificates

National TICKET CO.®

P.O. Box 547
Shamokin, PA 17872

Call Our Customer Service Dept. 800-829-0829 • Fax 800-829-0888
International Dept. 717-672-2900 • International Fax 717-672-2999
Internet http://www.nationalticket.com

Response No. 72

The Phone Call is FREE
The Price is RIGHT
The Service is EXCELLENT

Call for the Best Price on

Quality Sound & Projection Equipment, Booth Supplies, Xenon Bulbs and more...

800-552-7502

Bruce Worrell SOUND & PROJECTION

Theatre Equipment Association TEA

Response No. 188

GO FEST, PT. 2

BOXOFFICE criss-crosses North America to cover nine film fests

SUNDANCE

(PARK CITY, UTAH)—Most attendees of this year's Sundance Festival left disappointed. The quality-to-quantity ratio left much to be desired: There were more films but fewer standouts; more crowds but fewer tickets; more cellphones but fewer deals. That might be due in part to fest programmer Geoffrey Gilmore's determination to avoid commercial films that spawn bidding wars, such as last year's "Spitfire Grill." In steering clear of high-profile projects, however, the selection committee failed to choose anything comparable to last year's "Shine," "Welcome to the Dollhouse" or "Big Night." Certain themes emerged; many films seemed to share a certain bleakness, and complex approaches to gender politics and family relations were prevalent motifs. In the absence of a runaway hit, the jury awarded its grand prize to the bittersweet drama "Sunday," while the audience prize was shared between the stylized romance "love jones" and the coming-of age tale "Hurricane."

ULEE'S GOLD ★★★★

Starring Peter Fonda, Patricia Richardson and Christine Dunford. Directed and written by Victor Nunez. Produced by Victor Nunez, Peter Saraf and Sam Gowan. An Orion release. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 113 min. Opens in June.

The triumph of this bittersweet family drama is Peter Fonda's performance, which by way of its langorous understatement eerily recalls his father Henry. As Florida beekeeper Ulee Jackson, Fonda gives a turn of such quiet yet sustained intensity that it seems like a revelation. Not since "Easy Rider" has Fonda had such presence onscreen.

Peter Fondo in Orion's "Ulee's Gold."

When Ulee's incarcerated son Jimmy (Tom Wood) calls him asking for a favor, the terse family patriarch reluctantly agrees: He'll rescue Jimmy's estranged wife Helen (Christine Dunford) from a pair of Orlando hoodlums holding her hostage for a stockpile of cash that Jimmy owes them. But saving Helen, a recovering drug addict, is no easy task; only with the help of a kindly local nurse (Patricia Richardson of TV's "Home Improvement") and his recalcitrant granddaughters (Vanessa Zima and Jessie Biel) can Ulee wrest control of a volatile situation that holds his family in crisis and his own life in danger.

Writer/director Victor Nunez ("Ruby in Paradise") sketches a sensitive, delicate portrait of Ulee and his family. That Ulee is a beekeeper by trade resonates on several levels: his careful, methodical approach to the bees incorporates patience and skill in the face of danger, while his inveterate behavior shows resistance to growth and change. Taking a warts-and-all approach to characters, situations and dialogue, Nunez seems to hail from the John Sayles school of realism. That's not always a blessing: "Ulee's Gold" is sometimes painstakingly slow and takes a while before it becomes truly absorbing. But Fonda's graceful performance makes it well worth all the waiting.—Lael Loewenstein

CHASING AMY ★★★1/2

Starring Ben Affleck, Joey Lauren Adams and Jason Lee. Directed and written by Kevin Smith. Produced by Scot Mosier. A Miramax release. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 105 min. Opens March 28.

Best known for his award-winning debut film "Clerks," Kevin Smith returns to form

★★★★★ OUTSTANDING
★★★★ VERY GOOD
★★★ GOOD ★★ FAIR
★ POOR
(no stars) BOMB

REVIEWS
The Beautician and the Beast R-66
Cosi R-64
Dangerous Ground R-65
Dante's Peak R-67
Donnie Brasco R-64
Fools Rush In R-65
The Pest R-66
Rosewood R-64
Shadow Conspiracy R-69
Zeus and Roxanne R-69

DAY AND DATE
Broken English R-66
A Brother's Kiss R-67

REVIEWS IN BRIEF
Get Over It R-68
I Was a Jewish Sex Worker R-68
The November Conspiracy R-68
Predictions of Fire R-68
Shadow of Imagination R-68
Street Corner Justice R-68
Troublesome Creek: A Midwestern R-68

SPECIAL FORMATS
Fox Hunt R-58

FLASHBACK (1971)
When Dinosaurs Ruled the Earth . R-56

PREVIOUSLY REVIEWED
Coming films already reviewed ... R-65

REVIEW DIGEST
Our monthly release overview ... R-69

FESTIVALS

SUNDANCE
Ulee's Gold and 13 more R-42

SEATTLE/WOMEN IN CINEMA
This Is the Sea R-46
Slaves to the Underground R-47

SLAMDANCE
Fall and 2 more R-50

PALM SPRINGS
Commandments and 10 more ... R-50

FT. LAUDERDALE
Underworld and 13 more R-54

AFI
Krzysztof Kieslowski and 9 more .. R-57

SANTA BARBARA
Roseanna's Grave R-57

MONTREAL
River Street and 8 more R-60

TORONTO
Schizopolis and 9 more R-62

1997 AUSTRALIAN MOVIE CONVENTION

COMMITTED TO ADVANCING THE FILM INDUSTRY

AUGUST 13 - 16 ~ ROYAL PINES RESORT ~ GOLD COAST

The Australian Movie Convention is one of the most important events on the Australian Film Industry's calendar. It represents the only time of the year when all the decision makers working within the industry gather together to discuss the latest trends and developments. Each year it attracts record numbers of delegates from Australia, New Zealand, Asia, the United States and Europe.

HIGHLIGHTS INCLUDE:

★ QUALITY LOCAL & INTERNATIONAL GUEST SPEAKERS
★ SEMINARS & WORKSHOPS
★ TRADE SHOW WITH UP TO SEVENTY EXHIBITORS
★ SNEAK PREVIEWS OF THE LATEST FILMS FROM MAJOR & INDEPENDENT DISTRIBUTORS
★ ATTENDANCE OF LOCAL & INTERNATIONAL STARS, DIRECTORS & PRODUCERS
★ AUSTRALIAN BOX OFFICE ACHIEVEMENT AWARDS(previous winners Paul Mercurio, Russell Crowe, Bill Hunter, Tara Morice, Jacqui McKenzie)
★ THE KODAK MARKETING AWARD FOR AN AUSTRALIAN FEATURE FILM
★ SOCIAL FUNCTIONS AS AN OPPORTUNITY TO INTERACT WITH INDUSTRY COLLEAGUES

REGISTRATION FORM

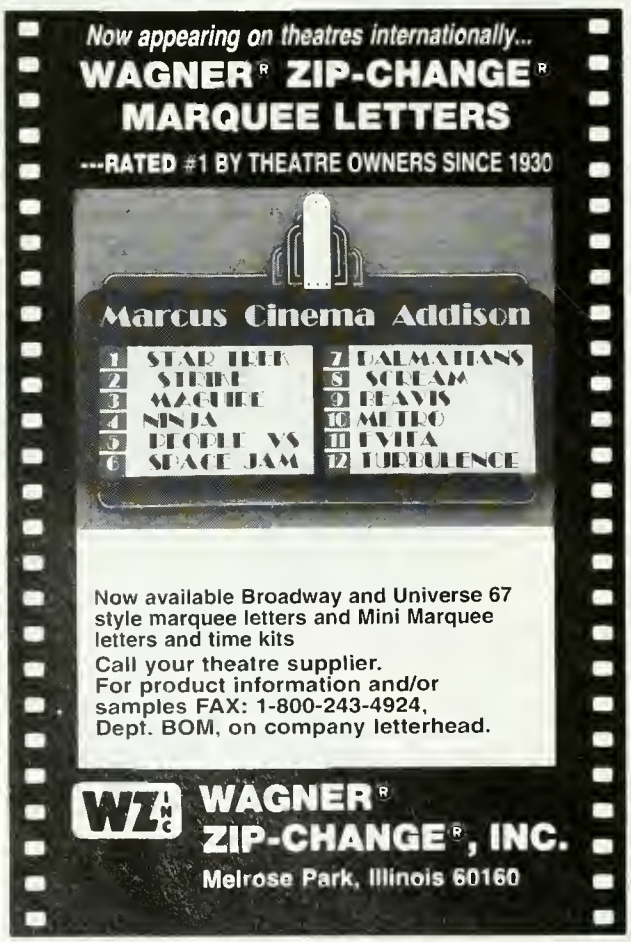
One registration form per person. If you require additional forms please photocopy. Please print.

Name: _____
Name for Badge: _____
Company/Organisation: _____
Address: _____

City: _____ State: _____
Postcode: _____ Country: _____
Telephone: _____ Facsimile: _____

For catering purposes please indicate days attending:
❑ Wed 13 August
❑ Thur 14 August
❑ Fri 15 August
❑ Sat 16 August

PAYMENT DETAILS



❑ FULL REGISTRATION	- if paid before 16 July 1997	A$495.00
	- if paid after 16 July 1997	A$650.00
❑ WEDNESDAY - DAY REGISTRATION		A$200.00
❑ THURSDAY - DAY REGISTRATION		A$200.00
❑ FRIDAY - DAY REGISTRATION		A$200.00
❑ SATURDAY - DAY REGISTRATION		A$200.00
❑ TRADE FAIR/SEMINARS ONLY		A$100.00
❑ TOTAL PAYABLE		A$ _____

Cheques should be in Australian dollars and made payable to Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association Qld

For further details please contact Mrs Pauline Parker, Motion Picture Exhibitors' Assoc. Qld (M.P.E.A.Q.) PO Box 1031, STAFFORD CITY, QLD 4053 AUSTRALIA—Int'l. Phone/Fax (011) 617 33565671

Response No. 208

Response No. 59

FEST REVIEWS

after the dismal "Mallrats" with a film that is at once sensitive, funny and insightful. A contemporary romance with several twists, "Chasing Amy" is one of the most carefully rendered portraits of gender relations in recent years. The third installment in Smith's New Jersey trilogy, "Chasing Amy" eclipses anything Smith has done so far and displays an impressive capacity for depth.

Holden (an excellent Ben Affleck, also in "Going All the Way") and his best friend Banky ("Mallrats'" Jason Lee) are twentysomething comic artists who pass their time attending comic book conventions, dallying in romance and goofing around. All of that changes when Holden meets the lovely and coquettish Alyssa ("Sleep With Me's" Joey Lauren Adams), who seems just as taken with him as he is with her. But, when Alyssa informs Holden that she is a lifelong lesbian, he finds himself confronted with a difficult challenge: Can he be friends—and nothing more—with a woman he clearly loves?

The jealousy, confusion and wounded emotions that come into play here are tightly woven and deftly handled. When Holden confesses his feelings for Alyssa, Affleck's integrity and Smith's heartfelt dialogue meld beautifully. Equally authentic is Alyssa's subsequent revelation of her feelings for Holden. Although he occasionally and regrettably seeks comfort in the scatological, bottom-of-the-barrel humor that is his trademark, Smith is capable of intelligent, searching dialogue that reveals the complexity and sensitivity of his characters' rich inner lives.—Lael Loewenstein

THE MYTH OF FINGERPRINTS ★★★1/2

Starring Blythe Danner, Hope Davis, Julianne Moore, Roy Scheider and Noah Wylie. Directed and written by Bart Freundlich. Produced by Mary Jane Skalski, Tim Perell and Bart Freundlich. A Sony Classics release. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 90 min. Opens in September.

Bart Freundlich's star-studded, masterful film about the simultaneous unraveling and restructuring of a seemingly all-American family during a Thanksgiving reunion was an unexpected Sundance surprise and a big hit with audiences of all ages. In the Good Machine production, after a three-year absence siblings Warren, Mia, Jake and Leigh reluctantly return to their parent's home in New England for a standard holiday get-together. From the moment of arrival, the personality conflicts and infighting that have kept this family apart for so long resurface.

Through the constant conflict, the characters are forced to reevaluate who they are and where they stand, not only as members of the family but as adults. In a mature homage to the Bergman classic "Smiles of a Summer Night," several characters, almost mystically, fall in and out of love with those they perhaps shouldn't, and revelations are made that were best kept as secrets.

The only failing notes are that the film's short running time doesn't allow for in-depth character analysis and intense dramatic situations, and the pacing is erratic throughout. Nonetheless, "The Myth of Fingerprints" is an impressive piece of work by a new filmmaker that, despite its low budget, looks just as good as studio fare.—Jon Alon Walz

THE FULL MONTY ★★★★

Starring Robert Carlyle, Mark Addy and William Snape. Directed by Peter Cattaneo. Written by Simon Beaufoy. Produced by Uberto Pasolini. A Fox Searchlight release. Comedy. Not yet rated. Running time: 90 min. Opens in '97.

An enchanting British comedy of gender politics, "The Full Monty" is an unqualified delight. With its entirely unpretentious portrayal of a group of male buddies whose layoff from a south Yorkshire steel mill forces them into stripping, "The Full Monty" manages a difficult feat: Even as it's unafraid to lampoon the men, it also sensitively reveals their insecurities.

Robert Carlyle (memorable as "Trainspotting's" knife-happy Begby) plays Gaz, who hatches the seemingly nutty plan to launch a striptease act in order to earn himself and his down-and-out friends some much-needed cash. Unlike the Chippendale dancers whose show inspires him, Gaz and chums like Dave (Mark Addy), ex-foreman Gerald (Tom Wilkinson) and Lomper (Steve Huison) are the least likely strippers imaginable: Dave is overweight and self-conscious, Gerald is nearing fifty, and Lomper is depressed.

FEST REVIEWS

But soon they're grinding to Donna Summer in an act that distinguishes itself in an important way: They strip down to "the full monty"—that is, leave nothing to the imagination. But their plan nearly collapses under a slew of mishaps, miscommunication and even arrests, only to lead to a memorably hilarious finale.

"The Full Monty" is a gender-reversed "Striptease" with the comedy intact; it also packs the punch of a "First Wives Club" yet feels more authentic and less vindictive. Because director Peter Cattaneo allows latitude for mockery, and because his players infuse their performances with admirable charisma and pathos, both men and women walk away feeling satisfied—and humming "Hot Stuff."—Lael Loewenstein

GOING ALL THE WAY ★★★

Starring Jeremy Davies, Ben Affleck and Amy Locane. Directed by Mark Pellington. Written by Dan Wakefield. Produced by Tom Gorai and Sigurjon Sighvatsson. A Gramercy release. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 115 min. Opens in '97.

High production values distinguish this coming-of-age story adapted from Dan Wakefield's novel of displaced Korean War vets returning home. At nearly two hours, however, it feels unwieldy; a shorter cut would make it a more enjoyable ride. Jeremy Davies, so memorable in "Spanking the Monkey," demonstrates similar star quality in yet another tale of turbulent, misunderstood youth and sexual awakening.

As Sonny Burns, an awkward young man coming home to Indiana, he finds himself suffocating under an overprotective, religious mother (Jill Clayburgh) and a dull, devoted girlfriend ("Carried Away's" Amy Locane). Instead, he prefers the company of a fun-loving, hard-drinking fellow GI named Gunner (an engaging Ben Affleck of "Chasing Amy"). Sonny, meanwhile, is grappling with raging hormones and sexual guilt. When he finally beds a lovely young woman ("Scream's" Rose McGowan), he can't perform; this botched encounter sends him into a suicide attempt and then on a journey with Gunner. Together, both frustrated youths embark on a search for deeper meaning and fulfillment in their lives.

At its best, "Going All the Way" recalls some of the better male bonding films. Davies and Affleck, though actors of different styles, share a genuine rapport, and their scenes together seem honest and compassionate. Yet Wakefield's script doesn't go far enough into Sonny's angst or alienation. The film's overall look, enhanced by Therese DePrez's snappy design and Arianne Phillips' evocative costumes, effectively establishes 1954 Indianapolis as a place at once familiar and menacing. But too often director Mark Pellington and cinematographer Bobby Bukowski employ simplistic color symbolism—flashes of red and blue—that distracts rather than engages the viewer. With colors, as with running time, sometimes less is more.—Lael Loewenstein

HURRICANE ★★★

Starring Brendan Sexton III, Isidra Vega and Jared Harris. Directed and written by Morgan J. Freeman. Produced by Gill Holland and Galt Niederhoffer. An MGM release. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 89 min. Winner, best director; audience award for best film; best cinematography. Opens in '97.

"Hurricane" swept up a slew of awards at Sundance—the audience prize for best film and honors for director Morgan J. Freeman and cinematographer Enrique Chediak. A boy's coming-of-age story on the order of "400 Blows," "Hurricane" features top-notch production values and grittily realistic performances.

At the center of the metaphorical hurricane is Marcus (Brendan Sexton III of "Welcome to the Dollhouse"), a 15-year-old who lives with his grandmother in lower Manhattan while his mother serves a prison sentence. Marcus and a renegade band of friends engage in petty theft, pass time at their clubhouse and ride their

GKC Theatres

BRAVO!

Barrie Lawson Loeks
Robert W. Selig ShoWester of the Year

J. Wayne Anderson
B.V. Sturdivant Award

Ann Craft
Ida Schreiber Award

George Kerasotes Corporation

CY YOUNG INDUSTRIES INC

ON-SITE RE-UPHOLSTERY & CUP HOLDER INSTALLATION

WE INSTALL WHILE YOUR FACILITY SLEEPS

STARTING AT $28.50 EA.

1-800-729-2610

Response No. 67

bicycles like stormtroopers through the city's crowded streets. When Marcus meets Melena, a Latino girl with an overprotective father, he adds love and danger to the adolescent despair swirling throughout his life.

As Marcus, Sexton has a powerful authenticity that shines through in a complex performance: Marcus acts selfishly, but he is only trying to make sense of an unsympathetic world. That he is an asthmatic heightens the irony; Marcus literally fights for his breath. When he bikes through Manhattan to an accelerated tune of "Staying Alive," it lends the song and the image a specific irony. These are the moments where Freeman and Chediak's work is superb—high-speed tracking shots that portray Marcus' life spinning out of control. Though there are continuity problems that, with a tighter script, could have been resolved, "Hurricane" heralds the arrival of a bold actor and a director who understands cinema's potential.—Lael Loewenstein

LILIES ★

Starring Brent Carver, Marcel Sabourin, Aubert Pallascio and Gary Farmer. Directed by John Greyson. Written by Michel Marc Bouchard. Produced by Anna Stratton, Robin Cass and Arnie Gelbart. No distributor set. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 95 min.

Based on the play "les fleurettes" by Michel Marc Bouchard (who adapts), "Lilies" is probably John Greyson's most beautifully crafted movie yet. Yet it's still pretty silly. In trying to tell a tragic tale about a gay love triangle that involves jealousy and murder, Greyson ("Zero Patience") falls for the cliches that haunt purple melodramas of heterosexual love, above all in the sentimentality of the key love affair between two boys, portrayed as chaste and tender.

"Lilies" (which won the audience Best Canadian Film Award at the Montreal fest and four Genies) takes place in Quebec in 1952 when an aging bishop agrees to hear a prisoner's confession inside a penitentiary. Greyson deftly shifts between the past and the present using Brechtian devices to frame the action, but part of what goes wrong in the material is that the prisoners come across as a cast set more in a gay bar.

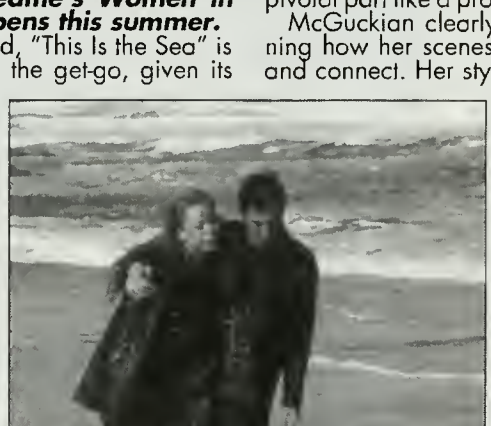
Perhaps Greyson believes he's showing a view of gender through a gay sensibility, but having some of the male actors playing women in this way only confuses the issues in the story. "Lilies" is about coming to terms with secrets, an idea that extends itself to the secrets that homosexuals have had to bear in a culture that shuns them. But it's too bad that Greyson can't see that, by creating positive gay stereotypes, they are still stereotypes.—Kevin Courrier

THE HOUSE OF YES ★★★1/2

Starring Parker Posey, Josh Hamilton, Tori Spelling and Genevieve Bujold. Directed and written by Mark Waters. Produced by Beau Flynn and Stefan Simchowitz. A Miramax release. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 90 min. Winner, special recognition award for Parker Posey. Opens in '97.

It would be hard to imagine a more shocking tale of family secrets and closet skeletons than "The House of Yes." Blisteringly funny, horrifyingly tragic, "The House of Yes" (based on a Wendy MacLeod play) invites varied interpretations. When Marty ("Kicking and Screaming's" Josh Hamilton) and his fiancee Lesly (Tori Spelling of TV's "Beverly Hills, 90210") decide to spend a holiday weekend with Marty's family, they're unprepared for the trouble that awaits. And neither are moviegoers: Though Marty's mother (Genevieve Bujold), twin sister Jackie-O (Parker Posey, also in "Clockwatchers") and younger brother Anthony (Freddie Prinze Jr.) appear to be a normal family, writer/director Mark Waters soon strips away layers of deception that veil madness, violence and incest.

Jackie-O makes invitations to her brother; Anthony comes on to Marty's girlfriend; the mother seemingly condones this bizarre behavior. More perplexing and eerie still are the family anecdotes, such as: The Kennedy-obsessed Jackie once shot her brother when he threatened to leave her.



Waters takes pains never to caricature the family members. Even Jackie-O, who could have easily become the stuff of high camp, is reigned in by Posey's performance, which is one of her best; she manages to be arch, touching and acerbic all at once. Hamilton plays Marty as an ambivalent participant in the family game; he wants to resist the madness, but he seems aware that he cannot. And Spelling, as the slightly dizzy Lesly, is astonishingly good, blending incredulousness with giddy earnestness. For a debut feature, "The House of Yes" is a remarkable achievement. Ably supported by production designer Patrick Sherman's fully envisioned sets—the decaying Pascal mansion is a haunting metaphor for the corroding family it houses—Waters shows that he is a director to watch.—Lael Loewenstein

SEATTLE/WOMEN IN CINEMA FEST

THIS IS THE SEA ★★

Starring Samantha Morton, Richard Harris, Marc O'Shea and Gabriel Byrne. Directed and written by Mary McGuckian. Produced by Michael Garland. A First Look release. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 103 min. Screened at Seattle's Women in Cinema fest; opens this summer.

Filmed in Ireland, "This Is the Sea" is advantaged from the get-go, given its setting's splendid scenery, political tension and haunting music, not to mention attractive characters with lilting accents and fabulous sweaters. Director/writer Mary McGuckian has a solid eye (and ear) for the cinemotic attributes of the Emerald Isle, but tying them together proves a formidable task. This Celtic version of "Romeo and Juliet" with an Irish Republican Army twist too often fails to connect with its audience.

First Look's "This Is the Sea," which also opens the Santa Barbara fest.

The tale's fair maiden is Hazel (pretty Samontha Morton), who lives on a farm with her hyper-protective, Protestant porents; the lad is Malachy (the prettier Marc O'Shea), who lives in Belfast with his lenient, Catholic family. Their courtship is abetted by Hazel's elderly neighbor, Jacobs (Richard Harris), and is complicated by local fear-monger Rohan (Gabriel Byrne on auto-brood). Both Morton and O'Shea emit moviestar-style charisma, and Harris performs his pivotal part like a pro.

McGuckian clearly took pains planning how her scenes would look, flow and connect. Her style is meat and potatoes, and for the most part it works. But "This Is the Sea" needs more structure from a tighter script, in particular additional background and foreshadowing. For example, although Hazel and Malachy presumably dig each other because opposites attract, their relationship—upon which the entire movie rests—never seems believable, because we learn so little about either suitor. Likewise, the political plotline of "This Is the Sea" fails to thrill for lack of buildup. The effect is bewilderment: Events pop out of left field, and the audience has no context in which to interpret them.—Ian Hodder

FESTIVAL REVIEWS

ARRESTING GENA ★

Starring Aesha Waks, Summer Phoenix and Sam Rockwell. Directed and written by Hannah Weyer. Produced by Margot Bridget and Ted Hope. No distributor set. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 90 min.

"Arresting Gena" is such a misguided, unstructured effort that it's a mystery the movie was accepted in Sundance's usually strong dramatic competition. Ostensibly a rite-of-passage story for adolescent Gena (Aesha Waks), "Arresting Gena" is about (per the production notes) "the ways in which innocence is lost and, sometimes, knowledge and understanding are gained." But the movie Hannah Weyer has made, however inspired by real events and friendships, bears little resemblance to that aim.

Set in suburban New Jersey, the loose narrative tracks 16-year-old Gena, drawn unwittingly into a web of drug deals and gang warfare when her good friend Jane (Summer Phoenix) mysteriously disappears. What happens next is unclear; characters come and go with impunity. Suddenly and inexplicably, Gena is in a beauty salon with a gun aimed at an assailant. But there is no character arc, no suggestion of personal understanding or maturation on Gena's part. With more forethought, "Arresting Gena" could have packed the power of a "Fresh" or perhaps a "Bye-Bye"; instead, it simply baffles and disappoints.—Lael Loewenstein

FAST, CHEAP & OUT OF CONTROL ★★★

With Dave Hoover, George Mendonca, Ray Mendez and Rodney Brooks. Directed and produced by Errol Morris. A Sony Classics release. Documentary. Not yet rated. Running time: 82 min. Opens in '97.

Renowned documentarian and social critic Errol Morris, best known for his controversial film "The Thin Blue Line," has once again pushed the boundaries of film narrative with this new work. Either by design or accident, "Fast, Cheap & Out of Control" is less a classically structured documentary than a strangely urgent examination of what the human race is becoming.

Culled from interviews with four unrelated men—a robotics designer, a lion tamer, a man who studies mole rats, and a topiary gardener—Morris weaves the stories of their job obsessions together with footage of old movies and stylized b-rolls of the men at work, creating a warped narrative that keeps his actual content (and intent) a mystery for most of the picture. Out of this jumble comes an interesting meditation on the nature of human control over environment and other life forms, and on the theory that—because of this behavior in a world of increasing information and technology—humans are on a path that could lead to us inventing ourselves out of existence.

Much as he did in 1992's "A Brief History of Time," Morris in this Fourth Floor/American Playhouse production uses stark visual imagery (courtesy of Oscar-winning director of photography Robert Richardson) and heavy original music to set moods to emphasize his narrative points. One is left wondering if the universal questions posed would have even been suggested if a different group had been selected for study. But it's still amazing that Morris was able to pull such deep, probing material out of such a motley group of "normal" people, and it's here where the film and the filmmaking succeeds.—Jon Alon Walz

IN THE COMPANY OF MEN ★★1/2

Starring Aaron Eckhart, Matt Malloy and Stacy Edwards. Directed and written by Neil LaBute. Produced by Mark Archer and Neil LaBute. An Alliance production; no distributor set. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 93 min.

One of few films at this year's festival to generate much controversy, Neil LaBute's "In the Company of Men" is a flawed but fascinating look at male bonding, misogyny, and Machiavellian competitiveness in contemporary corporate culture. Chad (Aaron Eckhart) and Howard (Matt Malloy), two disgruntled junior execs, decide to find the most fragile, unassuming female they can, emotionally and sexually exploit her and then summarily dump her. Why? Simply to prove they can do it.

As their unwitting quarry, Christine (a superb Stacy Edwards), a secretary in their office, is everything they had hoped for and more: lovely, trusting, vulnerable—and deaf. After she's dated both men and fallen blindly for Chad, he brushes her off unsympathetically in a scene so heartless it leaves the audience reeling. Eckhart, at times flat, at others chillingly good, excels particularly in this rejection sequence, exuding a blend of arrogance and smarminess.

What is so troubling about the film is that Chad receives no comeuppance. Not only

SEATTLE/WOMEN IN CINEMA FEST

SLAVES TO THE UNDERGROUND ★1/2

Starring Molly Gross, Marisa Ryan and Jason Bortz. Directed by Kristine Peterson. Written by Bill Cody. Produced by Kristine Peterson, Bill Cody and Raquel Caballes Maxwell. Drama. Rated R for strong sexuality and language. Run time: 93 min. Opens summer.

An attempted documentation of slacker-style hipness, "Slaves to the Underground" taps into several topics it considers trendy: bisexuality, grunge music, living in squalor, Seattle, and 'zines. The fatal problem, of course, with a supposedly cutting-edge film that appropriates the above as a definition of what's hat is that it's hopelessly out of date. As twenty-something Seattleites know, Gen-X has been there, done that.

First Look's "Sloves to the Underground," which screened at the Seattle/Women in Cinema fest.

Between trends of yesteryear, "Slaves" traces a love triangle between selfish Shelly (Molly Gross), wimpy Jimmy (Jason Bortz) and politically active Suzy (Marisa Ryan). Shelly and Suzy are lovers and musicians in the same all-girl band. Their self-conscious bliss is thrown for a loop when, one night at a gig, Shelly bumps into ex-boyfriend Jimmy and promptly reignites their affair. While Jimmy and Suzy battle over Molly, side plots explore the band's growing popularity and Jimmy's professional struggle between publishing his underground comic and getting a real job. Well-crafted characters and solid direction could have rescued "Slaves" from the chains of sub-mediocrity.

Alas, such time-tested qualities are apparently no longer in vogue. The movie is shot as a faux documentary—with jerky filming and characters talking directly to the camera—and the technique is indeed appropriate to film's investigative flavor. The downside is that director Kristine Petersen uses cinema verite as an excuse for cinematic sloppiness. Too many scenes are poorly planned and left to the often bewildered actors to steer the action. Acting, too, ranges from cringe-inducing to satisfactory, with Ryan delivering the only semi-watchable performance. To top it all off, "Slaves" employs same pretty darky music (specifically, an excruciating ditty titled "Let's F—") whenever character development or pacing begins to sag. The result is a self-important, humorless wallow that might've made a great 'zine—seven years ago.—Ian Hodder

DeClercq's
Theatrical Specialties, Inc.
dba
Oakland United Studios
Contractors Lic. No. 662023
"Results that last"
• Fabrication and Installation of Theatre Draperies • Sound Installation
• Rigging Hardware and Motors • Theatre Rigging and Maintenance
• Acoustical Wall Treatment Systems • Screen Cleaning

Toll Free 1-800-200-6873

2907 E. 7th Sreet • Oakland, CA 94601 • (510) 534-6587 • FAX (510) 534-1472

Response No. 132

Entertainment Insurance

MAROEVICH, O'SHEA & COGHLAN
San Francisco, CA

(415) 957-0600
TOLL FREE (800) 951-0600
License No. 0589960

INSURING CLIENTS NATIONWIDE
SUPPLIERS • PRODUCERS
THEATRES

www.maroevich.com

Response No. 70

HURLEY SCREEN

SUPERGLO
A durable pearlescent, smooth surface offers maximum reflectivity & light distribution.

SILVERGLO
A smooth, aluminized surface offering the highest reflectivity for special applications such as 3D.

MW-16
A heavy guage matte white surface offering excellent light distribution, image clarity, and color rendition.

Screen Framing • All Types Available
FAX # (410) 838-8079

Automaticket

Theatre Equipment Association

AUTOMATED HIGH SPEED U/L APPROVED TICKETING EQUIPMENT
Factory Service, the only authorized manufacturer and repair center.

AUTOMATICKET
A Division of Cemcorp

HURLEY SCREEN CORP.
A Subsidiary of Cemcorp

110 Industry Lane - P.O. Box 296
Forest Hill, MD 21050
410-838-0036 • 410-879-3022 • 410-879-6757 • 410-836-9333

Response No. 57

FESTS

has he manipulated an unsuspecting female, he also manages to take advantage of his friend Howard. Because Chad never pays for his cruelty, the film is a real departure from classical convention: The climax has not one ounce of moral restitution. As such, writer/director LaBute's tacit acceptance of this kind of behavior comes perilously close to an endorsement. It leaves the viewer piqued but fundamentally unsatisfied. Worse, the inconsistent acting and poor production values compromise the film; the dialogue itself is sharp and incisive but, as one strains to hear it, crucial words and ideas are lost.—Lael Loewenstein

POWER ★★★

Directed by Magnus Isaacson. Written by Glen Salzman and Magnus Isaacson. Produced by Glen Salzman. A Cineflix production; no distributor set. Documentary. Not yet rated. Running time: 80 min.

In 1989, the Quebec provincial government announced plans to proceed with James Bay Phase II, a massive hydroelectric project that would dam waterways, including the Great Whale River. After James Bay I was built in the '70s, the region's Cree Indians found that their water had become poisoned with mercury.

In "Power," veteran Canadian filmmaker Magnus Isaacson documents the Cree's successful battle against the Quebec government. He follows their journey by Odeyak—part canoe, part kayak—down the Ottawa, St. Lawrence and Hudson rivers as they stop at strategic points to plead their cause and enlist the support of key American politicians and the general public.

Isaacson presents Quebec's complex politics in comprehensive and easy-to-follow fashion. However, he is clearly on the side of the Cree, and as a result the film lacks objectivity. At the same time, it's a heartening story that proves that perhaps one can fight city hall.—Craig Vickers

SANTA FE ★★★1/2

Starring Gary Cole, Lolita Davidovich, Sheila Kelley and Jere Burns. Directed by Andrew Shea. Written by Mark Medoff and Andrew Shea. Produced by Larry Estes and Andrew Shea. An Absolute Unequivocal production; no distributor set. Comedy/drama. Rated R for language, a sex scene and a violence sequence. Running time: 97 min.

The proliferation of new-age cultists in Santa Fe, N.M. over the past decade has given screenwriters Mark Medoff (who wrote the play and film "Children of a Lesser God") and Andrew Shea (who also here directs) the impetus to create this often hilarious and surprisingly intelligent movie about a troubled man and his battles with a cult leader. Paul Thomas ("The Brady Bunch's" Gary Cole) has just returned to Santa Fe to visit the wife and daughter he saved, at his personal injury, from a bizarre Waco-esque military standoff in Wyoming several years back. So he's shocked to find his wife associating again with fringe cult types, including her boss, Dan, a spiritual chiropractic guru, as well as a woman his daughter Crystal calls "Aunt Eleanor" ("The Inner Circle's" Lolita Davidovich), who runs a self-help resort outside of town.

FESTS

In an attempt to pull his life back together, Paul persuades the city to reinstate him as a cop and, at the demand of his precocious daughter, he begins dating again. His only respondent to a personal ad is, ironically, Eleanor; in trying to explain her beliefs to him, she unintentionally draws him into her "circle" while, conversely, she begins to reject a lot of her ideals after Paul relates the stories about his past. It's a train wreck waiting to happen, but it can end with nothing less than love.

Medoff and Shea together create a world that teeters on the edge of reality but never falls off into the wildly absurd. The dialogue, peppered with sharp political discourse and musings about the nature of cult obsessions, is as engaging as the superb ensemble acting.—Jon Alon Walz

CLOCKWATCHERS ★1/2

Starring Toni Collette, Parker Posey and Lisa Kudrow. Directed by Jill Sprecher. Written by Jill Sprecher and Karen Sprecher. Produced by Gina Resnick. A Goldcrest production; no distributor set. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 105 min.

Conceptually speaking, the makers of "Clockwatchers" had a interesting and wonderful premise around which to craft a movie: the intertwining lives of several temporary workers in a laughably stoic corporate environment. They even had a wonderful pool of talent, including one of TV's "Friends," Lisa Kudrow; the always wonderful Parker Posey ("Party Girl"); and "Muriel's Wedding" star Toni Collette. Despite all of this, director/co-scripter Jill Sprecher has managed to make a technically proficient film that is totally without a plot or a point.

The film opens with a young girl named Iris (Collette) who arrives one morning at Global Credit Association, a faceless by-the-numbers company, as a temporary assistant. She is kept waiting for several hours before being interviewed and shown her cubicle. Making fast friends with the other temp workers there, she finds solace in their companionship and joins in their constant bickering about not being accepted or respected by management. From here, the film dissolves into a series of random scenes featuring the twentysomething leads griping about their lives' emptiness—but doing nothing to make a change for the better.

Until the head of Global Credit issues an ultimatum stating that a recent rash of office theft must stop, and one of the girls is accused and summarily fired, there's not a hint of drama or tension. Cinematographer Jim Denault's wonderful compositions and beautiful lighting are the only contributions of note in this wholly disappointing picture.—Jon Alon Walz

ROBERT L. POTTS ENTERPRISES
Over 25 Years
Simple and Proven
Film Handling Equipment
Platter Systems
Self-Programming and Film-Feed Fail-Safe Available
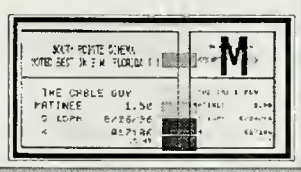
201 E. Sangamon, Ste. 110
Rantoul, IL 61866
217-893-0443
Rte. 1, Box 1343
Golden, MO 65658
417-271-4335

Response No. 171



Increase Profits
With
Intermission Slide Shows
(Including Local Merchants Advertising)
Toll Free: 1-800-446-5330
POT O'GOLD PRODUCTIONS, Inc.
Revenue producing pre-show advertising slides
In theaters since 1984
WE SELL IT... PRODUCE IT... BILL IT...
NO RISK... NO INVESTMENT ...NO HEADACHES!

Response No. 428

Theatre Ticketing and Concessions Systems
Crain/Atlanta's Theatre Ticketing System combines PC Standard equipment with eighteen years of experience in Buying, Booking & Film Rental Software Systems to assure PERFORMANCE, PRICE & RELIABILITY. Over 50 Ticketing Systems are installed internationally in Circuits from 5 to over 400 Screens.

- Easy to Learn and Operate
- Daily/Weekly Box Office & Concessions Reporting
- Up to 4 Ticket Selling Stations
- No Mandatory On-going Charges
- Continuous Sales Status Display
- Daily Home Office Transmissions
- Customization Available
- Six Months Free Telephone Support
- Rapid Printing of Professional Quality Tickets

Exceptional Service to the Theatre Industry since 1978

Crain/Atlanta, Inc. 2786 N. Decatur Road # 250 Decatur, GA 30033 404-299-3400 FAX 404-299-1226

Response No. 164

FESTIVAL REVIEWS

SLAMDANCE

FALL ★★★

Starring Eric Schaeffer and Amanda de Cadenet. Directed and written by Eric Schaeffer. Produced by Terence Michael and Eric Schaeffer. A Capella production; no distributor set. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 89 min.

Despite the fact that the ever-irritating Eric Schaeffer ("When Lucy Fell") has bared everything in this sexually obsessive reworking of the beauty and the beast myth, he has managed to make a rather compelling picture about two totally messed-up people who meet by chance in New York City. Schaeffer stars as Michael, an intelligent, charismatic cab driver who instantly falls in love with a fare, Sarah (Amanda de Cadenet), a high-dollar supermodel whose husband is in Rome on business.

Michael chances upon her on the street several days later and soon after, again by chance, picks her up as a fare. Luring her back to his apartment, they embark upon a wild and erotic sex marathon ended out of guilt by Sarah. Starved for love and attention, the two decide to stay friends. At this point, "Fall" glides into a cold, harsh realism, becoming a gratifying character study of two people trying to create and maintain an authentic human relationship.

Schaeffer hasn't resisted the temptation to give himself closeups or the best lines. In fact, all the good lines from the other characters concern or praise his character. Despite his ego, Schaeffer has a gifted ear for dialogue and directs with style and flair. De Cadenet, a real-life model, is respectable in her limited role, though it's hard for the audience to dredge up sympathy for a character with such a lucrative career.—Jon Alon Walz

EIGHT DAYS A WEEK ★★

Starring Keri Russell, Joshua Schaefer and R.D. Robb. Directed and written by Michael Davis. Produced by Martin Cutler, Gary Preisler and Michael Davis. An Underdog production; no distributor set. Comedy/drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 90 min.

Peter (Joshua Schaefer) has long been in love with Erica (Keri Russell)—or maybe in lust. As his neighbor, she has been an unavoidable presence for years, but he's been too shy to make any move; in her eyes, he's sort of blended into the neighborhood environment, like a shrub or a fence.

One summer, things are different. Taking advice from his crazy uncle, Peter vows to spend every second under Erica's balcony professing his love until she becomes his. And he does. And she, finally, does.

Writer/director Michael Davis has made a sweet if unexceptional film, chockful of true moments of teenage angst and romance. It fails, on one level, in trying too hard to tell a Romeo and Juliet story using the comic sensibilities of an average TV sitcom. The writing needs more sharpness, and the situations need more unexpectedness and fun. And that's a shame, because "Eight Days a Week" has a potential to be a smart, engaging romance in a Cameron Crowe vein. But the lovely Russell is perfectly cast as the goddess, and she carries her role above the material.—Jon Alon Walz

THE SIZE OF WATERMELONS ★★★★

Starring Paul Rudd, Ione Skye, Donal Logue and Adam West. Directed by Kari Skogland. Written by Rob Stefaniuk. Produced by Margaux Mackay and Kari Skogland. A Skogland/Mackay production; no distributor set. Comedy/drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 92 min.

As an ironic twist to this year's madness in Park City, the high quality and variety of the films at Slamdance, the anti-Sundance festival, has probably given the third-year entity a clout its organizers had never imagined. One of the better films in town was "The Size of Watermelons," a sharp, energetic film about twentysomethings who actually bring motivation and drive to their quest to succeed, in one way or another.

Ione Skye in "The Size of Watermelons."

A funny script by Rob Stefaniuk introduces the audience to the early life of Alex (Paul Rudd), a social outcast who as a child dressed in black and idolized Batman and who got butt kicked on a daily basis by his peers for his outcast ways. Finally making it to art school in the beach community of Venice, Calif., he hooks up with school activist/candidate Gnome (Donal Logue) as friend and campaign manager. Maturing as a person, Alex for the first time begins dating regularly. Falling for a lovely, albeit distant, music video director named Maggie (a magnetic Ione Skye, of "Gas, Food Lodging"), he finds his true calling in life: the movies. Endeavoring to shoot a documentary about Gnome's mad politcal quest to free Hawaii, he finds purpose, love and, finally, Adam West.

Refreshingly, the picture does not take itself as seriously as the legions of other films in Park City that concerned young people. The film's consistent use of humor and pathos to drive its plot forward recalls devices used at one point or another by comic masters like Wilder and Sturges—and were used with a maturity unexpected from such young filmmakers at this stage of their careers.—Jon Alon Walz

PALM SPRINGS

COMMANDMENTS ★★★1/2

Starring Aidan Quinn, Courteney Cox and Anthony LaPaglia. Directed by Daniel Taplitz. Written by Daniel Taplitz. Produced by Ivan Reitman, Michael Chinich, Joe Medjuck and Daniel Goldberg. A Gramercy release. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 105 min. Opens in March.

Seth (Aidan Quinn) suffers troubling questions about life and his place in it after his wife dies in a drowning accident. Finding no solace in his faith, he decides to try a test in which he will break each of the Ten Commandments. He thinks that, after he has done so, if God intends him to learn and go on then God will send him a message. Seth's wife was the sister of Rachel ("Scream's" Courteney Cox), who is married to Harry ("Paperback Romance's" Anthony LaPaglia).

They know Seth is suffering, but each reacts in a different way—Rachel tries to help Seth through his grief, but Harry thinks Seth is going off the deep end and not worth the bother of being concerned. As Seth begins to carry out his Commandments test, an intriguing parallel develops, in that the jerky Harry thinks nothing of breaking any of God's rules if it suits his goals. The parallel continues throughout the film, giving it delicious movement from its light beginning to its mysterious and dramatic middle and end. As each man breaks one commandment after another, the two eventually work their way to the last and toughest: Thou shalt not kill.

The gripping conclusion comes in a lighthouse during a hurricane; there is more mystery and finally a true miracle occurs, with Seth receiving his message. "Commandments" is a study in the questions of life shown through a unique and curious slant. Quinn and LaPaglia provide masterful interpretations of their characters, giving the audience everything it needs to see the direction each is taking toward right and wrong. Cox's performance augments the film's flow, but it's the work of Quinn and LaPaglia that gives it its study in contrasts and its message of darkness being overcome by light.—Stephenie Slahor

FESTIVAL REVIEWS

SHILOH ★★★★

Starring Michael Moriarty, Blake Heron, Scott Wilson and Rod Steiger. Directed and written by Dale Rosenbloom. Produced by Zane W. Levitt and Dale Rosenbloom. A Legacy release. Drama. Rated PG for mild violence. Running time: 93 min. Opens in '97.

This bears all the elements Walt Disney said a family movie must possess: make audiences laugh, make them cry, make them think and give them a happy ending. "Shiloh's" only drawback is it's a bit too intense for very young children. The villain doesn't hesitate to abuse dogs or practice physical or mental cruelty.

The film's basic premise is typical (he followed me home, can I keep him?) but "Shiloh" goes beyond that. Marty Preston (Blake Heron) is on a rescue mission to save a dog from the savagery he knows it will suffer from its rightful owner Judd Travers (Scott Wilson). Marty gets little backing from parents but does get help from Doc (Rod Steiger), a kindly grandfather of Marty's best friend who explains that one must often fight hard for the things one loves. Marty makes a pact with Judd, work in exchange for Shiloh—but when the work is done Judd breaks the agreement. But, in true boy-and-his-dog fashion, Judd relents.

Audiences might feel that Judd doesn't get a proper comeuppance, but they can warm with the knowledge that Marty and Shiloh win in the end. Set in West Virginia and bearing comforting music (by Joel Goldsmith), "Shiloh" creates a place where small-town life still thrives. W.C. Fields famously admonished about films with kids and dogs, and here the comedian is proved right. Marty and Shiloh steal this movie; even the dog's few "lines"—spoken in beagle bark—are endearing.—Stephenie Slahor

MESSAGE TO LOVE ★★★1/2

Directed, written and produced by Murray Lerner. A Strand release. Documentary. Unrated. Running time: 128 min.

On the heels of Woodstock, British organizers plan a "Festival of Music" on the Isle of Wight to feature such performers as The Doors, Donovan, the Moody Blues, Leonard Cohen, Kris Kristofferson, Joni Mitchell, Miles Davis, Emerson Lake and Palmer, Jimi Hendrix, Joan Baez, Jethro Tull and The Who. There are not only 60,000 paying customers, but 550,000 more who refuse to pay and who camp just outside the fest, insisting the event isn't a concert but a happening that should be free to everyone.

This 25-year-old documentary is an insider's look into the world of rock promotion and the headaches that accompany it. Even those unfamiliar with the music will find this an interesting film, especially thanks to skillful editing (by Einar Westerlund and Stan Warnow) that gives fascinating views of the festival from idea to end. In chronicling the last such fest, the film's archival aspects capture a slice of rock history and the now-vintage music of those times.—Stephenie Slahor

A MONGOLIAN TALE ★★★★★

Starring Tengger, Dalarsurong and Naren Hua. Directed by Xie Fei. Written by Zhang Chengzhi. Produced by Jin Jiwu and Du Yongling. A New Yorker release. Drama. Unrated. Running time: 100 min.

The vast, sweeping land of Mongolia is home for a grandmother (Dalarsurong) who moviegoers can quickly cherish as one who loves and nurtures life with a youthful zeal. Because of her wisdom and experience, she is given all manner of creatures, from orphaned foals to children, to raise and teach. Surrogate mother to a girl named Somiya, her joy is multiplied when she is given Bayanbulag, a boy to raise as Somiya's brother. An orphaned colt joins the group, and the film vividly and touchingly portrays the contentment, security and love this little family shares on the steppes of Mongolia.

When Bayanbulag (Tengger) and Somiya (Naren Hua) mature, their adoptive grandmother wants them to marry, but Bayanbulag leaves, pledging to return when eight months of schooling are completed. Three years pass, and a lonely Somiya falls for another man and now carries his baby; finally come back, a marriage-minded Bayanbulag is crestfallen upon learning of Somiya's state. He departs and years pass, but he yearns for Somiya. When their paths cross again, he learns of Somiya's marriage and family, and of the grandmother and colt's deaths. Bayanbulag again leaves with another pledge to return some day.

The film's anchor is Dalarsurong's stunning portrayal of the grandmother—a characterization that shows the love, security and experience of a grandparent, and the tenacious grasp she has on the good in youth. The film is a brilliant and touching portrayal of the universal themes of love and nurturing, and the lesson of learning that there are consequences to one's actions. The plot artfully weaves through tradition and change, and it carries a moving wistfulness.—Stephenie Slahor

THE BOY FROM MERCURY ★★★1/2

Starring James Hickey, Rita Tushingham, Tom Courtenay and Hugh O'Conor. Directed and written by Martin Duffy. Produced by Marina Hughes. A Le Studio Canal production; no distributor set. Comedy. Not yet rated. Running time: 87 min.

Nine-year old Harry Cronin (James Hickey) is a likable, good child. He also insists he's a scout from the planet Mercury, here to learn about Earthling life. And, funny enough, moviegoers will almost think he is. As he experiences childhood's wonder, fear and love, he takes mental notes for his future report to his fellow Mercurians. Actually, Harry's otherplanetary world stems from his favorite Saturday pastime of sitting in the theatre watching Flash Gordon battle Ming the Merciless. Harry has only the barest memory of his deceased father and can't quite fathom what role he played or should play in his life. Troubles with a cruel teacher and a class bully compound his problems but, no matter what, Harry believes his Mercurian powers will save him—until the day his big brother steps into the role of hero and Harry finally reconciles fantasy with reality.

Scenes are often viewed from Harry's height to depict his perspective and let the audience experience the magic of make-believe and the childhood test of balancing it with life's ups and downs. "The Boy From Mercury" is a delightful look at young imagination and coping.—Stephenie Slahor

MILK AND MONEY ★★

Starring Robert Petkoff, Dina Merrill, Peter Boyle, Robert Vaughn and Olympia Dukakis. Directed, written and produced by Michael Bergmann. An RKO production; no distributor set. Comedy. Not yet rated. Running time: 86 min.

Dropping out of medical school seems to David (Robert Petkoff) the right thing to do but, when his mother (Dina Merrill) immediately urges him to look for work, his real troubles begin. He is approached by a woman who asks him to help her make a film; moments later, another woman asks him to look after a wrapped package. Zany events follow, seemingly unrelated, but they finally sort into an interlinking solution to everyone's problems, including David's.

Despite the anchoring efforts of pros Merrill, Robert Vaughn and Olympia Dukakis, "Milk and Money" often has the feel of a comic doing an improvisation that's not succeeding with the audience. David meets up with bizarre characters and plot twists that lead him along different paths, but he doesn't try very hard to sort out his dilemmas. He blithely swims along with the flow but, unfortunately, that flow is too implausible.—Stephenie Slahor

BRILLIANT LIES ★★★

Starring Gia Carides, Anthony LaPaglia, Zoe Carides and Ray Barrett. Directed by Richard Franklin. Written by Peter Fitzpatrick and Richard Franklin. Produced by Richard Franklin and Sue Farrelly. A Beyond Films production; no distributor set. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 93 min.

It's Susan Connor (Gia Carides) versus Gary Fitzgerald (Anthony LaPaglia, Carides' co-star in Goldwyn's upcoming "Paperback Romance") in this intricate weaving of lies and truth in which Susan accuses Gary of sexual harassment and unlawful termination from her job. "Brilliant Lies" takes every path of belief and disbelief until it's impossible to know for sure who is lying and to what extent.

The intensity of being caught up in a battle of justice gives this film both its cohesion and its puzzling aspects. The two characters become more spiteful as the story continues (Carides and LaPaglia work to hilt to provide conniving nastiness) and so the audience might begin to hate both, but the tale of deception holds a fascination as it unfolds. Augmenting the enigma is an effective camera technique: There is no

READY THEATRE SYSTEMS
SOFTWARE FOR TICKETING, CONCESSIONS & COMPLETE INVENTORY CONTROL
800 676-9303 616 463-8458
Response No. 130

complete line of . . .
Concession, Snack Bar and Janitorial Supplies
plus Projection and theatre equipment also parts
For The Best In Service . . . Give Us a Call
CINEMA SUPPLY COMPANY, INC.
P.O. BOX 148, MILLERSBURG, PA. 17061
TELEPHONE: (717) 692-4744 1-800-437-5505
Response No. 96

PRESENTING THE FANTASTIC 4
XR171 ANTI-STATIC
non-yellowing pearlescent surface
XRL LENTICULAR
prevents cross reflection of light
Cotton backing prevents bellying on curved screens
HILUX
silver surface approved for 3D
MATTE WHITE
seamless heavy gauge vinyl
WHEN QUALITY IS NECESSARY
SELECT ONE OF THESE SPECIALIZED SCREENS
TECHNIKOTE CORP.
Available from your authorized Theatre Equipment Supply Dealer
PROFESSIONAL SCREENS OF SUPERIOR QUALITY
63 Seabring Street, Brooklyn, N. Y. 11231—(718) 624-6429 / Fax: (718) 624-0129
Response No. 68

WHEN DOWN TIME IS MONEY - CALL WOLK
NEW FACTORY AND OFFICE ADDRESS TO SERVE YOU BETTER—SAME PHONE AND FAX.
From our vast inventory of Gears, Cams, Sprockets, Rollers, etc., we can get you up and rolling.
Whatever your need:
CENTURY – SIMPLEX – BRENKERT – RCA
MOTIOGRAPH – DEVRY – STRONG – MAGNARC
ASHCRAFT – WEAVER – ECT.
Chances are we have it. Contact your theatre supply dealer. Same day shipment.
MOTION PICTURE EQUIPMENT EDW.H.WOLK INC. PRECISION PARTS
EDW. H. WOLK, INC.
921 S. Jefferson St.
Chicago, IL 60607
Fax: 312-939-0654
Phone: 312-939-2720
Response No. 213

FESTS

fadeout between scenes. Rather, the character on screen exits from the previous scene in a particular direction, then enters from that direction in the next. Graphic language is used throughout this adaptation of David Williamson's play, further lending the film a corrosive edge.—Stephenie Slahor

KING OF MASKS ★★★★★

Starring Chu Yuk, Chao Yim Yiu, Zhang Riuyang and Zhao Zhigang. Directed by Wu Tianming. Written by Wei Minglun. Produced by Wu Tianming. A Shaw Brothers production; no distributor set. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 101 min.

Wang (Chu Yuk) is an elderly street performer called the King of Masks who enchants audiences. Seeking a grandson to whom he can teach his art, he buys a child from an impoverished family, only to determine later his "grandson" Doggie (Zhang Riuyang) is a girl. Pride in his craft won't allow him to pass his trade secrets to a female, so he instead teaches her acrobatics. One night, Doggie rescues a kidnapped boy and gives him to Wang to be the grandson he has always sought. Wang is arrested for kidnapping and Doggie desperately attempts to clear Wang of the charges.

In this masterwork, visual balance and imbalance, the juxtaposition of characters, and rich scenery and props dazzle the eye and focus concentration on the significance not only of the dialogue but also of the actors' movements and expressions. The film also profits from meticulous camera work and attention to lighting detail, from subtle and indirect to brilliant and gleaming; each scene is like a photograph of perfect composition.—Stephenie Slahor

IRISH WHISKEY ★★★

Starring John Bradford Pagano, Nan Morganne and Cassandra-Nailah Brown. Directed and produced by Jon Stevens. Written by Jon Stevens and Mick McGovern. An Irish Whiskey production; no distributor set. Drama/comedy. Not yet rated. Running time: 103 min.

Get all the brothers, sisters, spouses and children together for a traditional Thanksgiving dinner and the hot and cold of the foods won't be the only heat and ice present. There are bound to be sparks and icy moments when diverse characters come together under one roof, and that's exactly what happens in this tale of the battle of the mindsets.

Sometimes funny, sometimes touching and always true to life, "Irish Whiskey" makes the audience feel like accidental eavesdroppers tucked into a corner of Michael's house, watching everything happen and overhearing all the expressions of love, hate, bigotry, rebellion and compassion that occur. A frequent fault of this low-budget production is wobbly camera work, but for those drawn into the comedy/drama that can be ignored. In this tale of life's transformations, director/producer Jon Stevens is clearly an actors' director, giving his cast free rein to deliver a depiction of family in its many nuances.—Stephenie Slahor

FESTS

BEYOND SILENCE ★★1/2

Starring Sylvie Testud, Tatjana Trieb, Howie Seago and Emmanuelle Laborit. Directed and written by Caroline Link. Produced by Thomas Wobke. A Roxie-Film GmbH production; no distributor set. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 109 min.

Lara (Tatjana Trieb), the daughter of deaf parents (Howie Seago and Emmanuelle Laborit), is their link to the hearing world. Her true heroine is the aunt she emulates, who gives her a clarinet. It becomes Lara's new life beyond that of her parents' silence. Grown, a mature Lara (Sylvie Testud) realizes music will be her career, but her father wants her to stay home for him. Instead, Lara spends a summer in Berlin, preparing for a music academy audition.

The strongest portion of "Beyond Silence" is its first two-thirds. Its last section should focus on the conflict between Lara's career choice and her guilt at leaving her family, but it becomes preoccupied with showing that Lara is reaching adulthood. Trieb's performance steals the film, and she accounts for much of the film's early strength; most of that richness is lost when the older Lara appears, her character becoming predictable and distanced.—Stephenie Slahor

TO HAVE AND TO HOLD ★★1/2

Starring Tcheky Karyo, Rachel Griffiths and Robert Kunsa. Directed by John Hillcoat. Written by Gene Conkie. Produced by Denise Patience. A Southern Star production; no distributor set. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 100 min.

"Disturbing" is the word to characterize this raw, violent and mysterious film. The first wife of Jack ("La Femme Nikita's" Tcheky Karyo) has died under circumstances not immediately made clear; the story then jumps ahead two years when Jack sees Kate ("Cosi's" Rachel Griffiths), an author touting her book. He marries her and takes her to his home in New Guinea, where he runs an open-air theatre that shows violent films to the island's native inhabitants. At first, the marriage seems to work, but all is not what it appears with either spouse. Kate is using her experiences in the marriage and its unique environment as the basis for her new romance novel; Jack has more deep-seated problems as he substitutes Kate for his first wife. Slowly, Kate realizes Jack is mad, but she can't easily escape him until Luther (Robert Kunsa), an enigmatic native, comes to her rescue.

Unfortunately, the film's first half is ponderous. The film also suffers from a dreadful overuse of extreme closeups of Jack's face, dead-center in the frame; the technique becomes almost humorous. Audiences might also suffer vertigo from the film's many spinning motions, from amusement park rides to ceiling fans to dancing in a circle. The fetish with movement goes nowhere until late, when it's revealed as a symbol of Jack's entrapment. The Down Under setting lends some scenic strength, but not more: The native population (except for Luther) and their life there remain underdeveloped.—Stephenie Slahor

For the service and results Independent Theatre Owners expect.

CSC
CINEMA SERVICE COMPANY
The South's Premier Full Service Film Buying & Marketing Agency

• Film buying & booking for first run, sub run & art/alternative theatres • Trade screening reviews & reactions • Coop advertising • Consultation in theatre acquisition, construction & refurbishment • In house newsletter

DALLAS, TEXAS ▲ (214)692-7555

Response No. 69

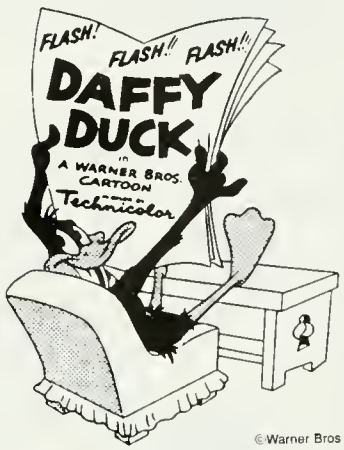
MERCHANDISER

Stein Industries designers gave this unit a large pre-packed display area with sliding plexi-glass doors. Featuring a stainless steel storage bin with an oversized heavy gauge stainless steel door and removable stainless steel chaff drawers gives added convenience. These units have the capability of keeping bulk popcorn warm and pre-packed bags and/or pre-packed buckets of popcorn at a constant temperature for warmth and crispness. The popcorn Merchandiser is available in a counter-top model, and helps concession stands sell hot popcorn during peak periods without having to fill bags or buckets.

STEIN INDUSTRIES INC.
22 Sprague Avenue, Amityville, NY 11701-0536
(516) 789-2222 FAX (516) 789-8888

Response No. 101

ITEA
Nick Mulone & Son, Inc.
100 Highland Ave. / Cheswick, PA 15024
(412) 274-3221 / 274-5994 / 274-4808 (fax)



THEATRE SCREEN FRAMES OF ALL TYPES
STRAIGHT OR CURVED FRAMES
SPEAKER PLATFORMS • LACING SPRINGS

Brute Force Masking Control Motor

Features:
- UL, CSA Approved
- 1/3 Horsepower
- Low Voltage Control
- Chain Driven
- Optional Set-Up Control Box

Response No. 85

©Warner Bros

Call Sharon, Scott, or Clara for

CLASSICS
CARTOONS
MATINEES

KIT★PARKER★FILMS

800•538•5838

Response No. 87

DEEPER 3D

DEEP VISION 3-D

Red - Blue/Green
Anaglyph Glasses

- LOW PRICES,
FAST SERVICE
- 24 HR HOTLINE

DEEP VISION 3-D
P.O. BOX 38386
HOLLYWOOD, CA 90038

213-465-5819

Response No. 58

FEST REVIEWS

FT. LAUDERDALE

UNDERWORLD ★

Starring Denis Leary, Joe Mantegna, Annabella Sciorra, Abe Vigoda, Traci Lords and James Tolkan. Directed by Roger Christian. Written by Larry Bishop. Produced by Robert Vince and William Vince. A Trimark release. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 100 min. Opens in March.

What hath Quentin Tarantino wrought? Apparently, a new genre: the Cinema of Self-Consciously Quirky Thugs. Judging by "Underworld," screenwriter Larry Bishop ("Mad Dog Time") and director Roger Christian—Christian, no less!—have sold their souls to this derivative devil. And they've persuaded some otherwise well-respected performers to worship with them at the "Pulp Fiction" altar.

In this dreadful concoction, Joe Mantegna ("Eye for an Eye") is Frank, a mob boss abducted by an ex-con ("Two If By Sea's" Denis Leary) named Johnny. Together, they ride always rain-slicked, steamy city streets in a red stretch limo as Johnny searches for an answer to the question, "Who popped my pop?" With his old man brain-dead after an assassination attempt, he suspects Frank, who has many opportunities to escape but is content to stick close to Johnny and smolder.

Taking place on Father's Day, the story is an elaborate pseudo-existential riff on familial bonds. A radio station broadcasts "Oh, My Papa." Someone discusses Oedipus. Johnny talks about being "an expert on dead dads." Yet this mind-numbing wordplay is far less obnoxious than when the hoodlums start debating, in true Tarantino style, the merits of Danny Kaye, organ donations and Rodgers & Hammerstein musicals. Bloodbaths abound as gangsters—stopping first to chat about cultural trivia—massacre everybody in sight.

As Frank's squeeze, Annabella Sciorra has little to do other than be one of the many scantily clad females and strippers; Abe Vigoda shows briefly as his estranged parent. James Tolkan plays Ned, a scum-of-the-earth sort who, of course, killed his own father. And Johnny gets to spout a scintillating line of dialogue to Frank: "I want to be frank about your frankness and, frankly, I don't give a damn." Frankly, neither does the audience.—Susan Green

GUANTANAMERA ★★★1/2

Starring Carlos Cruz, Mirtha Ibarra, Raul Eguren and Jorge Perugorria. Directed by Tomas Gutierrez Alea and Juan Carlos Tabio. Written by Eliseo Diego Marruz, Tomas Gutierrez Alea and Juan Carlos Tabio. Produced by Geraldo Herrero. A CFP release. Romantic comedy. Not yet rated. Running time: 104 min. Opens in May.

The mad, mad, mad, mad world of Cuban socialism has been a creative touchstone in films by the late Tomas Gutierrez Alea, best known for his ironic 1968 masterpiece, "Memories of Underdevelopment." Filmmaker Juan Carlos Tabio collaborated with the ailing director on 1994's popular "Strawberry and Chocolate" and helped out again on what proved to be Alea's swan song, "Guantanamera." Fidel Castro is nowhere to be seen in this Latin screwball comedy with a hint of wistful magic realism, but the patchwork society he rules comes in for satirical nudging.

A middling civil servant, Adolfo (Carlos Cruz), hopes to improve his status by offering a bold plan for the gasoline-poor country: to share the financial burden of transporting corpses to their far-flung burial destinations through a relay system of vehicles supplied by every major town along the route. On the domestic front, Adolfo expects his wife, Gina (Mirta Ibarra, Alea's widow), a former economics professor, to stay home and dress in matronly fashions. When Gina's elderly aunt dies in the arms of her childhood sweetheart, Candido (Raul Eguren), Adolfo must make sure her casket is transferred from Guantanamo to Havana according to his untested scheme.

Adolfo becomes increasingly irate as the funeral procession meets with all the mishaps any carefully devised policy might expect to encounter when negotiating a bureaucratic nightmare. Without all its laughs, "Guantanamera" probably would have seemed even more of a thorn in Castro's tropical socialist paradise.—Susan Green

BANDWAGON ★★★1/2

Starring Kevin Corrigan, Steve Parlavecchio, Lee Holmes, Matthew Hennesey and Doug MacMillan. Directed and written by John Schultz. Produced by John Schultz and Alyson Poole. A Transatlantic Entertainment production; no distributor set. Comedy. Not yet rated. Running time: 107 min.

Slackers with ambition, four North Carolina lads decide to rock 'n' roll for a living in "Bandwagon," a fresh, witty road movie and feature debut by writer/director John Schultz ("The Making of Jurassic Park"). Like the similarly loquacious character in "Clerks," long-winded drummer Charlie (Matthew Hennessey) works in a video store. Singer/songwriter Tony (Lee Holmes) pens an obsessive repertoire of tunes about a girl named Ann and is so shy that he can perform only with his back to the audience. Lead guitarist Wynn (Kevin Corrigan of "Walking and Talking" and TV's "Pearl") remains a resolutely cynical latter-day hippie. Bass player Eric (Steve Parlavecchio) is the most volatile player in Circus Monkey, as the group members decide to call themselves, having vetoed Porch Key and Talentless Bastards. After playing a fractious fraternity gig and recording a single, the not-yet-fab four buy an ancient van to go on tour with Linus (Doug MacMillan), their enigmatic road manager. Naturally, many misadventures await them in this more downbeat, contemporary American kin to "A Hard Day's Night."

Schultz, who played as a drummer with several ensembles while in college, seems to have a sure sense of what it's like to be in a twentysomething Southern garage band. His endearing tale is bolstered by composer Greg Kendall's songs, which the actors lip-synch convincingly. Snappy camera work by Shawn Maurer helps move things along as Circus Monkey winds through the South, squabbling and dreaming about that improbable pot of gold at the end of the touring rainbow. Moviegoers who liked the fun of hardscrabble rock 'n' roll sagas—"The Buddy Holly Story," "The Commitments," "Backbeat"—doing that thing they do are likely to get aboard for this "Bandwagon."—Susan Green

FEST REVIEWS

MOJAVE MOON ★★★

Starring Danny Aiello, Anne Archer, Alfred Molina, Angelina Jolie and Michael Biehn. Directed by Kevin Dowling. Written by Leonard Glasser. Produced by Matt Salinger. A Northern Arts release. Comedy. Unrated. Running time: 95 min. Opens in '97.

Although periodically double-crossed by its own confusion of motives, "Mojave Moon" is an intriguing, audience-friendly venture from director Kevin Dowling ("The Sum of Us"). The recently divorced Al (Danny Aiello) is hoping to reinvent his life when Ellie ("Foxfire's" Angelina Jolie), a vixen young enough to be his granddaughter, lures him into a seemingly surefire sexual assignation. Instead, she takes Al home to her mom, Julie (Anne Archer, using a distracting Marilyn Monroe voice), who lives in a desert trailer with a hot-tempered biker boyfriend ("Tombstone's" Michael Biehn). Al seems to be a patsy in some prearranged mother-daughter conspiracy, but audiences are never quite sure why. During a bizarre evening in their company, Al falls for the ditzy Julie before finding a body in the trunk of his car. He calls on his pal Sal ("The Perez Family's" Alfred Molina) for help. And so it goes in this messy but endearing comic oddity.—Susan Green

HOLLOW REED ★★★

Starring Martin Donovan, Joely Richardson, Ian Hart, Jason Flemyng and Sam Bould. Directed by Angela Pope. Written by Paula Milne. Produced by Nik Powell and Stephen Woolley. A CFP release. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 109 min. Opens in April.

Given the way TV movies-of-the-week consistently trivialize social issues, it's remarkable that a cinematic view of child abuse can resist sensationalism. In "Hollow Reed," director Angela Pope ("Captives") manages to tell a restrained yet harrowing story about a child caught in the purgatory between divorced, warring parents and his mother's violence-prone boyfriend.

Oliver (Sam Bould) is a small boy with enormous, soulful eyes and the bad luck to be on the losing end of a custody battle. His mom, Hannah ("101 Dalmatians'" Joely Richardson), is still bitter about the dissolution of her marriage to Martyn ("The Portrait of a Lady's" Martin Donovan), a doctor now in a monogamous gay relationship with Tom ("Land and Freedom's" Ian Hart). Hannah has rebounded into the loving arms of Frank (Jason Flemyng), whose hands are problematical: When no one else is around, he beats Oliver. After Martyn begins to suspect the worst, the film evolves from thriller to courtroom drama, with Oliver too terrified to talk, Hannah seeking the easy road of denial and Jason proving himself very adept at deceit.

Complex characters save Paula Milne's sometimes sketchy script. A Hal Hartley regular, Donovan has the appropriate intensity for a father battling to protect his son and overcome society's homophobia. Although somewhat on the sidelines here, Hart is always a compelling actor to watch; Richardson remains harder to read as a woman willing to ignore her maternal instincts to keep a man.

In America, this is material that probably would have exploded in a Hollywood-style bloodbath. Under the skillful eye of Pope, the film maintains a British reserve. That is a mixed blessing at times, but what might have turned maudlin in "Hollow Reed" is instead quite moving.—Susan Green

WIND IN THE WILLOWS ★★★

Narrated by Vanessa Redgrave. Voices by Alan Bennett, Rik Mayall, Michael Palin and Michael Gambon. Directed by Dave Unwin. Written by Ted Walker. Produced by John Coates. A Legacy release. Live-action/animated fantasy. Rated G. Running time: 78 min.

Almost 90 years ago, Kenneth Grahame wrote "Wind in the Willows," destined to become an enduring children's classic. In this 1995 production, British director John Coates brought the tale of Mole (Alan Bennett, who wrote "The Madness of King George"), Rat (Monty Pythoner Michael Palin), Badger (Michael Gambon of "The Singing Detective") and Toad (Rik Mayall) to the big screen via London's TVC Animation Studio.

Vanessa Redgrave narrates, after a brief live-action prologue during which she begins reading the book to her own brood while on a turn-of-the-century steamboat journey. Beautifully rendered visuals depict the travails of neurotic but basically charming critters who inhabit Riverbank, including dreamers, adventurers and poets; there are no Disney-babes like Pocahontas or big-eyed lion cubs. The madcap Toad gets into a bit of trouble with the law but, when things settle down, life once again is fairly peaceful in their lovely but never syrupy-sweet world.—Susan Green

THE SUN, THE MOON AND THE STARS ★★

Starring Elaine Cassidy, Angie Dickinson, Aisling Corcoran, Gina Moxley and Jason Donovan. Directed and written by Geraldine Creed. Produced by Brendan McCarthy. No distributor set. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 97 min.

The anguish of a family coming apart is at the heart of Geraldine Creed's "The Sun, the Moon and the Stars," an uneven film with feminist sensibilities. Shelley (Elaine Cassidy) is a Dublin teenager alienated by her parents' separation. Her unreliable fa-

ONLY $199.95

A new conception in 35 mm splicers that must be seen to be believed.

- Top quality
- Inexpensive price
- All metal — no plastic
- Wholesale to the public

EQUIPMENT, ETC.
P. O. Box 1194
Snellville, GA 30278
Phone–(770) 979-3456
Fax–(770) 979-0919
Ans. Mach. 24 Hrs. A Day

Response No. 443

Jerry Lewis, National Chairman, and Benjamin Cumbo, National Goodwill Ambassador.

MAKING A WORLD OF DIFFERENCE...

MDA-supported investigators are a pioneering force in genetics and gene therapy. While speeding treatments and cures for neuromuscular disorders affecting more than a million Americans, they have made significant advances that may lead to therapies for heart disease, cancer, arthritis, Alzheimer's, Huntington's, Parkinson's, AIDS and cystic fibrosis.

Giving to MDA makes a world of difference.

MDA®
MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY ASSOCIATION
(800) 572-1717

FESTS

ther has a new ladyfriend. Shelley's mother, Mo (Gina Moxley), does not get a promotion where she works because her bosses believe she has inopportune "family pressures."

Off she goes with Shelley and her younger daughter, Dee (Aisling Corcoran), for a holiday at the beach. There, they meet a mysterious American named Abbie (Angie Dickinson). Shelley, deciding Abbie must be "a sea witch," begins practicing her own voodoo rituals. Mo strikes up a warm friendship with Pat (a captivating Jason Donovan), to Shelley's dismay. The story, which is a bit silly, slow and contrived at times, retains some wonderfully tender moments, and the Irish seashore provides some lovely scenery.—Susan Green

TALK TO ME 1/2

Starring Cheryl Clifford, Peter Welch, Elizabeth Landis and Gary Navicoff. Directed by George Esguerra. Written by George Esguerra and Robert Foulkes. Produced by George Esguerra. No distributor set. Romantic comedy/drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 90 min.

Co-writer/director George Esguerra's empty-headed "Talk to Me" gives a big stamp of approval to stalking. Heck, it even celebrates such behavior. Betty (Cheryl Clifford) meets Arnold (Peter Welch) through a telephone "party line," on which sex-obsessed adults can indulge in naughty chatter from the anonymity of their own homes. Betty lets him believe that she is Miranda—her dead mother's name. After they consummate the relationship in person, Arnold is furious when he discovers the truth; Betty begins to shadow him, even showing up for dinner at his parents' house. Her best friend, Ronnie (Elizabeth Landis), sleeps with a lothario she meets via the same party line and then starts to pursue him when he ditches her. Arnold, meanwhile, is in therapy with his brother, Michael (Gary Navicoff, in a robotic performance). Credibility is not this movie's strong suit. But, then again, nothing is.—Susan Green

CANNES MAN ★★★

Starring Seymour Cassel, Francesco Quinn, Rebecca Broussard, Johnny Depp, Jim Jarmusch, John Malkovich, Treat Williams and Jim Sheridan. Directed by Richard Martini. Produced Tom Coleman and Holly MacConkey. No distributor set. Comedy. Not yet rated. Running time: 98 min.

With somewhat less bite than "The Player," Richard Martini's "Cannes Man" spoofs Hollywood within a largely improvised mockumentary format. At the film industry's annual French Riviera schmoozefest, legendary low-budget producer Sy Lerner (Seymour Cassel) makes a bet with real-life counterpart Jim Stark ("Down By Law"): Can Sy turn a nobody into the hottest new somebody? Enter Frank Rhinaslavsky (Francesco Quinn), a clueless cabbie who'll soon be wearing hip clothes, mingling with festival glitterati and sporting a new name, Frank Rhino.

When Sy cranks the hype machine, this loser becomes the most sought-after screenwriter on the Croisette, that Cannes boulevard of broken dreams. Never mind that there's no actual script, everybody from Johnny Depp and Jim Jarmusch—who take a meeting at a Buddhist shrine—to John Malkovich to Dennis Hopper wants a piece of the action. Rebecca Broussard checks in as Sy's estranged wife, but most celebrities are playing themselves. To perfection.—Susan Green

DOGS: THE RISE AND FALL OF AN ALL-GIRL BOOKIE JOINT ★★

Starring Pam Columbus, Pamela Grey, Eve Annenberg, Melody Beal and Toby Huss. Directed by Eve Annenberg. Written by Eve Anenberg and Stephanie Sharpe. Produced by Heather D'Amato. No distributor set. Comedy. Not yet rated. Running time: 83 min.

Eve Annenberg's "Dogs: The Rise and Fall of an All-Girl Bookie Joint" conveys much the same Lower East Side joie de vivre as "Rent." In this case, four underemployed female roommates are just one step up from being squatters, even showering together to save hot water in their cramped tenement apartment.

While Leila (Pam Columbus) mourns her recently deceased mother, she persuades the others (Pamela Grey, Eve Annenberg,

FLASHBACK: FEBRUARY 1, 1971
What BOXOFFICE said about...

WHEN DINOSAURS RULED THE EARTH

[Sharp-eyed cineastes caught Steven Spielberg's nod to this 1971 film in the "when dinosaurs ruled the earth" banner across the museum hall in "Jurassic Park." With dinosaurs about to rule the multiplex come the May 23 opening of Spielberg's sequel, "The Lost World," we thought we'd take a quarter-century trip back in time to see what BOXOFFICE thought of this Hammer production.]

Each new Hammer Film—this one arriving from Warner Bros.—brings with it a promise of another potential Raquel Welch. Because "When Dinosaurs Ruled the Earth" is quite close to "One Million Years B.C.," star Victoria Vetri has a chance to achieve Miss Welch's success. Obviously, the dazzling Miss Vetri, a blonde, comes close to the Welch measurements in a particularly revealing costume. In fact, nearly everyone in the cast wears extremely brief costumes for a G picture. The kids will be well entertained by the monsters and monosyllabic dialogue (which derives from the 1940 Hal Roach "One Million B.C.," remade at Hammer as the 1966 Welch starrer). Parents might fret about exposing their children to so much skin, even though there isn't any actual nudity. Adults, especially science-fiction buffs and action fans, will be greatly amused, making this one of the first big moneymakers of the new year. Jim Danforth's visual effects, very important to a film of this type, are fine, and the music by Mario Nascimbene (who provided the percussive score for "One Million Years B.C.") is equally good. Robin Hawdon is a muscular hero, enduring as many challenges in 96 minutes as the hero of any 15-chapter serial. Val Guest directs and scripts, with J.B. Ballard credited for the treatment; both do their jobs in the best tongue-in-cheek fashion. Aida Young produces. Imogen Hassall, Patrick Allen, Patrick Holt and Magda Konopka co-star. In Technicolor. Shot in the Canary Islands.

EXPLOITIPS

Arrange promotionals with museums of ancient history. Use displays of prehistoric monsters. Have a contest to find the perfect prehistoric couple.

CATCHLINES

Enter an Age of Unknown Terrors, Pagan Worship and Virgin Sacrifice...From the Creators of "One Million Years B.C." Comes Their Most Gigantic Spectacle.

FESTIVAL REVIEWS

Melody Beal) to help her run a kitchen betting parlor. Leila hopes to win the hard heart of Sammy (Toby Huss), her petty crook of a boss. The four nascent bookies experience temporary success in Mayor Rudolph Guliani's get-tough-on-crime city.

A classically trained Julliard actress, Annenberg is the most accomplished among a mixed bag of a cast. The script is iffy, the editing is choppy and the sound quality is marginal, but there's enough la vie boheme to keep things lively.—Susan Green

LOOSE WOMEN 1/2

Starring Sherry Ham, Melissa Errico, Maria Lisa Costanzo, Corey Glover, Giancarlo Esposito and Keith David. Directed by Paul Bernard. Written by Sherry Ham. Produced by Chris Matonti. No distributor set. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 90 min.

Some movies leave only two choices: head for the exit or slink lower in your seat. A vanity production by a husband-and-wife team, director Paul Bernard and screenwriter/star Sherry Ham, "Loose Women" is a particularly awful production about a struggling actress trying to save an unhinged roommate. Discovering that schoolteacher Gail (Melissa Errico) has a secret life as a prostitute, Rachel (Ham) teams up with a detective (Tom Verica) to battle Gail's calculating family for her soul.

Weighed down by idiotic dialogue, sloppy direction and abominable acting, this sounds far more interesting than it actually is. Replete with stereotypes—Giancarlo Esposito and Keith David vamp as gay hairdressers—the melodrama piles on gratuitous plot twists about sex and the single girl. In a bartender cameo, Charlie Sheen has a short monologue that however brief seems endless.—Susan Green

LOVE ALWAYS ★1/2

Starring Marisa Ryan, Moon Zappa and Michael Reilly Burke. Directed by Jude Pauline Eberhard. Written by Jude Pauline Eberhart and Sharlene Baker. Produced by Isaac Artenstein. No distributor set. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 93 min.

Despite interesting characters and situations, "Love Always" tends to shout its intentions from the rooftops. Jude Pauline Eberhard's directorial debut presents Julia (Marisa Ryan), a young woman trying to return to her Spokane-based sweetheart (Michael Reilly Burke) after six months in San Diego living with a friend (Moon Zappa). Hitchhiking north, she finds herself going in various unplanned directions. Julia encounters a speed-freak (Doug Hutchinson), a woman who crafts gigantic ceramic cows (Beth Grant), an all-chick rock band called the Virgin Sluts, the amorous Mac (Jerry O'Donnell), an AWOL Marine (Aaron Kuhr) and a sensitive photographer (Tracy Fraim), before finally experiencing a bit of instant karma back in Washington.

Ryan has an effective screen persona that some of her fellow performers lack, but the story by Eberhart and Sharlene Baker opts for subplots that go nowhere. In the cameo-for-cameo's-sake department, a familiar face appears and disappears before you can say, "Beverly D'Angelo!"—Susan Green

MENNO'S MIND ★1/2

Starring Bill Campbell, Stephanie Romanov, Corbin Bernsen, Robert Vaughn, Robert Piccardo and Michael Dorn. Directed by Jon Kroll. Written by Mark Valenti. Produced by Larry Estes. No distributor set. SF/thriller. Not yet rated. Running time: 94 min.

An ambitious enterprise, "Menno's Mind" is an independent sci-fi feature with financing from cable's Showtime network. Boasting numerous radio, TV, theatre and documentary credits, Jon Kroll brings much technical polish to a production punctuated by uneven acting and mean-spirited violence.

In some Orwellian future shock of a society, Menno ("The Rocketeer's" Bill Campbell) works in a state-controlled theme park where patrons experience their wildest fantasies through virtual reality. Presidential candidate Felix Medina (Corbin Bernsen), meanwhile, plots a fiendish mind-control scheme to win the election. When a rebel leader is killed, sexy comrade-in-arms Loria (Stephanie Romanov) downloads his brain power into Menno's handsome head. The previously apathetic hero now has to battle Medina for a brighter tomorrow, despite the trepidation of his best friend, Simon ("Star Trek: First Contact's" Michael Dorn). Robert Vaughn appears as a government official and Robert Piccardo as one of the generally cartoonish villains.—Susan Green

NIGHT ORCHID ★★

Starring Dale Paris, Alyssa Simon, Rachel Carter, Joe Nassif and Mary Ellen O'Brien. Directed and written by Mark Atkins. Produced by Ralph Clemente. No distributor set. Thriller. Not yet rated. Running time: 110 min.

Nothing if not atmospheric, Mark Atkins' student film "Night Orchid" is cliche-ridden right from an opening sequence that practically screams, "It was a dark and stormy night...." Accordingly, a psychic drifter named Clay (Mark Paris) has all the right film-noir moves. When he arrives in a small, dusty Florida town—accompanied by twangy guitar music—Clay senses the locals share a dark secret. The three-decades-old question: Who killed Sarah (Alyssa Simon), a pretty girl who flirted with all the guys? The suspects are most memorable for overacting with gusto.—Susan Green

AFI

KRZYSZTOF KIESLOWSKI: I'M SO-SO ★★★★

Directed and written by Krzysztof Wierzbicki. Produced by Karen Hjort. No distributor set. Documentary. Polish-language; subtitled. Running time: 56 min.

Anything additional from or about the late Krzysztof Kieslowski, the Polish director who died early last year, leaving the film world wanting so much more, must be considered a plus. Brief though "Krzysztof Kieslowski: I'm So-So," is, this documen-

SANTA BARBARA FEST

ROSEANNA'S GRAVE ★★★1/2

Starring Jean Reno, Mercedes Ruehl and Polly Walker. Directed by Paul Weiland. Written by Saul Turteltaub, Dick Clement and Ian Le Frenais. Produced by Paul Trijbits, Alison Owen and Dario Poloni. A Fine Line release. Comedy. Rated PG-13 for sexuality and brief language. Running time: 99 min. Opens the Santa Barbara fest. Opens 4/18.

Fine Line for a while considered retitling this "For the Love of Roseanna," probably hoping to avoid the death-title boxoffice jinx and to better capture the spirit of this light-hearted affair. Although the story seems a grave one—a dying wife ("The Fisher King's" Mercedes Ruehl) wants to be assured of being laid to rest in the same cemetery as that of her dead child—director Paul Weiland and his three scripters ensure that "Roseanna's Grave" remains a comic affair. They do this by using a droll scenario that wouldn't be out of place in foreign-language fare (though set in an Italian village, the film is in English): With the local graveyard almost full, Roseanna's loving husband ("Mission: Impossible's" Jean Reno) begins to stash bodies as townspeople die.

But the film never crosses over to slapstick, and that's thanks in part to the surprisingly genuine humanity of the key characters. Reno and Ruehl make for a convincing married couple—though accustomed to each other's day-to-day presence, the two players make the audience see there remains a deep romance between them. As Roseanna's single sister, who shares the couple's home so as to be close to her sister and who Roseanna sometimes envisions becoming her husband's wife after she's gone, Polly Walker ("Restoration") is sexual yet loyal.—Kim Williamson tary is a wondrous tease for those who don't know his movies, and a charming reminder for those who do, about the appeal of his mind's eye. Of course it is not a fully satisfying exploration of his life and his work, but it fulfills its own design and concept, the blueprint for which seems clearly dictated by the subject himself, although via the hands of filmmaker Krzysztof Wierzbicki, a long-time assistant. Kieslowski announced his retirement from filmmaking prior to participating in this little vignette, but his taste and viewpoint shape this work almost as sharply as when he was an active director creating his own films.

The film reflects much integral to Kieslowski and his work, though only the briefest of clips are shown from just a few of his movies—for example, a touch of "Red," but no "White" or Blue." Visual reflections are picked up in the choice of backdrops for segments of the interviews, which include a conversation held while walking along a railway platform and a question-and-answer session during which he nuzzles circling horses. Philosophical theories are constant in the witty evasive conversation, which includes such self-analytic comments as "I'm a pessimist" (something he suggests is his one really good characteristic) and "I turn the camera on myself in a way which nobody can see." Kieslowski also remarks that he's often felt like "leaving my films unfinished." This little movie, a soft pencil sketch of a life that should be etched in stone, is an intriguing glimpse through a doorway left slightly ajar.—Bridget Byrne

THE BRYLCREEM BOYS ★1/2

Starring Gabriel Byrne, Jean Butler, Bill Campbell and William McNamara. Directed by Terence Ryan. Written by Terence Ryan and Jamie Brown. Produced by Alan Latham, Bernie Stampfer, Terence Ryan and Paul Madigan. No distributor set. Drama/romance. Not yet rated. Running time: 106 min.

A potentially interesting twist on the prisoner-of-war genre has scant impact in "The Brylcreem Boys," a sort of "top of a misty morning to you" soft-soap version of a World War II adventure set in 1941 Ireland.

Because of Ireland's neutral stance, both British and German troops who have washed up or crashlanded on Southern Irish soil are interred in the same camp, separated only by thin strands of barbed wire and implacable animosity. To further complicate matters, both sides are allowed out under the Irish blarney theory that spending a day at the race and swilling a jar at the local pub will make them less inclined to attempt to escape. The political and emotional climate is thus very confused, but this film doesn't probe any depths, merely skipping lumbrously over the surface.

There isn't even an Englishman, at least not center stage—just a couple of overseas guys, a Canadian and an American who have got into the conflict early. Bill Campbell is the safely handsome O.K. Canadian and William McNamara the safely handsome O.K. American who vie with the Germans—most of whom are cliche nasty, apart from one safely handsome O.K. officer, played by Angus MacFadyen. The world these men are plonked down in has all the expected Irish accessories, including a pony and trap, a Jack Russell terrier, toe dancing, stone walls, whiskey and stout, and a red-headed beauty. As the latter, Jean Butler has little to do except look good as the men spar and spat over her, while Gabriel Byrne has even less to do, beyond looking comfortably handsome as the good-natured Irish officer in charge of the whole sorry debacle. Without tension or heart, this is a dull yarn ill-told.—Bridget Byrne

A SATURDAY ON EARTH ★★★

Starring Elsa Zylberstein, Eric Caravaca and Johan Leysen. Directed by Diane Bertrand. Written by Diane Bertrand and Guillaume Laurent. Produced by Georges Benayoun and Michel Propper. A Canal Plus production; no U.S. distributor set. Mystery. French-language; English subtitles. Not yet rated. Running time: 95 min.

This stylish jigsaw puzzle of a movie proves both likable and confusing. Nonlinear in structure, with dozens of flashbacks, the film tells the sad tale of a brother and sister. Separated as children and adopted by different families, they years later meet and share a tragic fate. Claire (Elsa Zylberstein), a shy and fetching gamin who works as a freelance journalist in Paris, meets Franck (Johan Leysen), the head of a munitions factory, while she is covering a story. They fall in love and marry. Meanwhile, Claire's brother Martin (Eric Caravaca), who knows neither that he is adopted or has a sister, works at Franck's factory. Despondent after accidentally running over a man with his car, Martin crosses paths with Claire.

"A Saturday on Earth" ("Un Samedi Sur La Terre") is about lives intersecting and the randomness of tragedy, although it retains a somewhat comical tone throughout. The actors prove agreeable, although no character is shown long enough—or presented deeply enough—for the audience to really get to know them. Franck wears his love for Claire on his sleeve, revealing a wonderful melancholic sweetness that makes him most appealing. Claire, a woman seemingly destined to sadness, also proves engaging. Director Diane Bertrand brings a colorful crispness and insouciant manner, yet still allows for moments of emotion. She is ably assisted by her crew, especially cinematographer Michel Amathieu.—Jean Oppenheimer

SPECIAL FORMATS

FOX HUNT ★★★

Starring Lewis Arquette, Timothy Bottoms, George Lazenby, Rob Lowe and Gary Coleman. Directed by Michael Berns. Written by Matt Pyken and Michael Berns. Produced by Adam Berns and Matt Pyken. No stateside distributor set; intl. distribution by Redwood Comm. Action/comedy. Unrated. Running time: 93 min.

Media is synergy, now and forever. Witness: homages, references, sequels, sampling, based-on-the-novels, based-on-the-TV-shows, and the latest: repurposing, which consists of taking actual video footage and using it in another medium or in the same medium but for a different purpose.

"Fox Hunt," an off-the-wall, fast-paced comedy, is purported to be the first CD-ROM ever to be reverse-engineered into a feature film. A similar trajectory was ridden by "Super Mario Brothers" and "Mortal Kombat," which had been arcade and cartridge games. Neither movie was a big hit, and this movie is unlikely to break the string. But it's an attention-getter for the talented group behind it: 3Vision, the independent production company that also developed the successful CD-ROM "National Lampoon's Blind Date."

The plot of the movie, as could be guessed, is a subset of that of the interactive game; where the game offers multiple paths and endings, one path was chosen for the film. The story has to do with Russian spies leaving messages in bad '60s TV shows. The clues needed to deactivate a bomb aimed at Los Angeles must be decoded by Jack Fremont, a sort of slacker James Bond. It's contrived, to say the least. As Fremont, Andrew Bowen appears to have had his training from Maxwell Smart at the Jim Carrey School of Acting. But he makes you laugh despite yourself; especially infectious is his Popeye style of muttering to himself.

The film does well in combining action with comedy, such as a bit on a jet-powered wheelchair and a kickboxing fight between Las Vegas showgirls. One long 'n' trippy tunnel sequence gives the movie audience a chance to play its own game. It's called "Spot the game sequence." Fights and "traveling" segments are common in CD-ROM games. Purists might bemoan tampering with the film form and film's TV-ization or game-ification, but the truth is: The aesthetic is changing. The young developers/filmmakers here are throwing back their own internal images, which resemble and are about TV. If certain filmmakers see the world as a television show, perhaps that is how many of their audience members see it as well.—Ann Kwinn

FEST REVIEWS

DYING TO GO HOME ★★1/2

Starring Diogo Infante and Maria D'Aires. Directed by Carlos da Silva and George Sluizer. Written by Carlos da Silva and Jennifer Field with additional dialogue from George Sluizer. Produced by George Sluizer and Carlos da Silva. Fantasy. Dutch/Portuguese/English-language; subtitled. Running time: 106 min.

For a film shot and produced in two different countries by two different directors, performed by a cross-cultural European cast in three languages and numerous accents, telling a story that slips constantly back and forth from drama to comedy to fantasy to romance, "Dying to Go Home" is a remarkably cohesive work. Carlos da Silva and George Sluizer's film also possesses charm, genuine sentiment and moments of dark sadness absent from similar soft-touch ghost stories so popular in Hollywood. Ultimately it provides few surprises—its point about the importance of not denying your roots is immediately apparent and explored at too much length—but the sympathetic depiction of its central characters sustains interest through much of the meandering.

Manuel, who before his untimely death had drifted away from home and family, finds that rest is not possible unless his bones are returned home. He can wander at will to observe those he has left behind, but he can only communicate with them through their dreams. Passive though much of his performance has to be, Diogo Infante gives Manuel a real sense of need, while Maria D'Aires is entirely convincing as Julia, his Portuguese sister drawn to Holland on a curious journey. Helped along by Jack Wouterse, portraying an unlikely object of romance, she manages to make the shy, disappointed woman's flowering into attractive fulfillment seem an individual experience, not a tired cliche. The natural contrasts between countries and cultures need no additional artifice to provide a suitable backdrop for a film about the external and internal boundaries that can be broken down and those that need to be honored just as they stand.—Bridget Byrne

NEROLIO ★★★

Starring Marco Cavicchioli and Vincenzo Crivello. Directed and written by Aurelio Grimaldi. Produced by Giancarlo Lourenzi and Ettore Mancini. No distributor set. Drama. Italian-language; subtitled. Running time: 85 min.

Marco Cavicchioli's performance as a rejected literatus seeking unattainable love gives "Nerolio" the compassion necessary to raise it above the pitfall of being seen merely as a fictionalized semi-biographical study of the murky fate of the controversial Italian director Pier Paolo Pasolini. Without in any way seeking to give a performance that asks to be liked, Cavicchioli renders vividly the dilemma of a man tortured by his inability to be lovable. His plain face at once scrunched up with hidden horrors and laid bare with needy desires, Cavicchioli makes it possible to watch things that would in reality be better left unexposed.

Aurelio Grimaldi's intimate black-and-white movie follows the defiantly angry man through his last grasps at love with a number of young men, both casual pick-ups and, more hopefully but ultimately equally disastrously, a would-be author posing as a student writing a thesis. With a nonartificial sense of documentation, Grimaldi shows the objects of the poet's desire in a way that is at once both uncomfortably prurient and exquisitely adoring, capturing exactly the emotion reflected in Cavicchioli's eyes as he hopes for more both physically and emotionally than he is ever going to get—except, of course, at the end. But equally telling are the scenes of an awkwardly mundane domesticity in the home he shares with his aged mother, weighed down with her own silent disappointment about life's unfilled tease of happiness.

The sense of how fleeting everything is, including even obsessive feelings, is pointed up by the movement of the film as it follows the poet into the dark edges of a hypocritical world. It finds wayward beauty in the deserted outskirts of suburbia just as the poet finds unsatisfied bliss in the young men he desires.—Bridget Byrne

BAD BOY BUBBY ★★

Starring Nicholas Hope, Claire Benito and Ralph Cotterill. Directed and written by Rolf de Heer. Produced by Domenico Procacci, Rolf de Heer and Giorgio Draskovic. A Bubby Pty. Ltd. production; no distributor set. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 114 min.

Sometimes, well-made films are hard to watch, and the 1993 Australian independent film "Bad Boy Bubby" is a perfect example. It's tony, gruesomely realistic and as engrossing as a car accident, but it's a tough haul for the average Saturday-night moviegoer. Indie film aficionados and fans of the avant-garde will probably enjoy its bleak, film-noir universe and its slow but thorough evolution of character. But the drifting plot and claustrophobic setting might make a lot of others squirm.

Bubby is 35 years old and, apparently, has never left the shabby and windowless one-room apartment where he lives in uneasy truce with his plump, aging, salvation-happy mother. With his stunted mind and haunted scarecrow appearance, Bubby has been convinced by mom (who never leaves the place without a gas mask) that the toxic air of the outside world will kill him if he leaves. So his entire life is spent toying with cockroaches, tormenting his cat, eating gruel, and lying back passively as his mother uses him for sexual pleasure. It isn't until one day when his long-lost father, a lowlife priest, rearrives that his life begins to change. Not that his crusty old man has much more concern for dim-bulb Bubby than his mother does; it's only when Bubby inadvertently kills them both by enveloping their heads in plastic wrap (to see if they can breathe) that he dares venture into the world, wandering dumbly in and out of one strange situation after another.

PROJECTION & SOUND EQUIPMENT NEW & USED

McRAE
THEATRE EQUIPMENT

Consulting • Sales • Installation • Service
Parts • Rentals • Representing Major Manufacturers

6975 176th Ave. NE, Suite 360
Redmond, WA 98052

Phone: (206) 885-6231
Fax: (206) 885-4881

Response No. 108

ATTENTION THEATER OWNERS!

Announcing the first video tape of the THEATER PERSONNEL TRAINING SERIES:
"Film Build-up & Break-down"

At last, a video tape series to help you; the Theater Owner or Manager, train your employees quickly and efficiently!

The first training tape of the series covers:
- Film handling
- Film splicing
- Film build-up onto platters
- Film break-down
- End of run handling

USE THIS VIDEO TO:
- Increase employee productivity
- Maintain film image quality throughout the run of the film
- Decrease scratches and breaks
- Reduce customer complaints

EASY-TO-FOLLOW DIRECTIONS CUT VALUABLE TRAINING TIME

Creative Images video productions

Only $39.95 plus $3.50 postage & handling

Send check or money order to:
Creative Images
3205 Inspiration Drive
Weatherford, TX 76087
(800) 416-0115

or charge to your Visa or MasterCard

Allow 2 weeks for delivery — Money-Back Guarantee

Response No. 134

FESTIVAL REVIEWS

"Bad Boy Bubby" is an equally drifting affair. It doesn't have much sense of direction or much of a point beyond the portrayal of a seriously abused young man. Yet director Rolf de Heer has a way of making us want to watch this strange story despite our every instinct to turn away. The movie isn't juiced-up with an evocative score or other device that might render it a more traditional fictional film; it occasionally looks almost like a documentary, having that kind of honesty and realism about it. But it also might make moviegoers wonder why they're watching this odd creature and his seemingly dead-end tale when there is, on the face of it, little appealing about him or his story. The answer is that Bubby exerts that perverse fascination because anything is possible at any moment. But filmgoers will have to be in the right mood, and be of the right constitution, to endure this skillful if eerie experience.—Thomas Quinn

SWEET ANGEL MINE 1/2

Starring Oliver Milburn, Margaret Langrick, Alberta Watson and Anna Massey. Directed by Curtis Radclyffe. Written by Sue Mahen and Tim Willocks. Produced by Sam Taylor and Christopher Zimmer. No distributor set. Horror. Not yet rated. Running time: 88 min.

For a few minutes, because of the beauty of the scenery and competence of the players, it seems possible "Sweet Angel Mine" will have something to say. Not so. This movie swiftly reveals itself as another distasteful slice of standard horror, built around sexual malice and incestuous murder.

Oliver Milburn makes the best of his part as a stranger on a motorbike who finds himself ensnared by a trio of unbalanced women living in backwoods isolation on an island off Nova Scotia. He projects enough suitable cockiness to suggest why he hangs around longer than is clearly safe, but still nothing saves the plot from stepping into the old cliches that pave the path of most traditional things-that-go-bump-in-the-night terror flicks. The three women passing their nasty little secret through three generations are played with suitably different levels of decay. Margaret Langrick tries to maintain credibility as the traumatized adolescent, while Alberta Watson ("Spanking the Monkey") can rely on her sexy, bruised beauty as a hemmed-in mother, and Anna Massey can just go for broke as a spooky grandmother.—Bridget Byrne

DEACON BRODIE ★★

Starring Billy Connolly and Catherine McCormack. Directed by Philip Saville. Written by Simon Donald. Produced by Greg Brenman. No distributor set. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 91 min.

It's easy to see why the Scottish comedian Billy Connolly considered the title role of "Deacon Brodie" a rich opportunity to strut his stuff in an unexpected way but, unfortunately, this character study fails to resonate as much beyond a curious aside. It's a respectable attempt at depicting in an affectionate and sympathetic manner a disreputable man, but its fondness for its hero seems sorely misplaced.

Convincingly set in 1788 Edinburgh, the story holds relevance for the modern age, but Simon Donald's screenplay takes a confused path through the narrative, destroying most elements of surprise and bringing a numbing ambiguity to feelings for the central characters. Brodie's slippery slide—from town worthy, master cabinet maker and city councilor to a bankrupt criminal sentenced to swing on a gibbet of his own design—is too early understood, and no ironic twist ending can restore excitement. A need to be liked holds sway so that the gallows humor, literal at times, is underplayed, while the truly dark twists and turns are skirted uneasily.

All the cast, under Philip Saville's vigorous direction, are at ease with their roles, often offering more than the screenplay hands them. The ambience of 18th-century life is captured without need for lingering on period objects, and the costumes by Caroline Harris give a realistic sense of the discomforts of going around in periwigs and ruffles and provocative decolletage. Gracing this era of the ultimate wonderbra is Catherine McCormack ("Braveheart"), as the whore who loves the anti-hero hero and, occasionally, vice versa. Her role is thankless, but she offers not just beauty but also touching moments, which give Connolly more chance to expose Brodie's complexity than he finds elsewhere.—Bridget Byrne

THE BRUCE ★1/2

Starring Sandy Welsh, Brian Blessed and Oliver Reed. Directed and produced by Bob Carruthers and David McWhinnie. Written by Bob Carruthers and Michael Leighton. A Cromwell production; no U.S. distributor set. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 110 min.

Hoping, perhaps, to capitalize on the popularity and success of last year's "Braveheart," which chronicled the adventures of Scottish patriot William Wallace, "The Bruce" looks at the succeeding chapter in Scottish history: the tale of Robert Bruce, who defeated the armies of England's King Edward I and won independence for Scotland. Amateurishly staged and without the financial resources of the Oscar winner, "The Bruce" pales by comparison, failing to generate any of the excitement or romance of Mel Gibson's spectacular "Hollywood" film.

American audiences, unfamiliar with Isles history, might have trouble following the story, but the bigger problem is how lightweight the whole enterprise feels. Battle sequences and crowd scenes in particular suffer from schooldays staging, unconvincing extras and a general air of inauthenticity. Background music is far too prominent, nor does the acting raise the level of the film. Although comparisons might seem unfair, Sandy Welsh in the lead lacks the charisma of a Gibson, Dee Hepburn proves far too contemporary as Bruce's wife, and Brian Blessed makes for an overly mannered Edward I.—Jean Oppenheimer

KIDS RETURN ★★1/2

Starring Masanobu Ando and Ken Kaneko. Directed and written by Takeshi Kitano. Produced by Masayuki Mori, Yasushi Tsuge and Takio Yoshida. No distributor set. Drama. Japanese-language; subtitled. Not yet rated. Run time: 106 min.

In "Kids Return," Takeshi Kitano has created a depiction of modern youth that steps beyond its specific culture to pick up on many universal truths about young people in an interlinked world. Although not as alienated from mainstream society as the drug-addicted dropouts shown in the Scottish film "Trainspotting," the characters in this film also are shown to be affected by the struggle of the young to feel a sense of worth and individuality in a world that sells conformity and success, but often at the expense of moral values.

Using almost throwaway humor and a sense of prevailing sadness, Kitano follows emotionally deprived young men as they fail to find their dreams, revealing the way they are trapped once again in worlds full of discipline but not morality or kindness. Against a backdrop of shabby modern decor and unspontaneous pleasure, the youths move in joyless limbo. Their only hope of happiness seems to lie in true friendship. Not a bad point of view to take away from a film about apparent no-hopers.—Bridget Byrne

MONTREAL

RIVER STREET ★★★★

Starring Aden Young, Bill Hunter and Essie Davis. Directed by Tony Mahood. Written by Philip Ryall. Produced by Lynda House. A House and Moorhouse production; no distributor set. Comedy. Not yet rated. Running time: 89 min.

It would be hard to heap too many accolades on Tony Mahood's "River Street," a delicious Australian romp that works as film noir, comedy and parable alike. Juxtaposing humor and fatalism, this fable of an avaricious real estate agent who's taught the lesson of a lifetime is a rare gem. Inviting comparisons to "Muriel's Wedding," with which it shares its producers, "River Street" manages to be terrifically funny and earnestly touching at the same time.

As Ben, the smooth-talking agent on the make, Aden Young is so slick he makes Johnnie Cochran look like a naif. Ben seems to have it all: a comfortable income, a relationship with his boss's daughter, a life of luxury. But, when Ben accidentally breaks the window of his own Mercedes and the police mistakenly arrest him, a series of mishaps forces him to reevaluate his life.

After assaulting the cops, Ben finds himself sentenced to a volunteer term at the local community center. There, its lovely young director, Wendy (Essie Davis), begins to enlighten—and attract—him. When Ben discovers that the center sits on a valuable strip of riverfront property, he initiates a real estate swindle to please his cutthroat boss (Bill Hunter, so memorable in "Muriel's Wedding" and "Strictly Ballroom"). Torn between duty to his boss and responsibility to Wendy and the center, Ben makes the biggest decision of his life.

Everything is top notch in this debut outing by Tony Mahood, who apprenticed as P.J. Hogan's assistant director on "Muriel's Wedding." Impeccably cast, intelligently written and tightly helmed, "River Street" ought to be a stateside favorite.—Lael Loewenstein

LIBERTARIAS ★★

Starring Ana Belen, Ariadna Gil and Victoria Abril. Directed by Vicente Aranda. Written by Vicente Aranda and Jose Luis Guarner. Produced by Andres Vicente Gomez. No distributor set. Drama. Spanish-language; English subtitles. Not yet rated. Running time: 125 min.

Well-crafted but simplistic, Vicente Aranda's paean to strong women should attract the same audiences that went for the equally sentimental and didactic "Antonia's Line." Taking place in 1936 during the Spanish Civil War, "Libertarias" opens with a convent being shut down by Republican soldiers. Instead of going home, one of the nuns, the innocent Maria ("Celestial Clockwork's" Ariadna Gil), decides instead to hook up with a feminist brigade called The Free Women, who are intent on fighting on the frontlines against Franco's fascists. She finds love, freedom and tragedy in the process.

Director/co-writer Aranda ("Lovers") does get at the immediacy of war and its frequent absurdities, but his take on the obstacles women faced during that time is obvious. All of his women, including Ana Belen as a lesbian soldier and Victoria Abril ("French Twist") as a hot-blooded widow, are strong and positive figures; all of the men are either villainous or ineffectual. Aranda should have offered a more complex view of the war's gender battles.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

THE DESTINY OF MARTY FINE ★

Starring Alan Gelfant, Catherine Keener and James LeGros. Directed by Michael Hacker. Written by Michael Hacker and Mark Ruffalo. Produced by Jeffrey Miller and Michael Hacker. No distributor set. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 85 min.

This painfully amateurish black-and-white drama about punch-drunk ex-boxer Marty Fine (Alan Gelfant) is notable only for the cameo appearances of some name actors who should have known better, including Michael Ironside as a mob boss; Catherine Keener ("Walking and Talking") as the pugilist's ex-girlfriend; and James LeGros ("My New Gun") as one of Marty's low-class acquaintances.

Gelfant gives an irritatingly one-note performance as Marty, who stubbornly and stupidly harbors hopes of becoming a boxing manager. But he's bereft of money, out of work and being pressured to commit a hit for a sleazy crime lord (Norman Fell). More "The Killing of a Chinese Bookie" than "Pulp Fiction," "The Destiny of Marty Fine" lacks Cassevetes' rigor or Tarantino's verve. It wants desperately to be the new "Death of a Salesman," with Marty as the symbol of what an uncaring America discards, but it doesn't come close to achieving that lofty goal.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

TO SPEAK THE UNSPEAKABLE—THE MESSAGE OF ELIE WIESEL ★★★

Narrated by William Hurt. Directed and written by Judit Elek. Produced by Richard-Martin Jordan, Michel Ferry, Stephane Singier and Kati Kemeny. No distributor set. Documentary. Not yet rated. Running time: 105 min.

Less a conventional biography of the Holocaust survivor/philosopher than an impressionistic account of Elie Wiesel's return to his Romanian home town of Sighetand to the site of the Auschwitz concentration camp, "To Speak the Unspeakable" brings Wiesel's incisive writing to life through William Hurt's sensitive readings.

Dedicated to making sure the horrors of the Holocaust are never forgotten, the Boston-based Nobel Peace Prize winner in 1994 went back to Romania to glean what he could of his past and to retrace the path that led from his home to the death camps. Mixing archival footage, photos of the young Wiesel and even clips from the Yiddish films that show small-town shtetl life in Europe, "To Speak the Unspeakable"—directed by Hungarian-Jewish survivor Judit Elek—succeeds in its attempt to get at the demons and dreams that guide Wiesel on his quest. It's overlong but indelible.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

SLEEPING MAN ★★

Starring Ahn Sung-ki, Christine Hakim and Koji Yakusho. Directed by Kohei Oguri. Written by Kiyoshi Kenmochi and Kohei Oguri. Produced by Hiroshi Fujikura and Munashi Masuzeka. No distributor set. Drama. Japanese-language; English subtitles. Not yet rated. Running time: 103 min. Won a Special Grand Prix of the Jury at the Montreal fest.

Carefully composed to a fault, "Sleeping Man" literally refers to that—a man who's been in a coma since a mountain-climbing accident. His parents tend to his needs, his best friend visits to ruminate about their relationship, and various villagers continue their existence while he lies unconscious at home.

In symbolic terms, Kohei Oguri's meticulous direction is meant to convey the sleeping man's influence over the lives of others, but it's more likely to put its audience to sleep. There's no tension, no differentiation among the villagers (except for an Indonesian bar girl, played by Christine Hakim, who knew the sleeping man), and precious little drama. Everything unfolds oh-so-slowly and, although Osame Maruike's cinematography is gorgeous, the film doesn't go beyond its artful imagery. "Sleeping Man" is serious cinema, but it's for those who love pretty pictures, not motion pictures.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

PUDDING CHOMEUR ★★

Starring Chloe Ste-Marie, Louis-Philippe Davignon-Daigneault and Francois Leveille. Directed and written by Gilles Carle. Produced by Claude Gagnon and Yuri Yushimura-Gagnon. An Aska Films production; no distributor set. Comedy. French-language; English subtitles. Not yet rated. Running time: 100 min.

There's a reckless insouciance to this farce by Quebecois director Gilles Carle ("Blood of the Hunter"). Nevertheless, "Pudding Chomeur"—an inexpensive meringue dessert common among Quebec's down-and-out; "chomeur" means unemployed—has too many ingredients for its own good. It follows the exploits of Yo-Yo (Chloe Ste-Marie) and her young ward Alphonse (Louis-Philippe Davignon-Daigneault), well-meaning misfits who operate a faith-healing service.

It would take more than a road map to follow the plot, however; characters come and go without reason, and events happen without motivation. At times, the burlesque tone, neon costumes and mood of general frivolity recall some of Pedro Almodovar's work. Technical aspects, including Pierre Letarte's photography, are first rate. Yet, as with a meringue, there is less here than meets the eye.—Lael Loewenstein

LULU ★

Starring Kim Lieu, Clark Johnson and Michael Rhoades. Directed by Srinivas Krishna. Written by Srinivas Krishna and Robert Armstrong. Produced by Robert Bergman and Srinivas Krishna. No distributor set. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 90 min.

Srinivas Krishna's sophomore outing doesn't have a scintilla of the wit and cutting satire of his fine 1991 debut "Masala." Moving from his own East Indian background in that film to that of his lead actress (Kim Lieu), who plays Khuyen, a Vietnamese woman, is gutsy, but Krishna doesn't back up the move.

Nominally, "Lulu" concerns itself with Khuyen, her ineffectual husband Lucky (Michael Rhoades)—who has nicknamed her Lulu—and Clive (Clark Johnson), an old pal of Lucky's who's just out of jail. As the film meanders from dull scene to even duller scene, the acting is generally atrocious, particulary Lieu in the lead; she seems to be reading her dialogue phonetically. And the whole thing is set in a Toronto where no one behaves logically or believably.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

L'ELEVE ★★

Starring Vincent Cassel, Caspar Salmon and Jean-Pierre Marielle. Directed by Olivier Schatzky. Written by Olivier Schatzky and Eve Deboise. Produced by Josee Banabent Loiseau. No distributor set. Drama. French-language; English subtitles. Not yet rated. Running time: 92 min. Won the best director prize at the Montreal fest.

Based on "The Pupil," a short story by Henry James, "L'Eleve" revolves around the warm relationship between Julien (Vincent Cassel), a neophyte tutor, and Morgan (Caspar Salmon), a precocious, sickly 11-year-old boy he is hired to teach. The two quickly grow close, but their ties are frayed by Morgan's family, whose wealth and social standing are soon revealed as pretense.

FESTIVAL REVIEWS

Although its late 19th-century French societal setting is fascinating, "L'Eleve" fails to engage the emotions. It's never apparent why Morgan takes to Julien or why Julien becomes so attached to the boy. Had the film delved more into the sad plight of Morgan's penniless parents (Jean-Pierre Marielle and Caroline Cellier) and his unmarried sisters, "L'Eleve" could have been gripping. That type of desperate social climbing, and the prejudices against aspirants to upper-class life, is what the movie should have been about. Instead, it's tepid melodrama.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

WOMEN ★★

Starring Michal Bat-Adam, Amos Lavi and Ilor Harpaz. Directed and written by Moshe Mizrahi. Produced by Michael Sharfstein and Amitan Manelzon. No distributor set. Drama. Hebrew-language; English subtitles. Not yet rated. Running time: 98 min.

The latest film from Israeli director Moshe Mizrahi ("Madame Rosa") is a static tale of religious traditions and their impact on a loving marriage in 19th-century Jerusalem. Jacob (Amos Lavi) and Rebecca (Michal Bat-Adam) have been married for more than a decade, but their union has not produced any children. That doesn't perturb Jacob—who accepts that fact as a manifestation of God's will—but Rebecca blames herself and decides on the unthinkable: finding a virginal young woman (Ilor Harpaz) who will bear her husband a child, a practice permitted by ancient Orthodox Jewish law, which mandates procreation.

Though "Women," based on the Yehuda Burla novel "Bikdusha," deals with jealousy and fierce emotions, its style is overly muted. It fails to exude atmosphere—it could have been set decades later—or tension. And the actors, though fine, have little to do.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

TORONTO

SCHIZOPOLIS ★★1/2

Starring Steven Soderbergh, Betsy Brantley and David Jensen. Directed and written by Steven Soderbergh. Produced by John Hardy. A Northern Arts release. Satire. Unrated. Running time: 96 min. Opens in April.

"Schizopolis" is Steven Soderbergh's berserk and uneven attempt to mimic Bunuel's "Un Chien Andalou"; he wants to provoke reaction but he's not quite sure how to go about it. The story—if it can be called that—is something of a comedic attack on the cult of Scientology, here labeled Eventualism and led by one T. Azimuth Schwitters (David Jensen). Soderbergh plays two characters, the put-upon Munson, who works for Schwitters, and Dr. Jeffrey Korczak, a dentist who abruptly falls in love with a patient, "Attractive Woman No. 2."

There's a lot of that type of off-kilter wordplay; "generic greeting" is used instead of "hello," and characters often speak in other languages—French, Italian, Japanese—while being answered in English. Then there's the exterminator Elmo, who has been adopted by a couple who are filming him in his own cinema verite "Clockwork Orange"-like scenarios. Does such absurdity add up to anything? Not really, but there's no denying that Soderbergh is having fun with his "home movie." Stretches are inventive and amusing, but the middle section is aimless. His "raw" technique, lines on the screen, badly lipsynched sound and no credits grow tiresome quickly.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

GRAY'S ANATOMY ★★

Starring Spalding Gray. Directed by Steven Soderbergh. Written by Spalding Gray and Renee Shafransky. Produced by John Hardy. A Northern Arts release. Documentary. Unrated. Running time: 83 min. Opens March 19.

The third feature (after "Swimming to Cambodia" and "Monster in a Box") to be based on a monologue by the versatile Spalding Gray is the least of the trio, mostly because director Steven Soderbergh ("Schizopolis") and Gray have cluttered it with extraneous detail. Once again, Gray sits at a desk and talks to an audience, in this case about an eye problem that prompted thoughts of mortality and led him on a wild goose chase to find an alternative to surgery. He has tried them all, from Christian Scientists to New Age gurus to Filipino psychic healers, and his anecdotes regarding each are hilarious.

The humor, however, onstage was matched with a touching and thoughtful meditation on life and death. But the film has lost some of that. It opens, brilliantly, with a few horrifying accounts of people who've done severe damage to their eyes, but it unnecessarily returns to them to make banal observations on Gray's various endeavors to escape the surgeon's scalpel. Any time that Gray is not onscreen generally is wasted time.

Stylistically, Soderbergh should have left well enough alone, rather than shooting Gray from behind or through screen doors or just taping his voice over backdrops. Audiences that thought Nick Broomfield's direction of "Monster in a Box" intrusive will emerge from "Gray's Anatomy" with even harsher criticism of Soderbergh. Enough of the delightful Gray wit and wisdom remain to propel the film, but with perhaps 20 minutes of the stage production here excised what's left is too glib. Whether Gray and Soderbergh wished to increase the film's commercial chances or just became carried away with camera trickery, the end result has compromised Gray's show and, by extension, his integrity.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

DEEP CRIMSON ★★★★

Starring Regina Orozco, Daniel Gimenez Cacho and Marisa Paredes. Directed by Arturo Ripstein. Written by Paz Alicia Garciadiego. Produced by Miguel Necoechea and Pablo Barbachano. A New Yorker release. Horror. Spanish-language; English subtitles. Unrated. Running time: 114 min. Opens in June.

This lively and daring satirical horror/romance, set in Mexico, concerns a suave womanizing philanderer, Nicholas (Daniel Gimenez Cacho), who seduces Coral (Regina Orozco), a lonely, overweight mother. Coral's insatiable desire to be with him leads her to abandon her home, livelihood and children. It also leads her to become his confederate, obtaining women for him, which ultimately takes them on a bloody rampage.

In this story reminiscent of the famous killing spree of Martha Beck and Raymond Fernandez, who were executed in 1951, director Arturo Ripstein (a former assistant to director Luis Bunuel) shows some of Bunuel's talent for mixing a sacrilegious sense of humor with prankish horror. "Deep Crimson" begins as a clever comedy about a Don Juan who's met a woman whose desires are more voracious than his. But the humor deepens darkly when their game of seducing women and robbing them becomes part of what binds their love, making "Deep Crimson" a smartly funny film about the debasement of romance.—Kevin Courrier

FETISHES ★★★

Directed by Nick Broomfield. Produced by Michele D'Acosta and Nick Broomfield. A Cinema Village release. Documentary. Unrated. Running time: 83 min. Opens in April.

A distinct change of pace for British documentarian Nick Broomfield ("Heidi Fleiss: Hollywood Madam"), "Fetishes" is less journalistic expose and more travelogue, albeit a distinctly kinky one. Exploring the dynamics of Pandora's Box, a sadomasochistic Manhattan haven run by leather-clad dominatrices, "Fetishes" generally succeeds in getting at the real stories of the people who work at and frequent the place.

The clients are thoughtful and sometimes very sad. With a modicum of archival footage and some explanatory information on the different disciplines—e.g., infantilism, rubber wear—"Fetishes" benefits tremendously from the candidness of its subjects, more willing than most Broomfield interviewees to speak out on camera. Wisely, and atypically, he's let them talk and stayed out of the picture.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

VISITING DESIRE ★★

Starring Lydia Lunch, Kembra Pfahler and Chloe Dzubilo. Directed and produced by Beth B. A B Prods. release. Documentary. Unrated. Running time: 70 min.

In April 1996, filmmaker Beth B ("Two Small Bodies") invited a select and diverse group of people to a New York hotel room for the express purpose of acting out their fantasies on camera. It's an irresistible concept, but "Visiting Desire" doesn't live up to its theme. Despite opening with a group of psychologists discussing the ramifications of fulfilling one's fantasies, the movie's subjects—including punk performer Lunch, a drag queen, some bisexual women and a skinhead—are as likely to discuss feelings and reactions than do anything concrete involving their purported desires.

That makes for pretty boring cinema verite, especially as a good many of the participants in "Visiting Desire" have little insight into their inner workings. Those fantasies that are carried out are quite mundane; mild domination and masturbatory acts predominate. The film has a few genuine, touching moments, but far too many of them seem staged.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

illtown ★1/2

Starring Michael Rapaport, Lili Taylor, Kevin Corrigan, Isaac Hayes and Tony Danza. Directed and written by Nick Gomez. Produced by David L. Bushell, Larry Meistrich and Donald C. Carter. No distributor set. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 97 min.

Nick Gomez, acclaimed for both "Laws of Gravity" and "New Jersey Drive" by critics citing a new talent on the rise, has really come a cropper on "illtown." This couldn't-be-more-appropriately-titled tale of drugs and vendettas is told in such a languid style, with such an emphasis on spiritual anomie and heroin-induced nodding, that the audience is in danger of nodding out. To get the idea, try to imagine Antonioni directing a Tarantino script.

Michael Rapaport ("Metro") plays veteran drug-dealer Dante, whose inferno consists of wanting to have a baby with his girlfriend Mickey ("I Shot Andy Warhol's" Lili Taylor), but the business—being what it is—has sucked him in with its violent ways. Matters become complicated when a betrayed former business partner returns with the heart of an avenging angel. His name (naturally) is Gabriel. "illtown" flies a lot of metaphoric flags, but never once finds a flagpole.—Kevin Courrier

TROJAN EDDIE ★★

Starring Stephen Rea, Richard Harris and Sean McGinley. Directed by Gillies Mackinnon. Written by Billy Roche. Produced by Emma Burge, Rod Stoneman, Alan J. Wands, Kevin Menton and Nigel Warren-Green. No distributor set. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 105 min.

The title might suggest a comedy about a new line of condoms, but there's no contraception yet invented that keeps moviegoers safe from films like this. "Trojan Eddie" is a tale of blarney about an Irish dupe, Eddie ("Michael Collins'" Stephen Rea), who has the gift of gab for selling household items in makeshift auctions; but, ironically, he doesn't have a pitch worthy enough to prevent his wife from bed-hopping or to convince his girlfriend that he loves her. He's also the stooge for the local "Godfather," John Power (Richard Harris), who has everything that Eddie can only dream of owning. When Eddie's assistant runs off with Power's treasured young bride, along with their dowry money, Eddie is caught between a rock and a hard place as to where to place his loyalties.

For "Trojan Eddie" to work well, Eddie's inventiveness as a carny auctioneer should be the motor of the movie, but with the moping Rea in the role the story grinds to a halt. Rea doesn't have the high spirit of a huckster; he's heavy-spirited and thus ineffectual, and that puts the movie in a blue funk. Harris doesn't summon much life, either; audiences are supposed to believe that the young woman he wishes to wed reminds him of his late wife, yet nothing on his face registers the euphoric bliss of a man recreating his desire for a lost love—his bliss is more like a drunken haze.

Gillies Mackinnon ("Small Faces") directs the film in such a nonchalant and perfunctory manner that one can't even register why Eddie lets his ex-wife back to live with the children. (She doesn't even bother to say hello to them.) "Trojan Eddie" not only doesn't do magic, it barely knows how to do reality.—Kevin Courrier

NENETTE ET BONI ★★★

Starring Gregoire Colin and Valeria Bruni-Tedeschi. Directed by Claire Denis. Written by Claire Denis and Jean-Pol Fargeau. Produced by Georges Benayoun and Francoise Guglielmi. No distributor set. Drama. French-language; English subtitles. Not yet rated. Running time: 103 min.

Claire Denis' fluid and lyrical style of storytelling in "Nenette et Boni" (which won the Golden Leopard best picture award at the Locarno fest) has an enrapturing quality. It takes audiences so far into the inner dynamics of a brother and sister, who have reunited for the first time in years, that they can practically read the duo's thoughts in the sway of their bodies. There's not much exposition, but the mere suggestiveness of the moviemaking makes one feel as thought caught in a strangely erotic dream.

Boni (Gregoire Colin) is a 19-year-old who works in a pizzeria in Marseilles; he's had a chip on his shoulder since his mother's death and his hated father's disappearance. But that chip proves as brittle as a pizza crust; it begins to crack when his 15-year-old sister, Nenette (Valeria Bruni-Tedeschi), escapes from boarding school to visit him when she becomes pregnant. Her arrival also stirs up the specter of their father, who re-enters both of their lives.

Colin gives a subtle performance of some skill, because he doesn't have many lines. Bruni-Tedeschi provides an unsentimental turn that never appeals for sympathy. (Both actors won Silver Leopard best acting prizes at the Locarno Film Festival.) Alice Houri and Vincent Gallo are fine as a loving couple who run a bakery. (Boni has violently erotic fantasies toward the baker's wife he never acts on.) Although the script sometimes wobbles a bit, and certain key plot developments are left vague, "Nenette et Boni" is an otherwise absorbing film that hefts quite an emotional kick.—Kevin Courrier

THE LEADING MAN ★★★

Starring Jon Bon Jovi, Lambert Wilson, Thandie Newton and Anna Galiena. Directed by John Duigan. Written by Virginia Duigan. Produced by Bertil Ohlsson and Paul Raphael. A Legacy release. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 100 min. Opens in '97.

In this clever tale of infidelity and seduction among London's theatre world, Lambert Wilson plays Felix Webb, a hot playwright who's having an affair with ingenue Hilary ("Jefferson in Paris'" Thandie Newton) while his jealous Italian wife Elena ("The Hairdresser's Husband's" Anna Galiena) fumes at home. A chance conversation with Robin Grange ("Moonlight & Valentino's" Jon Bon Jovi), the Brad Pitt-like American star of his play, gives Webb an idea. If the actor will seduce his wife, the pressure will be off Webb to make any immediate marital decision. The Yank agrees, for a price, but his motives are suspect, perhaps even malevolent.

"The Leading Man" sounds like a castoff Tom Stoppard farce, but it unfolds considerably better. Director John Duigan ("The Journey of August King") and writer Virginia Duigan take the time to tweak the usual thespian insecurities, superstitions and penchant for gossiping, but paying reverential tribute to the ideal of the theatre is not their cup of tea. There's a nasty undertone to "The Leading Man," which unsparingly documents the devious games that lovers and friends can play. None of it, though, would work without Bon Jovi at its center; the musician-turned-actor has genuine presence and charm. "The Leading Man" is occasionally heavy handed and it's not always persuasive—Webb's play doesn't seem to be as brilliant as everyone in the movie says it is—but it's fresh and unpredictable. And it's a movie that audiences won't figure out before the final credits.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

MARIAN ★

Starring Stefan Ferko, Milan Cifra and Tereza Zajickova. Directed by Petr Vaclav. Written by Petr Vaclav and Jan Sikl. Produced by Kristina Petrova and Petr Vaclav. No distributor set. Drama. Czech-language; English subtitles. Not yet rated. Running time: 109 min.

Petr Vaclav's feature debut, which won a Silver Leopard at the Locarno fest, is a humanistic attempt to show how an abandoned gypsy boy, incarcerated since age 3, grows up to be a criminal because the institutionalized violence and abuse to which he's subjected corrupts his wild spirit and destroys his gypsy heritage. Vaclav might have good intentions but, unfortunately, that doesn't make "Marian" a worthy successor to Truffaut's "The 400 Blows." Vaclav lurches from one scene to the next without giving the material (or the characters) dramatic shape or clarity. The film becomes so unimpressionable that, when one character turns up dead, a moviegoer is likely to forget who he was when he was alive.—Kevin Courrier

BOXOFFICE REVIEWS

April 1997

DONNIE BRASCO ★★★

Starring Al Pacino, Johnny Depp and Anne Heche. Directed by Mike Newell. Written by Paul Attanasio. Produced by Mark Johnson, Barry Levinson, Louis DiGiaimo and Gail Mutrux. A TriStar release. Drama. Rated R for some strong graphic violence, pervasive strong language and brief nudity and sexuality. Running time: 121 min.

When Lefty Ruggiero (Al Pacino), a sad-sack minor-league mobster, gets time away from his kiss-ass duties to the wiseguys, he likes to slump in his lounger watching nature movies—the kind in which beast eats beast. We get the picture, but the wild animals on Lefty's TV screen are on the whole a prettier bunch than the gangsters who make up his particular rat pack—or they were before agent Joseph D. Pistone, aka Donnie Brasco (a sweet-faced Johnny Depp), came along. We can forgive the wild animals their natural habits, but it's hard to develop any sympathy for the film's nastily manipulative humans, despite the best efforts of all involved in this newest slant on the mean-streets crowd (based on the real-life experiences of Pistone, who moled his way into the mob).

Johnny Depp and Al Pacino in TriStar's "Donnie Brasco."

Like its title character, a man who became a criminal in order to nab the bad guys, the latest from director Mike Newell ("Four Weddings and a Funeral") wants it both ways. It tries to get moviegoers hooked but is a bit too cool to do so. It wants you to be sucker-punched yet keep your reason. It expertly recreates scenes of late 1970s New York and Florida yet, careful not to seem time warped, it somehow downplays period detail, despite a proliferation of pointed shirt collars. It's kind of grim, yet full of unkind humor that is nevertheless funny. It's gruesome and violent but more interested in motivation than action; at times, it's almost turgid as it dwells on character at the expense of all else.

Like its protagonist, "Donnie Brasco" doesn't really know where its heart lies. It's not sure about what really counts and so ultimately it doesn't much matter in the vast schemes of things. Pacino, his face now almost the perfect mask of comedy and tragedy, clearly relishes this chance to be scuzzy, but he lets rip only now and then. Stuck with portraying a man who must keep his true feelings undercover, Depp is convincing but not as fascinating as he usually is; the script denies his character full-bodied complexity. Together onscreen, these two naturally compelling actors are fine, but their pairing is just missing some je ne sais quoi, so this Mandalay production seems to be conjuring tricks rather than real magic, a key flaw in a film that pins its best hopes of uniqueness on the characters' cross-generational, cross-wired relationship. Anne Heche ("Walking and Talking") does her best with a long-suffering wife role, and seasoned faces like Bruno Kirby, James Russo and Michael Madsen strut their stuff with comfortable ease as various levels of evildoer.—Bridget Byrne

ROSEWOOD ★★★

Starring Jon Voight, Ving Rhames, Don Cheadle, Esther Rolle and Michael Rooker. Directed by John Singleton. Written by Gregory Poirier. Produced by Jon Peters. A Warner release. Drama. Rated R for violence and some sexuality. Running time: 140 min.

John Singleton's newest release examines an appalling slice of American history, an actual incident everyone would rather forget or deny. In his fourth film, Singleton ("Higher Learning") tells the story of Rosewood, a flourishing black town in central Florida, which in 1923 was burned to the ground by whites in a neighboring burg. Fueled by a white woman's fabricated story that she was raped by a black stranger, a mob declares war on an unsuspecting community.

There are drawbacks the audience must endure in this film, one being the monotone drawl of Ving Rhames ("Striptease") in his portrayal of Mann, a World War I veteran passing through. Although Rhames' acting style added character depth to his earlier performance as a menacing mobster in "Pulp Fiction," it staggers the pace in this film. The lone good white man, John Wright ("Midnight Cowboy's" John Voight), jumps back and forth between what is right and what is expected of him. Ultimately, he comes off as a wishy-washy Schindler, only to save the day at the film's end. Another exasperating character is Sheriff Walker ("The Trigger Effect's" Michael Rooker). Screaming his lines throughout the film, the sheriff is a first-hand witness to all the bloodshed, knowing all along the assaulted female is lying; yet he stands idly by as the horrific events occur.

Despite these problems, and despite a plot that's mired with inconsistencies, the film's story is so powerful that the whole proves nothing less than engrossing. Comparisons to today's society can't help but be made while watching "Rosewood"; although moviegoers might wish to leave the theatre thinking we are living in a better time, they might not be able to. This New Regency production is meant to be a rallying cry, calling attention to the unthinkable acts of which people are capable, and which should not be forgotten.—Jose Martinez

COSI ★★★

Starring Ben Mendelsohn, Barry Otto, Toni Collette, Rachel Griffiths and Aden Young. Directed by Mark Joffe. Written by Louis Nowra. Produced by Richard Brennan and Timothy White. A Miramax release. Comedy. Not yet rated. Running time: 101 min.

It understandably takes a while to enter the spirit of this Australian comedy about a production of Mozart's "Cosi fan tutte" put on by the patients of an insane asylum. To the filmmakers' credit, rather than take the easy way out by making the inmates simply endearingly wacky, they allow the audience to recognize that these people have serious problems that aren't at all funny. But this dose of reality does make it difficult to laugh at the proceedings; conversely, the somber side is never lingered on long enough to produce significant pathos. Nevertheless, as the opera's seemingly impossible production begins to take form, the movie audience is eventually able to warm to these characters, who flourish after being given an outlet for their previously untapped enthusiasm and creativity.

The perennially out-of-work and wannabe-director Lewis ("The Efficiency Expert's" Ben Mendelsohn) thinks he's gotten a break when he's given charge of this motley Mozart. But, of course, he gets more than he's bargained for when he finds that his cast is comprised of a frenetically bossy and overzealous operetta-lover; a vain, grating, obnoxious crone who makes unwelcome overtures; a withdrawn, broken-hearted woman with suicidal tendencies; an introverted heroine junkie; and an antagonistic pyromaniac. Lewis also has to deal with his girlfriend Lucy ("Jude's" Rachel Griffiths), who is none too pleased with the amount of time he's putting into his work; he also fears that his best friend ("Hotel de Love's" Aden Young) might be comforting Lucy a little too much. Lewis soon sees that the production he is putting on, which is about testing women's fidelity, might be paralleling his own life. On top of this, Lewis must fight the romantic feelings he has toward Julie ("Muriel's Wedding's" Toni Collette), a recovering addict and the only true talent in his troupe; she has the proverbial voice of an angel and her quirky, warm personality is an enticing change from no-nonsense Lucy. Performances all around are good, but the construct isn't really light enough for comedy, nor dark enough for black humor, leaving audiences just a little ambivalent.—Christine James

DANGEROUS GROUND ★★1/2

Starring Ice Cube and Elizabeth Hurley. Directed by Darrell James Roodt. Written by Greg Latter and Roodt. Produced by Gillian Gorfil and Darrell James Roodt. A New Line release. Drama. Rated R for strong violence, drug use and language, and for some nudity. Running time: 92 min.

Despite its laconic leading man, "Dangerous Ground" zips along in the confidently stylish hands of South African director and co-writer Darrell James Roodt ("Cry, the Beloved Country"). Sporting over-the-top irony mixed with heavy-handed indignation, this action/adventure rap is about an African returning to his roots after growing up in America's Oakland.

Ice Cube, chunky but self-assured as the reluctant visitor named Vusi who is transformed into an action hero, brings an odd but not unappealing casualness to his role as the homecomer who finds mean streets and drug cultures have no boundaries. Journeying first to his village birthplace to honor his dead father, he finds little to relate to in the local tribal customs and can no longer understand the ways and language of his elders or even his dutiful but angry middle sibling. But his American slang, style and humor is also out of kilter with the city streets of Johannesburg where, in search of his missing younger brother, he finds a newly liberated, post-apartheid society running too hard in the fast lane in the wrong direction.

Ice Cube and Elizabeth Hurley in New Line's "Dangeraus Ground."

Despite dialogue that's often too explicit, both literally and figuratively, the film speeds along an awkward path between conventional hardball slash-and-crash and acute insight into an emerging culture—but at least it speeds boldly. Roodt finds excellent visuals in both the rural and urban landscapes of his native land and draws striking performances from his international cast, which includes England's Eli- zabeth Hurley ("Passenger 57") as the lost brother's strung-out lady and Harlem-born Ving Rhames ("Striptease") as an evil Nigerian drug lord, as well as Ethiopian Sechaba Morajele and South African Eric Miyeni as Visu's siblings. But, essentially, though the film mixes up its visuals and booms over its score with real attitude, it is just another example of violence prevailing over all else.—Bridget Byrne

FOOLS RUSH IN ★★★

Starring Matthew Perry, Salma Hayek, Jon Tenney and Jill Clayburgh. Directed by Andy Tennant. Written by Katherine Reback and Joan Taylor. Produced by Doug Draizin. A Columbia release. Romantic comedy. Rated PG-13 for sensuality and brief language. Running time: 106 min.

The title "Fools Rush In" offers reviewers an almost irresistible chance to trash an honorable attempt at romantic comedy. Although it's true that brainless fans of TV "Friends" star Matthew Perry might be the only ones rushing to see this film, it has some moments of genuine feeling that other audiences would also enjoy.

PREVIOUSLY REVIEWED MARCH/APRIL RELEASES

In light of our continuing commitment to bring you reviews as early as possible, we now provide a reader guide to upcoming releases we've already critiqued. The alphabetical list below notes the issue of BOXOFFICE in which the review appeared, gives its star rating, and provides updated distributor and release date information.

"All Over Me" ★★★1/2: Fine Line, 4/25 NY/LA/SF; see Feb. 1997.
"Brassed Off" ★★★1/2: Miramax, 4/25; see March 1997.
"Crash" ★★: Fine Line, 3/21; see July 1996.
"Daytrippers" ★★★1/2: CFP, 3/7 exp; see Aug. 1996.
"Drunks" ★1/2: Northern Arts, 3/14 NY; see Dec. 1996.
"Female Perversions" ★★: October, 3/28 NY/LA; see Nov. 1996.
"Flamenco" ★★★: New Yorker, 4/4 excl; see Nov. 1995.
"Good Luck" ★★1/2: East West, 3/7 ltd, 4/4 exp; see March 1997.
"Kama Sutra" ★★: Trimark, 3/7 ltd; see Jan. 1997.
"Love and Other Catastrophes" ★★★: Fox Searchlight, 3/28; Aug. 1996.
"Madame Butterfly" ★★★: Arrow, 3/1 L.A.; see Aug. 1996.
"Mon Homme" ★★★: Artificial Eye, 3/7 NY; see March 1997.
"Nothing Personal" ★★★1/2: Trimark, spring; see July 1996.
"The Quiet Room" ★★★: Fine Line, 3/21 NY, 4/18 exp; see March 1997.
"The Sadness of Sex" ★★: Tara, 3/14 L.A.; see Feb. 1997.
"Salut Cousin!" ★★★1/2: Seventh Art, March undated; see Dec. 1996.
"Sleepover" ★: Artistic License, 3/10 NY; see March 1997.
"The Van" ★★: Fox Searchlight, 3/14; see Aug. 1996.
"Without Air" ★★1/2: Phaedra, March undated; see Aug. 1996.

Perry stars as Alex, who while planning to open a Las Vegas nightclub for his firm has a one-night stand with the Mexican-born Isabelle ("From Dusk Till Dawn's" Salma Hayek). She vanishes after their impulsive romp but returns three months later to tell Alex she's pregnant with his baby. Alex decides to marry her, but their marriage sinks because of their dramatically different ethnic, cultural and religious backgrounds. Both of them must finally decide if they can make a fresh start.

Based on a true love story about producer Doug Draizin and his wife, co-producer Anna Maria Davis, the Katherine Reback/Joan Taylor screenplay is chockful of needless stereotypes involving Isabelle's huge Hispanic family and Alex's WASP parents. Isabelle is portrayed as the classic Latin spitfire, bewitching Alex with her uninhibited dancing as she cooks in the kitchen. When she gets mad, she screams at him in rapid Spanish. Meanwhile, Alex's parents—whose conservative outfits shout "preppy"—turn up their Presbyterian noses at Isabelle's Catholicism.

Despite these cliches, Alex and Isabelle's relationship becomes more interesting as the movie goes along, and becomes particularly poignant when they split up. Perry makes a credible everyman, but he's oddly sexless in the lead. Hayek dominates the screen in one of the more commanding women's roles audiences are likely to see. Isabelle more than shares the action with Alex, which is the key to satisfying screen romance. (One hopes other filmmakers will note Hayek's talent and use her in roles for which ethnicity is irrelevant.) Jill Clayburgh is the funniest supporting performer, bringing a droll wit to her brief part as Perry's mom. Ultimately, this is a pleasant date movie that succeeds more with romance than comedy, although there are a few visuals that offer a chuckle at—naturally—Las Vegas' expense.—Carole Glines

DAY AND DATE: APRIL

BROKEN ENGLISH ★★★

Starring Rade Serbedzija, Aleksandra Vujcic and Julian Arahanga. Directed by Gregor Nicholas. Written by Gregor Nicholas, Johanna Pigott and Jim Salter. Produced by Robin Scholes. A Sony Classics release. Drama. Rated NC-17 for explicit sexuality (being appealed). Running time: 91 min. Opens in April.

Given its Romeo and Juliet plotting and the NC-17 question, moviegoers might expect this New Zealand film's "broken english" to consist of moans and exaltations. Instead, it refers to the second language spoken by the film's three main characters: a sultry Croatian immigrant, Nina (newcomer Aleksandra Vujcic); her angry and domineering father, Ivan ("Before the Rain's" Rade Serbedzija); and the robust Eddie ("Once Were Warriors'" Julian Arahanga), a Maori local who falls in love with Nina and over whom daughter and dad come to savage contretemps.

Aleksandra Vujcic stars in Sony Classics' "Braken English."

The setting is exotic, but the story is familiar: Disadvantaged natives and poor newcomers strike up conflict over the little that they have. And that conflict here is almost offputtingly real: "Broken English" doesn't take a comfortable dad-will-be-won-over approach. Ivan's idea of settling a debate is to wield a baseball bat (as he does with Eddie) or hold someone under a violent form of house arrest (as he does with Nina). Although the movie indicates the reason for the Croat's fury is the deadly treatment of his people in the much-missed homeland he had to flee (Ivan watches tapes of atrocities as he drinks beer), ultimately Serbedzija's character proves to be just as racist as the Serbs.

That truncates the film's effectiveness as political oratory, making that distant-carnage element almost unnecessary, and the father's rage burns out of audiences whatever feeling of romance the lusty assignations of Eddie and Nina engender. Not "Romeo and Juliet," not "Before the Rain," not "Once Were Warriors," although there are elements of each, in the end what "Broken English" becomes is a Down Under "Ghosts of Mississippi": a look into a heart of darkness. As such, the Communicado/Village Roadshow production leaves audiences speaking their own broken english: "yipes."—Kim Williamson

THE BEAUTICIAN AND THE BEAST ★★1/2

Starring Fran Drescher, Timothy Dalton and Ian McNeice. Directed by Ken Kwapis. Written by Todd Graff. Produced by Howard W. "Hawk" Koch Jr. and Todd Graff. A Paramount release. Comedy. Rated PG for some mild language and sensuality. Running time: 105 min.

A comedic remake of Margaret Landon's book "Anna and the King of Siam," which tells the true story of a proper English teacher in the 1800s and of her contentious relationship with a brash autocrat, "The Beautician and the Beast" is an update/parody that feels more like "The Sound of Music" meets TV's "The Nanny." Fran Drescher, star of that popular sitcom, transplants her Nanny persona intact into the role of the "teacher"—actually a beauty school instructor from New York, mistakenly dispatched to a tiny European country to tutor the children of an ill-reputed dictator (former Bond man Timothy Dalton). Inevitably, the sassy beautician gives Dalton's iron-fist personality a manicure.

Drescher has created a funny character, and those who haven't reached their Nanny saturation point will enjoy her antics. But the movie seems much too familiar and pat, and the one-joke twist of having a nasal-voiced, big-haired, outrageously-dressed fish-out-of-water replace the original's prim protagonist is not enough—especially when TV watchers can see a similar premise play out every week on the convenient small screen.—Christine James

THE PEST ★

Starring John Leguizamo, Jeffrey Jones and Edoardo Ballerini. Directed by Paul Miller. Written by David Bar Katz. Produced by Sid, Jon and Bill Sheinberg. A TriStar release. Comedy. Rated PG-13 for crude sexual, scatological and ethnic humor. Running time: 82 min.

Peter Sellers, Chevy Chase, Eddie Murphy and Jim Carrey are members of an elite multiple-personality-portrayal group. John Leguizamo ("Baz Luhrmann's Romeo & Juliet") is extremely talented and has what it takes to gain membership to that clan, but he hasn't found the right vehicle to gain such entre with "The Pest." Here, Leguizamo plays a con man who becomes a human target for a collector ("Ferris Bueller's Day Off's" Jeffrey Jones) who literally wants the head of a "Latinicus Spicticus" to add to his trophy case. If the con man can survive for 24 hours, however, he gets $50,000—which would come in quite handy, that being the exact amount he owes the Scottish mob. Along with staying alive, he must also keep a dinner date with his girlfriend to meet her parents.

During the course of the film, Leguizamo's character changes into a visually impaired person, a Chinese delivery boy, an African-American boyfriend and a Japanese karaoke crooner/businessman, to name but a few. His funniest bit comes as the delivery boy, who leaves his boss at the Chinese restaurant puzzling over the slang variation of Chinese he speaks. But this Latin-laced "Ace Ventura" wannabe is likely to be one of the worst films of the year. Its biggest problem: The script and Leguizamo's talents don't mesh, so the actor comes off as more offensive than funny. Also, the filmmakers don't let a good supporting cast pull their own weight; Leguizamo gets all the funny lines, even though he's not the only comedian onscreen.—Dwayne E. Leslie

DANTE'S PEAK ★★★★

Starring Pierce Brosnan and Linda Hamilton. Directed by Roger Donaldson. Written by Leslie Bohem. Produced by Gale Anne Hurd & Joseph M. Singer. A Universal release. Action/drama. Rated PG-13 for disaster-related peril and gore. Running time: 108 min.

Not since "Jurassic Park" has a movie so stunningly created, through the use of special effects, such a realistic and terrifying disaster as that of "Dante's Peak," a film about a seemingly idyllic town in the Cascades that's suddenly transformed into a fiery death pit when a long-dormant volcano springs to life. This film is intense, from beginning to end, with an edgy score that keeps you poised at the edge of your seat, anticipating the worst. However, it is a film that works well for many reasons, including its stars' portrayals of realistic characters with warmth and depth and the all-important special effects, in which the filmmakers have apparently spared no expense.

Pierce Brosnan and Linda Hamilton in Universal's "Dante's Peak."

The film stars Pierce Brosnan ("Mars Attacks!") as Harry Dalton, a U.S. Geological Survey vulcanologist who is sent to the Pacific Northwest town of Dante's Peak to explore possible seismic activity. Dalton arrives as the townspeople are celebrating a major event: having been selected as the second-best place to live in the U.S., population under 20,000. In the process, he meets town mayor Rachel Waldo ("The Terminator's" Linda Hamilton), an attractive single mother of two who becomes increasingly concerned about the safety of her beautiful little town.

As a major investor gets ready to sign a lucrative contract, promising new jobs to the townspeople, Dalton discovers alarming signs of life in the mountain that towers over the town. However, in lieu of the impending deal, skeptism prevails—even his own U.S.G.S. team and supervisor do not feel the urgency of raising an alarm. When earthquakes begin to rock the town, however, all hell breaks loose as the residents try to flee for their lives from the encroaching cloud of incandescent gases, rivers of hot lava, the hot ash that begins to rain and the cascading flood of fast-moving melted snow.

Supporting both actors are some of the most magical special effects ever created to portray natural disaster, including 3-D digital computer generated imagery complete with a 3-D lava sequence, a 3-D pyroclastic cloud, some of the largest scale-model miniatures ever built and live-action practical effect shots. Add to that the prowess of producers Gale Anne Hurd ("Aliens") and Joseph Singer ("Daylight") and terror-realm screenwriter Leslie Bohem (also "Daylight"), plus the adventure/drama talents of director Roger Donaldson ("Species"), and the result is a unified effort that succeeds creatively as well. Overall, Dante's Peak is a film that explores not just natural disaster but the human elements involved that contribute to it: the reckless nature of greed, political indifference and volatile nature of human beings when their lives are at stake.—Pat Kramer

DAY AND DATE: APRIL

A BROTHER'S KISS ★★★

Starring Justin Pierce, Nick Chinlund, Michael Raynor, Cathy Moriarty, Rosie Perez, Marisa Tomei and John Leguizamo. Directed and written by Seth Zvi Rosenfeld. Produced by Bob Potter and E. Bennet Walsh. A First Look release. Drama. Not yet rated. Running time: 92 min. Opens in April.

For his first feature, playwright Seth Zvi Rosenfeld has chosen to expand a one-act play he wrote and directed in 1989. The best parts of "A Brother's Kiss" are grounded in a filmic tradition that stretches from "Dead End" to "Boyz in the Hood"; it's a gritty, no-holds-barred look at the lives of underclass urban youth that is gripping, moving and dead-on accurate in its details.

Michael Raynor and Nick Chinlund star in First Look's "A Brother's Kiss."

Set in the East Harlem of the late '70s, the first half of the film follows the fatherless Lex ("Kids'" Justin Pierce) and his kid brother Mick (Nick Chinlund) through the lures and snares of life in a rough neighborhood. Everything about these sequences—scripting, acting, directing, production design—is superb. There is convincing horror lurking in Central Park and real, giddy joy in a ritual Friday night Scrabble game with their dressed-up, boozed-up Mom (Cathy Moriarty).

When the film fast-forwards 15 years, some of that tightness begins to unravel. Mick is now a cop, and Lex is a never-was pro basketball player getting in over his head with a wife and baby. Though there are still some fine performances and truthfully observed moments, the film as a whole ratchets down a few notches. The plot suffers from too many incidents of narrative convenience, poorly motivated action, and occasional and annoying unbelievability. Lex's downward spiral is persuasively portrayed, but the reasons given for his fall, though plausible, are never presented as sufficiently overwhelming.

Some of the problems could lie in the story's genesis as a one-act; it seems, after the skill and talent he displayed in the film's first half, that Rosenfeld was easier on himself than he should have been. That is unfortunate, because this good movie could have been a great one.—Alex Albanese

REVIEWS IN BRIEF

I WAS A JEWISH SEX WORKER ★★1/2

Directed and produced by Phillip B. Roth. A Greycat release. Documentary. Unrated. Running time: 75 min.

Originally and more accurately titled "Family / Value," Phillip B. Roth's autobiographical account of his attempt to reconcile his family and his homosexuality is a choppy, unfocused but frequently amusing semi-documentary that should attract gay audiences and open-minded straights. Beginning with Roth engaging in sex with a stranger while his answering machine plays innocuous messages in the background, "I Was a Jewish Sex Worker" revels in its contradictions.

Moviegoers certainly are unlikely to hear Yiddish tunes played over scenes of men participating in a (safe) sex orgy anywhere else. Such sequences are mildly offensive but, essentially, this is a rather conventional film that showcases Roth's past work (which has starred the likes of ex-porn star Annie Sprinkle) interspersed with his ruminations about being gay and some videotaped footage of his colorful Jewish family, notably his two aunts, who influenced him deeply. It's fun but slight.—Shlomo Schwartzberg

TROUBLESOME CREEK: A MIDWESTERN ★★★1/2

Directed, written and produced by Jeanne Jordan and Steven Ascher. An Artistic License release. Documentary. Unrated. Running time: 89 min.

"Troublesome Creek" is more than a sad documentary about a family that must auction their farm in order to pay off a bank note. It's an intimate personal tragedy. When she hears her parents' bank loan is called, filmmaker/narrator Jeanne Jordan returns to their 450-acre farm in Iowa. With her husband/filmmaker Steven Ascher, Jordan captures the turmoil her parents face as they struggle to keep the land that's been in the family for 100 years.

Though there are moments that will rip your heart out, "Troublesome Creek" isn't sentimental or melancholy. Rather, it views misfortune objectively, as part of the inevitable cycle of life and death. It's no surprise that this film is nominated for an Academy Award and won the 1996 Sundance Grand Jury Prize and Audience Award.—Lea Russo

GET OVER IT ★★

Starring Deborah Cordell and Troy Morgan. Directed, written and produced by Nick Katsapetses. A Strand release. Comedy. Unrated. Running time: 75 min.

Yet another entry in the "Gen-Xers having relationship trouble" sweepstakes, "Get Over It" is the first feature by writer/director/ producer/actor Nick Katsapetses. Although overly loose and derivative of its many predecessors, the film has moments of humor and some clever insights into its characters.

Troy Morgan is an attractive lead as a young gay man decimated when his lover gives him the heave-ho. In an attempt to cheer him up, Troy's abrasive friend Pam (Deborah Cordell, amusing and annoying at the same time) gathers his friends—many of whom promptly embark on emotional tangles of their own.

The film is nicely lensed in black-and-white, but it take a longish time to go nowhere in particular. In a cast with a sizable contingent of amateurs, Christian Canterbury stands out as a supposedly straight young man who uses the weekend to flirt with his wild side; his less-professional colleagues generally don't embarrass themselves. Though it could have used an edit and a sharper script, "Get Over It" shows promise of better things to come.—Cathy Thompson-Georges

STREET CORNER JUSTICE ★

Starring Marc Singer, Kim Lanford, Beverly Leech, "Tiny" Lister Jr., Soon-Teck Oh and Steve Railsback. Directed by Chuck Bail. Written by Stan Berowitz, Gary Kent and Chuck Bail. Produced by Jack Brown and Chuck Bail. A Sunset International release. Action. Rated R. Running time: 102 min.

When a video shows only the end of a one-sided fight, Detective Justus ("Beastmaster" Marc Singer) is accused of using excessive force and has to retire and leave town. He moves to California, where he becomes involved in his neighborhood's struggle with drugs and gangs. When his girlfriend has to be hospitalized, Justus enlists the aid of a karate-kicking prostitute and a 6'7" ex-gangbanger/born-again Christian, and the three head out to accomplish a little street justice.

The film takes entirely too long to reach the plot's heart, and all of the action occurs during the last third. "Street Corner Justice" concentrates too much on establishing the bad of the bad guys: what the gangs can do, how much they can get away with, and their negative impact on the community. By the time the heroes do something, audiences no longer care.—Dwayne E. Leslie

PREDICTIONS OF FIRE ★★

Directed and written by Michael Benson. Produced by Michael Benson and Milan Blazin. An Artistic License release. Documentary. Unrated. Running time: 95 min.

As its apocalyptic title suggests, this documentary is far from light entertainment. Shot in 16mm in the newly formed country of Slovenia (formerly part of Yugoslavia), "Predictions of Fire" chronicles the Balkan area's past through German, Italian and French occupations, two world wars and different totalitarian regimes.

Stark images of Nazism, fascism, propaganda and battle bombard the viewer throughout as writer/director Michael Benson covers historical influences. Among dark and drab newsreel footage are flashes of the artistic/political/ideological movement NSK (Neue Slowenische Kunst) and Slovenia's notorious industrial-rock band Laibach, featured in performances and interviews.

"Predictions of Fire" is complex, but also difficult to follow. With the language track alternating from English to German to Serbian, subtitles come and go; there is also a mishmash of techniques employed in filming: newsreel, animation, stock footage and live performances. But the lack of consistency and the intricate subject make viewing tedious. Described as a work about "art, politics and war," "Predictions of Fire" is actually performance art on film, making its most likely audience those with a burning interest in the Balkan troubles and culture.—Pat Kramer

THE NOVEMBER CONSPIRACY ★

Starring Paige Turco, George Segal, Elliot Gould, Dirk Benedict, Conrad Janis and Bo Hopkins. Directed by Conrad Janis. Written by Maria Grimm. Produced by Maria Janis and John Michaels. A MiraCon release. Action. Rated R. Running time: 90 min.

The sexual relationship of Jennifer Barron (Paige Turco) turns into a mystery when her lover (Dirk Benedict), a man she thought she knew, is killed while on an assassination mission. The party responsible for his death believes Barron has a disk they need. Meanwhile, everyone she tells about the disk ends up dead; only one person might save her.

The film opens promisingly, with Barron performing martial-arts moves, but they disappear for too long, not returning until wannabe villains attack her and she starts leaving corpses. Also, Barron's killings leave her oddly unaffected; the antics of the bad guys verge on parody; and a previously unstoppable chief evildoer proves too easy a mark for Barron. Lackluster TV-style action scenes fail to live up to the potential of the film's beginning.—Dwayne E. Leslie

SHADOW OF IMAGINATION ★★

Starring E. Entezami and H. Panahi. Directed by Hossein Dalir. Written by M.J. Jozani. Iranian-language; English subtitles. A Dena release. Comedy/drama. Unrated. Running time: 101 min.

Although the premise of its story—a man invents an alter ego that then tries to take control of his life—is interesting, "Shadow of Imagination" has major flaws. The first is its all-too-complex narrative. The main character, Hossein, is a terrible would-be poet who invents an imaginary character named Ghombeli, who he blames for his flaws and conversely credits for inspiration when it seems to serve his purposes.

Hossein is weak in spirit; Ghombeli is strong. In hope of winning favor with two women guests at an important party, Hossein paints his shadow as a real man. When a theft occurs at the gathering, however, police begin searching for Ghombeli, and Hossein eventually finds that his invention costs him more than he bargained for.

That premise alone would have made for a diverting film. But, when the story takes twists and turns, the complex plot becomes hard to follow. Combined with serious technical problems and unexplained cultural ambiguities, that makes watching this film more work than most would wish to undertake.—Pat Kramer

REVIEWS

SHADOW CONSPIRACY ★★

Starring Charlie Sheen, Donald Sutherland and Linda Hamilton. Directed by George P. Cosmatos. Written by Adi Hasak and Ric Gibbs. Produced by Terry Collis. A Buena Vista release. Thriller. Rated R for violence and language. Running time: 103 min.

The smartest young comer on Capitol Hill, presidential aide Bobby Bishop (Charlie Sheen) becomes entangled in conspiracy via contact with a man who knows too much and then is hard-targeted by a high-level White House bunch who are scheming to control the government. Unable to come in to his mentor, the chief of staff (Donald Sutherland, believable despite a weak script), Bobby and reporter Amanda Givens (Linda Hamilton, given nothing to do but be beautiful) flee from a killer (Stephen Lang) modeled after the Terminator. Both Sam Waterston as the President and Ben Gazzara as the Vice President are quiet and professional, despite their cypher characters.

Sheen is a handsome and resourceful actor, but not enough so to win in this conspiracy of shadows over substance. Like beauty over brains, "Shadow Conspiracy" gives some pleasure as it presents a visually sumptuous movie containing minimal dialogue, no character development and a kindergarten plot. "Shadow Conspiracy," a Cinergi production for Disney's Hollywood Pictures, samples actions from "Three Days of the Condor," "The Conversation," "The Terminator" and "T2," but without their plot intelligence.

Instead, director George P. Cosmatos ("Tombstone") puts all his logic into Joe Alves' production design and Buzz Feitshans IV's cinematography. Shadows, reflections and obstacles abound in dark interiors and night exteriors shot through screens, grids and grills. Action sequences are noteworthy for their spectacular locations: underwater aqueducts, underpasses, elevator shafts, tunnels. Liberal use of high angle shots coupled with numerous satellite surveillance shots remind audiences of the only well-developed plot element: There is no privacy left.—Karen Achenbach

ZEUS AND ROXANNE ★1/2

Starring Steve Guttenberg, Kathleen Quinlan and Arnold Vosloo. Directed by George T. Miller. Written by Tom Benedek. Produced by Frank Price, Gene Rosow and Ludi Boeken. An MGM release. Adventure. Rated PG for mild thematic elements. Running time: 98 min.

Harmless kiddie fodder at best, this Rysher production (the company behind "House Arrest") is so full of cutesy acting, cutesy comedy and cutesy animal tricks that it's perfectly innocuous. But the hokey contrivances and lack of imagination in the script by Tom Benedek ("Free Willy") are compounded by the shoddy technique and insipid sensibility of George T. Miller's ("Andre") direction.

The title characters, a dog named Zeus and a dolphin named Roxanne, are given relatively little to do in this dull, predictable combination of story elements cribbed from "The Parent Trap" and "The Incredible Journey." A marine biologist and single mom (Kathleen Quinlan) studies the dolphin's behavior as research toward a university grant. Meanwhile, her two girls (Majandra Delfino and Jessica Howell) try to set her up with a scruffy song composer and widower (Steve Guttenberg), whose pet dog has struck up a friendship with the dolphin. A jealous rival suitor ("Hard Target's" Arnold Vosloo) for her affections and the grant attempts to capture the dolphin by using the dog as bait.

Because the characters are such pat and bland stereotypes, and Miller's style is bereft of pace and conviction, it's like a bad half-hour TV show stretched to more than 90 minutes. When Guttenberg moves away and his dog runs back to try to find his dolphin pal, there's nothing convincing in the plotting or execution to make the film tug at the heart. The later suspense, when Quinlan is trapped underwater in a submersible and the dolphin rushes to help, develops some dramatic urgency, but it's not enough to save the movie.

Charm and wonder are sadly missing in "Zeus and Roxanne," so what's left is a waterlogged adventure that will bore most families.—Dale Winogura

Review Digest

Story-type key: (Ac) Action; (Ad) Adventure; (An) Animated; (C) Comedy; (D) Drama; (Doc) Documentary; (F) Fantasy; (Hor) Horror; (M) Musical; (My) Mystery; (R) Romance; (Sat) Satire; (SF) Science Fiction; (Sus) Suspense; (Th) Thriller; (W) Western.

TITLE/MPAA DISTRIBUTOR	RUN TIME	GENRE	REVIEWED IN ISSUE	BOXOFFICE	VARIETY	H. REPORTER	L.A. TIMES	N.Y. TIMES	USA TODAY	AVERAGE	TOTAL BOXOFFICE$*
5 Excellent 4 Very Good 3 Good 2 Fair 1 Poor
Beautician and the Beast PG (Par)	105	C	4-97	2	3	2	3		2	2.4	4.1
Beavis and Butt-head... PG-13 (Par)	80	Ani	2-97	3	3	2	3	3		2.8	62.2
Beverly Hills Ninja PG-13 (TS)	85	C	3-97	2	2	2	3	2		2.2	27.1
Big Night (Gol)	110	D	9-96	3	4	4	4	3		3.8	11.8
Breaking the Waves R (Oct)	158	D	7-96	2	3	5	2	4		3.2	2.5
The Crucible PG-13 (Fox)	115	D	1-97	4	3	4	3	4		3.7	7.3
Dante's Peak PG-13 (Uni)	108	Ac D	4-97	4	2	3			3	3.0	18.5
Daylight PG-13 (Uni)	114	Ac D	2-97	2	2	3	2	2	2	2.2	32.7
The English Patient R (Mir)	159	R	1-97	3	3	4	4	4	4	3.7	42.0
Everyone Says I Love You R (Mir)	100	MusC	1-97	3	4	4	2	4	3	3.5	6.7
Evita PG (BV)	136	Mus	2-97	4	4	2	2	3		3.0	41.0
Fierce Creatures PG-13 (Uni)	93	C	3-97	3	4	3	3	4	2	3.2	8.5
First Strike PG-13 (NL)	83	Ac C	3-97	3	3	3	3	4	3	3.2	14.3
Gridlock'd R (Gra)	91	C	2-97	4	3	3	3	3		3.2	4.9
Hamlet PG-13 (Col)	242	D	2-97	4	4	4	4	3		3.8	2.1
In Love and War PG-13 (NL)	115	R D	2-97	3		2	2	2	2	2.2	12.9
Jerry Maguire R (TS)	138	D	2-97	4	4	2	3	4	4	3.5	121.3
Jingle All the Way PG (Fox)	89	C	2-97	3	2	3	2	2	3	2.5	60.4
Mars Attacks! PG-13 (WB)	104	C	2-97	3	3	4	3	2	3	3.0	36.4
Marvin's Room PG-13 (Mir)	97	D	2-97	3	3	4	3	3		3.3	1.6
Meet Wally Sparks R (TM)	107	C	3-97	2	2	2	2	3		2.2	3.3
Metro R (BV)	117	Ac	3-97	3	3	3	2	2	2	2.5	28.4
Michael PG (NL)	105	R C	2-97	3	2	3	4	3		2.6	83.1
The Mirror Has Two Faces PG-13 (TS)	126	R C	1-97	2	2	4	2	3	3	2.6	41.0
Mother PG-13 (Par)	103	C	11-96	4	4	4	4			4.0	15.0
101 Dalmatians G (BV)	103	C	2-97	3	3	3	2	2		2.6	132.7
One Fine Day PG (Fox)	109	R C	2-97	3	3	4	3	3	3	3.2	44.2
The People Vs. Larry Flynt R (Col)	126	D	2-97	3	4	4	4	3	5	3.8	18.8
Portrait of a Lady (Gra)	142	D	11-96	3	3	3	3	3		3.0	3.6
Preacher's Wife PG (BV)	124	RC	2-97	3	3	3	3		3	3.0	45.9
Prefontaine PG-13 (BV)	106	D	3-97	3	3	3	2	2	3	3.2
Ransom R (BV)	121	Th	1-97	3	4	4	3	4	3	3.5	132.6
The Relic R (Par)	109	ThSF	3-97	3	3	3	2		2	2.6	31.4
Ridicule R (Mir)	102	CD	8-96	4	4	4	4	3		3.8	1.5
Romeo & Juliet PG-13 (Fox)	120	D	1-97	3	3	3	3	2	3	2.8	46.3
Scream R (Mir)	111	HorC	2-97	3	2	3	3	2		2.5	75.1
Secrets and Lies R (Oct)	142	D	7-96	4	4	4	4	4		4.0	6.8
Set It Off R (NL)	121	Ac D	1-97	3	3	2	3	2		2.6	35.8
Shadow Conspiracy R (BV)	103	Th	4-97	2	1	2	1	1	2	1.5	2.2
Shine (FL)	104	D	4-96	5	5	4	4	3	3	4.0	16.0
Some Mother's Son (SPC)	112	D	8-96	4	2	2	4	4		3.2	0.5
Space Jam PG (WB)	88	F C	1-97	3	3	3	3	3	3	3.0	87.9
Star Trek: First Contact PG-13 (Par)	110	SF	2-97	3	4	4	4	3	3	3.3	91.0
Turbulence R (MGM)	103	Th	3-97	2	2	3	2		3	2.4	11.1
The Whole Wide World PG (SC)	111	D	11-96	4	4	4	4	4	3	3.8	0.1

 Total boxoffice, in millions, as of Feb. 11, 1997*

NATIONAL NEWS

SHERAK PROMOTED AT FOX

Tom Sherak, senior executive vice president of Fox Filmed Entertainment at 20th Century Fox, was promoted to chairman of the newly formed 20th Domestic Film Group, securing his ranking as the No. 3 executive at the successful studio. Sherak, considered instrumental in the phenomenal success of "Independence Day," will continue to oversee distribution, but will also be responsible for managing post-production and special projects. As a 13-year veteran of Fox, Sherak has been credited with cultivating strong ties with key producers and directors such as James Cameron, Dean Devlin, Roland Emmerich and, of course, George Lucas. Sherak's relationship with Lucas played a pivotal role in shepherding the revamped "Star Wars" trilogy into theatres for the 20 year anniversary, and that relationship may become even more important as Lucas comes closer to filming the as-yet studio-less new trio of "prequels." With the 20-year old "Star Wars" blasting back into theatres to the tune of almost $60 million in two weeks and showing those young, whipersnapper blockbuster wannabes how it's done, the new "Star Wars" franchise could be a decided coup for Sherak and the studio.

Sherak joined Fox in 1983 as president of domestic distribution and marketing and supervised the marketing and distribution of such films as "Home Alone," "Die Hard 2," "Aliens," "Big" and "Working Girl." He was promoted to executive vice president in 1990 and was named senior VP of Fox Filmed Entertainment at its inception in 1994. Before joining Fox, Sherak was vice president and head film buyer for General Cinema.

THE FILM FUNDANCE AT THIS YEAR'S SUNDANCE

1997 saw a subdued Sundance compared to last year's shenanigans, but the independent festival, which insiders say has become an American Cannes with snow, still presented a number of films to look for in the coming year. "Sunday," a drama about a one-day love affair, took the grand jury prize for dramatic film as well as the Waldo Salt Screenwriting award. "Girls Like Us" won the documentary grand jury prize. Morgan J. Freeman's "Hurricane" garnered three awards—the DGA's directing award (drama), the award for cinematography (drama) and a shared audience award for drama with New Line's "Love Jones"—and landed a distribution deal with MGM, which paid $2 million for domestic rights. The documentary audience award went to "Paul Monette: The Brink of Summer's End," while the documentary filmmaker's trophy and the DGA documentary directing award went to "Licensed to Kill." "In the Company of Men" won the dramatic filmmaker's trophy. Parker Posey, who appeared in three films ("The House of Yes," "SubUrbia" and "Clockwatchers") was awarded a special acting prize. Miramax picked up the dark "House of Yes" for $2 million. Trimark paid $3 million for "Box of Moonlight" and Fox Searchlight shelled out $2.5 million to pick up "Star Maps." Sony Classics acquired three films at the festival: "Dream With the Fishes," the French comedy "When the Cat's Away," and the Errol Morris documentary "Fast, Cheap & Out of Control." Gramercy picked up "Going All the Way." Goldwyn snapped up "I Love You... Don't Touch Me" and "The Last Time I Committed Suicide" was bought by Roxie. On a sidenote, Slamdance, the little festival that sprung up in the shadow of Sundance, announced it will move its festival next year away from the time and place of Sundance in order to allow for more corporate sponsorships. Noteworthy wins at Slamdance, which is becoming a renowned festival in it's own right, include "The Bible and Gun Club" which won the grand jury prize; "Driven," which was awarded a dramatic honorable mention; Michael Davis' "Eight Days a Week," which won the audience award for drama; and the documentary audience award winner, "Perfect Moment."

NEW MAG FROM NAC

The National Association of Concessionaires (NAC) announced the debut of "Concession Profession," a bi-annual magazine focusing on the food and beverage industry. The magazine will offer industry news, features on concession trends, interviews with industry leaders, practical operations applications and company profiles. "The main focus of the association has always been information and education," said NAC President David Scoco of Creative Concession Concepts. "Our plans for our publications emphasize our commitment to that mission." Two issues will be published in 1997 in May and November. The fall issue will include the NAC membership directory.

AMC BRINGS TASTE BACK TO THE POPCORN RACE

Three years after the Center For Science in the Public Interest (CSPI) rocked the theatre business with its published health survey on movie popcorn, AMC Theatres is experimenting with a return to using higher-fat coconut oil over healthier but less tasty "lighter" oils (like safflower and canola). In the chain's Kansas City, Mo. theatres, patrons will have the choice between coconut oil-popped popcorn and air-popped popcorn. CSPI immediately called the decision a bad idea and urged customers to boycott buying popcorn at all AMC theatres. But AMC says the decision to return to the higher-cholesterol oil is based on customer preference and will, at least for the time being, be limited to the Kansas City area only.

DREAMWORKS AND PLAYA: ON AGAIN, OFF AGAIN, ON AGAIN

It looks like Dreamworks, SKG and the Playa Vista developers, Maguire Thomas Partners, may be back together again. After delays in the development of the Playa Vista site due to old debts incurred in the 80s and a lack of ready investors, the Dreamworks executives had made noises about looking for other places to build their dreamy state-of-the-art studio. Maguire Thomas took the hint and quickly secured a new group of partners to bring in the money needed to push the project forward—approximately $200 million. If the deal goes through, the Pacific Capital Group, led by Beverly Hills financier Gary Winnick, would become the largest investor. DreamWorks executive Jefferey Katzenberg said he was pleased the project was moving forward, but noted that until the financing is secure nothing is a done deal.

CALLEY'S NEW DEAL: SHUFFLING EXECUTIVES AT SONY

The restructuring of Sony Pictures Entertainment continues since John Calley became president and COO in November of 1996. Calley hopes to streamline the filmmaking process and make the studio more filmmaker-friendly by cutting levels of bureaucracy. Almost all senior film executives will report directly to him, a process markedly different from the system under former chairman Alan Levine and Columbia TriStar chairman Mark Canton. Columbia Pictures president Amy Pascal, TriStar Pictures president Robert Cooper, vice-chair Lucy Fisher and freshly promoted co-chair Gareth Wigan will all report to Calley. Jeff Blake continues as president of Sony Pictures Releasing. David Saunders, head of Triumph Pictures, will report direct to Calley along with the recently re-signed Sony Pictures Classics presidents (Michael Barker, Tom Bernard and Marcie Bloom.) In other restructuring moves, Yuki Nozoe was named executive vice president and will coordinate worldwide development, and film marketing chief Bob Levin was promoted to president of worldwide marketing.

MGM MOVES FORWARD MINUS MARCUS

Just as Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is trying to get back in the running after being pretty much dead in the water during last year's studio sale, MGM Pictures president and COO Michael Marcus announced his resignation. Marcus' exit comes just four months after United Artists president John Calley left to run Sony. Now MGM chairman Frank Mancuso finds himself without the creative team that was so much a part of revivifying the studio. Feature film production will temporarily move under United Artists president Lindsay Doran, who replaced Calley, until Mancuso finds a replacement for Marcus. On the upside, MGM recently procured a settlement with Carolco Pictures over the much-desired "Spiderman" project, giving the studio the rights to the popular web-crawler. MGM now has an option to exercise contracts that tie James Cameron to the project. Cameron has maintained a long-term interest in making a big-budget superhero movie out of Spidey's story. It's still a sticky situation, however, with Viacom and Columbia/TriStar claiming various television, video and theatrical rights that could keep poor Peter Parker off the big screen. Still, MGM now holds the strongest thread to the story, and Marvel Comics, currently in a bitter Chapter 11 bankruptcy, doesn't seem to have any objections to MGM moving forward on the project.

Boxoffice Magazine presents

MovieFone's Moviegoer Activity Report

For the Month of January 1997

MovieFone® (777-FILM®) and its sister service, MovieLink® Online, are now the single largest source of movie showtime information in the country, providing information to over 12 million moviegoers each month. The following information represents the most requested theatres and exhibitors on MovieFone.

Top 10 Exhibitors & Theatres

Most Requested Exhibitors

Rank	Exhibitor	Total Requests	Last Month's Rank
1	Sony	735,283	2
2	Cineplex Odeon	701,978	3
3	United Artists	651,675	1
4	AMC	583,297	4
5	General Cinema	364,076	5
6	Century	214,440	6
7	National Amusements	160,155	7
8	Cinemark	145,358	8
9	Mann	128,098	9
10	Famous Players	122,834	10

Most Requested Theatres

Rank	Market	Theatre	Total Requests	Last Month's Rank
1	NY	Sony Lincoln Square	128,653	1
2	NY	Sony Village 7	47,296	7
3	NY	CO Chelsea Cinemas	44,656	2
4	LA	AMC Century 14	42,952	3
5	BO	Sony Cheri	38,189	5
6	NY	CO Worldwide	30,994	17
7	NY	CityCin Village East	29,517	4
8	BO	Sony Copley Place	28,892	19
9	NY	CO Chelsea West	26,618	N/A
10	NY	Sony Orpheum	26,475	12

Most Requested Theatres Per Screen

Total Requests	Rank	Theatre (# screens)	Total Requests	Last Month's Rank
New York	1	Sony Paris (1)	22,807	20
1,425,458	2	CO Ziegfeld (1)	15,283	32
	3	Sony New York Twin (2)	20,786	1
Los Angeles	1	Pacific Cinerama Dome (1)	23,290	11
668,876	2	Laemmle Royal (1)	10,512	13
	3	Mann Village (1)	5,748	5
Dallas	1	GCC Northpark 1 & 2 (2)	9,171	18
482,761	2	UA Cine (2)	5,117	6
	3	Granada Movie Grill (1)	2,256	14
San Francisco	1	Blm Regency (1)	14,793	5
327,894	2	Blm Alhambra (1)	3,336	4
	3	Century Presidio (1)	3,097	8
Boston	1	Sony Cheri (4)	38,189	1
276,523	2	Sony Nickelodeon (5)	16,117	3
	3	NA Allston Cinema (2)	6,140	7
Philadelphia	1	UA Sameric (4)	17,752	1
273,499	2	AMC Olde City (2)	7,863	14
	3	Cinemagic 3 at Penn (3)	9,374	2
Miami	1	Cobb Kendall (9)	15,336	2
254,607	2	AMC Cocowalk (16)	19,756	18
	3	Cobb Miami Lakes (10)	12,146	1
Chicago	1	Sony Pipers Alley (4)	19,686	23
238,641	2	Village North (1)	3,106	4
	3	Davis Art (1)	2,721	32
Phoenix	1	Hark Cine Capri (1)	8,882	1
199,260	2	Hark Christown (5)	9,069	2
	3	Century Glendale D-I (9)	12,185	3
Toronto	1	Famous Eglinton (1)	18,273	2
195,238	2	Famous Plaza (2)	5,493	7
	3	Famous Uptown (3)	7,872	1
Houston	1	CO Spectrum (9)	17,527	2
146,863	2	CO River Oaks Plaza (12)	12,366	1
	3	Landmk River Oaks (3)	2,827	3
San Diego	1	Mann Cinema 21 (1)	1,124	1
115,846	2	Landmk Cove (1)	773	6
	3	UA Horton (14)	9,854	7

Total Requests	Rank	Theatre (# screens)	Total Requests	Last Month's Rank
Kansas City	1	Dksn Glenwood (4)	6,584	1
111,019	2	Tivoli at Westport (1)	1,506	23
	3	Dksn Southglen (12)	15,676	6
Seattle	1	Landmk Neptune (1)	2,054	3
98,962	2	Landmk Harvard Exit (2)	2,884	27
	3	Landmk Guild 45th (2)	2,783	2
Minneapolis	1	Landmk Uptown (1)	1,259	16
87,692	2	Mann MN Grandview (2)	1,507	11
	3	CO Knollwood (4)	2,711	4
Atlanta	1	UA Tara Cinema (4)	2,459	13
82,612	2	AMC Phipps Plaza (14)	6,495	3
	3	AMC Galleria (8)	3,448	6
Cleveland	1	GCC Ridge Park Square (8)	6,957	2
70,925	2	GCC Westgate Mall (6)	5,167	6
	3	General Southgate (3)	2,142	7
Las Vegas	1	Century Las Vegas D-I (6)	4,928	1
60,888	2	Gold Coast Twin (2)	1,633	13
	3	Century Rancho (16)	10,969	3
Denver	1	UA Continental (1)	2,303	1
58,966	2	Landmk Mayan (3)	2,727	23
	3	Mann Olde Towne (14)	6,868	30
Detroit	1	MJR Main Art (3)	1,486	9
52,319	2	Star Taylor (10)	3,881	2
	3	AMC Southland (4)	1,498	3
Sacramento	1	Century Sacramento D-I (6)	5,021	1
50,024	2	Century Cinedome (9)	7,013	2
	3	Century Complex (12)	9,019	6
Cincinnati	1	SupSav Forest Fair (8)	6,821	1
35,497	2	SupSav Cinemas (8)	5,982	2
	3	NA 275 East Cinemas (4)	1,322	9
San Antonio	1	Act III Crossroads (6)	2,829	N/A
33,221	2	Act III Fiesta (16)	5,983	N/A
	3	Act III Galaxy (14)	5,107	N/A
Tampa	1	Cobb Northdale (6)	2,321	4
31,798	2	Muvico Palm Harbor (10)	2,998	2
	3	AMC Varsity (6)	1,645	9

Top 3 Actively* Requested Theatres:

1. CO Worldwide New York, NY
2. Sony Lincoln Sq. New York, NY
3. CO Chelsea Cinemas New York, NY

*Caller specifically requested theatre

Key to Exhibitors

AMC	AMC Theatres, Inc.	CO	Cineplex Odeon Corp.	Hollywood	Hollywood Theatres
Act III	Act III Theatres	Cobb	Cobb Theatres	Landmk	Landmark Theatre Corp
Blm	Blumenfeld Theatres	Dksn	Dickinson Theatres	Laemmle	Laemmle Theatres
Carmike	Carmike Cinemas, Inc.	Famous	Famous Players	Mann MN	Mann Minneapolis
Century	Century Theatres	GCC	General Cinema Theatres	Met	Metropolitan Theatres Corp.
CinAm	CinAmerica Theatres, LP	General	General Theatres	MJR	MJR Theatre Service
CityCin	City Cinemas	Hark	Harkins Theatres	Muvico	Muvico Theatres
				Pacific	Pacific Theatres
				Regal	Regal Cinemas
				Sony	Sony Theatres
				Star	Loeks-Star Theatres
				SupSav	Super Saver Cinemas
				UA	United Artists Theatre Circuit

777-FILM

1997 OSCAR BALLOT ✔

BEST PICTURE
☆"The English Patient" (Miramax)
☆"Fargo" (Gramercy)
☆"Jerry Maguire" (TriStar)
☆"Secrets & Lies" (October)
☆"Shine" (Fine Line)

BEST ACTOR
☆Tom Cruise ("Jerry Maguire")
☆Ralph Fiennes ("The English Patient")
☆Woody Harrelson (".....Larry Flynt")
☆Geoffrey Rush ("Shine")
☆Billy Bob Thornton ("Sling Blade")

BEST ACTRESS
☆Brenda Blethyn ("Secrets & Lies")
☆Diane Keaton ("Marvin's Room")
☆Frances McDormand ("Fargo")
☆Kristin Scott Thomas ("The English Patient")
☆Emily Watson ("Breaking the Waves")

BEST SUPPORTING ACTOR
☆Cuba Gooding Jr. ("Jerry Maguire")
☆William H. Macy ("Fargo")
☆Armin Mueller-Stahl ("Shine")
☆Edward Norton ("Primal Fear")
☆James Woods ("Ghosts of Mississippi")

BEST SUPPORTING ACTRESS
☆Joan Allen ("The Crucible")
☆Lauren Bacall ("The Mirror/Two Faces")
☆Juliette Binoche ("The English Patient")
☆Barbara Hershey ("Portrait of a Lady")
☆Marianne Jean-Baptiste ("Secrets & Lies")

BEST DIRECTOR
☆Anthony Minghella ("English Patient")
☆Joel Coen ("Fargo")
☆Milos Forman ("The People Vs. Larry Flynt")
☆Mike Leigh ("Secrets & Lies")
☆Scott Hicks ("Shine")

BEST SCREENPLAY
☆Ethan Coen and Joel Coen ("Fargo")
☆Cameron Crowe ("Jerry Maguire")
☆John Sayles ("Lone Star")
☆Mike Leigh ("Secrets & Lies")
☆Jan Sardi and Scott Hicks ("Shine")

BEST ADAPTED SCREENPLAY
☆Arthur Miller ("The Crucible")
☆Anthony Minghella ("English Patient")
☆Kenneth Branagh ("Hamlet")
☆Billy Bob Thornton ("Sling Blade")
☆John Hodge ("Trainspotting")

BEST MAKEUP
☆"Ghosts of Mississippi;" ☆"The Nutty Professor;" ☆"Star Trek: First Contact"

BEST FOREIGN LANGUAGE FILM
☆"A Chef in Love" (Georgia)
☆"Kolya" (Czech Republic)
☆"The Other Side of Sunday" (Norway)
☆"Prisoner of the Mountains" (Russia)
☆"Ridicule" (France)

BEST DOCUMENTARY FEATURE
☆"The Line King: The Al Hirschfeld Story"
☆"Mandela" (Island Pictures)
☆"Suzanne Farrell: Elusive Muse" (Seahorse)
☆"Tell the Truth and Run" (Never Tire)
☆"When We Were Kings" (Gramercy)

BEST ART DIRECTION
☆Bo Welch, Cheryl Carasik ("The Birdcage")
☆Stuart Craig, Stephanie McMillan ("The English Patient")
☆Brian Morris, Phillippe Turiure ("Evita")
☆Tim Harvey, "Hamlet"
☆Catherine Martin, Brigitte Broch ("Romeo & Juliet")

BEST CINEMATOGRAPHY
☆John Seale ("The English Patient")
☆Darius Khondji ("Evita")
☆Roger Deakins ("Fargo")
☆Caleb Deschanel ("Fly Away Home")
☆Chris Menges ("Michael Collins")

BEST EDITING
☆Walter Murch ("The English Patient")
☆Gerry Hambling ("Evita")
☆Roderick Jaynes ("Fargo")
☆Joe Hutshing ("Jerry Maguire")
☆Pip Karmel ("Shine")

BEST SOUND
☆"The English Patient;" ☆"Evita;" ☆"Independence Day;" ☆"The Rock;" ☆"Twister"

BEST VISUAL EFFECTS
☆"Dragonheart;" ☆"Independence Day;" ☆"Twister"

BEST COSTUME DESIGN
☆Paul Brown ("Angels and Insects")
☆Ruth Myers ("Emma")
☆Ann Roth ("The English Patient")
☆Alex Byrne ("Hamlet")
☆Janet Patterson ("The Portrait of a Lady")

BEST MUSIC (ORIGINAL SONG)
☆ "Because You Loved Me" ("Up Close and Personal")
☆ "For the First Time" ("One Fine Day")
☆ "I Finally Found Someone" ("The Mirror Has Two Faces")
☆ "That Thing You Do!"
☆""You Must Love Me" ("Evita")

EXHIBITION BRIEFINGS

LUCASFILM INTRODUCES 5-STAR RATING SYSTEM

Lucasfilm Ltd.'s THX Theatre Alignment Program (TAP) announced a new service to evaluate the moviegoing experience: a 5-star rating system. TAP assigns a rating utilizing 0-5 stars and generates a written report that evaluates the overall presentation quality of a theatre's projection and sound quality, as well as all aspects of theatre operations. Movie studios interested in this service will hire TAP on a picture-by-picture basis. The first distribution company to utilize the rating system was Twentieth Century Fox with its release of the "Star Wars." Trained reviewers are sent unannounced to anywhere from 10 to 400 theatres on a film's opening weekend. They make their appraisals in five areas: print condition, projector alignment and operation, sound system alignment and operation, theatre operations, and advertising. The theatre starts with a score of 100, with points deducted based upon the relative severity of the problems observed by TAP evaluators. TAP personnel follow up on any problems and detailed reports are provided to the distribution company, as well as to the theatre and theatre owner. This program is meant to ensure top quality presentation, therefore benefitting both the studio and the theatre, though the mystery critic/report card method might be off-putting to some exhibitors. The TAP evaluation program has in fact been in use since the mid-'80s, but THX is finding that the star system draws more attention to the reports as the qualitative measure is more instantly comprehendible.

DON'T CRY FOR SCREENS, ARGENTINA: NATIONAL AMUSEMENTS TO BUILD FIVE MULTIPLEXES

National Amusements announced an agreement with developer Maccarone to build at least five multiplexes with an aggregate of approximately 60 screens in Argentina. The plexes will anchor "Showcenters," which will include virtual reality arcades, live music venues, bowling alleys and restaurants. The first theatre, a 14-plex in Buenos Aires, will open in May.

SHOWSCAN UNVEILS ELECTROMAGNETIC MOTION BASE

Showscan Entertainment Inc. has introduced "EM4," an electromagnetic motion base, for its simulation theatre attractions. There are no hydraulic pumps, oils, or other hydraulic elements that usually complicates the construction, installation and operation of simulation attractions, according to William C. Soady, president and CEO of Showscan. "The EM4 will revolutionize the simulation business," says Soady. "There is no other motion base in the industry that has the enhanced real life performance and wide range of motion of the EM4. The precision in motion programming that is now possible due to the EM4 will effectively change the way audiences experience simulation. It establishes a new dimension for motion performance, creating a silent, smooth and virtually lifelike experience."

REGAL BUILDS TWO 22-PLEXES

A 22-screen, 4,400-seat Regal multiplex will anchor the CityPark, an entertainment project in Lincolnshire, Ill. that will also include shopping, restaurants and a hotel. "CityPark promises to be a blockbuster in every sense of the word," says Regal senior VP of real estate Keith Thompson. "With the confluence of restaurants, shops and the added benefit of a quality hotel, we are extremely confident about this market."

Regal will also be opening a 22-plex in Austell, Ga. The 85,000-square-foot multiplex will offer stadium seating, wall-to-wall screens, Dolby surround sound, DTS, Dolby and Sony Dynamic Digital Sound.

DICKINSON EXPANDS WESTGLEN

Dickinson Theatres' WestGlen 12 in Shawnee, Kan., will undergo an extensive expansion project that will increase the facility to an 18-screen megaplex with additional THX auditoriums as well as an elaborate family entertainment center. The addition of six more theatres will increase the existing 60,000-square-foot building by 23,000 square feet. Four more acres of parking will also be added.

TIVOLI OPENS NEW FACILITY IN LAS VEGAS

Tivoli Industries Inc., a provider of lighting for aisles, steps, canopies, boxoffices, and concession stands, has opened a sales and support facility in Las Vegas, Nevada. The facility, located in the Center Point office complex near the Las Vegas strip, will offer lighting product samples, descriptive product and application literature, and design support. MaryJo Scott, previously an executive assistant with Fox Broadcasting in Beverly Hills, Calif., has been appointed manager of office operations.

ON THE MOVE

Shauna King has been appointed to Senior VP/head film buyer of Loews Theatres. Previously, King was VP, assistant head film buyer, U.S., for Cineplex Odeon...Mann Theatres has announced the promotions of five key executives. Denise Gurin has been promoted from VP to Senior VP of film marketing; Alan Davy moves up to VP of film from executive director of film; and executive director of theatre development Dan Greismer, executive director of theatre operations Cynthia Cronkhite, and executive director of concession operations Wally Helton all move up to VP status in their departments.

Q&A: RICHARD LINKLATER ON THE INDEPENDENT FILM SCENE

Writer/director Richard Linklater, documentor of loafing youth culture as seen in his films "Slacker," "Dazed and Confused," and "Before Sunrise," was in attendance at this year's Sundance Film Festival promoting his current film, the Sony Pictures Classics release "subUrbia" produced by Castle Rock. He stopped to speak with* Boxoffice *about the current state of so-called "independent cinema." After the success of his off-beat, no-budget 1991 film "Slacker," Linklater has been at the forefront of the indie movement as it has exploded and expanded to proportions that were unimaginable when he and a handful of others like Spike Lee, Whit Stillman, and Steven Soderbergh were just starting out in the late '80s and early '90s.

Linklater (left) directs Giovanni Ribisi in SPC's "subUrbia."

Boxoffice: How has the notion of what an independent film is changed since the days of "Slacker," "sex, lies and videotape" and "She's Gotta Have It?"

RICHARD LINKLATER: Starting in the early '80s, there was more distribution of independent films. It was more commodified, more of a business, and the films had more of a marketing angle. I think that right now there needs to be more distributors, because there are a lot more films out there. Filmmakers just have this need to make films, obviously, and audiences have the need to see them.

Boxoffice: How has the current film marketplace changed your style of filmmaking or sense of storytelling?

LINKLATER: For me it is just about making films that mean a lot to me personally. They are always pretty autobiographical—I just like subjects I am close to, and I hope there is always an audience out there who wants to see them. But it's kind of hard in the media environment we live in. The big films will always dominate the media and culture, but from the bottom up it has always more Darwinist: the best films always seem to pop out from a huge sea of films.

Boxoffice: Has Castle Rock given you the kind of freedom you've hoped for on your last two films?

LINKLATER: Yeah. They've been really supportive. Filmmakers sometimes get the wrong impression of studios. I did "Dazed and Confused" at Universal—that's my film. No one took it away from me.

Boxoffice: So is an independent filmmaker one who is constrained by budget, or is it rather a state of mind?

LINKLATER: Martin Scorsese is an independent filmmaker. Oliver Stone is very independent, as independent as it gets. And more power to them, because most people don't understand how tough it is in the studio system to make a "personal" film. I admire people who are making films that a) no one else wants to, and b) no one else could. You work from a position like, if it means something to me, hopefully, it will connect with other people and mean something to them.

Boxoffice: If "Slacker" were to be released today, in this marketplace, would have it been as successful or influential as it was six years ago?

LINKLATER: That's an interesting question, I hadn't though about that. Hmmm. It would be ignored, I think, because so many films since then have dealt with similar material, it would seen redundant. It's always good to be the first out of the blocks. "Slacker" was a weird little film that I really thought would be shown at a museum or a few festivals, and figured that it would be a really alienating film that no one would like. I had this feeling that the audience it was made for would get it, the channel-surfing, create-your-own narrative audience. On the other hand, 10 years earlier it would not have been accepted either.

BOXOFFICE: Where is independent cinema heading?

LINKLATER: There will always be a new "wave" of young filmmakers out there. I wish there was a new wave of distributors, but no one is doing that. I talk to film schools every now and then and ask the kids, "how many of you want to write and direct?" every hand goes up. I ask "how many want to be in distribution?" and not one hand goes up. I tell them, you know, 'If you're a rich kid who's going to take $400,000 from your dad and make a movie, why not take that money and start a distribution company? Ten years later you'll be selling your company for $100 million.' Most people think that there's money in physical filmmaking, but there's not. Maybe for one in a hundred, but it is certainly not a secure way to make a living. I just wish more people would get into distribution and theatres. I would if I had the bucks.—Jon Alon Walz

INTERNATIONAL NEWS BRIEFS

EUROVIEWS

European News Notes by Melissa Morrison

LEAD STORY: WUNDERBAR! GERMANY'S RECORD ATTENDANCE

BERLIN—Germany's theatrical building boom is responsible for the highest attendance in the country since reunification, the national subsidy board FFA announced. In 1996, as many as 137 million people went to the movies, a 3 percent increase in two years, and over 200 new screens have been added. The result, an FFA spokesperson said, is that cinemagoers attracted by megahits have not been turned away by sold-out auditoriums, but filtered into the new screening rooms. Some of those megahits included "Independence Day" and "Twister," as well as German productions such as "Werner II" and "Jailbirds." Domestic films, in fact, experienced an almost 7 percent increase from 1995 in market share, up to 16 percent.

Attendance was also bolstered by marketing efforts such as Columbia TriStar's "Summer Hit Cinema" promotion campaign, which upped attendance by 18 percent in the usually slow summer season. The head of Columbia's German division, Juergen Schau, said the company planned to expand its campaign this summer by doubling the number of participating distributors to a dozen. Factor in the multiplying multiplex situation 1,000 new screens estimated to be in place by the end of the century, including those by U.S. heavyweights Warner Bros. and UCI (Universal Studios/Paramount Communications) and the prospect for future attendance looks flush.

RUSSIA HOUSES

MOSCOW—The December opening of the 750-seat Udarnik cinema in Moscow is a bright spot in the Russian exhibition industry's otherwise rocky adjustment to the neglect and inefficient economics of communism. The Western-style moviehouse is the first cinema to complete a refurbishment out of $7 million of government funds earmarked for Russian cinemas. The Udarnik got $4 million for its upgrade, which included installing Dolby Stereo and building a surrounding complex of cafes and shops. The theatre has also been tailored to host film festivals, with a jury box and accommodations for press and festival guests. According to an agreement with Interfest, the state body that oversees Russian film festivals, the Udarnik will host competition screenings part of the year. Another $2.5 million will go toward fixing up the Khanzhonkov House theatre, to re-open in the spring. The remaining $.5 million will upgrade the technical equipment in other Moscow theatres.

Under another government-sponsored program, called the Russian Cinema Show, $300 million will be injected into 75 government-owned regional theatres to reinvigorate cinema-going in those parts and to restore its distribution network. Reconstruction begins mid-year. The Moscow part of the circuit will get $100 million for its upgrade, including Western sound and video equipment.

Less rosy, however, is the production end of Russian film. The movie studio Lenfilm, as part of an expected transition from public to private ownership, will hack its jobs by over half, to about 200. The Russian government can no longer afford to pay the current staff, and there isn't enough moviemaking business in post-communist times to support the 85-year-old studio's former capacity. In addition to gearing up for possible privatization, the studio will orient toward more television and technical work. Russia's largest production complexes, Gorky Film Studios and Mosfilm, are also preparing to sell stock to raise funds for their upkeep.

ADMISSIONS: IMPOSSIBLE

STOCKHOLM—The process of expanding Northern Europe's exhibition industry isn't exactly smooth skating. A proposed AMC multiplex has drawn the ire of local industry representatives for its location in a suburb of the Swedish capital. Filling the 5,000-seat cinema would require young people to hitchhike the distance between the last subway station and the theatre in the Skaerholmen/Huddingity neighborhood, one distributor complained. A rival exhibitor challenged AMC's contention that the new multiplex would rack up 3 million admissions annually, saying that all the cinemas within Stockholm proper currently attract only 4.2 million audience members. But AMC Europe president Bruno Friedman countered that the company did its market research and predicted success. No completion date has been publicly announced.

Meanwhile, in the Norwegian capital, municipal cinemas have threatened a showdown with distributors who work with Oslo's first private cinema, a proposed six-screen theatre to be built by the end of the year. The moviehouse is one of 15 private cinemas planned for the Oslo area, which are in competition with the city government's own plans for expansion, from 28 to 32 screens.

IRA INVESTMENTS

DUBLIN—The good news: Moviegoing in 1996 reached a record high in Ireland with 11.6 million ticket buyers. The bad news: Production in the Land o' Green is more a sickly yellow, which producers blame on recent changes to tax law. Exhibitors don't have much to complain about the year that was. In December, the UCI monolith opened a nine-screen, 2,500-seat flagship theatre in Dublin, which should add a few percentage points to its dominant 45-percent market share. Rival exhibitors like Ward-Anderson and Virgin are responding with plans for their own screen explosion; the former got started by spending 1996 building 20 of them. Irish filmgoers were drawn by the usual suspects: blockbusters such as "Mission: Impossible" and "ID4." But the industry got a boost with a glut of Irish-themed flicks, including the Venice-lauded, IRA-in-its-early-days "Michael Collins" and the IRA-hunger-strike drama "Some Mother's Son."

DO YOU HAVE AN EXHIBITION OR FEATURE FILM RELATED NEWS ITEM ABOUT THE EUROPEAN MARKET?
CONTACT MELISSA MORRISON IN CARE OF THE PRAGUE POST AT: NA PORICI 12, 115 30 PRAGUE 1, CZECH REPUBLIC
email: tomelis@bohem-net.cz

However, according to area producers, nobody should expect many more such films until the government restores the original requirements of its Section 35 tax breaks for film production. They claim the tax law changes caused a revenue drop of almost one-third to $88.2 million from a $129 million peak in 1995. Last year, the deduction for film investments was reduced from 100 percent to 80 percent, with a ceiling of $12.6 million built-in. Incentives for lower-budget movies, and for filming in the October-to-January off-season were added, but filmmakers say they haven't seen any results yet. Maybe they're jumping the gun: Films and filmmakers who have or will set up shop in Ireland include Jim Sheridan, Neil Jordan, Pierce Brosnan, and Roger Corman, as well as the Sony production "The Devil's Own" starring Harrison Ford and Brad Pitt as—what a surprise—an IRA gunman.

AMERICAN INVASIONS

LONDON—Some recent European innovations have taken their inspiration from North American collaborations. In Italy, several Italian directors, producers, and actors have formed Moviement, a talent agency patterned on the United Artists model to coordinate talent around specific productions. In Germany, distributor Concorde/Castle Rock-Turner plans a classics division that will deal primarily with independent productions and contain a separate marketing department, American-style. Print releases will be a modest 50 to 100 in counter to Concorde's increasingly big-time releases, such as "12 Monkeys." And in a more direct collaboration, Britain's BBC plans for two co-productions with Canada's Scala Productions, a first for the two companies. The films are "The Church of Alan Darcy" and "Divorcing Jack."

And U.S.-based UCI is growing. As part of its aggressive expansion plans, the Universal Studios/Paramount Co.-controlled company is adding Portugal, Italy, Greece, and Poland to its exhibiting countries, which currently include the United Kingdom, Ireland, Germany, Spain and Austria, as well as Japan. The company has allotted $360 million to the effort, which will eventually include South America and Asia, and plans to take joint-venture partners in some locations.

Q&A: ADRIANA BADILA ON REDEVELOPING ROMANIAN FILM

Adriana Badila is the 28-year-old production manager of Domino Film Ltd., one of the upstart production companies trying to encourage a healthy private industry in what is still Europe's Wild East. Badila and her counterparts are essentially on their own in this endeavor: Romania is a straggler among former East bloc nations in the conversion to a robust government and economy. Education, health, welfare and government-corruption crises have pushed culture to the bottom of the country's priority list. The strategy employed by 6-year-old Domino is to have two faces: an advertising division for reliable revenues that keep it afloat, and a film division to partake in the slow redevelopment of Romania's movie industry.

BOXOFFICE: How do you build your business from what is essentially scratch?

ADRIANA BADILA: We have to count on our own facilities. So we are buying equipment and building our own base, because we cannot count on the old equipment owned by the studio—which is still state-owned—and there are not foreign investors coming in to re-technologize it.

BOXOFFICE: What kind of foreign investment is the Romanian film industry getting from the West to upgrade its facilities?

BADILA: The balance is like this: It's cheaper than Hungary or the Czech Republic, but it's not as secure because investments in Romania are not yet guaranteed. So it's hard for someone to invest millions and millions of dollars when tomorrow they might have nothing. But I think that now, after the elections and with a new government and new president in place, things are going to change, and in five years' time we can have a better basis for films.

The balance is like this: It's cheaper than Hungary or the Czech Republic, but it's not as secure, because investments in Romania are not yet guaranteed.

BOXOFFICE: What potential does television have as a source of money for films?

BADILA: The good news about Romania is that the private television stations are doing very well. I'm sure in something like one year they will come to invest in film. Now they are not investing at all in films made in Romania because they just want to do their projects.

BOXOFFICE: How are cinemas adjusting to the changes in Romania?

BADILA: They are state owned. The distribution companies are state owned and the cinemas are owned by the distribution companies. There's no way to negotiate with them when you are selling a film. They have a fixed rate that is 70 to 85 percent of the revenues. This is the, let's say, funniest thing about it. [Western distributors] have set up offices in Bucharest. But at this point they haven't done more than bring the American films to the Romanian market. They are not making money out of it—it's just a step into the market.

BOXOFFICE: How successful have co-productions been in bringing much-needed funds to the domestic industry?

BADILA: Last year there were something like four or five [co-productions], mainly with France. It's absolutely necessary for us, not only for financing the film, but also for selling the film. Because even though we have the product, we are still not in the network. We don't know the distributors, we don't know how the market is going, we don't know how to deal with sales agents, distributors, exhibitors—well, we know in theory because we read a lot and we know what's going on in Europe, but it's hard to deal.

What we at Domino are doing now is looking to set up with a long-term partner, a foreign company, to work together and to learn from their experience, and to get into the European market. The most likely partners are Germany, France or America.

BOXOFFICE: You're not even 30. Is youth typical of the new private producers in Romania?

BADILA: Yes. What is also typical of Romanian private production companies is that they are owned by directors of photography. [Domino's two co-owners are cinematographers.] Maybe it's because they are the most technical people in the film crew.

INTERNATIONAL NEWS BRIEFS

NORTHERN EXPOSURE

Canadian News Notes by Shlomo Schwartzberg

LEAD STORY: PRODUCTION REVENUES AT AN ALL-TIME HIGH

Montreal and Toronto had stellar production years in 1996, but it was American movies and television shows shooting in Canada's two largest cities that fueled the boom.

The Toronto Film and Television Office announced that 146 productions brought in a record C$506.8 million (US$385.8 million) into city coffers. But funding cutbacks to the Ontario Film Development Corporation meant that U.S. features picked up the slack from declining numbers of Canadian features shot in Ontario.

Compared to 1995, when 29 Canadian features and six American ones were filmed in Toronto, 1996 saw only 23 Canadian films while 11 U.S. productions were made there. Translated financially, American dollars spent on overall production went up to C$215 million (US$163.7 million) from C$132 million (US$100.5 million) while Canadian numbers fell to $C258.7 million (US$197 million) from C$335 million (US$268.8 million) spent the previous year.

Meanwhile, Montreal also saw a record year for production, bringing in C$298 million (US$226.9 million) in all, up from C$259 million (US$197.2 million) the year before. Much of that came from big American productions filming in the city, an upsurge from years past: among recent films shot in Montreal were "Mother Night" with Nick Nolte, who will be back with the Paul Schrader film "Affliction," shooting there later this year. The Montreal Film and Television Commission estimates that foreign production, including French language pics, will hit C$100 million (US$76.1 million) in 1997.

"SENSING" GREAT THINGS FROM JEREMY PODESWA

Canadian films as diverse as Peter Wellington's yuppie comedy-drama "Joe's So Mean To Josephine" and Lynne Stopkewich's April release "Kissed," about a necrophiliac, were among the Canadian films unveiled at the recent Sundance Film Festival. But it may be Jeremy Podeswa who will make the most impact internationally.

Podeswa's "The Five Senses" was chosen to be workshopped for Sundance's well-respected Screenwriter's Lab, the only Canadian screenplay to be so honored and one of only two non-American selections among the 12 screenplays chosen.

The screenplay, which is slated for production this summer with Podeswa directing, tells five linked stories about love and fate, each based on one of the human senses. It marks the Torontonian's continuing involvement with Sundance—his first film, "Eclipse," a loose remake of Max Ophul's "La Ronde," was featured at Sundance in 1995.

"It was great. [I had] an amazing group of advisors, including Alison Anders, Alice Arlen, Frank Pierson and Armistad Mauphin," says Podeswa about the experience. "I think it's a pretty huge seal of approval for the project." Since the Lab is so "highly competitive," says Podeswa, "The Five Senses" has already aroused interest from Columbia Pictures, Fox Searchlight, New Line and others. "There's a lot of heat around the project," he says, adding that "The Five Senses" is also liable to be a pick for Sundance 1998. "The Sundance Institute likes to have a continuing relationship with the people they help out. [This year's festival hit, "The Eye of God," was a Lab project.] They're available for consulting and financial advice. They're very helpful to their people and that's a really, really good thing."

Podeswa is also co-writing (with Diane Flacks) "Minus Time," an adaptation of Catherine Bush's much praised novel of the same name, which details a woman's relationship with her celebrated astronaut mother. Both "Minus Time" and "The Five Senses" will be produced by Camelia Frieberg. (Frieberg's latest movie, Atom Egoyan's "The Sweet Hereafter," is a likely 1997 Cannes entry.)

CANADA OUT"SHINE"S U.S. BOXOFFICE PERFORMANCE ON THREE MAJOR FILMS

The top non-Hollywood films at the Canadian boxoffice this past fall were Alliance releases, most notably "The English Patient" and "Shine," both of which did proportionately better in Canada than in the U.S. "The English Patient," which is based on the book by Toronto author Michael Ondaajte, had grossed C$4.5 million (US$3.43 million) in Canada at press time and showed on 110 screens —high for an art film. "Shine's" numbers to date are C$1.5 million (US$1.14 million). Also doing well for Alliance: Mike Leigh's "Secrets and Lies," which has pulled in C$800,000 (US$609,000) from only four screens. All three films, "The English Patient," "Shine" and "Secret and Lies," are doing better in Canada than in the U.S., above the roughly 10 percent of the North American gross that Canada usually accounts for at the boxoffice.

In other Alliance news, the company announced that it has signed a co-production deal with BBC Films. Five films, budgeted for between C$4 million (US$3.1 million) and C$5 million (US$3.8 million) are set to be produced in the first year of the agreement. Alliance also recently opened up a London office.

MALOFILM OUGHTTA BE IN PICTURES

Montreal-based Malofilm has singed a two-year output deal with In Pictures Ltd., the New York-based distributor of Nick Broomfield's "Heidi Fleiss: Hollywood Madam." Broomfield's latest, "Fetishes," and Peter Bratt's "Follow Me Home," will be part of the slate of In Pictures that Malofilm will be distributing.

Malofilm also picked up Canadian rights to Mina Shum's second movie "Drive." Shum's debut, "Double Happiness," was a success for Malofilm in 1995.

ON THE MOVE

Roger Harris has moved up to the top spot at Famous Players, replacing American-born Joe Peixoto, who has returned to the U.S. Harris' previous title at Famous Players, Canada's second largest theatre chain, was vice president of marketing.

Cineplex Odeon has announced that Michael Kennedy has been promoted to senior vice president, film—Canada. Kennedy was formerly vice president, film and development—Canada. And Phil May has joined the company as film buyer for Cineplex. He was previously branch manger for Paramount Pictures in Western Canada.

DO YOU HAVE AN EXHIBITION-RELATED NEWS ITEM ABOUT THE CANADIAN MARKET? CONTACT SHLOMO SCHWARTZBERG IN CARE OF OUR CANADIAN NEWS BUREAU AT: 416-638-6402

CINEMA SUPPLY COMPANY
Millersburg, PA
Congratulates

J. Wayne Anderson
on being honored with the 1997 B.V. Sturdivant Award

Concessions
Projection
Janitorial
Everything But Film
717-692-4744
800-437-5505
Fax
717-692-3073

ODELL'S
PROUDLY SALUTES THE FOLLOWING

Barrie Lawson Loeks
Robert W. Selig ShoWester of the Year Award

J. Wayne Anderson
B. V. Sturdivant Award

Bruce Procter
Bert Nathan Memorial Award

FOR THEIR OUTSTANDING DEDICATION AND SERVICE
THEY ARE TRUE "PILLARS" OF THE INDUSTRY!

BOXOFFICE

	January	February	March	APRIL (Current)
Buena Vista (818) 567-5000 (212) 593-8900	Metro, 1/17, Dra, R, 117 min., Dolby SR, SR-D, SDDS, Anamorphic. Eddie Murphy, Carmen Ejogo, Michael Rapaport. Dir: Thomas Carter. Prefontaine, 1/24 ltd, Dra, PG-13, 106 min, Dolby SR, SR-D, Flat. Jared Leto, Amy Locane,Ed O'Neill. Dir: Steve James The Shadow Conspiracy, 1/31, Dra, R, 103 min., Dolby SR, SR-D, Anamorphic. Charlie Sheen, Linda Hamilton. Dir: George P. Cosmatos.	That Dam Cat, 2/14, Com, PG, 89 min., Dolby SR, SR-D, Flat. Christina Ricci, Doug E. Doug, Dyan Cannon. Dir: Robert Spiers.	Jungle2Jungle, 3/14, Com, PG, 105 min., Dolby SR, SR-D, SDDS, Flat. Tim Allen, Martin Short, Lolita Davidovitch, David Dgden Stiers, JoBeth Williams. Dir. John Pasquin.	The Sixth Man, 4/4, Com, PG13. Marlon Wayans, Kadeem Hardison, David Paymer. Dir: Randall Miller. Romy and Michelle's High School Reunion 4/18, Com. Mira Sorvino, Lisa Kudrow, Janean Garofalo, Elaine Hendrix. Dir: David Mirkin. Grosse Pointe Blank, Com, R, 106 min, Dolby SR, SR-D, SDDS. John Cusack, Minnie Driver, Dan Aykroyd, Joan Cusack.Dir: George Armitage
Columbia (310) 280-8000 (212) 833-8500	People Vs. Larry Flynt, 1/10 exp, Dra, R, 130 min. Dolby A, SR, SDDS, Anamorphic. Woody Harrelson, Courtney Love, Edward Norton. Dir. Milos Forman.	Absolute Power, 2/14,Thr, R, 120 min., Dolby A &SR, SDDS. Anamorphic. Gene Hackman, Scott Glenn, Judy Davis. Dir/Star: Clint Eastwood Fools Rush In, 2/14, Rom/Com, PG-13, 106 min., Dolby A, SR, SDDS, Flat. Matthew Perry, Salma Hayek. Dir: Andy Tennant Booty Call, 2/26, Com, R, 77 min., DTS, SDDS, Flat. Jamie Foxx, Vivica Fox. Dir. Jeff Pollack.	The Devil's Own, 3/26, Sus/Thr, R, Dolby A & SR, SDDS, Anamorphic. Harrison Ford, Brad Pitt, Margaret Colin, Treat Williams, Ruben Blades. Dir: Alan J. Pakula	Double Team (formerly The Colony), 4/4, Act, SDDS, Jean-Claude VanDamme, Dennis Rodman, Mickey Rourke. Dir: Tsui Hark. Anaconda, 4/18, Adv, Dolby A, SR, SDDS. Jon Voight, Jennifer Lopez, Ice Cube, Eric Stoltz, Kari Wuhrer. Dir: Luis Llosa.
MGM/UA (310) 449-3000 (212) 708-0300	Turbulence, 1/31, Act/Dra, R, 103 min., DTS. Ray Liotta, Lauren Holly, Hector Elizondo. Dir. Robert Butler.	Touch, 2/14, Dra. Tom Arnold, Bridget Fonda, Christopher Walken, Gina Gershon, Janeane Garofalo. Dir: Paul Schrader.	Hoodlum(formerly Hoods), 3/28, Dra, R Laurence Fishburne, Tim Roth, Andy Garcia, Vanessa Williams.Dir: Bill Duke.
Miramax (212) 941-3800 (213) 845-4200	Citizen Ruth, 12/13 ltd, 1/10 exp, Com, R, Dolby SR, Flat, 102 min. Laura Dern, Swoosie Kurtz. Dir: Alexander Payne Albino Alligator, 12/13 ltd, 1/17 exp, Dra, R, Scope, 96 min. Dir: Kevin Spacey The Substance of Fire, 12/6 ltd, 1/10 exp, Dra, R, Dolby SR, Flat, 101 min. Sarah Jessica Parker. Dir. Daniel Sullivan. Kolya.1/24 NY, LA, Dra, R, 111 min., Dolby A, Flat. Zdenek Szerak. Dir. Jan Szerak	Cosi, Com, 2/21NY, LA, 100 min. Toni Collette, Barry Otto, Ben Mendlesohn, Rachel Griffiths, Pamela Rabe. Dir Mark Joffe. Fist of Legend, 2/28, Act/Adv. Jet Li. Dir. Gordon Chan.	Rhyme & Reason, 3/7, Doc. Features Ice-T, Salt N Peppa. Dir: Peter Spirer. Wide Awake, 3/14, Dra, PG. Dana Delany, Denis Leary. Dir: M. Night Shyamalan. Mimic, 3/19, SF, Mira Sorvino, Josh Brolin, Charles Dutton. Dir: Guillermo del Toro. Chasing Amy, 3/28 NY, LA, April exp., Rom/Com, 105 min. Ben Affleck, Joey Lauren Adams.Dir: Kevin Smith.	Sonatine, 4/4 NY, LA. Dra. Dir/Star: Takeshi Kitano Brassed Off, 4/25 NY LA, Dra, 107 min, Dolb SR, Flat. Pete Postlethwaite, Tara Fitzgerald, Ewan McGregor. Dir. Mark Herman. Nightwatch (remake), Dra. Nick Nolte, Ewan McGregor, Patricia Arquette, Josh Brolin. Dir: Ole Bornedal.
New Line (310) 854-5811 (212) 649-4900	Jackie Chan's First Strike 1/10, Act, PG-13, 83 min. SR, SR-D, SDDS, Anamporphic. Jackie Chan, Jackson Lou, Chen Chun Wu, Bill Tung. Dir. Stanley Tong	Dangerous Ground, 2/12, Act/Dra., R, SR, SDDS, Flat. Elizabeth Hurley, Ice Cube, Ving Rhames. Dir: Darrell James Roodt	Love Jones, 3/14, Rom/Com, R. SR, SR-D, SDDS, Flat. Larenz Tate, Nia Long. Dir. Theodore Witcher B.A.P.s, 3/28, Com, R. SR, SR-D, SDDS, Flat. Halle Berry, Martin Landau, Ian Richardson, Natalie Desselle. Dir. Robert Townsend.
Paramount (213) 956-5000 (212) 373-7000	The Relic, 1/17, Thr, R, 109 min. Penelope Ann Miller, Tom Sizemore, Linda Hunt. Dir. Peter Hyams.	Beautician and the Beast, 2/7, Com, PG, 109 min. Fran Drescher, Timothy Dalton, Michael Learner, Phyllis Newman. Dir. Ken Kwapis.	Howard Stern's Private Parts, 3/7, Com, R Howard Stern, Robin Duivers, Fred Norris, Mary McCormack. Dir: Betty Thomas. The Saint, 3/14, Act/Adv. Val Kilmer, Elisabeth Shue. Dir: Phillip Noyce. The Godfather (1972 reissue), 3/21 ltd., Dra, R. Marlon Brando, James Caan, Al Pacino, Robert DuVall. Dir: Francis Ford Coppola	Breakdown, 4/11, R. Kurt Russell, Kathleen Quinlin, J.T. Walsh. Dir: Jonathan Mostow. 'Til There Was You, 4/25, Rom/Com. Jeanne Tripplehorn, Dylan McDermott, Sara Jessica Parker, Jennifer Aniston. Dir: Scott Winant.
TriStar (310) 280-8000 (212) 833-8500	Beverly Hills Ninja, 1/17, Com, PG-13, 90 mins., Flat, Dolby A & SR, SDDS. Chris Farley, Nicolette Sheridan. Dir: Dennis Dugan.	The Pest, 2/7, Com, PG-13, 88 min., Dolby A, SR, SDDS, Flat. John Leguizamo, Jeffery Jones, Edoardo Ballerini. Dir: Paul Miller Donnie Brasco, 2/28, Dra, 122min, Dolby A, SR, SDDS, Flat. Johnny Depp, Al Pacino, Anne Heche, Michael Madsen. Dir: Mike Newell.
20th Century Fox (310) 369-1000 (212) 556-2400	Star Wars Special Edition (1977 reissue), 1/31, SF, PG, ~125 min. Dolby SR & SRD, SDDS, DTS, Anamorphic. Harrison Ford, Mark Hamill, Carrie Fisher, Alec Guiness, Peter Cushing. Dir. George Lucas.	The Empire Strikes Back Special Edition (1980 reissue), 2/21, SF, PG, ~127 min. Dobly SR & SRD, SDDS, DTS, Anamorphic. Harrison Ford, Mark Hamill, Carrie Fisher, Billy Dee Williams. Dir: Irvin Kershner. Inventing the Abbots, 2/28, Dra, R, ~105 min. Dolby SR, SDDS, Anamorphic. Liv Tyler, Joaquin Phoenix, Billy Crudup, Jennifer Connelly Dir: Pat O'Conner.	Return of the Jedi Special Edition (1983 reissue), 3/7, SF, PG, Dobly SR & SRD, SDDS, DTS, Anamorphic. Harrison Ford, Mark Hamill, Carrie Fisher, Billy Dee Williams. Dir: Richard Marquand Turbo: A Power Rangers Adventure, 3/26, Adv, Dolby SR, Flat. Jason David Frank, Steve Cardenas, Catherine Sutherland. Dir: David Winning	Picture Perfect, 4/4, Rom/Com, ~110 min. Dolby SR, Flat. Jennifer Aniston, Kevin Bacon, Olympia Dukakis, Jay Mohr, Illeana Douglas. Dir. Glenn Gordon Caron Volcano, Act/Adv, Dolby SR, SRD, SDDS, DTS, Flat. Tommy Lee Jones, Anne Heche, Gaby Hoffmann, Don Cheadle, John Corbett. Dir: Mick Jackson.
Universal (818) 777-1000 (212) 759-7500	Fierce Creatures, 1/24, Com, PG-13, 98 min, Anamorphic, Dolby SR, DTS. Kevin Kline, Jamie Lee Curtis, John Cleese, Michael Palin. Dir: Robert Young	Dante's Peak, 2/7, Act/Adv, PG-13, Dolby SR, DTS. Pierce Brosnan, Linda Hamilton. Dir. Roger Donaldson	Liar Liar, 3/21, Com, Dolby SR, DTS. Jim Carrey, Maura Tierney, Cary Elwes, John Lovitz, Swoosie Kurtz, Jennifer Tilly. Dir. Tom Shadyac.	That Old Feeling, 4/4, Com, Dolby SR, DTS. Bette Midler, Dennis Fanna, Danny Nucci. Dir: Carl Reiner. McHale's Navy, Com, Dolby SR, DTS. Tom Arnold, David Alan Grier, Dean Stockwell, Tim Curry. Dir: Bryan Spicer. Reach the Rock, Dra/Com. Alessandro Nivola, William Sadler, Bruce Norris, Brooke Langton. Dir: Bill Ryan.
Warner Bros. (818) 954-6000 (212) 484-8000		Vegas Vacation, 2/14, Com, PG, 91 min. Chevy Chase, Beverly D'Angelo, Randy Quaid. Dir: Stephen Kessler. Rosewood, 2/21 wide, Dra, R, 139 min. Jon Voight, Ving Rhames, Michael Rooker, Ester Rolle. Dir: John Singleton	Leo Tolstoy's Anna Karenina 3/7 ltd, Dra, 105 min. Sophie Marceau, Mia Kirschner. Dir: Bernard Rose. Selena 3/21, Dra. Jennifer Lopez, Edward James Olmos. Dir: Gregory Nava. Cats Don't Dance, 3/28, Ani, G, 69 min. Voices: Scott Bakula, Kathy Najimy. Dir: Mark Dindal. 187, Dra. Samuel L. Jackson, John Heard, Kelly Rowan. Dir: Kevin Reynolds.	Murder at 1600, 4/11, Thr, 106 min. Wesley Snipes, Diane Lane, David Benzali, Dennis Miller. Dir: Dwight H. Little. Addicted to Love, 4/18, Rom/Com. Meg Ryan, Matthew Broderick, Kelly Preston. Dir: Griffin Dunne. L.A. Confidential, 4/25, Dra. Kevin Spacey, Kim Basinger, Danny DeVito, Russell Crowe, James Cromwell. Dir: Curtis Hanson

FEATURE CHART — APRIL 1997

May	June	Forthcoming
Nothing to Lose, 5/23, Com. Martin Lawrence, Tim Robbins, John C. McGinley, Giancarlo Esposito, Kelly Preston. Dir. Steve Oedekerk	ConAir, 6/6, Act/Adv, Scope. Nicolas Cage, John Malkovich, John Cusack, Steve Buscemi, Ving Rhames, Colm Meaney Dir. Simon West. Hercules, 6/27, Ani. Voices: James Woods, Danny DeVito, Tate Donovan. Dirs: Ron Clements, John Musker.	George of the Jungle, July, Live Act. Brendan Fraser, Leslie Mann. Dir: Sam Weisman. Gone Fishin', Aug, Com, PG. Joe Pesci, Danny Glover. Dir: Christopher Cain. Deep Rising, Act/Thr. Treat Williams. Dir. Stephen Sommers. In Pursuit of Honor (formerly G.I. Jane, Navy Cross), Act. Demi Moore, Viggo Mortensen. Dir: Ridley Scott. Playing God, Dra. Timothy Hutton. Dir. Andy Wilson. Rocket Man (formerly Space Cadet), Harland Williams. The Absentminded Professor (aka Flubber), Com. Robin Williams. An Alan Smithee Film (working title), Com. Sylvester Stallone, Whoopie Goldberg, Jackie Chan. A Thousand Acres Dra. Jessica Lange, Michelle Pfeiffer, Jennifer Jason Leigh. Dir: Jocelyn Moorhouse. Kundun, Dra Dir. Martin Scorsese. Ishmael, Dra Dir. Jon Turteltaub. The Little Mermaind (reissue), Ani. Firelight, Dra Dir. William Nicholson.	Buena Vista (818) 567-5000 (212) 593-8900
The Fifth Element, 5/9, SF. Bruce Willis, Gary Oldman, Ian Holm, Milla Jovovich. Dir: Luc Besson		Men in Black, 7/2, SF, Dolby A, SR, SDDS. Tommy Lee Jones, Will Smith, Linda Fiorentino, Rip Torn. Dir: Barry Sonnenfeld. Air Force One (formerly AFD), 7/25, Act, SDDS. Harrison Ford, Gary Oldman, Glenn Close. Dir: Wolfgang Peterson. Excess Baggage, Aug, Act/Adv, Dolby A, SR, SDDS. Alicia Silverstone, Benicio del Toro, Christopher Walken. Dir: Marco Brambilla. Buddy, Fall, Com. Rene Russo, Robbie Coltrane, Paul Reubens. Dir: Caroline Thompson. Gattaca (formerly The Eighth Day), Fall, SF. Ethan Hawke, Uma Thurman, Jude Law. Dir: Andrew Niccol. Apt Pupil, Dra. Ian McKellen, Brad Renfro, Kevin Pollack, Joe Morton. Dir: Bryan Singer.	Columbia (310) 280-8000 (212) 833-8500
Warriors of Virtue, 5/2, Act/Adv, PG, DTS. Angus MacFadyen, Mario Yedidia, Marley Shelton, Chao-Li Chi. Dir. Ronny Yu.		All Along the Watchtower, Dra. All the Pretty Horses, Dra Dir: Mike Nichols. Bond 18 X-mas. Pierce Brosnan, Michelle Khan (Yeoh). The Day After Tomorrow, Sus. The Fantasticks, Mus/Com, PG, 108 min. Joel Grey, Joe McIntyre. Dir. Michael Ritchie. Fireworks, Dra. Dir. Mark Rydell. Killer's Kiss, Act/Thr. Linda Fiorentino. Kiss Me Deadly, Thr. Dir. Michael Mann. Sixteen Pleasures. Dir: Michael Apted. Supernova, SF/Thr. Dir: Joe Nimziki. To Brave Every Danger, Dra. Wild Card Dir. Robert Altman. Hurricane, Dra, Fall. Brendan Sexton III. Dir: Morgan J. Freeman. The Fortune Cookie, Com. Bette Midler, Candice Bergen. Dir: John Amiel. The Man In The Iron Mask, Adv. Leonardo DiCaprio, John Malkovich, Gabriel Byrne. Dir. Randall Wallace.	MGM/UA (310) 449-3000 (212) 708-0300
Children of the Revolution, 5/1, Com, 102 min. Judy Davis, Geoffrey Rush. Dir: Peter Duncan. Operation Condor (Hong Kong), 5/2, Act/Adv. Carol Cheng, Ikeda Shoko. Dir/Star: Jackie Chan. Temptress Moon, 5/9, Dra, R. Gong Li, Leslie Cheung. Dir: Chen Kaige. Shall We Dance (Japan), 5/16, Com, PG. Koji Yasuyo, Tamiyo Kusakari. Dir: Masayuki Suo	Mouth to Mouth (Spain), 6/6, Com, R, Dolby SRD, Scope, 110 min. Javier Bardem, Maria Barranco. Dir: Manuel Gomez Pereira. Love Serenade, 6/20. Miranda Otto. Dir: Shirley Barrett. Talk of Angels, 6/27, Dra, PG-13, 97 min., Dolby SR. Polly Walker, Vincent Perez. Dir: Nick Hamm.	Wings of a Dove, 7/11, Dra. Helena Bonham Carter, Linus Roache. Dir: Ian Softley. B. Monkey, 7/18, Dra. Jared Harris, Rupert Everett. Dir: Michael Radford. Copland, 8/1, Dra. Sylvester Stallone, Robert DeNiro. Dir: James Mangold. An American Werewolf in Paris, 8/29, Hor/Com. Julie Delpy, Tom Everett Scott. Dir. Anthony Waller. She's DeLovely, 9/12, Dra. Sean Penn, Robin Wright, John Travolta, Gena Rowlands. Dir: Nick Cassavetes. Dogwater, Rom/Com. David Schwimmer, Lara Flynn Boyle. Dir: David Schwimmer. A Midsummer's Night Dream. Alex Jennings, Barry Lynch. Dir. Adrian Noble. Sarajevo, Dra. Woody Harrelson, Marisa Tomei. Dir: Michael Winterbottom. Wishful Thinking, Fall. Jennifer Beals, James LeGros. The House of Yes, Dra/Com. Parker Posey.	Miramax (212) 941-3800 (213) 845-4200
Austin Powers: International Man of Mystery, 5/2, Com. Mike Meyers, Elizabeth Hurley, Mimi Rogers, Michael York. Dir: Jay Roach. Boogie Nights, 5/23 ltd, 6/13 wide, Com/Dra. Mark Wahlberg, Julianne Moore. Dir: Paul Thomas Anderson.		Money Talks, 7/18, Act/Com. Charlie Sheen, Chris Tucker, Heather Locklear. Dir. Brett Ratner. Mortal Kombat II: Annihilation, 8/1, Act. Spawn, 8/22, SF. Michael Jai White, John Leguizamo. Dir. Mark Dippe. Trial and Error, 8/29, Com, PG-13. Michael Richards, Jeff Daniels. Dir: Jonathan Lynn. One Night (formerly One Night Stand), 9/26, Dra. Flat. Wesley Snipes, Nastassija Kinski. Dir. Mike Figgis. Most Wanted (formerly America's Most Wanted), 10/3, Act/Com. Keenan Ivory Wayans. Dir. David Hogan. Woo, 11/7, Rom/Com. Jada Pinkett. Dir: Daisy Von Scherler Mayer. Dark City, 9/12, Thr. William Hurt. Dir: Alex Proyas. Overnight Delivery. Jason Bloom. Wag the Dog, '98. Dustin Hoffman, Robert DeNiro. Dir: Barry Levinson. Lost in Space, '98. William Hurt, Gary Oldman. Dir: Stephen Hopkins. The Women. Summer '98, Com. Julia Roberts, Meg Ryan.	New Line (310) 854-5811 (212) 649-4900
The Flood, 5/2, Act. Christian Slater, Morgan Freeman, Minnie Driver, Randy Quaid. Dir: Mikael Salomon.	In and Out, 6/13, Com. Kevin Kline, Tom Selleck, Joan Cusack, Debbie Reynolds. Dir: Frank Oz.	Titanic, 7/2, Rom/Adv. Bill Paxton, Kate Winslet, Leonardo DiCaprio. Dir. James Cameron. Face Off, 7/2, Act. John Travolta, Nicolas Cage. Dir: John Woo. The Truman Show, 8/8, Dra. Jim Carrey, Dennis Hopper. Dir: Peter Weir. Event Horizen, 8/22. Laurence Fishburne, Kathleen Quinlin. Dir: Paul Anderson. The Magic Hour (tentative title), 9/19. Paul Newman, Susan Sarandon. Dir. Robert Benton. Going West in America, Fall, Thr. Dennis Quaid, Danny Glover. Dir. Jeb Stuart. Kiss the Girls, Fall, Sus. Morgan Freeman, Ashley Judd. Dir: Gary Fleder. Night Falls on Manhattan, Fall, Dra. Andy Garcia, Richard Dreyfuss. Dir: Sidney Lumet. Fairy Tale: A True Story (formerly Illumination), Dra. Peter O'Toole. Dir: Charles Sturridge. Prince Valiant, Act/Adv. Stephen Moyer. Dir. Anthony Hickox. Rainmaker, Dra. Laurence Fishburne, Claire Danes, Mickey Rourke. Dir. Francis Ford Coppola.	Paramount (213) 956-5000 (212) 373-7000
	My Best Friend's Wedding, 6/27. Rom/Com. Julia Roberts, Dermot Mulroney, Cameron Diaz. Dir. P.J. Hogan.	Desperate Measures, 8/8, Act. Michael Keaton, Andy Garcia. Dir: Barbet Schroeder. Seven Years in Tibet, 10/10, Dra. Brad Pitt. Dir. Jean-Jacques Annaud. Starship Troopers, 11/7, SF, SDDS. Neil Patrick Harris, Denise Richards. Dir: Paul Verhoeven. Kilronen, Thr, SDDS. Jonathan Schaech, Jessica Lange, Gwyneth Paltrow. Dir: Jonathan Darby. Old Friends, Dra. Jack Nicholson, Helen Hunt, Greg Kinnear. Dir: James Brooks. Peter Pan, Adv. Dir: John Hughes. Stinkers, Com. B.D. Wong, Bronson Pinchot. Dir: Barnet Kellman. Killing Time, Thr. Kendra Torgan, Craig, Fairbrass. Dir: Bharat Nalun. The Mark of Zorro, Act/Adv. Antonio Banderas, Anthony Hopkins, Catherine Jones. Dir: Martin Campbell.	TriStar (310) 280-8000 (212) 833-8500
Out to Sea, 5/30, Com. Dolby SR, SDDS, Flat. Walter Matthau, Jack Lemmon, Brent Spiner, Dyan Cannon. Dir: Martha Coolidge		Speed II: Cruise Control, 7/2, Act. Sandra Bullock, Jason Patric, Willem Dafoe. Dir: Jan De Bont. Home Alone 3, 7/11, Alex D. Linz, Olek Krupa, Rya Kihlstedt. Dir: Raja Gosnell. Alien Resurrection, 8/1. Sigourney Weaver, Winona Ryder. Dir: Jean-Pierre Jeunet. Firestorm, Oct, Act./Adv. Howie Long, Suzy Amis, Scott Glen. Dir.: Dean Semler. Anastasia. 11/21, Ani. Dirs. Don Bluth, Gary Goldman. Bookworm, Fall, Act./Thr. Anthony Hopkins, Alec Baldwin. Dir: Lee Tamahori. Doctor Dolittle, Com. Eddie Murphy. Dir. Betty Thomas. Great Expectations, Fall, Dra. Robert De Niro, Gwyneth Paltrow, Ethan Hawke. Dir. Alfonso Cuaron. A Life Less Ordinary. Dra. Cameron Diaz, Holly Hunter. Dir. Danny Boyle. Soul Food. Dra. Vanessa Williams, Mehki Phifer. Dir: George Tillman, Jr. Untitled Bulworth. Halle Berry, Paul Sorvino. Dir/Star: Warren Beatty.	20th Century Fo (310) 369-1000 (212) 556-2400
The Lost World, 5/23, Adv, Dolby SR, DTS. Jeff Goldblum, Julianne Moore, Vince Vaughn, Pete Postlethwaite, Arliss Howard, Richard Schiff, Peter Stormare, Vanessa Lee Chester. Dir: Steven Spielberg.		Leave it to Beaver, 8/1, Com. Janine Turner, Christopher McDonald. Dir. Andy Cadiff. Kull the Conqueror, 8/29, Adv. Kevin Sorbo, Tia Carrere. Dir: John Nicolella. The Fairy Godmother (formerly A Simple Wish), Com. Mara Wilson, Martin Short, Kathleen Turner, Robert Pastorelli. Dir: Michael Ritchie. Untitled Jackal Project. Thr. Bruce Willis, Richard Gere, Sidney Portier. Dir. Michael Canton-Jones. Virus. Thr. Jamie Lee Curtis, Donald Sutherland. Dir: John Bruno. Primary Colors, Dra. John Travolta. Dir: Mike Nichols. Meet Joe Black, Rom/Dra. Brad Pitt. Dir. Martin Brest.	Universal (818) 777-1000 (212) 759-7500
Father's Day. 5/9, Com. Robin Williams, Billy Crystal, Natassja Kinski, Julia Louis-Dreytuss. Dir: Ivan Reitman.	Batman and Robin, 6/20, Act/Adv. George Clooney, Chris O'Donnell, Alicia Silverstone, Arnold Schwarzenegger, Uma Thurman. Dir: Joel Schumacher	Contact, 7/11, Thr. Jodie Foster, Matthew McConaughey. Dir. Robert Zemeckis. Conspiracy Theory, 7/25, Thr. Mel Gibson, Julia Roberts. Dir. Richard Donner. Edwards and Hunt. July, Com. Chris Farley. Dir: Christopher Guest. Wild America, July, Adv, PG. Jonathan Taylor Thomas. Dir: Bill Dear. Free Willy 3, 8/1, Fam/Adv. Jason James Richter. Dir. Sam Pillsbury. Devil's Advocate, Aug. Al Pacino. Dir: Taylor Hackford. Steel, Aug, Act/Adv, Shaquille O'Neal. Dir: Kenneth Johnson. Mad City. Dra. John Travolta, Dustin Hoffman. Dir: Constantin Costa-Gravas. Home Fries, Com. Drew Barrymore, Gary Busey. Dir: Dean Parisot. Incognito. Thr, Jason Patric. Dir: John Badham. Watch That Man, 7/97. Bill Murray. Dir: Jon Amiel. Fire Down Below, Act. Steven Segal. Pre, Dra. Billy Crudup. Dir: Robert Towne. Fallen. Dra. Denzel Washington, John Goodman. Dir: Embeth Davidtz.	Warner Bros. (818) 954-6000 (212) 484-8000

BOXOFFICE Independent Feature Chart APRIL1997

MARCH

Artificial Eye
212-255-1922

Mon Homme (France), Com/Dra, 98 min. Anouk Grinberg, Gerard Lanvin. Dir: Bertrand Blier. 3/7 NY

Artistic License
212-265-9119

Sleepover, Dra, 88 min. Michael Albanese, Karl Giant. Dir: John Sullivan. 3/10 NY

Arrow
212-258-2200

Madame Butterfly (Italy), Mus, 129 min. Richard Troxell. Dir: Frederic Mitterrand. 3/1 LA

East West Film Partners
212-594-3334

Good Luck, 98 min, Gregory Hines, Vincent D'Onofrio. Dir: Richard LaBrie. 3/7 ltd, 3/27 exp

Fine Line
212-649-4800

The Quiet Room, Dra, PG, 93 min. Chloe Ferguson, Celine O'Leary. Dir: Rolf de Heer. 3/21NY, 4/18exp.
Crash, Dra, NC-17, 100 min. Holly Hunter, James Spader, Dir: David Cronenberg. 3/21

First Look
310-855-1199

The Designated Mourner. Dra/Com. Mike Nichols, Miranda Richardson. Dir: David Hare.

First Run
212-243-0600

The Watermelon Woman, Com, 85 min. Guinevere Turner. Act/Dir: Cheyrl Dunye.

Fox Searchlight
310-369-4402

The Van, Com. Colm Meaney, Donal O'Kelly. Dir: Stephen Frears. 3/14
Love and Other Catastrophes (Australia), Com, 79 min. Frances O'Connor, Alice Garner. Dir: Emma Kate Croghan. 3/28

Gramercy
310-777-1960

Commandments, Dra. Courteney Cox, Aidan Quinn, Anthony LaPaglia. Dir: Daniel Taplitz.

Legacy
213-467-3700

Cadillac Ranch, Dra. Suzy Amis. 3/14 ltd

Live
818-778-3174

Gentlemen Don't Eat Poets, Dra, R, 98 min. Sting, Theresa Russell. Dir: John Paul Davidson.
Dead Men Can't Dance, Act/Dra, 101 min. Michael Biehn. Dir: Steven Anderson. 3/7 ltd, 3/21exp

Northern Arts
413-268-9301

Hearts and Minds, Thr, R, 105 min. Danny Keogh, Patrick Shai. Dir: Ralph Ziman. 3/14
Gray's Anatomy, Com, NR, 80 min. Spalding Gray. Dir: Steven Soderbergh. 3/19

October
212-539-4000

Female Perversions, Dra, R, 119 min. Tilda Swinton, Amy Madigan, Karen Sillas. Dir: Susan Streitfeld. 3/28 NY, LA

Orion Pictures
310-282-0550

City of Industry, Dra. Timothy Hutton, Harvey Keitel. Dir: John Irvin. 3/7

Phaedra Cinema
310-319-5346

Sudden Manhattan, Rom/Com, 85 min. Louise Lasser. Dir/Star: Adrienne Shelly. 3/7
Without Air, Dra, 88 min. Lauri Crook. Dir: Neil Abramson.

Seventh Art
213-845-1455

Salut Cousin (French Algeria), Com, 95 min. Gad Elmaleh, Mess Hattou. Dir: Merzak Allouache.

Strand
310-395-5002

Boys Life 2, (shorts compilation), Com/Dra, 90 min. Dir: Four directors. 3/7

Tara Releasing
415-454-5838

The Sadness of Sex, Com, NR, 86 min. Dir: Rupert Wainwright. 3/14

Trimark
310-314-3040

Kama Sutra, Dra, 114 min. Sarita Choudhury. Dir: Mira Nair. 3/7 exp
Underworld, Thr. Denis Leary, Joe Mantegna. Dir: Roger Christian.

Cinema Village Features
212-431-5119

Fetishes, Doc. Dir: Nick Broomfield.

APRIL

CFP
212-995-9662

Hollow Reed, Dra, 106 min. Martin Donovan, Ian Hart. Dir: Angela Pope. 4/18

Fine Line
Pink Flamingos, (1972 reissue), Divine. Dir: John Waters. 4/11
Roseanna's Grave, Com, PG-13, 99 min. Jean Reno, Mercedes Ruehl. Dir: Paul Weiland. 4/18
All Over Me, Dra, R, 90 min. Alison Folland. Dir: Alex Sichel. 4/25

First Look
A Brother's Kiss, Dra, Nick Chinlund, Michael Raynor, John Leguizamo. Dir: Seth Zvi Rosenfeld.
This is the Sea, Rom/Dra. Richard Harris, Gabriel Byrne. Dir: Mary McGuckian.

Fox Searchlight
Paradise Road, Dra. Glenn Close, Frances McDormand, Julianna Marguiles. Dir: Bruce Beresford. 4/25

Goldwyn
310-284-9273

Kissed, Dra, 80 min. Molly Parker, Peter Outerbridge. Dir: Lynne Stopkewich. 4/11

Gramercy
Keys to Tulsa, Thr. Eric Stoltz, James Spader. Dir: Leslie Grief. 4/11 ltd

Live
The Winner, Thr. Rebecca de Mornay, Vincent D'Onofrio. Dir: Alex Cox.

New Yorker Films
212-247-6110

Flamenco, Doc, 100 min. Dir: Carlos Saura. 4/4

Northern Arts
Schizopolis, Com, 99 min. Steven Soderbergh, Betsy Brantley. Dir: Steven Soderbergh. 4/11

October
Traveller, Crime/Dra. Bill Paxton, Mark Wahlberg, Julianna Marguilies. Dir: Jack Green.

Orion Pictures
Eight Heads in a Duffle Bag, Com/Dra, R. Joe Pesci, Carol Kane. Dir: Tom Schulman. 4/25

Phaedra Cinema
The Next Step, Dra, 90 min. Rick Negron. Dir: Christian Faber

Rhino Films
310-474-4778

Plump Fiction, Com, 85 min. Julie Brown, Sandra Bernhard. Dir: Bob Koherr.

Shadow Distribution
207-872-5111

Mondo (French), Dra, 87 min. Philippe Petit. Dir: Tony Gatliff

Sony Classics
212-833-8851

Broken English, Dra, 91 min. Rade Serbedzija, Sashka Vujcic Dir: Gregor Nicholas.
The Myth of Fingerprints, Dra. Noah Wyle, Julianne Moore, Roy Schneider. Dir: B. Freundlich.

Strand
Late Bloomers, Rom/Dra, 104 min. Connie Nelson, Lisa Peterson. Dir: Julia and Gretchen Dyer.

Theafilm
213-368-1778

A Chorus of Disapproval (1989 UK reissue), Com. Jeremy Irons, Anthony Hopkins. Dir: Michael Wimer.

Trimark
Warrior of Waverly Street, SF. Dir: Manny Coto. Spring
Nothing Personal, Dra, R. John Lynch. Dir: Thaddeus O'Sullivan.
Ripe, Dra. Dir: Mo Ogrodnik.

Triumph
310-280-8059

Bliss, Rom/Dra. Terence Stamp, Craig Sheffer, Sheryl Lee. Dir: Lance Young. 4/4
The Assignment (formerly Jackal). Act. Aidan Quinn, Ben Kingsley, Donald Sutherland. Dir: Christian Duguay. 4/25

Zeitgeist
212-274-1989

Irma Vep (France), Com, NR, 98 min. Maggie Cheung. Dir: Olivier Assayas.

MAY

Artificial Eye
Happiness (France, Le Bonheur Dans Lepres), Com, 102 min. Michel Serrault, Eddy Mitchell. Dir: Etienne Chatiliez. 5/16 NY

CFP
Guantanamera, Com, NR, 124 min. Dirs: Thomas Gutierrez Alea and Juan Carlos Tabio Rey. 5/16

Fine Line
Letters of Love (Japan, formerly Love Letters), Dra, 116 min. Dir: Shunji Iwai. 5/2 NY, 5/23 LA
Gummo. Dra. Chloe Sevigny, Max Perlich, Nick Sutton. Dir: Harmony Korine. 5/16
Love! Valor! Compassion! Dra, 115 min. Jason Alexander, John Glover. Dir: Joe Mantello. 5/16

First Run
Brothers in Trouble, Dra, 102 min. Om Puri. Dir: Udayan Prasad. 5/14

Fox Searchlight
Intimate Relations, Dra, 102 min. Julie Walters, Rupert Graves. Dir: Philip Goodhew. 5/9 ltd.

Goldwyn
Paperback Romance (formerly Lucky Break), Rom/Com. Anthony LaPaglia. Dir: Ben Lewin.
Rough Magic, Rom/Adv, 104 min. Bridget Fonda, Russell Crowe. Dir: Clare Peploe.

New Yorker Films
La Promesse, Dra, NR, 93 min. Dirs: Jean-Pierre Gardenne, Luc Gardenne. 5/16 NY

BOXOFFICE Independent Feature Chart APRIL 1997

Milestone Film & Video
212-865-7449

Woman in the Dunes (Japan, 1964 reissue), 72 min. Dir: Hiroshi Teshigahara.
Antonio Gaudi (Japan, 1985 rerelease), Dir: Hiroshi Teshigahara

Strand
Contempt (1963 reissue), Dra/Com, 103 min. Brigitte Bardot. Dir: Jean-Luc Godard.
Timothy Leary's Dead, Doc, 80 min. Dir: Paul Davids.

Trimark
Sprung, Com, Tisha Campbell, Joe Torry. Dir/Star: Rusty Cundieff. 5/2

Triumph
Truth or Consequences, Sus, Kevin Pollack. Dir/Star: Kiefer Sutherland. 5/2
Masterminds (formerly Smart Alec), Act/Com. Patrick Stewart, Vincent Kartheiser, Brenda Fricker. Dir: Roger Christian. 5/30

JUNE

CFP
The Pillow Book, Dra, 126 min. Vivian Wu, Ewan McGregor. Dir: Peter Greenaway. 6/6

Fine Line
Winter Guest, Dra. Emma Thompson, Phylidda Law. Dir: Alan Rickman. 6/18

First Look
Different For Girls, Rom/Com, 97 min. Rupert Graves, Steven Mackintosh. Dir: Richard Spence.

Kino Intl.
212-629-6880

M (1931 German re-issue), Dra. Peter Lorre. Dir: Fritz Lang. 6/27

New Yorker Films
Deep Crimson, Dra, NR, 114 min. Dir: Arturo Ripstein. 6/20
Gabbeh, Dra, 75 min. Abbas Sayahi, Hossein Moharami. Dir: Mohsen Makhmalbas

Orion Classics
310-282-0550

Ulee's Gold, Dra, 113 min. Peter Fonda, Patricia Richardson. Dir: Victor Nunez.

Roxie Releasing
415-431-3611

The Last Time I Commited Suicide, Dra, 92 min. Thomas Jane, Keanu Reeves. Dir: Stephen Kay

Strand
The Tit and the Moon, Com, 92 min. Dir: Bigas Lunas.
La Sentinelle. (France), Thr, 144 min. Emmanuel Salinger. Dir: Arnaud Desplechin.

JULY

Gramercy
Twin Town, Com/Thr. Rhys Ifans, Llyr Evans. Dir: Kevin Allen.

First Look
Slaves to the Underground, Dra, 92 min. Marisa Ryan, Jason Bortz. Dir: Kristine Peterson.

FORTHCOMING

Arrow
Breathing Room, Rom/Com, 90 min. Dan Futterman. Dir: John Sherman. 11/8

Cabin Fever
203-622-3449

The Elevator, Com. Martin Landau, Martin Sheen.
The Secret Agent Club, Act. Hulk Hogan, Barry Bostwick.
Skeletons, Hor. Dir: Ken Russell.

CFP
Bandwagon, Com/Mus, NR, 103 min. Kevin Corrigna, Lee Holmes. Dir: John Schultz. Sept

Cinema Parallel
To Have (Or Not), Dra, NR, 93 min. Dir. Laetitia Masson.
Talking To Strangers (reissue). 8/2

Dove
310-786-1600

Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy, Com/SF, 92 min. Douglas Adams. Dir: Neil Davies.
Inside the Goldmine, Thr, 92 min. Josh Evans, Alan Marshall, Alicia Tully Jensen. Dir: Josh Evans.

Dreamworks SKG
818-733-7000

El Dorado: City of Gold, Ani. Dir: Will Finn.
Mousehunt, Com/Ani. Nathan Lane, Lee Evans. Dir: Gore Virbinsky. 11/21
The Peacemaker, Act/Adv. George Clooney, Nicole Kidman. Dir: Mimi Leder. Sept.
The Prince of Egypt, Ani. Dirs: Simon Wells, Steve Hicker and Brenda Chapman.
Amistad, (formerly Mutiny) Dra, Matthew McConaughey. Dir: Steven Spielberg.
Saving Private Ryan, Dra. Tom Hanks. Dir: Steven Spielberg.
Blue Vision, Dir: Neil Jordan.
Deep Impact. Dir: Mimi Leder

Filmopolis
310-914-1776

In a Strange City. Winston Chao, Kuei-mai Yang. Dir: Chi Yin.

Fine Line
nowhere, James Duval, Traci Lords. Dir: Gregg Araki. 8/22
Head Above Water, Dra/Com, PG-13, 92 min. Harvey Keitel, Cameron Diaz. Dir: Jim Wilson.
The Tears of Julian Po. Christian Slater, Robin Tunney. Dir: Alan Wade.
Girl Talk, Dra/Com. Randi Ingerman, Paget Brewster. Dir/Star: Troy Beyer.

First Look
Mrs. Dalloway, Dra. Vanessa Redgrave, Rupert Graves. Dir: Marleen Gorris. Fall
The Apprentice.

First Run
Hamsun. Max Von Sydow. Dir: Jan Troell
Six O'Clock News. Dir: Ross McElwee.
Project Grizzly. Dir: Peter Lynch.

Fox Searchlight
Ice Storm, Dra. Kevin Kline, Joan Allen, Sigourney Weaver, Christina Ricci. Dir: Ang Lee. Fall.
Cousin Bette, Dra. Jessica Lange, Elisabeth Shue, Bob Hoskins. Dir: Des McAnuff. Fall.
The Full Monte, Com, 90 min. Robert Carlisle. Dir: Peter Cattaneo. Aug
Oscar & Lucinda. Ralph Fiennes. Dir: Gillian Armstrong.
Polish Wedding. Claire Danes, Gabriel Byrne, Lena Olin. Dir: Theresa Connelly
Star Maps, Dra, 90 min. Douglas Spain. Dir: Miguel Arteta.

Goldwyn
Napolean, Ani, G, 82 min. Voices: Adam Wylie, Bronson Pinchot. Dir: Mario Andreacchio. Sum
The Big Red. Jonathan Schaech, Rod Taylor. Dir: Stephan Elliott.
I Love You... Don't Touch Me, Com, 86 min. Marla Schaffel. Dir: Julie Davis.

Gramercy
How To Be a Player, Com. Bill Belamy. Dir: Lionel Martin. Aug
The Matchmaker, Com. Jeanene Garafalo. Dir: Mark Joffe. Sept
Dr. Bean, Com. Rowan Atkinson.
The Big Lebowski. Jeff Bridges, John Goodman, Steve Buscemi. Dirs: Joel and Ethan Coen. Nov

Kit Parker
800-538-5838

Day For Night (1973 French reissue), Dra, PG, 120 min. Dir: Francois Truffaut.
Death in Venice (1971 Italian reissue), Dra, PG, 130 min. Dirk Bogarde. Dir: Luchino Visconti.

Live
No Way Home, Dra. Tim Roth. Dir: Buddy Gioviazzo. Sept
Critical Care, Dra/Thr. James Spader, Albert Brooks. Dir: Sydney Lumet. Oct
Boys Night Out, Thr. Christopher Walken, Sean Patrick Flannery. Dir: Peter O'Fallow. Nov
Wishmaster, Hor. Dir: Robert Kurtzman. Sept

Movieworld Ent.
510-244-5590

The Killing Kind, Dra. Kirk Harris.
The Lost Woman, SF, Jennifer Rubin.

New Yorker Films
Forever Mozart, Dra, NR, 84 min. Madeleine Assas. Dir: Jean-Luc Godard.

October
Kicked in the Head. Linda Fiorentino, Michael Rappaport, Lili Taylor. Dir: Matthew Harrison Career Girls, Dra. Katrin Cartlidge. Dir: Mike Lee.

Orion Classics
This World, Then the Fireworks, Dra. Billy Zane, Gina Gershon. Dir: Michael Oblowitz. Sum
Storefront Hitchcock, Doc. Dir: Jonathan Demme.

Orion Pictures
Gang Related, Dra, R. Tupac Shakur, Jim Belushi. Dir: Jim Kous. 9/10
The Locusts, Dra. Kate Capshaw, Ashley Judd. Dir: John Patrick Kelley. Sept
Independence, Dra. Dean Cain, Drew Barrymore. Dir: Tamra Davis. Fall
Music From Another Room, Com. Brenda Blethyn, Jennifer Tilly. Dir: Charles Peters

Rhino Films
Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas, Dra. Johnny Depp. Dir: Alex Cox.

Shadow Distribution
La Petite Apocalypse (French), Com/Dra, 110 min. Pierre Arditi. Dir: Costa-Gavras.

Sony Classics
Call Me Victor (France), Com, PG, 100 min. Jeanne Moreau. Dir: Guy Jacques.
Dream With the Fishes, Dra, 96 min. David Arquette. Dir: Finn Taylor
Fast, Cheap & Out of Control, Doc, 79 min. Dir: Errol Morris.
When the Cat's Away (France), Dra/Com, 95 min. Garance Clavel. Dir: Cedric Kapisch

Strand
Nights of Cabiria (1957 Italian reissue), Dra, 110 min. Giulietta Masina. Dir: Federico Fellini. Aug
Self-Made Hero (France). Fall
Full Speed, Dra. Dir: Gael Murel.

Tara Releasing
Mushrooms (Australia), Com, 93 min. Dir: Alan Madden.

Trimark
Eve's Bayou, Dra. Samuel L. Jackson, Lynn Whitfield. Dir: Kasi Lemmons. Fall
Chairman of the Board, Com. Carrot Top. Fall
Box of Moonlight, Dra, 107 min. John Turturro. Dir: Tom DiCillo.
Prarie Fire. Natasha Henstridge.

THE BOXOFFICE HOME RELEASE CHART

BOXOFFICE

APRIL 1997

HOME VIDEO RELEASE DATE	TITLE	BOXOFFICE GROSS	SCREENS	THEATRICAL RELEASE	THEATRICAL/VIDEO DISTRIBUTOR
April 8	Extreme Measures	$17,300,000	2,298	September 27	Columbia/Columbia TriStar
April 8	Lone Star	$12,300,000	189	June 21	Sony Classics
April 8	Romeo + Juliet	$46,100,000+	1,276	November 1	Fox
April 15	The Associate	$12,400,000	1,781	October 25	Hollywood/Buena Vista
April 15	Emma	$22,000,000	585	August 2	Miramax/Buena Vista
April 15	Looking for Richard	$1,300,000	81	October 11	Fox
April 15	Secrets and Lies	$6,400,000+	145	November 8	October
April 22	Rich Man's Wife	$8,500,000	1009	September 13	Hollywood/Buena Vista
April 22	Set It Off	$35,600,000+	1,016	November 6	New Line
April 22	To Gillian on Her 37th Birthday	$4,100,000	5	October 18	Triumph
April 29	The Preacher's Wife	$45,600,000+	2,048	December 13	Hollywood/Buena Vista
May 20	Stephen King's Thinner	$15,000,000+	2,009	October 25	Paramount
May	Bad Moon	$1,100,000	825	November 1	Warner Bros.
May	Big Night	$11,800,000+	366	September 20	MGM/UA
May	Get On the Bus	$5,700,000	1,207	October 16	Columbia/Columbia TriStar
May	Larger Than Life	[illegible]	[illegible]	November 1	MGM/UA
May	Mars Attacks!	$36,400,000+	1,955	December 13	Warner Bros.
May	Michael Collins	$10,900,000	878	October 11	Warner Bros.
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	November 15	TriStar/Columbia TriStar

May	Bad Moon	$1,100,000	825	November 1	Warner Bros.
May	Big Night	$11,800,000+	366	September 20	MGM/UA
May	Get On the Bus	$5,700,000	1,207	October 16	Columbia/Columbia TriStar
May	Larger Than Life
May	Mars Attacks!	$36,400,000+	1,955	December 13	Warner Bros.
May	Michael Collins	$10,900,000	878	October 11	Warner Bros.
May	The Mirror Has Two Faces	$40,800,000	2,489	November 15	TriStar/Columbia TriStar
May	Ransom	$132,400,000+	2,768	November 8	Touchstone/Buena Vista
May	Sleepers	$53,300,000	2,080	October 18	Warner Bros.
May	Swingers	$4,400,000+	164	October 18	Buena Vista/Miramax
June	101 Dalmatians	$132,200,000+	2,901	November 27	Walt Disney/Buena Vista
June	Beavis & Butthead Do America	$62,000,000+	2,417	December 20	Paramount
June	The Crucible	$7,100,000+	344	November 27	Fox
June	The English Patient	$39,200,000+	683	November 15	Miramax/Buena Vista
June	Jingle All the Way	$60,100,000+	2,404	November 22	Fox
June	Michael	$80,300,000+	2,141	December 25	New Line
June	My Fellow Americans	$21,400,000+	1,915	December 20	Warner Bros.
June	Ridicule	$1,600,000+	74	November 27	Miramax/Buena Vista
June	Scream	$70,400,000+	1,994	December 20	Miramax/Buena Vista
June	Shine	$14,500,000+	314	November 22	Fine Line/New Line
June	Star Trek: First Contact	$91,000,000+	2,812	November 22	Paramount
July	Daylight	$32,300,000+	2,189	December 6	Universal/MCA
July	The Evening Star	$12,500,000	1,268	December 25	Paramount
July	Jerry Maguire	$116,600,000+	2,531	December 13	TriStar/Columbia TriStar
July	Mother	$12,500,000+	621	December 25	Paramount
July	One Fine Day	$43,600,000+	1,975	December 20	Fox
July	The People vs. Larry Flynt	$17,800,000+	1,233	December 25	Fox
August	Turbulence	$10,700,000+	2,094	January 10	MGM/UA

Compiled by BOXOFFICE MAGAZINE. Numbers for Boxoffice Gross represent total domestic boxoffice grosses to the nearest $100,000; + signs indicate that films remain in theatrical release. Number of Screens indicates the maximum number of screens in widest, simultaneous release. Entries in the Theatrical/Video Distributor column list two names when the video releasing company is different from (or releases through a subsidiary different from) the theatrical distributor. Exact day-and-date specific entries for Home Video Release are confirmed; in all other cases, the month indicated for a release is forecast by the editors of BOXOFFICE. BOXOFFICE is not liable for errors or omissions in the chart.

ADVERTISER INDEX

AICP Corp./Jaret International Inc.	59
Action Lighting	219
American Licorice Co.	SW-7
Ampac Theatre Cleaning Services	SW-56
Automaticket/Hurley Screen Corp.	182
C. Cretors and Co.	46
Caddy Products	SW-44
Cargill, Inc.	15
Charter Financial	161
Christie Incorporated	Cover 2
Cinema Consultants & Services	SW-42
Cinema Equipment Sales, Inc.	148
Cinema Equipment, Inc.	SW-45
Cinema Film Systems, Inc.	55
Cinema Products International	167
Cinema Service Company	187
Cinema Supply Company	186
Cinetech, Inc.	172
Cinevision Corporation	153
Component Engineering	160
Crain/Atlanta, Inc.	183
Creative Images	193
Cy Young Industries, Inc.	179
DTS (Digital Theater Systems)	11
DeClercq's Theatrical Specialities	182
Deep Vision 3-D	188
Dolby Laboratories Inc.	13
Edifice, Inc.	SW-51
Electronic Creations Inc.	219
Equipment, Etc.	189
EVI Audio Cinema Systems	139
FF & E Enterprises	145
Filmack Studios	138
GLASSFORM	173
Gold Medal Products Co.	SW-31
Goldberg Brothers, Inc.	163
Great Western Products Co.	SW-9
Hadden Theatre Supply Co.	SW-43
Hafler Professional	29
High Performance Stereo	SW-13
International Cinema Equip. Co.	SW-20/21
Jarco Industries Inc.	53
Kintek, Inc.	SW-41
Kit Parker Films	188
Kneisley Electric Company	SW-55
Largo Construction Inc.	SW-56
Lawrence Metal Products	174
Lucasfilm Ltd.	SW-25, 130
Manutech	171
Marble Company Inc.	155
Maroevich, O'Shea & Coghlan Ins.	182
Mars Theatre Mgt. Systems	147
McAllister Associates, Inc.	136
McRae Theatre Equipment	193
Muvico Theatres, Inc.	SW-43
NCS Corporation	SW-37
National Cinema Service Corp.	SW-48
National Ticket Co.	175
Nick Mulone & Son, Inc.	187
ORC Lighting Products	23
OSRAM SYLVANIA	31
Odell's	SW-53
Odyssey Products, Inc.	41
Peavey Electronics Corp.	35
PepsiCo., Inc.	SW-60
Permlight Technology	SW-39
Pik:Nik Cinema Postcards	149
Pike Productions	170
Pot O'Gold Productions, Inc.	183
Proctor Companies	5, 10
Promotion In Motion Companies	19, 21
Promotional MGT. Group	47
QSC Audio Products, Inc.	Cover 3
RDS Data Group Inc.	165
Ready Theatre Systems	186
Ricos Manufacturing Co.	SW-19
Robert L. Potts Enterprises	183
SEGA GameWorks L.L.C.	SW-5
SMART Theatre Systems	SW-2, 39
SPECO Systems & Products Co.	135
Schult Industries, Inc.	45
Server Products Inc.	129
Signature Electronic Signs Inc.	49
Sony Cinema Products Corporation	17
Soundfold International	SW-55
Stein Industries Inc.	187, C-4
Strong International	61
Sunmark Inc.	SW-59
TSM Trade Show Marketing	24-25
TVP Theatre & Video Products	174
Technikote Corp.	186
Tempo Industries, Inc.	173
Theafilm Distribution Network	9
Theatre Service & Supply	SW-15
Theatre Service Network, Inc.	172
Theatre Services Corp.	131
Ticketpro Ticketing Systems	166, 169
Tivoli Industries, Inc.	SW-11
Tootsie Roll Industries, Inc.	3
ULTRATECH	168
Ultra-Stereo Labs, Inc.	33
Wagner Zip-Change, Inc.	178
Wallace Theatre Corporation	164
Willming Reams Animation, Inc.	137
Windjammer Barefoot Cruises	SW-15
Wolk, (Edward H.), Inc.	186
Worrell Sound & Projection	175
Wyandot	178
Yumex ILC Ltd.	SW-49

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

HELP WANTED

AUDIO/VIDEO/FILM TECHNICIAN OR TRAINEE: Film service and electronics company seeks experienced, versatile technician for fast-paced environment. Must be a team player and well-organized, with excellent people and follow-through skills. Electronic experience a plus. Please fax cover letter and resume to: (212) 586-5069.

BOOTH MANAGER: National exhibitor has opportunities for technician/manager to oversee all booth operations in a large screen complex or multiple complexes. Job duties include: ensure perfect sight and sound presentation, supervise and train other booth personnel, routine maintenance, and emergency repairs. The right candidate will have thorough experience in sound alignment and tuning, projector/platter/automation/lamphouse repairs, and be willing to work flexible hours and handle emergency calls as required. Willingness to relocate necessary. We offer a competitive salary and benefits, plus bonus. Send resume and cover letter, including salary requirements, to Boxoffice Response Number 4734.

Expanding national circuit is looking for experienced multiplex managers and assistant managers. Immediate opportunities in the Northeast, South-Central and West Coast regions. Send resume/references and salary requirements to: Silver Cinemas Inc., c/o Ron Reid, 17103 Preston Rd., Suite 190, LB 120, Dallas, Texas 75248.

GENERAL MANAGER POSITION: Great opportunity for an experienced manager to help propel a new, unique, growing movie theatre company in the Midwest. To meet the challenges of expansion and to exceed industry standards, we are seeking an exceptional leader. Both the facility as well as the company culture are unique. The current facility and plans for future facilities are uniquely beautiful, featuring the finest in design and catering to an upscale market competing against all other entertainment venues. The company culture is ideal for candidates seeking more empowerment, greater application of management principles, community involvement, and career growth. The position requires strong leadership skills, communications skills, and excellent cash management ability. Package includes base salary in the mid-thirties, structured bonus plan, benefits, paid vacation, and 401K program. Interested candidates should mail their resume to Boxoffice Response Number 4735.

LET THE GOVERNMENT FINANCE your new or existing small business. Grants/loans to $500,000. Free recorded message: (707) 448-0201. (RN7)

Manager and Management Trainee positions are available. We are people-onented and believe that excellent customer service and state-of-the-art technology are the keys to success in the movie theatre/swap meet industry. We offer a wide variety of benefits, competitive salaries and opportunities for professional growth. Join our team as we expand in Califomia, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico, Utah and beyond. If you are looking for growth and opportunity, have the ability to prepare, monitor and achieve budgetary goals, and have the enthusiasm and the ability to manage/motivate people, now is the time to let us hear from you! Theatre/Swap or other management experience required and some college helpful. Send your resume and salary requirements to Century Theatres and Swaps, Attn: Human Resources—Job Code MGR1096, 150 Golden Gate Ave., San Francisco, CA 94102. No faxes or phone calls please.

MANAGERS AND ASSISTANT MANAGERS. For our new theatres in metropolitan Chicago and throughout Michigan, Indiana and Illinois. Candidates should have experience in multiplex theatres, retail or the fast food industry. While a college degree is preferred, it is not necessary. We offer competitive salaries, concession commissions, quarterly bonus programs and opportunities for advancement. Our benefits include BCBS with dental, optical and prescription coverage, paid vactions, paid holidays, and 401K plan. We will pay moving expenses to relocate managers. No phone calls please, but send your resume, references and salary requirements in confidence to: William T. McMannis, Goodrich Quality Theatres Inc., 4417 Broadmoor SE, Kentwood, MI 49512.

MOVIE THEATRE MANAGERS: Develop your SHOWMANSHIP—Let us see what YOU can do! Wehrenberg Theatres Inc., an exciting and growing regional theatre circuit in the Midwest, has immediate openings for you as a full-time salaried or part-time manager. Can you work nights, weekends, and holidays as part of your schedule and be willing to relocate? Have you had customer-contact experience and can you think independently in solving routine problems? If so, we may have just the spot for you. Previous theatre management experience is preferred, but retail management and supervisory experience are great. 2-year degree required. We offer competitive benefits and salary. Send/fax resume and salary history to: Human Resources—BOTM, Wehrenberg Theatres Inc., 1215 Des Peres Rd., St. Louis, MO 63131. Fax: (314) 882-8032.

Regal Cinemas Inc. has opportunities available for experienced multiplex managers and assistant managers in the southern and eastern areas of the country. Individuals must be self-starters and possess the leadership qualities needed to thrive within an aggressively expanding circuit. Salary commensurate with experience plus concession commission and benefits. Replies held in strictest confidence. Send resume and references to: Regal Cinemas, 7132 Commercial Park Drive, Knoxville, TN 37918, Attention: Jan Frazee.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE

ACOUSTIC SOUND PANELS & CUSTOM WALL DRAPERIES available in flameproofed colors and fabrics, artistic or plain. CINEMA CONSULTANTS & SERVICES INTERNATIONAL INC., P.O. Box 9672, Pittsburgh, PA 15226. Phone (412) 343-3900; Fax (412) 343-2992.

BURLAP WALL COVERING DRAPES: $2.05 per yard, flame retardant. Quantity discounts. Nurse & Co., Millbury Rd., Oxford, MA 01540 (508) 832-4295.

COMPLETE THEATRE EQUIPMENT: (New, Used or Rebuilt) Century SA, R#, RCA 9030, 1040, 1050 Platters: 2 and 5 Tier, Xenon Systems 1000-4000 Watt, Sound Systems mono and stereo, automations, ticket machines, curtain motors, electric rewinds, lenses, large screen video projectors. Plenty of used chairs. PROFESSIONAL SERVICE AND INSTALLATION AVAILABLE DOLBY CERTIFIED. Call Bill Younger, Cinema Equipment, Inc., 1375 N.W. 97th Ave., Suite 14, Miami, FL 33172. Phone (305) 594-0570. Fax (305) 592-6970. 1-800-848-8886.

CUPHOLDER ARMREST. "State of the art." Call Cy Young Industries Inc. 800-729-2610.

Liquidating professional motion picture projectors and other audio-visual equipment due to relocation. Fax (301) 434-7120, phone (201) 751-9784.

MICRO-FM™ STEREO RADIO Sound Systems for Drive-In Theatres. Meets FCC part 15. Static free. Available soon: low cost Micro-FM-jr. For the hearing impaired. Call or write: AUDIO VISUAL SYSTEMS & ENG., 320 St. Louis Ave., Woonsocket, RI 02895. Phone (401) 767-2080; Fax (401) 767-2081.

PATRON TRAY. Fits into cupholder armrest. Call Cy Young Industries Inc. at 800-729-2610.

PROJECTION EQUIPMENT: Complete booths, Simplex XL and Century, ORC 6000 watt xenon drive-in lamphouse with power supply. Bauer 35/70 projector. 600 Heywood-Wakefield seats. (301) 949-4761. Fax (301) 949-4763.

Rebuilt Century SA & R3 projector/soundhead $4250. Simplex XL $4450. Xenon lamps, platters, many lenses, excellent line of other used projection and sound equipment. TANKERSLY ENTERPRISES, P.O. Box 2039, Denver, CO 80201. (303) 298-8077; fax (303) 296-4080.

PURCHASE THE MOST WIDELY USED COMPUTERIZED ticketing and concession systems for as low as $139 per month. Complete systems start at $2,340. Includes free technical support, installation, and warranty. System Operating Solutions. Call (800) 434-3098.

(SCG) PORTHOLE GLASS: It's a CRYSTAL CLEAR GLASS that's perfect for projecting color images through, resulting in the CLEAREST, SHARPEST & BRIGHTEST IMAGE you can possibly get, with glass or plastics. Plus, it allows LIGHT & COLOR to pass through it WITHOUT IMAGE DISTORTION For more information, and a FREE (SCG) SAMPLE, call or fax LEE'S PHOTO PRODUCTS at (630) 595-6469, or fax (847) 985-9104.

TABLET TRAYS. Fits into all cupholder armrests. Used in multi-purpose theatres, bingo, etc. Call Cy Young Industries Inc. at 800-729-2610.

TELEPHONE ANSWERING EQUIPMENT All major brands of reliable, heavy-duty tape announcers and digital announcers are available at discounted prices. Please call Jim at Answering Machine Specialty, (800) 222-7773.

USED EQUIPMENT FOR SALE: Projectors, prewired stereo racks, platters, lamps, etc. Ask about our financing program. Premier Seating Co. Inc., 800-955-SEAT, fax (410) 686-6060, e-mail: pseating@aol.com.

USED PROJECTION EQUIPMENT: Replacement equipment, single or multi booths available. Please call if you are purchasing or selling. CINEMA CONSULTANTS & SERVICES INTERNATIONAL INC., P.O. Box 9672, Pittsburgh, PA 15226. (412) 343-3900, Fax (412) 343-2992.

USED PROJECTION: Sound heads, sound equipment, Century, Simplex, Cinemeccanica, Altec, JBL, etc. Contact Kurluff Enterprises, (818) 444-7079; fax (818) 444-6863.

WILL TRADE: YOUR THEATRE SEATS FOR OUR USED THEATRE EQUIPMENT. Great condition at great prices. Platters, projectors, lamphouses, complete prewired stereo racks and much, much more. Premier Seating Co. Inc., 800-955-SEAT, fax (410) 686-6060, e-mail: pseating@aol.com.

EQUIPMENT WANTED

PURCHASE OR TRADE: For your used theatre equipment, concession equipment, theatre seats. Ask about our storage facilities and our financing program. Premier Seating Co. Inc., 800-955-SEAT, fax (410) 686-6060, e-mail: pseating@aol.com.

THEATRE EQUIPMENT WANTED: Theatre equipment from Florida; Atlanta, Georgia; and Virginia. Indoor and twins and drive-in area that closed. Interested in buying the used equipment or re-opening theatre. Send information about drive-in theatres. Will the man that contacted me about theatre in Alberta, Canada please re-contact me (lost your phone number) at: James LaLonde, 190 Defender Ave., Lake City, FL 32055.

VINTAGE TUBE TYPE AMPS, woofers, drivers, horns, parts, from Western Electric, Westrex, Altec, Jensen, JBL, EV, Tannoy, McIntosh, Marantz. Phone David at (818) 441-3942. P.O. Box 80371, San Marino, CA 91118-8371.

WANTED DEAD OR ALIVE: We will purchase Century projectors or soundheads, new or old, complete or incomplete, for cash. Also interested in XL and SH-1000. Call (502) 499-0050. Fax (502) 499-0052, Hadden Theatre Supply Co., attn. Louis.

We will buy or trade for used/new equipment on any projector/soundhead/platter/lamphouse/console/speakers/lens and concession equipment. We can remove or pick up anywhere in the U.S. or overseas. Call us at (303) 298-8077 or fax (303) 296-4080. Tankersley Enterprises, P.O. Box 2039, Denver, CO 80201.

WE BUY TICKETING AND CONCESSION SYSTEMS! CALL (360) 805-9396.

THEATRES FOR SALE/LEASE

COUNT YOUR MONEY ON THE BEACH!! Award-winning Florida Gulf Coast theatre now for sale. Serving an affluent, year-round, niche market, theatre has virtually no competition. An area landmark for over 50 years, located on valuable beach area property, theatre is a mix of classic architecture and backstage modernization. Call or fax now for fact sheet. Ask for Ms. Cruz at (813) 360-6697, or fax (813) 360-5154.

LEWISBURG, WEST VIRGINIA—470-seat, single-screen, plus balcony dining, three apartments, two business spaces and small restaurant included. Located in historic mountain town. $375,000. Call Frank Hardy, Path Finders Real Estate. (304) 645-2000; Fax (304) 645-2272.

MOVIE THEATER FOR SALE: Minneapolis, MN. Single screen, 450 seats, located on major retail street. Recent remodeling and restoration completed, including updated concession stand. Includes parking, enclosed storefront space, second floor office development space. Asking $200,000. Phone (612) 724-0705.

PRICE REDUCED! NY RESORT AREA ART DECO MOVIE THEATRE. Continuous operation since 1938. Seasonal operation could be expanded. Rehabbed 1985. Modern equipment. Seats 315. Two retail spaces, currently rented. Ideal for owner/operator seeking supplemental income. $155,000. Owner financing. Call (518) 624-4812.

San Diego, CA Well-established discount theatre. Twin screens. Contact Jill Thompson, CCIM, (619) 621-9052.

Twin theatre for sale. N.E. Ohio. Ideal for family operation. Please respond to Boxoffice Response Number 4733.

THEATRES WANTED

Several of our clients are seeking to buy or lease multi-screen theatres in the eastern U.S. Call toll free: Theatre Confections Inc., (888) 271-0858.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

NEED PARTNER/INVESTOR. Best location—movie theatre owner. Call (510) 674-9623.

DRIVE-IN CONSTRUCTION

DRIVE-IN SCREEN TOWERS Since 1945 Selby Products, Inc., P.O. Box 267, Richfield, Ohio 44286 (216) 659-6631, 800-647-6224.

SCREEN TOWERS INTERNATIONAL New, used, transplanted, complete tower service. Box 399, Rogers, TX 76569. Phone: 800-642-3591.

THEATRE SEATING

"ALL AMERICAN SEATING" by the EXPERTS! Used seats of quality. Various makes, American Bodiform and Stellars from $12.50 to $32.50. Irwins from $12.50 to $30.00. Heywood & Massey rockers from $25.00. Full rebuilding available. New Hussey chairs from $70.00. All types theatre projection and sound equipment. New and used. We ship and install all makes. Try us! We sell no Junk! TANKERSLEY ENTERPRISES P.O. BOX 2039, 2100 Stout St., Denver, CO 80201. 303-298-8077 Fax: 303-296-4080.

ALLSTATE SEATING is a company that is specializing in refurbishing, complete painting, molded foam, tailor-made seat covers, installations, removals. Please call for pricing and spare parts for all types of theatre seating. Boston, MA. Phone (617) 268-2221, FAX (617) 268-7011.

"BOOSTER B. SAURUS" Child booster seats. Call Cy Young Industries Inc. at 800-729-2610.

CHILD BOOSTER SEATS: Molded plastic, large quantity in stock, multiple colors available, will not deteriorate like booster bags. Premier Seating Co. Inc., 800-955-SEAT, fax (410) 686-6060, e-mail: pseating@aol.com.

FINALLY, AN ALTERNATIVE TO ON-SITE UPHOLSTERY: Call us about our new upholstered backs and cushions by mail program. More cost-efficient than on-site upholsterers, fast turn-around, quality controlled in our 40,000 sq. ft. state-of-the-art factory. Premier Seating Co. Inc., 800-955-SEAT, fax (410) 686-6060, pseating@aol.com.

ON-SITE UPHOLSTERY and replacement covers. Parts available for many chairs. Our "Bakers Dozen" gives you 13 covers for the cost of 12. Nationwide service. Free samples made up. Call Complete Industries for pricing. (800) 252-6837.

SEAT AND BACK COVERS: Most fabrics in stock. Molded cushions. Cy Young Industries, 800-729-2610.

SEATS CLEANED on site, $1.56-$2.36 per seat (coast to coast). Call (800) 879-2311 for brochure and information. The Carpet Cleaner, Box 154, Osceola, MO 64776.

SEAT FOAMS: All makes/all models, fast turn-around. Premier Seating Co. Inc., 800-955-SEAT, fax (410) 686-6060, e-mail: pseating@aol.com.

THEATRE SEAT AND BACK COVERS: Large in-stock fabric inventory, fast turn-around, competitive pricing at any quantity. Premier Seating Co. Inc., 800-955-SEAT, fax (410) 686-6060, e-mail: pseating@aol.com.

THEATRE SEAT RECONDITIONING: Total or partial theatre seat restoration in our 40,000 sq. ft. state-of-the-art factory, featuring sandblasting, powder-coating, and in-house upholstering. Restore your seats or purchase from our inventory. Ask about our in-house financing program. Premier Seating Co. Inc., 800-955-SEAT, fax (410) 686-6060, e-mail: pseating@aol.com.

THEATRE SEATS WANTED: Will buy/trade for surplus and unwanted theatre seats, all makes and models. Premier Seating Co. Inc., 800-955-SEAT, fax (410) 686-6060, e-mail: pseating@aol.com.

USED AUDITORIUM CHAIRS: Choose from a large selection of different makes and models and colors, American Stellars and Irwin Citations competitively priced, shipped and installed. ACOUSTIC SOUND PANELS AND CUSTOM WALL DRAPERIES available in flameproofed colors and fabrics, artistic or plain. CINEMA CONSULTANTS & SERVICES INTERNATIONAL, P.O. Box 9672, Pittsburgh, PA. 15226. (412) 343-3900, Fax (412) 343-2992.

Response No. 98

Response No. 203

SERVICES

ALTEC, JBL, E.V. SPEAKER RECONING: Factory authorized service, fast turnaround. We stock diaphragms for popular theatre drivers. Cardinal Sound & Motion Picture Systems Inc. Dealer inquiries welcome. (301) 595-8811.

BRING THE INTERNET TO YOUR THEATRE: We are in the business of taking theatres like yours into the next century. We will build a personalized state-of-the-art website for your theatre circuit. Please call HP Productions at (888) 745-8303. E-mail: shoes@hpproductions.com.

FRONT END INSTALLATION with frames, motors and masking tracks. Call Cy Young Industries, 800-729-2610.

SOUND/DRAPING FABRICS IN STOCK. All new selection of fabrics. Installation on brackets available, or sewn in pleated drapes. Cy Young Industries, 800-729-2610.

SOUNDFOLDS & CURTAINS cleaned and fireproofed on site $.20-$.40 per hung sq. ft. (coast to coast). Call (800) 879-2311, 24 hours, for brochure and information. The Carpet Cleaner, P.O. Box 154, Osceola, MO 64776.

ULTRAFLAT. REFLECTORS: Why buy new when you can have it restored? "Hopeless" cases restored to brightness. Call your dealer or ULTRAFLAT, 20306 Sherman Way, Winnetka, CA 91306. (818) 884-0184.

WE REPAIR AND SUPPORT the most widely used ticketing and concession systems. Our prices are approximately 50% less than our competitors. Our customers include 30% of the top 50 circuits and many independents. Ask about our thermal printer service. System Operating Solutions. Call (800) 434-3098.

"WHILE THE THEATRE SLEEPS" On-site reupholstery. Top fabrics, molded seat cushions and "State of the Art" Cy Young cupholders. Call Cy Young, 800-729-2610.

MISCELLANEOUS

8 to 35MM EDUCATIONAL, Adult, Exploitation—all subjects. Features, shorts. Buy/sell any size collection. Archives, Box 10672, Oakland, CA 94610. Phone/fax 510-268-0811.

MOVIE POSTERS WANTED: HIGHEST PRICES PAID FOR LOBBY CARDS, 1-, 3- AND 6-SHEETS, WINDOW CARDS, BANNERS, GLASS SLIDES. Dwight Cleveland, P.O. Box 10922, Chicago, IL 60610-0922. (312) 525-9152 or fax (312) 525-2969.

MOVIE POSTERS WANTED! I pay top dollar for vintage material. John Hazelton, 235 Horton Highway, Mineola, NY 11501. Call toll-free 1-800-CAGNEY4.

MOVIE POSTERS WANTED: No collection too large or too small! Immediate cash payments! Top prices for vintage material! Call toll free: 1-800-213-8431.

The Big Picture

It's interesting to see how a successful movie franchise evolves. The Bond series, for example, began as a serious (if glamorized) treatise on the deadly perils of the Cold War spy game, but has re-invented itself repeatedly as everything from self-spoofing comedy (during the late Connery era and most of the Roger Moore period) to back-to-basics action flick (the George Lazenby-starring "On Her Majesty's Secret Service" and "License to Kill," the second Timothy Dalton Bond). Four films into Warner's incredibly successful "Batman" franchise, a similar process may be at work.

When Tim Burton helped put together the first "Batman" feature back in 1989, the impulse was clearly to return a character whose heroic stature had been amusingly compromised by a campy, '60s-era TV series back to his comic book roots. The Batman origin myth, as scripted by Bill Finger and drawn by Bob Kane, was presented in all its brutal pulp glory: young Bruce Wayne witnesses his parents' murder and becomes a vigilante dedicated to stamping out evil by whatever means necessary.

The Joker, which many audience members remembered in terms of Cesar Romero's giddy TV rendering, became a mass murderer in Burton's hands; it's probable that few who decried the 1989 "Batman's" violence realized that the "Joker Death" poison which Jack Nicholson used to leave his victims dead but smiling was an actual comic book invention of Finger's and Kane's, dating all the way back to 1940.

Burton's commitment to keeping Batman the dark loner of his original comic book incarnation was evidenced by his decision, despite reported studio pressure, to keep Robin the Boy Wonder out of the second "Batman" feature, "Batman Returns." Though a massive hit like its predecessor, "Batman Returns" was considered a disappointment by industry watchers; Burton's idiosyncratic sense of humor, his love of the grotesque, and his preoccupation with the hero as loner left some a bit unsure how to react to the film.

The trace elements of Burton's contribution to the franchise were still apparent in "Batman Forever" (which Burton co-produced), Joel Schumacher's first turn in the "Batman" director's chair. As played by Val Kilmer, the Batman character was still a functional schizophrenic, tormented by childhood trauma, though for the first time the character seemed to be searching for a way out. The villains (Tommy Lee Jones as Two-Face, Jim Carrey as the Riddler) were still grotesque, though edging closer to the spirit of the '60s TV show in the emphasis on the comedic aspects of their personalities. The gothic art direction of the Burton "Batmans" was still present, but rendered in a cleaner, less brooding fashion. In many ways, "Batman Forever" may be looked back on as a transitional film in the series.

The biggest difference, though, between "Batman Forever" and the first two "Batman" features was that the latest "Batman" actually resolved Batman's identity crisis. Co-producer Burton and director Schumacher determinedly refused to condescend to the built-in "Batman" audience; they took the characterization from the first two films seriously, building into "Batman Forever" a dynamic by which the Batman character, thanks in part to his long-delayed friendship with Dick Grayson/Robin the Boy Wonder, is able to accept his past and move toward his future as a unified being. He will continue to fight crime, "not because I have to but because I choose to"—a key turning point for Batman as depicted by the Warner franchise.

Now that he's firmly in control of the film series, it will be interesting to see what Schumacher does with it. An underrated and much more audience-friendly director than Burton, there are some indications that Schumacher not only doesn't share Burton's aversion to the '60s-era TV Batman, he may even prefer that more entertaining, less brooding model. The decision to include Batgirl in the upcoming "Batman and Robin," for example, harkens back to the TV series; although there was a short-lived Bat Girl in the Batman comics of the '50s (and a Bat Woman, who was her mentor/companion), the '60s version played by actress Yvonne Craig spelled her name as a single word and was a solo act invented for TV who appeared in the comics only later. Schumacher's villains also display an affinity for the TV Batman: Arnold Schwarzenegger as Mr. Freeze is playing a Bat-nemesis that appeared only on the TV series (the master-criminal he was based on was called Mr. Zero in the comics). And it's hard to believe that it's a coincedence the TV Mr. Freeze was originally played by the equally Germanic, equally accented director-turned-actor Otto Preminger. Meanwhile, the Batman character, already more conventionally heroic after the previous film, may even be ready at last to loosen up and have a good time.

Will Schumacher take the franchise in a new direction? Will the same audiences who seem to crave movies based on TV series from the '60s love it if and when he does? It's a pretty safe bet they will. But to stay on the safe side, perhaps it would be best to tune in tomorrow, same Bat-time, same Bat-channel to find out what happens next.—Ray Greene *includes unnumbered ad inserts

Screen Stars

QSC Professional Amplifiers supply power to the hottest screens in the country.

In fact, QSC Audio is the largest supplier of professional amplifiers and accessories to the cinema industry. Legendary reliability, awesome performance, versatile features and outstanding value have made QSC the industry standard. Fourteen amplifier models are currently approved for THX® cinema installations, with more on the way! Each model carries a commercial UL listing, as well as TUV and CSA approval for safety. Optional QSC plug-in accessories are available to meet the specific signal processing requirements of digital cinema sound systems.

Optional accessory capability optimizes amps for bi-amplification of screen channels, protects surround speakers and equalizes the response of popular cinema subwoofers.

Audiences demand the most powerful presentation of everything that digital soundtracks have to offer. Because power amplifiers are critical to the digital sound chain, QSC powers todays biggest Screen Stars. Stars demand the best. Shouldn't you? Call 714-754-6175 for valuable details.

A few of the other theater chains featuring QSC Power Amplifiers: Allen Theatres, Associated Theatres, Budget Cinemas, Central States Theatres, Cinema World, Cineplex Odeon Theatres, Classic Cinemas, Dickinson Theatres, Douglas Theatres, Edwards Cinemas, General Cinemas, GKC Theatres, GTI Theatres, Harkness Cinemas, Loew's Theatres, Malco Theatres, Mann Theatres, Manos Theatres, Marcus Theaters, Mulone Theatres, Muvico Theatres, National Theatres, Neighborhood Cinemas, Pacific Theatres, Plitt Theatres, Rhyan Theatres, SoCal Cinemas, U.C.I. Theatres, Warner International Theatres, Western HTS Cinemas, and many, many more...

QSC™ AUDIO

The Power Behind The Pictures.™

LUCASFILM THX. AUDIO

Lucasfilm and THX are trademarks of Lucasfilm, Ltd
"The Power Behind The Pictures" is a trademark of QSC Audio Products, Inc..
"QSC" and the QSC logo are registered with the U.S. Patent Office.

QSC Audio Products, Inc. 1675 MacArthur Blvd., Costa Mesa, CA 92626-1468
PH (714) 754-6175 FAX (714) 754-6174 E-mail: info@qscaudio.com
QSC WorldGroup BBS: (800) 856-6003 or (714) 668-7569

Response No. 26

EST. 1932

WE DESIGN, BUILD & INSTALL CONCESSION STANDS AROUND THE WORLD!

We will custom design and build your concession stand to your special requirements. We combine state-of-the-art technology with professional craftmanship, incorporating all the clearly received ideas of the clients. Every feature is designed with a concept towards practical performance...controls devised for easy, fast operation.
Concession Stands, Box Offices, Popcorn Poppers, Butter Dispensers, Popcorn Warmers, Nacho Warmers, and any related theatre lobby fixtures.

STEIN INDUSTRIES INC.

CALL: 516-789-2222 • FAX: 516-789-8888

Response No. 101

JOHN ARGOMS A3

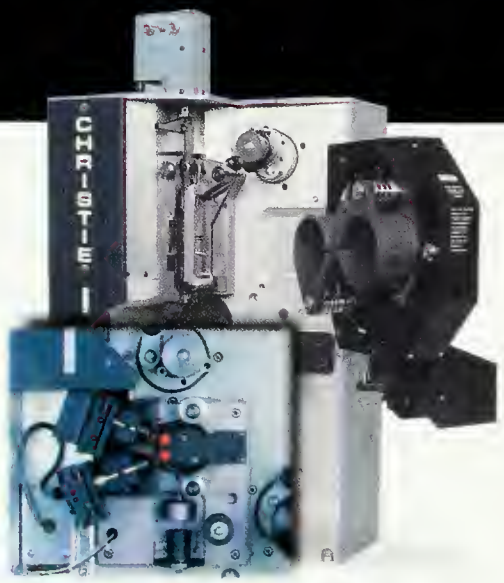
SHOWCANADA 1997

BOXOFFICE®

THE BUSINESS MAGAZINE OF THE GLOBAL MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

MAY 1997, $3.95

SPIELBERG



EXCLUSIVE BOOK EXCERPT! A PORTRAIT OF THE ARTIST AS A YOUNG MAN by JOSEPH McBRIDE

THE 6,000 FOOT REEL • OSCAR AND BOXOFFICE: TOGETHER AGAIN FOR THE FIRST TIME • SHOWCANADA'S CAPITAL IDEA • THE CANADIAN FILM FUNDING CRISIS

No More "Penthouse."
No More Threading Separate Reader.
No More Time Delays.
No More Push, Pull and Weave.

SOUNDS GREAT

The Christie Digital Basement Reader.

A must for today's modern multiplex, the Christie Digital Basement Reader delivers the ultimate in digital sound. Certified by Dolby®, the Christie Digital Basement Reader provides enhanced reading of all SRD digital prints. It uses a revolutionary visible light LED to scan the film–eliminating the CAT700 Dolby equivalent reader. Since there is no "penthouse," the basement reader, which is conveniently located in the Christie P35GPL projector soundhead, simplifies threading. It's another reason why installing Christie gearless projectors is a very sound decision.

CHRISTIE®
INCORPORATED
We Make Film Come Alive.

10550 Camden Drive, Cypress, CA 90630 • (714) 236-8610 • Fax (714) 229-3185

Response No. 3

UIPMENT FOR MOTION PICTURE THEATERS AND STUDIOS

ULTRA★PHONIC

UPC-1/UPC-2

INFRARED HEADPHONE TRANSMISSION SYSTEM

IFIGURATION:

l to 350 seat (5500 square feet):
C-1 Package - includes 1 IRC-20 itter/Modulator Panel with power pply and mount brackets. Inline ernal fuse and manual.

r 350 seats (up tp 11,000 square feet):
C-2 Package - includes 1 IRC-20 itter/Modulator Panel and 1 IRE- Emitter Panel with power supplies d dual mount brackets. In line ernal fuse and manual.

se of Use: The Ultra★Phonic IRC- self-contained Emitter/Modulator nel may be mounted at either front back of auditorium. Using our novable mount, the IRC-20 can be sily transported from auditorium auditorium if needed. Headphone ceivers will work in any auditorium... ere is no need for different quency receivers as with FM stems.

TURES:

- No R.F. interference problems of crosstalk between auditoriums.
- Headsets are compatible with most other 95 KHz infrared systems.
- Designed for low distortion and high clarity.
- Low voltage 24 volt emitter panels require no high voltage AC wiring.
- Modulation LED meter for accurate level calibration.
- Input range 100mV. to 30 V.R.M.S.
- Comfortable, easy to use, standard I.R. headsets - carrier frequency 95 KHz.
- Headsets include 360° pickup.

USL, Inc.
Quality Cinema Products

BOXOFFICE
MAY, 1997 VOL. 133 NO. 5

UNQUOTE: I want to write movie scripts, but I like directing above all. All I know for sure is I've gone too far to back out now. —STEVEN SPIELBERG at age 17

SPECIAL REPORT: SHOWCANADA '97

Our annual salute to the Canadian market celebrates exhibition in the Great White North! PLUS: Get ready for ShowCanada '97 with our special introductory contents. SHOWCANADA: May 6 - 10, 1997. Chateau Laurier, Ottawa, Ontario.

SECTION I: SHOWCANADA 1997

36 SHOWCANADA '97: A VIEW FROM THE CAPITAL
ShowCanada Co-Chair Dina Lebo touts the exciting agenda for ShowCanada 1997. By Dina Lebo

38 SHOWCANADA '97: ENTERTAINMENT, INFORMATION AND INSPIRATION
Cathy Watson of the Motion Picture Theatre Associations of Canada celebrates Canada's show of shows. By Cathy Watson

40 SHOWCANADA '97: RAISING CANADA'S PROFILE
Words of wisdom from Dan Johnson of the Canadian Association of Film Distributors and Exporters. By Dan Johnson

42 SHOWCANADA '97: A "CAPITAL" IDEA
ShowCanada comes to Ottawa, the Canadian capital and one of the most beautiful cities in the hemisphere. By Christine James

44 SPECIAL REPORT: CANADA'S FILM FUNDING CRISIS
As government cutbacks change Canadian funding, BOXOFFICE examines the impact on film production. By Shlomo Schwartzberg

46 CANADIAN EXTRA: A MOVABLE FEST
The Ontario Northern and Southern Film Circuits bring art-house product to off-market Canada. By Shlomo Schwartzberg

50 SHOWCANADA INDIE SHOWCASE: THE HOUSE THAT KEITH BUILT
Keith Stata takes the term "movie house" to its logical extreme with a five-plex built right into his home. By Susan Lambert

52 EXHIBITION EXTRA: THE FIFTH ELEMENT
Canada's Fifth Avenue Cinemas offers the latest address for the burgeoning Canadian art-film market. By Shlomo Schwartzberg

SECTION II: MAY FEATURES

6 SHOWEST UPDATE: NATO/MPAA 1997 TOTALS
Final totals and demographic statistics for 1996. By Ray Greene

10 COVER : SPIELBERG—A PORTRAIT OF THE ARTIST AS A YOUNG MAN Behind the scenes on "Firelight," the "lost" feature debut of the most successful filmmaker in movie history. By Joseph McBride

16 SNEAK PREVIEW: FREEZE FRAME
Director Joel Schumacher makes "Batman" his own with "Batman & Robin", starring Ah-nuld as Mr. Freeze. By Wade Major

20 SNEAK PREVIEW: AIR POWER
Producer Jerry Bruckheimer on life after Don Simpson and his new big-screen actioner "Con Air." By Lea Russo

24 SHOWEST '97: PICTURE THIS
Pictorial memories of ShoWest '97.

26 BOXOFFICE AND OSCAR: REUNITED AND IT FEELS SO GOOD
Behind the scenes at Oscar '97. By Ray Greene

34 SPECIAL REPORT: THE 6,000-FOOT REEL
EXCLUSIVE! Exhibition's first comprehensive look at a new technology that has projection reelin' and rockin'. By Pat Kramer

70 INTERNATIONAL EXTRA: ANATOMY OF A MERGER
BOXOFFICE is a witness to history as Holland's A.J. Weststrate and Belgium's Joost Bert make it legal. A special eyewitness report. By Ray Greene and Kim Williamson. Photos: Frank Smit

BOXOFFICE (ISSN 0006-8527). Published monthly by RLD Communications, Inc., 203 N. Wabash Ave., Suite 800, Chicago, IL 60601. Subscriptions: $30 per year. Canada and Mexico: $40; airmail: $80. Overseas subscriptions (all airmail): $80. Periodical postage paid at Chicago, IL, and additional mailing offices. Postmaster: Send address changes to Boxoffice, 725 South Wells St., 4th Floor, Chicago, IL 60607.

© Copyright 1997 RLD Communications, Inc. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or part without permission is prohibited.

DEPARTMENTS

Hollywood Updates 6
Hollywood Report 8
Trailers 28
Review Digest 64
National News 66
International News: Canada 67
Exhibition Briefings 68
International News: Europe 70
International News: Pacific Rim 72
Moviefone Moviegoer Activity Chart 73
Studio Feature Chart 74
Independent Feature Chart 76
Home Release Chart 78
Classifieds 80
Reverse Angle 80
Advertiser Index 80
The Big Picture 82

FEST REVIEWS

(following pg. 53)
Shall We Dance? 62
Twin Town 63

DAY AND DATE: 5/16

Bliss 54

FLASHBACK: 1966

Batman 55

SPECIAL FORMATS

Monty Python and the Quest for the Holy Grail 58

REVIEWS

Absolute Power 65
Booty Call 64
A Chef in Love 57
Children of the Revolution 57
City of Industry 64
The Designated Mourner 56
The Devil's Own 62
Gentlemen Don't Eat Poets 64
Grosse Point Blank 58
Jungle 2 Jungle 63
Keys to Tulsa 59
Leo Tolstoy's Anna Karenina 62
Letters of Love 56
Liar, Liar 62
love jones 63
nowhere 55
Paperback Romance 55
Paradise Road 57
Private Parts 63
Rhyme & Reason 64
Rough Magic 55
Selena 62
Smilla's Sense of Snow 62
Temptress Moon 58
That Darn Cat 65
Traveller 59
Truth or Consequences, N.M. 56
Vegas Vacation 65

REVIEWS IN BRIEF

Boytriends 60
Everything Relative 60
Follow Me Home 61
Le Samourai 61
Menmaniacs 61
Parallel Sons 60
Shooting Porn 61
Timothy Leary's Dead 60
The Watermelon Woman 60

COVER PHOTO: YORAM KAHANA/SHOOTING STAR

JBL Cinema Sound. The Sound of Yesteryear, Next Year and Every Year in Between.

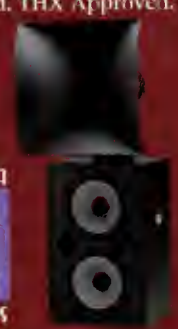
The Samuel Goldwyn Theatre at the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Starting back in 1936, when James B. Lansing won an Academy Award for Technical Excellence, JBL has earned a legendary reputation for quality, reliability and innovation. Today, more than three-quarters of all cinema loudspeakers sold worldwide come from JBL. No other manufacturer offers as wide a range of solutions for the demands of modern cinema. That's why, from the smallest rooms to the largest, most exotic installations in the world, JBL remains... the speaker of the house.

From stand-alones to megaplexes, always the perfect fit.

Cinema 3000 Series:

This series is designed to provide the maximum value for the minimum cost. The 3000 Series has a shallow profile cabinet and the most economical subwoofer available, making it the perfect choice where space and budgets are limited. THX Approved.



Cinema 4000 Series:

This is the industry standard for a wide variety of room sizes. These are the systems that launched the modern era of cinema sound and the ones now used in most dubbing rooms throughout the world. THX Approved.

Cinema 5000 Series:

The 5000 Series represents JBL's best cinema systems, and features the most advanced loudspeaker technology for today's soundtrack requirements. This series includes new three-way systems which maximize digital sound sources, plus digital signal control for an easier set-up and more precise overall sound system control. They're perfect for showcase theaters of any size from small to medium to large.

JBL PROFESSIONAL
CINEMA PRODUCTS

"Oscar" ® A.M.P.A.S. ®

JBL Professional
3500 Balboa Boulevard
Northridge, CA 91329
www.jblpro.com

A Harman International Company

© Copyright 1997 JBL Professional.

SHOWEST WRAP-UP

As ever, ShoWest '97 was the place to be for the exhibition community during the first week of March, 1997. The sheer spectacle of the studio-sponsored dining events (which reportedly priced out at over $2 million in some instances), the amazing array of star-power marshalled to pitch upcoming product, and the glimpses of such eagerly anticipated titles as "Batman and Robin," "Titanic" and "Men in Black" were event highpoints, with ShoWest presenting exhibition with that rare opportunity to form early impressions about entire slates of product. The final night awards event, simulcast live over Turner Network Television, struck most in attendance as more entertaining (and even better TV) than ever before.

Among the many important and informative networking opportunities at this year's ShoWest was an annual chance for a face-to-face talk with MPAA president Jack Valenti and NATO president Bill Kartozian. These industry giants preceded Valenti's annual ShoWest address with a detailed analysis of the 1996 NATO/MPAA survey statistics which Valenti presented to the convention.

As reported in our March BAROMETER issue, 1996 saw a record boxoffice take of over $5.9 billion, with the final "admissions sold" tally coming in at 1.34 billion. The '96 audience breakdown included interesting stats when analyzed by age and ethnicity. The largest block of tickets (502.8 million) was sold to moviegoers between the ages of 21 to 39. But the fastest growing sector of the market (on a ticket-by-ticket basis) was again, as in 1995, the over-40 audience—a fact Kartozian and Valenti attributed to the strong tradition of moviegoing as a social activity which members of the "baby boom" generation have carried over into middle age. Over-40 admissions accounted for 409 million tickets in 1996—a 12.5 percent increase. Twelve- to 20-year-olds also were up dramatically, racking up some 347.8 million trips to the moviehouse for a 25 percent rise over that group's 1995 attendance figures.

By ethnic classification, the increasing significance of the Hispanic market gathered strength in 1996. White audience members still accounted for the largest portion of admissions, with 70 percent of tickets sold. But Hispanics accounted for 13 percent of the overall tally, a slight rise compared to the third-ranked African-American community, which has remained at or near 11 percent of the tally for the last several years. All other ethnic groups combined made up the remaining 6 percent of tickets sold.

The average price of a domestic movie ticket rose a very modest 1.5 percent from 1995's $4.34 to $4.41 in 1996. NATO president Kartozian noted the increase was less than the U.S. rate of inflation before adding that he was concerned that the return on investment for exhibitors—particularly those involved in massive re-screening and building efforts—has reached a point where it is decreasing relative to the rise in the cost of doing business. The NATO president hinted that the issue of audience concerns over ticket prices has been more than addressed over the past few years: "I think we have come to the point where people no longer view [moviegoing as overly expensive]," he said, adding that "we need to begin stressing the value" of moviegoing as opposed to price. What this change of emphasis may portend for ticket prices in the future remains an open question.

Valenti was reluctant to criticize the continuing inflationary spiral which MPAA member product appears to be caught up in; asked directly if he thought rising costs were a problem, Valenti said that costs could afford to rise until the movie industry started losing money. But there was a pervasive sense among many ShoWest attendees that controlling production and marketing costs would have to become a major studio priority in the near future. While self-described "pathological optimist" Valenti may not have shared in such dark mutterings, he did present the numbers which could be used to back them up: In 1996, there were 216 MPAA titles released in North America, four more films than in 1995. The average negative cost for MPAA member titles was $39.8 million, a jump of 9.5 percent, while per-title marketing costs hit $19.8 million, also up 9.5 percent. Where in 1995 the average studio feature cost $54.1 million to make and promote, in 1996 that same film cost $59.7 million. Such figures are even more startling when one looks back to the beginning of the decade, when MPAA member titles cost $50 million to bring to the screen. What this means is not only that marketing and production costs have risen by 20 percent in the past seven years, but that more than half the increase occurred in 1996, the most recent year surveyed.

NATO/MPAA NUMBERS, '96

DOMESTIC GROSS: $5.912 BILLION

ADMISSIONS: 1.34 BILLION

AVERAGE TICKET PRICE: $4.41

COMBINED AVERAGE PRODUCTION AND MARKETING COST FOR MPAA MEMBER FEATURE FILM: $59.7 MILLION

In a characteristically memorable turn of phrase, Valenti referred to the costs issue as "a grouchy, grungy rhino, hunkered down in the middle of the road." It's probable many on the supply side of the movie industry would not only agree with him, they might have a rather vivid description for which part of their anatomy the horn on Valenti's rhino has lodged itself in.

And that was the ShoWest that was.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF
Ray Greene

MANAGING EDITOR
Kim Williamson

SENIOR EDITOR
Christine James

ASSOCIATE EDITOR
Susan Lambert

EDITORIAL ASSISTANT
Linda Andrade

CONTRIBUTING WRITERS
Alex Albanese
John Allen
George T. Chronis
Pat Kramer
Ann Kwinn
Wade Major
Joseph McBride
Jean Oppenheimer
Lea Russo
Shlomo Schwartzberg
R.B. Whitter

EUROPEAN CORRESPONDENT
Melissa Morrison
e-mail: tomelis@bohem-net.cz

BOXOFFICE ONLINE WEBSITE ADDRESS:
http://www.boxoff.com
email: boxoff@earthlink.net
Online service provided by Marlin Software

FOUNDER
Ben Shlyen

PUBLISHER
Bob Dietmeier (773) 338-7007

NATIONAL ADVERTISING DIRECTOR
Robert M. Vale (213) 465-1186

ADVERTISING CONSULTANT
Morris Schlozman (816) 942-5877

EAST COAST ADVERTISING REP.
Mitchell J. Hall (212) 877-6667

WEST COAST ADVERTISING REP.
Gwen Campbell (310) 792-9011

BUSINESS MANAGER
Dan Johnson (773) 338-7007

CIRCULATION DIRECTOR
Chuck Taylor (312) 922-9326

OFFICES
Editorial and Publishing Headquarters:
6640 Sunset Blvd., Suite 100, Hollywood, CA 90028-7159 (213) 465-1186, FAX: (213) 465-5049
Corporate: Mailing Address: P.O. Box 25485, Chicago, IL 60625 (773) 338-7007

The Audit Bureau

Circulation Inquiries:
BOXOFFICE Data Center
725 S. Wells St., 4th Floor
Chicago, IL 60607
(312) 922-9326
FAX: (312) 922-7209

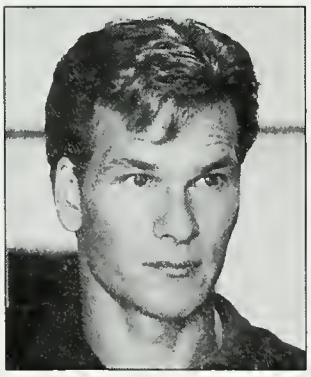
Finding the ultimate movie experience is a lot easier than it used to be.

THX

Now invading Canada.

THX DIVISION, LUCASFILM LTD.
P.O. BOX 10327 • SAN RAFAEL, CA 94912
415/492-3900 • FAX: 415/492-3973

HOLLYWOOD REPORT



EDWARD NORTON

All "American"

MADONNA

"Tina" Turn

PATRICK SWAYZE

"Killer" Role

"AMERICAN HISTORY X" A young man (Edward Norton, "The People vs. Larry Flynt") tries to overcome his violent, racist tendencies and help his brother (Edward Furlong, "Before and After") do the same in this drama. Fairuza Balk ("The Craft") plays his girlfriend. Tony Kaye directs from a script by David McKenna. (New Line)

UNTITLED TINA MODOTTI BIOPIC Having finally established herself as a legitimate thespian in "Evita," Madonna has signed to star in this biopic of Italian-born Tina Modotti, who emigrated to the U.S. in 1913 and initially pursued a career as a silent film actress in Hollywood. During the '30s, Modotti was renowned in Mexico and Europe as a photographer and political activist. She died under mysterious circumstances at age 45 in 1942. Gabriel Byrne ("Smilla's Sense of Snow") will play Vittorio Vidale, one of Modotti's lovers. (Distribution is to be set)

"AVON LADIES OF THE AMAZON" "First Wives Club" trio Bette Midler, Goldie Hawn and Diane Keaton are in talks to reteam in this comedy about three women who get stranded in the amazon. (UA)

"HOPE FLOATS" Sandra Bullock ("In Love and War") will star in this drama as a mother who, after a difficult divorce, goes back to her family home with her young daughter. Forest Whitaker ("Waiting to Exhale") directs. (Fox)

"ONE FREE MURDER" Sylvester Stallone ("CopLand") will play a mobster loosely based on Michael Franzese, who was imprisoned in 1966 for bank robbery but claimed he was framed. New York Post columnist Jack Newfield wrote articles asserting that the evidence against Franzese was shaky. Franzese was eventually freed from jail, and out of gratitude told Newfield he had "one free murder" coming to him. Newfield will co-write the script. (Universal)

"I AM LEGEND" Arnold Schwarzenegger ("Eraser") is considering a starring role in this adaption of Richard Matheson's cult novel, which was adapted twice before as 1964's "The Last Man On Earth" and 1971's "The Omega Man." Schwarzenegger would play one of the last healthy survivors of a bacterial plague. (Warner)

"PATCH ADAMS" Robin Williams ("Jack") will star for director Tom Shadyac ("The Nutty Professor") in this true story about a man who runs a free medical clinic in Virginia. Steve Oedekerk ("Ace Ventura: When Nature Calls") wrote the script. (Universal)

"DUETS" Real-life romantic duet Brad Pitt ("The Devil's Own") and Gwyneth Paltrow ("Emma") will star in this comedy which centers around the karaoke bar phenomenon. Bruce Paltrow (Gwyneth's father) will helm. (Columbia)

"ISHMAEL" Mel Gibson is attached to star in this film as an anthropologist in Africa who takes extreme measures to protect gorillas from poachers and ends up in an insane asylum. Jon Turteltaub ("Phenomenon") directs. (Buena Vista)

"SAVIOR" This true story of a French-American mercenary who rescues a baby orphaned in a war will star Dennis Quaid ("Dragonheart"), Nastassja Kinski ("Father's Day"), and "Breaking the Waves'" Stellan Skarsgard and Jean-Marc Barr. The film, an Oliver Stone-Janet Yang Ixtlan production, will be directed by Peter Antonijevic. (Distribution is to be set)

"SPHERE" This adaptation of Michael Crichton's sci-fi novel about a team sent under water to examine a mysterious spacecraft and its even more mysterious contents will star Dustin Hoffman ("American Buffalo"), Sharon Stone ("Diabolique"), Samuel L. Jackson ("A Time To Kill") and Queen Latifah ("Set It Off"). Barry Levinson ("Sleepers") will direct. (Warner)

"PLEASANTVILLE" In this comedy, two teenage siblings ("Ice Storm's" Tobey Maguire and "Fear's" Reese Witherspoon) find themselves trapped in the world of a wholesome "Leave It to Beaver"-esque '50s sitcom family. Jeff Daniels ("101 Dalmatians"), Joan Allen ("The Crucible") and William H. Macy ("Fargo") also star for first-time director Gary Ross, who also wrote the screenplay. Ross is a two-time Academy Award nominee for scripting "Big" and "Dave." (New Line)

"THE WATER BOY" Adam Sandler ("Happy Gilmore") will co-script and star in this comedy about an inept waterboy who's discovered to have an innate talent for football. (Buena Vista)

"LETTERS FROM A KILLER" Patrick Swayze ("To Wong Foo, Thanks for Everything, Julie Newmar") stars in this thriller about a prison inmate on Death Row who has been exchanging love letters with four different women, each thinking herself his only amour. When he's unexpectedly released from jail, he finds he may not have eluded his death sentence after all when one of the women becomes violent. David Carson ("Star Trek Generations") will direct. (Distribution is to be set)

"THE BIG LEBOWSKI" Next up for the Coen Bros., the filmmaking siblings who brought us "Fargo," is this black comedy about a man named Dude Lebowski who is confronted by gangsters demanding repayment of a loan. Lebowski thinks it's a case of mistaken identity, but soon finds himself entangled in a kidnapping plot. Jeff Bridges ("The Mirror Has Two Faces"), "Barton Fink's" John Goodman and John Turturro, and "Fargo's" Steve Buscemi and Peter Stormare star. (Gramercy)

"THE POSTMAN" Larenz Tate ("Dead Presidents") and newcomer Olivia Williams have joined Kevin Costner ("Tin Cup") in this sci-fi film in which a postman risks his life to continue delivering mail after an apocalyptic disaster. (Warner)

"HELLCAB" John Cusack ("Grosse Pointe Blank"), Laurie Metcalf ("Dear God"), Julianne Moore ("Lost World") and Gillian Anderson (TV's "The X Files") have signed on to "Hellcab," an adaptation of the play of the same name, which is about a day in the life of a cab driver during the mayhem of the Christmas holiday. Paul Dillon will re-create the role he originated onstage as the cabbie. (Distribution is to be set)

ET CETERA: Uma Thurman and Ralph Fiennes are in talks to star in Warner's bigscreen adaption of the '60s action adventure TV show "The Avengers"...Drew Barrymore has signed on to take the title role in Fox's "Cinderella"...Edward Burns will star opposite Tom Hanks in DreamWorks' "Saving Private Ryan"...Vincent D'Onofrio and Skeet Ulrich have joined Matthew McConaughey and Ethan Hawke in Fox's Richard Linklater-directed "Newton Boys," the true story of four bank-robbing brothers. Juliana Margulies has also signed on, and will play McConaughey's love interest.

Congratulations to...
THE ENGLISH PATIENT
EVITA
INDEPENDENCE DAY
THE ROCK
TWISTER
All five Academy Award Nominees for Best Sound were released with digital soundtracks.
But only Dolby Digital was used on all five films.
DOLBY DIGITAL
.tAs of April 1, 1997, 885 Dolby Digital films had been released or announced, and 8700 screens equipped with Dolby Digital processors– including 2500 with the new Dolby CP500, the most cost-effective digital solution for a new theatre.

Cover

A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man

An EXCLUSIVE Look at "FIRELIGHT," the Lost Feature Film Debut of STEVEN SPIELBERG by Joseph McBride

One of the great pleasures of recent times here at BOXOFFICE has been our opportunity to publish articles under the byline of Joseph McBride. Joe McBride is something of a legend in the annals of movie scholarship: his book-length studies of everyone from Orson Welles to Frank Capra to John Ford to Howard Hawks set new standards for both criticism and biography.

With "Steven Spielberg: A Biography," Joe has set his sights on a contemporary legend, and come through with characteristically flying colors. Unlike virtually every other biographer who has attempted to chart the almost unbelievably successful career of our most eminent director-producer, Joe has grounded his epic study in extensive first-hand research, and wedded that research to a comprehensive re-examination of Spielberg's career which, it already seems certain, will form the basis for a fresh evaluation of Spielberg the artist, as well as Spielberg the man. Such prestigious publications as Kirkus Reviews have already pronounced McBride's "Spielberg" the definitive work on its subject—a verdict with which we heartily agree.

We couldn't let Joe's achievement pass unnoticed in these pages, but at the same time, owing to Joe's professional relationship with BOXOFFICE, we were a bit uncomfortable with the concept of using our reviews pages to ladle the superlatives on McBride's "Spielberg" which it nevertheless so richly deserves. Fortunately, publication of "Steven Spielberg: A Biography" has been timed to coincide with the release of Spielberg's eagerly-anticipated "Jurassic Park" sequel "The Lost World," making the ideal solution this article-length excerpt about a "lost" project of a different sort: Spielberg's first feature length effort, completed when he was just 17 years old, a sort of first draft version of "Close Encounters" entitled "Firelight." Among the many signs of future greatness which Joe has unearthed was one particular detail we felt BOXOFFICE readers would enjoy: to get his movie screened, Spielberg had to take on the role of theatrical exhibitor, which explains in part his uncanny kinship with with both audiences and exhibitors all over the world.

And so, for your reading pleasure, by special arrangement with Simon and Schuster, BOXOFFICE MAGAZINE proudly presents this teaser-trailer for an epic production by Joseph McBride: "Steven Spielberg: A Biography." From all of us here, congratulations, Joe, on a job well done.

—Ray Greene, Editor-in-Chief,* BOXOFFICE

A searchlight swept the night sky of downtown Phoenix as a limousine pulled up under the theatre marquee. The director and his stars stepped out, bedazzled by the glare of strobes and exploding flashbulbs. Inside, a packed house awaited the world premiere of a science-fiction epic from American Artist Productions. For the next two hours and 15 minutes, the audience watched enrapt at the spectacle of mysterious colored lights emerging from the heavens to abduct humans for an extraterrestrial zoo. At the night's end, the boxoffice take from that screening at the Phoenix Little Theatre, at seventy-five cents a head, was enough to put the movie into profit.

The date was March 24, 1964. The movie was "Firelight." Its production cost was under $600, and it was the first feature-length film written and directed by a high school junior named Steven Spielberg. After becoming a professional filmmaker, Spielberg publicly disparaged "Firelight" as "one of the five worst films ever made anywhere." But his extraordinary promise was obvious to everyone who attended the Phoenix premiere of the 8mm production. "'Firelight' is just as good, although this may be construed as criticism, as some of the science-fiction movies seen by the late-late television viewers," wrote Arizona Journal reviewer Larry Jarrett. "The plot, the action, the basic material of the movie, is sound and not as far out as some of Hollywood's fantasies-de-science."

"People in Phoenix still speak in awestruck tones of how Spielberg talked his way into shooting scenes for 'Firelight' at Baptist Hospital and Sky Harbor Airport."

Allen Daviau, the cinematographer who has shot such Spielberg films as "E.T.—The Extraterrestrial," "The Color Purple," and "Empire of the Sun," was shown "Firelight" by Spielberg in the late 1960s. "It's what you expect with a kid's film, the acting and so on, but oh, God! Some of it was so audacious," Daviau says. "The effects were what was really amazing—that's what his heart was in. What he did with crumpled aluminum foil and bits of Jello on a kitchen table was pretty amazing."

The stimulus for "Firelight" was an unidentified flying object Spielberg did not see when he was growing up in Phoenix. Fascinated by heavenly lights ever since the night in 1957 when he and his father saw a meteor shower in the desert, Steve, like virtually every American boy growing up in the '50s, was intrigued by reports of flying saucers and other UFO's. He longed for the real thing—the chance to see a UFO with his own eyes. So he was devastated when he missed a Boy Scout outing, "the only overnight I missed the entire year. Wouldn't you know," and his fellow Scouts came back and told him how, at midnight in the desert, they all saw "something they couldn't explain...a blood-red orb rising up behind some sagebrush, shooting off into space. I felt so left out not being there." Patrol leader Bill Hoffman says, "One overnight Spielberg was absent out in the desert. I don't recall who did it, but the story was told to Spielberg that someone had seen a flying saucer. Spielberg was very interested. It wasn't true at all. As far as I can tell, it was a complete fabrication."

14-year-old Eagle Scout in-the-making Steve Spielberg making 8mm magic in a rare 1961 still by Richard Y. Hoffman, Jr.

LEAN ON ME: Spielberg's taste for "Lawrence of Arabia"-type set-ups is apparent in this rare still from the making of "Escape to Nowhere" (1959-1962), a WWII-themed epic. (BARRY SOLLENBERGER)

Steve's 67-page, fully dialogued screenplay for "Firelight" was completed in early 1963, near the end of his sophomore year at Arcadia High School. He spent about six months shooting the film, from June through December of that year, with collaborators recruited from his fellow actors and crew members in "Guys and Dolls" and other school plays. Postproduction, including post-synchronization of dialogue and recording of a musical score, continued until the March premiere. "I used the high school band to score [the] movie," Spielberg recalled. "I played clarinet and wrote a score on my clarinet and then had my mother [who played piano] transpose it to her key. We made sheet music, the band recorded it, and I had my first original soundtrack."

Spielberg had been making amateur films since he was 10 years old; his mother proudly called him "Cecil B. DeSpielberg." "Firelight" was his first film with trained actors and a carefully detailed screenplay, and he had not yet developed into much of an actor's director. But his innate narrative sense, his precocious flair for visual storytelling, and his already evident ability to orchestrate complex movement and character interaction (as outlined in the script) made "Firelight" a gripping, well-constructed (if overlong) yarn about a small group of scientists investigating mysterious red, white, and blue balls of moving light coming from the Arizona sky to abduct people, animals, and objects.

"Close Encounters of the Third Kind," Spielberg's 1977 sci-fi masterpiece, "was actually a remake of 'Firelight,'" says Jean Weber Brill, a Spielberg classmate who did the makeup for "Firelight." "There were scenes in 'Close Encounters' that were almost direct copies from 'Firelight,' such as the lights appearing on the highway and the scene when the little boy looks out the door at the bright light. The storyline of 'Close Encounters' was very similar, but obviously rewritten and more sophisticated."

"Firelight" introduces the themes of supernatural intruders, suburban alienation and escape, broken families and abducted children, scientific adventure, and spiritual renewal that would become familiar in Spielberg's mature work. But unlike "Close Encounters," which radically departed from sci-fi movie tradition to depict its extraterrestrials as benign rather than menacing, "Firelight" derives in large part from the mood of anxiety and paranoia that characterized the genre in the 1950s, when Spielberg became hooked on sci-fi. "It was a Cold War movie," says cast member Clark (Lucky) Lohr. "They talk about it being his [first] version of 'Close Encounters,' and it was, in a sense—a sky movie, about sky gods—but the 'cinematic vision' of 'Firelight' owed more to horror movies about aliens dusting humans."

> "What he did with crumpled aluminum foil and bits of Jello on a kitchen table was pretty amazing."
>
> —Allen Daviau, cinematographer, "E.T."

Arnold and Leah Spielberg bankrolled the production of their son's first feature. "Steve's parents were totally behind the film," Jean Weber Brill remembers. Leah not only kept the cast and crew supplied with snacks, but cheerfully put up with "constant commotion at her home" weekend after weekend, the Arizona Republic reported in a feature about the production. She even allowed Steve to set up a flashing red light by the carport door to signal the neighbors to keep quiet while filming was in progress.

People in Phoenix still speak in awestruck tones of how Spielberg talked his way into shooting scenes for "Firelight" at Baptist Hospital and Sky Harbor Airport, using an actual jet plane. But much of the film was shot in and around the Spielberg home at 3443 North 49th Street in the city's Arcadia neighborhood, with the family carport used as a studio for both interior and "exterior" shots. The summer shooting mostly took place at night, because of the heat. After school resumed, Steve had to film mostly on weekends.

Arnold Spielberg, a pioneer in the field of computer engineering and himself a longtime amateur filmmaker, helped on many of his son's early films. For "Firelight," Arnold rigged the lights for scenes filmed in the carport, helped design miniature sets, and built a dolly for the elaborate tracking shots that were already a hallmark of the Spielberg visual style. Steve enlisted his three younger sisters, Anne, Sue, and Nancy, into the production as well. Anne served as a script supervisor, Nancy played the key role of a little girl abducted by aliens, and all three of them bounced up and down on the hood of the jeep inside the carport to make the jeep look like it was speeding through the desert night around Camelback Mountain.

Steve and Arnold gave the shoestring production the illusion of a Hollywood spectacle with ingeniously designed visual effects. These included optical tricks to conjure up supernatural firelights and the filming of some elaborate miniatures, including a map of the area with flashing lights to show where the firelights were attacking, an Arizona town under glass, and a papier-maché mountain for a stop-motion sequence of firelight disintegrating National Guardsmen, tanks, and jeeps.

For the visual effects involving the firelight, Steve employed a variety of simple but effective techniques. Charles G. (Chuck) Case II, now a federal judge in Phoenix, played a love scene with Dede Pisani in an orange grove. The scene ends with the young couple being chased by a firelight and Case calling the police. "The firelight was just a red gel on a light," Case

DTS.
THE SENSIBLE CHOICE FOR OUTSTANDING SOUND.
Exhibit your next film in DTS and audiences will certainly appreciate your good taste. As you'll soon see, this year's biggest hits from Universal, Warner Bros., MGM, Fox, Paramount and more are being released in DTS. And with our easy installation and unmatched technical support, your customers will hear the very best in digital audio. So trust your senses and call us. When it comes to digital sound, we've got the touch.
DIGITAL
dts
SOUND
LISTEN. AND BE AMAZED.
31336 Via Colinas #101 Westlake Village CA 91362 (818)706-3525 (800)959-4109
European Office: 51-55, rue Gustave Huberti 1030 Brussels, Belgium Phone: 32 2 245-9622
Visit our Website http://www.dtstech.com
Response No. 467

recalls. "It descended from the trees, and the illusion was effective. In the film it really looked like something strange was happening."

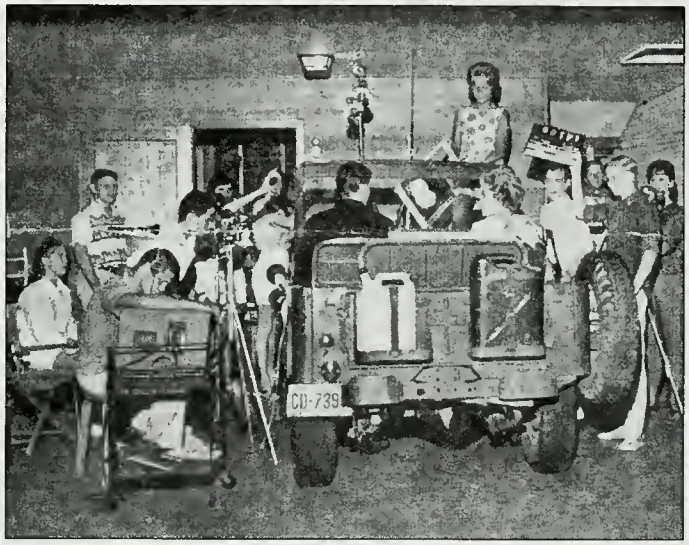
Arnold Spielberg explains how Steve showed "the firelight picking up Nancy. She was crawling along the ground. He had her crawl from here to a tree, and he timed it in his head, backed up the film, then re-exposed the same thing, but with a firelight coming right down to where Nancy was. In order to get this effect of a whirling piece of flame, of energy, he took two glass plates and a red gel and put Vaseline between the plates. Sue or Anne would take the plates and pull them back and forth, and that would make the jelly wiggle and move, and then he'd film through it. If you imagine a bunch of clouds in fast motion whirling around, that was his effect of firelight. And it came out! It looked like it took her and she disappeared."

"I was intrigued by the contraptions [Steve] dreamed up," says cast and crew member Warner Marshall. "The one I remember most vividly was a scene in his parents' carport. Somebody was sitting on the hood bouncing the jeep, and he had pullies with a couple of white Christmas lights—a clothesline of lights would move past the jeep so it would look like the jeep was driving in the country passing a house. He had floodlights shining down on the jeep to make it look like moonlight. He had a big piece of cardboard with triangular holes in it that would pass in front of the light to make shadows. He conceived all that! It made a heck of an impression on me when I was 15 years old—this guy really knew what he was doing. But he didn't exude an air of a guy who knew exactly where he was going and what he was doing. He was humble and kind of quiet."

Perhaps the most remarkable visual effect was Steve's use of a series of quick lap dissolves in showing the attack of the firelight on a UFO expert played by Lucky Lohr. "He collapsed on the floor and we filmed him disintegrating," makeup artist Jean Weber Brill recalls. "We filmed the scene in the Spielbergs' front room. Steve had the camera on a tripod and we filmed about eight frames at a time, then we would change the setup and the makeup and film another eight frames. We did that all day long."

"They had red and brown makeup and wet Kleenex on my face," Lohr remembers. "I had a cold at the time, so I was shivering. I thought I was being a real trouper. At the end of the scene, Steve pulled out a plastic skull, moved me out, set the skull down, and shot a couple of frames of the skull." Spielberg redid that scene at the end of "Raiders of the Lost Ark," when the blazing light from the Ark of the Covenant hits a Nazi and disintegrates him right down to his skull.

Throughout the protracted making of "Firelight," even when the two actors originally cast in the lead roles (Carol Stromme and Andy Owen) quit after the first two weeks of shooting, Spielberg did not become discouraged. He recast those parts with Beth Weber and Bob Robyn and reshot the opening scenes in December. "I remember the energy level starting to flag, people starting to wonder, 'Gee, do I want to spend my entire Saturday doing this?,'" says Warner Marshall. "He was having a great time. He'd say, 'I want to get this one last thing. Would you mind staying?' He was extremely gracious. He created an atmosphere where everybody had an affectionate respect for him."



"It was a huge undertaking," marvels Spielberg's classmate Rick Cook, who now writes science-fiction novels. "He wrote a professional-looking script, he had to be the production manager, he had to scare up props, he had to convince actors to be in it—although that wasn't too hard—he had to juggle everything. He was the damnedest promoter. He knew how to get things out of people, and he did it without being pushy or obnoxious. He was not a braggart, he was not one who would talk about what he was going to do. He just did it. He knew what he wanted, he was young and kind of attractive, and it was a matter of enthusiasm and dedication being contagious."

Betty Weber, whose daughters Beth and Jean worked on "Firelight," was a volunteer stage manager at the nonprofit Phoenix Little Theatre. She cajoled the theatre's board members into donating their facilities for the premiere. She also barraged the local newspapers and radio stations with announcements about the young filmmaker, arranged for photo spreads in the Republic, and made sure the title of "Firelight" was displayed on billboards at businesses all over town.

Leading lady Beth Weber typed and mimeographed the programs distributed to the opening-night audience. The limousine that brought Steve and his actors to the theatre was supplied and driven by a cast member's father who owned a local brewery. The searchlight was borrowed from a nearby shopping center. Arnold Spielberg helped Steve play the complicated soundtrack for the movie, and Leah Spielberg climbed a ladder to put the title of her son's first feature on the marquee. As she did so she was thinking, "This is a nice hobby."

That triumphant evening in March 1964 marked a coming of age for Steve Spielberg. His debut as a feature filmmaker was also his farewell to his boyhood years in Arizona. The day after the premiere, he and his family moved to California. Before leaving, Spielberg told a local reporter that making movies "grows on you. You can't shake it...I want to write movie scripts, but I like directing above all. All I know for sure is I've gone too far to back out now."

"FIRE" STARTER: (LEFT:) Spielberg directing "Firelight," as seen in a contemporaneous newspaper account. That's Arnold Spielberg at right. (RIGHT:) Filming in his parents' carport, in Leah Spielberg's jeep. (PHOENIX NEWSPAPERS, INC.).

"I want to write movie scripts, but I like directing above all. All I know for sure is I've gone too far to back out now."
—Steven Spielberg at 17

Adapted by the author from Joseph McBride's "Steven Spielberg: A Biography," published by Simon & Schuster. Photos pgs. 11-14 are from the book, courtesy Simon & Schuster.

We'll $how You The Money!

No-one can show you the money like we can, because the biggest profit opportunities in the industry today, start with a call to us! From box packs to peg packs and kids packs to bulk packs... We can help move your per capitas and concession marketing with brands that sell, at bigger margins and with support you can really sink your teeth into!

We're unique, fresh and your springboard to bigger profits. It's made us one of the confection industry's fastest leading growth companies over the past five years and it can put your business on the fast track too!

So, if you want to see the money,
call us for free samples and to schedule a business review.
We'll show you how a little change can lead to a lot of money!

PROMOTION IN MOTION INC. / Ferrara Pan

MOVING AT THE SPEED OF CANDY℠

The Promotion In Motion Companies, Inc., 3 Reuten Drive, Closter, NJ 07624 USA
Tel: (201) 784-5800 Fax: (201) 784-1010

Response No. 192

©The Promotion In Motion Companies, Inc., Closter, NJ 07624 All Rights Reserved

"BAT" OUT OF HELL

Joel Schumacher returns to helm another Bat-legend with Warner Bros. "Batman & Robin"

By Wade Major

If anyone in Hollywood has cause to live the "auteur" cliche, it's Joel Schumacher. Beginning with "Falling Down" in 1993 and continuing to the present with "Batman Forever," "The Client," "A Time to Kill" and the forthcoming "Batman & Robin," Schumacher owns one of the strongest track records of any director currently working, earning him a well-deserved Director of the Year award at this year's ShoWest. Yet the one-time costume designer for such Woody Allen classics as "Sleeper" and "Interiors" in conversation remains gracious and self-effacing.

"There are a lot of directors who try very hard to be good people," Schumacher says. "I just think they don't get as much attention as a flashy prima donna who gives everybody a hard time and makes trouble. I believe that, if you don't strive very hard to set a good example, you have no defense for privilege.... I also believe that if you're a person of privilege, and you don't strive to set a good example, perhaps that privilege will be given to somebody else."

Schumacher's perspective could be born of his hard-fought and often troubled path to success. Struggle began early for the boy whose father died when he was only four, leaving his mother alone to fend for the two of them. The poor Queens neighborhood in which they lived, however, was more encouraging than not. Thanks to the support of friends and neighbors, Schumacher never despaired, eventually manifesting an aptitude for design that led to his acceptance into New York's prestigious Parsons School of Design.

But the promising talent wasn't yet out of the woods, having to live through a nearly disastrous bout with drugs and substance abuse in the late '60s. Schumacher cleaned up his act and set his sights on Hollywood, determined to become a director. For the next 15 years, Schumacher rose in the ranks from costumer to screenwriter ("Car Wash," "The Wiz") to, finally, director ("The Incredible Shrinking Woman," "D.C. Cab"). With his third film, the 1985 hit "St. Elmo's Fire," Hollywood began to take real notice.

What's remarkable about this 57-year-old is, though over a quarter-century removed, he remains the bright-eyed dreamer from Queens in a town where passionless pessimism seems preferred. "I feel, a lot of times, like I'm a football player and the football is the movie. And on that field, with all those people running interference to me—studio executives, managers, agents, publicists, critics, journalists—I'm just trying to get the ball past the goal line and into the stands to the audience. Sometimes it's very pleasant, sometimes it's an obstacle course."

Schumacher's concern for moviegoers' experience is often credited with reinvigorating Warner Bros.' Batman franchise, which showed signs of stalling after 1992's fast-opening, fast-falling "Batman Returns." "A lot of people seemed unhappy with 'Batman Returns,'" he says. "I felt that we were the new team saying to people, 'We know you've been burned. But take a chance on us. We're going to give you a really enjoyable Batman movie.' None of us had any idea it would be as successful [$184 mil. domestic] as it was. And none of us knew we'd be making another one."

And yet, two years later, "another one" is on its way with the June 20 release of "Batman & Robin," which Schumacher describes as "the most fun I've ever had making a movie. We came in two weeks under schedule. Everyone was so professional. No one was ever late, everyone knew their lines, people came in ready to work and were passionate and committed and had wonderful ideas.

"It was exciting to go to work every day. I could actually make the movie. I didn't have to be doing the job for certain actors and actresses that their parents haven't done. I'm there to make a movie, not to play games, and not to be the warden, disciplinarian, psychiatrist, drug abuse counselor or love doctor."

His much-publicized troubles with Val Kilmer on "Batman Forever" behind him, Schumacher feels confident that the franchise has finally found its groove with George Clooney ("One Fine Day") assuming the caped crusader's cowl. "I think George is the best Batman of all," Schumacher says. "He's brought a humanity to the role that I

ORC

WHEN YOU NEED THE

BEST

AND THE BRIGHTEST

THERE'S ONLY

ONE SOURCE

ORC

ORC Lighting Products is one of the world's largest manufacturers of specialty discharge lamps and a recognized innovator of sophisticated illumination systems.

ORC Lighting Products
A BEC Group Company
1300 Optical Drive, Azusa, CA 91702
Tel: (818) 969-3344 In US: (800) 755-LAMP
Fax: (818) 969-2260
E-mail: ORCLIGHT@aol.com
Response No. 99

don't think has ever been there before. Michael [Keaton] did an excellent job, and Val did an excellent job, but George is the best because we've moved away from the self-involved, brooding, 'my parents are dead' narcissism of that earlier Batman. George is 35 years old. If we had a friend who was 35 and they were still obsessing all the time on their parents' death, we'd say, 'You have to get a grip and get on with it. This happened when you were eight!'"

ABOVE: Otto Preminger as Mr. Freeze in the "Batman" TV show. RIGHT: Arnold Schwarzenegger as Mr. Freeze in "Batman & Robin."

Though politely mum on "Batman & Robin" plot details, Schumacher drops clues as to what audiences can expect, particularly with regard to the introduction of Batgirl ("Clueless'" Alicia Silverstone). In a change from the DC Comics original and the popular '60s TV show, Batgirl's identity is not that of Commissioner Gordon's daughter Barbara. "She's now a ward of Alfred the butler," Schumacher says. "It was important in our story [scripted by Akiva Goldsman] for her to be a part of Alfred's life. And Alfred is going through a serious personal drama. His scenes with George are very touching. They're each other's only family, if you think about it.

"So George has this surrogate father to take care of, a young partner in his 20s and suddenly a brand-new person living in the house who's a female teenager. As with all of us, this becomes a time in his life to serve others, not to obsess on himself."

Still, Schumacher knows that the real fun in the Batman films lies with the villains. With Arnold Schwarzenegger as Mr. Freeze, his first bad-guy role since 1984's "The Terminator," expectations are understandably high. "The problem with the Batman villains is that only one person can play them," Schumacher says. "Harvey Two-Face was basically an Al Capone type of person. He has thugs and machine guns. The Riddler was a brilliant mind and a game player, not as much a physical person. But Mr. Freeze is a phenomenal force because he's a brilliant mind and also a superior physical specimen. So I knew I wanted to have a big action star play Mr. Freeze."

For fans of the ABC series, Schwarzenegger's casting would seem to echo that of film director Otto Preminger, whose gloriously campy portrayal of the villain forever in their minds married the character with a thick Germanic accent. "I may have been thinking of Preminger deep inside," admits Schumacher, who notes that Preminger was just one of four actors during the show's run to play Mr. Freeze (called Mr. Zero in the comic books). "People remember Preminger because he was the most frightening. But, whether or not the Otto Preminger thing was in my mind, I think I would have gone for Arnold. We had been looking for a way to work together for several years, and he's been kind enough to offer me several projects. But it was just never right. When I knew I was going to do Mr. Freeze, I knew he'd be perfect. I call it 'The Terminator Meets the Refrigerator.'"

As with the last two Batman films, Mr. Freeze won't be alone in his evil quest, joined this time out by Uma Thurman's Poison Ivy, a seductress who kills with a kiss. "There were many beautiful and talented actresses who wanted to play that role, but to me Uma Thurman is Poison Ivy. To find a six-foot-tall ravishing beauty with that body and those legs and that face—that's like Garbo or Dietrich, who's that brilliant an actress and that funny at the same time. That's a tall order for a 25-year-old. And she delivers."

If nothing else, "Batman & Robin" promises a cavalcade of stars and characters eclectic and colorful enough to please even the most demanding Bat-fan. Still, the proliferation of star roles in the Batman films has raised certain concerns, chiefly the cost of paying so many big salaries and the challenge of giving them all their due screen time. But Schumacher sees these as the least of his worries.

"The great thing about the Batman movies is that they cost less than they appear to," he says. "People take cuts in salaries because they get it made up in merchandising, things like that. And we had over a year to plan this movie.

"A lot of these big-budget movies go into production when they're not ready," he adds. "Or there's a terrible rush in post-production and money is just thrown at the movie. That's how budgets run out of control."

On the issue of ballooning casts, Schumacher defers to his record with ensembles. "All my movies are ensembles. The first two movies I wrote, "Sparkle" and "Car Wash," were ensembles. "D.C. Cab" was an ensemble. So were "St. Elmo's Fire," "The Lost Boys" and "Flatliners." "A Time to Kill" is a huge ensemble. "Dying Young" was not an ensemble, and I wasn't the best director for that. I think life is an ensemble. It all just depends on whose viewpoint you're looking at."

In the end, Schumacher's greatest challenge has less to do with juggling characters than juggling audience expectations. "The good news is that the Batman audience is a huge audience. The bad news is it's a very varied audience." So how does Schumacher, who in March agreed to direct the fifth Batman movie, satisfy so many different expectations? "I go right to the comic books—I get hundreds of them when I'm preparing these things. There's nothing better for color, framing, action or fun. They're just spectacular." Opening his filofax, Schumacher reads from a list of the DC Comics artists who most inspire him: "Alex Ross, Scott Hampton, Simon Bisley, Dave McKean, Tim Sale and, of course, the great Frank Miller."

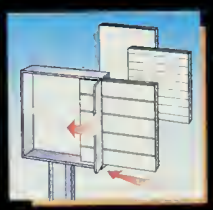
A self-professed "pop culture sponge," Schumacher says his reverence for the work of comics artists simply underscores his own philosophy regarding the precarious balancing act between commerce and art. "You have to walk a very thin tightrope," he says. "A lot of films that pass for so-called 'art' are just pretentious and self-indulgent. If you fall into the commercial side, you're just making fodder. The tension is to try to marry them so that you're making something accessible that people want to see and enjoy but artistic enough so you can sleep with yourself at night."

"Batman & Robin." Starring George Clooney, Chris O'Donnell, Arnold Schwarzenegger, Uma Thurman and Alicia Silverstone. Directed by Joel Schumacher. Written by Akiva Goldsman. Produced by Peter Macgregor-Scott. A Warner Bros. release. Action/adventure. Opens June 20.

Lavi Introduces the Quick Change Artist.

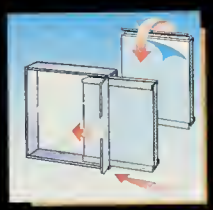
Directrac™ Signage... Magically Fast, Bewitchingly Easy

Can think that even Mr. Houdini might be impressed. Consider this feat:



Simplicity - Change any of our available cartridges faster than you can say Abbra Cadabra. Directrac's inner cartridge easily removes from the frame's side door so you can conveniently change your posters, letters or channel strips.

Versatility - A wide variety of cartridges are provided including changeable and magnetic letters, strip channel and poster holder which conveniently attaches posters to the cartridge with spring-loaded clips.



Durability - Matter and motion come together in a miracle of durability and design. Available FREE STANDING or WALL MOUNTED and in finishes to complement any decor. Construction is built to withstand heavy traffic and we warranty it for one year. Standard poster size is 22" x 28" and other sizes can be accommodated.

From Lavi Industries . . . the premiere world supplier of quality and innovative public guidance and hospitality products since 1979.

For complete information about Directrac signage and other Lavi products, call us at 1-800-959-1036.

The cartridges simply slide out from the side frame door for convenient and quick change of media

Spring-loaded clip mounts on top and bottom securely hold posters on both sides

Lavi Industries

Products for People and the Places they go

27810 Avenue Hopkins, Valencia, CA 91355 USA
805-275-7800 • Fax: 805-257-4938
www.lavi.com

© 1997 Lavi Industries. Directrac patent pending
Response No. 110

HOSPITALITY

PUBLIC

RAILINGS

TUBINGS

KITCHEN & CLOSE HARDWARE

"AIR" POWER

After A Career Teamed With The Late Don Simpson, Producer Jerry Bruckheimer Flies Solo With The Buena Vista Actioner "Con Air"

By Lea Russo

When it came to making movies, producer Jerry Bruckheimer and his longtime partner and friend, the late Don Simpson, had the Midas touch. Their last four films—"The Rock," "Dangerous Minds," "Crimson Tide" and "Bad Boys"—were pure boxoffice gold, in total generating $376.1 million domestically. Back in the 1980s, they achieved resounding success, producing such era-defining flicks as "Flashdance," "Top Gun" and "Beverly Hills Cop."

Yet, despite fame, fortune and a long line of hit films, the duo were no stranger to hard times. From lawsuits and bad press to Simpson's highly publicized drug addiction and 1996 death, the team faced the worst of what Hollywood and life had to offer.

"Well, there's the good news and the bad news," Bruckheimer says. "The problem is that, when you reach a modicum of success and the press starts to write about you, there are always people with their sniper rifles ready to take you down, and you become in their sights. That's what happens to all of us, even those who have just a moment in the limelight. There are people who want to tear you down. You have to be prepared for that."

Indeed, countless articles portrayed Simpson as a flashy, vain, excessive man who had drug problems, an eating disorder, and "pathological" female relationships. Considered the more stable partner, Bruckheimer (aside from being described as dour) fared somewhat better in the public arena. But such past reportage seems much less troublesome to Bruckheimer than to the coverage of Simpson's death.

"It was the inaccuracy in a lot of the reporting," the producer says, referring to the events surrounding Simpson's passing. "People don't check. They believe the heresy and innuendos, rather than actually checking what went down." When asked to cite specific examples, Bruckheimer says, "I can't get into it."

"I put hockey teams together when I was a kid. I could always get people motivated and team them up.... Being a producer is no different than being a manager of a ballteam."

Born and raised in Detroit, Bruckheimer grew up with a fascination for film, spending many afternoons in Motor City catching a matinee. (He says he still prefers to see a film in a movie theatre rather than in the privacy of his own home or on the Hollywood screening circuit.) By age 14, Bruckheimer was already an award-winning photographer, but he says he wanted to get into a longer format.

"I was always an organizer," the producer explains in his friendly but reserved manner. "I put hockey teams together when I was a kid. I could always get people motivated and team them up and organize them. Being a producer is no different than being a manager of a ballteam. You get a talented coach who's like a director, and a lot of talented players—your actors, your cast, your crew and designers—and you put them all together and make sure they get along. Then you get the best out of them."

After receiving a bachelor's degree from the University of Arizona, Bruckheimer began working in the mailroom of an advertising agency; from there, he moved on to producing commercials and theatrical features. By the time he met Simpson in 1979, Bruckheimer had already made "American Gigolo," "Cat People," "Thief," "Young Doctors in Love" and "Farewell, My Lovely."

Fastest Movie Announcer in the Business!

Who's got time to listen to 5 minutes of messages when you call your favorite cinema for the starting time of the movie you want to see!

The new Citi-Tell MovieTimeS message delivery system is similar to a mailbox type phone system. You go right to the movie information you want. This frees up your phone lines quickly for the next caller. It can even give you movie reviews.

The Citi-Tell can handle all screens in a small town or you have multiple locations with one phone number. The Citi-Tell system is radically new! It does not use a computer hard drive system, but digital FLASH memory that cannot be accidently erased in normal use.

Flexible, easy to use, and low cost!

This exciting new product will appear in May 1997. We know if we did not develop this timely product, someone else will.

Please call for more information and your closest SMART dealer. (800) 45-SMART or (770) 449-6698.

"I make movies I want to see," Bruckheimer explains. "That's always been the case with me. If the subject matter, or the story or the characters, doesn't interest me, and I wouldn't pay my money to go see it, then I usually don't make it. In fact, I don't make it, period."

In the early '80s, his instincts paid off, when he and Simpson teamed for the first time on "Flashdance," a 1983 release that changed the face of fashion and sent industry interest in the marketing potential of soundtracks skyrocketing. "It was all by accident," Bruckheimer says, laughing. "[The clothing and music] weren't designed. What's interesting is that you think we're so smart. We were way behind the eight ball. As an example, the record company shipped only 60,000 albums to the entire country. They were gone within one hour of the picture opening. Nobody had the foresight to see that that was going to be a success—including us."

Producer partner Don Simpson (left) with Bruckheimer on the set of Columbia's "Bad Boys."

"Beverly Hills Cop" and "Top Gun" soon followed, catapulting Simpson and Bruckheimer into superstardom. Their future looked even brighter when they signed a huge deal with Paramount, but the agreement was terminated a short time later, after the 1990 release of "Days of Thunder." Those troubles "didn't stall our career," Bruckheimer says. "We stalled our career. We were having problems, especially my partner was having problems, with the management at Paramount. We were at odds, and they were spreading rumors that the picture wasn't successful, when it was. It became very tough, because they were feeding the press things from inside the company, based on their feuds with us. We parted company right after that. It took us a while to regenerate our development. That's your life blood, your real estate. Once we moved studios, a lot of the projects we had got stalled."

Simpson and he took their talents crosstown. "When we came to Disney," Bruckheimer says, "they were making a different type of movie than we had developed. They were making soft comedies, but the kind of pictures we were good at and understood they weren't making. But a lot of those comedies stopped making money for them, and we were lucky enough to have 'Crimson Tide' ready."

By 1995, the duo had reclaimed their status as top producers. Then tragedy struck. That August, Dr. Stephen W. Ammerman was found dead of a drug overdose at Simpson's Bel Air estate. Rumors of coverups and of Simpson's own problems spread fast and far through Hollywood.

Four months later, Bruckheimer and Simpson announced they were ending their 13-year partnership. "Don had other plans for his own life and was pulling more and more away from the business," says Bruckheimer. "He wanted to do other things. He wanted to direct and be an actor. Unfortunately, he didn't get a chance." On January 19, 1996, Simpson died of heart failure that was caused by an overdose of cocaine and prescription drugs.

Asked if the breakup fueled Simpson's decline, Bruckheimer replies, "Did it have an impact? Of course it had an impact. Did it cause his decline? No. Don was doing what he was going to do whether I stayed with him or left him. The day before he passed away, he had a meeting with agents Jim Wiatt and Jake Bloom, who represented him, and all he could talk about was how excited he was about starting his new company. You know, I think he was getting rejuvenated."

As a parolee doing battle with villains, Nicolas Cage escapes an explosion in Buena Vista's June actioner "Con Air."

Whatever people—or the press—think or say about Jerry Bruckheimer, no one can accuse him of being disloyal. In life and death, he stuck by Simpson, regardless of the controversy. "We were very close friends," Bruckheimer says, sadness obvious in his voice. "We grew up in this town together, and he was a roommate of mine for many years. Real true friends are hard to come by."

Though he misses working with his former partner, Bruckheimer is excited about his latest feat, "Con Air." Starring "The Rock's" Nicolas Cage with John Malkovich and John Cusack, the story follows paroled convict Cameron Poe (Cage) as he hitches a flight home on a prisoner transport plane. When the jet is hijacked by a sinister criminal (Malkovich), Poe must team with a U.S. Marshal (Cusack) to survive to see his family again.

"I wanted to make a movie that was really an odyssey," says the producer. "All [Cage's character] wants to do is to go home to his wife and child, and he's caught in this horrendous situation. To me, it's like classic Greek tragedy in literature, and I love that."

While Bruckheimer was overseeing production of "The Rock," he began developing "Con Air." "I told Nick [Cage] the idea, because we were having such a great experience working together. And he said, 'When the script comes in, why don't you let me read it?' When the script came in and I was sort of pleased with it—it still needed more work—Nick persuaded me to show it to him. I did, and he said, 'Look, I'd love to do it.' And that's how it all started."

Bruckheimer also attached commercial/music video director Simon West, who will make his feature debut helming "Con Air." Given that he also hired newcomer actress Monica Potter (who plays Poe's wife) for the same film, it seems that Bruckheimer, even now that he's flying solo, isn't afraid to take risks. But, he insists, "I don't take a chance. They're talented. I am lucky to be exposed to them."

Yet the fates decided to deal Bruckheimer one more blow when the worst kind of disaster touched the set of "Con Air." "What happened is we were building a plane, and in the shop where they were building it the plane fell on one of the workmen," Bruckheimer says. "Unfortunately, it killed him."

After shutting down production, Bruckheimer flew the crew member's family out to California to visit, by way of memorial, the place where the man had died. "We tried to make it as comfortable as possible," Bruckheimer says. "It's very painful for everybody involved. You try to console everybody as best you can.

"There's not much else you can do to deal with a tragedy," Bruckheimer says. He speaks like a man who knows.

"Con Air." Starring Nicolas Cage, John Malkovich and John Cusack. Directed by Simon West. Written by Scott Rosenberg. Produced by Jerry Bruckheimer. A Buena Vista release. Action. Opens June 6.

CinemAcoustics™
THE SOFTEST VOICES CAN BE HEARD CLEARLY AND DISTINCTLY.
THE LOUDEST EFFECTS ARE CLEAN AND CRISP.
CA-S5330™
CA-S5230™
CA-S5115™
All new state-of-the-art speaker designs for the motion picture industry.
PEAVEY
• CompuServe: Go Peavey • http://www.peavey.com

PICTURE THIS:

A GALAXY OF WINNERS: (TOP LEFT:) ShoWest '97's International Achievement Awardee Will Smith celebrates his big "DAY" with his own personal 1997 Marquee award. (TOP RIGHT:) DTS's Stacey Williamson displays the business card for Magda Moore of C. A. Moore Theatres. Moore won our BOXOFFICE-ShoWest Day 3 grand prize: a complete DTS sound system. Now do you wish you stopped by our booth?

SHOWEST® 1997

(ABOVE:) Winona Ryder, ShoWest's Actress of the Year. And to think, her folks ran a moviehouse! (CENTER RIGHT:) BOXOFFICE's Linda Andrade and ShoWest's Herb Burton at the Trade Show. (Right) William J. Stembler (second from right) of Georgia Theatre Co. & family visit QSC for their Day 1 prize: a QSC MX 1500a Amplifier.

AT SHOWEST 1997

(ABOVE:) ShoWest's Daniel Wheatcroft, looking very presidential indeed. (ABOVE RIGHT:) More news from the winner's circle: SMART DEVICES, INCORPORATED's new president Vincent P. Luciani helps Meghan Fitzgerald draw for our Day 2 prize. James Woodin, a district supervisor for Edwards Theatres took home SMART's new CITI-TELL DIGITAL MESSAGE SERVER. Some guys have all the luck!

SHOWEST®
1997

(ABOVE:) Elizabeth Hurley's Marquee Award couldn't stand the strain (the torch broke), but the lady herself was the picture of British poise as ShoWest's Supporting Actress of the Year. (LEFT:) The most photogenic members of Team BOXOFFICE. Honest. BOXOFFICE Editorial and Advertising Assistant Linda Andrade and National Advertising Director Bob Vale.

"PATIENT" is a VIRTUE

Were the studios overthrown by the mavericks at Oscar '97, or did they walk off the field of battle? by Ray Greene

Oscar 1997: a triumph of the independent filmmaking vision? Well, yes and no. In what eventually came to seem almost like a graduation ceremony for certain prominent figures on the indie filmmaking scene, such longtime mavericks as Joel and Ethan Coen (who won the Best Original Screenplay Oscar for the script to their mordant Minnesota murder mystery "Fargo") and Miramax Films (which financed and distributed "The English Patient") were finally given their due by the great big Hollywood machine. Meanwhile, "Sling Blade" writer-director-producer Billy Bob Thornton's win for the Best Screenplay Adapted From Another Source represented the triumph of a true industry outsider. The 41-year-old Thornton's fairytale rise after years of frustration as both actor and filmmaker added a touch of poignancy to Oscar '97, and his dry, southern wit, obvious passion for filmmaking and open delight in grabbing an Oscar statuette was a marked contrast to Oscar's last Cinderella kid, Quentin Tarantino, who didn't even bother to meet the backstage press when he won his scripting Oscar two years back.

Best Actor Geoffrey Rush ("Shine") and Best Actress Frances McDormand ("Fargo") were also popular favorites at Oscar '97—fine actors in offbeat roles that were difficult to pigeonhole and easy to appreciate. But despite the fact that many of the most prominent trophies went to filmmakers and actors outside of the mainstream, the belle of the 69th Annual Oscar ball was "The English Patient," a film which, though a Miramax project and therefore bearing the imprimatur of the most successful "niche" marketing force in movie history, demonstrates just how difficult it has become to apply the adjective "independent" in anything like a useful fashion these days.

With a reported budget of about $33 million, "Patient" was hardly a hand-to-mouth production like its poor relations, "Sling Blade" and "Shine." Packaged as a Fox project and then dumped on the eve of production—either because producer Saul Zaentz couldn't secure proper financing (according to Fox) or because Fox wanted a more bankable female lead (according to Zaentz)—"Patient" came to the world of "indie" film with all the signs of its studio gestation period still intact: lavish period detail, eye-filling cinematography of vast and at times densely-populated landscapes, an epic sweep reminiscent of (if not directly derived from) the work of "Lawrence of Arabia"-era David Lean.

